Solidarity chief Walesa finally returns home

Gdansk, Poland (AP) - Solidarity chief Lech Walesa returned to a joyful hometown Sunday after mysteriously disappearing for more than a day following his release from 11 months in martial-law custody.

"In my future conduct, I will be courageous but also prudent and there is no discussion on it. We must win," Walesa vowed. He spoke through a loudspeaker from a window in his apartment after rushing inside past about 50 cheering friends and supporters.

There was no immediate explanation for Walesa's delay in coming home to his first-floor apartment in this Baltic port city where his wife, seven children and hundreds of people had maintained a long, around-the-clock vigil.

Walesa was arrested when martial law was imposed Dec. 13 and Solidarity suspended. The independent union was outlawed by Parliament last month. Hundreds of other Solidarity leaders and activists are in prison.

Faculty, staff object to pay raise plan

By Andrew Herrmann
Staff Writer

Opposition has been voiced by campus constituency leaders over President Albert Somit's pay raise plan released Friday.

Under Somit's plan, faculty and Administrative and Professional staff members will have an expected 3 percent raise divided four different ways. Civil service and graduate student workers will receive a straight 3 percent raise.

Of the 3 percent, faculty and Administrative and Professional staff members will each receive an across-the-board pay increase of 1 percent of their salary, and another 1 percent will be divided across-the-board in equal dollar raises.

The final 1 percent will be divided up two ways, with 0.4 percent being set aside for salary equity and faculty promotions and the remaining 0.6 will be available to each vice president to cover merit raises of at least $100 per month.

Employees must have been on the payroll before July 1, 1982, be eligible for the raises, and have appointments continued for the 1983 fiscal year in order to receive the raises, according to the plan. Money not spent on promotions or equity may be used for across-the-board increases.

Now under 24-hour "super-maximum security" and facing a possible death sentence: convicted murderer Bruce A. Davis was returned Saturday to the Menard Correc­tional Center, from where he escaped Oct. 24.

Davis was flown from West Virginia, where he was captured Oct. 31, to Perryville Municipal Airport in Perry Center, Mo. By Michael Lane, director of the Illinois Department of Corrections, and four other officials.

Davis, looking tired and with his escort from the state plane to a waiting DOC vehicle, in which he was driven to the maximum security prison, about five miles away in Chester.

James Scales, chairman of the Administrative and Professional staff, said the "staff isn't going to agree with Somit's decision."

"John Baker, special assistant to the president, said that the plan was developed after taking recommendations from the various constituency groups. We knew that after taking into consideration all the recommendations there could be no single plan that would please all the groups."

Denon said the faculty represents won't be pleased with the plan because of the way the final 1 percent is split. He said the faculty would probably object to the 0.4 percent merit increase.

Staff Photos by Greg Deedson

He said he would have preferred a flat dollar increase because the 0.3 percent raise was "such a small amount of money, it makes sense to try to deal with merit."

Denon estimated that about 100 faculty members would qualify for the merit raise, but there are an awful lot of people who are not going to feel that they were mistreated this year."

He did say, however, that he thought that the 1 percent for across the board salary increases according to salary and the percent for equal dollar raises was "a reasonable compromise because the dollar raise "helps the lower paid person a little more."

Scales said that Administrative and Professional staff could object to the 0.4 percent taken out for salary equity. He said that the equity plan, which was designed "to make the salaries of people here keep up with people at other institutions," isn't going to be effective.

Protesters seized for damaging sub

HILTON, Conn. (AP) — Seven anti-nuclear weapons protesters were arrested Sunday after making "unauthorized entry" into the shipyard where Trident nuclear submarines are built.

The protesters said they climbed aboard the USS George Washington, the nation's newest Trident sub, pored over its plans and packs, then took hammers to damage the missile hatches with hammers.

Neither the police nor the shipyard owner was shocked. The protesters were released Sunday night.

