Results reveal bars meet health guides

By Steve Lambert
Staff Writer

Recent health inspections of 12 Carbondale liquor establishments show that all 12 scored above minimum Jackson County Health Department regulations.

Results of the inspections also reveal that at least two establishments which scored below the minimum requirements late last year have upgraded their conditions enough to meet those standards.

The results of the inspections, conducted by the county Health Department in January, were released by the city last week. The 12 liquor establishments examined represent about one-fourth of all liquor establishments in the city.

Most of the problems reported in the inspection results involve faulty maintenance and cleaning.

At L.B.J.'s Steakhouse and Booby's, the two establishments which had failed earlier inspections, cleaning problems persist, although they're not as severe as in the past, the inspections show.

The inspections also classify L.B.J.'s restrooms as just fair, and a follow-up inspection is being planned for the restaurant.

Not all establishments fared as well in January inspections as they had in previous ones.

Village Inn, for instance, scored worse in January because sanitizers were absent from dish washing procedures at the time of the inspection.

Larry Prior, environmental health director at the county Health Department, explained Monday that health scores are based on a scale of 100 points. Points are deducted on the basis of how severe problems at the establishment are.

Five points are deducted for the most severe problems, such as not having hot or cold running water where employees wash their hands; four points are deducted for problems such as faulty plumbing; two points are deducted for "food-contact" problems such as dirty refrigeration units, and one point is deducted for "non-food-contact" problems like dirty floors or walls.

Establishments are generally warned that their licenses might be suspended if:

- They score less than 85 total points.
- They have 10 or more total violations.
- They have not corrected at least one-half of all problems listed in the latest previous inspection.
- They have a five-point violation.
- They have more than one four-point violation.
- They have three or more two-point violations.
- They have four or more one-point violations.

The state requires that each liquor establishment be inspected twice a year. Prior said. Problem cases, he added, are usually inspected more often—sometimes once a month.

Specific scores for the establishments inspected are:

American Legion, 206 N. Illinois Ave.—100, no change since its previous inspection conducted in October;

Blue Flambe, 801 E. Main St.—98, a gain of one point since its last inspection conducted in October;

Booby's, 405 S. Illinois Ave.—91, an improvement of 10 points since its last inspection conducted in October;

Holiday Inn, 800 E. Main St.—90, a loss of five points since its last inspection conducted in October;

King's Inn, 825 E. Main St.—98, no change since its previous inspection conducted in October;

L.B.J.'s Steakhouse, 119 N. Washington St.—86, a gain of seven points since its previous inspection conducted in December;

Merlin's, 315 S. Illinois Ave.—95, no change since its previous inspection, conducted in December;

Silverball, 611 S. Illinois Ave.—96, a loss of three points since its previous inspection conducted in September;

Spanish Key, 622 E. Main St.—97, a gain of two points since its previous inspection; conducted in September;

Top of the Racquet, Old Rt. 13, East—93, a gain of five points since its previous inspection conducted in January;

V.F.W., 207 N. Illinois Ave.—100, a gain of two points since its previous inspections conducted in September;

Village Inn, 1700 W. Main St.—90, a loss of four points since its previous inspection conducted in October.

Lawmakers dissatisfied with state road program

By Bill Deansmore
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Dissatisfaction with Gov. James R. Thompson's proposed $642.7 million year road program was expressed by Republicans and Democrats in the Illinois General Assembly.

Republicans, led by House Minority Leader George V. Ryan, R-Kankakee, proposed three measures Monday they said could increase funds available for road work by up to $150 million over what Thompson proposed in his fiscal 1979 budget unveiled March 1.

And Sen. Howard W. Carroll, D-Chicago, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee which handles road spending, criticized Thompson's road program, saying projects that the governor said would be under way last year won't be started until April or June.

Ryan, who as Republican leader is expected to support the governor's budget requests in the House, said a three-bill GOP package to increase road spending for downstate and mass transit projects is not in conflict with the governor's budget.

"We're trying to help the governor and help the taxpayer," Ryan said. "We're not saying we should sit here and nod our heads every time the governor throws a program our way."

Thompson has proposed an $18 million drop in new state appropriations for highway construction, maintenance and rehabilitation, saying that is all the state can afford next year.

The total of $642.7 million in new appropriations for highway improvements for next fiscal year compares to $669.7 million in new appropriations he approved this year for similar projects now under way.

Ryan said the Republican proposal for additional spending was being proposed as "an alternative" to the governor's budget. He said that it would offer a way to pay for local pork-barrel projects, that legislators—pressed by election-year politicking—will want to add to the Department of Transportation budget by late June.

Ryan said the bills, by shuffling various funds and accelerating the Regional Transportation Authority's payback of a $24.6 million state loan—would add a minimum of $10.5 million in road work to that proposed in Thompson's budget. He said the $10.5 million could be used to borrow up to $150 million through Transportation Series A bonds for additional work.

However, Ryan conceded he did not know if the governor would approve anywhere near that much in additional bond appropriations—which must be paid back plus interest over a long period.

In a letter to a fellow Democrat who chairs the Transportation Study Commission, Carroll said the state Department of Transportation's "questionable construction record" under Thompson should be investigated by the legislature.

"The fiscal records also show that DOT is proceeding at a snail's pace in undertaking the Downstate Local Bridge

Radioactive study matter costs $10,000

By Brenda Hood
Staff Writer

The University spends about $10,000 a year to buy and dispose of radioactive materials used primarily for cancer and genetic research, says Gerhardt Jaspers, radiation safety officer.

However, if Attorney General William Scott succeeds in closing the present disposal site at Sheffield, Ill., the costs of waste disposal could increase markedly. The nearest place the wastes could be shipped, Jaspers said, is South Carolina. Sheffield is located about 100 miles southeast of Chicago.

The radioactive wastes are hauled there in steel barrels by Nuclear Engineering Co., which operates the landfill. The barrels and wastes are later buried.

The state-owned landfill at Sheffield is a 40-acre site used for the disposal of industrial wastes, including low-level nuclear wastes.

SIU produces only a small amount of radioactive wastes each year, Jaspers said. The total radiation from the wastes is about the same as the radiation given off by one gram of radium (one curie). This amount could legally be disposed of through the sewer system or put in the dumpster, he said.

"Any kind of industrial waste has to be disposed of. I think it is better to bury it so at least you know where it is and what you've got. If you put it in the sewer, it may turn up anywhere," Jaspers said.

The wastes are collected by Radiation Control and stored in yellow barrels in a locked garage at 901 S. Elizabeth St., until 20 barrels have accumulated. The barrels are then hauled away. Only two persons, including Jaspers, have access to the garage.

The landfill at Sheffield is one of six commercially operated waste disposal centers in the country.

The storage area is inspected regularly by the U.S. Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRC) and the Department of Public Health. Jaspers said neither agency found any items of non-compliance at their last inspection. There is no external radiation from the storage barrels, he said, making them completely safe.

The barrels meet Department of Transportation (DOT) specifications for transportation of wastes.

Most of the radioactive wastes consist of contaminated disposable glassware, paper and plastic gloves. The liquid wastes are low-level counting fields.

There are 26 faculty members authorized to use radioactive materials who are currently using them. All persons around the radioactive area are required to wear film badges as a safety measure, Jaspers said. "Very, very rarely do we get an exposure. The radiation is well within occupational safety limits."

Scott filed suit in the U.S. District Court against the NRC and Nuclear Engineering Co. in November 1977. He asked that the dumping of radioactive wastes be halted until an environmental study is completed and the NRC holds hearings, according to Russell Eggert, of the attorney general's office. A decision has not yet been reached.

Eggert said that Nuclear Engineering Co. has been buying wastes near Sheffield since 1963. Some of the wastes are transported in from other states.

Senator: Canal treaties may be ratified

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Carter's long-sought goal of winning Senate ratification of the Panama Canal treaties got a major boost Monday when a leading opponent conceded the administration seems to have enough votes to win.

Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, the assistant Republican leader, said an agreement amongst key senators on the issue of keeping American troops in Panama after the United States surrenders control of the waterway has tilted the vote in favor of treaty supporters.

With Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker supporting ratification, Stevens is the most influential Senate Republican voice for the opposition.

"I think the president has the votes," said Stevens shortly before the Senate resumed its month-long debate on whether to approve turning over the waterway by the year 2000.

At the White House, press secretary Jody Powell, informed of Stevens' comment, said, "I hope he's right." But, Powell added, "I think neither side has the votes locked up."

And with a crucial vote scheduled Thursday on the pact guaranteeing the neutrality of the Canal Zone after the year 2000, the administration was trying to change. Officials continued an intensive effort to pick up the votes of a handful of uncommitted senators who will settle the issue.

Carter enlisted the help of confidante Charles Kirbo, an Atlanta lawyer, who sought the votes of fellow Georgians Sam Nunn and Herman Talmadge.

