Study pinpoints acid rain solutions

By Lisa Miller
Staff Writer

A filtering process could be used to remove sulfur dioxide from Southern Illinois coal smoke, reducing acid rain and producing more state jobs, according to a University study.

The U.S. Department of Energy selected SIU-C to do the study, determining the economic impact of proposals to reduce acid rain caused by sulfur dioxide emissions when coal is burned.

David Arey, assistant director of the Coal Research Center, said the University was chosen because it is the heart of the state's coal mining region.

Jarret Koscianski, economics graduate student, and Arey completed the analysis in January.

Acid rain primarily is caused by emissions of sulfur dioxide from coal into the atmosphere. The acid emitted in factory smoke, rises to the clouds and comes down with the rain. Acid rain corrodes buildings and pollutes streams and lakes and the animal life in them, Arey said.

Coal is the leading source of energy in the United States and Southern Illinois provides 85 percent of the nation's coal, Arey said.

Several bills have been introduced in Congress in past years to solve the environmental problem of reducing acid rain. To reduce acid rain, the sulfur dioxide

Drug testing OK'd by Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (SPNS) — The Supreme Court, in its first rulings on drug testing in the workplace, held Tuesday that some workers in sensitive government posts and some railroaders in safety-sensitive jobs can be forced to undergo drug tests.

The justices ruled 7-2 that federal regulations requiring blood and urine tests for train crews involved in accidents serve compelling government interests that "outweigh employees' privacy concerns" even when there's no suspicion of drug or alcohol use.

In a separate 5-4 opinion, the justices cited similar reasons for upholding U.S. Customs Service rules that require drug tests for employees who want to work in drug interdiction or hold jobs in which they carry guns.

The justices, however, asked a lower court to study if the Customs Service is justified in requiring drug tests for workers seeking jobs that require handling "classified" material.

The two decisions start what is expected to be a string of Supreme Court decisions defining the limits of workplace drug testing under the Fourth Amendment's prohibition against "unreasonable searches."

The court already is weighing whether railroads can require drug testing as

Simon's competition seeks GOP nomination to Senate

By Daniel Wallenberg
Staff Writer

The first Republican to publicly announce plans to seek the senatorial seat currently held by U.S. Sen. Paul Simon said Simon would be vulnerable in a campaign for the seat.

An exploratory committee has been formed by a Chicago businessman to seek the Republican nomination to oppose Simon in his yet-to-be-announced bid for the U.S. Senate in 1990.

Simon, D-Makanda, announced earlier this year that his candidacy for a second term as senator was not official but was a "safe bet" and that an official announcement would be made late this year.

Gary E. MacDougal, 52, is the former board chairman of Mark Controls Corp. in Skokie, a building control management company, and is seeking support from state Republicans for the nomination.

MacDougal has never held an elected office but has worked on various political campaigns, including a national adviser position to President George Bush's campaign, Nancy Schiller, a

Gasoline tax hike fuels local debate

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

Debate over a proposed 1-cent gas tax increase fueled the City Council meeting Tuesday night as the council split support for the increase.

Councilmen John Yow and John Mills agreed that a 2-cent increase on the food and beverage tax would provide the necessary funds for a northern bypass study without placing a burden on the gas stations.

A 1-cent increase is estimated to generate $135,000 in funds.

"A gas tax should be the last resort," Yow said. He added that certain areas of the city's budget could be cut back to obtain the funds for the study.

However Councilman Keith Tuxhorn disagreed.

"A food and beverage tax is not being specific," Tuxhorn said. "Let's put a road-related tax on a road-related business."

Greg Veech, representing Veech Oil, told the council that "the public would rather pay a tax on a luxury item than on a commodity such as gasoline."

He added that it was unfair to make the consumers and gas dealers fund a road that would not benefit them.

The owner of Cochran's

Amoco and Gas Tyme, 1107 W. Main, said he was already operating at a loss.

"Where is that cent going to come from?" Mike Cochran asked the council.

Cochran added that competition is a major aspect of the gasoline industry and making up a couple of cents can make a big difference.

"I don't know too many businesses that can withstand that kind of loss," he added.

Tuxhorn said with 19 gas stations in Carbondale and 75 restaurants and bars the gas tax would offend less people.

"I don't think one penny on the gallon is going to make that much difference," he said.

Mills said he was concerned that the gas stations might go out of business because of the extra tax.

The council approved a recommendation for a study of a road north of Carbondale that would route traffic around the city rather than through it. The Illinois Department of Transportation agreed to fund 50 percent of the study by fiscal year 1991.

Councilman Richard Morris did not comment on the proposal by 9:30 p.m.

The council will further discuss the proposal at its next meeting March 28.

Number of toxic accidents no surprise to Illinois EPA

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

Environmental Protection Agency officials in Springfield are not surprised that Illinois, according to a recent study, leads the nation in the number of railroad accidents involving toxic chemical spills.

"That's not a big surprise to us here in the agency, because Illinois has more railroad tracks than any other state in the nation," Will Flower, spokesman for the EPA, said.

The study by the Illinois Public Action Council said 49 railroad accidents involving toxic spills occurred in 1987, up four from 1986 and seven times greater than the national average, Robert Creamer, executive director of IPAC, said.

Flower said the reason Illinois probably has the highest spill rate is because trains and trucks carrying toxic chemicals from all over

Irish soldiers serving U.N. die in Lebanon mine blast

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Three Irish soldiers serving with the U.N. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon were killed Tuesday by an exploding land mine as rival Christian and Moslem forces fought in Beirut for a ninth day, authorities said. "Three Irish soldiers were at 9:30 a.m. on a routine trip between U.N. positions, when their truck ran over a mine. Two of them were killed instantly and one severely wounded died later," said Patrick Koejha, a spokesman for the U.N. Interim Forces in southern Lebanon.

Afghan rebels retreat from Jalalabad airport

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Heavy bombing by Afghan warplanes killed six guerrillas Tuesday and forced U.S.-backed rebels to retreat from the airport at the besieged city of Jalalabad in eastern Afghanistan, rebel sources said. "The Mujahideen were forced out of the airport by heavy bombing but continued to attack regime troops west of the airport" on the 16th day of efforts to capture the strategic city, said one rebel source.

South African police fire on black protesters

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — Police used buckshot and tear gas Tuesday to disperse mobs of blacks stoning buses in a surge of township unrest marking the 29th anniversary of the "Sharpeville massacre" in which 69 blacks protesting apartheid laws died in police gunfire.

U.S., PLO ready for next meeting Wednesday

TUNIS, Tunisia (UPI) — The United States and the PLO will hold their first meeting Wednesday under the Bush administration, amid growing pressure in Israel for direct talks between the Jewish state and the Palestine Liberation Organization. The discussions will be the second official talks between the United States and the PLO.

Bush claims votes to kill minimum wage plan

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush, in a pre-emptive strike to promote his own proposal, said Tuesday he lined up enough support in the Senate to kill a Democratic plan to increase the minimum wage. Calling reporters into the Oval Office a day before the House was to consider the issue, Bush held up a letter with the signatures of 35 Republican senators and said it gave the administration the strength to sustain a presidential veto of any unacceptable minimum wage package.

Thrifths suffer major losses in late 1988

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The troubled savings and loan industry suffered $2.3 billion in losses in the fourth quarter of 1988, up from $1.8 billion in the third quarter, the Federal Home Loan Bank Board said Tuesday. "The problems in the industry continue to be heavily concentrated in the Southwest, though in fewer thrifths than last quarter since more troubled thrifths have been resolved or stabilized through bank board actions," said James Barth, chief board economist.

Unions try to tighten the screws on Lorenzo

MIAMI (UPI) — Eastern's unions sought Tuesday to tighten the economic screws on owner Frank Lorenzo by urging consumers to boycott Eastern and sister airline Continental, and by raising concerns about safety at strike-bound Eastern. In another development, Eastern proposed that its unions be included in a creditors committee expected to be formed Wednesday in the company's bankruptcy case.

Planned site for town hall may be big for building

PINCKNEYVILLE (UPI) — Local government is growing larger in this Southern Illinois town of 3,400 — larger, perhaps, than the town can handle. Mayor Joe Holder said Tuesday city officials have learned that a new 20,000 square-foot, $700,000 city hall, which they hope to have under construction by June 1 and finished by Christmas, might be too big to fit on the planned site.

Retiring museum curator returns to making art

By Kathleen DeBo
Staff Writer

After 23 years, Everett Johnson is letting go of one relationship and getting back to his true love.

His true love is art and he is letting go of his relationship with the University as the University Museum's art curator. He will retire March 31.

"I plan to go back to making art, which I haven't done for a number of years," he said.

Johnson said he especially enjoys painting, ceramics and working with metal.

"None of which I've been a master at, but over the years I've taught just about everything," he said.

Johnson said he also will be a consultant for other museums and state museum panels and plans to do some volunteer work.

At SIU-C, he has taught 20th century art history and filled in for an art faculty member one summer by teaching beginning ceramics.

He also has taught an introduction to museum technology course as part of the School of Art for the last 15 years, he said.

Johnson said, "Most people don't know anything at all about the inner workings of museums."

He said that one of the most important aspects of his job is the interaction with students. He learns from the students as they learn from him, he said.

He said he considers curating the most interesting aspect of his job, although he does some administrative work.

collections and bringing together the pieces for exhibits.

"Curating is hands-on, dealing with works of art as opposed to purely administrative work," he said.

His job also gives him opportunities for close, one-on-one contact with students, Johnson said.

