Strict probations to replace some jail sentences

By Bob Tita
Staff Writer

In an effort to reduce overcrowding in Illinois prisons, some offenders will be placed under intensive probation supervision rather than serving jail sentences.

Jackson, Williamson and Saline counties have been targeted as the first unit of counties in Illinois where the IPS program will be implemented, said Byron York, chief probation officer for Jackson County.

York and other probation officials, at a news conference in Marion on Tuesday, stressed that the guidelines for the program will be stringent.

Three probation officers will oversee 40 people in the three-county area. Offenders will be required to have at least five face-to-face contacts with probation officers each week.

Under the guidelines, people involved in the IPS program must also find jobs. If they are unable to find work they will be placed in community service jobs. Offenders must perform 130 hours of community service.

A curfew will also be imposed. When not at work, the offenders must be at their homes, and will be subject to checks by officers at any time.

"These people will be under close scrutiny on a 24-hour basis," said Lynn Thorkildson, assistant superintendent of the probation division of the administrative office of the Illinois courts. "You could almost say they will be in prison in their own community."

York said that rulebreakers will be sent to prison.

Officials said the program is not designed to endanger the residents of a community. County and local police will be notified of offenders on IPS in their areas.

People convicted of Class X felonies and all other crimes where general probation is not allowed will not be eligible for IPS. William "Cy" Henshaw, case manager for the three-county IPS program, said he will screen people before they are let into the program to determine if they can be managed.

Patchett starts quest for recount

Randy Patchett, Republican congressional candidate from the 22nd District, will seek a discovery recount to determine if there are grounds for a formal recount, said Mark Maddox of Patchett's campaign.

The discovery recount will not result in official action but may reveal trends to justify a formal recount, Maddox said.

Patchett lost by only 1,290 votes to Democrat Ken Gray in last Tuesday's election according to Republican figures.

Patchett's staff will recount the ballots in the 25 biggest precincts in 12 counties in the district. If no trend of miscounts shows up in these precincts then there is probably no reason to have a formal recount, Maddox said.

Patchett filed the necessary documents with the county clerks counties where the discovery recounts will be held Tuesday, Maddox said.

Maddox said he wasn't sure how long the discovery process would take, but he hopes it will be completed sufficiently before Nov. 26, the date the State Board of Elections meets to certify election results.

Gus says Patchett hopes that the discovery recount will show there's something to discover.

Ohio man wants Murphysboro rail line

By Bob Tita
Staff Writer

A rail line through Murphysboro that seemed destined to be abandoned could become the home of a fleet of passenger cars, a short line freight railroad and a rail car repair shop, said Alfred Nippert, president of Great American Tours on Rails.

Nippert, of Cincinnati, said he is interested in owning 31 miles of track between Carbondale, Murphysboro and Leahy, which is near Campbell Hill, that the Illinois Central Gulf Railroad wants to abandon.

An Interstate Commerce Commission hearing was held last week in Murphysboro to help the ICC reach a decision on whether to allow the ICG to stop service and sell the line. A decision is expected in January, said Murphysboro Mayor Sydney Appleton.

Nippert said representatives from GATOR are already involved in negotiations with the railroad. He claims, however, that the price demanded by the ICG is out of line. The railroad is asking for $3 million for the line, which Nippert said is worth about $1 million.

If the ICC decides to let the railroad sell the line and a price cannot be agreed on, the ICC will set the price. Nippert said he hopes an agreement can be reached without ICC intervention.

"If you can agree with somebody in fair market environment it's much better," he said.

Nippert said if he is able to acquire the rail line he plans to continue to operate a freight service for industry located along the line. He said he would ship freight to the ICG's main line in Carbondale and believes he can better serve those industries than the ICG.

"Experience has shown that short line railroads tend to get personally involved with shippers," he said.

Nippert said the tracks, cross ties and roadbed are in good condition and that he doesn't perceive any problems in assuming operation of the line from ICG. He said since ICG has consolidated with the Gulf Mobile and Ohio Railroad the ICG is no longer interested in operating branch lines such as the Murphysboro line.

"I'm interested in the line because I think it has some potential," he said. "It is a railroad that is passable and operable."

