Gray to square off with Patchett; Buzbee abandons political goals

An exultant Ken Gray Wednesday said he was 'happy about the loss. People are repulsed at a dirt road, I would say. It was the dirtiest campaign I've seen in 30 years. My opponent campaigned against me instead of dealing with the issues.'

Buzbee, of Makanda, was not available for comment Wednesday, said Carl Carpenter, Buzbee's press aide. Buzbee is said to be bitter about the loss and has been quoted as saying he will not seek public office again. Buzbee told supporters Tuesday night that coverage of the campaign by the Southern Illinois newspaper was biased toward Gray and hurt Buzbee at the polls.

Unofficial election totals showed Buzbee with 4,484 votes, or 25.6 percent, to Buzbee's 3,184 votes, or 44 percent. In November's general election, Gray will face Williamson County attorney Randy Patchett, who ran uncontested in the Republican primary.

Gray said he public about his chances of defeating Patchett, saying he was looking forward to a general election where he received 37 percent of the vote. He said he was able to win Buzbee's supporters, many of whom are in Jackson County, over to his campaign.

Students miss in 3 of 4 races in primary vote

Democrat Jackson County and Carbondale voters — of whom a significant number are SIUC students — would not have been an accurate group for pollsters to use to forecast results in Tuesday's primary elections unless they wanted to know who was going to lose. In the presidential primary, Jackson County voters gave Gary Hart 52 percent of their votes and only 2 and 1 percent to Walter Mondale and Jesse Jackson. Two heavily student precincts, the 22nd and 23rd, which include Brush Towers and the Triads, went for Hart by 21 and 18 percent margins. Other student-populated precincts went to Hart, also.

Students didn't fare any better in choosing a nominee for the 22nd Congressional District seat, picking state Sen. Ken Buzbee over former Rep. Ken Gray by 40 percent. In the 3rd, 9th, 10th, 11th, 21st, 22nd and 23rd precincts — containing many students — went to Buzbee, several by 40 percent.
Dunn says McClure beatable;
state Senate contest mounting

State Rep. Ralph Dunn, the Republican candidate for the 5th District state Senate seat, on Wednesday called his Democratic opponent a "formidable but beatable" candidate and didn't waste time attacking his opponent's plan for curbing Southern Illinois' economic woes.

"The people will want, or I hope they will, someone who knows the ropes and how to get bills passed," said Dunn, 70, who has been a state representative since 1973. Dunn, of Du Quoin, won an uncontested race on Tuesday with 11,167 votes, while Randolph County Coroner Gary McClure used a massive surge in his home county to swipe 52 percent of the vote and the nomination from Dunn, of Du Quoin, who won 42 percent. McClure defeated Parr by 422 votes.

"I feel I talked about the issues that affect Southern Illinois,"said McClure. "Those issues should be good for another six and a half months."

With his party's embrace, the 61-year-old McClure received 32 percent of Tuesday's vote in the seven-county district, including overwhelming support in southern counties.
The Chester native, who has been coroner since 1973, did not waste time getting down to business, said Dunn. "The state can't do it cheaper than private industry." McClure said a state-run workers compensation program would create new jobs and replace lost ones. The program, which is handled by private agencies, has cost the state 600,000 jobs in three years.

"When you're just starting out, everybody just wants the win," said McClure, who added Dunn said that he awaits a "beatable" campaign.

Promising to actively pursue more state dollars for SIU-C, Undergraduate Student Organization president Bruce Joseph announced Wednesday he would run for Student Trustee.

Joseph stated that, if elected, he'd ask the SIU Board of Trustees to explain its decisions and policies, attempt to keep the Board from becoming a rubber stamp body and clarify the mission of the University. Long range goals must be established along with an overall strategy to implement them, Joseph said.

"As a member of the budget advisory committee, I voted against paying the faculty more money with higher student tuition," he said.

Joseph said that SIU-C faculty members are underpaid when compared to other public universities in Illinois and nationwide, but that additional state funding should be appropriated to close the pay gap. He said he would work with area legislators and SIU's legislative director to push for more state money, and that he would lobby in Springfield if needed.

Joseph also said SIU-C's image needed to be improved. He said that unfavorable articles in the Chicago Tribune depicting SIU-C as a party school were not accurate, and that SIU-C should use public relations to change those perceptions.

