Fry wants police to move within city

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

City officials said Tuesday they will agree to salary increase demands of the Carbondale Police Officer's Association if members of the union who do not live within the city limits agree to move into the city within six months.

"They are asking this community to pay toward their pension fund increments based on the property tax. They don't own stock in the company," City Manager Carroll Fry said.

As Fry spoke to reporters at City Hall, officers continued to walk an informational picketline that was set up Monday. The officers say they will continue indefinitely to protest "the city's unwillingness" to deal fairly with the union. CPOA President Joe Coughlin said.

The City Council approved an ordinance last November making it mandatory for all city employees to live within the city limits. According to Coughlin, the city hired 29 of 39 CPOA members knowing that they lived outside of Carbondale. To ask the officers to mortgage their homes and to resettle their families via a contract stipulation is "a contract proposal that was never intended to be accepted by the CPOA," Coughlin said.

However, Fry countered: "They don't participate in the tax base. If a city isn't good enough to live in, then it isn't good enough to work for."

Fry said the suggestion that the officers be forced to move to the city was met by "raucous" laughter from the CPOA, which is an attitude, he said, that is destructive to an air of "collective bargaining."

"They would be giving something to us that none of the other unions had given. If we offer something we expect something in return," Fry said.

According to Fry, if the officers agree to move into the city, the administration will agree to a union-proposed 8.5 percent increase for the second year of the contract.

But, if the union rejects the administration-proposed residency requirement the city will not approve any salary increase higher than 7 percent for both years of the contract.

Non-union city employees were given a 7 percent pay increase for fiscal year 1980-81 and members of the Teamsters Union and the Plumbers and Pipefitters Union negotiated a 7 percent increase with the city.

"We have the highest paid police force in Southern Illinois. The union does not understand the bargaining process by saying 'we want this' and not giving anything in return," Fry said.

Without overtime, the average yearly pay for a non-probationary officer in the city is $15,023.21. Officers put in a yearly average of 200 hours in overtime, Coughlin said.

Being one of the highest paid police departments in Southern Illinois "is nothing to be ashamed of," Coughlin said.

"I would hope that the city feels it is getting something for the price they pay."

Negotiations for the contract, which was to be effective May 1, were at an "apparent impasse," Fry said. The last meeting between the union and the city was held last week.

"The city stands ready to continue the discussions at any point the union returns to the bargaining table. If we call in a mediator we will be back at square 1," Fry said.

Fry refused to comment when

Carroll Fry

asked how the city would respond to a police work slow down.

The union proposed the 8.5 percent increase for the second year of the contract after the city said they could not go any higher than 7 percent for the contract's first year. Originally, the city's negotiating team, which is headed by Assistant City Manager Scott Ratter, said they could not go any higher than 7 percent for both years of the contract but that proposal was rejected by the union. Neither Ratter nor any other member of the city's negotiating team was present at Tuesday's news conference. Coughlin was allowed to sit in on the meeting as an observer.

Fry said the city is ready to agree to federal advisory arbitration but, to date, the union has "failed to respond to that offer."

Coughlin said the union would continue to attempt to bring its grievances to the community through informational picketing before making the move to advisory arbitration.

Coughlin charged that the administration can afford the increases but has continually refused to "negotiate" with the union by stating that they could not allocate any more money for the increases than what is provided for in city council-approved general fund budget ceilings.

House vote near

Carter urges Illinois legislators to vote for ERA

By Diana Penner
Staff Writer

With the day of the Equal Rights Amendment vote in the Illinois House drawing near, President Carter has been making phone calls to legislators opposed to the amendment urging them to reconsider their positions.

Rep. Vincent Birchler, D-Chester, an ERA opponent, said he received a call from the President at about 9 p.m. Monday. Birchler said after some small talk about the weather, Carter asked him if he had changed his views on the amendment.

"I said, 'Mr. President, my vote will be no. The people in my district have indicated they do not support the amendment,'" Birchler said.

Barbara Haugen, director of information services for the White House Task Force on Women, said it is not unusual for Carter to make calls to lobby for an issue.

"He has done it numerous times in other states with regard to the Equal Rights Amendment. He did it in Georgia, Florida and several other states," Haugen said.

She said she did not know if Carter had managed to change any votes with his calls.

The House is scheduled to vote on the issue Wednesday. Birchler said there were so many pro-ERA lobbyists on the floor Tuesday, singing songs and chanting, that it was difficult to walk around or hear.

"But I don't think they're changing anyone's mind. Right now it could go either way. In any case, it will be close," Birchler said.

He said he has talked to other representatives who have received calls from the President, including Rep. Monroe Flinn, D-Cahokia, from the 57th legislative district.

Rep. Bruce Richmond, D-Murphysboro, said he did not receive a call from the President, probably because he is known as a strong supporter of the proposed amendment.

Sen. Gene Johns, D-Marion, an ERA opponent, said he has not received a call from the President, but said he expects to if the resolution to ratify is approved by the House and moves to the Senate.

"If he does call, I plan to make him a proposal. I'll tell him I would be willing to give up by religious views on ERA if he will burn Illinois coal and put our miners back to work," Johns said.

However, Johns added, the President probably would not go for such a deal.

Both Johns and Carter are Baptists. Johns said his church does not support the proposed amendment.

Gov. James R. Thompson and Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne also have declared their support for the amendment. Legislators disagree on the impact their endorsements will have on the vote.

Rep. John Matijevec, D-North Chicago, sponsor of the resolution, said the support of the mayor and the governor "can't hurt." But Birchler said last week Byrne's support "can't help," and Thompson's will have little effect at all.

Thompson has had some problems working with the legislature, and Byrne has been dealt severe criticism by many legislators.

Johns said he feels Byrne's endorsement has actually diminished chances of passage of ERA.

"Mayor Byrne set it back quite a bit," Johns said.

Matijevec said support from the two high-ranking office holders, one a Democrat and one a Republican, will help swing the votes of some who were undecided and "needed a little political push."

"I don't think anyone will vote against the amendment because the mayor is for it. This issue has nothing to do with her leadership in Chicago," Matijevec said.

Matijevec said he is optimistic the measure will pass if called Wednesday, but conceded the vote will be close. "Several people have told me we'd win overwhelmingly if we could have a secret ballot, but of course we can't do that," Matijevec said.

If the vote is called Wednesday, it will mark the eighth time the issue was voted on in the House. It has failed in the House six times and four times in the Senate. It was passed once by each chamber, but not in the same year.

Illinois is the only major northern industrial state that has not ratified the amendment.

City postpones mall bond OK

By Mary Harmon
Staff Writer

Neither two hours of discussion nor the suggestions offered by interested financiers could bring the City Council to a consensus concerning the guidelines for the issuance of industrial revenue bonds.

Monday night the council also tabled for another week a letter of the city's intent to issue bonds for the financing of a shopping center complex in the southwest section of Carbondale.

Jim Murtha, of the Leo Eisenberg Co., which plans to own the buildings and lease the store space in the complex, said his company will meet all guidelines established by the city, but it cannot proceed without the city's agreement to issue bonds.

City Manager Carroll Fry was directed by the Council a month ago to draw up guidelines to follow when issuing bonds. But only five of the 12 criteria suggested by Fry were agreed upon by council members Monday night.

Council members Watkins, Mitchell Jones and Westberg and Mayor Hans Fischer agreed that bonds issued should aid in promoting Carbondale as Southern Illinois' retail trading center and should be used to attract small and medium size, non-technical industries to the area.

Though Fry, in his recommended criteria, said saving jobs should be considered equally with creating them, the Council decided that no figure could be placed on the number of jobs created or saved.

Tom Wimberly of the Illinois Department of Business and Economic Development reminded the Council that putting a specification on the number of jobs needed before the city would issue bonds might be in violation of the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

Despite the urging of Steven Scheinberg, bond underwriter for Matthews and Wright Corporation, that the city should keep the guidelines flexible concerning the burden on city services each project will bring, Fry emphasized the need for a cost-benefit study for each project.

"The city needs to know the added cost to the city of each project," Fry explained. "We need to do what the developers are doing, and that's asking, 'Is it worth it to me?'"

The bulk of the discussion between the council and the financiers centered on the city's collection of a service fee for issuing the bonds and the interest rate placed on the bonds.

Fry had noted in his recommendations that a service fee for issuing and supervising the sale of bonds might be desirable, but the council remained divided on the point.

Susan Mitchell suggested the fee be charged but rebated if the architectural design included energy conservation measures.

However, Fry said the measures would be difficult to supervise, and those requirements should be left to the federal government.

"It should be by law, not fiat," he said.

Though Mayor Fischer said the profit to the city lies in the jobs created through bond financing, council members Jones, Watkins and Westberg favored a small service charge for issuing the bonds.

Wimberly suggested Carbondale may want to charge a fee, if only to limit requests from companies wanting bonds issued for development in near-by communities.

An example, he said, was South Barrington, Ill., which as a home rule city can more easily issue bonds than its neighboring non-home rule communities. That city, Wimberly said, charged a fee for development in cities outside their own but within a 10-mile radius.

