IT'S DEBATABLE: Council candidates discuss relationship between government, students.

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POLITICAL EDITOR

Some Carbondale City Council candidates say there is a good relationship between the city government and SIUC students and administrators, while others say that relationship needs work.

About 70 people attended a forum Thursday at the Civic Center, 200 S. Illinois Ave., sponsored by the League of Women Voters, where council candidates debated topics including SIUC involvement in city affairs, the bar-entry age and gang influence in Carbondale. The general election is April 1.

Councilman Lloyd Summer, a four-year candidate, said city and University relations need improvement.

"We often lack a common vision and a shared focus," he said.

Councilman John Yow, candidate for the two-year term, said the council routinely delays action on important matters when school is not in session.

"We do that to have their (students') participation," he said.

The council also communicates with the Graduate and Professional Student Council and Undergraduate Student Government representatives that are appointed to follow city affairs, Yow said.

John Budlick, also running for the two-year term, said the council members should address student concerns to show they listen to them.

Larry Briggs, candidate for a four-year term and an SIUC associate professor of art and design, said some students and faculty think there is a gulf between the city government and the University.

He said townspeople should approach students and welcome them to Carbondale.

"I think the best way to further the relationship with students is actually to talk to them," Briggs said.

TRASH TALK: Volunteers say apathy is the cause of litter on campus.

TAMEKA L. HICKS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Wade Withrow fishes at Campus Lake four to five times a week, and when he looks at the lake, he notices empty bait containers, beer bottles and plastic bags — pollution that interferes with wildlife.

Withrow, a junior in healthcare management from Savoy and a resident of Abbott Hall, is tired of people walking by and doing nothing about the trash that pollutes the lake area.

"Hundreds of people just walk by and ignore it," he said. "People shouldn't be so selfish."

About two weeks ago, Withrow organized a group of 15 Abbott Hall residents to help him clean Campus Lake.

At 10:15 a.m. Saturday, seven of the original 15 volunteers crawl out of their beds and file into the Abbott Hall TV lounge, almost all of them dressed in old gym shoes and baseball caps.

Volunteers stuff garbage bags into their pockets and slap white rubber gloves on their hands before heading out to tackle the polluted lake.

The volunteers step outside into the cool and quiet area of Thompson Point to split into two groups... one taking the east area and the other the west. They stumble over shampoo bottles, beer cans, a Cheetos bag and broken limbs to get to the lake.

While some volunteers risk falling into the lake by walking out on fallen trees to reach the trash adrift, Don McCormick, a freshman in art from Oneida, stands to the side, thinking of how the lake has provided a way for him to continue his life-long love of fishing.

As he drags an empty whiskey bottle from the shore of the lake, McCormick, who usually does not wake up until noon, says he does not mind spending his Saturday morning cleaning the lake.

AFROCENTRIC: Fraternity's annual ball lets students relax and celebrate in super-cool '70s style.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DAILY EGYPTIAN WRITER

It is not often that SIUC students can get entertainment that includes Afros and platform shoes mixed with raunchy humor on campus.

But all those things were featured at Kappa Alpha Psi's fifth annual "Ms. Diamond Jubilee/Players Ball" Saturday night.

Carlos Cortes, one of the event's coordinators, said the event is a highly anticipated break from the norm for students on campus.

"It's all in fun, and the campus needs something like this as a form of stress relief," he said. "We can get restless at times, and we all like entertainment in one way or another. Everyone looks forward to our event, and people from all over come out for it."

About 1,300 people packed Shryock Auditorium to capacity for the ball.

The event had two main components. The first component was the selection of "Player of the Year," and the second was the selection of "Ms. Diamond Jubilee."

Cortes, a senior in radio-television from Los Angeles, said many people today may not know what the meaning of being a "player" is in the context of the event, but

Attempted sexual assault in local residence

An attempted sexual assault took place Sunday morning on the northwest side of Carbondale, Carbondale Police say.

A 21-year-old SIUC student reported that she was lying on her couch watching television at 8:25 a.m. when a man entered through the unlocked front door of her residence.

The woman reported she did not notice him until he was on top of her. She was able to fight him off and was not injured.

The suspect fled in an unknown direction. There were no suspects as of press time.

The suspect is described as a black male, between the ages of 20 and 25, 5 feet 7 inches tall, with black hair.

FBI crime lab errors may affect McVeigh case

The Justice Department inspector general's office has determined that the FBI crime laboratory made "scientifically unsound" conclusions in the Oklahoma City bombing case, finding that supervisors approved lab reports they "cannot support" and many analyses were "biased in favor of the prosecution."

The still-secret draft report, obtained by the Los Angeles Times, also concludes that FBI lab officials may have erred about the size of the blast and the amount of explosives involved and may not know for certain that ammonium nitrate was used for the main charge that killed 168 people and injured more than 500 others.

Service honors memory of Derge

RECOGNITION: Memorial allows more people to offer praise of past professor.

JASON K. FREUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

John Foster, political science professor, recalled when his colleague, David Derge, who died Dec. 26, insisted on returning to work six weeks after a heart attack and major surgery in 1982.

"I asked, 'Why?'" Foster said. "He said, 'One, it will probably be good therapy, and two, I've got to try and clean up the mess you yellow-dog Democrats have created.'"

A memorial service Saturday provided

Derge's friends, colleagues and students with an opportunity to reflect and share memories about his life.

Derge was SIUC president from 1972 to 1974. He taught political science courses until the time of his death at age 68. Derge served in the Army and Navy and was a pollster for former President Richard Nixon.

More than 50 people attended the memorial in the Lesar Law Building auditorium, and the ceremony included an Air Force ROTC color guard and piano rendition of "Thanks for the Memories."

The service included remarks from colleagues and friends, as well as letters from former students who were not able to attend.

Barbara Brown, a political science lecturer, former student and Derge's colleague, was one of several faculty members to speak during the service.

"I feel very blessed to have known Dave," she said. "Dave brought to his relationship with everyone a unique mix of irreverence and respect for the political process."

Brown said when her Democratic partisanship showed through in discussions with students, she would send them to Derge so he could give them the Republican viewpoint.

Once, she thanked Derge for giving students the opposing view on issues.

"He looked at me for a moment with this shocked look on his face, and he said, 'Barb, I don't give them the opposing view; I give

Song sung blue: Nerds hurt by loss of easy listening station

I can tell Sheryl Crow exactly why the hell I'm so sad.