Three women and four men were taken into custody at about 1:30 a.m. and charged with first-degree criminal trespassing and first-degree criminal mischief, police Sgt. Louis Kessler said.

The protesters said in a statement issued to the media, called their raid "a victory for lovers and hammers" and accused the Navy of using the huge nuclear submarine-firing submarines as "the ultimate blasphemy against God and humanity.

Police would not say how the protesters got into the shipyard, or what they did once inside.

"We received a call from Electric Boat that unauthorized people had been made to the shipyard property by these people," Capt. Karl said.

Three of the 11 protesters got aboard the Georgia, pouring their own blood on it and using hammers to damage its missile hatches, according to Arthur J. Laffin, a spokesman for the Atlantic Life Community, a coalition of East Coast anti-nuclear groups.

Laffin said he was not sure how many of the protesters entered the shipyard.

The people arrested Tuesday were identified as Elmer H. Grady, 47, of New Haven, Conn.; Jean G. Holladay, 53, of Newton, Mass.; Ellen Grady, 28, of Richmond, Va.; John P. Grady, 28, of Slaterville, N.Y.; Peter J. Demott, 26, of Baltimore; and Roger R. Trimmel, 30, of Washington.

The people arrested also were identified as William H. Keating, 22, of Ithaca, N.Y.; James E. Green, 22, of Ithaca, N.Y.; and Peter J. Demott, 26, of Baltimore.

'Fine tuning' is planned

Search process is examined

By Andrew Herrman
Staff Writer

The process used to choose top administrators in the SIU System may be revised as early as next month, said William Norwood, Board of Trustees chairman.

Norwood said that the changes would be a "fine tuning" of established guidelines, but he also said others may consider the changes "major.

The executive search procedures, which are used to select presidents of both SIU-C and SIU: Edwardsville and the chancellor, have come under attack by employees, and faculty representatives have called for more participation in the searches.

There has also been criticism that two of the last three searches were costly and needlessly nationwide since both Champaign-Kenneth Shaw and SIU-E president Earl Lohmeyer were already employed by SIU.

Speaking at the Board of Trustees meeting Thursday, Norwood said that none of the top executive posts needed to be filled at this time but that it was appropriate to consider new guidelines now.

Norwood said that he and Trustee A.D. Van Meter will draw up the proposals and present them to the board at its December meeting. He said he has been soliciting suggestions for the guidelines for about eight months, but "there hasn't been an outpouring of suggestions." Some faculty representatives and trustees voiced their opinions on the search procedures at the board meeting Thursday.

Trustee Ivan Elliott said the guideline changes would be important in its creation of new guidelines.

"Since we don't have a search procedure that we're happy with it," he said. "Let's get something done and in place so we'll have something when we need it.""Elliott also said that the guidelines for presidential and chancellor searches should be different from each other because "we need to consider the different needs."

Herbert Donow, Faculty Senate president, called for more participation on the part of the faculty. He said that "it is important in the beginning that everybody feels that this is a joint activity. The search committee comprises representatives of the faculty that the executive officers select that something should be the result of cooperation between the board and the various constituencies involved."

There was no action on the meeting, but the meeting was held in a closed session.

Faculty unity to be subject of meeting

By Robert Green
Staff Writer

The nation's university faculty can help higher education attract its fair share of funding by organizing and becoming involved politically.

That will be the main theme of guest speaker President Herbert Donow's address at the Annual Faculty Meeting at 3 p.m. Tuesday in Room 110 of the Student Center.

President Ed. Solmit will field questions at the meeting.

Donow said his address will restate many of the points made by former Vice President Walter Mondale in a recent speech before the American Council of Education.

"I've said that there is going to be a brutal, blood-disputed fight in this country, and one of the main targets are you are one of the main targets. You have to make up the more vigorous, if you think the cause is being made and the case for higher education is not being made effectively to the American people or to legislators, but it could be that the people could get involved.