"I've never tried to train students in connoisseurship. They become jacks of all trades, masters of none, which is what is needed at many small museums. That's the strength of our program," he said.

Johnson said his favorite exhibit is one that took almost two years to prepare and eventually traveled to the Smithsonian in Washington, D.C.

"Iron — Solid Rock, U.S.A. 1776-1976" covered 200 years of metal working in the United States.

"It was a very big project. We had conferences and workshops about it and it was nationally noticed. We could put it together because we had a good, solid core program in metals and a small museum," he said.

Johnson said it was the high point of the museum's activities while he was there.

He said metal-working is a hobby of his.

"It's a way of working off frustrations. I take them out on the anvil," he said.

He also has been interested in African metal-working.

"They have a metal-working tradition in Africa that goes back hundreds of years. It is quite sophisticated and the Western world hasn't paid much attention to it until recent years," Johnson said.

He said he would like to see the museum expanded to an entire building and not just tucked away in a corner of Rader where many students do not notice it.

"It takes donors and benefactors. I'd like to see the museum have an endowment, and not just be subject to the vagaries of state funding," he said.

More funding needs to be the museum's prime objective, Johnson said.

"We are preserving the heritage of the area, the history and the contemporary areas," he said.

Johnson said he would like to travel when he retires.

"I'd like to take my wife to the West Coast area. She's never been there," he said.

Johnson said he was a teacher and museum director at a college in Virginia when a friend recommended SIU-C approach him to be a curator.

"They (the University) approached me first, which is a little strange. That was in 1966," Johnson said.

The University at that time was similar to what it is now in size, but was a little more easy going because money was not as tight, Johnson said.

"The whole country was, economically, in a growth cycle," he said.

Former University President Delyte Morris had been president for several years and was instrumental in the University's growth, Johnson said.

Stricter gun control should include rifles

A RECENT PROPOSAL to the Illinois Legislature for stricter handgun laws is definitely a step in the right direction, but without extending the restrictions to rifles, the proposal misses the target.

The proposal calls for handgun owners to obtain a new Handgun Owner's Identification Card from the State Police Department. The cards would cost $10 and be valid for three years. Handgun owners also would have to provide the serial number and a description of their handguns.

Applicants for new handgun permits would sign a waiver giving State Police the authority to conduct a background investigation for up to 90 days, including a check of records at public and private mental health facilities. Former patients of mental institutions would be prohibited from getting a gun owners card.

BUT NO MENTION of rifles. What about the stores that allow anyone 18 or older to walk in and buy an AK-47?

Obviously if there is to be such a restriction on the registration and purchase of handguns — and there should be — it also should apply to rifles.

Presently, there is little control over the sale of these types of rifles in most states, and no practical purpose (except maybe killing sprees) for their use.

STRICTER CONTROLS on these guns does not mean that hunters and sportsmen have to surrender their weapons and find new hobbies. But there must be some control — something to deter potential mass murderers and drug dealers from purchasing these weapons so easily.

Perhaps some oppose this type of law because their guns or rifles were not purchased legally or registered properly. These people could be allowed a choice of legally registering themselves and their guns, or surrendering them to authorities.

The ease with which one can purchase an automatic weapon makes it too convenient for people with less than honorable intentions to possess them.

Society would best be served by a total ban on production and sales of automatic rifles.

ALTHOUGH THIS WOULD not apply to rifles already owned legally, it would greatly reduce the number that turn up on the street.

Many argue that this would be unfair to firearms dealers, but it would likely only increase the purchase of other weapons. And if stricter laws are passed to regulate the sale of rifles, the majority of people who buy them probably would not bother with the paperwork required to own one anyway.

Another argument is that criminals and drug dealers would obtain the weapons anyway. Probably. But if there are less weapons available, the chances of them being in the possession of a criminal or a psychopath are reduced.

OUTLAWING SOMETHING dangerous does not mean that constitutional rights have been violated or that our freedoms will be taken away as some radicals argue. Many dangerous drugs and chemicals have been declared illegal, yet the alcohol and tobacco industries still flourish.

Banning a few types of firearms does not mean Americans would lose their "right to bear arms." But some narcotics officer or child on a playground might not lose their life.

Opinions from elsewhere

Test scores show that U.S. public schools are woefully inferior to those of competing nations — but what is the best way to improve them? A study by a University of Illinois education professor and a researcher from the U.S. Department of Education reaches a surprising conclusion: Today's school districts may be too big for their own good.

Herbert Walberg and William Fowler Jr. reviewed hundreds of empirical studies of school districts. They found "insignificant relationships between spending levels and student outcomes"; in other words, schools that spent more did not produce better academic results.

But, on the other hand, the researchers found that student test scores were higher in small school districts than in large ones — even after adjusting for the students' social and economic backgrounds. Thus the "consolidation of districts into larger units that has been taking place for the past half century may have been a move in the wrong direction."

Walberg and Fowler suggest that smaller districts may enjoy advantages in "the absence of bureaucratic layers and administrative complexity, teacher involvement in decision-making, and close home-school relations." School boards everywhere should take note.

Non-sexist language requires respect for others, their views

I am writing to voice my support of Joy Morris' call for the use of non-sexist language. Her letter (Jan. 30) outlines six excuses given to her by faculty and students who, it can be assumed, currently perpetuate the use of sexist language.

Ms. Morris' detractors have characterized her as being "obsessive and paranoid" (Tim Bird, Feb. 9), and by inference, "self-righteous" and "frustrated" (Steve Harvey, Feb. 6). Mr. Harvey calls for a societal reevaluation of attitudes, implemented through a dialogue premised on "open communication" and use of "compelling arguments." Ms. Morris is presenting us with just such a format, and yet she is subjected to derogatory remarks aimed at her personality and criticism aimed at her choice of venue and style of presentation.

The use of non-sexist language is premised first and foremost upon respect for the rights of others to their views, respect for the experiences and perceptions of others, respect for the feelings of others, and ultimately, respect for the humanness of all other persons regardless of the bodily characteristics of any individual.

That Ms. Morris cannot state her views without incurring such an attack demonstrates the degree to which sexism permeates our language and thoughts. She was not treated with the respect that should be afforded all human beings. Instead, she was treated as a stereotype (that of the stereotypical hysterical woman). This society (and this University) is not only sexist, but more frequently misogynistic. Sexist language, by extension, is not only sexist, but also misogynistic.

During the Civil Right unrest of the late-50s and 60s, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. made an important distinction regarding civil rights. King declared that the denial of basic constitutional rights to African-Americans superseded the realm of basic legal rights must be an extension of human rights, and he recognized the ties between racism and poverty, segregation and subjugation.

Sexism, in turn, is linked to violence against women, and the economic subjugation of women. Sexist language is one too used to maintain these conditions — conditions which continue to be the status quo in this sexist society. Ms. Morris is right to act when she perceives sexism; it is morally right for us to do so.

Our society is built upon the greatest guarantor of freedom ever devised, yet we so take our freedoms for granted that we fail to recognize the foundation of human dignity and human rights upon which our civil rights must by necessity be based.

We see color and we see gender where we should see only humanity. When we use sexist or racist language, we fail to affirm our commitment to pursue our constitutional ideal. Mr. Harvey is correct when he asserts that social injustices and inequities are corrected through changes in attitudes. It is equally true, however, that those attitudes must first be brought to the surface. I admire Ms. Morris for her courage in addressing those very attitudes. — Todd Hedinger, graduate student, educational psychology.

Students' needs important in election

This April, undergraduate students here at SIU-C will have the unique opportunity of electing a new student body president. The Undergraduate Student Government and its members have the responsibility each year of keeping student interests our front.

The student body president is an elected representative of the students in much the same manner as the President of the United States is an elected representative of Americans.

The USG is faced with the responsibility of voicing the concerns of students on many issues during the year. Spring elections is a testing ground for those who seek approval from fellow classmates for their efforts in making this University a better place for everyone. With so many diverse cultures and social differences at a university this size, the task is an even greater one.

Each integral part that makes up university life here plays an important factor for one seeking the office of student body president. The student's needs are great and diverse, and determining those needs takes careful consideration. The past events during the fall semester of 1988 should leave fresh in students' minds the need for change.

The impeachment wars of last year and the refusal of several senators to resign themselves for the good of the student body in evidence enough that change is needed. The student body is aware of this and feels the need. It will be the job of every candidate running to ensure the student electorate of their willingness and commitment to enact and implement changes.

There are many constituencies and interest groups at SIU-C and the task of defining and identifying them is an important step to winning the election. There are more than 20,000 undergraduate students here and each one of them is important. There are hundreds of registered Student Organization on campus, and every one of them will play an important part in determining the outcome of this year's election.

Personal needs of students such as financial aid, learning facilities, health services, entertainment, sports, and recreation must also be taken into consideration by the candidates. Students with these and other concerns must be addressed when candidates are campaigning for the right to represent them. — Brian Skinner, senior, public relations, and Chuck Hagerman, senior biology.

A EDITOR'S LETTER TO YOU

Solution to racism and neglect is money, autonomy for BAS

INSTITUTIONS OF higher education are designed to produce well-rounded intelligent individuals who are capable of functioning in society. If this is the premise of SIU-C it should teach all aspects of a course of study.

With regard to history, the Black American Studies Program is designed to broaden the scope of the study of Western civilization.

Black American Studies is essential for having a complete understanding of the history of all ethnic origins. Its purpose is not to segregate, but to recognize the contributions of African civilization to its Western counterpart, broadening our view of Western civilization in the process. Yet the need for this program has been under attack since 1983, as evidenced by the denial of tenure and forced resignation of faculty coupled with the downgrading of two BAS courses.