It has to do with overhyped rock stars usurping Anne Murray's airtime on the radio. That doesn't make me happy.

There is a group in modern society that has been overlooked in our politically correct quest to vindicate the downtrodden.

Dehumanized by cruel jokes and derogatory names, we bore our status quietly for decades.

We didn't demand government reparations or affirmative action programs.

We just sat back and gazed in awe through our horn-rimmed glasses at our posters of Bill Gates and Janet Reno for inspiration.

Then, humming the chorus to "We Shall Overcome," we made out our money orders to PBS in the hope that viewers like us could save public television from Newt and his evil budget ax.

We might have accepted our socially marginalized position, but when the hip elite tried to overthrow "Nova" with that cheap sci-fi knock-off "The X-Files," no longer could we stand idly by, flossing our braces and waiting for a knight in plaid armor and a paisley shield to rescue us.

Our effort to save PBS was just the tip of the iceberg.

That's right, campers, "Revenge of the Nerds" is no longer the stuff of '80s film legend.

It's prophecy.

Those of us who prefer Alex Trebek to Dennis Rodman have had it up to our training bras with the in crowd taking us for granted.

Society is on the brink of a rebellion that will make the sexual revolution look like a health-class video.

Nerds have been taking the spotlight more and more lately, from Mary Katherine Gallagher's popular appearances on "Saturday Night Live" to the new "Daria" cartoon on MTV.

Those were merely the quiet rumblings of a movement that is about to erupt onto the American consciousness with all the fury of Krakatoa.

It hurt to hear the jeers of "geek" and "dweeb" every day, but we once endured these injuries silently, knowing we could take solace in that soothing angel chorus of the nerd's paradise: our local easy listening station.

Now even that small comfort has been taken away.

I don't know if it was a response to a shrinking listening audience, a change in ownership or merely a random act of commercialism, but suddenly, without warning, my favorite easy listening station switched its format.

If the station manager wanted to expand his listening audience, he should have done his homework first.

It is a known fact that nerds comprise roughly 75 percent of the average easy listening audience.

It is also a known fact that nerds do not give a lab rat's genetically engineered hindquarters where all the cowboys have gone.

We are not "love fools" who "ride the train," and the only time "it's all coming back" to us is when the "old songs bring back the old times."

We are not cool.
 We graph hyperbolas for fun.
 We know all the lyrics to "Copacabana."

And we like them.

We judge our dates by the number of prepositions they can recite ... and we know that only fast girls conjugate verbs on the first date.

Although we won't be caught dead in a karaoke bar, we will belt out all 50 ways to leave our lovers whenever we hear a Paul Simon instrumental in the ear.

We even recognize that the Paul Simon with the bowtie has better fashion sense than the one who used to jam with Art Garfunkel (a fine, unspiced nerd in his own right).

We were peaceful when PBS lost its funding.

However, if this radio situation is not corrected immediately, we may have to resort to desperate measures.

Some of us carry concealed pocket protectors ... and we're not afraid to use them.

Accountability

Placing caps on rising tuition good step in right direction

PLACING CAPS ON ILLINOIS UNIVERSITIES' tuition rates is a good step forward in controlling the rising cost of higher education.

The tuition caps not only will make state universities more accountable for their budgets but will keep the cost of higher education at a more affordable rate.

Tuition costs have increased resulting in more students seeking financial aid from state and federal governments.

Since 1980, tuition among state universities has risen 388 percent, while the rate of inflation has risen only 105 percent — more than three times the rate of inflation, according to the Illinois Board of Higher Education. The tuition cap would allow a 5-percent increase that would coincide with inflation and cost of living rates. This cap would control tuition and rein in university administrations.

AN AFFORDABLE HIGHER EDUCATION IS important for students and is a necessity to have a quality education to compete in the changing job markets. In some cases, depending on the area of study, students are forced to get a master's or post-graduate degree to get a job after school. And while they are at school, some students have to delay graduation a few years because they have to support themselves through college with two or three part-time jobs to afford rising tuition costs.

The proposed tuition caps would be fair to the customers of these institutions — students — but these institutions would have to find other funding sources for their programs, including asking the state for more money. The caps also would make universities have an advance four-year budget plan to chart tuition increases, as recommended by the IBHE.

WHEN STATE UNIVERSITIES WERE CREATED, their primary goal was to make quality higher education affordable to students. In many respects, their quality goal was achieved, but making education affordable tends to get lost in the bureaucratic paperwork and in the tuition increases. It seems that tuition increases every year for some reason, and all students get stuck footing the bill for university administrations' inefficient management of state funds — a money shortfall caused by underestimating the amount of money needed from the state legislature.

RIISING TUITION COSTS ALMOST ARE expected among higher education facilities, especially state universities and colleges. Administrators eventually fine the students through rising costs to supplement the less money received from the state government.

The SIUC administration and Northeastern University already have complied with the recommendation. SIUC's plan charts out a 3.5-percent increase annually. If the bill would pass, SIUC already would be in compliance with the law and ahead of the ballgame. IBHE should be commended for recommending state universities plan out the tuition increases for four years.

SIUC IS LEADING THE WAY AMONG STATE universities to assist in bringing rising tuition under control. SIUC should learn how to cut costs to stabilize tuition increases.

It is time to get the rest of the universities in line with controlling rising tuition by passing the tuition cap bill.

it was very well-known in the '70s.

"A player nowadays is often regarded as a person who participates in a game," he said. "But in the '70s, a player was a person who could play the game of life and beat the system. He or she is able to get out of certain difficult situations with a certain level of poise."

A "player" also can be defined as a suave ladies' man or a gigolo, sometimes considering himself to be able to have many relationships at a time.

After five students competed and were judged on criteria including describing why they considered themselves to be players, and mandatory participation in Kappa Alpha Psi-sponsored events and talent, Ron Robinson walked away with "Player of the Year" honors.

Robinson, a junior in aviation from Dolton, borrowed his grandmother's mink and some '70s-style clothing to make up the outfit he wore for the talent competition.

His comedy skit, "The Illustrious Tryouts," received a huge response from the audience. Based on the scene from "The Mack," a popular '70s blaxploitation movie, Robinson's skit portrayed a "player" selecting some new women to become a part of his stable.

Contestants in both parts of the event modeled attire and gave performances that brought cheers and applause from the audience. Female audience members were driven into a frenzy when male contestants performed sensual skits as they modeled bedroom attire.