He said such a fee should be large enough to cover costs, not to make a profit.

Jury convicts man for trying to steal radio

A Carbondale man was found guilty by a Jackson County Jury Tuesday of burglary, attempted theft and criminal trespass.

Al Dandridge, 25, was convicted for breaking into a car parked at the Carbondale Post Office on Illinois 13 and trying to steal a CB radio in February 1979.

The prosecuting attorney, Guice Strong, assistant Jackson County state's attorney, called eye-witnesses to the incident to testify in the trial.

Michael Baird, assistant Jackson County public defender, said he tried to negotiate with the state's attorney's office to have the felony charge of burglary dropped, but Strong was not willing to bargain.

According to Illinois statutes, a burglary charge may be filed in any case involving illegal entry to property, including automobiles.

State Board to run random check of House petition

By Karen Gulló
Staff Writer

The State Board of Elections will begin checking the validity of the 476,000 signatures in a citizen's petition drive aimed at slashing the size of the Illinois House by 59 seats now that the Coalition for Political Honesty has apparently won its first battle in a fight to put a referendum on the November general election ballot.

In hearings Tuesday, the board ruled 7-1 to begin random samplings of the 345,000 signatures collected in single election districts and also the 130,000 signatures which apparently do not comply with a new law enacted last August that requires petition signers to live in the same election district as the person passing the petition.

However, it's unclear how the board will sample the 130,000 signatures, said Phil Gilbert, a board member who practices law in Carbondale. He said the board is trying to devise a proper method by which the validity of the signatures, which were gathered across differing election districts, can be fairly assessed. The board will begin checking with local county clerks to find out how many of the 476,000 were of registered voters, he said.

The board's ruling followed testimony from a Circuit Court judge and two delegates to the 1970 Illinois constitutional convention, who contend that the new law should not be applied to the Coalition for Political Honesty's cutback petition drive because it was passed six months after the drive began.

Judge Louis J. Perona of LaSalle County told the board the law is "patently unreasonable," according to Associated Press reports. Perona, who was a delegate to the convention that in 1970 rewrote the state constitution, said the law allowed the targets of the cutback drive - lawmakers - to change the law and make it tougher for the petitioners, it was reported.

Gilbert said the testimony was not a factor in the board's decision to begin random sampling of the petitions. The testimony will be "more pertinent" during electoral board meetings in July where all parties affected by the petition will be present, Gilbert said.

If I were Student President...

By Ken Mac Garrigue
Staff Writer

Here are some candid comebacks to the suggestion box question: "If I were Student Body President, I would..."

They were submitted two weeks ago by SIUC students. They are random. They are in no particular order. They are: Do something about the skyrocketing cost of education and eliminate the Capitol Hill concept of student government. Rename Campus Lake.

Allow drinking in the dorms for those who are of age. Untangle the mess at registration.

Party. Get a vote for students in policy-making by the administration.

Open a refreshment lounge in the library for study breaks.

Stop housing from stopping students in the lunch line because their other housing bills aren't paid.

Standardize the grading system. Contesting a grade is impossible, no one listens.

Make bike trails in town and out to Grassy Lake and Route 51.

Build new parking lots and stop students from being screwed on tickets.

Take away the bond

retirement fee

Inform students about promotion and tenure and about how much those silly teacher evaluation forms really count.

(1) Place a restroom on the first floor of the library. (2) Execute all known rapists. (3) Limit the number of students from Chicago. (4) Eliminate the General Studies courses. (5) Put plane lights on paths near the Arena parking lot.

Do something to increase the interest and funding for athletics.

Quit raising fees, especially the athletics one.

Chain every administrator to a stationary object in the lobby of Morris Library until they memorize word for word the statement of purpose inscribed on the wall.

Get more counselors in all departments.

Make everyone realize how stupid and meaningless and rotten everything is without Jesus Christ.

Build better bike paths.

Make the University stop raising tuition every year.

DROP OUT. Get the student trustee a full and binding vote.

Legalize pot and get rid of the phony people in government

Pay the athletics fee only if you're going to use facilities or attend events. Open the library on Saturday nights and earlier on Sunday morning.

Destroy the student government.

Lower the faculty retirement age.

Get the administration to be more selective when hiring foreign teachers because math and sciences are hard enough to understand.

Complete the Recreation Building. It's only 60 percent complete. Signed: SCRC Students for the Completion of the Rec Center.

Do something about the Bursar's Office having only half the payment windows open on days when payments are due.

Try to find a simple solution to the longevity of time students have to stand in line at the Bursar's Office. Roll in some magazines or since we're paying for our education—encyclopedias!

Beef up security.

Try to get more money for the Art Department. You wouldn't believe how bad it is! We need help! Signed: A Concerned Art Student.

Have Gale Sayers books audited!!! See how much he spends on athletic tape!

Eliminate the fee statement—have an ID only.

Abolish the athletics department.

Work to increase programming with regards to blacks.

Try to promote the Greek system.

Get more leniency toward off-campus housing for sophomores.

Have a suggestion box like this outside my office at all times.

10-cent a gallon gas tax overturned

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge on Tuesday overturned President Carter's 10-cent-a-gallon gasoline fee that was to have shown up at gasoline pumps Thursday.

The government was expected to appeal the decision by U.S. District Judge Aubrey E. Robinson Jr.

After the court's ruling was announced, Carter told a group of visiting editors and broadcasters that the fee was "extremely important for our nation to maintain."

Carter's fee would be imposed on all gasoline, whether it was refined from domestic or imported oil, while the law only gives the president the power to regulate imported gasoline and crude oil, Robinson said in a 12-page opinion.

UAW head voted Chrysler director

ROCKFORD (AP) — Shareholders of Chrysler Corp. cheerfully voted an old company antagonist, the head of the United Auto Workers union, to a directorship Tuesday — the first time such a thing ever has been done in a major U.S. corporation.

UAW President Douglas A. Fraser was nominated to the position by Chrysler Chairman Lee A. Iacocca last fall as a result of the negotiations by which the UAW gave the troubled automaker $203 million in contract concessions — later increased to $446 million — to help the company qualify for $1.5 billion in federal loan guarantees granted Saturday. The nomination was not incorporated into the UAW contract, but simply was extended to Fraser individually.

Castro accused of deporting diseased

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP) — Navy doctors treating Cuban refugees charged Tuesday that Fidel Castro is shipping mental patients and the dying among thousands seeking asylum in the United States — people suffering from cancer, tuberculosis and even leprosy.

But the doctors said there is no evidence that the Cuban president is deporting carriers of highly contagious diseases.

The number of arrivals from Cuba on the "Freedom Flotilla" has slowed considerably. By mid-day Tuesday, only one refugee boat had arrived in 24 hours. A total of 37,000 Cubans have made the crossing since the boatlift began April 21.

Key West was virtually cleared of refugees, most sent either to Miami or Fort Chaffee, Ark.

Navy doctors said recent refugees included some sick people, and Dr. Tom Valdes said he believes Castro is sending the sick "on purpose to hurt people."

End-of-the-year foolishness hits (again!)

One thing I'll always remember about my six semesters at the DE is all the farewell garbage people write at the end of the semester.

Scott Ellis' final column was like the plague.

Jim McCarty's was like a terrible disease.

Hopefully mine will only be like the flu, or an upset stomach.

So, here goes...

THINGS I'LL REMEMBER ABOUT SIU

- Comparing DE Faculty Managing Editor Bill Harmon to Col. Potter on MASH.

- Stan Winter walking into McAndrew Stadium carrying a taiglate one week after people found out about the administrators' "taiglate parties," and his dancing with a lampshade on his head at a subsequent party.

- Journalism teacher Hugh Morgan constantly saying to students behind in their work, "Come see me in my office."

- Jeff Rubin's stirring speeches in GSD 153, especially the one on intramural officiating.

- WSIU Promotion Director Ery Coppi's movie telethons, especially his hardselling of "movies, movies, movies."

- Listening to fifth-year senior Carl Spozia's "philosophies on women, including his." It could have been worse, you could have never met her.

Nick Sortal

editorial page editor

- Sneaking sloe gin into the computer room on Friday afternoons and Saturdays.

- Dave Mees' jokes in math class.

- Dan Grimm asking Indiana State basketballer Larry Bird to autograph a beer bottle outside the stadium after the Sycamores beat SIU and Bird artfully saying, "Hell, no. I don't drink that sh—"

- The great "Anybody Can Review" contest. Last year, thinking it would be a great promotional idea, I decided the DE should have a contest where people other than journalism students reviewed the Beach Boys concert, and the entertainment staff would choose the best one. Unfortunately, no one entered. Rather than admit that my "sensational" idea was a flop, I decided to "compose" a review the best I could (even though I hadn't seen the concert).

- Under the byline of "Karen L. Schwartz." I got the last laugh, however. Mike Blickensderfer came up to me afterward and said, "Now that I've seen a review done by someone who doesn't know what they're talking about, I can appreciate the work you guys do." (I saved the review for my clippings file.)

- Almost getting into a fight one Halloween when I laughed at a guy who I thought had a mask on, but didn't.