"If we are as effective in organizing and presenting our views as the National Education Association things would be a lot better on college campuses," Donow, who is president of the Carbondale chapter of University Teachers.

Donow said faculty must persuade the American people of the need for adequate funding for higher education and devote itself in the nation's best interest.

Donow, a faculty member in English said he expects that faculty will ask President Perdue questions concerning library storage, the Committee on Academic Priorities, and the distribution of the 3.3 percent salary increase.

"There will probably be some very interesting questions," Donow said.

About 30 percent of Illinois' prisoners have been convicted of violent crimes, Lane said, so it's not unusual to have some of these prisoners in situations like the prison farm.

But the prisoners are carefully screened, he said. Davis' record was "unblemished until he escaped," Lane said, and it was "neatly written in the federal system."

"We had no reason to believe that we were dealing with the kind of person that we possibly have on hand," he said. "These changes will be made in accordance of the policy for placing prisoners on the farm," Lane said.

Some were arrested and although many have been freed, some are still imprisoned.

The crowd broke into cheers when the 25-year-old union chief showed up just before 11 a.m. Saturday.

Walesa, still with his bushy mustache and wearing a gray suit jumped from a Peugeot and rushed into the building without shaking hands.

After five minutes in response to the constant calls of the crowd, Walesa came to the window and said, "I will speak very briefly because we have not yet my voice for one year.

"We have to reach an agreement, but not on our knees," he said. "We are making a decision to improve things and to continue the work.

"Walesa left in about 30 minutes.

There were no accounts of the greeting he received from his wife and children when he entered the apartment for the first time since last December.

"If the raise was higher than 1 percent, the 0.1 percent would be fine. But when the raise is that low, it just doesn't make any sense," said Scales.

Scales said that the decision to have a "very small" raise was made last February. He also said it was "a very important decision, and it is a decision that he and this administration will have to face."

Baker said that employees could figure out how much the percentage salary increase will mean to their paychecks but that he could not estimate what the across-the-board dollar increase will be.

Solmit's plan is subject to the availability of state funds. Gov. James Thompson has approved the 3 percent raise but he can also rescind it.

Take what's good from Brezhnev legacy

Brezhnev's death is a time for the West, especially the United States, to pause and reflect: To reflect on the effects of the Brezhnev era and to think about what the future might bring.

Brezhnev can be credited with removing arbitrary one-man rule in Russia, instituting a more consensual style of government. It is still totalitarian. But under Brezhnev, a Russian man on the street did not have to fear sudden purges and imprisonment. Under Brezhnev, and especially during the 1980s (when I spent more time exposed to Pepsi and jeans and western consumer goods)

On the international front, Brezhnev signed two nuclear arms limitation treaties with the United States—SALT I with President Nixon and SALT II with President Carter. He committed the Soviet Union to the START I talks with the United States a few months before his death. He opened the Soviet Union to Europe by signing a peace treaty with West Germany.

The increasing exposure of the Russian populace to the West, the new international economic relations, the West and the more consensual style of government are positive elements of Brezhnev's legacy that need to be cherished and encouraged.

Cordial and cautious overtures from the West as the new powers that be work to reassert their control over the Soviet Union, are the best ways to keep these positive developments flourishing.

Free enterprise system made our country great

Monday, Nov 15 is the national celebration of American Fringe Day, which is celebrated over the nation, members of the Future Business Leaders of America-Phi Beta Lambda are recognizing that it is the free enterprise system that has made our country great.

The students who believe that the American enterprise system offers us productivity are those who believe that the American enterprise system offers us productivity. The Future Business Leaders believe in profit earned through increased personal capitalization and the profit means progress. It benefits everyone and enables business to engage in research and development.

Even in these times of federal cutbacks and of the "money squeeze," let us take the time to appreciate our free enterprise system. The government of PHA is becoming more and more involved and believe that our system is really the best one around.

The American free enterprise system builds a better tomorrow for all. We know it can work. It is the way to do business. It is the way to be successful.

