Rights Board Is Checking On Election

John Reznick, chairman of the campus Judicial Board, said yesterday that an investigation of alleged voting irregularities is being conducted by the student rights commission.

The charge, which involves the recent election of two new Council members, was made by Ray Brandt, sophomore class president.

Reznick said he had received Brandt's complaint, but that the Judicial Board would not hear the case until Chuck Novak, elections commissioner, had made a formal ruling on the charges.

Brandt has indicated he wants a re-run of the election, which placed John Burnette and Bruno Klaus in the formerly vacant positions of fraternity senator and senior class president.

Reznick said that Brandt charged that:

1. Election date was not properly communicated by the elections commission to fraternity men and the Interfraternity Council.

2. Apparently no unbiased persons were appointed to operate voting activities at the polling place.

3. Many students were not allowed to vote because they did not have pledge pins and activity cards.

Reznick said any one of these three charges could be a valid reason for re-calling the election.

Michael Suprain

"Some people have suggested that this is a Mickey Mouse course!"

Easy To Ace:

In Spring A Young Man's Fancy Turns To Thoughts Of Snap Courses

Be there a student with soul so dead who has not looked his roommate square in the eyes and said: "Man, what I need spring term is a three-hour snap course."

"Snap," "Gut," "Pipe" or "Mickey Mouse" courses--whatever you choose to call them--are a time-honored academic tradition. And Southern is no different than Harvard, Yale or Princeton--it has them but the faculty just doesn't like to talk about them.

As for the students, well they are a bit reluctant to talk about them too--after all, no one likes to kill the goose that lays golden 'A's'.

Nevertheless, a number agreed to discuss "snap" courses provided their names would not be used.

Not everyone will agree with their choice. After all, in matters of education much as in matters of love--one man's paradise is another man's purgatory.

Here for better or for worse is what they had to say:

"Take Education 100," one book-weary junior advises. "And it doesn't make any difference which instructor you get, they all make it pretty easy."

"Or you might try Music 100," he added, "it's not that the course is so easy, it's just that it's really easy to copy in there."

And finally he recommended: "Almost any Physical Education course. If you go to class, and aren't in too bad physical shape, you won't get below a 'C.'" he said, "they are the same methods."

Davis feels that students are basically honest. "It is my contention," he said, "that a good 90 plus per cent of students neither want to cheat nor do cheat in the classroom or for that matter, in other activities."

Davis said, however, that precautions should be taken to remove temptations to cheat. "It seems to me this is the only fair thing to do because of the injustice which cheating does to the honest student."

"Many youngsters do not have any preconceived notions before they go into a test that they are going to cheat," said Davis, "but the circumstances are such that they get the impression it is the 'smart' thing to do. If they are left unattended, they may find that the temptation to cheat is very great."

Cheaters Eat At Education's Roots

Last Of A Series
By Sandra Karraker

"I agree with the vast majority of educators that cheating is stealing and it is eating right at the very roots of higher education," said I. Clark Davis, dean of men at SIU.

"If the person is able to 'get by' without attaining that information or gaining a skill or understanding, he is in effect not getting from the experience of a college-university education what we would hope that he would get," said Davis.

"He is stealing information which is not his," he continued. "He is trying to get something which was not earned, therefore, essentially it is stealing."

According to Davis, there are relatively few cases of cheating reported by instructors or other students. He did say that several students have been suspended for cheating.

The severity of the punishment for cheating depends upon the individual case.

Sometime disciplinary probation with specific conditions geared to the case is found to be more effective.

Loretta Ott, assistant dean of women, and Joseph F. Zaleski, assistant dean of men, of the Office of Student Affairs are in charge of dealing with cases of cheating.

Davis said that the Office of Student Affairs is the only office which can suspend a person, and that suspension is subject to approval of the University President, Delyte W. Morris.

"In cases where students are found cheating, they usually don't mean to, and they are sorry," said Davis. "Such cases are very sad really."