Talmadge and Nunn, both Democrats, are among those seeking a provision in the treaties which would allow the United States to negotiate a continued U.S. military presence in Panama.

The idea has won the support of both

News Briefs

Baker and Senate Majority Leader Robert Byrd, and is considered crucial to obtaining the necessary two-thirds vote for ratification.

The treaty modification would not require that U.S. troops or warplanes remain in Panama. But it would replace a requirement now in the treaties which would force a complete U.S. withdrawal.

The Panamanian government would not, however, be required to permit a continued U.S. presence.

As a result of the broad support building for the proposal, Byrd said Monday that he thinks "...prospects for ratification are greatly improved."

U.N.: Malnourished increase reported

ROME (AP)—The U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization reported in a global survey Monday that the rich are getting fatter and the poor hungrier. It found both trends troublesome.

The 130-page World Food Survey, based on reports from 161 countries, also estimated the world's undernourished at about 450 million, or a quarter of the underdeveloped world, and likely to increase.

"This review is disquieting," FAO said. "Firm evidence of any significant progress being made since 1974 in reducing the numbers affected by inadequate supplies of food is not yet available."

In the rich and industrialized countries the FAO found "excessive food intake or improper diets" leading to "the steadily rising prevalence of diseases" as daily calorie intake per person soared to 3,380. In the 32 poorest countries, calorie consumption is on the decline with the figure now around 2,000, according to the study.

As a result, the percentage of the malnourished in the developing countries of Africa rose from 25 percent of the population in 1970 to 28 percent four years later. A similar increase was noted in Asia.

The Food and Nutrition Board of the National Academy of Sciences in Washington estimates that the average U.S. male between the ages of 23 and 50 should consume 2,700 calories a day. American females of that age bracket should take in 2,000, according to the board's 1974 figures, the most recent. For U.S. residents older than 50, the figures are 2,400 calories daily for men and 1,800 for women.

American children between four and six years old should have 1,800 calories a day and those between seven and 10, 2,400 daily, the board said.

The FAO study found that in the poorest countries close to one-half of all children can be classified as underfed. It said about 22 million babies a year, one-sixth of all births, weigh less than 5.5 pounds at birth, 95 percent of them in developing areas.

Terrorists seize building in Holland

ASSEN, Netherlands (AP)—South Moluccan militants, a fanatical group that has terrorized Holland on and off for a decade, struck again Monday, seizing a government building and 50 to 60 hostages in a shooting attack that left at least six persons wounded, authorities said.

The four to six gunmen were demanding freedom for comrades in Dutch jails and a plane to fly all of them, along with hostages, out of the country, government officials said.

Police in armored cars quickly surrounded the modern-style office block in this northern Dutch city as the terrorists, said to be armed with pistols and at least one machine gun, fired bursts of bullets from upper-floor windows.

Election weakens France's leftists

PARIS (AP)—France's leftist alliance finished behind the coalition of President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing in first round parliamentary voting Sunday, seriously weakening leftist chances to end 20 years of center-right rule.

There were signs that the shaky leftist alliance would have trouble uniting in time for next Sunday's runoff election.

The center-right coalition, however, was expected to have little trouble uniting behind its strongest candidate in each race.

The left had been expected to do substantially better, with pollsters predicting it would take 54 percent.

Socialist leader Francois Mitterrand blamed the poor showing on confusion created by the Communists over the issue of how much to nationalize if the left won. Communist nationalization demands greater than those of the Socialists led to a noisy quarrel that fractured the alliance last September.

Others said much of the prediction for Socialist success was based on a apparent new support from educated middle-level executives or government clerical workers.

Weight loss $8 billion industry

Graduates: Fad diets out, behavior modification in

By Michele Ranstord
Staff Writer

Losing weight has become an $8 billion industry in the United States with the development of special gadgets and diets designed to help men and women fit TV's image of what they should look like.

However, less expensive ways to lose weight and better reasons for doing so exist, according to Debbie Uchalik and Erica Wise, graduate students in psychology.

They are implementing a six-week program, based on B.F. Skinner's principles of behavior modification, to help overweight persons lose weight—and keep it off.

Uchalik and Wise need 20 men and women to help them with their experiment, which will begin after spring break. The 20 participants will fit two groups. Each will meet for 90 minutes on Tuesdays and Thursdays for six weeks.

Persons interested in participating in the weight control program should call 453-2361 before spring break, leave their name, phone number and times they can be reached. Uchalik or Wise will then schedule an interview appointment.

Participants will be asked to keep track of their eating habits and include what they eat, when and where they eat and they will also be asked to describe their feelings while eating.

The information will be used to make participants aware of behavior they associate with eating, which forms the basis for the behavior modification system.

"Some people associate eating with certain emotions such as anxiety or depression, or certain activities such as boredom," Wise said. "It is a stimulus-response type of thing."

Uchalik said that once persons become aware of their eating habits, they can learn to replace bad habits with good ones.

"We will be offering alternatives to people. Instead of eating and watching TV, people will learn to replace the eating behavior," Uchalik said.

Wise said that because it is more effective to change eating habits than just losing weight, people going through a behavior modification program are more likely to keep the weight off.

The groups will also offer nutritional information and exercise programs to provide an all-around health program.

It is for health reasons that persons should keep their weight down, according to Wise and Uchalik.

Studies estimated that 35 percent of the men and 40 percent of the women in America are overweight. In some persons being overweight can cause heart attacks, high blood pressure, diabetes and an earlier death.

Snow falls in Midwest; cold front brings showers

Snow fell in parts of Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas on Monday, while snow mixed with freezing rain was reported in Minnesota and Iowa.

To the south, a cold front associated with the spring storm brought scattered showers and thundershowers from Texas to Missouri and the lower Mississippi Valley. Hail the size of golf balls fell in Jonesboro, Ark.

Advisories for snow and wind were posted in northwestern Kansas, western Nebraska, eastern South Dakota, upper Michigan, Minnesota and northwestern Iowa.

Another frontal system over the Pacific Northwest brought rain and snow in the higher mountains.

Although the pits are now mostly inactive, President Warren Brandt probably remembers his first visit to a coal mine in Harrisburg about two years ago.

Coal miners ignore back-to-work order; contract talks continue

By The Associated Press

All but a few of the nation's 160,000 striking coal miners ignored a federal back-to-work order Monday, and the handful who returned to the mines had virtually no effect on coal production.

In Pennsylvania, hundreds of club-carrying pickets took to a road in a 150-car caravan to shut down non-union mines. But most other areas were quiet, with union mines remaining idle even in the absence of pickets.

It was the first real test of whether the United Mine Workers rank and file will obey a Taft-Hartley court order obtained last Thursday by President Carter.

But with the order still not in full effect in some areas, a Justice Department spokesman in Washington said there would be no hasty action to force compliance. Spokesman Mart Sheehan said the administration expects miners to gradually return to work this week.

Meanwhile, bargainers for the union and coal companies took a pause in negotiations in Washington. They reported some progress over the weekend, but said they were not on the verge of a settlement. Each side used the day to work on its own positions on specific issues.

Since the strike began Dec. 6, rebellious union officers and rank and file members had already scuttled two tentative settlements on grounds that they eroded union medical benefits, did not equalize pension benefits among old and younger retired miners, and allowed companies to discipline those who lead wildcat strikes.

The strike, which was in its 98th day Monday, has cut national coal production in half, forced power companies in much of the Midwest and mid-Atlantic regions to ask for or order power conservation, and thus led to tens of thousands of layoffs.

Last Thursday, a federal judge granted the Carter administration a temporary back-to-work order under the Taft-Hartley Law, and by Monday the Justice Department said the necessary papers had been served on virtually all UMW locals in the country.

Over the weekend, and on Monday, local union leaders were performing their legal duty to pass the word on to members, and to have mines inspected by union safety committees—a step needed for reopening.

But while union leaders and locals can be penalized for failure to comply, there is no mechanism for forcing individual miners back to work. And at most mines that reopened Monday, no miners showed up.

Even when miners did report, there were usually too few to form maintenance or mining crews, and the companies sent them home.

One of the few mines where work was done was in Keystone, W. Va., where 30 members of a 150-man shift showed up at 8 a.m. First reports said there were not enough men to mine coal, but there were enough for maintenance work. The local involved was one of the few which had voted to accept the most recent contract settlement.

A 30-member maintenance crew also showed up for work at a Pittsburg & Midway Coal Co. mine in Amsterdam, Mo., which has been damaged by harsh weather, according to coal company spokesman Jim Garnett. Mining was not expected there for several days.

Picketing is specifically forbidden by the back-to-work order, and only a scattered few pickets were reported outside union mines.

In western Pennsylvania, however, roving pickets appeared in force. Carrying sticks, baseball bats and pipes, some 400 men in a caravan of 150 cars roved through the countryside, heckling and shutting down non-union mines that had been operating, state police said.

"If any mines are open they shut them down, then they move on," said state police Major Homer Redd. "We've had some rocks thrown, but most of it's heckling. So far there hasn't been too much damage compared to other strikes we've been through."