Improving SIU-C's image would also improve recruitment, but the University should first determine what its selling points are, and specifically where SIU-C has a competitive edge over other schools, he said.

Joseph said he is qualified to be trustee because he understands SIU-C's history, its governance system, and how its decisions are made. He said he was proud of the Undergraduate Student Organization and its work during his tenure as president.

He claimed that he delivered on four of the five of his and the Trojan Party's campaign promises to fight tuition increases, to cut USO student salaries 15 percent, to deliver a free student directory on time and to continue student services. He said he was disappointed in the Ombludman's Office, Joseph said.

Joseph said he was familiar with the workings of the board, and that he'd seek to be a member of the academic matters and finance committees. Joseph, a senior with a major in aviation and business, will continue his education at SIU-C with graduate study in business law.

"The more than 1.5 million votes cast in the Democratic Senate primary exceeded most expectations. But Simon had said a high turnout would favor him," he said.

Democracy is elusive in Central America

WHILE POLITICAL pundits ponder the results of Illinois' primary election, the people of El Salvador prepare to go to the polls Sunday to vote for leaders who will determine their war-torn country's future.

The election is important to the Reagan administration's effort to stop the civil war in El Salvador. American officials are worried that U.S. military and economic aid in their 4-year-old battle against Marxist rebels

Reagan, who seem to be a communist under every coffee bush, has tried to equate voting with democracy. Such an equation is politically appealing in Central America.

There are no left-of-center candidates on the ballot in El Salvador. All candidates are backed by the government-controlled military and right-wing death squads.

The Salvadoran government's Human Rights Commission claims that such improvements have been made, recently reporting that "only" 1,080 civilians were killed in El Salvador last year. However, the report also promised to campaign prior to the election in November, but has not yet reported on the progress of "Law" which prohibits political opponents from holding meetings.

Perhaps it is because American democratic values don't seem to work in Central America that the public has a difficult time grasping what is going on there. A recent survey found that only 5% of the population knew that we were supporting the Salvadoran government. 12 percent knew that we were assisting anti-government forces in Nicaragua and only 4 percent could identify the U.S.-supported side in both countries.

DURING THE next few days, several programs are being held on campus as part of National Central America Week. The activities provide an opportunity to learn more about the complex problems that face our neighboring country. Among these are the following:

- An alumni luncheon and lecture, "One Man's View of Nicaragua," with Dr. John G. Wright, a professor in the University of California at Los Angeles Program in Latin American Studies.
- "Central America legislation crucial" (Letters to the Editor).
- "Letters to the Editor: Central America legislation crucial"

For years, the countries of Central America have served as economic colonies for the U.S. They have also profited from the sale of arms and military exercises, like Big Blue and Big Red, to the Honduran armed forces. It would also set a limit of 100 U.S. military personnel there.

Coerced religion doesn't belong in public schools

I am writing to express my appreciation for your sympathetic and timely editorial on the proposed school prayer amendment.

As a mother of two young children, I have a definite belief in the possibility that in today's political climate—at least as it is perceived from a small town in Washington, D.C.—such an amendment could pass. It is frightening to think that such possibilities exist.

I do not believe that the ACLU’s beady eye looks and finds symbolic issues that included in this amendment in order to make an argument against it. It is frightening to realize that such an amendment can pass, and that government officials and courts may support it.

The proponents of this amendment argue that it is an exercise of the First Amendment right to religious freedom. However, they ignore the fact that this amendment is not a true exercise of freedom of religion, but rather a强制性的 enforcement of the status quo.

I urge you to support the American Civil Liberties Union in their efforts to prevent the passage of this amendment.

Speedy executions restore justice

The death penalty is a controversial issue. One side expounds on the worst that humanity can do and that it is a deterrent to crime. The other side argues that it is inhumane and violates human rights.

The reality is that the death penalty is a deterrent to crime. It is a way to prevent the worst crimes from being committed.

ACLU supports free religion, not school prayer amendment

The position of the American Civil Liberties Union on organized prayer in the public schools is well-known. We are happy to learn that our organization supports a constitutional amendment to bring religion into the public schools in a way that does not impose it on any student who do not want it.

The ACLU supports the freedom of religion of all students, regardless of their religious beliefs. We believe that all students should be able to make their own choices regarding religion, and that the state should not force them to choose a particular religion.