- Wondering if some place there is a Gus Bode who sits around writing "Bill Harmons."

- Radio-television majors Dave Gafrick and Rory Clark—the twin loudmouths.

- Mary Ann McNulty in her sailor suit.

- Mary Ann McNulty NOT in her sailor suit.

- Mary Ann McNulty's incredible "Shriner Party" where a faculty member strolled in with a case of beer and an ear-to-ear grin.

- Shaking basketballer Mike Glenn's hand minutes after he gunned in 35 points to help SIU beat Arizona State 81-77 in the 1977 NCAA playoffs.

- Band directors Mike Hanes and Mel Seiner, the two sharpest men in the music business.

- Jim Sizemore saying he is going to med school.

- All the people in academic advisement being so much nicer and competent than they get credit for, especially Jane Wilson and Barbara Lips.

- Going to Das Fass on warm Friday afternoons in May.

- The impeachment last year of Student President Garrick Clinton-Matthews.

- Telling the following horrible joke for four consecutive years.

I came home from school the other day and saw my mom crying. She said "I baked you a cake today, but the dog ate it."

And I said, "That's OK, mom, we can bury the dog."

- The guy in Morris Library who has a beard, a brown briefcase, a scraggly shirt and walks with a limp. He was in the library every time I ever was in there. I always swore to myself that I would do a story on him, but I never did.

- Funny guy Eddy Sokoloff, who looks like Woody Allen.

- Dennis Frazier, an A-plus student who handles his cerebral palsy with wit. While trading insults with him once, he said to me, "If I weren't so tired I'd run you over."

- Grant Sovereign and other people in the Marching Salukis' "Red Band."

- Truck-on-In (a.k.a. Le Bistro, a.k.a. Melvin's, a.k.a. Quartertime Junction).

- 76-year-old Edy the Ingersoll and 80-year-old Hallie Moake drinking rum punch at my New Year's Eve party.

Oh, well, that's it. See you at graduation.

Postponing Halloween talk: Is it merely a coincidence?

By Mary Ann McNulty
Staff Writer

Students may have lost a chance Monday night to hear first-hand the city's recommendations and decisions on Halloween '80, if there is going to be a Halloween '80 celebration.

Earlier this spring, the City Council decided to discuss Halloween at the informal council meeting May 12, the first day of finals. Reports and recommendations from both the Liquor Advisory Board and the administrative Halloween Study Committee were also slated to be discussed.

A few students, including student senators and Undergraduate Student Organization representatives, showed up at the meeting Monday and waited for Halloween to be discussed. They waited for 3½ hours as the council talked about rezoning an area from "dry" to "wet," about an energy conservation grant and about commercial revenue bonding.

However, at 10:30 p.m. they were told that because of the lack of time, Halloween, as well as other items, would be rescheduled until a special informal meeting May 19. This Monday falls after finals week, when few students are in town.

Although council members refute the idea that it was a "deliberate attempt" on the part of the council to avoid discussing the issue of another "Halloween party" until students were out of town, some students aren't so sure.

USO President Pete Alexander says he is planning on sending a letter to the council to share some of his concerns on Halloween and on the scheduling of a public hearing last December — also during finals week — to discuss at what age persons should be allowed to enter bars.

Former East Side Senator Christ Cordingan, who attended the meeting, said he didn't know if "it was intentional or not, but it doesn't look good."

Cordingan said it was probably just "an unfortunate mistake in scheduling by those who weren't aware of finals. It was unfortunate that we were put behind other matters of such importance, also."

Jim Karas, USO liaison to the City Council, said he didn't think it was a deliberate move at all, but that the council just had too much to discuss.

Councilman Charles Watkins said the council was not trying to avoid discussion on a Halloween celebration.

"We started early in the spring to try to resolve this issue by the end of the semester. We didn't want to resolve it in the summer or next fall. I feel as certain as I can that there was not a deliberate attempt to avoid the issue," Watkins said.

Councilman Archie Jones agreed with Watkins and said that the Halloween issue will be "thoroughly discussed at the next meeting."

Mayor Hans Fischer said he didn't even think that anyone would see the council's action as an attempt to limit student input.

Fischer said that any "statement, editorially or otherwise" referring to deliberate action on the council's part, would be "pure speculation on your part."

Even though the council may thoroughly discuss the issue, few students will be there to voice their opinions. Karas and Cordingan have both said they are planning on attending the meeting.

Although, council members may dismiss the scheduling as coincidence, they should not dismiss student interest in the Halloween festivities, or the importance of student input into the decisions about Halloween 1980.

Letters

Professor to stick to his decision

It is necessary to correct the factual errors in Professor Kyle Perkins' letter published in the May DE. Whenever a faculty member teaches a course, the department that pays a faculty member's salary receives credit for the credit hours produced. Whenever students enroll with me in such courses as C.I.M. 600, the Department of Linguistics receives the credit hours produced. Since credit-hour production is the "coin of the realm" for justifying the existence of faculty members and departments, I would think that a department chairman would be grateful for all the "extra" credit hours produced by any faculty member in the department, especially the weighted credit hours given for graduate students.

Also, the Department of Linguistics is working to establish a Ph.D. in Applied Linguistics. Since I am the only member of the Department of Linguistics who has extensive experience on Ph.D. committees, I would think that a department chairman would appreciate having a faculty member who could show that the department does have experience in teaching and directing doctoral students.

Despite the erroneous impression given by Professor Perkins' letter, I was offered only less than half-pay for regular summer session of 1980 for doing what is equivalent to a full-time job. Despite any denials to the contrary, I have taught in the last five regular summer sessions for half-pay even though it was necessary to work full time to take care of all the M.A. and Ph.D. students that wanted to work with me and specialize in linguistics and English as a foreign language. I told the University in 1979 that I would not continue to subsidize the University any longer by working full time for half pay or less, and I stand by my decision. — James E. Redden, Professor of Linguistics

Depending on USO means poverty

There is some confusion about the Illinois Public Interest Research Group referendum. First, although the DE mentioned that IPIRG is a voluntary fee, much of the article criticized refundable fees. The DE failed to emphasize that this criticism only concerns the student tenant union fee.

Secondly, Pete Alexander was quoted as saying that "recognized" student organization, like IPIRG, should go through the USO for funding. This should have been changed to "should go through the USO for their non-funding." The IPIRG received nothing from the USO this year and only $800 for next year. IPIRG can exist, but it cannot function the way a PIRG is supposed to without a minimum budget of about $8,000, in order to hire at least one professional staff person.

Finally, the DE reported remarks by Bruce Swinburne

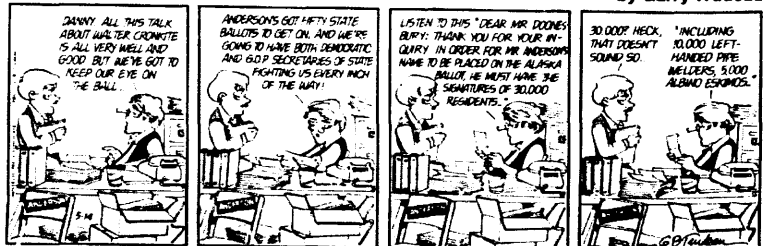

(vice president for Student Affairs) that are confusing. In the same paragraph he is paraphrased as saying that he felt fine about both new fees and yet that each group should go through the USO. What does this mean? He also claims that the USO and GSC will be hesitant to institute yet another fee when fees are already high. Yet IPIRG's was one of the only fees that students themselves approved in a petition and a referendum.

If this spells IPIRG's continued dependence upon the USO, it also means its continued poverty and the poverty of student and consumer interests in general at SIU. At a time when information about consumer and student affairs is sorely needed, we can ask for nothing less than the institution of IPIRG's voluntary fee. — Raymond Broersma, Senior, President's Degree

Talk about sportsmanship

This letter is in response to Mr. Rory Clark's letter in Tuesday's DE. His facts about what happened are basically true. I would like to address one thing—a team captain is not required to give the opposing team a courtesy runner. This brings me to his mention of sportsmanship.

The day after we defeated his men's team we played against his CoRec team, the Frozen Snowball Theory. If he wants to talk about sportsmanship, his team displayed the poorest sportsmanship I have witnessed in the four years of working for Intramurals as an official.

Before the game even began, Bernie Lewis came up to me and said that if anyone got in his way "they were going down," and remember this was a CoRec game. Secondly, this was a game for fun, which intramurals is supposed to be, but their team thought it was the World Series. Their pitcher walked our men so that they would only have to pitch to the women. Plus talking about concern for the student's safety—with our team; up one run there was a play at the plate. Instead of sliding like a runner is supposed to—he dropped his shoulder and bowled me over at the plate and was called out like the rules said he should be. That was the final out of the game, and we won.

The above was only the beginning. The insults that were hurled at us throughout the whole game got worse. I will not repeat the things that were said, but I was quite amazed at what was said to some of our girls.