A spokesman for Consolidation Coal Co. said about 30 pickets had shown up at one union mine in Pennsylvania at midnight Sunday, but "there wasn't any problem. They just wanted to make sure no one went to work."

While some union locals elsewhere completed their safety inspections in short order, some safety committees from District 23 in western Kentucky were giving that area's strip mines a stringent—and time-consuming—going-over, according to Wayne Neal, chairman of a UMW grievance committee there.

"I don't expect any coal to be mined this week," Neal said, adding that the committees—which also must re-inspect and approve any repairs they order—might not finish their work for two or three days.

Meanwhile, a spokesman for the giant Peabody Coal Co., which employs 11,000 UMW miners in Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma or Arkansas, said none of its 42 mines was operating.

In West Virginia, where 65,000 UMW miners work, only small groups were reporting to mines.

Illinois mining key to future

Dependence on coal reflected in strike

This is the first of a two-part series on coal production and development.

By Ron Koehler
Staff Writer

As the United Mine Workers' coal strike enters its 99th day Tuesday, Americans are learning a lesson about the energy dilemma—the nation's dependence on coal.

Illinois will likely play a large role in future coal production, but new methods of burning high-sulfur coal must be developed to meet Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) standards.

A report of the fourth annual Illinois Energy Conference in 1976 states that Illinois holds the nation's largest reserves of bituminous coal, and more than 25 percent of the nation's total coal supply.

Despite Illinois' enormous coal reserves, an estimated 65.7 billion tons, the state is fourth in bituminous coal production.

While the nation's demand for coal has risen by about 10 percent since 1972, Illinois coal production has declined by 5 percent during the same period.

The reduced production of Illinois coal stems from its high sulfur content. When burned, the coal produces an amount of sulfur dioxide which exceeds Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulations.

Despite government regulations limiting the use of high sulfur coal, energy experts say technology must be developed to utilize Illinois' enormous coal reserves.

Isaell R. Dutcher, a researcher in the composition and utilization of coal for 25 years and chairman of the SIU Geology Department, says the United States cannot afford to allow the Illinois coal reserves to lie dormant.

Dutcher said research in coal gasification, a process which produces a synthetic gas from coal which can be used as natural gas, and coal scrubbing methods will be further developed to allow greater use of Illinois coal by the mid-1980s.

A bill now before Congress would require all major new coal-burning facilities to rely on "the best technological system of continuous emission reduction" and "not merely reliance on the use of untreated fuels."

This continuous emission reduction system would be the use of coal scrubbers—devices which remove the sulfur dioxide from the smoke after coal combustion.

These scrubbing devices, which are installed on the smokestacks of a coal burning facility, would allow the use of high-sulfur Illinois coal. An experimental scrubber was tested at SIU's Physical Plant for six months in 1975.

"There are only four fuels that can be used to meet the nation's demand for electricity," Dutcher said. "Those four fuels are natural gas, petroleum, coal and nuclear energy."

Dutcher said the logical choice of the four fuels for producing electricity is coal.

"Petroleum and natural gas are the fuels in shortest supply and they are also the fuels being used at the highest rate," Dutcher said.

He also noted the importance of nuclear energy, but said that as long as President Carter continued the moratorium on the development of the nuclear breeder reactor, coal is the only source of fuel which can meet the nation's demands.

Speaking at a coal conference at SIU, Bagge said an NCA study predicts that 190 new mines will open by 1985, with an expected annual production of 424 million tons of coal.

Carl Bagge, president of the National Coal Association, says that the coal industry can meet the demands for increased production.

Bagge said the increased production demands could only be reached, however, with the cooperation of the government. "The government must now look at each of its proposed new requirements...to determine whether the constraints on new laws and pending regulations in air quality, surface mining, health and safety will prevent the president's goals from being reached."

SIU, located in the heart of the Illinois coalfields, is planning to play a major role in the future of coal development. SIU was the first school in the nation to apply for one of 10 generally funded coal research centers.

The Coal Extraction and Utilization Research Center would be one of 10 regional university coal laboratories which were approved by Carter under the 1977 Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act.

The center would serve as a liaison between the university research community and the coal industry. Still in the planning stages, the center awaits congressional approval of $30 million in funds for all 10 centers before the SIU project can get off the ground.

Student aid plan won't solve rising costs of college

When President Carter announced his proposal to expand aid to America's college students, most college-age people probably thought "here's a president who wants to help me meet the costs of higher education by supplying a little more cash."

But will spending $1.2 billion on federal grants, loan programs and work-study projects really mean that much to college hopefuls who've been faced with a 77 percent increase in costs since 1967? And furthermore will it really do that much for the 2.1 million additional college students who are expected to benefit?

The meat of the Carter plan would make students from families in the $16,000-$25,000 middle income range eligible for a maximum of $250 per year under the Basic Education Opportunity Grant (BEOG) program and boost maximum BEOG awards to $1,680—up $200 from the current level.

This proposal alone would double the number of eligible BEOG recipients at SIU from the current 3,700 to nearly 8,000. But $250 only skims the surface on college costs here—it's less than 10 percent of an in-state student's yearly bills. And it's even less than 10 percent of college costs based on a national average for public universities and colleges.

Gordon White, head of the Student Work and Financial Assistance office, says that a four-year figure, or $1,000 per newly qualified BEOG recipient, provides a better financial aid picture. But the figure is still under 10 percent. And if college costs continue to rise, that picture could get even worse.

Another part of Carter's plan would make government insured loans available to students from families with incomes up to $40,000, again making more students eligible for aid. But the government is already having difficulties collecting on past student loans. Adding more students to the loan lists won't make that problem go away.

The proposal's only salvation might be the plan to boost the current work-study budget by $150 million. Not only would that allow more students to earn income at campus jobs, but colleges would benefit from an additional work force at minimum wages.

Critics of Carter's plan call it a last ditch effort to counter another proposal which would cost the government $4 billion in tax revenues by providing a tax credit to families with college-age children. In short, opponents say Carter is willing to spend $1.2 billion to save the government $2.8 billion. It's apparent there are no bargains in either college costs or incomestaxes these days. But getting a loan or an additional $200-$250 grant for college is like treating the symptoms and not the illness.

Carter's proposal might help students in their efforts to secure a college education, but it won't cure the long term problems of burgeoning college costs.

What's needed is some plan that will keep college costs under control—and affordable—now and in years to come.

Let's hear somebody with a proposal for that.

New ritual of young: A church wedding with all the trimmings

By Arthur Hoppe

Kids, kids, kids! Nothing but problems. My youngest daughter, Griselda, dropped by the other evening to pick up our surplus canned goods and announce she and Stanley were "into a whole new life style."

I shuddered. In the six years they've been living together, they've gotten into a dozen whole new life styles, each more obscure than the last.

"Well, as long as it doesn't involve animals," I said tolerantly. (Our oldest daughter, Daverne, has spent the past decade in a Maine commune studying the effects on hogs of their astrological signs and I frankly feel she's been wasting herself.)

"No, Stanley and I plan to seek a more meaningful relationship through taking part in an age-old ritual. All our friends are going it."

"Hare krishna?"

"No," said Griselda. "Marriage."

Marriage! The word rang a distant bell in the dusty attic of my mind. Emeline, that was it! Long ago, our daughter, Emeline, had once become married for several months. "Oh, no!" I said. "I'm not getting up before dawn to trudge to the top of some soggy hillside to drink white wine, eat feta cheese and listen to you and Stanley recite Kahlil Gibran."

"You don't understand. We want a real old-fashioned wedding. You know, in a church."

"Why in a church? You haven't been inside a church in years."

"It's the in thing to do. An afternoon's wedding's best. I'll wear a long white satin gown."

"In the afternoon? My daughter, the hippie."

"...and Stanley will wear a pale blue tuxedo, but he wants his ushers to wear light beige tuxedos, with yellow ruffled shirts."

"Ushers? Well, if you dress up like that in the middle of the day, I guess you could sell tickets."

"My 19 bridesmaids will all be wearing pale pink gowns and picture hats. And the church will be filled with tons and tons and tons of beautiful, beautiful flowers. A soprano will be singing, "O, Promise Me," and we'll hire a photographer to take pictures..."

"I've got it! It's a publicity stunt!"

"And afterwards we'll have this intimate little supper for our 200 closest friends with cases and cases of champagne and dancing to a 12-piece orchestra and..."

"It sounds like a wonderful party, Griselda. I'm glad you and Stanley have struck it rich. And I only hope you'll invite me."

"Invite you? Gosh, Dad, you're the host."

I asked her how come I got to pay for her and Stanley's party. She said it was because I was her father. That makes sense. Whenever they get "into a whole new life style," it usually costs me a bundle. But this one's a dilly.

These kids! What'll they think of next?

