Board ups tuition over student protest

By Mike Anthony
and Rod Furlow
Staff Writers

Despite the protests of SIU-C student leaders, the Board of Trustees voted Thursday in Edwardsville to raise tuition by 15.2 percent for undergraduate and graduate students and by 36.5 percent for some professional students.

Chancellor Kenneth Shaw said the $3.9 million that the increases will generate is needed because the current operating budget of the SIU System will not allow the system to continue offering quality teaching, research and service programs.

But SIU-C student leaders contended that increased tuition combined with proposed federal cutbacks in student aid will limit access to the SIU System. They vowed to take the matter to the General Assembly.

For undergraduate and graduate students, the tuition hike will cost an extra $106.80 per year, raising tuition to an annual total of $310. The increase will go into effect this summer at SIU-C.

Tuition for law students was raised by $256.80 per year, to $960 annually. Medical students' tuition was increased to $3,381 per year, an increase of $338.50. Dental students will pay $315 more for tuition, raising it to $1,575 per year.

The only board member who voted against the increases was Stan Irvin, SIU-C student trustee, while SIU-E Student Trustee Patrick Calvin voted for the increases. SIU-E Student Body President John Mosser also supported the increases.

Shaw told the board, "I believe that you can, in good conscience, support our tuition recommendations today, knowing that they are necessary, and still believe in and support the concept of broad access to post-secondary education."

But Irvin told the board, "I can't do that. I agree we owe people an education. I agree with Dr. Shaw that the enrollment might not drop, but my concern is who will fill those seats?"

Shaw said that the tuition increases are not a political problem of trying to "persuade the right people — whether they be the presidents, the chancellor, this board, the Illinois Board of Higher Education, the General Assembly or the governor — that a tuition increase is not necessary."

"We are dealing with a situation that, at least in the short run, is a matter of cold, hard economic reality," Shaw said.

However, Debbie Brown, Graduate Student Council president, disagreed with Shaw, saying, "The matter of this tuition increase is a matter of persuasion. I understand your position and I'm disappointed by it. My constituents feel that the board, by approving these increases, is discarding SIU's great tradition of access.

"This issue will not be dropped by students after you adjourn today. SIU students believe that the people of

Former girlfriend questioned by police in Raveed murder

By Christopher Kade
and John Ambrosia
Staff Writers

Carbondale Police Thursday questioned former SIU-C student Deborah Robinson, an ex-girlfriend of slain professor Sion Raveed, in the investigation of his murder.

However, police spokesman Tom McNamara said that Robinson is not a suspect.

"We don't have any suspects yet," he said. "She's no different than anybody else at this point."

Police have also questioned Brad Kleindl, who, since June, has managed three properties owned by Raveed in Carbondale.

Kleindl found Raveed's body Tuesday in a basement apartment of the professor's home at 412 W. Oak St. after Raveed failed to show up for classes.

Kleindl, a graduate student in business administration, said that Raveed was "well-liked by his students and friends" and said he wasn't aware of any enemies that Raveed might have had. He also disputed allegations that Raveed was being harassed and threatened by disgruntled tenants.

It also was learned Thursday that Raveed's mother and sister will not be attending Friday's graveside service at the Beth Jacob section of Pleasant Grove Memorial Cemetery in Murphysboro, according to a spokesman for Crawshaw Mortuary, which is in charge of arrangements. Services will be held at 3 p.m.

Although an initial examination of the murder scene did not lead investigators to suspect foul play, an autopsy conducted Wednesday showed that Raveed died from multiple stab wounds. His wallet was not found at the scene, and police said the wallet's contents were unknown.

Because Raveed was involved in extensive business and travel interregionally, Carbondale Police have asked for the help of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Drug Enforcement Administration and the Treasury Department in investigating the murder. McNamara said police have not ruled out the possibility of a drug-related motive.

Speaking from her home in Salem late Thursday afternoon, Robinson declined to answer any questions concerning her relationship with Raveed or her discussions with police.

In an interview Wednesday night, Robinson said she had been Raveed's girlfriend and that she lived in an apartment, which Raveed rented last semester, at 1001 W. Walnut. Her address in the 1980-81 student directory also matches the address of Raveed's Oak Street residence.

Kleindl said that Raveed was trying to sell his Carbondale properties — at 412 W. Oak, 102 N. Springer and 608 W. Main — because he was planning to take a job at the University of Alberta in Canada next year.

Several tenants and acquaintances of Raveed said that he had been "hassled" numerous times by tenants. However, Kleindl said that he was in charge of dealing with the tenants and was unaware of

Johns' trial may be factor in primary

By John Ambrosia
Staff Writer

The only consensus on what effect the Gene Johns' trial will have upon elections for the 59th District State Senate seat is that none of the candidates know what impact it will have on the primary.

Johns, a Dem. who has served 12 years in the Senate, was acquitted in January on charges of illegal use of campaign funds.

Johns' opponents in Tuesday's primary are Glenn Poshard of Carterville and Ned Mitchell of Sesser. Both candidates say they were not convinced to run on the basis of the Johns trial. On the Republican primary ballot, Rep. C. L. McCormick, of Vienna, is running unopposed.

Poshard, the assistant director of the Southern Illinois Educational Service Center in Marion, said that Johns has not delivered the leadership "needed or desired" by constituents in the 59th District. He said that his contact with surrounding communities has given him insight into the needs of Southern Illinois.

"I am in touch with people and communities here," he said. "More than Gene Johns is."

Poshard thinks the economy is the area that demands the most attention from the Legislature, saying "We've got to have people working. We can get jobs going again through being creative and coming up with new ideas."

He advocates bringing more government jobs to Southern Illinois, claiming that he supports whatever is necessary to revive the economy. Poshard also opposes most tax hikes to cover increases in state services.

Mitchell is the mayor of Sesser and an auditor in the state comptroller's office. He said that Johns' main problem is his lack of political power and respect: ability.

"Gene is not well-respected among members of the party," he said. "I don't think he carries enough clout in Springfield to do what's best for Southern Illinois."

Mitchell cited the recent controversy over the closing of the A.L. Bowen Developmental Center in Harrisburg. He said any legislator with clout could prevented a closing such as the one scheduled to take place there.

Mitchell, while he does not criticize Gov. James R. Thompson's prison expansion program, gives the impression that he supports other ideas. He said that the emphasis in criminal justice should be put on rehabilitation rather than rampant expansion of the penal system.

Johns is the favorite going into the race as the incumbent. He said he doesn't know what effect his trial will have on his re-election bid, but that it may be big, one way or the other.

"It could have a dramatic effect," Johns said. "If people realize the politics involved and see my vindication, then it will go in my favor."

Sen. Williams, claiming his innocence to the end, resigns

WASHINGTON (AP) — Harrison A. Williams Jr. resigned Thursday after 23 years in the Senate, vowing that "history and the Almighty God will vindicate me" even as his colleagues were poised to cast him out in the first expulsion since the Civil War.

"It is with sorrow that I leave good friends," the New Jersey Democrat in a final address that once more asserted his innocence in the Abscam bribery conspiracy case for which a federal grand jury convicted him last year.

Williams, 62, was the only senator among seven members of Congress ensnared by the undercover investigation. He was also the last to leave office. Rep. Michael Myers, D-Pa., was ousted by the House; the others either resigned or were defeated for re-election.

Williams spoke for 23 minutes, saying quietly at the end: "I announce my intention to resign. I know I broke no laws...I believe time, history and the Almighty God will vindicate me."

"I leave in good spirits, in good heart and with strong resolve," Williams told the packed chamber, vowing to pursue his flight for exoneration through the federal appeals courts.

"I have fought a good fight," he said, quoting the Bible. "I have finished my course. I have kept my faith."

Every member of the Senate looked on, every gallery seat was filled, as Williams signed his letter of resignation, then had it carried to Vice President George Bush and read by the clerk of the Senate.

"I hereby tender my resignation as a member of the United States Senate," it said.

Williams called his ordeal a "two-year nightmare" and accused the FBI of "heinous conduct" in its investigation that resulted in his conviction and those of seven House members.

"It is not only Pete Williams that stands accused or indicted, it is all of us, the entire Senate," he told his hushed colleagues.

Williams made it clear he recognized the handwriting on the wall, that without his resignation the Senate would have passed the Ethics Committee's recommendation that he be banished for his "ethically repugnant" conduct.

"However, you may view my conduct, it did not warrant the severest degree of discipline," he said. Williams added that he retains "full confidence that my innocence will be proved and my integrity restored."

Williams' decision was tipped when Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, his chief defender in five days of Senate debate, turned to Williams and said: "My good friend, I bid you farewell and godspeed. To you and Jeanette, I wish you well."

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, R-Tenn., said, "Pete, we wish you well."

Williams only real show of emotion came after he concluded his speech and sat at his desk for the last time. He rubbed tears from his eyes as Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia commended him for "the right decision" and strode over to shake his hand.

Then, one Democrat after another walked to his desk to share the farewell.

Heroin, cocaine ruled cause of Belushi's death

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedy star John Belushi died of an overdose of cocaine and heroin, the Los Angeles coroner announced Wednesday.

Coroner Thomas Noguchi said that Belushi died "due to intravenous injections of heroin and cocaine," and said that both drugs were found on the premises where he died.

Noguchi's secretary said that the coroner would comment on the results Thursday but would have no immediate comment.

The written announcement said that the medical investigation into Belushi's death has been completed.

The brief statement said "The deceased died of an overdose due to intravenous injections of heroin and cocaine. Both the cocaine and heroin were found on the premises."

Businesses to trim capital spending

WASHINGTON (AP) — For the first time since the 1975 recession, American business leaders plan to trim spending for expansion and new equipment this year, after discounting for increases due only to inflation, the government reported Thursday.

The Commerce Department's chief economist, Robert Ortner, said later surveys could well show executives scaling back expansion plans even further in the next month or two — a hard blow to Reagan administration hopes for robust business investment.

Cody case funds said not divertable

CHICAGO (AP) — Archdiocese pension benefits for Helen Dolan Wilson, lifelong friend of Cardinal John P. Cody, could not be transferred, contrary to her lawyer's claims, according to a published report Thursday.

Mrs. Wilson is a key figure in a federal investigation of Cody's use of church money. The grand jury is investigating allegations that Cody diverted up to $1 million in tax-exempt church money to Mrs. Wilson.

The Chicago Sun-Times reported that Robert Norton, spokesman for the Aetna Life & Casualty Co. of Hartford, Conn., said no contract provisions permit transfer of pension service credits from one archdiocese to another.

Surinam is in throes of coup d'etat

PARAMARIBO, Surinam (AP) — Rebel troops firing submachine guns took over Paramaribo's main barracks and business district Thursday, but Surinam's left-leaning military leader said he was trying to put down the coup.

