Student robbed, beaten at home

An SIUC student was robbed and beaten in her home Tuesday morning after an intruder entered her bedroom at 606 E. Park.

The suspect, described as a black male, 20- to 30-years-old, 5'9"-5'9", 165-175 lbs., with a medium to dark complexion, gained entry at about 1:40 a.m. by forcing a window open.

The victim said she was then awakened by the suspect when he covered her face with a pillow.

The victim said she was screaming so loud that the suspect began hitting her in the face. "When he realized I was trying to strike his groin he moved at first," she said. "He was punching me in the face because I was making so much noise."

She said he continued to punch her the more she moved around.

"He then grabbed my answering machine and portable telephone and asked if I had any money," she said. She said she was not sure if the suspect wanted to lead to a sexual assault had the suspect stayed longer.

Carbondale Police are investigating the possibility of car break-ins that may be related to the robbery.

SIUC officials warn personnel about mail bombs
By Erick J.B. Enriquez

SIUC officials are warning people of the possibility that explosives may be sent through the mail as on other university campuses.

The letter describes two incidents occurring on June 22 and 24 of this year at the University of California at San Francisco and Yale University were both severely injured by exploding packages they received or came through the mail.

The letter requests that all University personnel be alert to all packages and mail received, both at their employment and at their residences.

Samuel L. Jordan, director of security, said everyone should be aware of mail bombs and not caught by surprise.

"I don't want anyone to panic," Jordan said. "What we're trying to do is notify the campus that a problem has occurred because we feel it was our duty to make the campus aware that something of this nature is going around."

Jean Pareeorge, associate vice president for student affairs, said the letter is a good move to inform the campus of this potential danger.

"This is one of those things we have to unfortunately live with," said "We just need to be alert about this like anything else." Bill Hall, executive assistant to the president of GPSC, said everyone needs to take the warning seriously.

"SIUC is involved internationally more than most universities so we will have to be more careful," Hall said. "Our students are frequently more involved in social and political issues more than other campuses, so we have reason to be more cautious."

Hall said it is hard to understand why anyone would target a university when higher education institutions are traditionally more considerate of diverse political views.

An SIUC committee studying athletics is in the process of forming a plan to continue funding Division I sports without the luxury of state funds.

The IHSA’s recent proposal recommends that no state money should go toward funding athletics. The loss of such funds could mean a drop in status for SIUC athletics programs.

SIUC sports currently have Division I status, except for football which is a Division I-AA program.

Division I programs receive more scholarships for athletes, thus drawing better athletes to play better competition.

Mike Spisak, president of the Student Government and spokesperson for the committee on athletics, said the advisory committee appointed by President Guyton was asked to have a plan ready sometime this fall.

Spisak said the committee had to decide what level SIUC sports should compete in.

Spisak said the committee is working on a plan under the assumption that state funds will not be available.

"It has not been made a law, but I believe the cuts will happen," Spisak said. "So we aren’t fighting it, or saying it won’t happen, but instead are trying to figure out how to deal with it.

Spisak said they are currently in the process of sending surveys to other state schools similar to SIUC to see how they are dealing with the situation.

"The schools are too different to come up with a plan that works for everybody, but I think we can all learn a little from each other," Spisak said.

We are most concerned with coming up with a plan that works for SIUC," he said.

Spisak said Division I status does make a difference in a school’s perceived image.

"I think Division I sports are great for stature," Spisak said. "I think Division I schools are looked at as being a cut above schools that aren’t." SIUC athletic director Jim Hart said even with increased fundraising and ticket sales, it would be difficult to operate without the money the state provided.

"The state’s funds made up about 2 1/2% of our budget," Hart said.

Hart said as many plans as possible should be formed in case something does happen.

"You have to have more than one way to do something in case one way fails," Hart said.

"This is something that is a concern at almost all schools," Wardynski said. "Sport used to be the king, but now the cutting of state funds makes us examine alternatives.

Wardynski said he does not think raising student fees is a probable solution, but might be mentioned as a last resort.

Wardynski said it comes to the students having sports or not having sports, it could become their call."

Wardynski said the effects of a drop in status to Division II would not help the school.

"If SIUC dropped to Division II status I think it would hurt the image of the institution," he said. "Division I sports creates more good public relations and advertising than perhaps any other venue.