Nippert said he would consider using coal-fired steam locomotives to haul the freight. He said steam locomotives are cost effective for short line

Sniper called troubled, faddish

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — A 19-year-old sniper who killed a former Olympic sprinter and wounded a student wrestler before taking his own life had taken about 300 rounds of ammunition into the University of Oregon's stadium, police said Tuesday.

Police had not yet counted the cartridges found in Autzen Stadium after Michael E. Feher opened fire Monday with two high-powered rifles, but they estimated 65 to 75 shots were fired, said police Sgt. Eric Mellgren.

Feher, who was a student last year but had not enrolled this semester, was described by friends and acquaintances as overwhelmed by problems and prey to fads. He had slashed his wrists in a suicide attempt at the stadium last year, his fraternity brothers said.

Jim Stewart, president of the Delta Tau Delta fraternity house where Feher lived for the past year, said Feher had "problems with studies, problems with women, problems that you and I could deal with."

Feher, who had taken two ROTC classes, drifted from fad to fad, with the latest being military magazines, said Stewart.

Stewart said Feher kept a rifle in the fraternity house but was required to remove the firing pin and lock it in the house office.

Lebanon says it will negotiate but wants Shiites released

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanese leaders said Tuesday they were eager to restart the suspended troop withdrawal negotiations with Israel, but again insisted that Israel first release four Shiite Moslem militiamen arrested last week. Israel Prime Minister Shimon Peres was quoted by Israel Radio as saying he expects the talks to resume soon, but there was no sign from Israeli authorities in Lebanon that the militiamen were about to be released. U.S. Assistant Secretary of State Richard Murphy met in Damascus with Syrian President Hafez Assad to discuss the Israeli-Lebanese impasse.

High Court to decide rights of mentally retarded

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court, in a key case for the legal rights of mentally retarded people, agreed Tuesday to decide whether communities have nearly unlimited power to exclude group homes for the retarded from residential neighborhoods. The justices will use a zoning dispute from Cleburne, Texas, to decide how closely state and federal courts must scrutinize any law that treats mentally retarded people differently from other people. Their eventual decision, expected by July, could carry enormous importance for the rights of the mentally retarded far beyond housing opportunities.

New plan devised for manual satellite rescue

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Two spacewalkers who muscled a 1,200-pound satellite into the shuttle Discovery's cargo bay said Tuesday that a new plan will make wrestling with their second big, tough target "a heck of a lot easier." Astronauts Joe Allen and Dale Gardner were told Tuesday that they will have to manhandle the Westar 6 satellite during Wednesday's rescue attempt because engineers on the ground fear a malfitting bracket will again make Discovery's robot arm unusable in berthing the errant communications craft. In Monday's retrieval of the Palapa B2 satellite, a sister craft to Westar, the bracket would not attach, preventing the use of the robot arm.

African leader says continent faces drought

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — The head of the Organization of African Unity said Tuesday that the continent faces catastrophe from a ravaging drought, acute food shortages, mounting debts and sharp declines in production. Acting OAU Secretary-General Peter Onu, addressing delegates at the pan-African group's 20th summit meeting, said, "a very grim situation faces the OAU on all fronts, a situation that requires some form of radical solutions by our member states."

Washington investors file suit over bond default

SEATTLE (AP) — Investors who lost their money in the bond default of the Washington Public Power Supply System filed a $7.25 billion lawsuit Tuesday against Washington state and some state officials alleging fraud and negligence helped cause "the WPPSS fiasco." The plaintiffs, a group representing WPPSS bondholders, filed the lawsuit in King County Superior Court, calling it "the largest suit ever filed against a state or municipality."

AT&T, Illinois Bell request $65 million rate increase

CHICAGO (AP) — AT&T Communications of Illinois and Illinois Bell on Tuesday asked the Illinois Commerce Commission for permission for a combined $65 million rate increase for late payments and optional services, but said the cost of basic services would not be affected. AT&T is seeking to increase prices by $19 million, effective immediately. About $13 million of that increase would affect business services such as WATS lines and toll-free numbers, according to company vice president Bruce Brayton. The remaining $6 million increase sought by AT&T would come from higher charges for operator-assisted calls and long-distance directory assistance within Illinois, Brayton said. Illinois Bell told the ICC that establishing a late-payment charge for overdue phone bills would generate about $18 million in revenues.