Sometimes the skits and humor were raunchy at times. For example, Robinson got down on all fours and ate strawberries and whipped cream that was piled onto a napkin and placed on the stage floor. It was done in a provocative manner, delighting many of the women in the audience.

Participating in the event took a lot of hard work, but Robinson said he enjoyed it.

"It felt good to win because I spent five weeks preparing for it," he said. "Everyone kept telling me how funny my talent skit was, and I was really surprised I maintained my composure and didn't laugh on stage like I would in practice."

"It was fun and it felt good to be a part of an event that people from all over the state talk about."

Ten women competed for the title of "Ms. Diamond Jubilee," and they also were judged on participation and talent.

Hazel Richardson, a senior in chemistry specializing in forensics from Chicago, was chosen as "Ms. Diamond Jubilee."

Cortes said he was happy with Saturday's event because students who attended were able to see other students in a different light.

"We can always bring in comics and entertainers," he said, "but to actually be entertained by people you may actually see in the Student Center or go to class with is something better. I was extremely happy with the show because everyone left entertained."

them the correct view," Brown said.

Albert Melone, political science professor, said he and Derge regularly shared jokes and debated politics.

"Like a good trial lawyer, Dave would ask questions of which he already knew the answers," he said. "This was his transparent attempt to get me to look at, to reconsider, how I viewed matters."

Letters read at the service included anecdotes from Derge's flight instructor and thanks from former students who credited Derge with guiding their lives in the direction of politics.

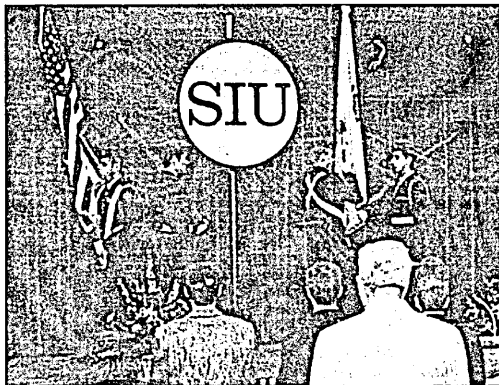

About 150 people attended a memorial service for Derge on Dec. 30 in Shryock Auditorium.

Derge's widow, Patti, said the second service allowed many people who were away during the winter break to remember Derge.

"A lot of students and faculty were shocked by his death and wanted a chance to remember him and pay their respects, so we thought it would be a good idea," she said.

Students always could relate to Derge with ease, she said.

"One of his students said he (Derge) never forgot what it was like to be 20," she said. "He also had children going through school so he knew what they were going through."

Uday Desai, Political Science Department chairman, said the service allowed people to share their memories of Derge with others.

"Full of life, a lot of humor, a ready smile, an open door, Those were David's trademarks," Desai said. "David always had a joke or one-liner ready."

Derge's son, William, said the service was pleasant and that only a fraction of the letters the family received were read aloud Saturday.

"We got all kinds of letters, and Mom chose the ones she thought were the best," he said.

Kevin Walsh, a doctoral candidate in constitutional law from River Forest, was a graduate assistant to Derge.

"He was an excellent teacher and an inspiration."

Rollers transport audience back to polyester past

SUPER SOUNDS:

Fans relive bygone era as Bay City Rollers take to Smii' in Jack's stage.

LISA PANGBURN
DE ENTERTAINMENT EDITOR

A row of 25 women line the front of the stage. Some of them clutch old record albums in hopes to get an autograph, some wave old Teen Beat magazines to prove their long-time love for the 1970s band, The Bay City Rollers, that played at Smii' in Jack's Thursday night.

Smii' in Jack's, 760 E. Grand Ave., looks like something out of a Beatles Anthology. Women rush the stage when the five men from Scotland pick up their instruments and begin to play. Women's arms fly into the air, desiring just one touch from these kings of the '70s pop

Robin Little drove all the way from Nashville, Tenn., to join 250 other fans and see her favorite band.

"The first and only time I saw The Rollers was when I was 16," she said. "They changed my life. People always said that The Rollers never drank or smoked or did drugs, so I didn't either, but I always wanted to marry a Roller."

Little, now in her 30s, gets a dreamy look in her eyes and pardons herself to make her way up to the stage.

The theme of the evening is a retro party to complement the time period that The Bay City Rollers were popular in the United States.

Big blond Afro wigs, bell-bottoms and polyester outfits are paraded around the dance floor by people all in the mood for an evening of being transported back in time to the '70s.

chology from Jacksonville, has been listening to The Rollers since he was 6 and finally got the chance to see them live on Thursday.

"I heard all of albums on 8-track by the time I was 6," he said. "I think after 20 years these guys can still jam with the best of them. I just wish more people were here."

It was almost as if the women in the establishment who heard the band the first time around were carried back to the age of 17.

Ian Mitchell, a guitar player for the band, said he is numb to the number of women he sees every night.

"We have enjoyed ourselves tonight," he said. "We always do. But as far as the women go, we get that everywhere we go, so we're kind of indifferent to the situation."

The dance floor fills up during The Rollers' 1976 hit, "Saturday Night." Spectators scream for the Scottish lads, and after only playing about an hour, the band calls it quits so it can sign autographs for fans.

Dawn Kirgan, an Ashley resident, experienced a dream come true the night The Rollers came to Carbondale.

"I've waited 21 years to see this band," she said. "They have always been my favorite band, and seeing them is better than an orgasm."

Pilots union turns down contract

NEGOTIATIONS: APA president says group will not get better deal; meeting slated for April.

THE WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON—Leaders of the Allied Pilots Association adjourned their meeting Saturday without approving a new contract with American Airlines.

APA spokesman Wally Pitts said the 18-member executive board scheduled its next meeting for April 3, but the site had not been determined.

The board took no action Saturday, Pitts said.

The break in deliberations came as APA President James Sovich warned that the union could not expect to win better terms through further negotiations.

"There is nothing more to be done in negotiations," he said.

If the APA board approves the tentative pact, the union's 9,300 pilots would vote on it, a process that could take two months. If the board rejects it, the union would be free to strike. The pilots, under an agreement worked out with federal mediators earlier this month, agreed not to strike the nation's second-largest airline before April 28.

At issue is an agreement worked out with a rival pilots union at American's commuter subsidiary, American Eagle, over which of the unions will fly the new 50-seat and 70-seat regional jets American wants to buy.

The APA's 18-member executive board began meeting Friday to consider a tentative contract agreement worked out last week with the help of federal mediators, which allows American Eagle pilots to fly all the new regional jets.