The first question is who is responsible for such racist attacks against the historical, cultural and social contributions of African Americans? The answer is the administration of SIU.

THE ADMINISTRATION has hypocritically stated that it is committed to the goal of establishing and developing a viable and successful BAS program, while it has in fact gutted the program.

The administration has attempted to deflect criticisms and accusation of racism by three methods:

1. Strategic placement of black administrators in

Viewpoint

positions to serve as "buffers" to mask cultural chauvinism.

2. The administration collects information that will serve no practical purpose. The University hired Northwestern University educator Jan Carew to investigate the BAS program and make a consultant report regarding the future of BAS. Carew submitted his report but now the University has appointed a task force without money.

IF A TASK force is to be the salvation of BAS it must be empowered with decision-making authority by including Guyon, Pettit, Benjamin A. Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and research, and the money to follow through with its decisions.

3. The administration claims support for a viable BAS program. Yet in six years BAS has sunk from three full-time faculty to zero after this semester.

The African American Studies Association was formed to hold the administration accountable for its actions and responsible for fulfilling its academic mission.

THE ASSOCIATION'S recommendations are as follows:

■ Black American Studies renamed African American Studies to give closer identification to cultural roots.

■ Autonomy for the program by separating it from the College of Human Resources and linking it directly to the president's office.

■ A director and three tenure track teachers for the program.

■ The building or acquisition of an African American cultural center. This will provide students with an opportunity to learn more about the African American culture. Only by shallow-minded individuals could this be conceived as segregation.

REINSTATE THE BAS courses "Introduction to Black America" and "The Third World: The African Model."

■ Enforce Affirmative Action for people of color in career-related jobs on campus and immediate resignation of Seymour Bryson, assistant to the president for affirmative action.

The students must abandon their apathetic attitudes and take a stand not only letting their voices be heard but also by demanding immediate change.

Franz Mullings is coordinator of the African American Studies Association and a senior in biological sciences.

Progress in revitalizing BAS helped by task force and ads

GOOD PROGRESS is being made by efforts to revitalize the Black American Studies Program. Advertisements for open positions in the program have appeared in "The Chronicle of Higher Education" and "Black Issues in Higher Education." In response to the ads, eleven applications have been received from external candidates.

The task force charged to recommend on the mission, scope and administrative focus of the program is making excellent progress. I have attended several meetings with the task force and its chairman Jim Scales, and our thinking concerning the future of the program has much in common.

The task force has attempted to conduct a systematic analysis of several aspects of the program and deserves special credit for doing so. The notion to hold open meetings for wide input by the students was a good idea and will give added credibility to the task force's report.

I ANTICIPATE receiving the final report in mid-April. Some of the recommendations in the report may be implemented as early as the beginning of the fall semester.

The first closing date on the search for a coordinator, and possibly faculty, will end on April 15. However, the ad carried the caveat that the search would remain open until the positions have been filled.

Based on the size and quality of the existing applicant pool, I am confident that we will interview for the coordinator position, and possibly receive a commitment, before the ends of spring semester.

College of Human Resources Dean Anthony Cuvo and I have agreed on the representation for the search committee, and except for the student representatives, committee members have been identified.

SCREENING OF the applicant pool for acceptable candidates for the coordinator position will be completed not later than the end of the third week of April.

The major issues to be addressed as the program is revitalized are: (1) the academic stature of the program; (2) the visibility of the program (i.e., its administrative locus); and (3) the scope of the program, which includes consideration of including BAS courses in the General Education requirement.

These issues will be addressed in the report by the task force. The recommendations by the task force will significantly influence my thinking, and presumably that of the coordinator, on the future of the program at SIU-C.

THE CHALLENGE is to identify a productive niche within the University for Black American Studies, where it can complement our existing efforts to better serve the minority populations on campus and where it can function as a high quality activity of which we can all be proud.

President Guyon has approved the concept of revitalization and is supportive. I am excited about the prospects for the program and wish to thank everyone who has helped to advance it. I am especially grateful to Jim Scales and the task force members for the dedication and openness shown while developing recommendations on the program.

Benjamin A. Shepherd is vice president for academic affairs and research.

Council looks at hindered health care problems

Elderly services
nearing uncertain
financial future

By Tracy Sargeant
Staff Writer

More funding from the state is needed for education and health services, Illinois politicians and government agency officials said at the Carbondale City Council meeting.

At the council's meeting Monday, Eli Lipschultz, regional program director for the Department of Health and Human Services, several programs face uncertain futures because of funding problems. The programs in question include elderly health care insurance, continued care for the elderly and educational programs.

These issues also have been hindered by problems including a mixed set of values between departments, individualistic sets of ideas concerning program authority and lack of proper communications of information between state and local agencies.

Lipschultz proposed to correct these stumbling blocks by having the state become more involved in interdependence with local governments, and ultimately share common resources necessary to both through better relations and communications.

A spokesman for U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-Ill., placed emphasis on education and human services. He said also that there is a push for larger educational basis.

Ed Jacobson, Illinois director of the department of public aid, said he was pleased with the new emphasis on educational programs by the state, but cited the need for further public aid benefits for young parents.

State Sen. Ralph Dunn, R-Du Quoin, supported the expansion and development of human service programs with "focus on drug education and prevention starting at the elementary levels."

Proposed funding for such programs includes an increase of 18 cents-per pack in cigarette tax, which would amount to about $180 million.

Janet Moore, regional health officer for the Illinois Department of Public Health, said she supports the tax and would like to see more restrictions on indoor smoking in public places.

Moore cited health problems tied to smoking, and said she would like to see a tobacco-free society by the year 2000.

Janet Proctor, acting director of the Egyptian Area Agency on Aging, said there is a need for new and better diagnostic center for Alzheimer's disease in Southern Illinois. She also said funding for elderly abuse programs is lacking.

"It's at a zero level and the number of abuse cases are still rising," Proctor said.

Faculty member calls for football program's end

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

Jerome S. Handler, anthropology faculty member, asked the Faculty Senate to reconsider the social and economic value of SIUC's football program, and to take a stand on discontinuing the program.

"I want to bash football - knock it out of SIUC," Handler said, at Tuesday afternoon's senate meeting.

Using data gathered from University services and from long-standing faculty members, Handler presented tables that showed the SIUC football program to be a consistent money loser.

According to Handler's tables, over the past seven years the football program has cost the University $6 million, and revenue taken in has only totaled $2 million.

"This is a $4 million loss," Handler said.

Handler said the football program does not increase the University's prestige factor, since the schools SIUC plays are not the University's size or academic equal.

"These games do not give us any national or local coverage or publicity," he said.

Taillighting perpetuates the University's party image, Handler said.

Handler called the elimination of alcoholic beverages at the Carbondale Boat Regatta "hypocrisy" when compared to the encouragement given to taillighting before football games.

Faculty Senate President Donald D. Paige referred the matter to the senate's executive committee to review Handler's propositions.

The senate also discussed the possibility of revising the publishing method of the Faculty Handbook and the review of the University Honors Program.

SIUC President John C. Guyon asked the senate to consider taking a favorable position on the week-long fall break proposed to eliminate Carbondale's Halloween street party.

Vrdolyak, Evans in debate; Daley decides to sit it out

CHICAGO (UPI) — Republican Edward R. Vrdolyak and Alderman Timothy C. Evans, candidate of the Harold Washington Party, juggled their schedules Tuesday in advance of a televised debate as frontrunning Democrat Richard M. Daley prepared to sit out the event.

Hours before the debate, to be broadcast at 7 p.m. on public television station WTTW-TV Channel 11, state Sen. Walter Dudyecz, R-Chicago, co-manager of Vrdolyak's campaign, downplayed Daley's absence and hinted the debate might be followed by an Evans withdrawal.

"We hear that if he does not show he is rising, that his campaign is gaining, he is prepared to drop out by this weekend," Dudyecz said.

"This is a very important debate regardless of the third candidate not being there.

Chicago ELECTION '89

Anything can happen in Chicago.

Evans, who cancelled a luncheon appearance before the Union League Club to prepare for the debate, denied he would exit the race.

The two most recent polls show Daley leading Evans and Vrdolyak in the April 4 general election by wide margins. A WLS-TV Channel 7 poll showed Daley with 53 percent, Evans with 36 percent and Vrdolyak with 5 percent. A second poll, conducted for WBBM-TV Channel 2, showed Daley with 50 percent, Evans with 30 percent and Vrdolyak at 6 percent.

Daley also led in fundraising efforts, having amassed more than $5 million since he launched his campaign Dec. 5, 1988. Evans has raised an estimated $223,000, while Vrdolyak's coffers have reached $42,000.

Before huddling with advisors to prepare for the debate, Vrdolyak made one appearance Tuesday at a Southwest Side parochial school, accusing Daley and Evans of supporting abortion, contraception and higher state income taxes.

He "won't be hindered at all" by Daley's absence from the debate, Vrdolyak said.

Dudyecz said he based his speculation about a prospective Evans withdrawal on the independent candidate's inability to raise campaign funds and on political problems the Evans bid is causing one of his key supporters, Jesse Jackson, the Chicago civil rights leader and a 1988 Democratic presidential aspirant.

Inflation suffers temporary dive

WASHINGTON (SHNS) — The inflation express slowed down a bit last month, but few economists are ready to predict that rising prices will begin to level off any time soon.