Seven-Up Co. to drop saccharin for aspartame

CHICAGO (AP) — Seven-Up Co., the nation's third-largest maker of soft drinks, is dropping saccharin from its sugar-free products and will use only the low-calorie sweetener aspartame, company officials said Tuesday. Seven-Up currently is using a blend of aspartame and saccharin in its two sugar-free products — Sugar-Free 7up and Like cola, Frantel said.

GPSC to consider proposed housing increase resolution

By Darren Hillock
Staff Writer

A resolution supporting a 7 percent housing rate increase will come before the Graduate and Professional Council again Wednesday.

But whether or not the council will pass the resolution intact isn't clear, said Glenn Stolar, GPSC president.

At their last meeting, the council postponed the passing of a housing rate resolution until someone from housing could come to answer questions. This meeting, Samuel Rinella, housing director, will be present to answer questions.

The resolution as stands, says that the GPSC supports the proposed rate increases for the housing areas except family housing areas, such as Southern Hills and Evergreen Terrace. The resolution advocates no increases in family housing rates.

Stolar said he thinks the council will come out in favor of a housing rate increase because the money goes for essential services, not auxiliary services like recreation.

The council needs to determine whether residents' needs are being met, Stolar said. If they are, the council will discuss whether the increase will insure that they will be in the future, and if not, the council needs to decide whether the increase will improve the situation or just maintain things the way they are now.

"Once we settle that we can settle the question of how much to recommend," Stolar said.

The resolution also calls for the housing administration to prepare a report for the GPSC stating what measures have been taken to control costs in the housing areas. The GPSC has already received a report from Rinella's office providing information on energy conservation procedures in the various housing areas.

Procedures in the report include installation of water-saving showerheads and flush valves in family housing, reduction of water heater temperature from 180 degrees to 120 degrees and reducing lighting in food service areas where it doesn't endanger workers.

Stolar said that this report would satisfy the last part of the GPSC resolution.

railroads and would use a local resource.

GATOR operates a fleet of 50 passenger cars, some of which are antiques, that are rented out to individuals, corporations or groups. He said Murphysboro would be an attractive site for GATOR because the passenger cars can be linked with Amtrak trains in Carbondale.

Nippert said the passenger car service is the second largest in the county behind Amtrak.

He said the repair shop for the passenger cars would draw owners of passenger cars from around the country because the shop would be able to repair antique cars.

Nippert believes if he is able to purchase the line the operation will generate about 50 jobs within a year and a half.

Although the ICC has yet to release a decision, the City of Murphysboro is making arrangements to help Nippert finance the purchase of the line. The city requested an application for a grant from Illinois Community Development Assistance Program for $500,000, Appleton said.

He said Nippert would match that amount by selling tax exempt industrial revenue bonds that the city would issue. Permission from the state would be necessary before the city could issue the bonds.

F-Senate tables personnel file proposals again

By Ed Foley
Staff Writer

The Faculty Senate took another look at proposed amendments to the University's Personnel Files policy Tuesday, discussing at length everything from the merits to the typos before debate finally was derailed by a motion for the drafting of a definition of the term "file custodian."

The policy amendments were brought to the senate several months ago but were tabled at that time in order to give the Governance Committee, headed by Darrell Dunham, a professor at the Law School, more time to reach "common ground" with administration representatives on the matter.

The senate has been concerned with what it sees as easy access to faculty personnel files, especially where performance evaluations are concerned. Most of the changes drawn up by Dunham's committee deal with limiting the number of files which may be kept, simplifying employees' access to their own files, and specifying who may see the contents of the files.

A provision of the committee's amendments requiring that written notice be given to employees in advance of requests to see their files drew objections from several of the observers present. Harold Richard, director of Institutional Research and Studies, said that in his work he frequently needs access to some of the more "mundane" information in employee files in order to construct research models.

"We have no information of a longitudinal nature on faculty here, just what amounts to a snapshot look," he said. He said that in doing research on appointment and tenure progression, for instance, long-term information that describes personnel matters over a period of time is needed.

Thomas Busch, assistant to President Somit, said that some parts of the policy as amended by Dunham's committee "create an undue burden to collect what is essentially routine information."