Davis doesn't feel that students have developed any particularly novel methods of cheating in recent years. "From what I have heard,"

Pesky Packing Problem Plagues Mrs. Grinnell

MRS. JOHN E. GRINNELL

Limited To 44 Pounds Each For Upcoming World Tour

How many women could pack in one bag enough clothing to provide a suitable wardrobe for visiting Europe, the Orient, and the Scandanavian countries?

This is the problem facing Mrs. John E. Grinnell as she prepares to accompany her husband, vice president for operations, on an overseas inspection tour of programs conducted by SIU, under sponsorship of the U.S. Agency for International Development.

"We are going economy class," said Mrs. Grinnell, "so we can take only 44 pounds each. We will be going at a time of year when we will need clothing for very hot and very cold temperatures, so we will take as many drip-dries as we can."

"We are getting by without overcoats because we will take something in light wool and a windbreaker or all-weather coat on top," she added.

Mrs. Grinnell will carry an overnight bag and Dr. Grinnell will have an attache case besides the bag each of them will take for clothing.

"This means that we can't acquire much on the way unless we send some home," she said, "Since they have cut duty-free purchases to $100, I don't think we will buy very much."

"Mr. Grinnell says that he will buy 'practically nothing' so that I can have most of his hundred," she added with a smile.

1,000 Debaters Coming Here For National Convention

More than 1,000 debaters from some 150 colleges and universities will help Pi Kappa Delta, national forensic honorary, mark its 50th anniversary at the organization's national convention on campus next week.

The convention opens Tuesday and debating, discussion, oratory and extemporaneous speaking will continue through Saturday when the championship rounds are completed. President Delyte W. Morris, a member of the organization, will be the featured speaker at the convention banquet. It will be held at 7:30 p.m. March 22 in the University Center ballroom.

Morris, a successful debater for four years at Park College, also has coached debate and long been active in forensic work.

He has achieved the Order of Special Distinction in PKD and will be one who will receive one of the "Famous Fifty" awards which will be made to 50 distinguished alumni of the organization during the convention.

Leon B. Hickman, executive vice president, Alumni Company of America, who is a brother of C. Addison Hickman, professor of economics at SIU, will also receive a "Famous Fifty" award for distinguished service.

Addison Hickman was also a debater and the man who taught him was A. Craig Baird, one of the foremost debaters in the country and presently serving as visiting professor of speech on this campus.

SPECIAL ADDED ATTRACTION - "Orange and Blue"

Trying to pack a three-month wardrobe into one suitcase is not the only busywork Mrs. Grinnell has to handle in anticipation of her trip.

"First you have to plan your itinerary and decide within the time limit how many days you can stay in each place," said Mrs. Grinnell. "In Mr. Grinnell's case, when he is on assignment he has to stay so many days in each place."

Preparations for traveling also include arrangements for care of business matters at home.

"We have to make arrangements for paying bills while we are gone," said Mrs. Grinnell. "Two students are coming to live in the house to take care of the dog."

Mrs. Grinnell said that they have hired a travel agency to help them with many of the plans for the trip.

"We have friends in some of these places and they will take us to places they think are interesting to see," she said.

Some of their friends have arranged for a Japanese boy to give them a guided tour. He says that he is going to show them the "real Japan."

When asked which country she was most anxious to see, Mrs. Grinnell explained that the newness of the whole trip was exciting to her.

"Japan will be a highlight because of its beauty and its distinct culture," she said. "I think India will be fascinating. Then of course I am looking forward to visiting Greece--Athens and Rome, leaders of the western culture."

The Grinnells will visit their son in England. Grinnell will return to the States on May 29, but Mrs. Grinnell will continue to the Scandanavian countries where she will visit with relatives she hasn't seen since 1948.

Letter To Editor

When it gets to the point that honesty isn't the best policy in any educational institution, how can anyone say that the institution is worth its weight in anything.

This seems to be the line that SIU is taking, with exceptions of course. People cheat, lie, and will do anything to pass or get better grades in a course.

Instructors, believe it or not, can and do contribute to this system of cheating, when they keep using the same old tests quarter after quarter, or they don't tighten down on habitual cutters. These are the people who have other feeble excuses for missing classes.