Witnesses said the rebels seized control of Paramaribo's streets and important downtown buildings, including the telegraph exchange, after firing into the air. Shooting at the barracks was reported intense in the pre-dawn hours, but casualties were not known.

The small, bauxite-rich nation on South America's northeast coast is a former Dutch colony.

GSC warns against hurting Iranian rights

By Doug Hettinger
Staff Writer

The Graduate Student Council Wednesday endorsed a letter from the Coalition of Progressive Social Scientists demanding that civil rights not be violated in the University's disciplining of Iranian students involved in violence on the campus.

The letter, addressed to Bruce Swinburne, vice president for student affairs, was written in response to the banning of several Iranian student groups from the campus.

Dated Feb. 24, the letter said a "total ban on the activities of all Iranian students... is a simplistic and irresponsible option" in dealing with the clashes between anti-Khomeini and pro-Khomeini Iranian groups.

Nancy G. Harris, director of student development, announced last week that the Student Senate had revoked the Moslem Student Society's status as a recognized organization because some of its members were involved in a Feb. 10 fight in the Student Center. Mrs. Harris said the suspension would last until the end of the summer semester.

Also, according to Will Travelstead, assistant dean of student life, three other Iranian groups which were not identified "are prohibited from using Student Center meeting rooms until further notice." Travelstead is handling individual charges resulting from the fight.

The social scientists' coalition, a campus group, stated three demands:

1. "Separation of the political content of the case from the issue of violation of students' civil rights...."
2. "Prompt and firm disciplinary action against those who have physically attacked others, and who have been found in violation of other students' rights to freedom of speech and assembly."

Board cuts 5 SIU-C majors, names auditor for SIU System

By Mike Anthony
and Rod Furlow
Staff Writers

The Board of Trustees voted Thursday in Edwardsville to eliminate five programs and to appoint an internal auditor for the SIU System.

The programs were eliminated because of a lack of student interest and declining enrollments.

Chancellor Kenneth Shaw said that program review procedures provide in-depth examination of programs every "five or six years."

The SIU-C programs being eliminated are the commercial graphics-production major in the School of Technical Careers, the economics bachelor of science degree in the College of Education, the bachelor of music education degree in the College of Education, the bachelor's degree in biophysics in the College of Science, and the master's theater degree in the College of Communications and Fine Arts.

Shaw said that the elimination of the graphics-production degree and of the economics degree were "solely a result of university-level program reviews."

The other three, he said, were mandated for elimination by university-level recommendations "with which the Illinois Board of Higher Education concurred."

Shaw said that the university-level program reviews are submitted to the IBHE and analyzed by its staff, which makes recommendations such as the elimination of programs because they "are not economically or educationally feasible."

The College of Education's two programs were abolished because of a 1977 state survey of public school course offerings and staffing patterns.

The curriculum leading to the bachelor of music education degree will continue to be offered as a bachelor of science degree in the same college.

The board also appointed Jack E. Simmons, SIU-C's internal auditor, as the SIU System internal auditor. Simmons' salary will be between $40,000 and $45,000.

The appointment was made as a result of a report issued by Illinois Auditor General Robert Cronson. The report stated that since the 1979 reorganization of SIU-E and SIU-C into one system, the Carbondale and Edwardsville directors of internal audit do not report directly to the chancellor, as required by Illinois law.

Simmons, as system internal auditor, will report directly to Shaw in order to meet state requirements.

The campus internal auditors will continue to report directly to the presidents, and Simmons will also serve as the principle liaison between the system and external auditors.

Upon the recommendation of the board's architectural and design committee, the board approved a $60,000 project to refurbish the first floor of SIU-C's Wheeler Hall. The proposed project must be approved by the IBHE.

The 79-year-old building, will be used to house Medical Education Preparatory Program administrative offices.

If approved, the project is scheduled to be completed by Oct. 31.

The project will include carpeting, wall repair, painting, replacement of air conditioners, replacement of main entrance doors.

Opinion & Commentary

Better to pay now than later for school change

IT'S BETTER TO PAY NOW than later is the theme voiced by representatives of Carbondale High School District 188, a theme that correctly capitalizes the situation facing voters.

The $8 million bond issue referendum for the consolidation of the high school district March 18 presents just "that" crucial choice - consolidate now or pay later.

Carbondale high school students are now divided between three campuses, with students being shuttled between them at an annual cost of $60,000. The consolidation plan calls for closing two of the campuses - the Central Campus and the Vocational School - placing all of the district's 1,200 students at East Campus.

IF THE REFERENDUM is passed next week, $8 million in bonds will be issued to finance an 85,000-square-foot addition to the existing 77,000 square feet on the East Campus. This will result in an average increase of 87 cents per $100 equalized assessed valuation for property owners - a tax increase of about $100 for property assessed at $15,000.

While this may seem like a high increase to burden taxpayers (it especially is these difficult economic times, the cost of not voting "yes" to the referendum appear to be even higher).

According to Superintendent Reid Martin, consolidating the campuses could save the district $53,000 a year - $119,000 in utility payments, $181,000 in personnel and $60,000 in shuttle buses. More disconcerting, the Central Campus needs repairs and renovations that could cost as much as $3.27 million - a bill that can be financed without voter approval by adding a district to the tax levy.

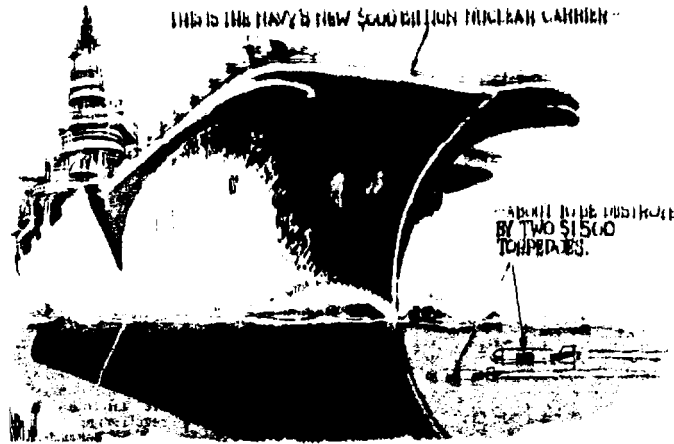

Even these repairs do not guarantee that the district could have to be consolidated in the future. Instead, they only postpone the inevitable.

THE HIGHEST costs of maintaining three campuses are also high. Problems of planning and coordination of scheduling when students are spread over three campuses are especially troublesome.

In fact, the cost of not consolidating the high schools outweigh any possible objections, one of which is that no purchaser of the closed campuses has been found.

But the biggest objection of course is money. Can Carbondale residents afford a substantial tax increase, especially those residents who do not have school-age children?

The only answer is that they have to afford it. The quality of Carbondale schools is certainly important enough to warrant the strain on the wallet.

Khomeini deceived Iranianians

THEIR SO-CALLED "Revolution" was prepared by the conspiracy of Solidarity with Political Prisoners in Iran which has a branch in Chicago. We would like to present it to the University community. We are organizing a group in Carbondale.

We are concerned with the treatment and democratic rights of Iranianians who have opposed and are opposing the Khomeini regime. Over the past three years many of the people who helped overthrow the Shah - revolutionaries, workers, peasants, intellectuals, professionals and students - have continued to speak out and fight for independence, democracy and basic human freedoms. They have met a wave of repression - indiscriminate arrests, jailings, torture, over 4,000 executions (including 13-year-old girls and pregnant women) since June, 1981 - that parallels some say even exceeds the brutality of the days of the CIA-backed Shah. Some people have been executed on the spot simply for distributing leaflets.

STUDENT STADIUMS, school dormitories and other public buildings have been converted into prisons (as if the Shah's prisons weren't enough!) for tens of thousands of political prisoners. Political prisoners - whose numbers increase daily - lack proper nutrition, medical care and hygienic conditions and are held incommunicado, and from family and friends. Many times the families of prisoners are told of the executions of their loved ones only after the fact.

The Khomeini regime has been unable to fulfill the promises made three years ago to the Iranian people. At the same time the regime is drafting people to go to war against their Iraqi neighbors and the Kurdish minority. The Iranian people, however, are becoming aware of how they were deceived and are speaking out. Now faced with growing opposition, the regime is desperately, and ferociously clamping down on all who oppose it in word or deed. The time has come for us to speak and against the regime's oppression.

WE ARE attempting to raise our voices in the United States because the media have not informed the public of what is going on in Iran. We think it is interesting that the U.S. government which demonstrated such hostility towards the Khomeini regime when the U.S. embassy was taken over, now gives its tacit approval to the savagery of the same regime. We heard a lot about the Shah's generals being executed, but there is a strange silence when people who opposed the Shah and U.S. domination - and now Khomeini - are murdered and imprisoned for their beliefs and for exercising democratic freedoms.

Is the U.S. government looking for a discredited regime like the Shah's to help the Iranian people in time so the oil companies and other multinational corporations can return to Iran to rip off the natural resources and low-wage labor of Iran? We think this just might be the case.

We are asking for your support to help inform people in the United States and beyond about the situation of political prisoners in Iran. We want to do whatever is necessary to put an end to their plight. For now, we are calling for impartial observers to be sent to Iran to examine the jails, prisons, court hearings and political prisoners of the Khomeini regime. We want to publish their findings and any other information that will shed light on the "Islamic" Republic's "justice" system. We also ask that you send letters and telegrams to the United Nations Commission on Human Rights demanding that the barbarism in Iran be exposed, denounced and stopped. (Write to Mr. Theodore Van Boven, Director of Division of Human Rights, United Nations Office, Geneva, Switzerland.)

In the near future we will be sponsoring speakers and holding other activities. We hope you will participate. - Kathleen Taghizadeh, Iranian Student Association (Left Platform)

In addressing Craig Smith's comments in the March 2 Daily Egyptian, I feel a great deal of clarification is necessary.

First, I wholeheartedly agree with you, Craig, that my actions were not those of a professional. They were an emotional response directed at Community Service Broadcasting for "mortally wounding" a friend of mine. Although WTAO is not dead, it is on the critical list.

In my brief radio career I had never really considered myself to be a professional. I was a college student who fell into one of the greatest part-time jobs in the world. To continue in radio would have been a pleasant sideline but hardly comparable to employment as an electrical engineer.

Now the clarification of the events surrounding my final act over the scanner. Shortly before the new year, Jim Glassman and CBS instigated the program changes that we have all come to know and love. These changes made sure that the disc jockey had no choice in what to play and little selection in what to say. Even though this was a complete reversal from the previous format, pronouncement dictated that I remain there temporarily.

After one month of listening to the salespitch for the new format, I reached the "saturation point." I was given no respect and I could find none to give for their actions, policies or attitudes.

