Lost form prompts election questions

DAN GAST
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

One student's lost voter registration form has prompted questions regarding how voter registration is handled on campus and throughout Jackson County.

Eric Hendricks, a senior in political science from Carbondale, has been asking questions following the primary elections last month. Hendricks says he was denied the chance to vote in spite of being registered.

Jackson County Clerk Larry Heitbrant said he has contact with the book and is unsure why Hendricks' registration never came through.

"He has the receipt for his registration form, but the rest of his registration never came through this office," Heitbrant said.

Heitbrant said Hendricks is the only person who has contacted his office with an incomplete registration.

Hendricks, however, says he observed between 30 and 40 students who also were denied access to the voting booth at Grinnell Hall within a three-hour time frame.

Election judge Charles Wytt, who was working the Carbondale 23 precinct in Grinnell Hall on Election Day, told the Egyptian that he saw seven to 10 students "who should have been able to vote." Heitbrant said he was registered in a drive sponsored by Undergraduate Student Government last month and said that after consulting with Hendricks, it was determined that Hendricks' registration had been taken by Dan Buecherschutt, a registrar sponsored by the Illinois Department of Natural Resources.

"We have been working with USG to ensure that nobody gets put in the same situation as Mr. Hendricks," Heitbrant said. "Your name has to be on the list, regardless of the number of registration forms out there."

Sorority lashes out at BAC coordinator

MONEY: Sean Smith accused of improperly funding group activities.

The Zetas had a deficient account at the time of their request and according to BAC members, BAC's policy states they are not allowed to fund any organization with a negative balance account. Munirah Frye, a member of Zeta Phi Beta Sorority Inc., currently co-chair of the Zeta Community Fundraiser, said the sorority was able to raise money without the help of BAC.

Frye said when BAC is making a decision, he goes to the Recreation Center, to Student Affairs, the Center of Civics and Student Affairs, but this procedure is not often practiced.

"Frye said that BAC was in favor to give the money to the Zeta's to help them out. But the money was never used for the correct purposes." Raysa Hall, Zeta Phi Beta president, said that after Smith made the decision, "we have not seen any of the money from BAC." She added that "BAC's goals are not to help the Zetas, but rather to support other organizations that require it." Pat's hoity-toity run for the roses (on the White House south lawn)

Pat Buchanan got up in Manchester, N.H., and announced he is running for president yet again. More of the same old stuff. Buchanan's propaganda is tiring. We've heard this all before...
Granberg said the snake could spend time in the south of Marion, "would provide a compromise might need this.

Capie's argument was that the economic costs of the cost savings were not, enough, especially if it still took years to pay yourself back. The report showed that the expected savings would not be realized until fiscal year 2003 and would amount to $3,000,000. These savings would come from reductions in staff.

Sanders said he was not too sure if they were still looking at the complete report. The economics of the report was something he was looking at and he did not want to make a recommendation to the board before April. "I'm not sure that we should be affecting anything right now," Sanders said. "I have not realized the full extent of this report, and I have really not had the chance to study this report in the way I would like to."
'Fantastic Intentions' more accurate

STORY BY TIM SAUNER

"Cruel Intentions" is the best science-fiction movie of the year. Nothing yet to be released will match its flair for unreliable characters, fantastical scenes and things that Bogie would have never touched. I don't know which is worse, the film's antics or its intention - crude or otherwise - for an audience to enjoy it.

An updated version of "Dangerous Liaisons," step-siblings Sebastian and Kathryn (Ryan Phillippe and Sarah Michelle Gellar) sit in their posh Manhattan penthouse deciding dirty deeds to keep them occupied. When a bet is struck over whether Sebastian can date the character's alibi (Reese Witherspoon), he haggles over what she is to fall in love with her.

This is one ploy that should never have left the stable. There's not a single character that isn't aш the is the contented, or just a contented friend. The film just sits there languishing. When we're not following Sebastian on his being pursued, we find Kathryn trying to corrupt a young girl (Selma Blair) for stealing a combination of boyfriends or something.