Board members have not voted on the contract, pending the outcome of further talks aimed at taking some of the sting out of the regional jet issue.

Negotiators for the APA and the Air Line Pilots Association, which represents American Eagle pilots, worked through Friday night to reach a tentative agreement on a plan that would allow furloughed American captains to fly as senior captains on American Eagle until they were recalled.

The agreement also gives American Eagle captains a chance to move up to the parent airline in times of expansion.

The APA pilots average $120,000 a year in salary, while the 2,000 American Eagle pilots average $35,000.

Information Service American Center.

The American Centers, located in several countries and funded by the U.S. State Department, usually consist of a library, access to the Internet and information about U.S. colleges and universities.

"These are wonderful places that students can go to find information about our universities," Angelis said. "However, some of these centers are being cut back or have had reductions in their personnel. I think that these cuts in the budgeting have had a definite effect on our international population at SIUC."

In 1996, the USIS American Center in Japan received $72,000 less than in 1995, and its 1997 budget includes another $12,000 cut. Japan is SIUC's largest international recruitment area with 409 Japanese students enrolled in the fall 1996 semester. In fall 1993, there were 598 Japanese students enrolled.

USIS documents state that in the last two years, federal funding for the American Centers has decreased 7 percent from $34,147,000 to

As a result of these funding cuts, USIS American Centers often reduce their operating hours, merge with other private centers or shut down completely. In many nations, the USIS American Center is the only way for students to find information about U.S. schools, Angelis said.

Despite these cuts in funding for USIS American Centers, Wan Kamal Wan Napi, a graduate student in education from Malaysia and vice president of International Student Council, said SIUC will be hurt more by student opinion that funding cuts.

"I think about 65 percent of all the international students get here by word of mouth," Wan Napi said. "SIUC has good promotion, but if tuition keeps going up, we cannot honestly tell our friends that SIUC is the best place."

"The student is the best tool to promote the University. Right now, many international students come here for a couple years and then leave to attend a more prestigious university."

"The money we pay is not equal to the education we are getting. So why waste money on SIUC?"

Despite Wan Napi's concerns about student opinion, one International Student and Scholars administrator believes the USIS American Centers are one of the most important ways for overseas students to find out about the United States.

Carla Coppi, associate director for International Students and Scholars, said closing or merging USIS American Centers will hurt the number of students wanting to come to the United States.

"The shortage of overseas information agencies will certainly affect the number of international students, because many of those students are sponsored by these agencies," Coppi said.

"I believe in these programs very strongly because they have turned out some of the most intelligent and thoughtful students."

Coppi also said the University is experiencing competition from Australia and New Zealand for international student recruitment. This may illustrate the added need for keeping the USIS American Centers open, she said.

"When you consider that the majority of our international students come from the South Pacific, you can understand why they would go there instead of all the way to the United States," she said.

"They are really cutting into our applicant pool."

Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan, four-year candidate, said a dialogue between the city and University does exist, but that more input from students would have a positive impact on city affairs.

Eden Thorne, running for a four-year term, cited student participation in the City Council primary last month as proof of student input.

"The record student turnout to vote indicates students are concerned about the city," she said.

Candidates were asked whether or not they support the 21-year-old bar-entry age.

Flanagan said she would not be against lowering it if there were guarantees of regulation and monitoring. Yow, Thorne and Sumner said they support the current age of 21.

Briggs and Budlick said they support lowering the age to 19. Both cited the prevalence of alcohol at keg parties and said 19- and 20-year-olds would go to bars to socialize.

The candidates were asked what they would do to curb gang influence in Carbondale.

Briggs said police should concentrate on gang activity, and Budlick suggested stationing a police officer in city schools.

Yow and Thorne stressed parental involvement. Sumner said more jobs would help, and Flanagan said teens should have alternatives, such as the proposed Carbondale teen center.

The other five candidates also supported the idea for a teen center.

INTERLUDE: Former student David Stoecker entertains guests with classical music at Papyrus' 10th anniversary in the University Museum Thursday.

Journal celebrates roots

YEARS PAST: Alumni and students share literary works for Papyrus' anniversary.

JULIE RENDLEMAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Authors' words echoed through the University Museum, and images of art work flashed on a screen Thursday in celebration of the 10th anniversary of a journal and the achievements of SIUC students and alumni.

Eleven alumni and students read their original work to about 50 people to honor 10 years of publication of Papyrus, the journal of the University Honors Program.

Papyrus was brainstormed in the spring 1987, and its first issue came out in fall 1987. The journal, published each fall, is named for a plant that grows along the Nile River that is known for making writing material.

Papyrus includes photography, essays, poetry, short stories, drawings, paintings and sculptures submitted by some of the program's 1,500 members.

The poets' and authors' emotional words echoed off the walls as they spoke of sons being born, the persecution of Bosnians and a doll burned in a fire.

Amy Perry, a 1991 alumna from Goreville, was flattered to be invited back to SIUC to read her poem, "Elizabeth," published eight years ago in Papyrus.

"I could not believe they remembered my work," she said. "I was so excited that during my lunch hour, I sat with hot rollers in my hair so I would look good. Then, everyone from work decided to come back and eat lunch in the office (while I had rollers in my hair)."

Some of the audience members began to cry as Perry read her poem, which is about how the scars on Elizabeth, a burnt doll, compared to a young boy also burned in a fire.

Troy Matthews, a junior in English from Springfield, joined the honors program in 1994.

His photograph was displayed at the event because it might be published in the next volume of Papyrus. The photograph portrays the Giant City State Park water tower and its similar shape of an atomic bomb.

"It represents violence and aggression," he said. "I believe violence and aggression should be a thing of the past, and human beings should work to transcend beyond it."

Matthews plans on submitting more photographs to Papyrus, and he is glad an event took place to celebrate the journal.

"It is a great opportunity for honors students to show the public their work," he said.

Frederick Williams, University Honors Program director, said he does not know if this celebration will continue every 10 years or if it will be scheduled for every year. Thursday was the first time an event took place for the journal.

"It was splendid, a fitting cap to Papyrus and its first decade," Williams said. "I was surprised to find things they read were as good as they appeared in the journal."

"In future years, I would like to see everybody who had work published come back to read their work."

so bad to clean it up," he said. "But if it was 5 in the morning, it would be a different story."

Withrow, also a Saluki Volunteer Corps member, said those who use the lake for fishing and canoeing should clean up the trash they leave behind. Although he has not complained to the Physical Plant grounds people, he said volunteering to clean the lake may raise awareness of the problem.