The more likely prospect is a perils-of-Pauline scenario in which inflation will roar through the economy one month and then appear to chug along at a more moderate pace the next.

A report Tuesday by the Bureau of Labor Statistics that inflation for February was a modest 0.4 percent (about 5 percent on an annual basis) sparked a stock market rally and gratified the White House.

"These numbers are below market expectations and should help calm inflation fears ... Things are getting a little better," said White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Jerry Jasnowski, chief economist for the National Association of Manufacturers, saw stability in the new figures. "Fears of inflation accelerating out of control have proved premature," he said.

Others were less optimistic.

"We're going to get some more very strong numbers," Ben Laden, a private investment manager and former price analyst for the Federal Reserve Board, said. "Inflation has taken a turn for the worse."

Laden said he expects inflation and interest rates to keep rising until the job market cools and the economy shows signs of running out of steam this summer and fall.

"We are looking at potentially the worst inflationary bout since the late 1970s and early 1980s," said Alan Sinai, chief economist for the Boston Co. "It will require sharply higher interest rates and a potential recession to deal with it."

Experts may disagree on the severity of the current inflationary surge, but not on the trend toward higher prices:

— This will be the worst year for inflation since 1981. Consumer prices for January and February are up 6.1 percent on an annual basis.

— Producer prices, which help determine consumer prices, are up 12.6 percent on an annual basis so far this year.

— Oil prices have risen from about $14 a barrel to $20 a barrel in recent months, pushing up the cost of gasoline at the pump.

— Last summer's drought is reflected in higher food prices, especially higher meat prices.

— Medical costs continue to rise at a rapid rate, exceeding 7 percent over the past 12 months.

the nation pass through Illinois.

Creamer said toxic chemicals are transported throughout the state and that there are no specific areas in Illinois with high accident rates.

Spills can occur anywhere, Creamer said, whether it is caused by track defects, mechanical defects or natural causes, such as bad weather conditions.

Flower said accidents have occurred in East St. Louis, Cairo, Roodhouse and Belleville, where 150 families were evacuated in December 1987.

"Illinois is smack dab in the middle," Flower said. "We have the highest accident rate, but we also have the greatest exposure to toxic chemicals."

The study also found the number of spills nationwide rose 13 percent and that a greater number of spills involve the releasing of toxic material, Creamer said.

The rise in accidents can be traced primarily to railroad track and road bed defects, mechanical defects and human error, Creamer said.

Of the total accidents in 1987, Creamer said 53 percent were caused by mechanical defects and defects in the track and road beds. Thirty-three percent were caused by human error.

Creamer said railroad officials and workers have been "very lax" on repairing track and mechanical defects, despite warnings by agencies such as the Federal Railroad Administration.

Creamer said IPAC is pushing for stronger safety standards on the state and national level and is finding support from Rep. Clem Baianoff, D-Chicago, and Sen. Earlean Collins, D-Oak Park.

A bill submitted to the Illinois General Assembly and Congress would require that notifications be sent out to state officials about all chemical shipments by railroad and truck. Creamer said.

"Essentially, we concluded there's a very weak oversight on the part of the authorities," Creamer said. "We found that officials don't know what is on the trains until there is an accident."

"What's particularly scary is that often more than one type of toxic material is carried at once," Creamer said.

If an accident occurs with a train carrying more than one type of toxic chemical, there is a possibility for far more serious danger if the chemicals react or mix together, such as explosions, poisonous clouds and fire, Creamer said.

In 1987, about 15,000 gallons of sulfuric acid spilled out of a derailed train at Roodhouse, about 50 miles southwest of Springfield, Flower said. Authorities evacuated the area and worked about 17 hours to clean the spill.

If the spill had been worse, vapor clouds could have formed in the area, Flower said. The acid would have reacted with the moisture in the air and could have caused serious chemical burns to the lungs, throat and eyes.

"Every spill has the potential of becoming a catastrophe," Flower said.

Schiller said Simon has vulnerabilities which MacDougal could use to his advantage.

A campaign that points out Simon's liberal voting record and absence from the Senate floor while campaigning for last year's Democratic presidential nomination would benefit MacDougal, Schiller said.

Also a campaign similar to that of Bush against the Democratic presidential nominee Michael Dukakis would work against Simon, Schiller said.

Bush attacked the positions of Dukakis on defense issues during the presidential campaign and MacDougal could benefit from similar tactics against Simon and his national defense views, Schiller said.

Schiller said Illinois needs two full-time senators and has not had that with Simon in office.

Schiller said MacDougal would use a campaign tactic similar to one Simon used in his campaign against former Rep. Charles Percy in the 1984 senatorial election.

MacDougal would point out the time spent away from the Senate floor much the same way Simon did against Percy, Schiller said.

David Carle, a spokesman for Simon, said the people of Illinois would appreciate the national exposure Simon brought to the state while campaigning and to himself as a national leader.

Carle said attacks on Simon's loyalty to the state would have difficulty because of the record Simon has meeting with his constituents.

Schiller said MacDougal's time spent in the private business world and as the chairman of a large corporation has given him the ability to create jobs, an ability that would benefit

Southern Illinois, Schiller said.

Simon has not been able to address the problem of unemployment in Southern Illinois, Schiller said.

Creating jobs for the people of Southern Illinois is an area where MacDougal could gain support, Schiller said.

Carle said Simon has worked on bringing jobs in Southern Illinois and the state through the state's Economic Development Task Force.

must be removed from the coal.

"The coal in Southern Illinois is a very high sulfur coal and if the government decides to replace all the high sulfur coal with low sulfur coal, 50,000 people could lose their jobs," Koscianski said.

The Southern Illinois economy will be in serious danger if the legislature passes a bill calling for sulfur dioxide emissions to be controlled, Koscianski said.

Three solutions exist to reduce sulfur dioxide:

■ Use low sulfur coal.

■ Mixing high- and low-sulfur coal. "Mixing the coals would help the environment somewhat, but it would not eliminate the problem completely," Arey said. "It would reduce the acidity of the rain by about 25 percent."

■ Using scrubbers, which are purifying filters that are placed in smokestacks where sulfur dioxide is emitted, Arey said. Scrubbers would trap the impurities that sulfur dioxide puts out and would reduce the acid by more than 50 percent, he said.

Using scrubbers is perhaps the best, but most expensive method, Koscianski said.

However, use of scrubbers would create more than 2,000 new jobs in Southern Illinois, she said. "The maintenance and installment workers can be added to the (state) payroll if scrubbers are installed."

part of routine medical examinations or if the tests must be subject to collective bargaining in labor contracts.

A ruling is expected soon in a union lawsuit against Conrail, which the justices agreed to hear last fall before the Transportation Department ordered random drug tests for 4 million transportation workers from airline employees to truckers and railroaders in the government's first anti-drug foray into private industry.

Attorney General Dick Thornburgh hailed both decisions as "plain good sense" but acknowledged they "do not speak to the even more challenging issues in cases involving random drug testing."

Writing for the court, Justice Anthony Kennedy said, "The government interest in testing without a showing of individual suspicion is compelling. Employees subject to the tests discharge duties fraught with such risks of injury to others that even a momentary lapse of attention can have disastrous consequences."

Flag- burning case raises freedom questions

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The lawyer for a man sentenced to prison for burning the American flag told the Supreme Court Tuesday that the Texas law against such action strikes at the heart of First Amendment protections for unpopular speech.

Noted civil liberties attorney William Kunstler presented his argument in a case brought by the state of Texas, which is seeking to reinstate a one-year prison term given to a protester who burned the flag during a rally against Reagan administration policies.

The demonstrator, Gregory Lee Johnson, was convicted under a Texas statute prohibiting someone from desecrating a national or state flag in a way that would "seriously offend" observers.

The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals ruled on April 20, 1988, that Johnson's protest was a legitimate act of dissent protected under the First Amendment guarantee of free speech and expression.

Kunstler said framers of the Constitution never intended to exempt views that might be regarded as unpopular or distasteful from the First Amendment.

"The right to hear things, to see things that we hate, such as flag burnings ... test the First Amendment," Kunstler said. "We don't need a First Amendment for things that we like."

But Kathi Drew, assistant district attorney for Dallas County, Texas, noting that freedom of speech is not absolute, argued that the state had "compelling interests ... that will override this individual's symbolic speech rights."

One such interest, Drew said, is the "prevention of a breach of peace" or violence that could be sparked by flag burning.

"It is merely fortuitous — it is our good luck — that a breach of peace did not occur with the desecration of this flag," she said.

A second compelling interest of the state, Drew said, is the "preservation of the flag as a symbol of nationhood and national unity."

But Justice Antonin Scalia, a consistent conservative on the court, said he doubted that the desecration of the flag would "make it any less a national symbol."

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor asked whether a copy of the Constitution should be considered an even greater symbol of nationhood worthy of special treatment by the constitution.

"I was going to ask about the state flower," Scalia added to laughter.

Kunstler insisted that the case turns on a statute that "singles out communicative impact for punishment" and that the court had "no compelling interest worth considering."

As to the state's identification of the flag as a special sign of veneration and national unity, "it may have different meanings to other people out there," Kunstler said.

Brazil cargo plane crashes in slum killing 14

SAO PAULO, Brazil (UPI) — A cargo jet trying to make an emergency landing crashed in flames Tuesday in a crowded slum near Guarulhos International Airport, killing at least 14 people and injuring more than 200, officials said.

A Fire Department spokesman said rescuers sifting through the wreckage of dozens of houses destroyed by the crash feared the number of victims would rise.