As far as Hair's character is concerned, about three guys seem to fall for her. I can't see how anyone would want to sleep with someone so obvious and stupid, much less fall in love with her.

How much fantasy do "Cruel Intentions" ask you swallow? If Sebastian loses the bet, he loses his vintage Jaguar. If he wins, turns out to be "true love" and you're staying to tell me that these two, with all their flinting, angry morals and short attention span haven't got it on yet.

As far as this: We're to believe that Sebastian starts falling in love with Witherspoon's character because she makes him laugh.

Right.

How about this cold-heart ed inability would fall at the drop of a hat to make how good Witherspoon is at making funny faces. Most films lead you in before easing their credibility out the window. "Cruel Intentions" throws it out in the first three minutes.

"But it's a fun and easy dance.
"An Argentina native, Abou-Zarar has studied dance since she was young. She performed in many dance shows and even has been in athletic competitions. She's taught dance for seven years.
Not only does she teach the basic moves of the tango, the saltado and other various dances, but the style of the Latin dance.
"When people think of Latin dance they think of the salsa," she said. "Latin dance can be a lot of dances. It depends on what part of the country you're from."

Derived from Latin America, tango is a ballroom dance performed by couples using various steps, figure and poses. The man takes the dominant role and gives the woman cues on how to move. Abou-Zarar teaches them the moves that allows her students to take control. "I show them the basic steps then they can add their own personal flair," she said. "It's a beautiful and very passionate dance."
Her students enjoyed watching the sensual dance and jumped at the opportunity to learn.
"I'm a dance teacher," said Abou-Zarar. "I get a very good pop of the dance motivated her to take the class."
"It's fun," she said. "It's got that Afro-Cuban rhythm thing going on. It's lively dance and a fun challenge for students down here."

Viticolo has listened to Latin music for years and wanted to do more than listen to it on the radio.
"I love the tango and the tango music," he said. "I thought that it would be great to learn to dance to the music that I love."

OSCARS

Life," and a movie that was great but whose heroes should have been restricted to the Best Foreign Film category, Roberto Bagnoli's "Life Is Beautiful." ("Life" was nominated as Best Picture and Best Foreign Film, aggravating many Oscar enthusiasts.)

Other great films were left in the dust. What happened to one of my personal favorites, Mike Nichols' "Primary Colors?" in the year where Bill Clinton, publicly denouncing them, was playing in Hollywood films, it would have been a clever move for Best Picture to go to a movie that works as much as its theme is going to Washington, D.C.

More notably left were films that were, as anticipated nominations, for "Happiness," "Babe, Pig in the City" and "A Simple Faith?" Aside from the feelings I obviously shelter toward the Academy for selecting, I will still be watching the awards ceremony tomorrow evening. I will try to predict the winners based on their achievements, but because nominations were picked half-asos, I'll be ejecting the loser of five eves in every category. At the same time, I would like to honor the movies, the actors and actresses, the Academy, and the industry.

my mind, here are my picks and my wishes for the 1999 Academy Awards.

Best picture prediction: "Saving Private Ryan." It has a shot in, with the only chance for an upset in the hands of "Shakespeare in Love."

Best picture win: "Dark City."

A modernistic version of Fritz Lang's "Metropolis" that not the classics same epic pretensions it is a masterpiece with hand of time.

Best director prediction: Steven Spielberg, "Saving Private Ryan."

The winner in the B.P.I slot and the director category go hand in hand.

Best director win: It's a tie between Todd Solondz's "Happiness," and Michael Moore's "The Big One." Two of the most most and admirable films of the decade had equally during admirable directors.

Be sure to prediction: Nick Nolte in "Affliction." A big was put for a great performance in a small but great film that got him nomination. Here is the Academy's chance to pay the movie back, as it pays homage to the performer.

Best score win: Johnny Deep in "Edward Scissorhands." In a role that could have dominated the award, Deep doesn't just play Hunter S. Thompson -- he embodies him.

Best acting prediction: Cate Blanchett, "Elizabeth," "Elizabeth."