Many proposals, no resolution of world's hunger problem

By Suresh R. Prasad

September 1 Computer Science

A committee was established by the United Nations General Assembly four years ago to discuss the creation of a new economic order and the future well-being of mankind.

That committee, called the Commission of the Committee of the Whole, met in 1979 to discuss the world's food supply and agriculture and to look at strategies for feeding the world's hungry. Since then various ad hoc and energetic programs have been presented to United Nations member states to achieve a more equitable distribution of food.

Hunger is a complex problem that begs a quick solution, and it is highly unlikely that it can be solved by one U.N. committee. In 1979, President Jimmy Carter, then U.S. Secretary of State, opened the Third World Food Conference urging "within a decade no child should go hungry to bed."

As of today, that has not come to pass. The urgency of the situation has escalated. Today there can be no more important a subject than that of food. Food is a necessity with no substitute.

A large percentage of mankind is impoverished, ill-fed and undernourished. Depending upon the criteria of definition of hunger, estimates of the world's hungry range from 450 million to 1.3 billion.

The percentage of undernourished in the developing world ranges from 25 percent to 60 percent. This unfortunate reality is coupled with the fact that as much as 40 percent of the world's population must struggle at the edge of poverty, with poor sanitation, no health care, and a lack of suitable housing.

These problems exist despite the world's ability to feed, clothe, house and employ a population greater than the one we have.

The problem has been subject of countless papers, documents, studies, proposals and recommendations.

The goals are already clear. The objectives have been broadly identified under four points: a faster increase in production and increased interdependence, tackling the problem of parochialism as practiced in international agricultural trade, solving the problem of malnutrition in rural populations, and bringing about international security in food supply.

In the past, the slow agricultural progress of the developing nations has made their food security more dependent upon increasingly burdensome imports from a few developed countries, thus thwarting their efforts at self-sufficiency. It has also prevented them from taking full advantage of agricultural export opportunities.

Industrialization in a developing country depends heavily on the rapid development of agricultural processing industries, such as farm implement manufacturing and fertilizer production. But the increase in food imports has reduced the foreign exchange that would have been available for the development of industry and other non-agricultural sectors.

The majority of the world's poorest people live in rural areas and derive their meager employment and livelihood from agriculture. The slow progress in agricultural production has therefore been a major constraint on the reduction of poverty and to the achievement of basic social and economic goals.

The solution to the food problem, like the problem of economic development, depends on all of the following factors: increasing acts of international trade and the use of force from the United Nations to influence, for example, the policies of the United States, in order to ensure that the international security in food supply is maintained.
Television reinforces tension among races, minister says

By Eric Larson
Staff Writer

Negative mental conditioning by a society predominantly controlled by whites is the primary factor behind a less than equal status for blacks today, said Audaunn Shabazz, a minister with the American Muslim Mission and former student and assistant of civil rights leader Malcolm X.

"By nature we are an upright people, a progressive people, an intelligent people," said Shabazz.

Shabazz spoke to about 100 students from colleges and universities in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri and Kentucky at the concluding session of the first annual Camp Southern Summit, held in the Student Center Saturday. The conference was for black student unions in the Midwest.

Shabazz said television programming is an example of how blacks are shown in an unfair light.

"Television reinforces racial tension by making us laugh at our own pitiful condition," Shabazz said.

The educational and religious systems in the United States are not promoting racial attitudes in many instances, he said.

Karriem Shari'ati, coordinator of the Black Affairs Council at the University of Illinois, originally planned the conference, said "The main purpose of the meeting was to focus attention on the role of black student unions and discuss the problems they are facing." The meeting of discussions and workshops held throughout the conference, delegates at the summit approved several resolutions aimed at improving the effectiveness of black student unions in the Midwest.

A main idea in the resolutions is to expand face-to-face contact between student union officers and their constituents. Many other ideas were considered to overcome the problem of student apathy, a problem voiced repeatedly during the sessions.