I say tighten down on these leeches, and let's see who can make the grade on their own. Roger Alexander

Report Syria, Iraq, UAR Form Federal Arab Republic

DAMASCUS, Syria
 Syria, Iraq and the United Arab Republic have reportedly agreed to form a three-member Federal Arab Republic after four days of negotiations here.

Well-informed sources said an official announcement of this agreement was expected last night from Syria's National Revolutionary Council. Damascus Radio interrupted a program to tell the people to listen for an announcement on the union of the three nations yesterday.

A high-level Syrian delegation flew to Cairo to meet with President Gamal Abdel Nasser of the United Arab Republic, Iraqi leaders were flying to Cairo from Baghdad.

Both the Syrian revolt of last Friday and the Iraqi revolt of Feb. 8 were made to the accompaniment of praise for Nasser.

The new revolutionary regime here was reported stepping up its hunt for Communists. Troops and military police are said to have rounded up nearly 100 Reds.

Talks between publishers and the nonstriking AFL-CIO New York newspaper Guild ended yesterday with indications the eight newspapers would not resume publication before Tuesday at the earliest. The strike is in its 98th day.

WASHINGTON

The general manager of the American Newspaper Publishers Association said Thursday Congress would be skating on thin ice constitutionally in any move to increase "the number and variety of 'voices' in the newspaper field."

Stanford Smith presented his testimony before a House Antitrust subcommittee. The ANPA represents 90 per cent of the nation's daily newspaper circulation.

WASHINGTON

The National Association of Manufacturers urged Congress to cut taxes more than President Kennedy recommended and postpone revisions of the revenue code.

W. P. Gullander, president of the business group, said he favors the Herlong-Baker bill which provides for tax reduction spread over five years.

DETROIT

The federal government collected a record $5 billion in taxes on automotive products last year, the Automobile Manufacturers Association reported Thursday.

The trade association said the figure was up 12 per cent from 1961 and compared with the previous high of $4.62 billion in 1960.

CHICAGO

Comic Lenny Bruce was Thursday sentenced in Municipal Court to a one-year jail term and fined $1,000 for obscenity.

The charges stem from his performance and language at a Chicago night club which was witnessed by a 16-year old girl.

Bruce was convicted Feb. 28 after a three-day trial which he did not attend. He was arrested Feb. 23 in Los Angeles on a charge of narcotics possession.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina

The Armed Forces went on full-scale alert yesterday in apparent anxiety about the threat of a Peronist revival.

Argentina has been under military rule since the fall of President Arturo Frondizi a year ago following a Peronist resurgence at the polls.

Peron is living in exile in Spain. Responsible Vatican sources said Thursday that his excommunication has been lifted at his request. He was excommunicated in 1955 for the arrest of two priests.

and what-to-wear for what occasion didn't put him under too much cerebral strain. But he added hastily, "One fellow who took it ended up writing on theories of marriage."

"Education Administration 100 is the Mickey Mouse course, par excellence," said a freshman in the General Studies program.

"If it is possible for a person like me to never open the book, miss half the classes, never take a note and still get a B-plus, it must be fairly easy," he added.

A junior girl major in English found the same course a snap but she was anything but pleased by it.

"Don't take it, that's all I can say," she said with a note of frustration in her voice. "It's so elementary, it was--like awful."

"The first two weeks of the term I wore a name-tag," she went on, warming up to her subject. "I guess because the instructor couldn't remember our names. Then it was nothing but memorization--who is the Illinois Superintendent of Public Instructions, who was John Dewey."

"I just get so flustered when I think of it I can't think of a good adjective for it," she added.

History of Illinois received a number of votes as one of the easier courses.

"Not much is demanded, especially for a 300 level course," one student said. He liked the idea that often you can't hear the lecture beyond the second row, copies of previous exams are in abundance, and frequently the lecture is amusing.

Art appreciation won the vote of a sophomore from Lake Bluff who admitted that "I never really studied for any of the tests because I knew I could get and do all right. The studios were like something out of kindergarten. We learned how to draw lines and make dots."

"Geography 324 was without a doubt the easiest course I have ever had in college," said a senior majoring in secondary education. "It offered me no challenge to even make me want to study it, or open a book--I got a B for effort."