"Hopefully this will help develop some cooperation from residents and the University officials to realize this is a part of our campus," he said.

Harlan Beckman, Physical Plant grounds foreman, said the Campus Lake is not the University's first priority, and other facilities,

"Some places just won't get cleaned."

Beckman said with a limited amount of laborers, sometimes the lake may get cleaned once a month.

Obviously the fish and wildlife didn't ask us to put the trash there.

WADE WITHROW

such as housing and classrooms, are first on the "clean-up" list.

"The main campus is the priority," he said.

"At this time of the year, we have less manpower and have to get to things when we can," he said.

Reaching into the lake for soggy, loose papers with a long stick, Mike Hemmer, a sophomore in architecture from Red Bud, said the University should spend an equal amount of time on each part of the campus.

"I think this campus is one of the most beautiful campuses around, and the lake is one of the reasons why," he said.

Almost three hours later, the groups trudged to a Greek Row dumpster to stuff with 12 bags of trash. Withrow said cleaning the lake is the first step to a continual process. He wants other Thompson Point halls to participate in the future.

"The idea is to build a team effort with cooperation," he said. "Obviously the fish and wildlife didn't ask us to put the trash there."

'97 Career Fair Offers Students Potential Employment

by mike thurwanger

Preparing yourself to land that first job is a challenge, and experience tells you you can't start the process too soon. Those just beginning their college experience should start exploring career options and compare them to their own talents and interests. Those further along in the process can add to their education and experience through company research and hands-on experience gained through internships and similar programs. Those about to graduate should be in the final stages, polishing their resumes and personal presentations while looking for opportunities to close the deal and lock in that critical first job.

Campus-Wide Career Fair '97, scheduled to take place Wednesday in the Student Center Ballrooms, offers a unique opportunity for students at every stage in the process. More than 80 corporations representing a wide spectrum of career fields will be on hand. Sponsored by University Career Services, the fair will offer more than 100 organization representatives who will be ready to discuss their company's needs and compare those requirements against student's aspirations and potential.

Smaller career fairs are scheduled throughout the academic year which target individual colleges and career fields. Campus-Wide Career Fair '97 is the largest event of the year and offers employment information and opportunities for students from all of SIUC's colleges. Graduating seniors can use the fair as a forum to market their skills and move their job search forward. Those not graduating this year can use the job fair to get a head start in the process.

Mary Payne, career services specialist and one of the co-sponsors of the event, agrees that the fair is important no matter what stage one's search is in.

"Whether you're a freshman or about to graduate, the career fair is a good opportunity. You can learn company information, product information, who's merged with whom," Payne said. "It's also a great opportunity to start networking. Many of the company reps return year after year and these are the people who are doing the hiring."

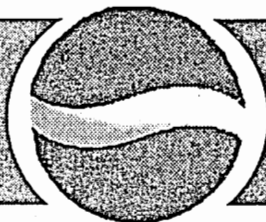

Organization representatives at the fair will be on hand to discuss career fields and describe their company, its products and services. In addition, those still in the early stages of career planning can explore the availability of internships. In addition to internships, the fair will also provide students with opportunities to explore the availability for externships with employers. Less formal and usually for a shorter period, the externship program is an excellent way to gain first-hand knowledge and hands-on experience.

Payne pointed out that opportunities for internships and externships are expected to increase this year as the University's Career Services Office will be administering a grant from the Illinois Board of Higher Education. This year's Campus-Wide Career Fair '97 at SIUC offers a convenient opportunity to meet and interview with a variety of potential employers on your home turf. The successful participant will incorporate this and other job fairs into their overall career planning. Career days and job fairs offer graduates the chance to learn more about careers and to promote themselves with potential employers.

Using the right approach and asking the right questions can provide you with the insight to better understand the qualities that will entice an employer into looking at you while helping you to develop and enhance your skills in presenting yourself and your talents to prospective employers.

To make the most of the opportunity, the smart candidate will do their homework and prepare thoroughly. One painless step is to view the video titled "How to Work a Career Fair" available through the University Career Services Office.

Karen Benz, career services specialist and a co-sponsor of the career fair, says the videotape would be an excellent first step in preparing for Campus-wide Career Fair '97.

"Students can view the tape at the Career Services Office in Woody Hall on a walk-in basis anytime between 8:00 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. It only takes about 15 minutes and it will help them prepare for the fair. It will provide a lot of really useful tips."

Prior to the fair, take the time to review the list of companies that will be participating and target specific companies which you see as most promising for your specialty, interests or skills. Gather additional information regarding those corporations and where they fit into their field, the services or products they offer, and other pertinent issues and information which will help you in formulating informed questions and providing knowledgeable responses.

Polish your resume and be prepared to present each of your targeted companies with an original copy. Carry several additional copies to be presented to other companies or to new contacts you meet at the job fair. Use the resume as your business card, ensure your name, address and phone number are prominently displayed.

Prepare and practice a 2-3 minute presentation of your qualifications and employment goals. Consider yourself a salesperson. The products you will be selling are your education, experience and skills. Most importantly, you're selling yourself. The presentation is your opportunity to entice the employer to take a second look at you and how your talents will serve their company.

Benz summarizes this phase of preparation in her advice to those seeking positions.

"Smile, show enthusiasm and demonstrate your interest in the company. Be able to sell yourself and know your strengths."

On the day of the job fair, dress as you would for a job interview. Don't exclude visiting a corporation or agency just because you haven't heard of them. A commonly recommended approach is to visit a couple of companies you had not targeted initially in order to break the ice and allow you an opportunity to present yourself and ask questions before visiting the organizations you are specifically targeting.

Student handbooks will be available at the door of the fair and will include a final list of all the organizations taking part in the event. Students can use the list to plan their day and identify those companies highest on their list.

"I'd really encourage students to try to talk to all the employers and find out more about them," Benz said. "The more people they meet, the more they'll learn about companies and the job market."

Greet the employer with a firm handshake, ask pertinent questions and express your interest in opportunities with their firms. Look for specific opportunities to match your skills and education to the needs of their company.

Most importantly, be genuine, be confident, pleasant and honest.

Laura Zilinsky, Operations

Coordinator for Clarke Environmental, will be participating in SIUC's career fair for the first time. She echoed the advice when asked what single piece of advice she'd offer participants.

"Just be yourself—I know that you've probably heard that from everybody else but it really is the best advice that I can offer," she said.