More effective use of existing media and the possible expansion of black media channels were also proposed as a method for increasing in involvement in black student unions.

The idea of a regional Black Student Council was proposed by Shari'ati and greeted enthusiastically by the delegates. The results of the conference, including the resolutions adopted, will be formally prepared by the BAC and mailed to more than 200 schools in the Midwest, Shari'ati said. Shari'ati said the BAC is planning to hold the conference again next year.

Company gives gifts to those laid-off

EAST CHICAGO, Ind. (AP) — Inland Steel Co. has decided to distribute food and toys to families of laid-off workers rather than hold its traditional holiday party, the area's biggest.

Families of 3,000 steelworkers will benefit from the cancellation, the company said.

"Ending a party tradition that goes back to the 30s is a sad note for many, but we wanted to do something more substantial to help our laid-off employees and their families," said Thomas G. Katahni, Inland vice-president.

The party had brought in up to 12,000 children of employees in past years.

The $45,000 originally budgeted to cover the party now will be used to finance a Thanksgiving dinner and program for approximately 1,500 employees who have been laid off since before June.

On Nov. 22, volunteers from the Inland Athletic Association will deliver food baskets containing a turkey and ingredients for a family-size Thanksgiving supper to 50 furloughed families in Hammond, East Chicago, Whiting and Gary.

Another 1,430 eligible families will be mailed a $10 food gift certificate.

Veteran actor brings Thurber to life

A Review

Everyone has known John Burley Doggett at least in one of his many incarnations. And Saturday night at Shryock Auditorium, an audience of 250 people were treated to a visit of sorts from the great practical joker himself.

"As a practical joker, and mother and a wicked elf Julia Burley. When her son was only six years old, she taught him how to set strangers' umbrellas on fire.

"After an April shower she would wildly forth with the little bellows they lived in Dayton in search of a citizen of a floppy umbrella. After an April shower, Dayton men lower their umbrellas without bothering to roll them. Mrs. Doggett would hunt down the man waiting for a streetcar, his umbrella sagging at his side. She would then surreptitiously fill the umbrella with paper, several doors kitchen matches, and perhaps with one or two cigarettes. As the streetcar approached she would drop a lighted match into the umbrella. Now, Bell hath no dismay like that of a gentleman whose wet umbrella suddenly bursts into flame. Instead of rolling the thing to another blaze, he would throw it away, nine out of 10 men. Roasting Doggett's statistics, will flail it around in the air, thus increasing the conflagration. Many of Mrs. Doggett's victims were arrested for disturbing the peace or for arson."

Birdie Doggett is just one of the many characters that William Windom brought to Shryock for "Thurber.

Windom is NOT James Thurber. But he is the closest anyone may ever come to capturing inside the head of one of America's greatest humorists and looking around to see what makes him tick. For a little over two hours, Windom held the audience spellbound with his interpretation of Thurber's prose, poetry, drawings and wit-locums. It is a sad that only hundreds of people turned out to see this extremely talented veteran actor perform people who complain about lack of top-notch entertainment. In Southern Illinois have no reason to complain if they didn't attend Shryock Saturday night.

Windom's show is a carefully balanced look into the personality of Thurber, possibly the most unique humorist America has ever read from Europe. He can influence the voice of a practical joker whose style was his own. His drawings, Thurber's inner self remained unchangeable until Windom put together his most aimed at man shows and took them on the road.

Moving easily between drawings projected on a large screen and carefully planned monologues, Windom captivated the audience with his unmistakable speaking voice and the casual manner in which he performed. He used a deck on the right side of the stage for his humorous routines and a stool on the left for his more serious and poignant ones, making the stage into a replica of the two masks of theater - comedy and tragedy. Throughout the show we were moved to the edge of the orchestra pit to address the audience, which added to the casual and personal feeling he was trying to convey.