So finally, Mr. Clark, if you want to talk about sportsmanship I would suggest you take a good long look at your own teammates. If you live in glass houses, you should not throw stones. — Paul Kusinski, Sticky Fingers Captain, Senior, Administration of Justice-Law Enforcement

Underhand action no surprise

The article in the May 6 DE concerning the coverage of black events on campus definitely shows one of two things about the DE staff: either they are overtly discriminatory or grossly incompetent. Take your pick. I wouldn't rule out the possibility of them sharing both attributes.

No doubt this issue should have been brought up a long time ago. It doesn't surprise me to see this type of underhand action take place here at SIU because it's happening all around the nation.

— Chet William Sisk, Freshman, Radio Television

Clean up your act. Judicial Board

This letter is directed solely to the Judicial Board for Governance. This does not concern the Legislative or the Executive Branches of the USU.

The decision regards a request for a hearing concerning several allegations of election violations committed by the Maverick Party. The board decided not to hear a request and would not provide any grounds for refusal.

In my eyes this course of action shows a definite lack of responsibility.

However in a case heard by the J-Board, Materna v Adams, Mr. Materna requested the Tom O'Malley campaign be investigated on the grounds that Mr. Materna suspected there was some sort of collaboration between Tom, me, the fee allocations commissioner and the election commissioner. But Mr. Materna failed to produce evidence at the time the request was accepted by the board.

But this time the J-Board was confronted with a request for a hearing that had documented evidence to back it up. Nonetheless, the board decided not to hear the request.

In closing, I hope the board will develop some sort of responsibility and competence in the future.—Jeff Petersen, Former Chief Jurist, J-Board for Governance

Thompson legend's point lost in 'Where the Buffalo Roam'

By Edward R. Berry
Student Writer

"Hello class. Welcome to the Hunter S. Thompson School of Journalism. Now to start out today's lesson would you all please pull out a piece of paper, a pen, a case of beer, a case of Wild Turkey, a vial of cocaine and a handful of reds?" Thank you. Now you're ready to start writing.

After seeing "Where the Buffalo Roam" one has to wonder whether it's the buffalo roaming in the mind of Bill Murray as "Gonzo Journalist" Thompson. If Murray's portrayal of Thompson is true, then somebody had better inform the proper authorities because there's a raving maniac on the prowl somewhere in our society.

Thompson has developed a "different" approach to reporting over the years. He goes where the action is, gets involved (more often physically than mentally) and writes about his experiences in lengthy essays for Rolling Stone or in books of his own.

A Film Review

This may not be a surprise to anyone, but "Where the Buffalo Roam" is a mindless comedy. However, that doesn't really matter as long as the comedy is good and, for the most part, "Buffalo" is.

"Buffalo" is hilariously good. Murray is the perfect choice for the part of the drug-induced Thompson.

Murray's bizarre sense of humor and autistic behavior gives him the same advantage Thompson has in his writing. They both present new and innovative ways of expressing themselves professionally.

However, as funny as "Buffalo" may be, it does miss the main point of the Thompson legend: his relationship with ex-lawyer-turned-revolutionary Carl Lazlo (Peter Boyle).

Lazlo, nicknamed "Buffalo" by Thompson, believes in the preservation of constitutional rights for all. He tries to preserve those rights for a group of pot-smoking young Americans by representing them in court.

He senses a strong feeling of prejudice directed at the youths from the nation's courts during the Nixon era. Society has rejected their rights, so Lazlo goes down fighting for them and is eventually rejected by society himself. The only way Lazlo can get his revenge is by starting a leftist revolutionary group to combat the "forces of good."

Thompson often rallied to Lazlo's cause and defonded it as if it was his own. That's the true legend of Hunter Thompson, not all of the juvenile tomfoolery which dominates this film.

"Where the Buffalo Roam" should have explored the relationship between Lazlo and Thompson more and relied on bawdy comedy less. Murray is exceptionally funny as Thompson, but he could have been just as funny with a screenplay that dealt more with the significant Lazlo-Thompson relationship instead of the carnival-like antics of Thompson.

'Friday the 13th' vile and bloody; gruesome rip-off of 'Psycho' plot

By Bill Crowe
Entertainment Editor

If you're in the mood to see a vile, gruesome rip-off of "Psycho," "Halloween" and "Carrie," definitely see "Friday the 13th." If your stomach can't handle sensational exploitation of bloody violence, stay away—definitely stay away.

"Friday the 13th" is a low-budget, low-class shocker that preys on the undeniably primal human fascination with bloody execution-style murder. Wrap an endless stream of bloodletting around a paper-thin plot and laughable "non-acting" from an unrecognizable cast and you have this film in a nutshell.

Viewers are treated to 10 gory throat slashings, decapitations and hatchets-in-the-head in the film's slim 90-minute running time—certainly a new record of a murder every nine minutes. There are actually 11 murders in the film, if you consider the chopping up of a snake as such.

Director-producer Sean "Last House on the Left" Cunningham relies on brutal violence and nothing else to power this film.

There is no dramatic tension, competent acting or responsible screenwriting—just a slew of hateful, exploitive killings.

The plot, if you consider it to be that, is the old "let's ravage the teen-agers" idea where a group of "neat kids" are left to the maniacal mercy of an insane killer, played by Betsy "I've Got A Secret" Palmer in this travesty of a "film."

The teens are the new counselors at Camp Crystal Lake, which has been closed for 20 years after a child drowned and two counselors were murdered. The joint has been nicknamed "Camp Blood" by the local citizens. These sort of films always seem to be situated in a sorority house, girl's school or secluded area, never on South Illinois Avenue or the downtown business district of Chicago.

At any rate, Palmer turns in a wretched imitation of Norman "Psycho" Bates as the killer, whose face is unseen until the film's last 15 minutes. She turns out to be the mother of the child who drowned and babbles about in two voices, rolls her eyeballs in sadistic glee and swings machetes, axes and other sharp instruments at anyone in sight.

"Friday the 13th" wouldn't have been so terrible if Cunningham had created some tension and suspense, as all of the great shockers do. All we get is a rotten rip-off of the plot of "Psycho."

The film is rated 'R' but should have received an 'X' for its irresponsible and ruthless exploitation of brutal murder and spurting blood. Parents do not take your young children to this film under any circumstances.

"Friday the 13th" is unfortunately typical of the route in which recent horror films (except "Halloween" and "Carrie") have been taking. It is ruthless, brutal and sickening—in other words, filmmaking at its worst. I can hear Spot, the "Sneak Previews" Wonder Dog, barking all the way from Chicago.

Independent oil men indicate support for O'Neal for Senate

By MIKE ROBINSON
Associated Press Writer

Independent oil men are getting ready to erupt with a pusher of campaign contributions, and one of their favorite candidates is Illinois Lt. Gov. Dave O'Neal, the Republican candidate for the seat of retiring Sen. Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill. The latest issue of Political Wildcat magazine, the official organ of the Independent Petroleum Association of America says O'Neal has dropped in at the lobby's headquarters here twice recently for "briefings."

Political Wildcat singled out O'Neal as one of four 1980 candidates who are especially deserving of support from oil men and gave him a complimentary spread in the magazine. The IPAA has no political action committee to dole out campaign money, but its members can be generous contributors when they think they have spotted a winner.

The oil men are so glad to see Stevenson leaving that they probably would be happy to help him pack his suitcase and arrange reservations for him on the first flight back home. The senator's current rating from the IPAA, out of a possible score of 100 is zero. His lifetime rating out a possible 100 is two.

House GOP Whip Bob Michel of Peoria got a brisk pair of gloves across his face politically last week when Republican National Committee Chairman Bill Brock named Michel's arch rival, Rep. Guy Vanderjagt, R-Mich., as keynote speaker at the party's national convention in Detroit this summer. Michel press secretary Mike Johnson said his boss was not consulted on the choice. The two lawmakers are running against each other for minority leader in the next Congress when Rep. John Rhodes of Arizona is set to step down from that post.

Asked if he considered the move a slap in the face, Johnson said, "There's no other way to interpret it. It will be interpreted that way whether it was intentional or not."

That may be just the beginning of Michel's problems. Party conservatives are circulating a petition to force GOP Caucus Chairman Sam Devine of Ohio to call a meeting to drum up Rep. John B. Anderson, R-Ill., out of the caucus over his independent run for the White House. Michel has been arguing against such a move. The anti-Anderson forces need 50 names for their petition and are hoping the 50th name will be that of Vanderjagt.

An attempt to kick Anderson out of the party altogether, sponsored by national Committeeman Huck Boyd of Kansas, flopped in the RNC

Resolutions Committee on Friday.

Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., has been trying for two years to get House approval of a bill that would mean a tax savings of $3 million for William Sullivan, the owner of the New England Patriots of the National Football League. The measure would allow Sullivan to take advantage retroactively of complex player depreciation provisions that have been eliminated from the tax code.

Although political action committee contributions from lobbies sometimes indicate how a member of Congress will vote on an issue, that is not always the case. Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., got $7,000 from oil company PAC's last year in his continuing effort to pay off his 1978 campaign debt. But when the senate voted on a number of highly controversial amendments to the windfall profits tax, the Ralph Nader-affiliated Public Citizen Tax Research Group rated all of Percy's votes as "right" and "pro-consumer," which is to say against the oil companies. The same was true for Stevenson

The flow of Cuban refugees emigrating to the United States is a result of economic shortages, especially in the consumer goods sector, and the refugees now realize that the 20-year revolutionary sacrifices are not paying off.