When in Washington, do like the Romans do

By James J. Kilpatrick

TAORMINA, Sicily—J. Tolliver Spelvin, one of the lesser pillars of Rappahannock County, Va., turned up recently in Sicily. He has been touring Europe, and he has come to certain political conclusions. He has concluded, for example, that the Italians will survive and the French won't.

Jaytee, as he is universally known, delivered himself of this opinion one day last week. I found my friend sitting in the sunshine of a sidewalk cafe, watching the girls go by. He had then been a week in France and a week in Italy, which qualified him as an expert, and he was aching to unload his observations. I ordered a cup of coffee.

"The wonderful thing about the Italians," said Jaytee, "is that they don't take themselves too darned seriously. They haven't had a government for two months, and everything is ticking right along. They're providing an example for the whole of the Western world, and I wish Congress and Mr. Carter would take it to heart. Do like the Italians do! Let Mr. Carter go up to Camp David. Send the Congress home, and we might be surprised at how well the country would make out."

"The French, on the other hand, have got themselves tied into knots over the Socialists and the Communists. They're determined to have a government, probably a worse government than they have now, and they'll deserve it. The French Communists are Communists first and Frenchmen second, while here in Italy it's the other way around. Vive La France," said Jaytee, "in a pig's eye."

I asked him why he was so down on the French, and he said it was mainly the way they treated strangers. That, and their language. It appeared that he had lost his way in Paris.

"So I poked my head in this little bistro, and I says to the bartender, 'ooh eh la Eyeful Tower?' He looked at me like I was crazy. A few other guys in the bar started snickering, but it wasn't all that funny. The only way you can talk to the French is through your nose, preferably looking down it. They got an i-n, and an e-n, and an o-n, and one of them sounds like the horn on a Model T, one of them sounds like you stepped on the cat, and the third one is closer to a whinny, and if you don't get 'em straight, the Lord help you because the French won't."

"The Italians are just the opposite. We were driving down to Catania the other day and the missus wanted a Coca-Cola. We stopped at a place. I looked up the verb in my pocket Berlitz, and asked the feller for a Coke 'andare.' That's to go. He didn't quite get it, so I looked up the words for paper cup and said I wanted the Coke in oona tazzia di carta."

"Well, we were working on the problem together. Three or four other fellers come up to the bar, and they all wanted help. You never saw such wailing of hands. Finally one of them hollers 'bicchiere!' That means drinking glass. And then another hollers

'plastico!' The bartender caught on. He whips out a can of Coke and a styrofoam cup, we all shake hands, smiling like crazy, and that's the way it's been all over Italy."

Jaytee had formed an opinion of Sicilian women not altogether flattering. Many of them, he said, had legs that would hold up a steinway and thighs the size of a steamboat round, but he attributed this largely to the mountainous terrain. Most of the country, he said, is 52 degrees off level, and the roads are made of hairpin curves. The women walk up the hills and the men practice grand prix racing on the highways.

Thinking of motoring, Jaytee said he had been interested to learn that Sicily has a law limiting the number of coats of paint on a car to one only. That is because two coats would cause a thousand accidents a month. Sicilian drivers live by a daily challenge, to make three lanes out of two, but they seldom run their toy cars into one another. They just bonk and wave their arms.

The Italians are poorer than the French, but they have more fun. Anyway, this was the way J. Tolliver Spelvin saw it, and while my friend may be innocent, he isn't dumb. "That government is best," he remarked, quoting Jefferson, "which governs least." There's a lot to be said for a country that can go for two months without a government at all.

It's American to ask more than you'll get

We are not upset solely because Mark Jarasek's editorial on student government fee allocations misquoted our sales figures without ever contacting anyone at WIDB for the correct information. We are upset because of the focus of Jarasek's article on the whole. Aside from being a sarcastic, trite attempt at editorializing, it seems that Jarasek is trying to create a scandal where none exists. Student Government has a set amount of money to allocate—they are not allocating more than they have. Any recognized student organization is eligible to vie for these funds and hope to be awarded fairly. Every student organization goes before the fee allocations committee with a budget, and probably every group expects this budget to be cut. And most budgets are, since there is only X amount of dollars to allocate.

What's wrong with asking for more money than you expect to receive? The Pentagon asks for 50 percent more money every year than it hopes to get. SIU asks for money every year that they will never see. Every bureaucracy in this country, on the federal, state and local levels, bargains for more money than it expects to receive. This country is based on Adam Smith and the laws of competition and bargaining. So where is the scandal? Jarasek tries to make it look as if this process is completely novel in regard to student organizations.

Jarasek also states in his pseudo-expose that student organizations serve only 9,857 students at SIU. Has Jarasek counted every student who attended films and lectures at the Student Center? Is he counting everyone who takes part in Free School or attends an activities fair? Is Jarasek counting students who sit in their rooms and listen to WIDB or attend concerts at Shryock?

The figure 9,857 is the number of students who are directly involved in student organizations. It is not, however, a figure representative of those who actually benefit from the many services offered by student groups. With 99 organizations on campus, interested students can experience anything from creative anarchism to environmental protection. Learning to function and be a constructive part of any organization is the key to success in this society. If almost half of the students on this campus are directly involved in student organizations, that is a figure to be commended and not condemned. This figure is indicative of the fact that spathy isn't running rampant everywhere on this campus.

One final note for Mr. Jarasek. Before you continue to blast student organizations, student fees, student fee increases and where the money goes, talk to your business manager. Isn't it safe to assume that something in the neighborhood of 25 percent of the money allocated to student organizations comes to the Daily Egyptian in the form of advertising revenue? Take a look through your paper some day and you tell us.

Gary Morrison
General Manager, WIDB

Lisa Crocker
Promotion Director

Editor's note: In the editorial referred to, WIDB's income for 1977-78 was incorrectly listed as $27,000. That figure represents projected income for 1978-79, according to WIDB's initial funding request. The space immediately above this figure should have contained income for 1977-78; WIDB did not fill in that amount. The reporter picked up the wrong figure from the space below. WIDB later filed an amended funding request which indicated its projected income for 1978-79 was $32,304.57, minus $3,280 in sales commissions, for a total projected income for 1978-79 of $29,520.

'Making an honest buck' hides exploitation

In regards to the D.E. (March 8): I was amused at the letter of Michael Iaconini and Michael Simo. There's was a beautiful representation of the American elitist attitude. This attitude is directed toward the people in Third and Fourth World countries, even those who are fighting for independence from a fascist dictator. They are of no concern to us. Making money is our concern.

Take Iran for example. All that most Americans know is that Iran is in the Mid-East, produces oil and there is some turmoil there between the government and the people. Some may also know oil and weapons are traded rather freely between Iran and the U.S. What Americans don't seem to know or care about are the details. Consider this: The Shah has many political prisoners experiencing torture or a convenient death. I suppose that the deaths are a relief both to the Shah and the tortured prisoners.

Now if one has any faith in mankind, one can hope that others see serious wrong-doings going on somewhere else than their own backyards. To ignore it does not make it go away any more than make it right. To actually condone it is an outrage. Obviously the both of you were upset at the anti-

American statements. The protesting Iranian students are initiating their rights of free speech. To deny them these rights would be nothing but an encroachment upon that undeniable right. In Iran, these students are already denied these rights. Is this not as equally immoral? But we condone that activity by supporting the Shah. That, Mr. Iaconini and Mr. Simo, and anyone else that thinks along the same lines, is much more anti-American than the students' protests for their rights and consequential expose of U.S. wrong-doings.

Incidentally, when has "making an honest buck" with capitalism ever come short of anything but exploitation?

Aviators need Lear jet for trip to Hangar 9

This letter is in response to the article by Mark Jarasek "Activity fee allocations: Magic tricks even Houdini couldn't pull off." Being the typical naive SIU student that I am, I couldn't help but be totally astounded by some of the financial figures that Mr. Jarasek presented. Being an elected officer of a small student government recognized organization, and figuring that our finances would be tight next year, I decided to go before the Fee Allocations Board and beg for a measly couple hundred dollars in hopes of getting a hundred or so.

Every year my organization travels out of state at least twice on educationally oriented field trips. Being a professional aviation fraternal group, our aims lean away from social and party activities and steer more toward the advancement of knowledge in the field of aviation. Along with trips, we also sponsor an annual Spring Banquet which draws many distinguished leaders and professional people from the field of aviation. SIU Aviation Technologies has benefited greatly as a result of goodwill donations and gifts from aviation industry executives.

These activities cost bucks! My organization works, and works hard, to scrape up enough money to participate in the above mentioned, as well as other non-related activities. We are proud to say that we earn our money! But pride can only go so far. If student government is willing to throw out handfulls of free money, we will just have to swallow our pride and jump on the bandwagon. We sure could use a million dollar Lear jet to fly us to Hangar 9 on weekends.