Health Education 100, taught by one of the varsity coaches, was classified by a geology major as a "sure B if you just go to class."

Others that won votes of confidence include Guidance 305 called a "real snap"; Sociology 100 which is "no sweat"; Animal Industries 105 labeled "an easy four hours" and even Philosophy 120 which one student called "no trouble at all."

Old standbys such as horse-back riding and golf apparently have fallen into disrepute--after all, it is too easy to be laughed out of the room when you say you are enrolled.

Yet many Physical Education courses cropped up in the informal survey including archery (shoot a few arrows into the weeds the first two lessons and by the end of the term if you come near the target you'll get a good grade, one student advised.

Perhaps the most improbable of all is one a certain student insists is called simply "Rest." You'll find it in the catalogue masquerading under the formal title "Adaptive Physical Education."

TRIPLE TROUBLE - David Schaffer, an SIU student, had car trouble in a big way yesterday. Shortly after 9 a.m. yesterday he was driving along Campus Drive near Thompson Point parking lot when his differential came loose and fell down. A Post Office truck, driven by Don Snyder of Carbondale, struck the back of Schaffer's car and knocked it forward and across the curbing. Schaffer's car then rolled into a light pole, damaging the front end. No one was injured in the accident, according to Thomas Leffler, SIU security officer.

Spring Forestry Camp Begins April 1

Seventeen forestry students will take to the woods April 1 for the fifth annual SIU spring forestry camp.

Camp will open officially March 24 when the students will leave on a seven-day out-of-state field trip. The resident-camp program, headquartered at Giant City State Park, will run from April 1 until June 5, according to M. L. McCormack, camp director.

On the field trip students under Ernest Kurmes, assistant professor of forestry, will travel as far south as the Stoneville, Miss., Research Center of the U. S. Forest Service. They plan to observe modern sawmill facilities, field management situations and bottom land forests during the 1,000-mile trip.

Participation in the ten-week camp program fulfills Southern's requirement of one term of practical field courses for students majoring in forestry. Since SIU offers its field courses during the spring term rather than in the summer as do many schools of forestry, SIU students are able to take summer jobs requiring forestry skills, McCormack says. A large number take summer work in National Forests.

Other forestry faculty members serving on the 1963 camp staff will be Department Chairman Neil Hosley and Prof. Ronald Beazley.

Viola DuFrain Is Honored By Business Education Association

Viola DuFrain, associate professor in business education, was honored last week by the Illinois Business Education Association for her work in editing a bulletin, "Business Education in the Secondary School."

At the meeting, held in Chicago, Bonnie Lockwood, associate professor of business education, was elected second vice president for 1963-63 and Harves Rahe, chairman of the Business education, SIU, served on the curriculum-bulletin committee. Archie Reese of the Anna-Jonesboro High School was president of the organization for 1962-63.

Miss DuFrain was co-editor of the bulletin with Woodson W. Fishback, associate professor of educational administration and supervision at Southern, and a committee of John Gustafson, SIU graduate student from Monee, will be camp assistant.

Students at spring camp will gain practical experience in cutting, thinning, pruning and planting forest trees; environmental factors affecting forest growth; forest management for recreation; determining tree growth and volume for standing timber; forest utilization; chain saw safety practices; first-aid studies and fire control.

In addition to the Mississippi field trip, short field

This minor consists of 30 quarter hours: 15 hours earned in courses offered by the academic department of the college; and 15 hours earned in courses offered by the various religious foundations.

The College of Liberal Arts and Sciences "has a special faculty committee to serve as a liaison with the foundations and to approve the courses to be accepted for credit," according to Henry Dan Piper, dean of the college.

Literary Feuds Are Gory Even In Retrospect

"The Fine Art of Literary Mayhem," by Myrick Land, Holt, Rinehart and Winston; New York, 242 pgs.

An idiot, and a Boston idiot, to boot, than which there is nothing lower in the world. . . ."

That's H. L. Mencken's verdict on Henry James.

A "hoary-headed and toothless baboon" was Thomas Carlyle's opinion of Ralph Waldo Emerson. And the terrible-tempered Scot really took the hide off Algernon Swinburne when he flayed the languid poet of passion for "sitting in a sewer and adding to it."