Wardynski said besides men’s basketball programs, and a few football programs, all college sports are non-revenue operations.

Competitors disagree on face-off in Wimbledon

The Baltimore Sun

WIMBLEDON, England—They are both Georgian, but the only thing No. 4 Boris Becker and No. 6 Michael Stich agreed on Monday as they faced the prospect of playing each other in the men’s quarterfinals today was that they aren’t going to dinner together any time soon.

"I don’t like him," Stich said. "But we don’t have much in common."

"We respect each other," Becker said. "Friends we are not. Respect, I think that is as much as it can get."

If they were pro boxers, you might write it off as an act to build publicity for their match.

But this is real. Stich openly criticized Becker for not playing in the Davis Cup this year. Becker, a three-time Wimbledon winner, still is hurting from his loss to Stich in the 1991 Wimbledon final.

"My most painful memory," he said.

In fact, it is the only memory that spoils Becker’s Wimbledon memories. Aside from that match, every other time he thought he deserved to win here, he has.

So, Monday, when Stich and Becker each arrived in his own time to talk about their coming match, the fact that they disagreed on almost everything seemed to mean only that the world still is spinning on its axis.

Becker, gazing out toward a Chicago Bulls cap, said he anticipated the rematch of their 1991 final to be a very exciting match.

"Stich anticipates no such thing.

"Probably, our match will be very boring," he said after his straight-set victory over Peter Korda, 7-6 (7-4), 6-4, 7-6 (7-5). "All the matches we play against each other are normally very easy for one or the other. We never have tough fights.

"It is exciting if someone wins, 6-1, 6-1! I don’t think so. I never hear anybody telling me that the matches I played against Boris were really entertaining. I lost in Milan, 6-2, 6-2. I beat him here in 1991, and I didn’t hear anybody coming off the court saying that was a great match. When you compare it, let’s say, with the finals of last year, that was like great competition, and like two different styles of games playing against each other."

They have the same style: big serves and the ability to volley, though Stich points to statistics in order to show that his own ability to play that style may be better than Becker’s.

BERLIN WALL RUINS SPRING HOPE FOR FUTURE...

Many women in East Berlin's garden is one of the sites that sprang up along the Berlin Wall. On Wednesday, the Berlin Wall was used to be. In Kreuzberg, Berlin's equivalent of New York's Lower East Side, some anarchist encampments have been settled for years, backed into isolated patches of East Berlin once left outside the Wall. She homesteaded her land when the Wall came down and opened up a bigger chunk of the island.

TALKS INDICATE TESTY TIMES FOR JAPAN — U.S.

Two days of intensive trade talks between the United States and Japan, ended Monday with Tokyo still rejecting U.S. demands, indicating that U.S.-Japan relations may grow particularly nasty in coming months. The two sides failed to agree on a new "framework" for resolving economic and trade disputes because of a fundamental disagreement over whether Japan should act as a net buyer for increasing imports.

DISSIDENT WRITER OCCUPIES STALIN'S HOME

An apartment built for one of Joseph Stalin's children, Lazar Kaganovich, will soon house the Soviet Union's most famous dissident journalist, Alexander Solzhenitsyn, who defected from the country in 1974 for his thundering criticisms of the Soviet system. The spot he will soon occupy is a wooden, private 10 acres on a high bank of Montreal River. The land was given to Solzhenitsyn by city authorities in deference to his historic role and past persecutions by the Soviet state.

FOLEY'S INTERESTS BIASED IN FOREST, OWLS

As the Reagan administration is planning to end the Pacific Northwest's long agony over threatened northern spotted owl and management of federal forests, House Speaker Thomas S. Foley (D) is fully alert and playing a key role. His district is far to the west coastal forests where the battle over the spotted owl has been waged for almost a decade. But he is aligned with the occupation of officials of logging industries pressing for a policy that will allow the largest possible timber harvest.

SCHWARZKOPF IN VIETNAM DOCUMENTARY

Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf returned from the Persian Gulf war as a conquering hero. His reception after two years of duty in Vietnam was quite different. For many Americans, from presidents to protesters, the war in Vietnam remains a psychic wound that will not heal. In an evocative documentary, Schwarzkopf and CBS anchor Dan Rather, a former war correspondent, reports to Vietnam, each for the first time in more than 20 years. The one-hour program, "Schwarzkopf in Vietnam: A Soldier Returns," airs Wednesday night.