The ban on organized prayer in the public schools is not a violation of the First Amendment, but rather a way to protect the rights of all students.

I urge you to support the ACLU in their efforts to prevent the passage of the school prayer amendment. The rights of all students should be protected, and the public schools should not be used as a forum for the promotion of religion.

Voters stand by Crane despite scandal, censure

DANVILLE (AP) - As Illinois Rep. Dan Crane suspected, his conservative record turned out to be a lot more important in his Hinkle Belt eastern Illinois district than his well-publicized sexual affair with a congressional page.

"We've got broad-based support. I'm just thankful and pleased," said Crane after winning the 19th district's Republican nomination in his bid for a fourth term in the U.S. House. "They still believe in fiscal responsibility and bringing government back into the hands of the people."

He said GOP voters, who favored him by a 3-to-1 margin Tuesday, want to reduce federal spending and "know he will continue to work toward those goals."

After the votes were counted, Crane and his wife, Judy, celebrated at J.R.'s, a downtown restaurant and tavern. He won in all 18 counties, beating state Sen. Max Coffey of Charleston by a vote of 36,604 to 15,128.

There had been questions about Crane's political future since last summer, when the Danville dentist admitted having sexual relations with a 17-year-old female page and was censured by the House.

The episode shocked voters in the district, which stretches 200 miles south from Champaign through rural areas near the Indiana border.

But Crane, who apologized to his constituents, said neither they nor his opponents made an issue out of the affair during the primary campaign.

"The media are the only ones who bring it up," he said.

Crane now faces a November rematch with Democrat Terry Bruce, the man he easily defeated in 1978 to win his first term in Congress.

Bruce, a state senator from Champaign, received 19,928 votes in a four-man Democratic race. John Gwinn of Champaign was second with 16,795, followed by Eric Jakobsson of Urbana with 10,067.

"We won, now we've got to do this whole thing again," said Bruce, an attorney who has been in the Legislature since 1970. "We expect an aggressive campaign based on what he (Crane) has done and what he hasn't done in this district."

Business internships offer work experience

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

Student internships with commercial businesses offer valuable work experience and also look good on resumes, according to coordinators of internship programs offered through the College of Business.

Danny Kennett, faculty member in accounting and coordinator of the Accounting Department's internship program, said working for an accounting firm or in an accounting-related private industry while in school helps students gain confidence. It also affords an opportunity to see real-world applications of academic material, he said.

"With an internship, you'll acquire the ability to confront a problem, resolve it and understand it," he said. "You'll know that you can take on a tough job and do it."

Accounting interns usually receive full-time job offers at standard entry salaries from their employer, he added. Kennett also said students can better decide whether they want to build a career in a field once they've had work experience in it.

Most accounting applicants are second-semester juniors applying for second semester senior year internships. The interns usually work full time, are paid entry level salaries and do not attend SIU-C during the program. When they return they may receive credit for intern study.

Shauna Greenwalt, faculty member in Marketing, said internships don't come easy and must be competed for in the same manner as career jobs.

"I would advise students to start looking early, to investigate all opportunities and to be willing to travel to another city for a while," she said. "The work experience is a valuable experience that can be used when looking for a career job."

These internship programs are usually full time and not limited to Carbondale. Students usually work in St. Louis or Chicago, Greenwalt said. Carbondale internships are usually limited to retail experience.

According to Greenwalt, internships on campuses can be obtained in the Career Planning and Placement Department.

Donald Vaughn, acting chairman of the Finance Department, said because of the increased number of accounting majors in finance in recent years, the number of finance internships will increase in the near future.

"Right now there are five times as many companies who want interns as there are students looking for internships," he said.

Vaughn said most of the finance interns work for a bank or brokerage firm in their hometown or for a regulatory agency such as the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

About half of the finance internships are done in the summers, with the rest in spring or fall semester, Vaughn said. Most students go to the finance office with a letter from a prospective employer describing the internship.

Marvin Troutt, coordinator of internships in administrative science, said many companies are offering upper-level accounting internships with opportunities to work as a consultant, intern or even a full-time employee.

"An internship fills the gap of little real business experience that you receive in class," he said, adding that he feels students don't fully realize the importance of outside work experience.

"Unlike most internships offered by other departments in the College of Business, many administrative science internships are part time and are located in Southern Illinois."