Our own times have no monopoly on this brand of mayhem. A couple of thousand years ago Aristophanes called his fellow playwright Euripides a "cliche anthologist."

There's something about the writer which seems to circulate acid through the veins--perhaps because all the blood already has been drained by his brother scribblers. Probably Vance Bourjaily, one of today's swarm of American novelists, puts his finger on it when he writes, "It seems to me that literary feuding is one of a number of fairly silly things which writers do when they're not writing well, whether for financial reasons or psychic ones. It comes from a feeling of being in competition with one another. . . ."

Actually, of course, the compiler of this collection of murder by remote control is just another Walter Winchell, dealing with the literati rather than the jet set. Gossip is gossip (and we all dearly love it).

Myrick Land, the dust jacket says, is a novelist, senior editor of a well-known national magazine, and a freelancer. He employs his lance with passable skill in this assemblage of twice-told tales, most of which are familiar to readers, writers, critics, and other literary camp-followers. Sometimes he's a little clumsy as when he tries to imitate his betters. In describing the endless skirmishing of Alexander Pope (who practically made a career of it), Mr. Land refers to "a buffoon who possessed no literary talent, and who bore the improbable but alliterative name of Colley Cibber." Well, what's so wonderful about the improbable but awkward name of Myrick Land?

At any rate, here Myrick sells us second-hand the battles of Samuel Johnson with Lord Chesterfield and most of his contemporaries. It was the cantankerous dictionary-maker who declared that Chesterfield's "Letters to His Son" (illegitimate) "teach the morals of a whore and the manners of a dancing master."

Culver Pictures, Inc.

"There is nothing to tell. . . ." said the cantankerous Dr. Samuel Johnson of his book-flinging assault on the luckless Tom Osborne, "but that he was insolent and I beat him, and that he was a blockhead and told of it, which I should never have [told]. . . ."

Among this assortment, the reader also may find Mr. Thackeray holding up his hands in horror at Charles Dickens' somewhat conventional affair with a young actress. Of course, Dickens himself insisted on publiciz-equal parts can produce a fine variety of alcoholic assaults. Certainly Mr. Land's rendering of the misunderstandings of H. G. Wells and Henry James reminds one of shadowboxing within the current TV ring. And, considering the talents with the stiletto of George Bernard Shaw, here our compiler has left out the spice of the sauce. He does have more of a field day--but who could miss?--with the tangled emotional cobweb of D. H. Lawrence and his famous Frieda and the Katherine Mansfield and John Middleton Murry. Then there is Somerset Maugham waxing witty at the expense of Hugh Walpole, Hemingway showing the hair on his chest to every new bar-room acquaintance, and follies of Sinclair Lewis who wasn't called "Red" for nothing--his temper matched his vanishing carrot hair.

Some of the other feuds attain that distinction with some difficulty. Anyone who has attended a literary cocktail party in Manhattan knows that malice and Martinis mixed in What does it all prove? Well, there's no safety in the grave and much ado about nothing and great men are not always wise and a whole copybook of maxims to the same effect. Maybe it's petty and pathetic to contemplate sensitive creators who sometimes live on flattery as a cat on cream. Some famous feuds and feuders Mr. Land omits--Oscar Wilde and John Ruskin, both pierced through and through with the rapier of Whistler. In any case, he has proved the obvious. Jonathan Swift left little to be said, when he wrote--

"... a flea hath smaller fleas than on him prey; And these have smaller still to bite 'em; And so proceed ad infinitum."

Items In SIU Publication Welcomed As Significant Joyce Contributions

"A James Joyce Miscellany; Third Series," edited by Marvin Magalaner. (Southern Illinois University Press, 1962. 293 pp. $6.50)

Books and articles about James Joyce have been increasing in number each year until by now the annual figure has become staggering. There are, in fact, those who complain that too much is being written about Joyce. The reasons for the flood, however, are not hard to find: Joyce is one of our most important writers, but much of what he has written is extremely difficult to understand. So it is the intention of these thirteen essays (the second Joyce miscellany to be issued under the SIU imprint) to help us comprehend this man and his enigmatic works.