It was at this point that I handed CBS my resignation in the manner that I deemed best. I hoped that by my action the Glasmans would awaken from their myopic but maladjusted dream world.

My actions could certainly not be considered professional in that CBS refused to pay me for those last two hours. A "pro" would not have expressed his opinions so directly for fear of retaliation from his employer. My radio career has died a natural death and it will rest in peace never to rise again.

Since that cold Saturday evening in January, I have received a final note from Jim Glassman of CBS. Simply put, it says if I ever appear on the premises of WTAO again, "immediate and appropriate legal action will be taken." At least I know they received my two-word message; even though it had little influence on their overall actions.

Finally, I must end this communication with a statement that has little possibility for misinterpretation. Given the same circumstances, I would not hesitate one moment in repeating my actions. - Dave Miller, Senior, Electrical Engineering

Going a step beyond 'blind faith'

Three cheers for Bob Phillips and his exposure on the truth behind Christianity. I would like to go one step further and exemplify the real meaning behind this "blind faith" (and all other religions as well) with a quote from a treatise published in London in 1770 entitled "Systems de la Nature" written by Paul Henri Holbach and Baron von Holbach.

"If a faithful account was rendered of man's ideas upon Divinity, he would be obliged to acknowledge, that for the most part the word "gods" has been used to express the concealed, remote unknown causes of the effects we witness; that he applies this term when the spring of the natural source of known causes, causes to be visible: as soon as he loses the thread of these causes, or as soon as his mind can no longer follow the chain, he solves the difficulty terminates his research; by ascribing it to his gods. When, therefore, he ascribes to his gods the production of some phenomenon, does he, in fact, do anything more than substitute for the darkness of his own mind, a sound to which he has been accustomed to listen with reverential awe!"

Michael R. Johnson, Senior
Special Major

DOONESBURY

Faith in Christianity doesn't demand proof

"The resurrection of Jesus Christ," according to author Josh McDowell, "is one of the most wicked, vicious, heartless hoaxes ever foisted upon the minds of men — or it is the most fantastic fact in history."

We must take issue with a letter written by Bob Phillips (Daily Egyptian, March 2) and state that we believe that a thorough, rational examination of the facts will lead to the conclusion that the latter is true — that Jesus Christ did in fact rise from the dead.

As the Apostle Paul wrote, "If Christ has not been raised, then our preaching is vain, and your faith also is vain." (1 Corinthians 15:13)

But Christ's death and resurrection are not only two of the most well documented events in the world's history, but the events also fulfilled numerous prophecies from the Old Testament.

We must say before we continue, however, that Christianity is not based entirely on historical evidence. We cannot concretely prove Christ's existence any more than we can prove George Washington's. The physical evidence for each is identical. We can only point to writings about the men and to effects their lives have had on history.

That's where faith comes into the picture. We come to Jesus by faith, accepting him even though we cannot physically see him. But once we accept him, we can see by what he does in our lives that he is real.

It is true that many people twist scripture to try to create support for their own personal benefit or prejudices. It is also true that many who call themselves Christians actually live lives filled with hate and insensitivity.

But it is vital to differentiate between these and the true Christians who strive to live according to the principles of the wonderful God we serve.

We do not bow down in horror before a cruel, vicious God who desires to send us poor innocent humans to hell.

Rather, we bow down in grateful reverence to a gracious God who loved us enough to send his son to die — and rise from the dead — to bridge the gap which our own sin created between us and our creator.

He is a just and righteous God who, contrary to the claims of Phillips, is not a sexist, but commands a high respect for women. The stereotypical concept that the Bible designates women as things to be trampled upon by men is completely false. — Daniel J. Faust, Junior, Journalism

Restrict hungry bureaucrats; they're choking your freedom

IT HAS ALWAYS struck me as strange that the same Americans who send their brothers, husbands and sons to die in wars dedicated to "freedom" and a free society will meekly allow their freedom to be usurped by the most expensive, wasteful and inefficient bureaucracy in the history of the planet earth.

Factually, bureaucrats allow themselves to be tricked into actually soliciting more and more loss of freedom, deceived by the false notion that they are not to be regulated, but other people must be regulated. As a result, we are all buried under an avalanche of regulations, conceived and published by appointed bureaucrats who are confident that because they have been chosen, they automatically have better judgement in all matters.

These unelected, opinionated tyrants are going to decide for us what is moral and immoral, legal and illegal, fair and unfair, right and wrong, just and unjust. Rather than restricting their activities to providing the traditional services of government, national defense, police and fire protection, elementary and secondary education, highways, the courts — they launch themselves into a thousand new and expanded programs. They force their will and prejudice on us, and add to traditional functions a paternal state that could very well completely destroy our free society.

BUREAUCRATS WILL decide how many students of each color will be in classes, what movies we can see, what books may be banned, the foods that may be served in schools and fix prices and wages when it suits their whims. They interfere in business — including every phase of employment — making regulation after regulation governing the relationship between employer and employee, all under the guise of protecting one or the other. In reality, they do harm to both because they rob you of your freedom and they tamper with things about which their experience and their understanding are badly limited.

The people who are making the rules have never played the game! Little wonder that they create waste, destroy initiative and bring chaos. Unfortunately, they do a lot while dealing with taxpayers who have little understanding of what harm they do every time they bring government regulation into every tiny controversy. These well meaning do-gooders and groups bring the government in to regulate labor — under the impression that everybody needs to be regulated but them. They mistakenly believe that they are bringing regulations down upon others without the realization that they are always sacrificing a bit more of their own freedom under a free society at the same time.

In the meantime, the monster of government grows and spends and grows and spends and grows and spends while "holier than thou" bureaucrats with oceans of prejudices dictate and regulate.

How can we control the monster, rather than allowing it to control us? It is amazingly simple. Don't simply take sides on each little issue, as you wouldn't make a dent in a lifetime merely taking a stand on one or five or 50 issues. Bureaucrats can create more new issues than you can take a stand on! They also have you outnumbered and they have more money to waste than you. Hit their food supply. Insist on strict regulations and limitations on the power of a few bureaucrats to regulate your life in a free society! — Griff Miller, Senior Journalism

WTAO protester: Enough is enough

This letter is an open reply to the several protests over the WTAO format change that have been printed in the Daily Egyptian. Why don't you people let it rest? I've seen petitions and indignant letters until I have been honestly nauseated.

I'm from the deep South, and one of the more appealing qualities (or so I thought) SIU-C had was its proximity to St. Louis, Memphis and Chicago. I mistakenly assumed this proximity would put me in an area with a broad cross-section of music.

Boy, was I the naive idiot! I found myself in a rock-and-roll dominated toilet. This place put a strain on even the most eclectic of music lovers. While enrolled here I've seen — over the last three years — rhythm and blues and funk programming go from a whole weekend to ridiculous late night shifts on WIDE (progressive my eye!). I still wonder if jazz is actually heard on Southern Illinois radio.

I and hundreds of others prefer R & B Funk. It is easy to imagine how we feel, waiting until obscenely late hours of the weekend to hear a few precious hours of our favorite music?

Not only that, but off-campus one needs a cable to hear that much! Sorry, folks, the cost really isn't worth it.

The point is this: If I can put up with it, I would think you rock 'n' rollers could too, and find alternatives to FM radio as I have.

Besides, I suspect that should WTAO generate a greater income A.D. (After the Decline) than B.C. (Before the Crap), it will all become academic anyway. — Markovic Drummond, Senior, Biological Science

Nuclear arms are insane

The military has long had the edge on the United States because we have failed to imagine the destructive capacities of the human mind. I have no idea what it means that our nuclear stockpile is roughly 615,000 times the explosive force of the Hiroshima bomb. I don't know what it means to have, along with the Soviet Union, a nuclear stockpile containing the equivalent of 12 tons of TNT for every man, woman and child on earth. And I could never comprehend what it means that we will be paying more than $1 billion a day to the Pentagon as plans call for in the 1986 budget.

Last April 25, a Trident submarine was christened Corpus Christi (the body of Christ). It cost roughly $2 billion. Its nuclear capacity is 24 missiles, each with at least eight warheads containing a capacity for the explosive equivalent of 100,000 tons of TNT. Because the bomb dropped on Hiroshima had an explosive equivalent of 13,000 tons of TNT, the Trident submarine with a total capacity of 19.2 million tons of TNT has the explosive capacity of approximately 1,476 Hiroshima bombs. Construction plans for eight more are under way. To name this underwater nuclear launching pad Corpus Christi is nothing less than blasphemy. Call it calloused or obscene, I call it insane.

We who claim to be a Christian nation have a special responsibility, one of which is to trust in God, another of which is to live in accord with the gospel.

We must unite ourselves with all people of the world in communities of resistance to the nuclear threat. We must choose to be peacemakers rather than peacekeepers. We must affirm that our earth's security rests not in armament, but in the justice of adequate housing and food, of meaningful education and work, of an economic order that gives everyone access to our earth's abundance, of human relationships nourished by co-operation and safe, clean, and renewable energy instead of the perils of nuclear power.

Let us unite ourselves with trust in the body of Christ to overcome the machines of destructions. We have before us life and death. For ourselves and our children, let us choose life. — Peter Welle, Graduate Student, Plant and Soil Science and Community Development

SIU-C must accept share of cuts

IT ALWAYS SEEMS to be the spendthrifts who cry the loudest when the money runs out. I think this statement accurately describes the students, the student organizations and the administrators here at SIU-C.

With millions unemployed, huge budget deficits and large cuts being made in social programs for the poor, I have to laugh at the indignation some students and administrators express when they are asked to accept a share of the budget cuts. The way these people talk, it is as though SIU and its students are too exalted to have their budget cut — while hard working taxpayers are suffering.

Graduate students are especially upset because Guaranteed Student Loans may be cut or eliminated at their level. However, graduate students lead the list of those who have defaulted on loans. But then again, why should someone so intelligent, so self actualized and so exalted like a person with a doctorate worry about something as mundane as paying back money borrowed from grubby working taxpayers?

I AM ALSO amazed that SIU can afford to give dozens of faculty members paid year-long vacations or sabbaticals to lay in the sun and read books when money is supposedly so tight. Meanwhile, back in the real world, workers in Illinois are giving up wages just to keep their jobs.

Rich people in Illinois don't pay too many taxes because they have tax shelters and loopholes to use, and the poor don't pay taxes because welfare is not taxable. However, the dockworker, the clerk or the farmer who make too much for welfare but not enough to use a tax shelter are paying most of our taxes, including paying for the operation of SIU.

I think the student organizations and administrators would be a little more honest if they would just go out to these hard working taxpayers and tell them that the state is just going to have to raise their taxes because we at SIU are unwilling to give up our cultural lifestyles.