Coal strike prolonged by owners, not miners

Regarding the March 9 letter by Duncan Daily: Mr. Daily, I find your comments about the UMW not only narrow-minded but callous and insensitive. In your letter you asserted that coal miners had not "the moral right to endanger the welfare or happiness of those not directly involved in their concerns." Have we the moral right to order men into a Dante-like pit that is fit for neither man nor beast? Have we the moral right to demand that they sacrifice their health and risk their lives, so that our insatiable appetite for energy is satisfied?

Most states have animal anti-cruelty laws that are more stringent than the laws governing working conditions for underground miners. The coal operators have always exploited the miners in a terrible fashion, and still do. Instead of applauding the miners for their determination in resisting their employers, many people (that means you, Mr. Daily) berate them because their comforts are at stake. We, as energy consuming citizens, should feel morally obligated to see that the miners receive their fair lot.

The duration of the current coal strike is not due to unfair demands by the miners, but by the unwillingness of the coal operators to grant the miners equitable compensation for their labor. The question we should ask is not "Can the UMW strangle the United States?", but "How long can the coal operators strangle the miners?"

Jeffrey R. Behnke

Splitting moral issues from profits to fascism

I was delighted to read the March 8 letter from Mr. Iaconini and Mr. Simo, for this letter unequivocally demonstrates with its very frank language, the ease with which they (and more of the SIU population than we would like to believe) separate "trying to make an honest buck" from moral issues which they said were none of their concern. This reminds me of my elder brother's announcement of a few years back. He told me then that moral questions were in the philosopher's realm of specialization and not his own. He had just completed research which "perfectly" napalm. Previous to that time, burning napalm would not stick to its victim's skin and was accordingly less effective. A true miracle of modern day science!

Go ahead and make your "honest buck," you fascists.

'Subversive' lecture, amusing acting given by visiting Cornell professor

By Michael Usvich
Staff Writer

"The Art of Subversion: Writing in Antiquity" was the subject of a lecture last week by Frederick Ahl, a professor of Classics at Cornell University.

Ahl's lecture was part of a three-day visit sponsored by student government, the Humanities Council and the Classical Studies section of the Department of Foreign Language and Literature. Ahl's stay included a part in a play put on by "Classics at SIU" Friday night and a open critique of the theater department's production of "Medea."

The subject of Ahl's lecture was the ancient writers who practiced the dangerous craft of praising their rulers in language that often carried a double meaning to intelligent readers.

"Subversive" writing was defined by Ahl as "the disguised attack rather than the direct onslaught." Subversive writers practiced "literary brinkmanship" in times that were difficult for the honest writer.

"Ancient Rome trapped their dissidents in a way that hasn't been seen before or since in Western civilization," said Ahl. An emperor could command an artist to kill himself, and he would, because the only civilization outside of Rome, according to Ahl, lived runaways as court entertainers. The Britons and Celts used fugitives as sacrificial victims.

The first rule of subversive writing, said Ahl, is to keep your opponents and potential converts off-guard by relating to their concept of the world, even if you must attack your own principles and viewpoint. "The successful subversive will divide his audience into two groups—those intelligent enough to get the message and those who won't understand or are powerless to do anything about it."

As an example, Ahl told the story of a Polish poet who was commissioned to write a poem glorifying Moscow. In a subversive mood he wrote that the Russian city was livelier than Paris...a city of oranges. The only thing is I don't like oranges.

Paris at the time was recovering from being occupied in World War II and there were no oranges to be found in Moscow.

"He played the official truth against the real truth in a manner that exposed the 'Big Lie,'" said Ahl. "No one would take him to court for disliking oranges that don't exist. And there was little criticism could do, for exposing the poem would expose Moscow's faults."

In ancient Rome, writers were left with three choices—write nothing at all, sell out totally or, said Ahl, to "walk that delicate tightrope of subversion, knowing that a false step would result in death." So they developed the fine art of innuendo and allegory to mock the divine aspirations that caused one all-too-human emperor to exclaim, "Alas, I think I am a God."

The Roman poet Statius was commissioned to write a poem glorifying a statue of the Emperor Domitian astride a horse. Statius compared the statue to the infamous Trojan horse. A comment on the ruler's weight is veiled in "The earth can scarcely hold the statue." The ground parts beneath the pressure of weight so vast.

Ahl is well-known on his campus for his dramatic readings of classical plays, which are a form of popular entertainment at Cornell. His acting ability, and the comparable talents of SIU faculty and students, were exhibited in Friday night's performance of the Roman comedy "Mother-in-Law" in the informal setting of the Home Economics Lounge.

Ahl played the role of the lazy, foppish slave Palmer. Ahl wore a yellow ascot and affected a breezy manner and exaggerated accent that had the audience of approximately 200 people in stitches whenever he appeared. Series coordinator Frederick Williams, in the role of the blustery father-in-law Edgar, was a close second to Ahl in comedic appeal. He affected a

Southern plantation accent that may not have been native to ancient Rome, but was certainly effective in establishing his character and in keeping the audience amused when Ahl was not on stage. The modern translation by Williams used such words as

"bionic" and "what's her-slut" and great lines like that of the prostitute played by Sandy Moffitt.

The mother-in-law was played with an Edith Bunker charm by Eelin Harrison, an associate professor of theater.

Two Midwest acts who've made it big to appear at Arena

If "ya wanna get to heaven," you might try "raisin' a little hell" when the authors of that popular song, the Ozark Mountain Daredevils, appear at 8 p.m. April 6 at the Arena. Also on the bill will be Pure Prairie League.

Formed in Springfield, Mo. in 1972, the "Daredevils" struck paydirt with their first album, "Ozark Mountain Daredevils," which was recorded in England with legendary producer Gly Johns and released in 1973.

A hit single, "If Ya Wanna Get To Heaven (You've Got To Raise A Little Hell)," propelled them to instant singles popularity when they have sustained with subsequent hits like "Jackie Blue" and "You Know Like I Know." Four other albums, "It'll Shine When It Shines," "The Car Over The Lake Album," "Men From Earth" and "Don't Look Down," have been released.

Pure Prairie League is named after a woman's temperance organization in an old Errol Flynn movie called "Dodge City." Formed in the Ohio River Valley area of Kentucky, the original band recorded two albums and faded into near-obscurety.

Slow-but-steady sales of their second album, "Bustin' Out," eventually revived interest in the band and their record company, which had dropped them, hastily resigned them.

Since then, Pure Prairie League has recorded "Two Lane Highway," "If The Shoe Fits," "Dance" and a live album, all sporting Norman Rockwell cowboy covers.

The bands will appear in the Arena's Focus Four format which seats approximately 4,000 people. Tickets will go on sale after break.

Wolfman Jack

Wolfman rocks Merlin's Tuesday

Wolfman Jack, a radio personality whose maniacal beatnik rap and frenzied approach to rock-and-roll programming gained him national attention, will appear at Merlin's in two shows at 6:30 and 11 p.m. Tuesday night.

The early show is for high school students only, as part of the car's ongoing "Teen Night" series. The later show is a rock-and-roll revival where "oldsters" like college students are welcome.

"We couldn't forget those who've made Merlin's the unique gathering place it is," said promotion manager Joe Paschen. "So the Wolfman agreed to put on a rock n' roll show for the many former teenagers who want to see him do his thing."

Tickets for both shows will be available at the door only. The early show costs $2.50 and a high school I.D. must be presented. Doors open for the later show at 10:45 p.m. and tickets will cost $2.

Wolfman Jack is well-known as the co-host of "Midnight Special," for his role in George Lucas' film "American Graffiti" and his guest appearances on such television shows as "Sonny and Cher."

'Rah-rah' image stays with show

By Marcia Heroux
Staff Writer

Barely heard above the din of sororities and fraternities at Shryock Saturday night, the announcement of winners in annual Inter-Greek Variety Show "Performance '78" came after nearly 90 minutes of anxious waiting.

Receiving the gleaming trophies for their performances in the small-group category were: first place, Stuart Volkow and Milton Robinson; second place, David Hackett; and third place, Celeste Wright.

In the Intermediate-group, "Brown Sugar," a singing trio including Terri Sinitte, Rose Taylor, and Donna Doss won first place with a barbershop quartet featuring Bob Owen, Gerry Boehne, Bill Kohlenberger, and Steve Coon coming in second.

Claiming first place in the large-group category was "Sentimental Journey," a production by Alpha Gamma Rho and Delta Zeta. Second place went to Alpha Tau Omega's and Sigma Kappa's "Dance Mania," and Alpha Gamma Delta's and Tau Kappa Epsilon's "Alice in Grocery-line Time." Best Male lead in the large-group category was Ross Wheary for his smoothly flowing production, but Brooklyn's Boo's Traveling Medicine Show wasn't the answer to fill the gaps.

The improvisational group gave poor introductions and "improvisation" of even poorer taste. The group seemed to detract rather than add to "Performance '78."

The variety show which this year strove to include the entire campus, not just the sororities and fraternities, by re-naming in "Performance '78" was only partially successful.

More and more, as the evening went on, the variety show turned into a "rah-rah" panhellenic event.