Since the 1920's a major school of literary study has been called the New Criticism. One of its chief tenets has always been that it is the work of literature itself that counts, and that to read literature as biography or to use biography to try to understand literature is fallacious. William Empson has long been a high priest of the New Critical church, but in the essay reprinted here, Empson approaches "Ulysses" as though the New Criticism never existed. For he would have us believe that Stephen Dedalus was really and truly James Joyce, that there really were a Leopold and a Molly Bloom, that sometime after 16 June 1904--the day within which "Ulysses" takes place--Stephen (that is, Joyce) had an affair with the "real" Molly, and that the experience changed his life.

Now no one can deny that Joyce, like other novelists, drew on the life around him to populate his books, or that Stephen Dedalus is to some extent an autobiographical figure. But also like other novelists, Joyce changed and adapted reality for his artistic purpose. Vivian Mercier summed it up in a recent issue of the "Hudson Review" with the statement that "the naive equation of Stephen with Joyce has been refuted," and since Empson can offer no external proof for a counter-refutation, he would seem to be on mighty thin ice indeed. But then Mr. Empson (as witness the reaction to his recent book on Milton) has never been afraid of falling through and being called all wet. This article is further good proof of that.

Since it is the most controversial, Empson's essay is also one of the sprightliest in the collection. However, some of the other essays, while not so provoking, are perhaps more valuable in helping us to understand Joyce. Thus, in a continuation of his series of articles showing how Joyce developed the characters in "Ulysses," Joseph Prescott examines the various manuscripts and printings of the book, noting how Joyce constructed Molly Bloom through the accretion of detail. If the immediate result of the essay is a sometimes tedious cataloging of traits, the end product is a valuable insight into the way Joyce worked. In other items T. Lennam gives us a close reading of one of the chapters of "Ulysses," and Richard M. Kain offers a short but interesting note identifying the anonymous "Yankee interviewer" mentioned in the same book.

Other essays discuss Joyce's sources. Morton Paley and Robert Gleckner consider William Blake's substantial influence of Joyce, and James R. Baker maintains that the spirit of Ibsen is to be found not only in "Exiles," Joyce's only play, but also in his "Dubliners." James R. Thrane, in an article which originally appeared in "Modern Philology" for February 1960, displays some remarkable scholarly pyrotechnics in uncovering (if not over-uncovering) Joyce's source for the hell-fire sermon in "A Portrait of the Artist."

Four articles are devoted to "Finnegans Wake," that master puzzle which, Joyce informed us, was intended for "that ideal reader suffering from an ideal insomnia." Gleckner's piece has already been mentioned. David Hayman suggests how the pub scene in section II of the "Wake" might be mounted for the stage. Ruth von Phul offers the most difficult essay of the lot--an attempt to read the "Wake" as a reflection of the six ages of Joyce's life. If her effort is more successful than Empson's it is because she does not base her arguments on total speculation. Vivian Mercier's collection of odds and ends of explications of the "Wake" is, to my mind, about the most gracefully written and most entertaining in the book.

And finally, to finish with what comes first, there is Slocum and Cahoon's presentation of a previously unpublished fragment of a Joyce short story, a careful study by Robert Scholes of Joyce's two early broadsides, "Gas from a Burner" and "The Holy Office," and an introductory essay by editor Marvin Magalaner which surveys some of the more important recent Joyceana.

So the bibliography of Joyce studies for 1962 will be swelled out with these thirteen items, and the anti-Joyceans will complain. But most of us will be grateful for the additional help with one of our most important and difficult writers.

Cagers Whip Evansville In NCAA Quarter-Final

JOE RAMSEY SCORED 24 POINTS IN SIU'S 86-73 WIN OVER EVANSVILLE.

Salukis Face South Dakota In Semi-Final NCAA Game

SIU met South Dakota State in one of two semi-final games last night in the NCAA College - Division basketball tourney. Wittenberg played Oglethorpe (Ga.) in the other semi-final game.

Tournament officials after watching the SIU upset victory over Evansville moved the Salukis into the favorites role.