Why should a student have to work weekends when he or she can develop his or her karma to the ultimate degree at Giant City? Why should a faculty member, who has about 12 weeks vacation a year, give up the year-long sabbatical-vacation?

WHEN I WAS in the army or when I was loading boxes at United Parcel, I should have asked for a paid sabbatical. But then again, I didn't even know what a sabbatical was until I enrolled in college. I guess the saying knowledge is power is really true.

To wrap my comments up, I just want to say to my fellow students and administrators that we don't have to put up with any budget cuts. Let's cut through the government bureaucracy and go right to the source of our money — the working taxpayer.

We can demand that the taxpayers cough up some extra money for our budget or we, the privileged students and administrators, will put on our white armbands and take to the streets in protest. — Paul Migacz, Junior, Business and Administration

More rape coverage is needed

Rape has become such a common occurrence at SIU-C that the Daily Egyptian has decided to give more attention to bicycle racks.

In the Feb. 23 edition of the Daily Egyptian there was a three sentence mumble about a rape. The article was concealed among the ads and the masthead, while the front page carried a lengthy article about new bike racks.

Only by sincerely publicizing serious crimes such as rape will the concern of the public and the police be aroused enough to do something about them.

We believe that an article concerning rape deserves more and better coverage than an inconspicuous, second-page, three-sentence article. The Daily Egyptian has a responsibility to its readers to inform them of these hideous crimes more thoroughly. — Steven Rozengarder, Freshman Forestry.

Yearly telethon finds WSIU facing cuts

By Laurie Landgraf
Entertainment Editor

The Marx Brothers, Humphrey Bogart and James Cagney may never have helped a more important cause. Broadcasting Service officials say, than the one they're working for these days.

They're among the star attractions crowding the screen as WSIU-TV, Channel 8, stages its fifth annual fund-raising telethon, "Festival '82."

Twenty-nine movies and a variety of special programs enliven the schedule for the 16-day festival, which began last Friday. As of Wednesday afternoon, $11,555 had been raised for the public television station, compared to $10,870 at the same time last year — a rate which should put the final total above last year's $60,000, according to Station Manager Allan Pizzato.

And, although he estimates that private contributions supply only about 3 to 5 percent of the station's budget, Pizzato says that the role of public contributions this year is more critical than ever.

Funding from federal and state sources is shrinking at an alarming rate, causing many public television stations to increasingly look to other sources of support.

The original federal appropriation for the Public Broadcasting System, of which WSIU-TV is a member, was chopped for fiscal 1983 from $172 million to $137 million. But current recommendations from the federal Office of Management and Budget slash that figure to $116.5 million. Projections for later years are even bleaker, dipping to $85 million in 1985.

Officials of the Corporation for Public Broadcasting, PBS's funding arm, testifying at a Senate appropriations hearing last month, said the proposed reductions will "starve public broadcasting," possibly damaging stations' ability to raise funding from the private sector and ultimately forcing some stations off the air.

"I don't think any public television station is saying we're above being cut," Pizzato said. "The first whack in the budget — that's a substantial cut. And I think people could live with that."

"But the importance of future monies is that they guarantee productions years from now. It takes PBS two to three years to get a program through the program pipeline, from the time it's an idea in the producer's head, to the time the funding comes together, to the time the actors are selected. These are major productions that take years to produce."

"You keep dropping the appropriations amount, and that cuts off any programming coming down the pipeline. And it cuts off funds that stations are counting on to keep going."

State funds are threatening to dry up as well, Pizzato said, citing a suggestion in Governor James Thompson's next budget that a million-dollar grant to the state's five public television stations be wiped out.

WSIU's share of that funding would have been $100,000 to $120,000, Pizzato said. "We've been getting that grant for about the last three years. Now that could be disappearing too."

Meanwhile, programming costs skyrocket, presenting a dilemma to planners who are trying to preserve programming quality. Pizzato estimated that his programming costs jumped by about 23 percent

Bowen workers' union suing to prohibit center from closing

By Patty Nambachki Staff Writer

A union representing workers at the A.L. Bowen Developmental Center is suing to keep the center open.

The suit, filed in Cook County Circuit Court by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, seeks a declaratory judgment that would prohibit the closing of Bowen and the H.M. Adler Mental Health Center in Champaign.

"We're claiming that the governor is illegally imposing the funds that were set aside in the budget to run these facilities," Hank S-Mett, an AFSCME spokesman said Thursday.

On Wednesday, Cook County Circuit Court Judge Arthur Dunne ordered the state to respond to AFSCME's suit. Another hearing is set March 31 in Chicago.

Meanwhile, two legislators are pursuing other attempts to fight the proposed closing of the Bowen Center.

Sen. Gene Johns, D-Marion, said the Senate Health, Welfare and Corrections Committee would meet March 28 in Springfield to question employees on the effects of transferring Bowen residents to Anna, as proposed by Gov. James Thompson.

Johns has also written a letter to Donald Bittle, administrator of the Anna Mental Health Center, asking to be kept informed about each step of the transfer process, from the renovation of the buildings to be used to cost figures.

State Rep. Jim Hon, D-Champaign, has written a letter to Thompson that criticizes the proposed transfer of Bowen residents and highlights comments made by some of the 500 people attending a hearing Feb. 23 in Harrisburg on the closing.

"The closure of Bowen will mean the loss of this very valuable program to the children of Illinois and to the field of developmental disabilities..." Hon wrote.

"I do not believe the Department of Mental Health or the Office of Governor have offered adequate reasons, either programmatic or financial, for the closing of this center," Hon added. He urged the governor to reconsider the closing decision.

And AFSCME, which represents some 200 to 220 employees at Bowen, will continue to research other "legal avenues" to keep the center open, Schell said. The state was given 10 days to answer the suit. Once the state's answer is filed, Schell said, AFSCME attorneys will develop other arguments to be considered March 31.

A similar "illegal imposition" argument was used last year when the state threatened to close the Adler Center, Schell said.

The money is in the budget to keep the center open until July 1 and "to try to get an agreement, something in writing, with the state to honor the budget," Schell said.

Schell said AFSCME members became upset when the governor announced in February that steps would be taken immediately to close Bowen and transfer the residents. Since then, Thompson has modified the closing date. When he visited AFSCME last month he said that no transfers would take place until adequate facilities could be prepared, whether it's before July 1 or after.

AFSCME leaders will also work to convince the Legislature that both centers should be kept open, because of the high quality of the programs offered at each center, Schell said.

"We just want to stop the state from taking steps to close the centers while we're working to get a vote out of the Legislature," Schell said. AFSCME will attempt to get legislators to vote to restore funding for the two centers. "It's not a lot of money we're talking about here," Schell said. "It might amount to $1 million for each center. It can't hurt the budget that much."

Last week for library bids

The deadline to submit bids on construction of the new Carbonate Public Library building has been extended one week, to Wednesday at 2 p.m.

The delay was needed because not all interested contractors were able to attend a pre-bid conference held to explain details of the construction documents earlier in the month, according to Library Director Ray Campbell.

He said some contractors would have not been able to submit bids by the original deadline, which is Friday. "It was just a matter of being fair to everybody," Campbell said. The library board will hold a special meeting the week of March 21-28, after the bids are opened, to award the contracts.

The bids have been divided into three sections — general construction, general furnishings and landscaping — to increase the project's cost-effectiveness.

Construction on the new building to be located on the former Bruch School site on west Main Street, between University Avenue and Poplar Street, is expected to begin in early April.

City creates relocation committee

By Rob Bondurant
Staff Writer

Businesses displaced because of Carbondale's property acquisition efforts will not be left out in the cold by the city.

An administrative ad-hoc committee has been formed by City Manager Carroll Fry, and was approved informally by the Carbondale City Council Monday.

Problems faced by businesses displaced by the downtown convention center as well as the U.S. 51-St. Louis Spur overpass north of town would be handled by the committee.

The committee's function would be to assist the businesses with any urgent needs such as site plan approvals, variances and special uses for the businesses, speeding city response, Fry said.

Economic Development Director Frank Moreno will be the city's ombudsman working with the displaced businesses.

The U.S. 51-St. Louis Spur overpass received funding for final engineering and purchase of the right-of-way from the Federal Highway Administration in August 1981.

Eldon Gosnell, railroad relocation unit director, said the property appraisal process is

Cancer Society planning county finance campaign

Gerald Sinclair, crusade chairman for the Southern Illinois District Six Cancer Society, will speak at the Jackson County American Cancer Society Unit's crusade campaign kickoff dinner meeting at 6 p.m. Tuesday in the Student Center Ballroom C.

Robert McGrath, crusade chairman for Jackson County unit, will outline his plans for the Cancer Society's financial crusade during April. The program will also include a movie, "Eleven Things That Do Not Cause Cancer," explaining the 1982 crusade educational pamphlet, and music by the Murphyboro High School music department.

The Jackson County Unit's goal this year is $39,500. It will help finance the Cancer Society's research, educational service and rehabilitation programs in the battle against cancer, McGrath said. Combined goals for the 23 ACS units in the 22 Southern Illinois counties comprising the sixth district, headquartered in Herrin, is $321,855.

virtually complete for approximately half the property on the right-of-way. The state already has sent out several purchase offers to property owners.

Appraisals on the remaining property will begin by the end of March, Gosnell said. Assessment, acquisition and relocation are scheduled to be completed in a year, with the project ready to be advertised for bid in the spring of 1983.

Negotiations on 12 parcels are under way, Gosnell said.

The Illinois Department of Transportation is handling the acquisition and relocation of businesses in the project, since the project is located along a state highway, Gosnell said.

For two other portions of the relocation project, the new Amtrak station and the Pleasant Hill Road overpass, the city acted on behalf of the state in acquisition procedures.

Construction on the Pleasant Hill Road overpass should be finished by late fall, Gosnell said.

William Kilquist has been a great help in organizing our highly successful Community Crime Watch in Makanda that is being copied in other places. I asked him to run for sheriff in Jackson County. I strongly urge every voter to lay aside political differences and vote for him in the primary and general elections. I am ashamed of the rising crime rate in our country including unsolved murders.

City officials planning bids on state grants

By Bob Bondurant
Staff Writer

Municipal officials interested in competing for the limited amounts of grants from the state's successor to the federal Community Development Block Grants Program will meet next week to discover their chances for success.

A meeting on the Community Development Assistance Program will be held March 16 in Carbondale by the Greater Egypt Regional Planning Commission.

Fifty-eight municipalities from the counties of Perry, Jackson, Williamson, Franklin and Jefferson have been invited to attend, according to Frank Pallini, Greater Egypt planner.

The officials will meet with representatives of the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs for discussion of which local projects could qualify.