Snowy days... we'll be here.

"Old Man River." Jody Brochway won the best female lead.

On and on the list of winners went; there were almost as many winners as competitors.

"Performance '78" began enjoyably with the smooth alto tones of Annie Meadows warming the audience with her "Jazz Man."

Some of the best performances came from the smaller groups including "A Star is Born" songs delivered by Celeste Wright; the "Barbershop Harmony," led by Bill Kohlenberger; and, best of all, "Brown Sugar."

The female trio "Brown Sugar," picked up the show after it was dragging from the libe of "Get Into Your Dance," by Phi Sigma Kappa and Company.

The large-groups do deserve much for coordinating these musicals: "Dance Mania," especially for choreography; "Alice in Grocery-line Time," for inventiveness and costume; and "Sentimental Journey," for vocals, sets, and overall organization.

Since "Performance '78" was a talent show, one shouldn't expect a

Bakalis launches media campaign in primary race

By Bob Springer
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Comptroller Michael J. Bakalis says he isn't counting on anything, but he'd be a liar if he didn't think he will badly beat his opponent for the March 21 Democratic primary for governor, W. Dakin Williams.

The two contenders, Bakalis—a two-time winner in statewide elections—and Williams—a two-time loser in Democratic primaries—are as alike as night and day.

Bakalis has launched an all-out campaigned with heavy media advertising directed at Republican Gov. James R. Thompson. Williams, a Collinsville lawyer, stays mostly at home and has spent less than $800 for radio advertising and bumper stickers.

During the first three days of March, state campaign finance records show that Bakalis' main fundraising arm funneled $125,000 to a newly-created committee called "A Lot of Citizens Who Want Mike Bakalis to be Governor." Bakalis says nearly all the money already has been spent, mostly on television advertising in Chicago.

Williams has spent a comparative pittance—$3,700 of his own or his 92-year-old mother's money—saying he depends on his own name recognition and that of his playwright brother, Tennessee Williams, for votes.

Bakalis, 39, has twice upset Republican opponents considered stronger than he. Williams, 58, has twice lost in primary races to Democratic opponents.

In 1970, Bakalis beat Ray Page by nearly a half-million votes

Carter declares war on mice

By Saul Peck
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP)—A tale of mice and men.

And frustration in the most powerful office of the most powerful land in the whole history of the entire universe.

In the 202nd year of the Republic, in which there had arisen, as if by miracle, a new leader who would at long last smite down the enemies of efficiency, the devil of delay...

All Jimmy Carter wanted to do was get the mice the hell out of the White House.

We begin. Though later events are documented with the stirring details of a military campaign, with body counts and intelligence reports of sightings and suspicious movements, the early phases of the matter of mice vs. the Carter administration remain unclear.

Thus, in the opening chapters, we cannot yet answer with precision the question of what did the president know and when did he know it.

But we do know that later he became personally and viscerally involved and finally, his back to the wall, had to invoke all the authority he could command.

His personal secretary, Susan Clough, who works in a room directly between the ceremonial Oval Office and the president's small study, recalls positively that only two weeks after his inaugural, she became aware of an ungenial odor.

Maintenance men were summoned and circumstantial evidence strongly suggested a dead mouse somewhere in the historic walls. Bits of potato chips were discovered behind a cabinet, holdovers from the Ford administration in an otherwise immaculate transition. Clough's office was sprayed.

The president's secretary was told that mice had been a White House problem at least as far back as the Eisenhower administration. Eyewitnesses had testified they actually saw mice climbing the drapes of the Oval Office.

Mice, Clough was told by experts, apparently were able to build up a generational immunity to White House pesticides and thus could cling to the building from one administration to the next, like non-presidential appointees protected by Civil Service.

In subsequent days and weeks, Clough, an attractive Southern blonde with doe eyes and no inclination to panic, began hearing mice skittering in the walls and ducts and vents. Then she began seeing mice skulking behind furniture and dashing boldly across the carpeting.

Maintenance men were called in repeatedly and while the president's secretary is satisfied they were doing their best, their best was nowhere near enough. In-

The Southern Illinois Sun Week Coordinating Group, consisting of University organizations, private industry and the community, will hold a public meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday for individuals and groups interested in co-sponsoring Sun Week in Southern Illinois, May 1-7.

Celebration of Sun Week will be nationwide, with Carbondale as the center of activity for Southern Illinois.

Richard Archer, instructor of design at SIU and main coordinator of Southern Illinois Sun Week activities, said speakers, exhibitors, fundraisers and volunteers are needed.

Speakers, film programs and exhibits will focus on the potential of solar energy and the transition to an energy supply based on renewable energy flow.

Sun Week activities already planned for Southern Illinois include a solar equipment display and information center May 3-5 at University Mall in Carbondale and solar technology lectures, demonstrations and workshops May 1-7 in the Student Center Ballrooms.

R. Buchminster Fuller, world fellow in residence at University City Science Center in Philadelphia and SIU professor emeritus, is scheduled to highlight Sun Day, May 3, with a talk on the transition to renewable energy systems.

Persons interested in participating in or requiring information about Sun Week in Southern Illinois may contact Archer at 453-5761.

Health policy board names acting head

By Vicky Lohrlich
Staff Writer

The Student Health Service Policy Review Board has appointed an acting chairman to preside over meetings and carry out duties set by the board.

Mike Malone, acting chairman, said the review board, composed of six undergraduate and three graduate students, will act on Health Service policy formulation, program review and development. "Our goal will be to have an open relationship with the Health Service and give the administration as much input as possible," said Malone, senior in business administration.

The review board, appointed by the student government, will be concerned with offering the best quality of health service to the students at the lowest possible cost.

The Health Service Policy Review Board will meet at 3:30 p.m. Thursday to elect a vice chairman. The vice chairman will preside over the meetings when the chairman is absent.

Malone said the board is a good representation of the undergraduate and graduate student body. The board will have a major input into the formulation of programs.

Initial projects for the board include reviewing the Health Service deficit. The board may break into subcommittees such as a complaint board or a budget financial committee.

Sam McVay, Health Service director, said he is optimistic about the board and its effectiveness.

"The board will have a good power base because it was appointed by the student government.

Past boards have not been representative of the student body," McVay said.

The nine board members will be serving a two-year term.

Speaker will focus on civil service benefits at meeting

Illinois Education Association (IEA) President Mel Smith will speak to civil service employees from 5:30 to 8 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center Ballrooms A and B. Smith, of Elgin, a former economics teacher, will discuss the importance of civil service employees to the 70,000-member IEA and will describe benefits through the IEA.

More than 600 SIU employees in 73 classifications became eligible for membership in the IEA-affiliated Civil Service Bargaining Organization (CSBO) in a February 2 election. A second election covering 250 additional employees in 65 classifications will be held in late April, according to Lee Hester, chairman of CSBO.

The group's contract committee is preparing for negotiations with the University this spring on employee relations, fringe benefits and salaries. More than 50 employees are working on six committees in forming the new association and 70 others serve as contact individuals in working with employees.

Sheriff: Killing yields no leads

By John Jenkins
Staff Writer

Detectives from the Jackson County Sheriff's Office are still working on the Lucille Fligor murder case, but there are still no leads or suspects in the slaying.

Don White, Jackson County sheriff, said Monday that his office has received tips but "they haven't led to anything."

Fligor was murdered in her home south of Carbondale on November 29.

White has said the motive in the case might have been burglary because 10 guns and a television were taken from the Fligor residence.

Serial numbers from the guns have been fed into a national crime computer so if the guns are confiscated in some other part of the country the sheriff's office here will be notified, White added.

So far no other police departments have reported confiscating guns that match the description of those taken from the Fligor home.

Since the killing the reward fund for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the killer has grown to more than $6,500. The fund was started by the Waymond Presley Foundation and any information will be kept confidential, Presley said.

Herbert Levinson, former School of Music faculty member, died last week in Albuquerque, N.M., where he had been teaching at the University of New Mexico. Levinson taught at SIU from 1964 to 1968. He was director of the University Orchestra, a member of the Faculty String Quartet, and also taught strings and general studies classes. He is survived by his wife, Rosemary, two sons, two daughters and one grandchild.

Steve Tietz, lecturer in English, will read his own fiction and poetry at the English Club meeting at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Morris Library Lounge. All are welcome.

A program on "Dissolution of Marriage" will be presented at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Women's Center, 408 W. Freeman. Mary Lou Rouhandeh, an attorney, will speak on Illinois' new dissolution of marriage act and compare it with the old divorce law.

The following companies are looking for students for internship programs: Automatic Electric, Northlake, is looking for a junior in computer science for its summer program; the General Services Administration, Chicago, is looking for a junior in electrical engineering for its Federal Summer Intern program, deadline for application is Wednesday; Tupperware Home Parties, Orlando, Fla., is looking for juniors and seniors in home economics or journalism for a food editor internship on a major newspaper; the Farmers Home Administration will be on campus Thursday interviewing sophomores and juniors in Agriculture, who are interested in cooperative education work experience this summer. Interested persons can call Minnie Minnito at the Career Planning and Placement Center, 453-2291.