Wittenberg, who was the pre-tourney favorite, had trouble in beating a stubborn Northeastern University squad from Boston, Mass. Final score of the game was 48-47.

"We played real good defense and shot well," Jack Hartman said following SIU's victory Wednesday night. "The boys were up psychologically and hope they are ready for South Dakota State."

SIU now has a 20-8 record and has won its last seven games in a row. Hartman believes the team is stronger now than at any other time this season.

Cornell To Miss Kansas Relays

Lew Hartzog has been forced to reshuffle his track lineup for tomorrow's indoor track meet at the Kansas State Relays because of Bill Cornell's leg infection.

Cornell has an ingrown hair on the left calf which erupted suddenly and has him completely out.

SIU will not enter the one or two-mile varsity relays because of Cornell's injury.

Ed Houston will lead off the quarter-mile, John Peters will run the half-mile, Jim Dupree will run the three-quarter mile lap and Brian Turner will run the mile lap in place of Cornell.

Wrestlers To College-Division Championship This Weekend

SIU, after encountering some difficulty throughout the season in locating wrestling opponents, is not anticipating any trouble this weekend when they will be among 43 teams competing for the NCAA's first college-division championship.

Coach Jim Wilkinson's squad, which has defeated Miami of Ohio and Indiana State while losing to Iowa State and Bloomsburg State, figures to be among the top contenders at Cedar Falls, Iowa, where the host State College team will perhaps be favored.

Competing in the NCAA University-Division meet a year ago the Salukis tied for sixth place with Pittsburgh and Wisconsin, but State College of Iowa was fifth and are reported strong again this season.

Southern's hopes for a title will rely largely on the success of its heavier weight representatives Ken Houston, Roger Plapp and Larry Kristoff. Although neither Houston nor Plapp have been particularly busy this season due to injuries, both are in good shape now and expect to be among the top entries in the 177 and 191-pound divisions, respectively. Kristoff is entered in the heavyweight flight.

Southern's other entries are expected to be Izzy Ramos, 115; Terry Finn, 123; Don Devine, 130; Dan DiVito, 137; Eric Fetock, 147; Tony Jackson, 157 and Dave Holian, 167.

Wilkinson's wrestling squad will also take part in the March 22-23 NCAA University-Division meet at Kent State University. The Salukis are hopeful of a repeat performance of last year's sixth place finish which was the school's best

By Tom McNamara
EVANSVILLE, Ind.—SIU's superior shooting and defense paved the way for the cagers' 86-73 upset basketball victory over third-ranked Evansville College Wednesday in quarter-final action of the NCAA College - Division basketball tourney.

Other first round winners included Oglethorpe (Ga.), South Dakota State and tourney favorite Wittenberg (Ohio). Wittenberg slipped past an underrated Northeastern University (Mass.), 48-47.

Sophomore Joe Ramsey scored 24 points for the Salukis and grabbed 10 rebounds off the backboards. Ramsey's aggressive play under the boards with big 6-8 Frank Lentfer accounted for SIU's victory.

Harold Hood scored 19 points in the victory before fouling out late in the game. Hood hit six of 13 field goal attempts and seven of nine free throws for his 19 points.

Dave Henson, SIU captain and leading scorer, scored 16 points before fouling out. Paul Henry also scored 16 for the Southern cagers.

In the dressing room after the game SIU was all smiles and raring to go for last night's semi-final game against South Dakota State.

"We win the big ones," hollered Henson, Hood, Henry, Lentfer and Ramsey. They were an excited, happy group of athletes after the game. Arad McCutchan, Evansville's coach, interrupted the SIU celebration for a moment. "You beat us every way possible," McCutchan said. "Good luck the rest of the tournament and I sincerely hope you win it. If you play like you did against us I know you will win."

The crowd of 7,168 sat several minutes in their seats before the game in dismay. They couldn't believe that SIU, who got beat by 19 at Christmas time could come back and win.

The crowd was in agreement that the SIU cagers could have beaten almost any one Wednesday night.

Constant Contact And Friendly Persuasion Secret To Recruiting

How does a college or university go about building and recruiting a top-notch football team?