NEW YORK MAN CLAIMS DEATH OF 17 WOMEN

A Long Island man, stopped for a traffic violation Monday after a chase, told police he has killed as many as 17 women and dumped their bodies throughout the New York-New Jersey-Connecticut area, law enforcement sources said. The decomposing body of one woman, believed to be a Manhattan prostitute, was found in the man's pickup truck. Arthur Kinzler, 34, was arrested in Middletown around dawn when he crashed the truck into a utility pole after leading troopers on a chase of several miles.

Rescue Workers Fear Terrorists Attack

Key rescue workers at the World Trade Center have refused to report to their posts during bomb threats since federal authorities revealed last week that the tunnel under the Hudson River was a target for terrorists, according to informal interviews. The documents show how some workers' efforts to build a bridge, agents responsible for extracting motorists from cars and fighting fires inside the tubes, sold officials they were scared of a terrorist strike and unwilling to risk their lives.

Short Children Recruited for Experiment

The National Institutes of Health has resumed recruiting extremely short children for two growth hormone studies that had been halted five years ago. The studies had been challenged by genetics watchdog Jeremy Rifkin and his organization, the Foundation on Economic Trends, as being unethical and violating federal regulations covering experiments on children. Rifkin's central contention was that the children were healthy and that their short stature was not a medical problem to be fixed in an experiment that might do them harm.

Bankruptcy shuts down Gatsby's, local band scene may be affected

By William Ragan
Entertainment Editor

A Carbondale bar closed last week after the owners filed for bankruptcy, and the closing could affect live music in the area.

Gatsby's Bar and Grill, 608 S. Illinois Ave., had built a solid reputation for bringing bands into the area that would sell. Bands such as Bazz and the Chicago Rhythm & Blues Kings played to large audiences, and lesser known alternative bands like Chi Chi Pet and Deldin packed the house.

Gatsby's also was the only bar in the area that featured heavy metal bands regularly, and had an alternative music nightlife featuring local bands.

But in late spring, the bar started losing money and stopped drawing the audiences it used to, said Robbie Stokes, independent booking agent for Gatsby's.

"Up until April, we did very good business," he said.

"However, when warm weather hit there was not enough financial backlog to survive," he continued.

Problems had surfaced several years ago, when Gatsby's began to suffer a financial slump.

The owners applied for Chapter 11 bankruptcy last year, said co-owner Wendy Windfree.

"(Under Chapter 11) you can still run a business while trying to reorganize the financial situation," she said. "If you can't make enough changes you have to convert to Chapter 7."

Gatsby's finances had failed to improve and the bar was fined and forced to close for several days in the spring because of liquor license violations.

Last week, the financial burden became too great and the owners filed for Chapter 7 bankruptcy, which requires the liquidation of all assets to pay creditors.

Stokes said Gatsby's was one of the few bars in Carbondale to take a chance on local bands and draw out-of-town acts, and the closing of the bar will leave a void in the local music scene.

"As for the immediate impact on the Carbondale music scene, it doesn't take much imagination to see it is not good," he said.

"Certainly the heavier bands will have literally no place to play, unless someone else picks up the slack," Stokes said.

But Gatsby's possibly could change bands — the trustee, Charles E. Jones in accepting bids for the unit and will auction the bar to the highest bidder.

Local investors are looking into a buyout, Stokes said, but until then Gatsby's remains a closed venue for live bands in Carbondale.

Local employment rate best in county

By Erika Bellafiore
Business Writer

Carbondale is one of the cities in Jackson County with the lowest unemployment rates, an Illinois Department of Employment Security official said.

Mike Vessel, labor market economist for the department, said the unemployment rate for Carbondale in May was 4.9 percent, low compared to other counties.

When school was in progress in October the rate was 5.6 percent.

"When students leave the city the rate goes up, because students are considered employees as well as students," he said.

Campus jobs at SIUC are the dominant source of jobs in this area, retail trade is second and manufacturing jobs are the third most important, he said.

The city rate may creep up in the next couple of months, but the September rates should drop when students return, he said. But "there is always a balance between the good and bad in the economy," he said.

"Even in the best of times people lose jobs." The summer unemployment rates for Carbondale are low, but there always will be fluctuations, Vessel said.