The Transbrasil Airlines Boeing 707 crashed into the Jardim Ipanema slum about a mile and a half from the runway of the Guarulhos airport, which services Sao Paulo, at 11:54 a.m., the Aeronautics Ministry said.

The crash killed all three crew members on the plane and at least 11 on the ground, officials said. Firemen and public officials reported over 200 people were hurt, many burned by the plane's explosion. Victims were treated in five Sao Paulo hospitals.

About 80 fragile homes of planks and bricks in the Jardim Ipanema slum were either damaged or destroyed in the crash.

Witnesses said the jetliner was approaching the airport at low altitude when it appeared that one of its engines struck a building near the headquarters of the Concrebras construction firm.

The impact knocked the plane upward and to the left before it made a final plunge into Jardim Ipanema, the witnesses said.

"It was like a mass of fire coming at us that wanted to destroy us," said a 30-year-old woman who escaped the blast and requested anonymity.

Among the dead was a pregnant woman, Elisa Cunha, 23. Doctors delivered her baby but the infant died shortly after birth.

Airport spokeswoman Lucia Ferreira said the pilot of the plane, Dorivaldo Sianovachi, 39, asked the control tower for authorization to make an emergency landing just before the crash.

Woman has baby in subway

NEW YORK (UPI) — A 26-year-old pregnant subway rider, declaring "I am ready," gave birth Tuesday in the tool room of a bustling midtown Manhattan subway station with the help of two Transit Police officers.

The woman, Martha Davis, who is homeless, left a subway train during the morning rush hour and approached a token booth clerk in the Rockefeller Center station to say she was ready to give birth to her sixth child.

"Two TA officers assigned to the Emergency Medical Rescue unit responded" to help the woman, Al O'Leary, a Transit Police spokesman, said.

The two officers, Keith Rivers and Mike Pisciotta, whisked the woman to a tool room in the station where she gave birth to a girl, O'Leary said.

Mother and child were taken to Roosevelt Hospital where both were reported in good condition.

Of the delivery, Rivers said, "she did all the work" adding that an Emergency Medical Services unit cut the umbilical cord and transported the woman to the hospital.

Graduate students from the Department of Cinema and Photography are researching and copying photographs relating to the civil rights movement in Carbondale and Southern Illinois from 1955 through 1975.

Anyone interested in contributing images is invited to bring their photographs to the Eurnia C. Hayes Center, 441 E. Willow, from noon to 4 p.m. Saturday. Copying equipment will be set up.

Subject matter of the photographs could include anything from significant civil rights meetings and events to portraits and family snapshots showing the Black-African American community at the time.

The immediate goal of the project is to provide a copy of this photo history to the Carbondale Public Library and Morris Library's Special Collections.

Dramatic changes in math instruction proposed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — "Mathematics should focus more on problem-solving and real-world situations, the National Council of Teachers of Mathematics said Tuesday, in proposing sweeping changes in the way math is taught.

John Dossey, former council president and professor of mathematics at Illinois State University, said the traditional math instruction has focused mainly on drill and computation. The result has been poor performance in mathematics by American students compared with students from other countries, he said.

The council, Dossey said, spent two years developing guidelines on what students in kindergarten through grade 12 should know and be able to do mathematically.

"The major point of the standards is that if we wish for our students to develop the abilities to explore, to conjecture, and to reason logically in situations requiring the application of mathematics, then our curriculum must offer students opportunities relating to these goals," said Dossey.

"We can no longer allow drill and arithmetic computation to fill the curriculum," he added.

Instead of teaching junior high school students the mechanics of math, Dossey said, they may benefit more if they learned how many tickets they need to sell to their prom in order to break even and what the profit margin would be if they sold additional tickets.

"Knowledge of facts without the ability to apply them is like a hollow vessel," he said.

The group, in a 272-page document, recommended that:

- More class time be spent on problem-solving and less time on rote drill.

- Students learn how mathematical knowledge is applied to real-world situations in the home, in business, finance, engineering, science, human resources and the arts.

- Teachers encourage the use of calculators and computers so that more class time is spent on advanced mathematics and less on computation drills.

- Every high school graduate have a thorough knowledge of algebra, geometry, trigonometry, probability and statistics.

Albert Shanker, president of the American Federation of Teachers, praised the standards and noted, "Far too many youngsters manipulate numbers without ever understanding the principles or basic concepts behind their calculations."

"The standards capitalize on children's natural curiosity for solving problems, said Education Secretary Lauro Cavazos.

Work experience alternative to party beaches

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

The SIUC Extern program, in its fourth year, gave University students an opportunity to spend spring break in a different way.

The program supplied 88 students from four colleges externships from March 13 to 17, a week when hundreds of University students head for the beaches.

The purpose of the program is to provide students with hands-on experience in their respective majors prior to graduation.

Sponsors, usually employees or owners of businesses who remain in contact with the University, are solicited in the fall. Students are matched with sponsors in terms of proximity and field of study.

Patricia A. McNeil, assistant director of the Alumni Association, said five students could not be matched for lack of transportation.

The program, which began with 15 students in 1985, has increased 40 percent each year, McNeil said.

Jack Bass, of J. H. Bass and Associates of Carbondale, has sponsored externs for four years. A former University instructor, Bass said he appreciates the students who volunteer their time for an externship, but the program is a handicap for him.

"It primarily helps the student," he said. "It takes time out that could be beneficial for me to show them and help them learn. It has no financial bearing for me."

"But it's better than them spending their time down in Ft. Lauderdale. It may not sound as interesting, but it's worth it."

Bass sponsored Angela Nicholson, a senior engineering student. Nicholson said the externship gave her a glimpse at the kind of work she could be involved in after graduation.

"It let me know that this is what I want to go into for sure," Nicholson said.

The majority of the externs assumed positions without pay. The sponsor and the extern evaluate the program upon completion.

Instructor revamps GEB 202

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

GE-B 202 students will face a different grading scale and final exam format because of a bomb threat that canceled the midterm.

Eric Landrum, psychology lecturer, said that grading percentages will be based on 245 points instead of 325 points, and the final exam will be 120 comprehensive questions over lecture material.

Landrum said he made the Captain Kirk said no evidence of a bomb was found.

decision to alter the course after consulting with his teaching assistants. He said the bi-weekly quizzes cover the book material and that lecture questions are easier than book questions.

The midterm was dropped entirely because some students started on the test before the bomb threat was announced, and because of the difficulty of finding an alternative testing time, Landrum said.

"It's a nightmare trying to schedule a test for 1,300 students for a two-hour block of time at night," he said.

Captain Carl Kirk of the University Police, said campus police received an anonymous call at 6:40 p.m. on March 9 that said a bomb was set to go off in Lawson Hall. Landrum was notified of the threat, and canceled the midterm at 7:05, even though the test had already been distributed in some rooms.

Kirk said no evidence of a bomb was found.

Trident 2 Navy missile exploded, failed first test

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — A Trident 2 missile somersaulted end over end and exploded in a spectacular fireball four seconds after launch from a submarine Tuesday, in a major failure for the first sea test of the Navy's deadliest weapon system.

With a lone Soviet trawler on hand to witness the brief flight, the three-stage $26.5 million missile, carrying a load of dummy warheads, was fired from the USS Tennessee at 10:20 a.m. while the giant submarine was cruising submerged east of Cape Canaveral.

Propelled from one of the Tennessee's 24 missile tubes by a powerful charge of compressed gas, the first stage of the 126,000-pound solid-fuel missile ignited as planned seconds after the rocket cleared the ocean surface. Almost instantly, the big missile began cartwheeling through the sky, witnesses said.

"It went up just like normal, it popped out of the water and then it spiraled around twice and then it exploded," photographer Bill Mitchell said by radio telephone from an observation ship 5,000 yards from the submarine.

"It got about two missile lengths above the water. It was like the engine gimbaled over to one side and then it made two quick loops, end over end. It cartwheelled ... and then it exploded."

An Air Force spokesman, reading a statement, said the first stage fired as planned and that a "malfunction during first-stage powered flight" caused it to "veer off course."

"It self-destructed after about four seconds of flight," he said. "Exact cause of the malfunction can't be determined until telemetry data is studied."

It was the fourth failure of a Trident 2 test flight in 20 launches dating back to January 1987 and was especially disappointing to the Navy because it came during the first sea test of the new weapons system.

The 44-foot missiles are thought to have a maximum range of up to 6,900 miles, depending on how many warheads are carried, and they are believed to be so accurate they can deliver an independently targetable nuclear bomb to within 400 feet of a target.

Critics claim that with such pinpoint accuracy the Trident 2 could be used to knock out "hardened" enemy command posts and missile silos and as such, it should be viewed as a "first-strike" offensive weapon.

The launch Tuesday was the 20th test flight of a Trident 2, built by Lockheed Missiles and Space Co. of Sunnyvale, Calif., but the first from a submarine. The others were launched from a ground pad at the Cape Canaveral Air Force Station.

Mitchell said debris from the blast fell into the water near the submarine's location but Navy officials said the Tennessee was not damaged. In any case, the explosion created "lots of pieces" and a "mushroom cloud."

Protesters inspired by Trident missile failure

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (UPI) — The failure of a Trident 2 missile test Tuesday led to new demands from peace activists that nuclear weapons be abandoned and the money spent on children, the poor and the homeless.

A Trident 2 missile somersaulted and exploded in a fireball just four seconds after launch from a Trident submarine off Florida, a major failure for the first sea test of the Navy's deadliest weapon system.