At the conclusion of your visit, get a business card from every employer with whom you talk. Before moving on to your next visit, make notes regarding additional contact names and phone numbers and other useful points of information which will be useful in a follow-up letter or a later interview.

Even when the day is over, the process is not complete. Be sure to write letters to all those employers you meet at the job fair. When writing companies that you are interested in pursuing, restate your interest and one or two key qualifications.

Making the most of a career fair and other opportunities to meet potential employees requires careful preparation and follow-up, but the impression you leave is a lasting one.

Kim Flanigan, a Store Team Leader for the Target retail chain, has participated in previous Career Fairs here and has been impressed by student participants in the past.

"SIUC people have always handled themselves very well. At other places where I've attended job fairs, sometimes the students aren't very professional considering I could be their future boss," she said. "I think SIUC has done a good job in the past, they've presented themselves well and asked good questions."

WHEN IT'S YOUR TURN TO ASK THE QUESTIONS

While Job Fairs offer a great opportunity to present yourself to a potential employer, they also provide an excellent opportunity to obtain information and gain insight into a company or industry before you start the formal interview process. The following are presented as opening questions when trying to learn more about potential employers:

1. Please tell me about the mission and function of your company or corporation.
2. What types of opportunities are available with your organization?
3. What specific skills and qualifications are important for these jobs?
4. Given my background, how can I improve my ability to compete for positions available in your corporation?
5. What is your hiring process? When will you be hiring? How do you advertise open positions?
6. Will I be required to attend a training program? If so, what topics and activities are included?
7. Describe an initial assignment in my area of interest.
8. How is job performance measured, evaluated and rewarded?
9. Tell me about the community in which I would be employed.
10. Who in your organization is the best contact person for...? Can I use your name as a referral source?

providing internship or externship opportunities can apply for 30 to 50 percent reimbursement of wages paid for work done in Illinois.

"This means that companies who may have corporate offices in other states but offer internships to students with offices or locations in the state of Illinois are still eligible to take part in the grant," said Payne.

For those closer to graduation and in the final stages of their job search, many of the reps will be ready to accept resumes, complete initial screenings or interview.

Laura Zilinsky is the Operations Coordinator for Clarke Environmental, a company which provides mosquito control and other services in the Chicago area. This will be her first time at the career fair and she'll be the only representative on hand for her organization so the number and extent of interviews she can conduct will depend on how busy she is during the day.

"We'll be looking for people to fill some of our field positions. That means they'll be working outdoors and we'll have both day and night positions to fill. I'll be able to take resumes and may be able to do a few interviews after the fair closes," Zilinsky said.

For larger corporations, the process may be a bit more complicated. Kim Flanigan, Store Team Leader for Target, says the company is hoping to fill a number of positions in their stores throughout this region which includes Illinois and Missouri. These will be entry level management positions with an emphasis on the Chicago market.

"I'll be able to conduct a brief screening and take resumes. Some of those will then be invited to our Marion store for a more formal interview. Then we'll forward some of those resumes on to other stores and they'll follow with invitations for an interview there if they're interested," Flanigan said.

Even for those not ready to seek a position, the value of starting to develop their network with those in desired companies or career fields can not be overemphasized.

"Networking can be the key to learning the specific needs of the company. This is an ideal way to unlock the hidden job market,"

Benz said.

Students can tailor study and internship programs to mold their skills and experience to fit the needs of specific companies or industries. Benz's reference to the hidden job market refers to positions that are not normally advertised by companies and not readily identified by outsiders. Through networking, individuals may be able to identify those hidden jobs and position themselves to fit a specific niche.

Flanigan is optimistic about this year's job market.

"The last time I participated in the SIUC Career Fair there was a lot of interest in the Chicago area and nothing panned out. We just didn't have many positions. Now we have better contacts and more positions in the Chicago area. I feel we can be successful this time."

Benz echoes that optimism for this year's graduates and says that all signs point to an improved job market overall. Nonetheless, the prize positions will go to those who have done their homework, persist in their search and present themselves well.

Scanning Your Future

Competitive resumes in the electronic age

by mike thurwanger

Preparing that perfect resume is a rite of passage, part of the critical preparation that goes into the successful job search. Though friends and strangers are likely to offer you free advice, the fact is that there is no single "right" format. Often the perfect resume for one position needs to be revised to emphasize other skills or experience for a different position.

Perhaps the most frustrating aspect of resume preparation is the realization that many of those resumes will never be seen by a human reviewer. Today, many corporations employ electronic scanners to carry out the initial screening process, selecting and ranking a percentage of the submissions for human review and possible interviews.

This doesn't mean you can ignore all the old rules of resume writing but it does mean that you have to consider some rules specifically created for the scanning process.

The first requirement is that you keep it simple. Use a standard resume style with headings—don't use a two-column or newspaper format. Avoid italics, underlining, horizontal or vertical lines and any form of graphics. Use a standard font and a font size between 10 and 14 points. Most commonly used font styles are acceptable for scanning though certain serif type fonts, especially when printed in 10 point size, can cause problems.

Make sure your name, address and phone number appear prominently at the top of the first page and that your name appears at the top of any continuation pages. Print each line of your address on a separate line and if you provide more than one phone number, print them on separate lines as well.

When preparing the content of the resume, carefully review job advertisements, announcements and job descriptions for skills and qualities required of the successful candidate. Ensure that your resume includes those key terms exactly as they appear in the company's text. If you have expertise in particular areas or systems which have variations, make sure to include each of those forms to ensure that the scanner properly identifies your qualifications.

The scanning process involves the machine reading and recognizing key terms and phrases identified by the potential employer and scoring resumes based upon the appearance of those terms. Using terminology provided by the company and providing all applicable terms increases the likelihood that your qualifications will be scored correctly.

Once you've composed your scannable resume, you need to expand your proofreading process to consider the needs of the scanner. In addition to the usual spelling and grammatical considerations, proof closely for smudged or illegible characters, lines or type which touch or run into each other, and poor print quality. Scannable resumes should be printed on an ink-jet or laser printer at its best print quality setting. Edges of characters should be crisp. Use black ink on white paper for best contrast.

Finally, scanned resumes require care in the way they are submitted. Never rely upon fax transmissions because the poor quality of most faxes will not be adequate for scanning. Some sources even recommend against relying on transmission from computer fax-modem to computer fax-modem because of potential problems. If you must transfer a scannable resume electronically, it is recommended that you load the computer file directly into a data base.