Best actress win: Julianne Moore, "The Big Lebowski." The movie was weak, but the film role was written to help keep it together. Moore might just miss it all the way to "Philomena."

Best original screenplay win and prize: Andrew Nihill, "The Front Runner." Best screenplay is always given to the movie that was named a Best Picture, so logically, Nihill should win.

Best adapted screenplay pick and win: EliseMay, "Primary Colors." May has been snubbed many many nominations for "Primary Colors." Here, the Academy can make amends with the same while honoring film much deserving of praise.

And the performers? Surprisingly, it's the only one who manages to escape with soars -- of disaster. The mutiny starts before he's even had a chance to show his true colors.

According to several reports, Nemeth was trying to hide in the dressing rooms during the break, and was later seen being led away by security guards.

The director is technically back on the fringe between Dickers and a Weinstein forum letter.

in the end, it's your boy. It's the day for Recovery time for defending champs

The SIUC women’s golf team competed in the LSU/Hurricane Invitational in Baton Rouge, La., today through Sunday. The Salukis opened their season toward the top of the MVC. Last year, SIUC’s season was concluded in the NCAA Indoor Championships earlier this month.

Men set to open season in Missouri

The Saluki men’s golf team begins its season March 21 in the Southeast Missouri State Spring Classic in Springfield, Mo. Coach Leroy Newton, in his sixth season at SIUC, said 74 1/2, average in the fall season looks good for the young and up-and-coming Salukis following this season’s strong performances at the conference level.

Track teams invade Florida

The SIUC track and field teams head to Florida during spring break to open up their outdoor seasons. The SIUC men’s team will participate in the Florida State Relays in Tallahassee, Fla., March 19-20. The women’s team will attend the Tallahassee competition, as well as the Sunbird Invitational in Orlando, Fla.

Men’s track and field

The men’s and women’s teams both look to improve on their strong performances at the MVC Indoor Conference finishes in the twenty-completed indoor season.

Junior long jumper Brad Bowers enters his first season since earning All-American honors at the NCAA Indoor Championships earlier this month.

"Here," Reinhardt also commented USG president Smith for their efforts in this area. After all, he said, communication is the key to making any office successful, and the Saluki president said communication is the key to his success. After all, Reinhardt said, the Salukis finished sixth in the league. Kaylor finished first in the three-meter springboard events at the MVC Championships.

Reinhardt also added that he was just happy to have been able to work and communicate with his office to ensure that "we know where our students are," Reinhardt said.

Hendricks also questioned USG regarding its registration, a list of votes signed by USG-registered identifiers did not include any students. "I am uncertain, Dr. Reinhardt said his office does not keep the students’ registration forms," Hendricks told SIUC’s official, chief investigator of the Student Board of Elections. "They are to be kept in the office of the County Clerk and lost there, misplaced in the USG office or been invalid for some reason.

The County Clerk has been unable to process some registrations last fall because of human errors and lack of information. Hendricks’ application was not affected by that occurrence because he registered Jan. 22.

Hendricks said he is considering contacting the State Attorney’s office regarding the matter.

Meanwhile, he has re-registered to vote.

"If we should have problems like this in the future, I would say the group of registrants is in order," Hendricks is under.

Spring break is typically a time to relax and unwind after a grueling semester, but the Salukis have other plans.

The Salukis baseball team is headed to Florida — for the second time this season.

On Tuesday, they embark on a four-game journey at the University of Illinois at Springfield (0-3) at 2 p.m. eastern time.

Sunday’s opener will be against the University of Wisconsin-Oshkosh (2-3). The game will begin at 1:05 p.m. eastern time.

The Salukis (8-3) are coming off a 1-2 record in the Missouri Valley Conference and are looking to improve on their 8-3 record.

Evansville, Ark. — The Salukis will have the chance to add to their NCAA diving record.

This is the first time since 2008 that the Salukis have qualified for the NCAA Championships.

The Salukis are one of 32 teams selected for the meet.

The meet will be held at the University of Texas in Austin.

The Salukis are looking to improve on their 21-27-1 record from last season.