The test came as members of Witness for Disarmament continued their ninth annual Holy Week march from New Haven to Electric Boat Division in Groton, where the ballistic missile firing Trident submarines are built.

"The juxtaposition is that the missiles we are putting so much faith in as a nation are failing and yet the continued resistance (by anti-nuclear protesters) shows where the true faith of people should be — a peaceful solution through dialogue," said John Hannan, of the Isaiah Peace Ministry.

Hannan, whose group is part of Witness for Disarmament, said marchers carrying a cross to Electric Boat would pray for an end to nuclear weapons outside the sprawling shipyard on Good Friday.

The failure of the Trident 2 missile, Hannan said, would help bring attention to the group's cause of funneling money used for weapons to social causes in the United States and around the world.

"The general reaction is that once again it is to show that dollars are being wasted on testing of weapons that are by all accounts hoped that nobody will ever use," he said.

"But it shows that if they are used they are completely unreliable and could result in the destruction of the world," said Hannan, who is monitoring the peace march from the protesters' New Haven headquarters.

Teens decide sexual norms

By George Monaghan
Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune

U.S. teen-agers are taking on the task their parents started several decades ago but couldn't finish, says a University of Minnesota sociologist.

They are completing the sexual revolution.

Teen-agers are moving away from the extremes of sexual thinking — complete abstinence on the one hand, random sexuality on the other — absolutist attitudes that sociologist Ira Reiss says are largely responsible for making the U.S. teen-age pregnancy rate the highest in the developed world.

Reiss has found that today's teen-agers appear to be coming up with their own sexual ethic. They are saying, in effect, that under certain circumstances, it's their right to have sex.

Even teen-agers who aren't sexually active say they see sexuality as a matter of personal choice rather than a behavior decided by adults.

"It is a feeling that is clear to them," says Reiss. "It may not be clear to their parents."

Although the new attitudes have not been precisely measured, they are widely recognized by experts and teen-agers themselves.

"I've found it doesn't make any difference whether the kids live in a big city or small town," said Lillian Rubin, a sociologist and psychologist at the University of California's Institute for the Study of Change.

Data collected in the early '60s showed that 20 percent of female teen-agers were having intercourse. By 1970 that figure jumped to 30 percent. By 1980, more than half the women were having intercourse before they were 17; 70 percent before they were 19. Now 80 percent are having intercourse before they are 19.

The United States, Reiss says, has the highest rates of AIDS, rape, child sexual abuse and teen-age pregnancy in the Western World because "we use the most simplistic, irrelevant morality for reasoning about a complex, difficult sexual situation, and it is dangerous. It can kill you. It can get you pregnant. It can give you all kinds of diseases.

It can make you feel very guilty.

"Now we are moving to complete the sexual revolution that we began in the '60s with an attitude revolution, a way of being more sophisticated about evaluating what's right and wrong sexually, and the only way we'll do that is by getting away from the view that abstinence is the only standard."

Evidence shows that more sophisticated attitudes are catching up with behavior. Sexually active teenage girls "are having more partners and more intercourse, and they are starting younger," Reiss said. Nevertheless, pregnancy rates among that group show a decline of 8 to 10 percent in pregnancies during the '80s.

"And that indicates one thing. They are more cautious. They are using contraception more effectively. They are not as effective as the Europeans, or even the Canadians, but they are going in that direction."

Scripps Howard News Service

Dakotas still separate, not equal

BISMARCK, N.D. (UPI) — A proposal to change North Dakota's name to "Dakota" died quietly with a vote of the state Legislature Tuesday, while to the south, a plan to merge North and South Dakota also was rejected.

The North Dakota Senate voted 36-15 to kill a resolution by Sen. Timothy Mathern, D-Fargo, that called for a statewide vote on the proposed name change. A companion resolution asking Congress to allow the change was defeated by voice vote.

Sen. Raymon Holmberg, R-Grand Forks, opposed the resolution and said changing the name of North Dakota would be akin to "fixing your dog."

In South Dakota, Gov.

George Mickelson Tuesday rejected a plan by a retired Sioux Falls history teacher to merge the two states.

"What would be accomplished by it?" Mickelson wondered.

But Clarence Barto, 75, said Congress made a big mistake creating North and South Dakota and it has hurt the states economically.

National Guard use unlikely in capital's drug-related war

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Bush administration temporarily ruled out Tuesday calling up the National Guard to fight rising drug-related violence in the nation's capital but will look at several other options, including creating a local-federal anti-drug strike force.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said calling up the National Guard or regular military troops "is most unlikely" and administration drug czar William Bennett called the report Bush was considering the option "just nonsense."

"It is not being considered in a way that is a live option at this point," Bennett told a news conference in Phoenix, where he is attending a weeklong conference of supervisors of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration and FBI.

"Five years from now, five months from now, maybe something will happen to reconsider. I never say never," he added.

But he said he disagreed with those who say law enforcement has not worked.

"One of the things we need to do is be sure that when we make the effort in law enforcement, that we are serious about the effort," he said. "I don't think we've really tried law enforcement to the degree we should have."

In Washington, an aide to Bennett said creation of a special strike force — one of the options under serious consideration — could possibly include members of the FBI or Drug Enforcement Administration and, with local police, hit the streets in drug-infested neighborhoods.

Bennett is expected to declare the capital a "high-intensity drug-trafficking area," so it would be eligible for federal assistance.

The New York Times reported Tuesday Bush is considering stern measures to curb the drug-related violence in Washington, including use of federal troops.

The newspaper said Bush is willing to consider calling out the National Guard, or using regular military troops, if district police are unable to stem a spiraling tide of shootings and murders.

There have been more than 100 homicides in the district this year, nearly twice as many as this time last year. The nation's capital had a record 372 slayings in 1988, the highest murder rate in the country.

A Bennett aide said the drug czar is expected to have a federal action plan for the district completed and in place within two weeks.

He said in addition to a local-federal strike force, it would likely provide additional prison space, possibly in now abandoned military facilities, more treatment centers and measures to safeguard public housing from drugs.

"The idea of federal leather on the streets of the District of Columbia is about as far from happening as can be — and still be in the realm of possibility," the Bennett aide said.

Bennett has said that persistent rumors of cocaine use by Washington Mayor Marion Barry is a complicating factor in coping with the city's drug problems.

Barry has denied any wrongdoing, but the local U.S. attorney's office is investigating his visits in November and December to the hotel room of a suspected drug dealer, a former city employee.

The Bush administration has not detailed how the National Guard might be used, except to point to the peace-keeping role it played during a period of racial unrest in Little Rock, Ark., in 1957.

The Guard, a state militia mostly equipped and funded by the federal government, is under control of the state governor unless the units are called to federal duty. In total, there are 450,000 men and women in 3,457 guard units across the nation.

Jackson wants GOP's voter registration stand

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Jesse Jackson, trying to spark moves to speed and simplify voter registration, told Republicans Tuesday that supporting the effort would be proof they were serious about reaching out to minorities.

The fiery civil rights leader and two-time Democratic presidential candidate added in testimony to a House subcommittee that establishing national procedures to allow people to register and vote on the same day would "for the first time...breathe life into the one-person, one-vote concept."

"Universal voter registration is neither pro-Democratic nor anti-Republican. It's neither liberal nor conservative, but rather represents the moral center," he told a House subcommittee considering voter registration bills.

Americans are

Democratic or Republican by choice, not by birth," he added.

Hoping to head off any potential GOP opposition to the same-day registration concept, Jackson reminded Republicans on the panel of the promises from President Bush and Republican National Committee Chairman Lee Atwater that the GOP will try to attract more blacks and other minorities to its ranks.

"It's my hope that the Republican members of this committee will follow the record of the national chairman in moving toward expansion of your party," he told Republicans on the House Administration subcommittee on Elections.

"There can be no clearer signal to send to disenfranchised voters than to support efforts to increase an inclusion in the political process," he said.

House approves legislation to protect federal informants

As the first substantive bill adopted in the 101st Congress, it cleared the Senate last week on a 97-0 vote and was approved by the House with a voice vote. President Bush is expected to sign the measure, nearly identical to legislation that was pocket-vetoed last year by former President Reagan.

"The only way you're going to find about (fraud) is if people on the inside can talk to us, and we can protect them," said Rep. Pat Schroeder, D-Colo., a major force behind the legislation.

Investigation on ethics continue through April

The House is scheduled to take its Easter recess next week and committee members, upon leaving town later this week, are not expected to return to Washington until the first week of April.

At the White House.

The bill's key features, fundamentally unchanged from the vetoed version, would establish a simpler and fairer standard for whistleblowers to prove retaliation by their bosses and would give them the right to appeal their own cases to the Merit Systems Protection Board if the government's Office of Special Counsel fails to do so.

When the bill was on the Senate floor, Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., termed federal employees who risk their jobs, families and health to expose waste and corruption the "frontline soldiers in the battle to save the taxpayers money."

The senator cited surveys indicating 70 percent of federal employees with knowledge of fraud do not report it because they fear retaliation.

The 1978 Civil Service Reform Act created the Office of Special Counsel to help protect whistleblowers, but Levin and other critics have denounced it as ineffectual. One former special counsel, William O'Connor, said he would tell employees: "Unless you're in a position to retire or are independently wealthy, I don't do it. Don't put your head up because it will be shot off."

Bush's administration won praise in Congress for its willingness to work out changes in the bill after Reagan's rejection. Attorney General Dick Thornburgh promised Levin to fight any attempt to alter an agreement on the legislation's content, and no changes were made during floor debate after final changes were worked out with the administration.