The senate also passed a resolution stating that the faculty would disassociate itself from University committees concerned with educational policy — especially search committees for the posts of chancellor, SIU-C president, vice president of academic affairs, and dean of the graduate school — unless the majority of those on the committees have been nominated by a faculty body. Concerns were raised that the faculty would be left out in the cold on crucial appointments, but Don Paige, professor in curriculum, instruction, and media, said that may not be as big a disaster as it seems.

In other action, the senate voted overwhelmingly to endorse the Illinois Board of Higher Education's resolution on the tightening of admissions standards for state universities. Several senators, however, wanted it made clear that the resolution they were voting on was not an endorsement of the actual standards suggested by the IBHE.

"This is simply a bit of enabling legislation that commits the faculty to the evolving of some set of standards in the future," said the Robert Griffin, professor in English. Griffin is chairman of the Undergraduate Educational Policy Committee, which presented the resolution.

Another enabling resolution was presented by the senate's executive committee proposing that the Faculty Senate "examine academic standards at SIU-C." That move was intended to "help get (the senate) started with talks with the administration if and when word comes down from the IBHE that these should be looked at," said Donald Ugent, professor in botany. Ugent presented that resolution for the executive committee.

Re-evaluate the ISC

AS THE RESULT of a series of complaints, the International Student Council is under a microscope that should identify flaws in the council's organization and lead to some changes in its structure and function.

The Undergraduate Student Organization and Office of Student Development have received two or three complaints each week, according to USO President Andy Leighton, criticizing the functions of the International Student Council in general, and many criticizing Aris Kotsioris, ISC president, in particular.

The complaints are varied, indicating a dissatisfaction with ISC programs and policies ranging from its handling of a soccer tournament for international students to dismissal of an international student secretary to choosing which of two differing Iranian student groups should receive the council's formal recognition.

The complaints became so numerous that the USO's Committee on Internal Affairs was assigned to investigate the charges and the ISC. Until, that is, the ISC was granted, at the request of Kotsioris, the remainder of the semester to work the problems out itself.

THE WIDE RANGE of complaints indicates a basic problem with trying to run an organization composed literally of members from all over the world, bringing with them divergent ideas of organizational structure and procedure.

However, the sheer number of complaints indicates that there may just be something wrong with the way the ISC is being run. According to John D. Rutledge, chairman of the internal affairs committee, several complaints accuse Kotsioris and the ISC of changing the council's bylaws without approval of the ISC General Assembly, or, in other words, making up the rules as they go along.

Whether or not the charges turn out to be legitimate, the USO committee should take a long and hard look at the function and structure of the ISC. The ISC is currently structured as a programming organization focusing its attention on the international population at SIU-C.

However, Kotsioris is trying to stretch that function by placing the ISC in a position of representing and speaking for international students. That is a difficult task at best, considering the broad spectrum of viewpoints and cultures represented by international students at SIU-C.

THE ISC'S STRUCTURE as a programming organization rather than representative body means that the ISC president is chosen not by popular vote of international students, but by a board composed of members of Registered Student Organizations with international student constituencies. As a result of this system, Kotsioris is now serving his third term as ISC president.

Kotsioris has said that he would like the ISC to become the representative body for international students at SIU-C. After more than two years as ISC president, he knows the powers and limitations of his office. Whether Kotsioris is trying to stretch these powers is a matter to be determined by the USO and the OSD.

But while the determination is being made, it should be considered just what role the ISC is supposed to fill and whether that role should be expanded. If that consideration is not made, the ISC is likely to grow in its own appointed direction, obviously to the disappointment of some of the international students it is attempting to represent.

No-shows ruin it for everyone

This letter is in reference to a series of interviews that were held at the Career Planning and Placement Center on Thursday, Nov. 8. On this day, C.F. Air-Freight was on campus interviewing prospective employees.

The first interview proceeded as planned. However, when the second and third interviewees failed to show up for their appointments and the fourth arrived late, the recruiter became very apprehensive on seeing any more applicants.

It was at this time that a career counselor convinced him this was not representative of SIU-C students and there were much better applicants scheduled later in the day.

When the fifth applicant mentioned to the recruiter that he or she was interviewing for practice purposes only, the recruiter became so frustrated that he canceled all remaining appointments.