Though a bit old-fashioned, the best method may still be the mail but even mailing requires special consideration. When mailing your information, do not fold or staple it. Place the resume and cover letter in a flat envelope and paper clip them together.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING POLICY

Please Be Sure To Check
Your Classified Advertisement For Errors
On The First Day Of Publication

The Daily Egyptian cannot be responsible for more than one day's incorrect insertion. Advertisers are responsible for checking their advertisements for errors on the first day they appear. Errors not the fault of the advertiser which lessen the value of the advertisement will be adjusted.

All classified advertising must be processed before 12:00 Noon to appear in the next day's publication. Anything processed after 12:00 Noon will go in the following day's publication. Classified advertising must be paid in advance except for those accounts with established credit. A 32¢ charge will be added to billed classified advertising. A service charge of $15.00 will be added to the advertiser's account for every check returned to the Daily Egyptian unpaid by the advertiser's bank. Early cancellation of a classified advertisement will be charged a $2.00 service fee. Any refund under $2.00 will be forfeited due to the cost of processing.

All advertising submitted to the Daily Egyptian is subject to approval and may be revised, rejected, or cancelled at any time. The Daily Egyptian assumes no liability if for any reason it becomes necessary to omit an advertisement.

A sample of all mail-order items must be submitted and approved prior to deadline for publication.

everyone gets healthy."

DeNoon said the team now is focusing on the next meet, which will be April 4-5 at the SEMOTION Relays in Cape Girardeau, Mo. The meet promises to bring some of the toughest competition the Salukis have faced to date.

"The extra time off is going to allow some of the runners to get over the flu," he said.

"People can get focused as well, because if not, it's going to be a long season."

The SIUC men's team battled to the last event but was unable to hold off Illinois State, which finished in first with 76 points, 8 points ahead of SIUC.

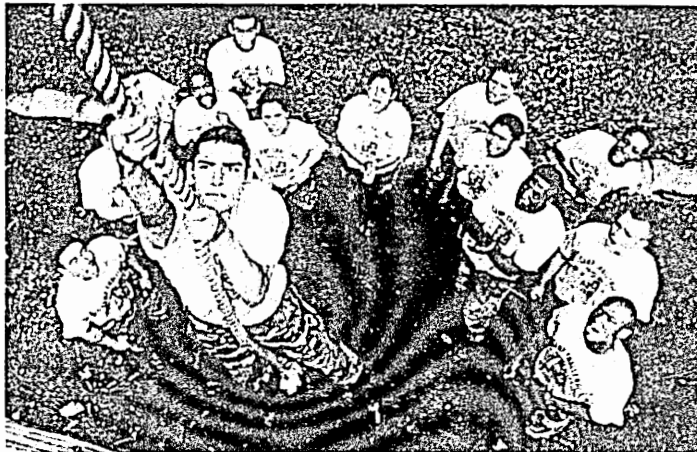

Jerardo Henry had a strong performance for the Salukis by winning the triple jump with a leap of 49-9 1/4. Henry, who is suffering from an injury, believes he could have had a more outstanding performance.

"If my legs stopped hurting I could have jumped even better," he said. "I had a hamstring strain, so I didn't compete in the long jump."

Besides Henry, the Salukis also came away with a win in the high jump from junior Neophytos Kalogerou.

Kalogerou, a junior from Cyprus, leapt to a height of 6-9 3/4 to win the event for the second straight meet.

Men's coach Bill Cornell was unavailable for comment.

Dawgs sweep McKendree

DOUBLE VICTORY:

Diamond Dawgs shut McKendree College out in Sunday doubleheader.

MICHAEL DEFORD
DE SPORTS EDITOR

Saluki catcher Brad Benson is about as focused as he can be right now.

Benson homered twice, drove in five runs on six hits and scored three times in two games Sunday as the baseball Salukis swept both games of a doubleheader against visiting McKendree College at Abe Martin Field.

Benson went two-for-three with one RBI in an 8-4 win in game one, then pushed four more runners across to lead the Salukis to a 10-6 win in the nightcap. Both of Benson's homers, numbers six and seven, came in the second game. "I'm just really focused right now," Benson said. "I'm seeing the ball well, and mentally, I'm happy with my approach."

"I'm just getting into a good state of mind and staying focused." Senior first baseman Aaron Jones followed Benson's second homer in game two with a solo shot to center. Jones' shot was his eighth of the season.

Sunday's sweep improved SIUC's overall record to 7-14, but Benson was less than pleased with how SIUC played.

"We needed these wins," Benson said. "They were important, but I am not so sure we played great baseball today."

ACROSS THE PLATE: Saluki right-hander Jay Schwerman, a freshman from Libertyville, delivers a pitch during the first game of a doubleheader Sunday afternoon at Abe Martin Field.

Chris Schullian started the game, but was taken out in favor of Schwerman after giving up six walks in an inning and a third.

"It's a mental thing," Callahan said of Schullian's performance. "I've been in the bullpen with him and I've seen him throw strikes, but he comes out in the game and cannot get it done."

"The bottom line is when the umpire says play ball, that's what is important."

Schwerman came in and gave up just two runs on four hits in 4 2/3 innings of work to pick up his first win of the season.

"I was pleased with Jay Schwerman's performance," Callahan said. "When you get a chance to pitch like he did and come out and do a commendable job, then you get a chance to go out again in the future."

In game one SIUC jumped on McKendree starter Corey Dagley

by scoring three runs in the bottom of the first to go up 3-1. The Salukis added one run in the second, one in the fifth and three more in the sixth. McKendree scored one run in the fourth, one in the sixth and one in the top of the seventh.

In the nightcap SIUC tagged Ryan Hood for two runs in the first, but relinquished the lead when Anderson was needed for four runs in the top of the second. SIUC then exploded for six runs in the second thanks in part to Benson and Jones' homers.

After a slow start, SIUC has won five of its last seven games, which Callahan considers a definite plus.

"When you consider where we are record wise, we've done something the last week or two," Callahan said. When you've got 14 losses, that's a positive."

SIUC faces Illinois University at Abe Martin Field Tuesday afternoon. Game time is at 2.

freshman Tracy Remspecher, allowing no runs and giving SIUC momentum to beat the Otahkians 4-2 in the championship game.

Brechtelbauer was pleased with the Salukis' strong offensive effort in the championship, which was helped by a 2-for-3 effort by sophomore second baseman Betsy Prater.