Puzzle answers

In a related development, ethics committee Chairman Julian Dixon, D-Calif., said the panel previously knew about a Florida real estate deal — reported by two news organizations — involving Wright, his friend George Mallick of Texas and Richard Swann, chairman of a Florida savings and loan institution.

Dixon said the deal, in which Wright reportedly earned at least $50,000, was included in the 450-page report submitted by the committee's special counsel, Richard Phelan.

Dear Legislator:

I strongly support a person's right to freedom of choice and urge you to fight any effort to overturn the Supreme Court's 1973 decision denying the states' right to restrict freedom of choice.

It is undisputed that before the Roe v. Wade decision, women were forced to seek "back alley abortions," thereby risking death or mutilation. If the decision is overturned, women will again face those risks. Women will not stop seeking abortions when needed. No law in the world can stop people from exercising their inalienable right to control their own bodies.

The special interest minorities lobbying to overturn Roe v. Wade have dismissed as insignificant the risks faced by women should they be forced to return to "back alley abortion." I say the possibility of death or mutilation is not an insignificant risk.

If the Supreme Court overturns or modifies Roe v. Wade, the states will then be free to prohibit a women's right to exercise control over her own body. This issue is so inherently personal that it must not be legislated. The decision to end a pregnancy must be left up to the individuals involved.

There has been debate over the status of a woman who gets an abortion if it is once again made illegal. Practically everyone who advocates outlawing freedom of choice supports the idea that the woman would be the victim of the abortionist. This view denies the woman's ability to reason and control her own life. This view advocates making women the victims of the legislatures and the special interest groups controlling them.

The situation is at a critical level. As my elected official, I urge you to represent my view and rally in support of a woman's right to determine her own future. I am not, I repeat, not asking you to decide if abortion is right or wrong. I am asking you to leave that decision up to the individual. Let us not slip backward in time to the dark ages of "back alley abortions."

Sincerely,

If you support this position, please clip this letter and mail it to any or all of the representatives listed below. We must not allow a minority of special interests to control our lives. We must speak out for freedom. Do it now, before we run out of time and options.

Committee discusses retaining strength coach

By Stephanie Wood
Staff Writer

Finding a way to keep football graduate assistant Ken Jones on staff was discussed by the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee Tuesday.

Jones was hired as a strength and conditioning coach by former head coach Rick Rhoades 10 days before Rhoades left to take a job at Alabama.

Athletics director Jim Hart said the department would like to keep Jones on staff, but cannot afford to pay him.

Hart told the committee the $20,000 range was a minimum to keep him on staff.

"Ken doesn't want to leave the University," Hart said. "He likes it here, but hey, money talks too."

Jones has helped develop conditioning programs for other sports in the department as well.

"He's got a way with young people," Hart said.

The committee also discussed the attendance at home basketball games. Committee member John Cherry suggested SIU-C was the only team in the conference that didn't pad its attendance records.

Hart said, "I think we could pad it and feel at all guilty about it."

Cherry suggested we estimate the total attendance rather than use on the turnstile numbers because not all fans use the turnstile entrances.

Associate athletics director Charlotte West said she was offended that padding was suggested as an option.

"I'm offended by suggesting padding," West said. "We've identified the problem. We need to get pass people that don't go through the turnstiles."

In other reports, West said SIU-C is trailing Illinois State for the Commissioner's Cup, honoring the top school in overall sports excellence.

Sh said the Salukis could still win but it would take an outstanding effort on the part of spring sports.

knows what they have to do."

Academic adviser for athletics Nikki Chambers said, "It is a little early to speculate on (losing two players). Students have the rest of this semester to take care of any problems and they also have summer semester."

"I have talked specifically with Rodney Watson to stay on top of any problem."

Chambers said the department focuses on football and basketball, but is concerned with all student-athletes.

"We pay more attention to football because there are so many students involved and men's basketball because there is so much publicity in this area lately," she said. "Really it does not matter whether they are a football player or a basketball player. We are trying to develop some specific program to help aid the athletes. We do have some things in mind.

In a report compiled by the athletics department, the men's basketball team had a grade point average of 1.94 for the fall semester.

Herrin said the figures were not correct and that two players listed in the report are no longer on the team.

Herrin took junior Freddie McSwain out of the starting lineup for two games during the Salukis' 20-win season for not attending class.

Senior Randy House was declared academically ineligible because he was not registered for the required 15 hours at the start of the spring semester.

Rose declines any comment until investigation completed

PLANT CITY, Fla. (UPI) — Cincinnati Reds manager Pete Rose, the subject of a baseball commissioner's investigation, said Tuesday he won't comment on the subject until the investigation is completed.

"If something happens, when it happens, I'll talk about it," said Rose. "I have no comment right now."

The commissioner's office announced Monday it is investigating "serious allegations" involving Rose. Although the allegations were unspecified, rumors have circulated that they involve gambling.

While the investigation continues, Rose said he intends to continue his regular spring training routine, including traveling to St. Petersburg for Tuesday's exhibition game against the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I've got the greatest job in the world," he said.

Reds' general manager Murray Cook declined to speculate on the focus of the investigation.

"I have to think it's a confidential investigation and I certainly respect it as such," said Cook.

NCAA's Midwest regional toughest in the tournament

Minneapolis-St. Paul Star Tribune

Six weeks ago Louisville was riding a 14-game winning streak, a victory away from moving to the top of the national polls. But center Pervis Ellison twisted a knee, the streak was ended and the Cardinals regressed in the national rankings.

Ellison is healthy again, Louisville has a five-game winning streak and coach Denny Crum believes his club is back at peak form after a late-season swoon. But Crum knows that even if the Cardinals are running on all cylinders, the road to the Final Four will be a bumpy one.

The reason: Crum's assigned route is through the Midwest Region, which as travel goes is a little like trying to get through New York City at rush hour.

With the NCAA field reduced to the Sweet 16, the Midwest's quartet at the Minneapolis Metrodome this weekend looks like this: No. 1 seed Illinois,

No. 2 Syracuse, No. 3 Missouri, No. 4 Louisville. The first two rounds were merely an exercise for the foursome, whose members won second-round games by an average of 13.8 points, with Louisville's nine-point spread over Arkansas the closest.

"All the regions are tough, but there aren't any tougher than ours," Crum said. "I doubt if there's any other regions with four teams that were either ranked No. 1 (in the nation), or as close to being ranked No. 1."

Crum's point is well taken. Illinois, 21-9 with guard Kendall Gill in uniform, was 14-0 and No. 1 before the senior guard fractured his foot. Illinois lost to Minnesota 69-62 in its first game without Gill and fell from the top.

Syracuse climbed to No. 1 by starting its season 13-0. Missouri was as high as No. 3 and on talent alone might have climbed to No. 1. But the Tigers lost coach Norm Stewart to cancer surgery.

then were hit by an NCAA investigation.

Louisville would have been No. 1 had it extended its winning streak to 15 against Ohio State. But when Ellison crumpled, so did the Cardinals.

"I can't remember a region where any of four teams could have been considered the best in the country," CBS-TV analyst Billy Packer said.

Here are some highs and lows, the best and the worst of the NCAA's best regional tournament.

Best matchup: There may not be a better pairing in the tournament, including the Final Four, than Friday's Illinois-Louisville contest. The meeting features the classic confrontation of Illinois' speed against Louisville's 6-9 Ellison and 7-0 Felton Spencer. Most are picking speed to prevail. "I just think they have more talented basketball players on the floor than Louisville has," Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson said.

Indiana's Bobby Knight No. 1 according to UPI writers poll

United Press International

Bob Knight, who guided Indiana to the Big Ten championship after preseason predictions of fifth place, Tuesday was named college basketball's Coach of the Year by United Press International.

It marks the second time Knight has been UPI's top national coach. He won the honor in 1975 when the Hoosiers were 31-1.

Knight, who has coached Indiana to national championships in 1976, 1981 and 1987, has the Hoosiers in the hunt again. Indiana, 27-7 and No. 6 in the final poll, is in the round of 16 and will play Seton Hall in the West Regional in Denver.

"I don't think coaching is necessarily reflected in the won-lost record," is Knight's long-time response to coaching awards. "Some guys at .500 do a great job with little talent."

A championship season for Indiana appeared a distant possibility last Dec. 7 when the Hoosiers awoke with a 3-4 record after losing at Notre Dame. In three of the losses, the Hoosiers yielded 100 or more points, a first for a Knight-coached team.

"I wanted to start us out with a defensive base and be the quickest defensive team we could play," Knight said of his plans then. "Maybe we would have been, but that team was a poor ballhandling team."

Poor ballhandling is a Knight no-no, so the veteran coach shifted gears, switched lineups and turned to a three-guard alignment that featured jumpshooters Jay Edwards and Joe Hillman.

Anyhow, Knight called Henson in Champaign a few days before their teams were to meet and asked if he'd like to go with him and see Knight's son, Pat, play. Pat is a senior at Bloomington (Ind.) North.

"He did well," said Henson. "He scored 17 or 18 points. He handled the ball. He's good. I think he'll go to a prep school, but he can play major college ball."

What did Henson and Knight talk about?

"About a lot of things," said Henson, careful not to disclose grapevine secrets.

"He's sitting there and I don't think I was ever pulling more for a team to win because I could see Bob's reactions. He was like any other father. He was into the game."

"If you have a son playing, you know how it can affect you. When your team plays you hardly it much better emotionally than when you watch your son play."