So says Manuel Inclan, a native of Cuba and a senior in political science.

Inclan said the Cuban exodus is purely an economic one, and not political. "Cubans, because of the Castro revolution, enjoy full employment. The problem is that they have nothing to spend it on. There are no consumer goods in Cuba," he explained.

Inclan lived in Cuba for six years. He receives regular correspondence from his aunt and several cousins who still live there.

"My mother has to send razor blades and other consumer products to my aunt because these things simply aren't available in Cuba," Inclan said.

Rationing is a common occurrence in Cuba, according to Inclan. He said food of all kinds is scarce. "People have to wait in long lines for a quart of milk." He said a big reason for the shortages is the U.S.-imposed trade embargo on the nation. The embargo took effect in 1960 shortly after Fidel Castro assumed control.

Another factor contributing to the disillusionment of many Cubans is her continuing involvement in Angola, according to Inclan, who has specialized in Latin American studies. He explained that the burden of troop involvement there is too much for such a small country, adding that Angola may turn into "Cuba's Vietnam."

"Many young Cubans have been willing to go to Angola because they believe in the revolution. They think by fighting elsewhere they will be able to spread the socialist revolution. Castro may have intervened there to get Cubans' minds off the nation's domestic problems," Inclan said.

According to Inclan, the reason for growing disenchantment among Cubans and their desire to come to America stems partly from Castro's decision to allow Cubans living in America to visit their native land.

They go to Cuba and tell of consumer pleasures. Inside Cuba, Castro is losing credibility because these visitors tell of the good life in America." Inclan said. "When you have to wait in line for food, life in America becomes very desirable."

The refugee flow started now because of the many thousands of Cubans who stormed the Peruvian embassy recently, Inclan reasoned. "It is traditional in Latin America to view foreign embassies as sanctuaries, so the refugees gathered there."

He said those fleeing Cuba are young people who don't remember how things were before the revolution. They are better educated because of the free education they have received, and now are tired of striving for intangible goals. "They only want to eat now, and are tired of pounding their heads against the wall and getting nowhere," Inclan emphasized.

Castro has been calling the refugees "undesirables," but according to Inclan they are ordinary, yet disillusioned Cubans. "Last week Castro gave a speech plotting out the path of the future, but he's been giving the same speech for the last five years," Inclan said.

Though there are economic problems in Cuba the revolution has worked, Inclan maintained. He pointed out that full employment has replaced massive begging, free education and health care have taken over for illiteracy and rampant disease, and Cubans have gained the respect of the world.

Financial aid still available, but getting harder to obtain

Financial aid is still available for the 1980-81 school year, although the chances of receiving aid decrease as time passes, according to Janet Jeffries, public relations and information officer for financial aid.

While a student may still qualify for awards and receive them, the funds may be delayed or unavailable when the student needs them if application is not made soon. The deadline for "on-schedule" applications, which assures students of prompt processing and receipt of financial aid, was May 1.

Jeffries said the following are requirements for award consideration:

The student must have a 1980-81 ACT Family Financial Statement (FFS) on file to work on campus for the 1980-81 academic year. For SIU-C to receive a copy of the student's FFS, code question number 77 with SIU's school code number 1144.

The student can apply for a Basic Grant through the ACT FFS for no additional fee. Question number 75 on the FFS application should be marked "a."

The student can apply for the Illinois State Scholarship Commission (ISSC) Monetary Award if he is an Illinois resident. A separate application is required. Depending on the student's eligibility, this scholarship will pay for tuition and fees or some portion thereof.

The student can obtain financial aid applications and answers to financial aid questions at the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance, Woody Hall, B Wing, Third Floor.

Jeffries said results from applications made before May 1 are already coming back from the Basic Educational Opportunity Grant program, the ACTFFS and ISSC.

Jeffries said that when students receive their SER in the mail, all three copies should be returned to the Office of Student Work and Financial Assistance.

'All-nighters' not recommended, may cause more harm than good

By Tina Stroud
Student Writer

Finals week for many students means late night study sessions spiced with lots of No-Doz, coffee and junk food.

However, this routine may cause more harm than good for students who employ it, says Scott Vierke, assistant coordinator of the Student Wellness Lifestyling Program.

"Students who are well rested, well nourished and under only a moderate amount of stress perform better than other students (on tests)," Vierke said. "There is a definite correlation between good health and good grades."

Vierke said in the two-week period prior to finals week, there is a "significant increase" in student visits to the Health Service. This, he said, is caused by a combination of stress and poor health habits.

Time management and organization are also important during finals week. The key to time management, Vierke said, is making the most effective use of the time available for study.

"Often students get caught up in cramming all night for exams when this extreme, extra effort will bring little or no return," he said.

One technique for time management is the Pareto Principle, Vierke said. The principle centers on the belief that 20 percent of activity produces 80 percent of the achievable results. Vierke said by attending class regularly and reading most of the assignments (20 percent effort) you can get a B grade (80 percent result).

However, in order to get an A, you'll have to attend every class, read all the assignments, study regularly and write a research paper, Vierke said. The student must decide whether the extra results are worth the extra effort.

Pope visits Africa, finds church vibrant

ABIDJAN, Ivory Coast (AP) — During his swing through Africa, Pope John Paul II found a Catholic Church as vibrant as the continent's rhythms and as diverse as its geography.

The Polish-born pontiff's 11-day journey, which ended Monday, took him from the equatorial rain forests to the drought-plagued Sahel and to six countries — Zaire, the Congo, Kenya, Ghana, Upper Volta and the Ivory Coast.

He tailored his remarks accordingly wherever he went, and the pontiff was received as warmly as he had been during visits to Mexico, Poland, Ireland and the United States even though the church here counts only 53 million Roman Catholics among the continent's 460 million inhabitants.

In Kinshasa, Zaire, where there have been reports of widespread corruption, the pope instructed new bishops to speak out against corruption and injustice.

In the Marxist-line Congo Republic, where a cardinal was assassinated three years ago, he served notice that the church will raise its voice should religious freedom be threatened.

In this modern West African city of concrete and glass skyscrapers, he warned against the widening gap between the Ivory Coast's rich and poor.

On Sunday, Vatican radio said the pope blessed the cornerstone of what will be the city's cathedral, gave audiences to several groups of priests, monks, nuns and lay persons and met with local bishops.

It quoted him as saying: "There are poor people of every sort (in Abidjan), the uprooted and the small. There is also an elite of rulers who have need of deeper Christian reflection."

Central to the pope's trip was his expressed reverence for African culture: "a sense of family and community that blossoms into an open and joyful hospitality; spontaneity and the joy of living expressed in poetic language, song and dance," as he told Ghana's president.

City applies for grant to up energy savings

By Mary Ann McNulty
Staff Writer

Carbondale residents may have an opportunity to learn energy conservation techniques and get loans to implement them, if the city receives an Innovative Community Energy Conservation Grant.

City Council members approved the pre-application form for the Department of Housing and Urban Development's Community Development Block Grant at a public hearing Monday. Energy Coordinator Robert Pauls drafted the form that targets the Neighborhood Strategy Areas in the northeast and northwest sections of Carbondale.

During informal discussion, council members decided to grant a request from John Ham to change a parcel of land that was annexed into the city recently from "dry" to "wet." Ham plans to construct a liquor store on the land, which is located on U.S. Route 51 South, off of Pleasant Hill Road.

Pauls said he thought HUD was looking for program proposals that would run over a long period of time.

"We're stressing community participation. I think the application is comprehensive, what they (HUD officials) are looking for. We are putting the decisions in the hands of the marketplace and out of the hands of federal bureaucracy, with this program," Pauls said.

Pauls told council members that there are "five general strategies which would be used to implement the program objectives of conserving energy by low- and moderate-income residents in the target areas."

The strategies Pauls wants to use include: a grant loan program, an energy information center, a conservation materials subsidy, a residential and commercial energy efficiency retrofit demonstration and new residential and commercial building design and energy efficiency incentives program.

The request amounts to about $660,000. However, Pauls said the amount on the final application could be higher or lower.

A grant-loan program, which both owners and tenants who qualify as low-income could apply for, would be implemented under the guidelines. The loan would be used to install energy conservation measures. City residents who qualify could take out a loan — the minimum being $400 and the maximum $3,500, depending on income and number of occupants — from a local bank. The resident would be charged 3 percent interest on the loan, and the federal government through the grant proposal would pay the difference between the going-market interest rate and the 3 percent to the bank.

Part of the grant money would be used to help finance Shawnee Solar's Appropriate Technology Resource Center Services. Shawnee Solar, a not-for-profit energy consulting firm, has been operating the center through other grants. The center contains magazines, books, blueprints and other reference material on various forms of energy.

A traveling van or trailer would also be purchased with the grant funds. The vehicle would "be used for energy outreach activities in every city neighborhood."