Requirements to obtain an internship vary with each department, with some requiring upper-level department course work and minimum cumulative and departmental grade point averages. Most interns receive pay for their work.

Each department requires the intern to write a paper describing the activities and learning experiences of the internship. Interns are frequently required to turn in semi-weekly reports on work activities, and supervisors usually submit an evaluation report to the faculty advisor.

All internships are pass-fail except for the accounting internships, which use a letter-grade scale. Most of the internships are for three credit hours, although fewer hours can be taken.

Requirements

- A grade point average of 2.5.
- A minimum cumulative grade point average of 3.0.
- Your major must be related to the internship.
- You must be a junior or senior in good academic standing.
- You must have completed at least 60 credit hours.
- You must complete the internship application process.

No exceptions are made because of other factors.

Experts bugged by killer insect films

CHAMPAIGN (AP) — Entomologists bugged by movies that depict insects as giant killers are sponsoring the first Insect Fear Film Festival to set the record straight.

University of Illinois students and faculty members will bring live insects to the event so the audience can see what these bugs are really like.

"We've never thought insects suffered unfairly from bad press," said U of I entomologist May Berenbaum. People are willing to believe the worst about insects, and film makers have capitalized on that.

So the experts decided to speak up for the bugs at the Friday and Saturday film festival on campus.

"Insects are an essential part of our existence on this planet," said Ms. Berenbaum.

The festival will feature "Them," an epic about giant ants that live in the sewers of Los Angeles; "Bug," featuring huge cockroaches that burst from automobile exhaust pipes; "The Fly," in which the bodies of a man and a fly get mixed up; and "Tarantula," a tale of large spiders, she said.

Indictments, charges brought in Operation Greylord probe

By Rose Ann Robertson

CHICAGO (AP) — The FBI announced Wednesday that nine people, including a Cook County judge, have been charged or indicted in Operation Greylord, the sweeping investigation of corruption in the nation's largest court system.

The indictments involved violations of federal law centering on the handling of court cases. The announcement by U.S. Attorney Dan K. Webb, comes more than three months after the first wave of indictments in the 3 1/2-year investigation.

Among those charged were a judge, an attorney who was an assistant corporation counsel, four private attorneys and two Chicago police officers.

Two current or former judges named in the original December indictment, John J. Laurie Jr. and John G. Laurie Jr., were named in the latest indictments.

Laurie also alleges he was posing as Greylord, regarded as the most corrupt judge in the circuit, and had gone home for the day. A home telephone call was recorded secretly.

Over-under FBI "mole" Undercover FBI Webb testified at the October trial that he was a judge's chambers on Dec. 17, and recorded the conversation with a concealed microphone.

"Isn't your man up today? Your friend (Conn) called," Laurie had said.

Bake responded: "Oh, OK. I don't know if he told you, but I do need a NG (not guilty) if that's OK."

"Sure," Laurie replied, and then coached Bake on how to handle the case.

Laurie could not be reached for comment Wednesday afternoon. An operator at the County Court said there was no answer at his office and that he had gone home for the day. A home telephone number for Laurie was not available, but he earlier emphatically denied any improprieties.

Webb said the investigation was continuing, but that additional indictments would not be announced while cases were at trial.

Greylord was begun by U.S. Attorney General William French Smith and FBI Director William H. Webster to correct corruption in the national judicial system.

Tips given for cutting energy bills

By Joyce Vonderheide
Staff Writer

Learning simple tricks such as caulking and weather-stripping can save renters money on their monthly utility bills, but people often don't know about these money-saving techniques.

People throw money out the window each month, according to Hugh Muldoon of the Shawnee Solar Project, one of the sponsors of Wednesday's Free Fair for All in the Student Center. Teaching these tricks and providing information was the purpose of the fair, which was also sponsored by the Student Environmental Center and The Other Utility, Carbondale's Energy Conservation and Solar Energy Service.

A bicycle clean-up and tune-up clinic by Campus Cycle was one feature of the fair. Other exhibitors distributed pamphlets on saving energy and money and demonstrated simple improvements, such as caulking windows. Other displays showed students how to insulate water heaters and make insulated window coverings.

Kevin Langland, junior in plant and soil science, and Paul Langland, senior in communication, said that receiving a $200 utility bill when the thermostat is in the home was set at 60 degrees prompted them to come to the fair.