Readers of the book "On The Brink" might find it curious that Knight would invite Henson anywhere. You can look it up. Knight was critical of Henson's recruiting procedures. Henson said after the book appeared in stores, Knight called him and apologized, saying his position had not been accurately portrayed.

There is a perception advanced by some that Knight is mellowing. How about it, Lou?

"It could be. I've been around him quite a bit. As we get older, we all mellow to some degree."

Knight can quickly become un-mellow, as he did when his protégé, Bob Donewald, was dismissed as Illinois State coach. Donewald is respected in the profession.

Other coaches have registered outrage at the action by Illinois State president Thomas Wallace and athletic director Ron Wellman. Donewald's Redbirds made the NCAA tournament in 1983-84-85, but fell on hard times of late. Reportedly, Donewald's reluctance to support fundraising functions at the school by boosters prompted his firing.

Michigan State's Jud Heathcote, who heads the 3,000-member National Association of Basketball Coaches, said, "This is a travesty. I'm going to ask the (NABC) board of directors to write a strong letter on Bob's behalf."

Donewald is a former assistant coach for Knight.

"If you can fire Bob Donewald, then I might as well be fired or Dean Smith (North Carolina coach) or anybody else," said Knight. "Nobody in the last 10 years has done a better job with the resources. The kind of people who are involved, the AD and the president, are the kind of people who shouldn't be around athletics. The AD's whole involvement in college athletics is equivalent to pouring a salt shaker in the ocean."

Drake coach Tom Abatemarco said: "You talk about sports getting out of hand and here you have one of the cleanest and finest gentlemen in the business."

rightlander with a 6.00 ERA who through 4 1-3 innings of relief Sunday, or Jim Edwards (1-1), a sophomore rightlander with a 3.64 ERA.

Southeast Missouri's top five hitters all have averages over .344. Sophomore shortstop Cory Crosnoe is hitting .452 and has a team-high 18 RBIs. Catcher Dean DeEferre is batting .407 and first baseman Scott Horace is at .395.

Southeast Missouri is averaging 7.5 runs per game, 10.0 at home.

dividually with their respective players and that went well.

"The voluntary weight program went exceptionally well. There was a 100 percent turnout on the Monday school was iced out (March 6), and I think that is a good sign."

Players have been voluntarily participating in the weight program at the Arena since the end of last season, when the Salukis finished at 4-7.

Smith said the transition for himself and the new staff has gone well, and their past history together has helped.

"It is fortunate most of us knew each other before," Smith said. "I feel we have as fine a staff as there is in the United States. There is a great blend of experience and youth."

Freshman quarterback Tony Whiteside prepares for a snap Tuesday as the Salukis opened up their spring practice workouts. It was the first day on the field under Bob Smith.

Saluki football underway with new coach Bob Smith

By David Gallianetti and Stephanie Wood
Staff Writers

Goals in place and footballs in hand, the Salukis opened spring practice Tuesday at McAndrew Stadium, marking the debut of new head coach Bob Smith and his staff.

Smith, who was hired Jan. 30 to replace former coach Rick Rhoades who left for Alabama, said he has a number of things on his agenda that need to be accomplished.

"The No. 1 goal this spring is to establish our system of offense and defense and master it as much as we can," said Smith, who will abandon last season's wishbone for an air assault.

"It will probably be a little slower offensively than defensively, because there are some position changes and new blocking schemes. We will have to get in eight or nine practices before we run a precisioned attack."

Smith said the Salukis will be working without pads yet today, as they were Tuesday, but would start up with the pads Thursday and Friday. After a break for the Easter holiday, the Salukis will practice every Tuesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Smith said.

Practice was supposed to start Monday, but had to be canceled because repairs on the stadium's turf had not been completed. Several seams on the McAndrew playing field began coming up during the fall season.

Athletics director Jim Hart said Sport Tech, the company who originally had installed the turf, was still under its five-year warranty so the repairs would not cost the University. SIU-C still owes $66,000 for the turf.

"Our only leverage is $66,000 that we held back," Hart said. "We will not pay until its meets our satisfaction."

"The University has been on their backs long before I got here."

Hart said Smith expressed displeasure over the situation.

"Bob Smith is a little irrate about that," Hart said.

The repairs have been temporarily postponed until the completion of spring practice on April 22, the date of the maroon and white game.

Among other goals Smith has set for the spring workouts is increasing player-coach relationships, treating the spring as an evaluation period for the coming season and seeking team togetherness and spirit.

"We need to come out with an idea of what our two deeps will look like for the fall," Smith said.

All players eligible have returned, Smith said, and he is pleased with the effort they all have put forth during the off season.

"I will be meeting with them individually during the spring, and we have had some team meetings," Smith said. "All the position coaches met in-

Academic woes bother IAAC

The academic standing of two Saluki basketball players was questioned at the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee meeting Tuesday.

Committee member Patricia Medlin, the community's representative, said "community chat-chat" was that the basketball team was going to lose two of its starters to grades.

Athletics director Jim Hart responded to the allegation saying, "We haven't lost them yet."

No specific names were revealed.

Men's basketball coach Rich Herrin would not comment on the committee's discussion.

"I think that is an individual matter," Herrin said. "Grades are evaluated each semester. We don't have anything to know right now. They are just speculating."

Following Medlin's comments about the basketball players, the committee discussed academic standing of the rest of the University's athletes. Associate athletics director Charlotte West said some athletes are struggling in their classes.

"We've got some athletes that are in pretty bad situations," she said.

West said there are constraints on what the athletic department can do for the student-athlete.

"People are always asking if there is anything we can do," she said. "There's a lot they (the student-athletes) can do."

Hart expressed a fear that some players may not be involved in their respective programs unless things were turned around.

"Unfortunately, I'm afraid it's going to hit bottom with some of the athletes," said Hart who added that coaches shared some responsibility for the grades of their athletes.

Assistant basketball coach Rodney Watson, the Salukis' academic coordinator, declined any comment on the subject.

"I don't have a statement really," Watson said. "It is midterm now and everyone

Henson, Knight share night of Hoosier hoops

Bob Knight of Indiana and Lou Henson of Illinois, college basketball coaches who own 500 career victories apiece, sat together and talked on a Saturday night at a recent high school game in Indiana.

Afterward, they went to a restaurant and talked some more. Henson ate a sandwich. Knight, who loves ice cream, ordered a milkshake — and picked up the tab.

"Sure," said Henson. "He always does. He's got the money."

Wonder what the two would have said to each other had they known that the next day Illinois' Nick Anderson would nail one of the sunning shots of the season. It was a 30-footer that was still in the air when the final buzzer sounded. It gave the Illini a victory at Indiana and the No. 1 seed for the NCAA regional.

Two seconds before, the Hoosiers' Jay Edwards had looped in a fall-away jumper over the backboard to tie the score at 67-67. If shots were rated as dives are, by degree of difficulty, Edwards would have received a higher score than Anderson.

Wet weather threatening Saluki baseball game

Eleven seasons have come and gone since the baseball team played Arkansas State, and if the typically wet spring weather doesn't cooperate, it could be even longer before they meet again.

Rains earlier in the week could halt today's 1 p.m. doubleheader at State University, Ark., and Thursday's 2:30 p.m. game against Southeast Missouri in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

While the Salukis hold a 37-9 series advantage and swept a doubleheader 3-1 and 5-2 from the Indians back in 1978, ancient history is not exactly Coach Itchy Jones' immediate concern.

That's especially true when his predominantly freshman pitching staff had an average age of 19 the last time SIU-C and Arkansas State scuffed baseballs. However, the inexperience of his entire team, position players as well as pitchers, still is on his mind.

"We've got to get a win and at the same time keep working these younger kids in the lineup," said Jones, whose team is coming off a 4-7 start in Coral Gables, Fla. "Maybe we'll even start some."

Among the freshman pitchers that showed promise on the spring trip were Sean Bergman, Ryan McWilliams and Bryan Oestreich.

Bergman (1-1), a 6-4 righthander out of Joliet Catholic High School, made one start in three appearances and had eight strikeouts and a 0.81 earned run average through 11 1/3 innings.

McWilliams (1-1), 6-0 righthander from Crete-Monee High School, has a 7.50 ERA after 7 2/3 innings while Oestreich (0-1), a 6-3 lefthander from Greenville High School, was on the mound for 8 2/3 innings.

Overall, with the team ERA at 6.43, Jones wants more accountability from his pitchers.

"These pitchers have yet to develop, and some will come on. They have to show it consistently. When they throw strikes and we make the plays, we're a good team," Jones said.

Juniors Doug Shields and Chris Bend, along with sophomore Dale Meyer, performed fairly well in starting roles, combining for a 2-3 record.

Offensively, Jones is pleased with the team's .310 batting average, though the 68 strikeouts (6.2 per game) disturbs him.

"We strikeout too much," Jones said. "But I'm glad we've got some hitters who are consistently making contact."

Of the eight position players that started nine or more games, four are batting over .300. Shields, whose first home is in centerfield, has a team-high .425 average, followed by freshman shortstop Kurt Endeck's .333, catcher Matt Giegling's .333, and junior Tim Davis' .302.

Shields has been particularly potent, holding team highs in runs (13), hits (17), doubles (5) and stolen bases (5).

Looking ahead to Thursday's game: Southeast Missouri has a 6-5 record, including a 4-0 mark at home. The team was 2-4 during its spring swing through Tampa.

Because Southeast Missouri's Tuesday game at Quincy was snowed out, the Salukis could expect to face Lee Lummus (1-2), a senior