Windom's drawings were presented with the author's captions, each of which captured the futility and absurdity of human life that he was so fond of conveying.

One, which showed Thurber's commoner characters such as high society and their cocktail parties, pictured a seemingly nameless woman saying, "I just love the idea of women. I have two of these women, don't you?" while another featured a stern-looking father adding his son saying, "Why don't you wait and see what happens to your own generation if you jump on mine."

Other drawings were grouped into common themes, such as "The War Between Men and Women," "The Kike," "The Cocktail Party" and "The Masculine Approach." The drawings served to break up the monologues and keep the audience's concentration at a higher peak.

Windom told some stories that resembled the old "Frat-tured Fairy Tales" carvings of the 1960s, tales that contained morals with a twist (told of a clothes moth who fell in love with a beautiful luna moth, who considered a love affair with a lovely clothes moth to be unfit for an insect of her high esteem."

After he dashed his brains out against a window trying to get to her, she decided that he was really worthy of her devotion in a ritual of love she flew into a candle and burned herself up. The moral: "Love is blind but desire just doesn't give a good goddamn."

Windom told three poignant stories that first seemed out of place in the context of a mostly humorous show, but actually balanced out the humorous material and provided a moment of reflection for the audience.

One was titled "Annoyances at Seven," which told the story of a futile attempt by a man to visit a past girlfriend and ended with him going home in dejection. Another told of an "overpowering desire to hide in a hole," and the third was a strange bit about a man who rides home on a train next to another man who acts strangely the entire time and makes the storyteller paranoid.

By the time the storyteller reaches his destination, the other man is gone, and a conductor tells him that the man acting strangely had just lost his little girl. At this point, the audience are an unembarrassed to the story line that they didn't quite know how to react to the sunshine.

William Windom is a very talented man who has taken it upon himself to perform the works of James Thurber, another talented man. I double the audience will soon forget the man in the green vest and large horn-rimmed glasses who presented one of the most intimate and enjoyable evenings of entertainment that Shryock has ever seen.

At the conclusion of "Thurber II," a slide appeared on the screen above the stage at Neyvicky Auditorium. It was a drawing of a dog with two heads—one of a man looking at a star, and another of a woman looking at a flower. According to William Windom, that drawing perfectly summed up the views of American humorist James Thurber—the man as a dreamer, the woman in the realist, and humanity is what it is.

"Thurber had a way of capturing the human experience, a way that few other writers have," Windom said. "He had a saying that goes, 'four is a party, three is a crowd, two is company and one is a wanderer.' I think that sums him up pretty well.

At 96, Windom appears tireless. He also appears like a man who has worked in the performing arts for his entire life, only to be shunned by the "star makers" in Hollywood.

"Performing live theater is like dancing with a pretty girl," Windom said. "Performing in movies is like dancing with a chair, and performing in television is like dancing with a wet raincoat. However, before the pretty girl will dance with you, she has to see you dance with the chair and the wet raincoat.

He said he takes any part he can get, because roles are hard to come by in Hollywood, where unemploying great actors is about 45 percent. "Commercials are one way to make a lot of money. These Federated commercials have done wonders for James Garner's career, and they've also helped the woman who stars in them," Marlene Hasky.

"There are only 15 or 30 real movie stars in the world whose name and face is known to everyone. There are a lot of actors out there who are stars, but they never reach even marginal acclaim," Windom said. "Today, television is sometimes excellent and sometimes trashy, and it takes a consistent place to see the blame. Sometimes the writing is bad, sometimes the acting is bad, and sometimes it's a combination of both," he said. "There is a lot of good and bad in television, and we have to live with all of it."

Windom began his first show on Thurber in 1972, and "Thurber II" came along in 1975. He said he started his Thurber shows after "starring in the television series "My World and Welcome To It," which was loosely based on Thurber's writings and drawings.