"The summer months are statistically not the best, but month to month the economy changes and Carbondale is doing fairly well," Vessel said.

Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty said the impact of SIUC and the strong retail business affects the unemployment rate in the city.

"What I would like to see is more manufacturing jobs with better benefits," Doherty said.

James Prowell, executive director of the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce, said on the whole the area is doing well, but he would still like to see the unemployment rate lower.

"Almost always the city rate is about 2 percent under the percentage of the county rate, but we must look at things as a region," Prowell said.

"Jackson and Williamson Counties have the brightest future in Southern Illinois, I see nothing negative in the near future," Vessel said.

The unemployment rate in Jackson County for May was 8.7 percent. The rate was down 3 percent from May 1992 and up .3 percent from April 1993.

Cannabis potency defies harm myth

Your article on marijuana health risks this Spring repeated a common myth about the potency of modern cannabis. I would like to offer some information which will render this myth helpless.

First, the myth is that pot now is ten times more potent than it was in the past.

Both the degree of increase and the time over which it occurred vary in different versions of this myth.

And unlike heroin, marijuana does not kill by overdose.

The degree of intoxication has more to do with smoking behavior and experience than with potency alone.

People who smoke marijuana take in enough smoke to get to the level of intoxication they enjoy. This is called auto-titration, or self regulated drug dosage.

Low-grade marijuana has a high bio-mass-to-drug ratio, increasing the presence of carcinogens in the smoke.

We should be grateful to those who have bred "modern," potent strains of marijuana.

This can only reduce our chances for lung cancer. Anyone who wishes to may verify my assertions by reference to the article "Old Drug, New Daggers: The Potency Question" found in the Journal of Psychoactive Drugs.

Mass transit system requires open forum for explanation of history, knowledge of impact

Your article was timely and informative. It is why I was glad to be able to comment on it.

I really wish some member of the transit board would set up an open forum for me to field, research, and answer questions on the topic of this transit system.

It is very long story to be told about the transit plan. The plan dates back to 1964. The transit plan has been in the papers, radio and television on many occasions.

There is a media trail a mile long.

There has been, and will continue to be, the opportunity for student/ citizen input on the transit issue.

The whole key to the transit system is that it remain an issue.

We all, no matter whether for or against, must continue to have an impact on the issues that face us.

I was up in Chicago and I was helping a Boy Scout Troop when I saw President Kennedy," she said. "He sent a letter thanking me for my letter and encouraging me to keep it up. I was a bit taken aback with him; he was a fine President."

Her daughter, Angela Mason, said she was proud of her mother.

"My mother is a very wonderful person," Mason said. "I think President Clinton made her the happiest person by sending her a letter and picture. I think him for that. It shows he cares."

Mason who goes by "Or" 1et, because of her 27 grandchildren and 3 great grandchildren, was happy because Clinton addressed her by her nickname.

The letter said "Dear Granma."

Mason said, "I think this really means he read my whole letter because I told him about my family and how they called me that down through the generations of the letter. It makes me feel good to know he took time to read the whole thing."

Mason added, "Nothing will kill him first, sometime might; it seems to work that way," she said. "My wish is for both parties to sit down together and work things out. They will have to get their egos out of the way to let peace in. The world is watching and will learn from our example."

Mason is studying black history in Little Egypt. She plans to present her research to young people.

Mason hopes to get a black history museum started in Carbondale.

Two bombings in the past have occurred on Illinois College campuses.

"May 25, 1976— a bomb package sent to the University of Illinois Chicago exploded and injured a security guard. The package had a return address from Northwestern University in Evanston, Ill."

"May 9, 1979— a bomb detonated, in the Technological Building at Northwestern University, when a student tried to open it. The student was injured.

Police said the process will continue even after these programs are considered.

"A draft of the POP report will make its first pass in front of the Board at this meeting," Brown said. "The report is to be considered in September and presented to the Illinois Board of Higher Education in October."

The rhythm and blues band that began in Carbondale more than two decades ago as The Mellow Fellows will return to the town where it originated as part of the Sunset Concert Series.

The recently re-named Chicago Rhythm and Blues Kings will perform Thursday night at 7 p.m. on the steps of Shryock auditorium, and saxophonist/founding member Terry Ogolin said the snow will be ahomecomin' for the band.

"It's always great for us to come back down there," he said. "It's like coming home. Too bad it's just for one evening."