An energy consulting team, made up of city staff members, would provide "infrared thermogram analysis service" of homes or businesses in the city. The team would also assist business people and residents who wish to locate in the targeted area in designing renewable energy techniques for the structures.

Under the residential and commercial energy efficiency retrofit demonstration program, "one residence and one business would be selected from within the targeted areas and rehabilitated beyond the city's energy efficiency code requirements."

If the city receives the grant, the programs will begin in December.

Design major in countrytown to be offered

Countrytown design, a specialization of courses in the Comprehensive Planning and Design Department, will be offered as a major curriculum beginning this summer, according to Stanley Mendelsohn, professor of architecture.

Although courses in the program will be offered this summer to senior-level students only, the full-scale program will be kicked off this fall by a national conference on countrytown design to be held in September at SIU-C.

Mendelsohn said the new program was designed as a replacement for the recently phased-out urban design sequence. He said the countrytown design sequence is more appropriate than the urban design program for a university like SIU-C.

"There are many towns and communities in Southern Illinois that require using the university as a resource. This new program is very much in accordance with Chancellor Shaw's rededication of the university to community service," Mendelsohn said, adding that, in addition to community service, the program will offer students experiential learning by working for and with the communities.

Survey of urban design, countrytown design, and landscape design are some of the courses that will be offered in the program to be taught by Alan Schoen, professor of design; Jack Ellner, professor of design; and Bill Perk, a lecturer in design.

Supreme Court upholds ban on use of CTA by schools

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Supreme Court on Monday left intact a ruling that bars the use of Chicago Transit Authority buses to carry city students from school-to-school.

The justices refused to review a federal appeals court ruling that the CTA's contracts with the Chicago Board of Education for school-to-school busing is illegal.

At issue are laws and regulations enabling the federal government to make grants or loans to assist state and local governments in providing mass transportation.

The CTA's fleet of buses was bought with an 80 percent subsidy from the Urban Mass Transportation Administration, a branch of the federal Transportation Department.

Under the Urban Mass Transportation Act, beneficiaries of such subsidies cannot use the money for "school bus operations."

CTA contracts with the Chicago school board dating back to 1975 do not involve the typical "yellow bus" service that carries students to and from their homes.

Instead, the service is daily bus transportation from a common pick-up point—a neighborhood school—to a school in some other part of the city and a return trip later in the day.

The CTA buses are used for the school runs after the morning rush hour and before the evening rush hour.

The service has been used to transfer students from neighborhood schools to less crowded facilities or schools offering special programs.

Instructor applies research to interior design of restaurant

By Erick Howenstine
Staff Writer

A new restaurant opening next week in Marion, will add to the credit of Nancy Davis, an instructor of interior design at SIUC.

The interior of the 130-seat family diner was designed by Davis, who has been continuing her outside professional work throughout the four years she has taught at SIUC.

Davis said that instead of publishing her research results, she puts them to use in practical application.

"It's the only restaurant in the area I know of that was designed by a local interior designer," said Davis, who received a master's degree in interior design from the University of Georgia in 1976.

The diner, "Cactus Jack's" is a split-level building and has brick and wood walls layed at an angle. Warm wood trim accents the primarily blue color-theme.

"I had nothing to do with naming the place," she said, adding that the interior "is really much nicer than the name might lead one to believe."

The restaurant, located on Illinois Route 13, will serve medium-priced meals, such as sandwiches, spaghetti and pizza, she said.

Bent-wood chairs and a ceiling which is lowered in places all give the place a "modern eclectic" atmosphere that "you really have to see to understand," Davis said.

Davis has designed a number of Southern Illinois buildings, including an active and passive solar home now under construction in Union County, and a passive solar home to be built in Savannah, Ga. She has also worked on the renovation of residential, business and hospital buildings and facilities.

Students in Davis's interior design course recently completed a major project involving the planned redevelopment of downtown DuQuoin. The project included interior and exterior renovation of 14 buildings, landscaping, relocation of parking lots and the construction of park facilities.

The project series, presented by 28 senior-level students in design, will be shown to merchants, community members and city officials in DuQuoin.

"It involves 130 20-inch by 30-inch display boards," she said, adding that she is very satisfied with the class work.

The mayor of DuQuoin and the head of the Retailers Association there have both expressed interest and enthusiasm in the student project, Davis said. They hope to use the final plan to secure state or federal grants for downtown redevelopment.

What the students will propose for DuQuoin, Davis said, is very similar to the downtown redevelopment plan underway in Carbondale.

Fry wanting patrolmen to move in town

the only part of the local government that operates out of the general fund," Fry said.

"The money involved is minimal but we have been forced to the point of establishing our right to negotiate. If we don't fight for our rights now, what is going to happen in the future?" Coughlin said.

Although the city has about $2 million in its working cash fund, Fry said that money was pledged to other city projects.

"It is not the place of a city employee of any department to tell the city how to manage its money," he said.

According to Fry three of eight original union proposals that were accepted by the administration are "no longer viable," unless the union returns to the bargaining table. The city agreed to a $25 yearly clothing allowance increase. Also, the city agreed to readjust the department's use of sick time and agreed to a union proposal that would allow tax deductions for the uniform allowance.

"During negotiations the city presented six proposals relating to changes in the union contract. In the course of the negotiating sessions, all proposals made by the city were dropped in an attempt to reach an agreement with the union," Fry said.

Marion train said to cause too much noise

MARION AP—A Marion businessman who thinks the unique steam-powered Crab Orchard and Egyptian railroad "causes too much pollution" and is "too noisy" is seeking public support for his claims.

Woody Ashby runs an auto repair business adjacent to the CO & E tracks in Marion and says that smoke from the train whistle makes it difficult for him to work in his shop. He says soot from the railroads' two coal-burning locomotives has also caused a problem by settling on customers' cars.

Railroad President Hugh Crane said today there is more steam than smoke coming from the engines which haul freight cars on an eight-mile spur of track between Marion and Carbondale. The rail line is the only one in this country which uses steam power to haul freight.

"The emissions are well within federal regulations and we have to blow the whistle at grade crossings as required by law," Crane said.

'Tip' O'Neill to be speaker at dinner

Thomas P. "Tip" O'Neill, Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives, will be the guest speaker at a fund-raising dinner for Congressman Paul Simon at 7:30 p.m. May 30 in the Student Center Ballrooms.

A large group of Southern Illinois businessmen and professionals, farmers, and political and labor leaders are slated to attend the $50 per person dinner.

Proceeds from the event will be used to defray Simon's 1980 campaign expenses.

Scholar seeks visa for Soviet filmmaker

By Robin Saponar
Staff Writer

A filmmaker may be unable to accept an invitation to the Cannes International Film Festival for various reasons. Yet Sergei Paradjanov won't attend the festival unless his country will grant him a visa.

Paradjanov, a Soviet filmmaker, is trying to get a visa to leave the Soviet Union for France. Herbert Marshall, professor emeritus and director of the Center for Soviet and East European Studies at SIU-C, has started a petition drive to help him. He is seeking letters of support from American performing artists.

In 1974, Marshall sent petitions "all around the world" to assist the Armenian-born Paradjanov, who was arrested and charged with illegal currency dealings and homosexuality.

"Once they make up their minds to put someone in jail the truth doesn't matter," Marshall said.

A large amount of support was generated for Paradjanov, who was released from prison before his sentence was finished in 1977.

"We were very happy when he was released," Marshall said. "Then news came that he can't work so in despair he wants to leave."

"We understand he's applied for a visa, and hope to God they'll let him out."

Paradjanov's critically-acclaimed film "Colour of Pomegranates" was banned in the Soviet Union prior to his arrest. Marshall, having the only known copy of the film in the United States, has translated it from Armenian to English and is currently working on the English version. The film is based on the life of the famous Armenian poet Aruthin Sayadin (1712-1795). Paradjanov's fate is "parallel to Sayadin's," according to Marshall.

The film is a poetic treatment of Sayadin's life and death. Its artistic complexity reflects his own words:

My water's of a very special kind.

Not everyone can drink it.

My writing's of a very special kind.

Not everyone can read it.

Marshall is a former student of Russian filmmaker Sergei Eisenstein and a leading English translator of Russian literature. He has helped several Soviet artists leave that country, assisting playwright Alexis Parnis in returning to his native Greece in 1964.

Paradjanov's film will be shown this fall, when Marshall returns from Washington D.C. He has been awarded a Woodrow Wilson Fellowship to work at the Kennan Institute for Advanced European Studies at the Smithsonian Institution. He will begin analyzing films in July, especially the works of American filmmaker D.W. Griffith, V.I. Pudovkin and Eisenstein.

"Lenin invited D.W. Griffith to come and take over the film industry. He never came," Marshall said. "I've seen both artists' films (Griffith and Eisenstein) at different times and compared them. Now I will be able to run them side by side to compare."

"I've discovered shots in Eisenstein's films taken directly from Griffith's," he added.

Marshall is attempting to gather funds for Paradjanov, who has been forced to sell his belongings to survive.

"We're trying to raise funds

for him when he gets out of the Soviet Union. He'll be penniless," he said. "They don't let you take anything with you."