Langland said he liked seeing data that supports savings through improvements. He said that next winter he wants to put some of the techniques that he learned using plastic over the windows and putting something under the floorboard.

Jeanne Jarboe, junior in plant and soil science, was interested in the solar energy display and said the fair had a lot of good ideas.

Muldoon said renters sometimes don't want to invest in money-saving improvements because they don't own their homes. For $20 spent on caulking, a renter could save up to $50 monthly depending on the condition of the house, he said. Renters, not the landlord, lose by not making improvements, he said.

3 men abduct woman, hold her 6 hours

A female SIU-C student was abducted for six hours Tuesday as she and a friend were walking down East Walnut Street, Carbondale police said. According to police, the woman and a female companion went walking east on East Walnut Street at 8:45 p.m. when they were approached by a man in an automobile.

Two of the men allegedly got out of the car, struck one of the women on the cheek, knocked her to the ground and dragged her into the car.

Police said the woman was "driven around for six hours but was not harmed. She was released at Murdale Shopping Center at 2:40 a.m. Wednesday. Police described the first suspect as a black male, about 21, with a heavy build and dark brown hair and wearing a gray quilted jacket.

The second suspect was described as a black male, about 21, 5 feet 5 inches tall with dark brown hair and wearing a dark green corduroy jacket and blue jeans.

The third suspect was described as a black male, about 21, 5 feet 8 inches tall, 140 pounds, wearing a cream colored shirt, beige jacket and baggy blue jeans.

The vehicle the suspects were riding in was described as a black 1977 or 1978, 2-door Cheverolet Monte Carlo or Oldsmobile Cutlass with a black interior.

Sphinx Club holds tea party

By John Stewart
Staff Writer

The Sphinx Club has begun a fun-customized tea party that is being copied by other student groups, could banish bake sales, candy bar sales and Halloween T-shirts.

Sphinx is sponsoring a "silent" tea; promising that it will be the most delightful benefit guests will never attend. Announcements of the tea were made by Sphinx's honorary faculty and administration members and alumni, and stressed that guests don't have to worry what to wear if they'll be able to find parking. Instead, a tea bag was stapled on the announcement, asking guests to brew it for themselves.

Angie Cler, Sphinx president, said response to the fund-raising tea has been good. Sphinx is the oldest literary organization at SIU-C, and undergraduate members are looking forward to promotion in Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities.

"Silent" fund-raising was chosen because members are typically so involved in other activities, Cler said. Because of the nature of the group, this type of fund-raising works a lot better, Cler said.

Applications for membership to Sphinx are available at the Office of Student Development and must be completed by 5 p.m. Thursday. Sphinx only 24 members each semester and recognizes a freshman and a sophomore of the year each spring.

Aihed remembers when he recruited the quartet.

"I got those boys after a 2-11 season," Meade said. "I've seen them progress in pretty good gymnastics and now they're scoring nine, scoring nine in the yardstick that measures a good gymnast."

The Salukis have progressed well since that 2-11, 1979-80 season. Last season, the Salukis finished 11-4 and ninth in the NCAA. This season, they finished 14-2 and are ranked fifth.

A COUPLE of the Salukis still have goals to achieve.

Voss wants to win the pommel horse national championship. He's been working at it for six years, two in high school. He has scored a 9.8 four times this season.

"It's every specialist's goal to win it all," Voss said. "A specialist doesn't get another chance after that."

Assistant coach Tony D'Angelo said the Salukis need a higher placing at the NCAA's to be more competitive at the national championships. Meade said the Salukis have progressed in eight National League seasons. He has 41 career home runs.

Howe became a free agent at the end of the 1983 season, but he did not sign with any team. He had been working out this spring as a non-roster player with the Chicago White Sox of the American League.

The Cardinals did not disclose terms of the agreement. Howe has a .262 career batting average in eight National League seasons. He has 41 career home runs.

The same goes for Levy Against Nebraska, he needed a 9.6 for a SIU-C win, he scored a 9.5. Against Penn State, he needed a 9.45 to pull out the win, and he fell off the bar and scored an 8.7.

"I can't think of this as a personal advantage because I have to help the team," said Howe.