Ogolin started playing with The Mellow Fellows in the early '70s at the age of 17. The band was fronted by Larry "Big Twist" Nolan, a local legend in Carbondale.

Ogolin described the local music scene of 20 years ago as "real diverse. There were really good bands doing all these styles of music. A lot of musicians gravitated to (Carbondale)."

The Mellow Fellows were highly visible, playing six or seven nights a week on the Strip at bars like Mellow Fellow's, Silver Bullet and Pizza King's.

And despite the positive crowd reactions, the band realized the limitations of playing in Carbondale.

"Carbondale was a great place to put a band together and to get feedback from the people," he said. "On the other hand, it was a terrible place to make a living playing music."

"(The bars) could only pay so much money, and once you reached that point it didn't make any difference," Ogolin said. "At that point you have to decide if that's what you want to do for the rest of your life."

The band decided to relocate to Chicago in 1975, and with a combination of ambition and musical exploration, Big Twist and the Mellow Fellows began to make a name for themselves as a high-energy party band.

The group released two albums on Flying Fish Records before signing with blue label Alligator Records, where they released "Playing for Keeps" in 1983 and "Live from Chicago — Biggest Than Life" in 1986.

During the recording of "Street Party" in 1990, the band suffered a tragic setback when Nolan died. Tranquility Don Tenuto said the experience "was like losing a family member."

"We knew the band was going to continue in one shape or another," Ogolin said. "We decided to take a back seat at that point and think things over."

The band's solution was to change the name to the Chicago Rhythm and Blues Kings.

Martin Albrighton, a former drummer with the group and Nolan's singing partner stepped in on lead vocals, and Dave Mick replaced Special on guitar.

The line-up is filled out by Ogolin, bassist Bob Haji, Don Tenuto on trumpet and William "Kaz" Ratliff on drums.

Although the band retired the name of the Mellow Fellows, the members of the Rhythm and Blues Kings are keeping the legendary alive and carrying the music forward.

The R&B Kings has retained its classic repertoire, and is still influenced by the blues and soul giants of the last 30 years.

However, the material is updated with songs like John Hart's "Feels Like Rain," the energetic blues of "Down Home Wheel" and the standard "Since I Fell For You."

After its Shryock performance, the "Big Twist and the band will go on to play at Summerfest in Milwaukee and open for the Neville Brothers in Chicago.

Even though the band has toured the United States and Europe extensively, achieving a large following along the way, the members' Carbondale roots are still clear.

"We've been to Europe and ran into people from Carbondale," he said. "It's unbelievable. That scene must have meant so much to them."

Coal industry evades floods

By Sean L. N. Hao

General Assignment Writer

The Southern Illinois coal industry is likely to remain unscathed by Mississippi River traffic that ships coal in and out of the area.

John S. Meade, director of the coal research center said closure of the Mississippi's north of St. Louis has not had any adverse effect on the region ability to ship Illinois coal or bring in coal from other areas.

The Hannibal, Quay city of the Mississippi is north of the coal loading facilities that service the Southern Illinois commerce, he said.

Officials at the Coal Exploration and Utilization Research Center are monitoring conditions on the Mississippi river after safety concerns have stopped shipping from St. Louis docking #22 up to Hamilton, Mo.

The waterway, used to ship coal, grain, and other cargo throughout the region, closed Monday after reports indicated rain caused flooding all along it's banks.

Dave Bausse, water control manager for the Corps of Engineers, said the river would remain closed for at least the next two days.

Meade said mines in this Illinois area "have big basins" large enough to remain in operation until then.

"The basins are deep, the water is shipped by train, and their should be a sufficient amount of coal in the area," he said.

Meade said the entire Midwest region would feel the effects if river conditions persist because it is a cheap w.w. to ship large volumes of coal.

Bausse said the Mississippi River is flowing over its banks at several places.

The University makes an annual contribution of campus parking funds, he said. "This year the University will contribute $230,000."

Madlener said that the SUIC system was funded through student fees, fed through state and federal grants, but first the SUIC, Student Transportation system, must first pass on the student fee.

Co-mills said the U of I students for an approved every three years by the students.

Student approval will be part of the budget process, MADLENER said.

Although the student fee will require students to approve properly every three years, because the idea to a. look back into it, he said. "This is our fair to show people paying the fee and it will provide some feedback from the customers."