A public hearing will be held at 2 p.m. in the Carbondale City Council Chambers at 607 E. College to discuss the draft regulations and guidelines of the program.

For the present year, between $28 and $32 million in Community Development Assistance funds have been appropriated to the state from the federal government's $3.6 billion program.

$18 million of the grants are earmarked for fulfilling previous commitments, leaving $10-to-$14 million available to new applicants. Applications are expected to be intensely competitive, Pallini said.

Targeted areas preferred in the grants are housing rehabilitation projects, economic development projects, and public facility projects, Pallini said.

over the past year. So far, federal funding, plus the money received from the public, has enabled the station's management to pretty much pick and choose its programming, Pizzato said.

But crumbling governmental support, coupled with encroaching competition from cable for the cultural programming market, has forced many public television managers to resort to other ways of generating funds. Possibly the most startling is exploration into advertising.

Recently, a few PBS stations began relaxing their traditional definition of advertising and accepting a certain type of ad, called "enhanced corporate underwriting credits" by one station manager. The ads run at the beginning or end of programs, are restricted in length and are precluded from expressing opinions on public, political or religious issues. But commercials on public television run counter to the traditional view of the medium as a viewer- and federally-supported program, Pizzato said.

"Our programs are selected not in the sense that we have to get the largest audience we can get to make our advertiser happy. Public television's not based on ratings. If we have to worry about some advertiser paying the bill, it would change the whole complexion of what we do."

In addition, from what he has observed, Pizzato said the advertising venture so far has turned into a "major hassle."

"What most of these stations are finding out so far is that it's costing them a lot of money just to set up a sales staff," he said. Problems have also cropped up in negotiating contracts with performing unions, which have always allowed public television reduced rates. Programming prices run higher, too, for stations which adopt the liberalized advertising format, Pizzato said.

About one to two years ago, WSIU began probing into the possibility of corporate underwriting, in which a company pays for a program in return for on-air mention of the company's support. In fact, this year for the first time, nine or 10 of the movies included in WSIU's festival were bought with the aid of corporate underwriters, Pizzato said.

"Festival '82" is WSIU's major annual fund-raiser. Persons contributing $15 or more become members of "Friends of WSIU" and are mailed a monthly program guide detailing programming on WSIU and its sister station, WUSI, Channel 16, in Olney.

"Almost every PBS station has a 'friends' organization, but most charge $20 or $25 for membership. Some are higher than that," Pizzato said. "There are only a handful that charge only $15." All funds generated from the festival go toward programming and program-related expenses, he said.

This year may have seen a peak in federal funding for public television, resulting in programs like "Brideshead Revisited" and Masterpiece Theater's "I Remember Nelson" making debuts on the public screen. And, according to public television officials, the number of viewers is escalating as better-quality programming makes public television its home.

Meanwhile, public television stations speculate about a time in the future when they may have to struggle to keep Mister Rogers from pulling up stakes.

Attorney has conviction doubts after Galatia incident decision

By Jay Small
Student Writer

Around the middle of the morning on Aug. 18, more than 1,000 pro-union sympathizers stormed the Kerr-McGee mine site near Galatia, tearing down fences and setting fires on the site. They were protesting the fact that the mine might not be a union shop.

Police fought back against the protestors, but they were outnumbered. National Guard helicopters were called in and they spread tear gas over the rioters, thus quelling the disturbance.

Damage from the rampage was estimated to be between $100,000 to $300,000 and 21 men were arrested. But now, more than six months after the disturbance, Saline County State's Attorney David Hauptmann has some doubts about being able to convict union activists in that county's courts.

Hauptmann was the prosecutor in three trials related to the Galatia incident. The first 14 men tried faced charges of mob action and disorderly conduct, and all were acquitted. Police were able to identify most of the men as having been on the site

Camp for disabled to benefit from run

A 10-mile run is scheduled to be held on campus April 24 to benefit Camp Olympia, a summer program for disabled students. It is open to all interested persons.

An entrance fee of $8 is due by April 17. Entrants will receive a T-shirt.

The race, which will be held during SpringFest, is co-sponsored by Camp Olympia, the SIU-C Roadrunners, SFC, the Student Environmental Center, Rend Lake Distributing Co. and Old Syle Beer. Proceeds will be used for scholarships to the program.

A 2.5 mile fun run also is scheduled.

USO acts on deficit

The Student Senate allocated $1,105.27 to the Undergraduate Student Organization to cover this fiscal year's projected deficit at its meeting Wednesday in Ballroom D of the Student Center.

The senate also voted fund $450 for the printing of the March issue of the Black Observer, a student newspaper.

The senate also heard a presentation from Bernard Warren, governmental activities liaison to the Illinois Board of Higher Education, who explained the IBHE's functions and policies.

Functions of IBHE, Warren said, are to recommend tuition and funding increases to keep pace with inflation, to keep tuition costs from exceeding one-third of instruction costs, and to recommend to the Illinois State Scholarship Commission increases in levels of financial assistance to students to offset increases in tuition and cuts in federal aid.

Three parties make election deadline

Three parties had filed petitions for president vice president tickets for student government elections by Thursday's deadline, Dave Williams, Undergraduate Student Organization election commissioner, said.

Candidates for USO president and vice president are G. Kurt Boyle, junior in marketing, and Marilyn Melvin, junior in advertising, for the Big "O" Party; USO

Chief-of-Staff Jerry Cook and Sen. T. Fritz Levenhagen, for the Maverick party; Joe Dietzler, junior in political science, and Glenn Stolar, for the Sting party. Stolar is a member of the student advisory committee to the IBHE and representative to the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee.

Williams said that the deadline for student trustee petitions is March 23.

State labor dept. to rule on election

By Mike Anton
Staff Writer

The Illinois Department of Labor will decide March 16 whether secretarial employees at SIU-C may hold an election to determine if they will continue to be represented in contract negotiations by the Civil Service Bargaining Organization.

Dwayne Linton, a conciliator with the department's regional office in Marion, said Thursday that a pre-election conference would be held next week to validate signature cards and to establish election guidelines. Linton said he didn't "foresee any problems" in validation, and that an election should be held before March 31.

Secretarial employees petitioned the Department of Labor for an election last year, but because organizers failed to follow state guidelines for signature gathering, the petition was ruled invalid.

Joann Marks, spokesperson for the election organizers, said secretarial employees were considering several other bargaining organizations on campus to replace CSBO, but that "if we don't get fairly treated, we may just decide to form our own group."

Base salaries are at the forefront of the group's split with CSBO, Marks said. She said that CSBO in negotiating contracts with the University had "deliberately held down" starting salaries for secretarial employees and had not been in favor of merit pay increases for employees that department supervisors deem to be "performing exceptionally."

"Those of us that have been here for 12 to 15 years do make a good salary," Marks said. "But they are hurting the ones who are just starting out."

Because of a large turn-over rate among secretarial employees, Marks said, contracts negotiated by CSBO have become a "disservice" to the group as a whole. According to Personnel Services, starting salaries for secretarial employees at SIU-C range from $3.95 to $4.80 per hour.

Marks said that the current contract with the University provided for a 7.5 percent salary increase with no provision for merit increases. She said the University's range employees — those who are not represented by any bargaining organization — received a 6 percent salary increase or $60 a month, whichever is higher, plus eligibility for a merit increase of up to 2 percent.

However, because of low base salaries, the 7.5 percent increase "in most cases" was less than the $60 provided for range employees, she said. Lee Hester, president of CSBO, could not be reached for comment.

Marks said that the vote to break away from CSBO would probably be close. CSBO currently represents 375 secretarial employees — a major portion of their approximately 700 members, and a portion that Marks said could deal a blow to CSBO's negotiating power with the University if it is lost.

"And they're not too happy with me," Marks said. "We tried this last year and we got some considerable reaction. And I imagine that we're going to get a lot of reaction this time, too."

USO debate set, campaigning to start

A debate between Undergraduate Student Organization presidential candidates will be held at 8 p.m. March 24 in Ballroom D of the Student Center. It is sponsored by the College of Business and Administration.

The three-week campaign begins that day.

COBA President Chip Anderson said, "Since all candidates are only allotted three weeks of active campaign time it will be interesting to see which candidates are prepared at the beginning of the campaign."

Each candidate will be allowed a five-minute introduction period. A panel of four Recognized Student Organization leaders will ask each candidate four questions. Candidates will be allowed two minutes to respond after each question and then one minute for rebuttals at the conclusion of the questionings.

Members of the audience may ask candidates questions after the formal debate.

Visiting family specialist tells of world population, problems

By Charles Victor
Staff Writer

SIU-C has played host to many distinguished international visiting scholars. Perhaps the most distinguished of these scholars to visit this year is currently on a four-day visit at the invitation of the South Asian Studies Department.

Sripati Chandra-sekhar, a world renowned demographer and family planning specialist, lectured Thursday on world population and third world issues. As Minister of Health and Family Planning in India from 1969 to 1972, he was the virtual architect of the largest official family planning program in the world.

At a meeting with faculty Thursday, Chandra-sekhar had a great deal to say about the population problem in India.

"The family planning program in India received top priority. It was the only totally federal-funded program that was concurrently a state- and even municipal-level program. Lower level incompetence however, often ate into the efficacy of the program," he said.

In humorous and homespun language he highlighted other difficulties with family planning in India. "Prejudices and traditional ways are another headache. In Indian languages, surgery often meant cutting off some part of the body and throwing it to the crows. So if a man gets a toothache after a vasectomy, it would be attributed to the vasectomy."

"Often I would get a village headman to undergo a vasectomy and pray fervently that nothing happened to him. When the villagers saw him walking around hale and hearty they are more amenable to a vasectomy themselves," he said.

Chandra-sekhar related a Sanskrit axiom that shed light on another problem. "If you have a son, you have a seat on the way to heaven." This means that when a couple has three daughters they are going to keep trying till they get a son," he said.

His study of the large number of deaths of women through illegal abortions in India prompted him to write "Abortion in a Crowded World" and push through a bill legalizing abortion in India.

"A lady in her eighth pregnancy knows her health is going and goes to the village midwife for a secret abortion. Complications arise and she is rushed to a village hospital in a taxi and admitted as an accident case. By the time the local doctor gets through a futile search for accident wounds under the folds of a bloodsoaked sari, the taxi driver is gone and the lady is dead.

Sripati Chandra-sekhar, renowned family planning specialist, delivered an address Thursday at the Agriculture Building.

"We are not talking of unwed pregnancies. The lady was married, perhaps too much married. There are thousands of similar tragedies. So I pushed that bill through. Sometimes they call it the Chandra-sekhar Act," he quipped.