Prior to being dubbed, the film was shown on April 4 in Minneapolis, Minn. When Marshall returns from Washington D.C. it will be shown at SIU-C, Harvard University, New York City, Chicago and Los Angeles.

"Naturally everyone wants to see this incredible film," he said. "It will be a benefit for Paradjanov and a benefit for those who want to see a masterpiece."

Officer prefers 'challenging' morning shift

Editor's Note: Staff writer Leanne Waxman rode the early morning police patrol shift recently, cruising the northwest section of the city with one of the four female police officers on the Carbondale force. The officer asked that her name not be used.

By Leanne Waxman
Staff Writer

It was a slow night. The bars had closed and most people had made their way home from the strip without running amuck. Fatigue set in and the struggle to remain alert was on.

"If the phone doesn't ring a lot and the neighbors are quiet, I usually get enough sleep during the day. You have to remember I do this all the time so I'm used to it," the stout, blonde-haired woman said of the early morning hours she keeps.

"I like working this shift. The work is exciting and challenging, not as routine as working during the day," she said with a hesitant smile.

She is a woman of few words and she rarely strays from doing things by the book. Between the infrequent calls from the dispatcher to her District 40 car, she would pull into an empty parking lot, the car motor droning softly, and busy herself writing a report about a parked car that had been hit by another car at a party earlier in the evening.

The owner of the parked car said he argued briefly with the driver who hit his yellow Karman Ghia. She called for a registration check. Within minutes she had a name and an address for the owner of the car that the victim described to us. She drove slowly past the house that the registration check had turned up as the address for the driver who hit the Karman Ghia. The car was nowhere to be seen. "We won't get him tonight," she commented patiently.

More cruising in and out of alleys looking for an unsecured door or window. More sitting in parking lots during which time I tried to get more complete answers to my questions. More lurking near a busy stoplight, waiting for somebody to run a red light — more waiting.

As the evening turned into early morning it became difficult to remain alert, to be ready for anything to happen at any time. When asked how she relieved the tedium of the job, she replied simply, "I look for somebody to arrest."

An accident call squawked over the radio, advising the police cars assigned to the downtown area that a Volkswagen minibus had overturned. She said, "I'm glad we're not going. Accidents are always a mess. There's so much information to sort out."

"It's not always running from one call to another. This sitting around is part of the job," she said. She laughed and ignored my fifth suggestion to see if maybe the guy who hit the Karman Ghia had returned home.

"For your sake I wish there was more going on. This is slower than average for a Friday night, and with finals coming up and everything, I'm surprised it's not busier," she said.

A call reporting a disturbance at Wilson Hall came over the radio. An incident between a resident and a student resident assistant brought three University police officers, our car and the Carbondale police sergeant on duty to the scene. The SRA asked the resident to turn his stereo down. The resident refused. The SRA cut the electrical power to the room and the two exchanged blows.

She pulled the SRA away from the crowd of officers and listened to his account of the incident while the sergeant listened to the student's account. Two other residents were lingering in a doorway on the fringes of the scene when she spotted a 3-foot-tall bong near the doorway.

"Not mine, not mine," the two students muttered. "Tobacco in the pipe," one of them said.

One student, lying half-asleep on a bed in the room, looked up and admitted he owned the bong. The policewoman, one of four female patrol officers on the Carbondale police force, told him the bong was being confiscated and tested for "residue of cannabis."

She said if residue was found, charges could be brought against him. Several more grunts from the owner and we were on our way back to the station to dump the bong in an evidence locker.

She was writing up a report on the bong when a sergeant strolled by. "What have you got there?" he asked her. She briefly explained the incident. He commented as he left the squad room, "You just play the good guy too often."

She finished her business with the bong, walked swiftly through the door back to the patrol car.

I started to ask her how she felt about the sergeant's remarks. Nothing.

"Did you see that?" She threw the car into gear, and we were on our way to giving the third ticket of the evening to a driver who had run the red light at the corner of Main and Oakland.

The driver pulled over. She approached the car, carefully guarding the revolver strapped to her waist. After she spoke to the driver briefly, she walked backwards to her car, never taking her eyes off of the driver. She touched the hood of the police car and made her way to the door. Still eyeing the driver, she quickly opened the door and jumped in. She didn't relax until she was back in the car writing out the ticket.

"This one could be DWI," she said. He wasn't.

As the sun came up we made a quick stop at the police station so she could get her sunglasses.

"I can't take this sunlight right away," she said. Although she was on duty until 9 a.m., her partner for the night wasn't going to last much longer. Fatigue had conquered. I was going home ... to bed.

For the third time since we pulled away from the station at 11 p.m., the 26-year-old native Southern Illinoisan smiled uncomfortably and warned as she dropped me off at my car. "Remember, no names. I don't want the publicity. The last DE reporter who did this wrote a really squirrely story. He got a lot of things wrong."

City seeking federal grant to improve energy program

In discussing the "dry" to "wet" rezoning request, Mayor Hans Fischer said the council was not considering the placement of a liquor store on U.S. 51. Fischer said that after an area is annexed into the city from the township, it automatically becomes "wet" or legal to sell alcohol. On petition, which the city received from the owner, John Ham, council members "shall automatically" grant the request, according to city codes.

However, Carbondale attorney John Huffmann, who is representing "Mrs. James Morris Sr. and a number of other residents in the area," said the city codes state that the council does have a choice as to whether it wants to change the area from "dry" to "wet."

"If you look at the minutes of a council meeting when the ordinance was passed) you will find that 'shall' does not mean 'shall.' You do have discretionary authority in deciding whether to change this from 'dry' to 'wet,'" Huffmann said.

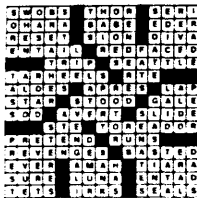

"We are ready to make an impassioned plea as to why there should not be a liquor store there," Huffmann said. "The passing of this ordinance does nothing except put the owner on line to apply for a license."

In the 3 1/2 hour meeting, the council only discussed four of the eight items on the agenda. The four items remaining, which include Halloween '80 celebration in the city, will be discussed at the special informal meeting May 19.

4,700 to receive degrees Saturday

Near-capacity crowds are expected Saturday at the Arena for SIU-C's annual spring commencement exercises.

A class of 4,700 students is up for degrees at ceremonies scheduled for 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The first session is for graduates whose last names begin with letters A through K, the second one for the rest of the class.

The entire class includes some 4,300 candidates for undergraduate degrees, 366 for master's, 79 for Ph.D.s and one for the six-year specialist certificate. Another 80 are slated for law degrees. Commencement ceremonies for 75 medical school graduates are scheduled for 3 p.m. June 8, at the Prairie Capital Convention Center in Springfield.

Honorary Doctor of Laws degrees will be conferred at the Carbondale ceremonies on Frank Stanton, former chief of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and Donald F. McHenry, the United States ambassador to the United Nations. Stanton will be cited at the morning session, and McHenry, an SIU-C graduate, at the afternoon session.

The SIU Foundation Academic Excellence Awards, honoring the graduating male and female senior with the highest grade point average from the number of credit hours studied, were presented Friday at a Student Center luncheon.

Dennis G. Frazier, graduating with three degrees — classics, mathematics and formal and natural languages — and Flora, Ill. native Delores McKnelly, graduating in early childhood education, received the $100 awards. Both had straight A averages.

Frazier, 22, of Evansville, Ind., received the Liberal Arts and Sciences Honor Society Outstanding Senior Award in 1978 and the mathematics Outstanding Senior Award in Distinguished Service Awards will be presented during commencement to Charles D. Tenney, former SIU-C administrator and professor (10 a.m.), and Willis Moore, former chairman of the philosophy department (2 p.m.).

Also to be recognized during the ceremonies are the winners of this year's Amoco Foundation Outstanding Teacher Awards: Paul A. Harre, School of Technical Careers; John W. Voigt, botany, and Gola E. Waters, finance.

Twenty-six faculty members are to be cited for a 25 years or more of service.

Thirty-year awards will go to Harry Ammon, history; John O. Anderson, clinical center; James G. Benziger, English; Warren E. Buffum, financial affairs; Gordon K. Butts, education; James A. Diefenbeck, philosophy; Abraham M. Mark, computer science; William E. Simeone, English; John W. Voigt, botany, and James J. Wilkinson, physical education.

Those to be recognized for 25 years of service are:

Steven Barwick, music; Donald N. Boydston, health education; Jo Ann Boyaston, Dewey Center; John R. Clifford, Morris Library; Alan Cohn, Morris Library; John H. Erickson, vocational education studies; Chester E. Johnston, School of Technical Careers; Jacob W. King, alumni services; Robert G. Layer, economics; John R. Lefevre, health education; Randall H. Nelson, political science; Harold W. Osborn, School of Technical Careers; Guy A. Renzaglia, Touch of Nature Environmental Center (and founder and long-time director of the Rehabilitation Institute); Carroll L. Riley, anthropology; Berniece B. Seiferth, education, and Howard J. Stains, zoology.