"It (the championship game) was a clean, well-played ball game, in terms of our defense as well as our hitting," she said. "Overall we had a good tournament. Basically, we had one inning that got us in trouble."

Van Exel fined $10,000
for postgame comments

The NBA fined Los Angeles Lakers guard Nick Van Exel $10,000 Saturday for remarks he made about the officiating in his team's 98-97 loss to Miami Friday night.

Van Exel made the remarks after teammate Elden Campbell got called for an over-the-back foul with 17 seconds left, possibly changing the outcome of the game.

The Lakers led 97-96, and Campbell was hit with the foul that nullified a basket. Nick Anderson then made two free throws to win the game. Not long before, Campbell had been hit with a technical foul. Tim Hardaway hit the free throw and then a three-pointer, pulling Miami to within a basket.

"I think it was more of a betting call," Van Exel said of the final foul call. He then said that because the FBI was investigating Fresno State University for point shaving, it may as well investigate officials Tommy Nunez, Ronnie Nunn and Tommie Wood.

He also blasted the officials' overall ability to call a game. Van Exel released a statement Saturday apologizing to the game officials and all NBA officials for his comments.

This was not the first time Van Exel has had a run-in with referees. Last season, he was suspended and fined for shoving a ref.

Mason placed on injured list

The Charlotte Hornets placed forward Anthony Mason on the injured list Saturday. Mason suffered a partial tear of the plantar fascia in his right foot in Friday's 102-97 win over Toronto and will be out of action for 10 days to three weeks.

He left the game with 6:22 remaining in the third quarter after scoring eight points and pulling down 10 rebounds. Mason underwent an MRI Saturday afternoon, which showed the partial tear.

Mason's foot will be placed in a cast today and will be re-evaluated Friday.

The 30-year-old is averaging 16.5 points, a team-high 11.3 rebounds and 5.7 assists in 66 games with Charlotte this season. He leads the NBA with 41 double-doubles, or 41 games in which he has reached double figures in two offensive categories.

Mason has scored more than nine points and averaged more than seven rebounds in his eight seasons with New Jersey, Denver, New York and Charlotte.

The club filled Mason's roster spot by activating veteran forward Tom Chambers off the injured list.

Tigers trade minor leaguers to Padres for Reed

The Detroit Tigers acquired second baseman Jody Reed from the San Diego Padres in exchange for minor-league outfielder Mike Darr and minor-league pitcher Matt Skarmetta Saturday.

The 34-year-old Reed hit .244 with two homers and 49 RBIs for the Padres last season. He has hit .272 with 27 homers and 387 RBIs in his 10 seasons with Boston, Los Angeles, Milwaukee and San Diego. Reed will back up Damion Easley at second base.

The 21-year-old Darr has hit .271 in three minor-league campaigns, and Skarmetta is 21-15 with a 3.35 ERA in four minor-league seasons.

DONNA COLTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REVIEWER

A no-hitter by SIUC softball pitcher Carisa Winters to open the Saluki Invitational Friday was just the beginning of good things to come for the Salukis.

Winters threw her first career no-hitter in a 10-0 opening-round victory over St. Louis University, which was one win toward SIUC's (15-10) eventual tournament title. The no-hitter was the first since April 2, 1996, when senior pitcher Jamie Schutteck tossed a no-hitter against the University of Evansville.

"I am pleased (with my no-hitter)," the freshman said. "It's not all me. The no-hitter comes from people fielding the ball and playing good defense. You've got to have good defense in order to throw a game like that."

Winters struck out five of the 16 batters she faced, while getting a strong 11-hit offensive effort from her teammates.

The Saluki softball team (15-10) will be in action again Wednesday when it heads to St. Louis to take on St. Louis University at 3 p.m.

does set the stage for the rest of the tournament and gives the team a little bit of confidence," coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said.

"(Winters) threw a very nice ball game against St. Louis University. And then we had some very good hitting. A no-hitter is impressive any time you throw one."

After Winters' no-hitter, Schutteck graced the mound by throwing a one-hitter against the University of Northern Iowa Friday to give SIUC a 2-0 tournament record and an assured championship game against Southeast Missouri State University (5-11-1) Saturday.

Schutteck struck out a career-high 13 batters against UNI, while giving a strong offensive effort in the top of the fourth by hitting a triple and eventually scoring.

"I was satisfied with 13 strikeouts," Schutteck said. "I thought if I started it off good, I finished it up well. And that is what I need to do."

"Saturday I think was one of my better games."

The Salukis faced SEMO in a double-header on Saturday, with the latter game determining the tournament championship. In the first game, SIUC got down 5-0 after the second inning and eventually lost the game 5-3.

But SIUC made a comeback against SEMO, giving the Salukis momentum going into the championship game.

"Instead of staying down the whole game, they proved to themselves they can come back," Brechtelsbauer said.

Runners fall short of title at home

SIU INVITATIONAL:

SIUC track squads unable to clinch victory in only home meet of season.

BRAD WEBER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REVIEWER

After beginning the SIU Invitational with a strong showing Saturday, the men's and women's track and field teams were unable to hold back the competition to win the invitational title.

Women's coach Don DeNoon thought his Salukis could have performed at a higher level and need to improve if they want to experience success this season.

"As a team I thought we could have done better," he said. "We need to put things together a little bit so we can be successful the rest of the season."

The women's team finished third in the eight-team meet Saturday compiling 126 points, while the men placed second behind Illinois State with 68 points.

DeNoon said he was surprised by the performance of Miami (Ohio) University, which ended up winning the invitational with 175 points.

"They had a lot of depth," he said. "Even without their top athlete, they put a show on for the crowd."

One Saluki who excited the crowd Saturday was senior Heather Greeling.

Greeling won the long jump, jumping 18-3 3/4, while also placing third in the triple jump with 36-11 3/4 and fourth in the 100-meter high hurdles with 14.95.

Greeling, whose long jump victory was the first of her career at SIUC, said she has been improving each week with her jumps mentally and physically.

"I have been gaining more confidence as I go along," she said. "I was competing on the home track, and I felt really comfortable, which allowed me to have good jumps."

SIUC's other champions on the day included senior Vena Clendenin (132-0) in the javelin for the second straight week, freshman Jennifer Monaco had a 37:29.00 in the 10,000-meter run, and the 4x400 meter run, with a time of 3:51.35.

Junior Kelly French, who finished third in the 3,000 meters, said the team practices helped the Salukis have a strong performance.

"It was the training we've been doing," she said. "Obviously we're going to be even stronger when