Auditions will be held at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at the New Life Center, 913 S. Illinois Ave. for skits and a short one-act drama. Peoples Voices of the Arts Theater Company will produce the dramatic works in late April. Interested persons can call 549-7565.

"The Future of the Past: Lessons From Archaeology" will be discussed by George Gumerman, professor in Anthropology, at 8 p.m. Tuesday at the home of Frank Horton, Drury Church Road, 950 N off the Giant City Blacktop. The program is the second in the Evenings For Archway series. The series is designed to offer speakers and their audience a chance to engage in question-answer discussion on various topics. Donations of $1 will be collected to benefit Archway.

Student's trial delayed; attorney appointed judge

The trial of an SIU student charged with illegal delivery of a controlled substance was continued in Jackson County Circuit Court because the defense attorney was recently appointed to a vacant associate judgeship.

The student, Edessa C. Gaffney, is charged with two counts of illegal delivery of PCP. Gaffney, a sophomore, was scheduled for a bench trial before circuit Judge Richard Richman Friday.

The trial was postponed because defense attorney Brocton Lockwood was named Wednesday as an associate judge in the First Judicial District. Lockwood will officially be sworn in Tuesday at the Williamson County Courthouse. Gaffney was arrested in January 1977 in a drug raid by agents of the Metropolitan Enforcement Group (MEG) and Illinois Bureau of Investigation. Twelve other SIU students were also arrested in that raid.

Four burglaries committed in area

Four burglaries, in two different sections of Carbondale, were all committed in a similar manner, Carbondale police said Monday.

Lt. Terry Murphy said the burglaries occurred sometime Sunday and entry to all the homes was gained by breaking windows. The homes were also ransacked, he added.

Police don't know if any of the burglaries were connected, Murphy said, but jewelry and beer cans taken from the home of Dennis Adams, 1414 Dogwood Lane, were found at the home of John Holmes, 1104 Giant City Road.

The homes of Thomas Frenkel, 615 Skyline Drive, and Ruby Ghobson, 612 Glenview Drive, were also burglarized.

Traps, poison aid White house battle of mice and men creasingly, the seat of American power was being humiliated by mice in much the same unsettling manner those little men from North Vietnam kept reappearing in the south despite heavy casualties.

Clough was told that the probable cause was the construction work for the capital's new subway system, which was disrupting the lifestyles of the city's rodents.

Then, on a date uncertain, at a time when he wasn't there, Clough saw a mouse in the president's own small office, where it is his habit to repair for undisturbed study of the nation's manifold problems.

Now, she thought, the moment had come to divert his attention from the larger predators of his time to the fact that he might at any moment expect to see a mouse.

The commander in chief took the news calmly. He suggested mouse traps and went about his business.

Officials of the General Services Administration, which is charged with the maintenance of government buildings, told Clough that traps had been tried before but, when the word got out, humane societies complained the method was too cruel. Clough quietly suggested this time they don't let the word out. (Coverup?)

Traps appeared in the White House with no dramatic demographic effect on the illegal tenants. Then, the president himself spotted his first mouse, in his study. He asked his secretary how the campaign was progressing. She said she was in almost constant communication with the GSA.

F-Senate to study athletics fee split

The Faculty Senate is scheduled to examine the distribution of athletics fees at its meeting at 1:30 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center Mississippi Room.

The total amount of money received from the athletics fee is about $887,063. The men's athletics program receives about $620,287 from the fee, while the women's program receives $228,788.

In other business, the Faculty Senate's budget committee will ask the Faculty Senate to approve a formula for figuring teacher's salaries.

Developed by Robert Layer, professor in economics, the formula says:

—If the inflation percentage is greater than the salary increase money percentage, most of the pay raise money would go across the board.

—If the inflation percentage is less than salary increase money, most of the pay raise money would go toward merit raises.

—If inflation and salary increase money percentages are equal, pay raise money would be divided evenly between cost of living and merit raises.

Text theft season approaching

By Melodie Redfeare
Student Writer

With the semester's end and the peak season for textbook theft in sight, students would be wise to mark their books, according to Mona Glenn, assistant manager at the University Bookstore.

"Marking your books doesn't necessarily prevent theft," Glenn said, "but often serves as a deterrent to the thieves and greatly assists us when they attempt to sell stolen textbooks."

Glenn says she has noticed that there seems to be an increase of theft at the end of a semester, especially in the spring, because of a higher cash value paid for used textbooks at that time.

Local bookstores are concerned about the problem and work closely together in attempting to stop the thefts. When a book is reported stolen, the stores assist one another by calling to notify the buy-back clerks of the theft.

Glenn warns that if your books are stolen, notify all of the bookstores immediately.

"Most stolen books are sold back the same day they are taken," Glenn said. Most students will wait a day or so to report the theft, and by that time it is usually too late.

To mark your books, write your name and identification number near the spine of the book on three or four pages with numbers that are easily remembered, such as a birth date or anniversary, Glenn suggested.

"In using this system, it would be difficult for a thief to prove the book his," Glenn said. "Most people just write their name on the front page, which can easily be removed and never noticed by the buy-back clerks."

The University Bookstore has had some success in its efforts to curb textbook theft.

"We used to have quite a problem with people taking unguarded backpacks that weren't theirs, but ever since we installed our new system of checking backpacks in and watching them while students are in the store, we haven't had one case of reported theft from our store," said Naomi Pathel, manager of the University Bookstore.

Capt. Bob Presley of the University police said that if an offender is caught selling a stolen book and a complaint is filed, immediate action is taken to process the complaint and file charges against the thief. Possession of stolen property under $150 is considered a misdemeanor with imprisonment up to one year and a fine set by a judge. Theft over $150 is considered a felony.

Three accused of welfare fraud

CHICAGO (AP) — A Baptist minister, his wife and his sister were accused Monday of illegally receiving $42,900 in an alleged phony welfare scheme.

The Rev. Roland Gray, 38, his wife Edna, 35, and the minister's sister, Queen French, 41, were named in 106 counts of an indictment returned by a Cook County grand jury.

When the three were cut from public aid rolls in January 1976, they gave false statements to the Public Aid Department in order to get back on the list, the indictment said. The payments were made between December 1972 and January 1976.

In addition to conspiracy and theft, they are charged with perjury.

Women cagers stopped in bid for regional title

By Bud Vandermaech
Sports Editor

Coach Cindy Scott had devised a scenario before the women's basketball team began play last weekend in the AIAW Midwest Regional at East Lansing, Mich. She was confident the Salukis would be playing in the championship game Saturday if they defeated the host Michigan State Spartans Thursday night.

The story was progressing well when the women edged the second-seeded Spartans 63-52 in the quarterfinals of the eight-team tournament. Scott's plot, however, did not allow for the unexpected, and a mishap late in Thursday's game turned a possible fairy tale into a nightmare.

Sue Faber, a smooth, 6-0 freshman forward, injured her right knee with 1:55 left and SIU leading 62-58. The Salukis managed to hold on to beat the Spartans, but they lost the services of Faber for the remainder of the tournament.

The Salukis could not overcome Faber's absence in the semifinals as they dropped out of title contention in a 48-43 loss to Indiana State, a team the Salukis had defeated 70-61 earlier in the season. The nightmare ending was completed Saturday night when Kelly Camp of Wisconsin swished a 25-foot jumper with two seconds left to give the Badgers a 66-64 win in the third-place game.

Top-seeded Ohio State defeated Indiana State 71-58 to win the tournament and advance to the first round of the AIAW finals at Denton, Tex. this weekend. Sixteen teams will take part in first-round play this week and the four finalists will advance to Los Angeles for the semifinals and finals March 23-25.

Faber was taken to Springfield Monday for an examination of the torn cartilage in her knee, and Scott said she may be operated on later this week.

Faber's misfortune was remarkably similar to what happened to the men's team when Gary Wilson sprained his ankle prior to the Valley title game with Creighton. Just as Coach Paul Lambert refused to say Wilson's injury was directly responsible for the Salukis' loss to Creighton, Scott said her team had chances to reach the title game with Faber on the sidelines. Still, she had to wonder "what if."

"If we would have had Sue in the lineup, it would have been a toss-up between us and Ohio State," Scott said. "But we still should have beaten Indiana State, even without her. We probably played our poorest game of the year against Indiana State."

Scott's thoughts were substantiated by the final statistics, which credited the Salukis with 34 turnovers. SIU's poor ballhandling gave Indiana State the opportunity to win, even though the Sycamores shot only 28 percent from the field.

"I knew Sue's absence would affect us on offense," Scott said, "but it primarily affected us on breaking the press. Indiana State pressed us the whole game and most of our turnovers came on the press. Sue usually does a good job of helping break the press."