That question was put to Carmen Piccone, head football coach this week. "Friendly persuasion and constant contact," he replied without hesitation.

"First of all our coaches are assigned to certain area," Piccone said, "then we write to each high school principal and football coach to find out if the boy is capable of passing college work."

Once this is established, Piccone says, SIU then sends away for films showing the prospect's past performances which will influence the coach's decision.

After the films have been screened, SIU's coaching staff starts to keep a chart on the prospective athlete. By means of personal visits, telephone calls, letters, sending university catalogues and school newspapers the coaches are able to determine if the boys are interested in SIU.

"We try to build up the athletes interest in SIU," Piccone explained. "We know the boys will be contacted by other schools so we always need something around the boy to remind him of SIU."

All of the above methods are charted on 6 x 10 cards which are kept in a file which a person would not expect from a coach. The information kept is the number of calls made to prospective athletes (telephone, personal visits and when the boy will visit SIU.)

"This way we know how many times we have contacted a kid," Piccone said. "We then have a weekly meeting to see if we have neglected any athletes or if we should schedule visits to our campus for them."

"The aid we can give deserving student-athletes may not often times be as good as other schools can offer them," the head coach said, "therefore, we must try to overcome this deficiency by constant contact with a boy and try to familiarize him enough with the University so that he associates himself with being a part of it."

"Once we familiarize him with our University we then invite him to our campus," Piccone added.

Some of the other steps of recruiting are setting up housing for them; seeing that all forms for admission are properly filled out; set up workout programs for them over the summer months; continuous contact so no other enthusiastic recruiter will steal him from SIU.

"As one can probably see forming a football team is not only coaching but getting boys to come to our school," Piccone concluded, "And from looks of next season's schedule we certainly are going to need a lot of good boys."

CARMON PICCONE SMILES ABOUT RECRUITING METHODS WHICH HAS LANDED TOP PROSPECTS THIS WINTER.

Southern Swimmers To Compete In AAU Title Meet March 21-23

SIU's swimming team will compete in the National AAU swimming championships March 21-23 at Yale University in New Haven (Conn.).

Ralph Casey, SIU swim coach, is not sure just how many boys he will be taking to the nationals.

Ray Padovan, Jack Schiltz, Thom McAneney, Ted Petras and Darrell Green are expected to go.

Padovan will be trying to qualify in the 100 and 200-yard freestyle races. The top three qualifiers in the 100 will represent the U.S. at the Pan-American Games in Brazil in May.

In the 200-yard race the top six qualifiers will make the jaunt to Brazil. McAneney is expected to swim the 200 as well as the 500-yard event in an effort to qualify.

McAneney earlier this season swam the world's fastest 500-yards but has not seen much action since the exhibition.

Padovan, McAneney, Schiltz and Green probably will make up SIU's freestyle relay team. While Ted Petras will replace McAneney on the medley team.

Schiltz is expected to swim the 400-yard individual medley at the national championships in addition to the 200-yard race.

Following the competition at New Haven, SIU moves down to North Carolina State for the NCAA swimming championships which are to be held March 29-30.

Casey is expected to take only Schiltz, Green, Petras and either Cunningham or Mike Roberts to the championships.

Padovan is ineligible for the NCAA swimming championships because he competes on the varsity as a freshman. The NCAA gives an athlete only three years of varsity eligibility.

Group Builds 'Space Between' To Shelter Experiments

Since time began man has used whatever was at hand to build enclosures. So it seems only natural that the Design Department use products of modern man in one of its construction projects.

The project, known around the Design Department as the "Space Between," actually is a modernistic enclosure between Buildings T-126 and T-128.

The object of this experimental research project is to utilize certain materials in shelter construction in unusual ways.

Posts and beams, common to shelter construction, form the framework of the "Space Between." But the planners turned to contemporary products for other parts.

The four large roof troughs, for example, are made of compressed waste paper fibers. And at least one wall is made out of plastic food containers.

Although the enclosure is technically supposed to be completed this month, it will never actually be finished. Certain kinds of experimental changes will be carried on for an indefinite period as part of the department's education and research program.