"My World..." was canceled after one Emmy winning season in 1968-69. Though it received some critical acclaim, it suffered poor ratings and was axed by the networks at NBC.

Windom also does two one-man shows on journalist Ernie Pyle, who wrote five columns a week from 1945-46, and who was one of America's premier correspondents during World War II. Windom has starred in numerous movies and television programs, including "To Kill A Mockingbird" and "Fool's Parade" on the movie side and "The Farmer's Daughter" and "My World..." on the television side.

William Windom relaxes after his performance of "Thurber II."

Council to consider parking fine law

The Carbondale City Council will also consider providing stricter enforcement of parking fine collection, incorporating a new state law at its formal meeting Monday in the Council Chambers, 607 E. College St.

Under the ordinance, if a person is more than 30 days delinquent in paying a parking fine, the fine amount will be doubled. A notice for the increased fine will be sent to the property owner. If the fine is not paid within 30 days, the property owner's license can be suspended.

Public hearing will also be held on the proposed amendment of six parcels of land on the city's north side. The parcels are located on North Alworth and East Fisher streets. The parcels, presently outside city limits, are encircled by city property due to the city's annexation of the surrounding area last spring. In other business, the council will decide on allocating $100,000 from the city's general contingency fund to construct a crosswalk for the handicapped at Mill Street and Rawlings Street. If approved, advance warning signs would be installed. Ed Reeder, city director of public works, said curb cuts for the crosswalk have already been made.

The council will also consider a request by City Manager Caroll Fry to grant him authority to set priorities for the city's Capitol Improvements Program. At their informal meeting Nov. 8, the council considered 19 proposals submitted by the city administration to be added to the CIP program from fiscal year 1985-1986 to 1987-88. If the request is approved, he would be charged with determining which receive attention first.

The council will decide on accepting a $25,214 contract to purchase six new police cars.

Time conflicts put colloquium on hold

A colloquium on the subject of developing a research program with shrinking institutional resources, scheduled for 3 to 5 p.m. Monday in Morris Library Auditorium, has been postponed according to Debbie Morrow, colloquium secretary. Scheduled to speak at the colloquium were Michael R. Dionne, from the office of research development and administration; John Gowen, vice president for academic affairs and research, and Albert Somit, SLU president.

Too few people were able to attend the colloquium at the scheduled time, according to Morrow. A new date will be announced.
City bikeway is dedicated

Fueled with all the custard filled doughnuts they could eat, much of the 200 participants in the 1982 Annual Carbondale Alternative Rally rode their bikes over seven miles of Carbondale’s bike path, dedicated Saturday.

City Manager Carroll Fry, author of ceremonies, said 13 percent of the energy used in the rally was for transportation. An additional 14.5 miles of marked sidewalk has been authorized by the city, in addition to the 6.4 miles existing in 1974.

Sixteen bicyclists competed for prizes, which included a Bertin 500 camera and a insulated bicycle.

The rally’s objective was to see how to accumulate the most points at five checkpoints along the trail. One stop was at the custard filled doughnuts, baked by Mrs. Krum and donated by John Dough’s, received enthusiastic reception.

"This is my fifth doughnut," said 13-year-old Marcus Postulat. "When asked what he thought of the event so far, the youth junior high student said "It was great. It’s perfect, I’m glad I got involved," he said. His prize was a bike-generator light.

Richard Archer, assistant professor in the design said the concept of the bike rally came from his design 10 class. They found out how to organize a community wide project and promote it," he said.

The other Utility Carbondale’s energy conservation service, also sponsored the event. The bike path is completed, the land will be leased to the Carbondale Park District, which plans further improvements.

Second place winner in the adult division was Tim Johnson, a senior in radio and TV who "thought it was fun and I’m glad I got involved," he said. His prize was a bike-generator light.

Dress to suit your boss, author says

By Michele Tannen

Staff Writer

Corporate America is dull and uniform, able to dictate to everyone what to do. And it does it with almost a gleam in its eye.