The Salukis, who finished the season with a 14-10 record, had a 12-point lead with 12 minutes left in Saturday's game, but an eight-minute span in which SIU scored only four points opened the gates for Wisconsin and set the stage for Camp's heroics at the buzzer.

Bonnie Foley provided the bulk of the Salukis' offense in the tournament, as she scored 53 points and collected 34 rebounds in the three games. Jeri Hoffman supported Foley with 44 points and 27 rebounds. The attack stopped after that, however, as Faber was the only other player to reach double figures in any of the three games. Faber scored 16 points Thursday night before injuring her knee.

Two trackers place at NCAA meet

The native of Kampala, Uganda was leading his prelim at the quarter-mile mark, but two runners passed him with two laps to go and a third also edged by, Hartzog said. "He made the mistake of not keeping right on their heels—he let them get too far ahead of him and tried to pour it on for the final 20 yards, but he couldn't catch up," Hartzog said.

Bessie pulled up with a third-place time of 1:52.0—just .03 of a second behind the second place finisher. The winning time in the heat was a 1:51.5.

"I am disappointed in Mike because he was in good enough shape—he was ready to run," Kee had a bad start in the 60-yard dash, but Hartzog said that the 57, 135-pounder from Dorchester, Mass., is a poor starter anyway. "Mike didn't surprise me—he did not run a good race because of the bad start, but the field he was up against was super.

"If we would have had a good week of weather so we could have gotten some work in, we would have scored 20 points," Hartzog said. "But I feel positive about this team considering the conditions we operate under."

Hartzog was voted the District 5 coach of the year following the meet.

Collinsville to meet Olney in 'super'

Now that the Class A state basketball tournament has ended and Nashville has claimed the state championship for Southern Illinois, it is up to either Olney or Collinsville to go the same for area fans in Class AA competition.

The Kahoks from Collinsville and the Olney Tigers will square off against each other at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Arena in a game that will determine Southern Illinois' representative to the quarterfinals in Champaign Friday.

Collinsville comes into the game with a record of 25-2. The Kahoks defeated Belleville 70-54, in the Alton sectional to advance to the super-sectional.

Olney reached the super-sectional by virtue of a 72-60 victory over Centralia in the West Frankfort sectional. The Tigers sport a 24-7 record entering the contest.

Missouri defeats netters 6-3

By Steve Coonan Staff Writer

The men's tennis No. 1 doubles team came up with its strongest match of the year Saturday night, but it still wasn't enough as the upset-minded Saluks were defeated by Missouri 6-3.

"It's a big step in the right direction," said Coach Dick LeFevre after watching Jeff Lubner and Neville Kennerley team up to defeat the Tigers' No. 1 doubles team, which was ranked first among Region 5 doubles teams last season. "They're playing better now and with more confidence."

Lubner and Kennerley broke their opponents' serve in the fourth game of the first set to break open a tight match and went on for a 6-3, 6-3 victory. The top two Saluks came up with some outstanding passing shots and often caught their Missouri opponents playing too close to the net.

Marks, Johnson stand out in NCAA indoor track meet

By George Ctolah
Staff Writer

For those people who heard bits and pieces about the two-day NCAA track meet last weekend at Detroit, things weren't as bad as they sounded.

Coach Lew Hartzog agreed.

"In some respects, it might sound disappointing," he said of the team's tie for 34th place, "but I'm not disappointed at all."

"I feel we did a fantastic job considering the amount of preparation we had for a meet of this caliber," he said.

Texas-El Paso won the meet and Auburn and Villanova took second and third, respectively.

Mother Nature once again put a damper on things for Hartzog's men as snow, ice and rain made conditions impossible for the runners. The team couldn't practice outside all week.

And ironically, the only two Salukis who placed at the meet and scored any points—John Marks in the shot put and Tim Johnson in the pole vault—were able to work inside during the week while winter was getting in its late blast. Both Marks and Johnson earned All-America honors by placing in the top five.

Marks took seventh in the preliminary to qualify for competition in the finals, where he took fifth. He had a put of 60-11³/₄.

Johnson was one of seven who vaulted 16-4 to qualify for finals. He had one handicap, however:

"Tim had a recurrence of the flu Thursday night when we were on our way to Detroit," Hartzog said. "He was running a temperature and he also had an upset stomach when he jumped."

Johnson didn't let the flu bug keep him from vaulting, though. He repeated his jump of 16-4 to take fourth place in the finals.

Hartzog's response?

"I am amazed that he placed. He was sick during the whole meet. I'm very pleased."

Hartzog added that he didn't think Marks would do as well as he did under the pressure of the large crowd.

Another pleasant surprise came from Andy Roberts in the 60-yard high hurdles. The 6-0, 155-pound senior from Springfield pulled up with a 7.37 second time to just miss qualifying for the final heat competition.

Before the meet, Hartzog said that he wouldn't be surprised if Roberts did well, despite the fact that he wasn't seeded among the top-ranked hurdlers. "I'll be very surprised if he doesn't break the school high hurdle record. He just did a super job and he did surprise me."

Stan Podolski made his first trip to the NCAA meet and took 10th place in the 35-pound weight throw with a toss of 59-4. Hartzog explained that Podolski was "as tight as a drum" during the meet and he didn't throw well.

Rick Rock, Mike Bisase and Mike Kee didn't fare as well at Cobo Arena, though.

Rock, who sat out the Illinois State Relay meet two weeks ago to train for the NCAA meet, didn't score in long jump final heat competition. Rock scratched on four of his six jumps and two of those scratches would have been winning jumps, according to Hartzog.

"This was Rick's first time on boards and he pulled off two jumps that would have been sure winners," Hartzog said.

Rock's jump of 24-4 in the prelims put him in the finals, but his only other jump that counted was also a 24-4 good for seventh place which he pulled off in the finals. He came within one inch of placing in the long jump.

Bisase had tough luck in the 800-yard run, too. Three preliminary heats were run and the best two from each heat competed in a six-man final heat.

Women gymnasts qualify for nationals

By Steve Cooran
Staff Writer

In one of the most low-scoring, controversial Region 5 Championship meets ever, the SIU women's gymnastics team emerged victorious thereby qualifying for the National AAUW Championship meet scheduled to start March 20 in Seattle.

The Salukis won the five-state, 16 team meet with a team total of 138.95 to barely edge Michigan State which finished with 138.15 points in the two-day competition. Kent State placed third with 137.95 points and Indiana State finished fourth with a score of 136.70.

According to SIU Coach Herb Vogel, the judges became the foremost opponents of most of the teams at the meet.

"The meet referee and her 16-member judging staff were charged by the Region 5 Coaches Association with ultraconservative scoring and were threatened with a walkout midway through the competition," he said.

The threat, motivated by the coaches of Michigan State, Kent State and Indiana State, found unified support by the majority of the coaches present at the competition.

Following the threat of the "strike", the coaching body pressed the meet referee to raise every score of the meet by three-tenths of a point, or in other words, each team score would get 4.8 points added on.

While Vogel did agree that the judging was questionable, he didn't see that as the only problem for the Salukis.

"Sure," said Vogel, "SIU usually earns a dozen or more scores of 9.0 or above in a single dual match (compared to just two in the Region 5 meet) but today we simply did not perform at that level."

"We did lose about three points to conservative judging, but we gave away nearly six points by our own personal mistakes."

SIU, which has never been beaten in state or regional competition, had numerous sparkling performances during its defense of the regional title.

Cindy Moran won her second consecutive uneven bars title with a 9.3 routine and finished seventh in the all-around competition with a 34.35 total.

SIU's other All-America gymnast, Linda Nelson, won the balance beam event and finished fourth in the all-around standings with 34.65 points.

Other excellent efforts noted by Vogel included Chris Wuensch's sixth-place all-around finish, Linda Piet's 8.8 vaulting score, Maureen Hennessey's routines in vaulting, uneven bars and balance beam, and Pam Chonkin's "first respectable uneven bars performance of the season."

However, not quite everything was good news for SIU.

During the balance beam competition, Ellen Barrett was rushed to a Columbus hospital with a suspected appendicitis attack. Luckily for the Salukis, tests on Barrett were negative and she returned to the meet in time to place fifth (9.05) in the vaulting finals.

According to Vogel, both he and the team members realize that they have not yet been able to produce a complete, error-free, team performance and that all their victories have come with little more than a 50 percent individual-team performance level.

"Really, that was all that was expected of them," Vogel said. "Now with that real or imagined pressure off, we will direct ourselves to the last-minute details that might help us to make as few errors as possible, score as high as we can and place as high as we can."

"If we can manage a draw late in the competition, we might have a chance," he said. "In any event, this team will try. If you haven't noticed, I happen to think a great deal about this season's team."

SIU's Linda Nelson concentrates on staying on the balance beam during her first-place routine at the Midwest Regional. Nelson also finished fourth in the all-around event to lead SIU to the regional title. (Staff photo by Mike Gibbons)