What Voss means is that if the Salukis need a 9.5 to win, he won't go for the 10 to win the championship. He'll ease up on his routine and get a 9.5 or 9.6 in.

The same does for Levy Against Nebraska, he needed a 9.6 for a SIU-C win, he scored a 9.5. Against Penn State, he needed a 9.45 to pull out the win, and he fell off the bar and scored an 8.7.

Jones will sign ex-Astro Howe

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals have signed free agent right fielder C.B. "Itchy" Howe, a utility infielder, last played in 1982 for the Houston Astros. He sat out the entire 1982 season with injured tendons in his left ankle and bone chips in his right elbow.

Howe, a .262 career batting average in eight National League seasons. He has 41 career home runs.

Jones spoke at luncheon

SIU-C baseball coach Itchy Jones will be the main speaker Thursday at the Saluki Booster Club luncheon in Morrison's Cafeteria at the University Mall.

Jones' baseball team played themselves in the early stages of the season. They may be hesitant to take command.

Coach Jones said that every time a player speaks up, he may feel that he's going out on a limb and putting pressure on himself.

By leadership in the infield, Jones said he's just looking for someone to communicate to the others such things as the number of outs and who should cover a particular base in certain situations.

At the plate, the Saluki skipper said leadership can appear in the form of clutch hits, especially when some hitters are struggling.

"I can't think of this as a personal advantage because I have to help the team," said Howe.

What Voss means is that if the Salukis need a 9.5 to win, he won't go for the 10 to win the championship. He'll ease up on his routine and get a 9.5 or 9.6 in.

The same goes for Levy Against Nebraska, he needed a 9.6 for a SIU-C win, he scored a 9.5. Against Penn State, he needed a 9.45 to pull out the win, and he fell off the bar and scored an 8.7.

Surprised Lutterman hits goal; qualifies to compete in U.S. meet

By George Pappas
Staff Writer

Saluki gymnast David Lutterman will compete in the Championships of the USA May 17-19 at Indianapolis, Ind. He qualified by scoring a 10.0, tying for first all-around and 54.65 in the optionals in the Chicagoland Invitational last weekend. A score of 110 is required to qualify for the prestigious Championship.

Lutterman, a 5-foot-11, 175-pound freshman from Nelson, New Zealand, was a little surprised.

"It was, by any means, one of my goals to make it to the USA Championships," Lutterman said, "but I didn't expect it to happen so quickly.

Lutterman and senior John Levy have been the only two Salukis working all-around this year for SIUC, which finished its dual season at 14-2. Lutterman's best option all-around score this year was a 50.86.

"I hadn't practiced much with the compulsories," Lutterman said. "I just went out there and did it."

Lutterman competed in the World Gymnastics last summer for New Zealand. However, he was informed three weeks ago by the New Zealand Olympic Staff that it would not be sending gymnasts to the 1988 Olympic Games at Los Angeles.

"They told me that they weren't interested in sending any athletes in any sport that wasn't in the top 16 in the world," Lutterman said. "I tried to convince them, but there was no way."

Lutterman will be among 72 gymnasts trying out for the national team. Of the 72 list will be cut down to six. Six will compete. Former Saluki Brian Babcock has scored better than 116 and he is already on the eight-man U.S. team.

Levy, on the other hand, is still trying to make the team. He scored a 108 in Chicago last weekend, just two points shy of the requirement. He said he needs to practice his compulsory all-around routine.

"I wasn't ready to do the compulsories," Levy said of his 10.8 score. "I'll take the next couple weeks to work on them."

For Lutterman, it was a tough transition from New Zealand to competing in the United States.

"I was very difficult for him in Chicago. This will give him confidence knowing he can score a 110," Lutterman said. "But David has turned into a very good gymnast and it was an outstanding performance for him in Chicago. This will give him confidence knowing he can score a 110."

"But when he has a problem on a dismount, I'll still tell him it was a 'New Zealand dismount.'"

Events mar women's practices

By Jim Lex
Sports Editor

With the Central Regional competition Saturday at Chicago State, a lot of the women's gymnastics team considered the possibility of not having to work, probably even putting in some off-time practice at the barre.

That has not been the case this season. But sometime this week the squad decided to slack off after being one of the teams to qualify for the regionals from a field of 18.

SIUC, 1-11, is ranked No. 3 in the Central Region with a .2625.