When the approval of the student fee, U of I students have a voice in the operation of the bus system that funds the retirement of students who play an advisory role to thei district board that governs the system. Overshadowed said, "I'm not sure how many students will have the same structure with the Sukly Advisory Board serving an advisory role to the Southern Illinois County Transit District, the governing body of the Carbondale system."

He said graduate students appointed by the graduate student president, undergraduate students appointed by the undergraduate president, and representatives of the faculty and professional staff appointed by President Guyton will make up the SUIC Board.

In 1992, SUIC provided $16,000 in service throughout Champaign-Urban said five routes within the Carbondale, including the University Mall, the Murdoche shopping area, the campus and off-campus residential areas.

Madlener said there is a difference between the two systems is that SUIC offers a special bus that has to travel with a system that is not designed, and current car also a special bus service for the University of Illinois students who have a need for a special bus service, said.

"The SUIC system has a mass transit system," Madlener said.

Ogolin said the U of I negotiated a contract with the city of Carbondale to provide a $230,000 in service to the Carbondale system.

"We already had the equipment in the system to place," Madlener said.

SUIC President John C. Guyton said initial costs are a problem for the SUIC system since Carbondale does not already have a transit system.

"We would not own any of the vehicles whether capital will be secured to purchase new equipment or if a private bus system will be contracting, he said.

Madlener said the best choice would be a bus system that can be contracted.

"It would be best to have a system that already has the capital to come into town and run the buses," he said. "Some sort of tax mode operation would be best."

The proposal for a $1.6 million operating deficit, but funds to alleviate the situation can be secured through state and federal grants, Madlener said.

SIUC international students will have an opportunity to experience the flavor of a favorite American pastime this summer.

SIUC International Friends Club, a volunteer organization affiliated with SIUC International Programs and Services, will present an American-style fish fry July 10 to teach international students how to prepare and experience traditional American foods and customs.

The fish fry is the summer dinner of the American cuisine, a program offered by the IFC which also presents Easter and Thanksgiving dinners for international students.

"With Mochnick, field representative for International Programs and Services, said the purpose of the fish fry is to help the international students become aware of the American culture.

"When you go to a foreign country, you feel very foreign," she said. "The idea is to enrich people while their here and give them a taste of the American way of life."

Marileinis McCormick, an IFC volunteer, has been donating her house and time to the American cuisine program since it started four years ago.

"I always maintain that foreign students should never go home without getting acquainted with an American family," she said. "The American home life is much different from campus life, that's why I offer my help."

Students will travel to McCormick's house in Grand Tower, on the Mississippi River and spend the morning learning how to prepare various salads and desserts. They will spend time recreating at Devil's Backbone Park and then take part in an Ohio River fish deep frying.

Claudette Williams-Myers, an international graduate student, said she would not think of missing the fish fry.

She took part in the Thanksgiving dinner, which Jamaicans do not usually celebrate, and learned how to prepare turkey, potatoes and her favorite, pumpkin pie.

Williams-Myers said said the home setting of the dinner really made her feel comfortable.

"Because I came from a much different background, I would always hear about prejudice," she said. "I have taken part in many IFC programs and I have not felt it at all. Everyone is extremely friendly.

"International students interested in taking part in the American-style fish fry should register at SIUC International Programs and Services by July 7. The cost is $3.

"American Cuisine is one of nine programs offered throughout the year by IFC."

Mochnick said the group is looking for volunteers to help with the programs such as English in Action, which links international students with American volunteers. The students practice English conversation for an hour each week.

"I am very much interested in recruiting sincere American students who would enjoy getting to know an international person," she said. "Those students who enjoy that kind of interaction have found some lasting and deep friendships.

"People interested in volunteering for an IFC program should contact SIUC International Programs and Services.

Pets of the Week

Og, a chow-and-German-shepherd male, is 6 months old, housebroken and good with children. He has a soft coat, the color of red clay, and a strong build. Cooney, a black-and-white male, is one-and-a-half years old and already neutered. He is a feisty cat who is anxious to please. Both are available for adoption at the Southern Illinois Animal Shelter.

Fourth of July fireworks hazardous, historic part of summer celebration

The Washington Post

Emergency room physician Robert A. Rosen knows that summer has arrived when the first fireworks vegetables light up the sky. For treatment at Riverview Medical Center in Red Bank, N.J.