So warned John Molloy, best-selling author, in his presentation Thursday of "Dress for Success," sponsored by the Student Programming Council, held in Student Center (Room 12).

Molloy said people in personnel departments who hire college students do not let prospective students past the front door because they have dirty nails, dirty shoes and generally shabby appearances.

Employers, Molloy said, look for young people to pass no interviews being interviewed. "You're in school at a tough time. And you get out of school in an even rougher time. "Most of you will be unemployed. Congratulations.

Molloy said in order to get a job, you'll have to bend a little. You'll have to give up some of your personal liberties. Companies are in the position to own you. You're going to play the game to get a decent position.

One of the games is to dress successfully, said Molloy, one of America's leading success-image consultants and researchers.

Molloy, who Time magazine dubbed America's first wardrobe engineer, said the clothes are the quick judgments we wear are successful attire for men and women.

"Navy and dark colors should be worn, such as browns, black, beige, gray for men and beige for women. In interviews especially, men and women should wear only white shirts and blouses. Men may wear a white shirt and tie. But wear floppy ties with feminine blouses."

"Wear a rug pattern and people will walk all over you," he said.

The darker the tie, the more authoritative, Molloy said. Plaid, striped and club ties are acceptable. The smaller the pattern, the better. Box ties are out of the question.

Molloy said clothes have never been worn for warmth or protection.

"The earliest inhabitants ran around almost naked," he said. "In primitive societies, clothes identified rank."

Today's society is no different. "Clothes are not to keep you warm. They are for tell everyone how important you are."

According to research Molloy did about 20 years ago, clothes reflect socio-economic background, thus affecting a person's image.

An example is his work with the Xerox company, which was having trouble competing with the IBM company in selling typewriters and other office equipment.

Molloy said that the salesmen dressed bad. They looked like bums.

He outfitted them in suits and sales dramatically increased.

"Four months later, however, sales were down again because of the color of the salesmen's raincoats. Beige raincoats had higher prestige than black raincoats."

Molloy said. Eight out of 10 expensive stores sold beige raincoats while the inexpensive stores sold black. Blue-collar workers wore black raincoats, while executives wore beige, he said.

The salesmen were outfitted in beige raincoats and "sales went up right through the ceiling."

Molloy said women should never be innovative in clothing styles. The clothes that work best are equal to and closely resembles the male executive suit, but with a skirt instead of pants.

Women swimmers power past Indiana and Cincinnati

By Brian Higgins

The 1982-83 season of the nationally-contending women's swim team got underway in late October, and the Salukis swept two road victories.

Coach Tim Hill hopes to place his swimmers among the top six teams.

The opening win came at the expense of the Flyers. In their first third-place finisher, the Indiana Hoosiers, SIU cruised to an 8:41-8:35 win.

The Salukis' relay team of Debbie Thraves, Roseanne Carlton and Claudia Zoernold won the 100-yard fly race title, the 100-meter breaststroke and the 80-meter medley relay events.

In all, the Salukis claimed 12 of the 14 races in the Hoosier contests.

The 200-meter medley relay victory by Paula Jensen, Amanda Martin, Barb Larsen and Roseanne Carlton was no surprise, but the Saluki strength in relay events, winning that race SIU also took the 200-yard fly race title, which was won by the combined efforts of Janie Cook, Larsen, Carlton and Claudia Zoernold. Other Saluki winners include Debbie Thraves, who placed second in the 100-yard back, and Carlon in the 500-meter freestyle, Zoernold, the 200-meter freestyle, Zoernold and the 200-meter medley relay. Coach Bill Muller was pleased with the performance of the gymnasts in their second meet of the year. Muller said, "I think Brendan is really coming along, not only in floor exercise, but on high bar and parallel bars. He's really improved." Price received 8.20 on his high bar routine, which was a required move that is worth five-tenths.

We left it out because I think he's a little bit too shaky," said Muller. "But what the