The Salukis defeated Iowa State (March 14) and Missouri (Friday) last week to become just the second team in the Central Region with a winning record.

Saluki Coach Herb Vogel gave his team Saturday off after the Salukis beat Missouri. The team will be back to work on Sunday, though, but the serious practice schedule was to be short lived.

On Monday, the gymnastic team had its practice cut short - almost in half - when its equipment had to be taken down in order to get the Arena ready for Tuesday night's boys' basketball Sectional. AA Super-Sectional.

And, of course, the equipment stayed down on Tuesday afternoon.

On Wednesday, Vogel was eager to get his squad back into action, but delays cut into the squad's practice. Equipment had to be set up, and complications with the uneven bars, parallel bars and balance beam were spread throughout the men's team work session.

Space limitation on the upper level of the Arena by the bleachers that were being used for baseball Coach Itchy Jones to move his squad's practice being cages in order for the parallel bars to be put up. Jones was worried about the parallel bars falling, which would have pulled down one of the cages, while Vogel was probably equally as worried about a baseball flying through the cage's net and hitting one of his gymnasts.

Vogel, and Jones, should be used to this type of practice session. This season, their squads have also had to deal with the men's track and basketball teams when the four squads would all practice in the Arena.
Gibbs: NFL needs official for TV replay

HONOLULU (AP) — Since millions of fans watching television know immediately when a game official makes a bad call, so should the officials, Washington Redskins Coach Joe Gibbs said Wednesday.

Gibbs is spearheading a renewed drive to bring National Football League officiating to the television age, with an extra official monitoring instant replays and instantly correcting bad calls.

The proposal, Gibbs said, is not only practical but would also help eliminate difficult-to-settle situations, is being considered by the NFL owners during their winter meetings here.

Meanwhile, the same official who spearheaded the drive appeared in the works, with a report that Eugene Klein has put his San Diego Chargers up for sale because of his failing health and also because of the prospect of reaping a large profit from the transaction.

Klein has returned to San Diego and a spokesman said the owner may speak on the subject Thursday. Klein, who has suffered two heart attacks within the past two years, needed a group which bought the team for $16 million in 1986.

The two franchises sold this week went for: $26 million, in the case of the Dallas Cowboys, and $25 million for the Denver Broncos. The price for the Redskins included $25 million for the remaining 60 years of the team’s lease on Texas Stadium.

Gibbs explained his support for an instant replay review, said: “When a batted call is made, television runs it again and again for everybody to see. They (television crews) feel they have to present that side of it, say Look, they blew this.”

“I think what we have to do is give the referees all the help we can. The game goes so fast. I just think we need to move in the direction of using instant replay.”

The official would review only controversial calls on charge-of-passing plays, such as fumbles, and sideline and endline calls.

The United States Football League does not use instant replays but places observers in the press box to monitor calls on the field.

Gibbs said of his proposal: “I push on this in the includes two considerations, that it would not cost a lot of money and that it would not slow down the game.”

“There have been many different proposals for using the instant replay but most would have required a great number of cameras and therefore would have slowed the game.”

Under his proposal, the official would watch the video replay the same as would television viewers — in real time. The game was being broadcast live or taped for later replay.

Gibbs said it was extremely important that the replay equipment be installed at sports stadiums to make sure the calls could be reviewed quickly.

“We can’t slow it down or we’re dead,” he said.

Under his proposal, Gibbs said, the plays would be reviewed immediately in the booth and he only came in to override disputed calls, it might happen only once or twice a game.

“I don’t think it would disrupt the continuity.”

Saluki seniors (from left) Murph Mellon, John Levy, Kevin Mazeika and Herb Voss will each see an end to four-year SIU-C gymnastics career when the Salukis complete at the NCAA national championships.

“Then I landed off the high bar against Nebraska and the crowd went ballistic,” Levy said. “That was the best feeling of my whole life.”

Up until this season, Levy, from Fayetteville, N.Y., had spent the majority of his collegiate career in the shadows of former Saluki Brian Babcock. Levy, though, said he seen things a little different.

“Basically,” Levy said, “I need a rent. I’ve been going crazy for the past four years. But the thing I will miss is not being to compete with a team anymore.”

Levy said that his ankle had needed surgery since high school and that he’ll finally get the chance to get it fixed this summer. But Levy doesn’t plan on staying out of gymnastics for long. He said he will graduate school at SIU-C and continue working out with the team.