In another lecture projecting the third world in the year 2000, he revealed dangerous trends in the world since colonial days of some 30 years ago. "Every post-colonial country, with the sole exception of India, is moving either to the right or the left. Most of them have or are on the way to having totalitarian governments. If the past is anything to go by, everyone of these states will become totalitarian by the year 2000.

"And what is America doing about it? Selling more and more arms. Instruments of wholesale massacre unlimited.

"A friend warns but an enemy strikes. I come as a friend of America. Why do you keep selling arms to countries that need schools and hospitals? You have got so much good to share. Petition your government to share this good, not weapons of slaughter," he said.

Chandra-sekhar was equally critical of third world politics that didn't think of its citizens benefits first. "Every third world country wants atomic plants when their people do not even have food," he said.

An author of 28 books and some 200 papers translated into 15 different languages, Chandra-sekhar is no stranger to America. His wife, Dorothy Downes, is American, and his daughter is married to the designer of the largest laser in the world. Having travelled more than 130 countries, this is his 39th visit to America.

Chandra-sekhar currently teaches at the University of California while holding the post of vice-chancellor and president of the Annamalai University in India.

Career center head quits, takes IIT post

The director of the Career Planning and Placement Center has resigned to become director of placement and cooperative education at the Illinois Institute of Technology in Chicago.

Harvey Ideus, CPCC director since 1974, took over his new duties at IIT March 1.

Ideus said he believed he had expanded career opportunities for students at SIU-C, especially the handicapped and was proud to have served the University.

In his position at IIT, Ideus will oversee placement, cooperative education, student work and summer employment programs. He will also coordinate the school's contacts with corporate recruiters.

Budget cuts hurt college hopes, local high school seniors claim

By Lyndall Caldwell
Staff Writer

Student Trustee Stan Irvin and Graduate Student Council President Debbie Brown spoke Tuesday with groups of high school seniors in Marion, Benton and McLeansboro who plan to attend college next fall.

Many students they spoke with are considering community colleges. ROTC scholarships, or joining the military in order to receive education benefits because of proposed cuts in education funding, Brown said. Many students feel that enlisting in the military is the only choice, she said; in fact, at McLeansboro, the guidance counselor said they are encouraging students to consider the military.

"We spoke to about 100 students at McLeansboro," Irvin said. "Only six said they are going to SIU. Of those who were not going, most said it is too expensive."

Some students are changing their education plans, Irvin said. Many who were considering law school, medical school or graduate school are wondering if they can afford to pursue those careers.

Guidance counselor Phyllis Guild at Marion High School said most Marion students cannot afford to go to a four-year institution. Most are being forced into the work force or community colleges.

McLeansboro senior Gary Murdoch said when less people are educated, incomes tend to drop. If incomes drop, so will tax revenues and there will be less money available for education in the future. "It's a continuing cycle," he said.

A senior who wants to go into law said youth is the nation's most valuable resource. By cutting education funding, those resources are not being invested in, he said.

Starting the freshman year of high school, the theme is preparation for college, one senior said. Maintain a high grade-point average; participate in extra-curricular activities; high school is a stepping-stone to college, students are told.

And now that he is a senior, the message is that there is no money to finance higher education, he said. "Why me? Why this generation of students?" he asked.

Brown replied, "That's a real difficult one to answer."

Irvin said, "Part of the reason, unfortunately, is when governments are trying to balance their budget, they are tempted to balance it on the backs of those who are unable to defend themselves. Simply put, students are vulnerable."

during the disturbance, but were not certain that any of them were involved in the violence.

As a result of the acquittals, Hauptmann dropped similar charges against the seven other men in late February. He said he regrets the decision.

"Sure, I regret having to drop them," Hauptmann said. "But if there is anything else I could have done, I don't know what it would have been."

Hauptmann believes that the large mining work force in Saline County may make it more difficult to convict prosecution activists in the county in a situation like the Kerr-McGee melee. Hauptmann said that if another demonstration such as the one in August were to occur, the same prosecution problems would probably exist.

"When you run through jurors, some are going to be coal miners or closely related to them," he said. "Under those circumstances, I think it's more difficult to get a conviction."

"I can't change the place of the trial," he said.

Although police might be better prepared for another incident, Hauptmann believes that evidence-gathering might be just as difficult as it was in August.

"Let's say you have 1,000 to 2,000 people — and from the testimony I've heard, there were 300 to 500 angry, club-wielding people among those at Galatia," he said. "Policemen can't go out and arrest everybody in that situation."

United Mine Workers of America President Sam Church visited the Kerr-McGee site in mid-February, saying he hoped to convince future employees at the mine that it should be a union operation. Kerr-McGee officials have left the decision up to the workers, but have expressed interest in keeping the mine non-union.

Hauptmann declined to speculate on whether Church's visit will have any impact on the status of the mine's work force.

"I'm not into a policy-making position for the mine or anyone else," he said. "I'm just here to prosecute."

Outstanding Performance vs. Promises

Any candidate can make promises. But only Don White has an outstanding record of eight years as sheriff. A native of the area, Sheriff White has increased patrols, increased investigative staff, and helped organize training programs for area law enforcement officers. And, he favors organizing a 10-member volunteer Sheriffs' Auxiliary to improve law enforcement, at an initial cost of $4,000 and annual cost of $1,200. Now that's performance!

Illinois are willing to pay for access. We believe the Illinois General Assembly will be receptive to our position, and we will take this matter to the floor of the statehouse," Brown said.

President Albert Somit said the increases were necessary because "we are rapidly approaching the point where, if something isn't done, we will have to think about limiting enrollment. Unfortunately, with respect to a tuition increase, we are in a circumstance where we really can't do anything else."

Todd Rogers, Undergraduate Student Organization president, said the matter came down to the question of the extent of students' access to the SIU System.

SIU-C currently has the largest enrollment in its history, he said, "but I don't think we can say that enrollment figures alone determine access. The paramount issue is how access is affected by tuition increases."

Rogers asked the board to assemble a task force to look at the impact of tuition increases on students in the SIU System.

However, Board Chairman William Norwood, said the problem was not confined to SIU alone and that he would ask the IBE staff to undertake a study of the impact of tuition increases on students' access to higher education institutions statewide.

Board Member Ivan Elliott Jr., said he found the tuition increases "distasteful, but the institution's back is against the wall this particular year."

"Students come here for a good education," Elliott said. "So we've got to maintain programs that fit the needs of the students and we've got to maintain the quality or we don't deserve the students."

Carbondale Fire Chief Charles McCaughan told the board that before it asks students for a tuition increase it should try to eliminate administrative waste, citing an audit: general's report issued last November that found a number of deficiencies in the system's management of fiscal affairs.

The system should re-evaluate its fiscal policies and procedures before requesting the tuition increases, McCaughan said.

"As an administrator, I would be ashamed to come before you and ask for a tuition increase with an auditor general's report such as this," he said.

"As a taxpayer I feel, and the people that I've talked with feel, that if you will first clean up this place and make sure the money is doing what it's supposed to be doing — then the taxpayers and the students will welcome the chance to discuss the matter and I don't think you'd have any problems in a request such as this," he said.

any problems. Three tenants of Raveed's Springer Street property said that they had heard complaints concerning Raveed from previous tenants, but that they themselves thought he "was a good landlord."

"He told us that he simply didn't want any hassles, that he wanted a 'smooth operation' here," one tenant said.

Raveed owned solar companies in Albuquerque, N.M., and Rome. He was also involved in fur importing from South and Central America. Raveed served as part-time consultant to a large number of national, international and foreign businesses and corporations. His wealth has been estimated by friends to be in the millions.

While on a business trip to Amsterdam during winter break, Raveed was severely beaten in his hotel room. Kleindl and police say they are not sure if there is any connection between that attack and the murder.

Sources close to Raveed describe him as having been between 5 feet 8 inches and 5 feet 11 inches tall, stockily-built, balding on top, having light brown hair. They said he was a "sloppy dresser." Those who saw him after the Amsterdam attack said he had a large scar across his forehead and that his eyes were blackened. One source suggested there was physical evidence to indicate that there was an attempt to strangle Raveed during the Amsterdam incident.

Raveed is survived by his mother, Devorah Raveed, of Davis, Calif., and his sister, Talya Raveed, of Albuquerque, N.M.

At the meeting, Swinburne said, "We will not tolerate physical violence." He said six persons have been charged with violating the student conduct code and that "it might mean probation." Swinburne called the banning of the Iranian student groups "a cooling-off period."

The GSC endorsed the letter by resolution.

Also at the GSC meeting, Paul Matalonis, a first-year law student, was nominated for GSC president, Laura Nelson, a graduate student in speech communications and current vice president of the GSC, was renominated for the position.

GSC officers will be elected March 31 and elections of GSC members will be April 14.

The GSC discussed a proposed program from the Health Services Policy Board to consolidate six graduate assistant positions at the Health Service into two permanent staff positions.

The program is meant to cut costs and improve professionalism, according to Chuck Basch, GSC representative on the board.

The GSC recommended that the board consider adding physical exams, a dental service and possibly an optometrist to Health Services instead of removing graduate assistantships.

In other action, the GSC allocated $800 to the Sociology Club for a conference entitled "Ecology and the Welfare State." The conference, cosponsored by 20 SIU-C student organizations, will focus on interrelations between the government, the economy and ecology. Some persons named as possible guest speakers were environmentalist Barry Commoner and ecological designer Buckminster Fuller. The conference will be April 16-18 at SIU-C.

The GSC also allocated $58 to the CPSS for a program that will explore current and historical problems in South Africa. Debbie Brown, GSC president, announced that petitions from students interested in running for student trustee are due March 24. Petitions should have 200 student signatures and must be turned in to the GSC office. The election will be April 14. All SIU-C students are eligible for the position.

Solution found for disposal of organic waste

By Christopher Kaut
Staff Writer

The problem of disposing of liquid organic wastes has finally been solved.

The Pollution Control Department has shipped nearly 5,000 pounds of wastes collected from various University facilities to be incinerated by Trade Waste Incineration Inc. of Saugat.

According to John Meister, chairman of Pollution Control, the decision to incinerate the wastes was made because it assured "complete destruction" of the materials and because it relieved the University of responsibility for their storage.

Meister said that had the University gone ahead with plans to ship the wastes to the U.S. Ecology landfill site in Sheffield, the University, like any other waste generator, would have been responsible for any leakage of the materials at the site.

The materials which consisted of inorganic salt solutions, heavy metals, organic solvents, violently reactive metals, pesticides, PCBs and dioxin, were packaged in vemiculite, an absorbent packing material, placed in 55-gallon drums and shipped on Feb. 18.

The wastes had been collected by Pollution Control since 1976 from chemistry, biology, engineering, geology, and research, forestry, and physiology research laboratories.