"A summer never goes by when we don't see some injuries from fireworks," said Rosen, a spoken for the National Fireworks Safety Council.

This year estimated 12,000 Americans are injured by fireworks, most during two weeks before July 4, according to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC).

"It's the last day of the year," said Sam Hall, a compliance officer for the CPSC. "We know that we're going to see some of these, but we don't know how many are unnecessary.

Some of the most common injuries are to the eyes and the hand. The severity ranges from tiny sparks in the eyes and hands to broken glasses to falling from ladders to blown off fingers and blinking.

Since 1991, the devices have claimed three lives. A 3-year-old boy and a 65-year-old woman, died in similar incidents a year apart. In both cases, the injuries were severe enough to lead the devices fell and were launched near by-standers at backyard Independence Day parties, according to the CPSC. The recent devices, which allow multiple fireworks to be launched at the same time, have since been voluntarily recalled by the manufacturers, the CPSC said.

Fireworks have long been a tradition on the Fourth of July. The day before the Declaration of Independence was signed, John Adams wrote to Thomas Jefferson a letter that brothers and fireworks, then known as "illuminations," be lit in one end of the country to the other. Most females launched by amateur pyrotechnicians, the effect of the ray of light from the explosion, the reason that the most states have outlawed all but a few devices for use by individuals. Among known fireworks such as Roman candles, MoU's, cherry bombs, and rockets, can be used for nearly 30 years because they contain more than 50 percent combustible material.

"They are extremely dangerous and highly dangerous to other people, as well as to the eyes," said Robert Post, director of the division of regulatory management for the CPSC.

Despite being illegal, "every year some of these devices do find their way into the hands of people who have serious injuries," Post said.

Experts: Carelessness with firecrackers could backfire

Cardiff, Calif., U.S. - A 14-year-old girl was apparently killed by a homemade firework, leaving her parents, who promised not to use fireworks, in shock.

"We're going to make sure that everyone is safe before we light anything," said Robert A. Rosen, an emergency room physician in Red Bank, N.J. "That's the scenario that we see on the Fourth of July.

made excellent personnel decisions, but have also missed. "There are guys who I loved who haven't played well," admits Jerry Krause, the Chicago Bulls vice president of basketball operations. Phoenix took Armon Gilliam with the second pick in '87, he led the Phoenix Suns in scoring and is available. The Bulls took Stacy King with the sixth pick in '89. Want him?

The Orlando Magic is trying to give away Dennis Scott; the rest of the NBA was envious when the Magic took him with the fourth pick in '90.

Rex Chapman may be had; the eighth pick in 1988, he was traded once, from the Charlotte Hornets to the Washington Bullets, for Tom Hammonds, the ninth pick in 1989 who was released this season.

Consider the case of Danny Ferry, perhaps as heralded a college player as any in the last 20 years. Ferry arrived as the next Larry Bird, a multi-talented player capable of directing an entire offense.

He could pass, shoot with range and bang under the boards. "I know what he can do," Krause says. "The kid had all the intelligence factors, he had a big heart, he'll take, trust in you. You'll be afraid not to dive to the floor and he had more ability and brains than his father (an NBA player and executive).

I liked him just merely been the No. 2 pick in the draft—the Sacramento Kings took Pervis Ellison with the first choice in 1989; the scrutiny still would have been intense. But Ferry snubbed the Los Angeles Clippers for millions of Italian lire and eventually joined the Cleveland Cavaliers through a blockbusting deal that continues to have an impact on that franchise.

Add to that a $35 million contract.

Yet Ferry's production has not matched expectations. Not only doesn't he start, but he also can't beat out Mike Sanders, 33, who was out of the league when signed as a free agent a year ago. "It's safe to say I'm not as confident," Ferry said after a game this season. "In college I was the best player. Now I'm not. I just have to play hard and stay aggressive when I'm out there."

How could NBA teams, especially in this era, miss so badly on a player?

"There are three important things in scouting," Krause says. "They are, size, heart and brains. We don't get real complicated. Can he play in our system? Can he do what we need done? We have to scount differently because of the (complex) offensive system we run. We do the objective stuff. We do that. But the hardest thing in the world is judging a guy's character. That's what you're trying to do. You're trying to find how many guys you can trust."