Mom looks at SIU's year in sports

And fan apathy. When students and area residents don't turn out to watch a winning football team, the national collegiate women's volleyball championship tournament and the Collegiate Classic gymnastics meet, something is wrong. But what?

And Title IX. How can SIU balance things between the men's and women's department without going bankrupt?

Scott says SIU administrators will have to answer these questions if the men's and women's athletics departments are to survive in the 1980s. As a sports fan, he hopes the questions are answered. There's nothing that matches the excitement of a spectacular slam dunk, a long tophdown pass or a well executed floor exercise routine.

Editor's Note

As the outgoing editor, I'd like to thank my staffers: Mark (Sports on Tap) Pabich, Ed (Cleaning Up) Dougherty, Rod (Off the Wall) Smith, Dave (Raisin') Kane, Rick (Between the Lines) Klatt and Rick (no column) Sevimon. For the countless hours they spent helping make the sports section possible this semester.

I'd also like to thank the sports information directors, Mitch Parkinson (women) and Tom Simons and Dave Lancer (men) for the help they've been. Thanks also should go out to the coaches, who, win or lose, have been cooperative.

Oh, yes. Several people have asked if my mom really does occasionally write this column. Only Mom and I know for sure, and we'll never tell.

Cubs stymied by Dodger reliever

By The Associated Press

On a night when rookie outfielder Rudy Law stole four bases, righthanded reliever Bobby Castillo may have stolen his way into the Los Angeles Dodgers' bullpen for good.

The Dodgers soon must cut a player to make room for returning reliever Don Stanhouse, the Du Quoin native who has been on the disabled list, and Castillo is well aware of the situation.

But the 25-year-old Castillo improved his chances of staying with the Dodgers considerably with his performance Monday night as he preserved Los Angeles' 2-1 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

It was the third win in a row for the Dodgers and their ninth straight victory at home.

Appearing in the seventh inning in relief of Don Sutton, who left because of a groin pull, Castillo struck out six Cubs in his three innings of scoreless work, including Dave Kingman in the ninth.

"I'm at the point where I'm not nervous out there," Castillo said after recording his first save of the year, "but looking back, I probably should have been with Kingman up there.

"When Stanhouse returns, it will be a big plus for the bullpen. I'm not worried about having to go to Albuquerque, but if I do, I'll go."

Los Angeles Manager Tom Lasorda praised the work of Castillo, saying "I think that's the best he has pitched. That should be a big lift for him. That's got to be a confidence builder for his screwball."

MEMORIES OF '79-80—Hard-nosed plays by Salukis such as Joe Barwinski (left) led the SIU football team to an 8-3 record, its best since 1960, and a second-place finish in the Missouri Valley Conference behind West Texas State. It also was a year of standout freshmen at SIU, and woman gymnast Pam Harrington was one of them. Harrington, from East Bethany, N.Y., won state and Midwest Regional all-around titles and finished fourth in the all-around in SIU's Collegiate Classic.

Salukis' Series road begins with Valley tournament opener

By Mark Pabich
Staff Writer

The Saluki baseball team will begin its journey down the road to the College World Series Thursday, with the first stop being the Missouri Valley Conference playoffs in Wichita, Kan.

SIU, which finished the regular season 30-14, will compete in the double-elimination tournament along with six other Valley schools—Tulsa, Indiana State, West Texas State, Creighton, Bradley and New Mexico State.

The winner of the MVC tournament will advance to the Midwest Regionals, then move on to the World Series in Omaha, Neb.

SIU Coach Itchy Jones said he feels his club will do well in the MVC tournament, but added the competition has toughened.

"A few years ago, we were able to walk right through the MVC tourney," Jones said, "but those days are gone.

"The way the tournament is set up and the caliber of teams playing, the whole thing could be up for grabs. Any team could win. It just depends on which team is playing the best ball at the time."

The Salukis will enter the tournament playing their best baseball of the season. SIU has won 13 of its past 15 games and has outscored opponents 145-36.

"We've definitely been playing better, but we're going to have to play more consistently," Jones said. "With all those runs in the past 15 games, we still managed to lose games to Austin Peay and Illinois. If you looked at the run totals for those two series, you'd have to wonder how we lost at all.

"Everything is coming together for us now, though," he said. "We're looking forward to the playoffs because our pitching is coming around and our hitting has been good."

In the past 15 games, Saluki hitters have been on a hot streak. Junior Jim Adduci, who leads the team with a .434 average, went 25-for-53 (.472) during the last 15 games with five home runs, 25 RBIs, and 24 runs scored.

Senior Pral Ondo finished the final 15 games hitting .452, upping his season average to .345. During the stretch, Ondo tagged four home runs and had 18 RBIs. Junior Gerry Miller continued to attack the SIU record books, tying the school record for homers with 12.

"Adduci, Miller and Ondo follow one another in the lineup, which makes for a powerful punch," Jones said. "Those three have been the mainstays of our offense and they will all have to continue that kind of pace the rest of the season."

SIU's pitching also was strong in the final 15 games. Junior All-American Bob Schroeck pitched 22 innings, giving up only 10 hits while winning two games. Junior Jerry Halstead, 5-1, threw three complete-game victories during the stretch, allowing only 16 hits in 21 innings.

"Our pitching is in pretty good shape for the tournament," Jones said. "We'd like to throw Halstead in the second game of the tournament and Schroeck possibly in the third. We still haven't decided who will open the tournament against New Mexico State Thursday, however.

"We're not taking anyone lightly at all, but we have to plan our pitching rotation around the teams which we feel will be the most difficult. All the teams in the tournament are good enough to win, however."

The Salukis' game against New Mexico State is a crucial one, according to Jones.

"We have to stay in the winner's bracket," he said. "If you go undefeated in the tournament, you only have to play four games.

"If you lose one, however, you play six or maybe seven games, which would tire us out," Jones

Speeds dropping at Indy time trials

INDIANAPOLIS (AP)—The search for speed at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway is not an exact science.

The proof of that axiom is on view this week as drivers scramble to get into the 64th Indianapolis 500, wrestling to get a few more miles per hour out of their exotic, and often balky, machines.

With one more weekend of time trials remaining before the

May 25 race, 14 positions remain open on the 33-car race grid. And it would appear that making the race should be easier than it has been in a long time.

Speeds have plunged since peaking in 1978 with the fastest overall field in the history of this May classic.

That year, the top qualifier roared into the lineup at 202.156 mph, while the slowest car in the field qualified at 187.266 mph.

This time around, the fastest car in the field after two days of qualifying is Johnny Rutherford's formidable Chaparral, clocked at 192.256 mph.

Nobody else is expected to come close.

The problem is rooted in the U.S. Auto Club's restriction on manifold pressure, which have limited horsepower.

Scott Stahmer

A mother's observations of SIU's year in sports

I'm Evelyn Stahmer, the mom of the guy who writes this column. Remember me from last fall? Scott wanted to write a special end-of-the-year piece today, but he has a lot of finals to study for, so he said he'd let me write it.

Since I've been up in Barrington, my home town, for most of the year, I don't really know what went on this year in SIU sports. But Scott is always talking about what's happened, so I've been using motherly license and doing a little eavesdropping.

Just by listening to Scott, I can tell that this year's Salukis showed SIU sports fans a little bit of everything. Winning, losing, standout individual performances, injuries to key players, financial problems, resignations, rumored relocations—in other words, almost an athletic version of "All My Children."

Scott talks about the positive things first. Like the SIU football team. The Salukis enjoyed their most productive season since 1960, going 8-3 and finishing second in the Missouri Valley Conference. And the track team, which won the MVC indoor championship and should, according to Scott, duplicate that performance this weekend at the outdoor meet.

As usual, the baseball team, 30-14 this season, is a winner. The women's gymnastics team finished 11th in the nation. And although few probably know it, SIU's only undefeated team was the women's swimming team.

There also were disappointing teams. When I'd talk to Scott on the phone during the winter, he'd always be muttering things about both Saluki basketball teams.

Some of it wasn't coherent, but he mumbled a lot about a guy named Camp and how the men's team would have been better than 9-17 with that fellow in the lineup. And injuries to people named Faber and Williams always surfaced when he discussed the lady cagers and their 12-16 record.

The women's basketball team wasn't the only squad hit by injuries, Scott said. Coach Bill Meade's men gymnasts, who usually are one of the top 10 teams in the country, lost four top performers to injuries and finished 3-10.

Scott liked to talk about some of SIU's individual standouts. Kevin House, David Lee, Wayne Abrams, Barry Smith, Robin Detering, Lindy Nelson, Sandy Lemon, Julia Warner, Roger Von Joanne, Brian Babcock and Brenda Bruckner were names that frequently came up.

He said the Salukis will lose some outstanding seniors, like House, Smith, Abrams, Detering and Lemon. But Scott added that some of this year's top freshman, like Charles Nance, Pam Harrington, Ellen Massey, Lisa Warren and Tom Ross, should make up for losses to graduation.

But Scott's athletics conversation often would stray from the field or the gymnasium. He said there are many issues the two athletics departments at SIU must address.

He'd tell me about $361,303 deficit facing the departments. How to remedy this situation without increasing student fees again?