Graduate student Jon Ogilve, who is in charge of the hazardous waste compliance and disposal program, said the department had wanted to ship the wastes to the Sheffield site. But the long process of filling out the proper forms and the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency's objection on whether liquid wastes could be stored at landfill led to consideration of incineration, he said.

Ogilve said that, after consulting EPA regulations,

Tearing the line

Dana Nelson, actor in cinema and photography, practices juggling and slack rope walking outside of Wheeler Hall. Nelson will be part of an upcoming performance by the All Generics Entertainment on April 24 as part of SpringFest.

Pollution Control was unsure of how to package the materials and how to classify many of them. They had to fill out more than 120 pages worth of identifying forms and still were not finished, he said.

"We were starting to get quite frustrated, and then somebody got wind of the TWI facility," Ogilve said.

He said that when they contacted the EPA about incinerating liquid wastes, and were told that the materials could be packaged and classified under the simple term,

"liquid organic wastes."

Last August, Pollution Control requested and received nearly $5,000 from the University's operating budget to bury the wastes and contracted with Industrial Salvage Inc. of Centralia to haul the materials to the Saugat facility.

Although Pollution Control will continue to make use of the incinerating facility, they are planning to ship some materials to Sheffield and will also try to recycle some materials through evaporation and distillation processes, Meister said.

Awesome national competition looms for Hartzog's tracksters

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

Awsome will be an understatement for the competition that seven Saluki Tracksters will encounter at the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships at the Silverdome in Pontiac, Mich., Friday and Saturday.

The Salukis will send John Sayre in the pole vault, Tom Ross in the 1,000-yard run, Karsten Schulz in the mile, Randy Geary in the 440-yard dash, and Perry Duncan, Mike Franks, Tony Adams and Geary in the mile relay.

The remainder of the team will head to Louisiana for a pair of triangular meets in Monroe and Lafayette.

The other qualifying relay, the distance medley, was scratched because of an injury to half-miler Gary Munson, who has a sore shin.

Munson, who was second in the 880-yard run two weeks ago at the MVC Indoor championships in 1:53.0, will make the trip south, but may not compete. Most of his time will be spent treating his leg, and getting back into some kind of shape.

"I hate that I'm missing out on going to the nationals," said Munson. "If I could run, I would. But it hurts so bad."

The Salukis will have to "compete like SIU trackmen" says Coach Lew Hartzog, if they are to score any points in the meet, Junior Tom Ross, whose 2:09.55 qualified him for the meet, said that most of the team will have to run much better than their qualifying times in order to make it to the finals. The preliminaries, says Ross, is going to be the severe test.

"I'm just hoping to get past the preliminaries," Ross said. "They are usually faster than the finals in some events. Last year, some guys made it to the finals in 2:11."

Even more competition will come in the mile relay, with speed burners such as Villanova and Oregon. Both teams have been clocked at 3:12 or better on "banked" tracks, which are difficult to run on because of tight turns. The Salukis have run 3:13.

"I'll just try and bring in the baton first or second," said Duncan, who will lead off the mile relay.

"That's going to be hard to do, but if I can bring in a good first leg, we should do pretty well."

Geary, who qualified in the 440 with a 48.01, will run second, while freshman Franks will run third and Adams fourth.

Sayre will enter the meet with a vault of 16-8, while Schulz brings a 4:05.0 in the mile run.

After the meet, the seven Salukis will join the remainder of the team in Monroe for a triangular meet with Northeast Louisiana and Delta State on Tuesday. The Salukis will be in Lafayette on Saturday for a meet against Southwest Louisiana and Tulane.

Last year, the Salukis went undefeated on their spring trip, outdistancing all three teams in Monroe, with 116 points to Northeast's 49 and Stephen F. Austin's 14. At Lafayette, the Salukis scored 109 points to Southwest's 80.

Track team out for fast times

By Paul Lorenz
Associate Sports Editor

Women's track Coach Claudia Blackman has her team right where she's wanted it since the track season started. Namely, outdoors.

Outdoors is where the Salukis will be when they "step out" for the first time for two meets in Monroe, La. They'll face Northeast Louisiana, Grambling and Mississippi Valley State Tuesday, and stick around to take on the Lady Indians again March 19.

SIU-C has never competed against either Northeast Louisiana or Grambling, Blackman said. Northeast Louisiana's track program is only three or four years old, but the Lady Indians are "developing a good team fast."

Grambling has a small squad, but has some exceptional sprinters, Blackman said, adding that her sprinters "would have their work cut out for them" against the Tigerettes.

Blackman is confident in her team's chances of success despite the fact that one of its top performers, Patty Plymire-Houseworth, will not make the trip south. The senior distance specialist has student teaching duties which prevent her from joining her teammates for these two meets.

"We're hoping for a few school records," Blackman said. "And we're hoping to set the tone for the rest of the season."

"Despite not knowing too much about the two teams, I would be surprised and disappointed if we don't come back with two wins," the Saluki coach said.

Outdoor competition involves basically the same events as its indoor counterpart, with the addition of the javelin and discus throws and the 10,000 meter run. Blackman said the 10,000 won't be run at Northeast Louisiana.

Cindy Bukauskas, a senior from Pittsburgh, and Cynthia Joy, a freshman from Colts Neck, N.J., will be tossing the javelin for the Salukis. Joy, a member of the Saluki basketball team, will be making her first appearance with the track team. Both Salukis have thrown over 135 feet, Blackman said. Blackman is confident about the season as well as the two meets.

"The only thing that will stop us from being competitive is ourselves and unforeseen injuries," she said.

freshman from Galesburg had knee surgery Tuesday.

"There was nothing torn," Auld said, "but there was an irritation at the kneecap that the surgery should take care of."

Auld believes Eastman will be able to begin practice in about three weeks, and added, "She has to get 80 percent of her strength back and there has to be no swelling on her ankle."

The team will first travel to Florida for matches with Southeast Louisiana and Okaloosa Walton Junior College on Saturday. Competition will continue Tuesday against Nicholls State in Thibodaux, La., and Wednesday against Tulane in New Orleans. The Southern trip will end March 18-20 at the eight-team Northeast Louisiana Invitational in Monroe, La.

Auld hopes to come home with some victories, but adds a lot will depend on how strong the team is.

"It will hurt not having Heidi," she said. "Also, we will be playing against all Southern teams who have been playing competitively since January or February. We've just been practicing against ourselves."

"They are ahead of us in playing outside," Auld continued, "but the purpose of the spring trip will be to prepare us for the season, help us make the transition from indoor to outdoor tennis."

walked 14 and gave up 20 earned runs in 51 innings.

Junior right-hander Donna Dopson will either be the third pitcher in the rotation or will be a spot starter. Dopson appeared in 10 games and had a 1-8 record with a 3.12 ERA.

Last season the Salukis finished with a "deceiving" 11-22 record according to Brechtelsbauer.

"Last spring's won loss record is misleading," Brechtelsbauer said. "We lost several close games to nationally prominent teams by only a run or two. Some of those teams went on to do well in national competition and we were able to compete with them."

"This season we will be playing the same tough schedule and I think some of those close games we lost last season will go our way," she said.

Harris, the other freshman in the lineup, played in two tournaments during the fall, and was disappointed in his own play. Reburn said. But the coach expects improvement from the former four-time state qualifier from Belleville East High School.

Schaefer, a sophomore, played in all four fall tournaments, and is a player with "great potential," Reburn said. Schaefer led the team in scoring average during the fall of his freshman year, broke his finger just prior to the spring season last year, but still played in all but one spring tournament.

Jansco, a transfer from John A. Logan Junior College, only played in one tournament in the fall, but Reburn thinks the junior will play more this spring. Hammond, in his third year with the Salukis, is a "solid, steady player," Reburn said.

"This tournament is more regional than those we normally play in," the Saluki coach said. "Right now I don't think any of the Northern teams can challenge the Florida schools."

Swimmers head for nationals with hopes of top-three finish

By Paul Lorenz
Associate Sports Editor

Last year the women's swimming and diving team, loaded with quality freshmen, finished 16th at the AIAW Division I Nationals.

This year the team is again loaded with quality freshmen, and is shooting for a top-three finish in the national meet scheduled for Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday in Austin, Texas.

According to Coach Tim Hill, the difference between the Salukis of 1981 and those of 1982 in terms of the national meet comes down to two factors: experience and sheer numbers.

Eight swimmers, Laura Brown, Janie Coontz, Sue Harkness, Paula Jansen, Barb Larsen, Amanda Martin, Maureen McLoughlin and Pam Ratcliffe; and two divers, Sandra Bollinger and Tracey Terrell, will represent SIU-C in Texas. Last year the Salukis took five swimmers and two divers to the nationals.

"We've got more people going to the meet this year," Hill said. "We'll be entered in all five relays this year, and all five could score points for us. We're adding scoring potential in the free relays plus in the individual events of Martin and Coontz."

"Larsen and Ratcliffe should score more this year, too," he added.

SIU-C is a more experienced team this year, Hill said, despite the fact that five freshmen, four sophomores and only one senior will be representing the Salukis.

"Last year Larsen and Ratcliffe had never been to a meet of the calibre of the nationals," Hill said. "They should both be ready and mentally tough for the meet this year."

"Coontz and Martin both have had more experience at national levels," the Saluki coach said. Both freshmen have participated in the USA Nationals, an event open to outstanding high school as well as other amateur and college swimmers.

SIU-C will be one of 40 schools competing at the nationals, but Hill thinks the Salukis can attain their goal of a top three finish.

"We've been pointing toward the AIAW meet all year and thinking we could go as high as third," Hill said. "Texas will be a heavy favorite to win again but we should be right up there fighting with Cal-Berkeley, Florida State, Southern Methodist, Ohio State and the other top teams."

Swimmers at the nationals can be entered in a maximum of five individual and seven total events. The rule caused Larsen and Ratcliffe to be "overqualified" for the meet, forcing Hill to make some decisions about who would swim in what events. The coach said he'd have to wait until the meet to make some of those decisions.

Larsen will swim in the 100 and 200 butterflies, the 500 free, and three relays. Hill said. She is also a possibility in either the 50 fly or the 1,650 free. Larsen qualified in both the 200 free and the 200 IM but will not swim in those events.

Ratcliffe's name is on the lineup card for the 100 and 200 IMs and the 50 and 100 breaststrokes, and she's a possibility for the 400 IM. Hill said she'd swim in two or three relays. The sophomore qualified for but will not swim in the 100 free.

Coontz qualified for the 200, 500 and 1,650 freestyles and the 200 and 400 individual medleys. She will swim in all but the 200 IM, Hill said, and will be used on three relays.

Jansen and Martin will each swim three individual events and two relays. Jansen qualified in the 50, 100 and 200 backstrokes, and Martin in the 50, 100 and 200 breaststrokes.