“My GOAL is to make the national team,” Levy said. “I’ll work for that goal as long as I can.”

Babcock, already a member of the USA National team, graduated from SIU-C last year, and is sympathetic toward the four graduates.

“I’m sure it’s going to be an emotional thing when we’re coming to an end of their gymnastics careers,” Babcock said. “It’s different because I’m still competing.”

Babcock will travel to Hawaii in two weeks to compete with five other U.S. gymnasts against the People’s Republic of China.

The most quiet of the four graduates would have to be Eugene Klein, from Houston. His four years at SIU-C have been filled with success but he knows the feeling of being a member of the Salukis.

However, the most quiet and proud to have been a member of a team that has accomplished so much at SIU-C. And now we’re headed for the national championships and I’m going to be a part of it.”

THE DRIVING FORCE behind the SIU-C gymnastics team, as well as hundreds of other gymnasts in his 20-year span as SIU-C head coach, is Bill Neville. He’s seen gymnastics come and go, some for two weeks and others for five or six years. He knows the feeling a gymnast goes through when it’s time to quit.

“When you put in the hours they put in,” Neville said. “Four hours a day, six days a week and for four years, along with academic work and having to deal with the wounds, you know it’s hard to quit, but that’s the way the sport of gymnastics is and hard work for a long period of time.”

Careers to end for four at NCAA championships

More than a season will end April 14-16 at the NCAA national championships for the SIU-C men’s gymnastics team.

The life-long performing for four years at SIU-C hit John Levy, Herb Voss, Kevin Mazeika and Murph Mellon at their last home meet, March 9 against Penn State.

“It means a lot to know that this is the end of my gymnastics career,” pemmel horse worker Voss said. “On our last run into to Houston, Kevin and I were driving around in Texas and we know that this was it for us. It was a good time to reflects on the successful SIU-C teams we were on.”

Mazeika, a senior from Houston, was a little more frank.

“You went too fast,” Mazeika said.

But one thing for sure is that this was a good team that helped coach each other, and you can’t beat that.

LEVY’S FAVORITE memory is of Feb. 28 at the Arena, when he delighted a crowd of about 1,000 people with his floor performance that beat the Nebraska Cornhuskers, the five-time defending national champions.

“Then I landed off the high bar against Nebraska and the crowd went ballistic,” Levy said. “That was the best feeling of my whole life.”

Jones seeks leader for Salukis

To be cool, especially in the arena of sport, is considered to be an attribute. In the case of the last Saluki baseball team, Saluki Coach Ichky Jones is hoping it doesn’t turn out to be a liability.

The 5-8 Salukis displayed more versatility and depth last year’s 12-18 team — among both the position players and the pitching staff — in Florida last week, but Jones came away concerned about his team’s lack of leadership and intensity.

He is looking for someone to ignite a spark under the tails of the Salukis.

“We need someone, who’ll encourage their teammates and put them in the back when it’s needed,” Jones said.

“You kids today aren’t leaders. In Little League, they’re given the equipment and are encouraged to be the ballpark.

“Then if they win the game, their parents take them to the Dairy Queen. And if they lose, they still go to the Dairy Queen.”

Jones has enough genuine confidence in his squad that he thinks it can win the Missouri Valley Conference and go to the College World Series “if we do things right,” he said.

“These kids were never in Omaha (Neb., site of the Serenis, though, and I don’t see how a once-in-a-lifetime thrill that is,” Jones said.

“They just care about the game.”

Mike Blumbhorst, one of three starting seniors along with Scott Bridges and transfer Greg Severin, got a swift of post-season play his freshman year at SIU-C, advanced to the regionals of the NCAA tournament.

“I’ll tell you what,” Blumbhorst said, “it was the best feeling I’ve had in baseball. He’s (Jones) probably more into baseball, its fun, you feel good about about Omaha. If you’ve been there, you understand.

“Sometimes I’m too laid back,” Blumbhorst said. “I need to be more aggressive. I think the leadership will come along as we work later this time.

Scott Bridgess returns his batting skills during the Salukis’ practice Wednesday at the Arena. The senior left fielder, who earned Team West Valley Player honors last year, hit .283 for SIU-C in his spring trip to Florida last week.