Brown will swim in the 200 IM and "possibly all five relays," Hill said.

The coach said the lineups for the 200, 400 and 800 free relays are set, but one leg each on the 200 and 400 medley relays are up for grabs between Ratcliffe, Brown, Harkness, McLoughlin and "whoever's swimming best at the time."

In the diving competition, Terrell will compete in both the one- and three-meter boards, while Bollinger qualified only on the three-meter board.

Hill said the divers are an important part of the team's bid for a top three finish. He said the duo should give SIU-C an edge over a school like Florida State, a team with one diver "who probably won't score."

Tumblers seeded No. 3 in regional

By Steve Metsch - Sports Editor

The women gymnasts will need 140 or more points to win the Midwest AIAW Regional Championship, according to Coach Herb Vogel. The championship is scheduled for March 18-20 in Columbus, Ohio.

SIU-C, with a 138.43 average, is seeded third behind Michigan at 139.03 and Ohio State at 138.92. Vogel said being No. 3 actually helps the Salukis.

"We will start on the beam, our best event. Our last event will be our worst — the bars. If we do well in our first three events, we'll be able to relax and let it go on the bars," he said.

Vogel said a 140 is possible if his three "pretty decent" all-arounders — Pam Turner, Val Panton and Lori Erickson — all hit their best-meet averages. If they did so, the team would have 107 points, and would have to pick up 8.25 points in each event to reach Vogel's goal.

The only way the Salukis could qualify for the AIAW national meet, according to Vogel, would be to win the Midwest. He said nine of the 12 national spots go to regional champs, adding that several teams shooting for the three at-large bids have averages better than SIU-C's. The national meet will be at Memphis State on April 1-3.

Vogel hopes history will repeat itself. Last year the No. 1 seeded Salukis finished fifth in the regional, while No. 4 seed Ohio State took the top honors.

he's heard SIU-C is ranked "somewhere in the Top 30."

The Salukis will cross the Mississippi River for a single game against Ole Miss in Oxford, Miss., on March 19. The Rebels are coached by former New York Yankee catcher Jake Gibbs.

The Salukis then head north to Memphis, Tenn., for a twinbill against Memphis State March 20. Jones said the Tigers made their divisional playoffs last year.

The team closes its busy tour on March 21 in Murray, Ky., with a game against the "always good" Racers. Before last season, Racer Coach Johnny Reagan was the 11th-winningest coach in the nation with a .685 percentage. Jones, in his 12th year at the Saluki helm, ranked third in the country prior to the '81 campaign with a .733 mark.

Jones said he's not worried about the Salukis' chances despite the fact that they'll meet teams who have several games under their belts and know their players well.

"We'll be okay. We'll play to win every game, but we'll also try to get a look at a number of our players," he said. "We have to find out how much depth our pitching staff has, and how we play day after day."

Baseball team skips Florida, decides to tour land of cotton

By Steve Metsch

Since variety is the spice of life, the baseball team won't visit Coral Gables, Fla., over spring break, as it did last year. Instead, the Salukis will take a tour of the South.

"The players wanted to go to a different part of the country," said Saluki skipper Itchy Jones. "We haven't always spent spring break in Florida. My first year here we went to New Orleans, and we've also been to California. I think it's good to take them to different areas."

The Salukis will take a 1-1 record into the road trip as they split a twinbill with Arkansas-Fayetteville last week. SIU-C is scheduled for 11 games in nine days against some of the best college teams in the South, according to Jones.

"The competition will be better than in Florida, since we will play teams whose programs are more advanced than ours," Jones said. "In Florida we'd play a lot of Northern teams."

Salukis on radio

WCIL-AM radio has announced it will broadcast 10 of the Salukis' baseball games during the team's spring trip. The schedule is as follows:

— Sunday, March 14, 2 p.m. — SIU-C vs. Alabama, doubleheader.

— Monday, March 15, 2 p.m. — SIU-C vs. Alabama, one game.

— Tuesday, March 16, 2 p.m. — SIU-C vs. Louisiana State, one game.

— Thursday, March 18, 1 p.m. — SIU-C vs. New Orleans, doubleheader.

— Friday, March 19, 2 p.m. — SIU-C vs. Ole Miss, one game.

— Saturday, March 20, 1 p.m. — SIU-C vs. Memphis State, doubleheader.

— Sunday, March 21, 1 p.m. — SIU-C vs. Murray State, one game.

The Salukis open their road trip Saturday with a game against a "good hitting" Columbus College club in Tuscaloosa, Ala. The team will stay in Tuscaloosa Sunday and Monday for a three-game set with 5-3 Alabama.

"Alabama is a typical college baseball team," Jones said. "Once you get past their first pitcher, their staff isn't as good as their hitters. That's because pro clubs draft the 'cream of the arms' of college pitchers. The real good hard throwers are drafted high by the pros."

The team travels to Baton Rouge, La., Tuesday for a game against the Louisiana State Fighting Tigers, a team which Jones calls "tough in all aspects" of the game.

The Salukis have Wednesday off and will slip down to New Orleans for a doubleheader against the Privateers Thursday. Jones said New Orleans is a "strong ballclub" which has made the NCAA playoffs the last three years and is ranked in the early polls this season.

Jones joked that the Salukis were ranked "somewhere in the top 1,000," but seriously said

Softball coach says hitting needs work

The women's softball team will swing into the spring season by traveling to Norman, Okla. to compete in the Sooner Invitational March 16-20.

According to Saluki Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer, the Sooner Invite is a 25-team tournament featuring some of the best teams in the country. She said the tourney will give the Salukis a good idea of where they stand and where improvement is needed.

Brechtelsbauer said her young team is strong defensively and solid in pitching, but needs work with its hitting attack.

"Most of our players will be facing this level of pitching for the first time and will need some time to adjust and get used to it," Brechtelsbauer said. "They're used to hitting a slower pitch and using a power swing. We're trying to get them to relax at the plate and concentrate on hitting line drives and forget about the home run."

"They also have to get used to not only hitting a ball at a higher velocity, but Division I pitchers move the ball around the plate and throw hard," she said. "They have to concentrate and not take their eye off the ball. They have to learn to swing at the ball and not just the area it's in."

Brechtelsbauer said the Salukis' pitching is very strong and added that she isn't sure whether she'll go with a two or three woman starting rotation.

SIU-C pitching standout Gena Valli will play her last season as a Saluki. Valli helped SIU-C to two World Series berths in 1978 and 1979.

"We have a good starter in Gena Valli," Brechtelsbauer said. "She has proven what she can do on the national level."

Brechtelsbauer said that Valli is a pitcher who moves the ball around well and has excellent velocity. Valli's bat is so strong that Brechtelsbauer said she will play first base when she isn't pitching.

Right-handed sophomore Meredith Stengel is a smart pitcher who also moves the ball around the plate well, but doesn't have as strong of velocity as Valli. Brechtelsbauer said.

Last spring, Stengel appeared in nine games and had a 3-3 record. She struck out eight.

Injured netters to test recovery at first meet

The women's tennis team opens its season on the road this weekend, and the competition will provide the opportunity to evaluate the team's strength after injuries to key performers.

Lisa Warren had surgery over the winter to remove a buildup of scar tissue on her foot, and Coach Judy Auld said the junior is feeling better. "She is moving more on it, she isn't as restricted as before."

Freshman Alessandra Molinari started practicing about three to four weeks ago after surgery in November, according to the Saluki coach. Torn ligaments, which at first did not appear on X-rays, were discovered after the fall season. Molinari had her leg wrapped up when she played, the coach continued, and when it didn't improve, additional X-rays were taken which revealed the tear.

"We'll be careful not to overuse her," Auld said. "Her ankle still gets sore."

Heidi Eastman, a top singles and doubles player along with Molinari and Warren, will not be competing over break. The Linkers open in Florida; won't be 'fun-in-the-sun'

The women's golf team will spend most of spring break in Florida. However, it won't be a fun-in-the-sun time according to Coach Mary Beth McGirr.

"We're going to Winter Haven to prepare for our upcoming season," McGirr said. "It'll be strictly golf," she continued, "the girls will be competing against each other for the top five positions on the team."

McGirr, who has coached the team for three years, said tournament play doesn't begin until after break and that most tournaments allow only five golfers per team, thus the competition to qualify for one of the top five spots.

"I think we'll be equally as strong this spring as in the fall season," she said. "The core of the team is our five sophomores, so the team is young," she continued, "but the team gets better each season."

Three freshmen and one junior, who transferred from a junior college, fill out the roster.

The team has been practicing indoors and outdoors the past month, but are off to a later start than at this point last year. "We're building up gradually," McGirr said, "four full days of golf and walking will be good conditioning."

The team's first challenge will be the 36-hole Illini Mini-Tournament at the University of Illinois on April 3.

McGirr did admit there will be some leisure while the team is in Florida. "We're planning to go to Disney World," she said.

Tracksters won't be left in the cold

Golf coach hoping for consistency

Sunshine beckons the men's golf team as it opens its spring slate Monday in Miami at the 72-hole Florida International University Sunshine Intercollegiate tournament. Golf Coach Jim Reburn said the inconsistency which plagued his young team in the fall may continue this spring.

"We played two freshmen, two sophomores and one junior most of the fall," the second-year coach said, attributing his team's inconsistency to its inexperience.

"We're probably still a year away from getting consistent efforts from everyone," Reburn said. One of the biggest adjustments for the players is the travel schedule, the coach said, which finds the team away from Carbondale for about half of April.

"The travel schedule makes adjusting even more difficult for the freshmen," he said. "They're still trying to adjust to being away from home for the first time."

"We started out well in the fall, but went downhill from there," Reburn said. "We opened at Evansville and were supposed to win there, but finished third, which was a disappointment." The golfers ended the fall season at the Illinois Intercollegiate and placed seventh among 13 teams, their "worst" meet of the fall, according to Reburn.

SIU-C lost one player, Terry O'Neill, to December graduation, but picked up a new player, Craig Doiron, a transfer student from SIU-Edwardsville.

Reburn said Doiron, a sophomore from Belleville, was recruited heavily by a Florida junior college, but after the school cut its golf program Doiron transferred to SIU-E, not to play golf, but just to be closer to home. SIU-C's accounting program attracted Doiron to Carbondale. Reburn said, and an NCAA rule change in January will allow the transfer to compete for the Salukis immediately.

Twenty teams will compete in the FIU Sunshine Intercollegiate. Each team will field five golfers, among which the lowest four scores will be counted toward the team total each of the four days. The Saluki lineup will consist of Mark Young, Jan Jansco, Rob Hammond, Randy Harris, John Schaefer and Doiron.

Young, one of two freshmen in the opening lineup, was the 1980 Illinois High School Class A golf champion. See GOLF, Page 18