This was the first time C.F. Air-Freight had interviewed at SIU-C, and it will probably be the last, thanks to a few very non-professional students.

Why are these students even attending college if they don't take our recruiting process seriously? After all, this is the last step in attaining employment after four years of preparation. Not only do these actions make the individual student look bad, but they reflect upon the entire SIU-C student population.

Thanks to these particular students, numerous other applicants, including myself, were not given the opportunity to interview with this company. It's difficult enough to locate employment in today's job market without a few students ruining it for the rest of us. — Gerry Murphy, Senior, Marketing.

Suggestions for a second term

George Will

President has yet quite complied with the Act. Repeal would be the straightforward approach.

ABOLITION of the Federal Election Commission and all limits on campaign spending and giving. The FEC is a bureaucracy that exists to enforce limits on spending, which are limits on the quality of political speech. Fortunately, the FEC fails to do that. It must fail, given the inventiveness of the American mind regarding loopholes of all sorts. Still, the mere existence of the FEC is aesthetically, and an affront.

"Quarantine" Nicaragua. This was the good idea from the Mondale campaign. I do not know precisely what he meant by it, but he now has the spare time to explain it. He proposed it when he was trying to get back to the center after his competition with Gary Hart for the Democratic "peace" constituency. Reagan could embrace the idea as an example of bipartisanship in foreign policy. What fun.

REPEAL THE LAW pertaining to special prosecutors, who now are known as "independent counsels." Too often a special prosecutor is used as a means of harassing officials of the executive branch (for example, Hamilton Jordan and Ed Meese). Besides, the law probably is unconstitutional. It establishes a law enforcement function outside the President's control, although the Constitution vests in the President the duty to see that the laws are faithfully executed.

Challenge the court rulings that say the First Amendment means that political "protesters" have a constitutional right to litter Lafayette Square. The Square, directly across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House, is frequently littered with huge, unsightly signs proclaiming various political and religious obsessions. These signs are the work of "protesters" who actually are mere exhibitionists. They are not making arguments; they are making a mess. Millions of people have their enjoyment of the nation's capital diminished by these acts of visual aggression. Citizens should have a right to pass through important and lovely public spaces without having their senses lacerated, just as they have a right not to be grabbed by the lapels and forced to listen to political outbursts.

REPEAL OF THE American league designated-hitter rule. I have hitherto addressed the President sharply about this and my patience is not inexhaustible. Conservatism means keeping your cotton-pickin' hands off fundamentals. Reformers messed with baseball's fundamentals. Today's conservatives are promiscuous amenders of the Constitution. Surely they can see the need to restore baseball to its pristine condition.

Now, these proposals would bring the honeymoon to a screeching halt, but no marriage can be all bliss. As Dan Jenkins says in his hilarious new football novel, "Life Its Own Self," marriage is one year in Heaven and 20 years in the light-heavyweight division.

'Amadeus' is destined to gain 'classic' status

By Elaine Wilkinson
Student Writer

Every few years a film comes along so universally appealing, so excellent in all its parts, that it is predestined to become a hallmark of artistic achievement, as well as a roaring commercial success. "Amadeus" is such a film.

What Milos Forman did for the American Edwardian Age in "Ragtime," he now does for 18th century Vienna, reaffirming himself as a master of mood and period. His production floods the senses with lavish and authentic detail, from scenes of Emperor Josef's court to an insane asylum to the operatic stage of the period. Every frame is perfection.

The screenplay, adapted from his original stage play by Peter Shaffer, is historically based and chronicles the last nine years of Mozart's life, from age 26 until his untimely death at age 35. The jealousy and enmity of Antonio Salieri toward Mozart has been well-documented, but Shaffer employs dramatic license in combining the Salieri character with Count von Walsegg, a contemporary musical plagiarist and the actual commissioner of the Requiem. Likewise, he replaces Mozart's pupil Sussmeyer with the unprincipled Salieri in the deathbed scene where Mozart races against time to finish the Requiem. The result is a fascinating historical might-have-been.

A Film Review

Production designer Patrizia von Brandenstein has sought out some of the most picturesque palaces and streets in Prague to represent the contrasting storybook opulence and primitive conditions of Mozart's Vienna. The costumes designed by Theodor Pistek beggar description.

Staged excerpts from four Mozart operas, "The Abduction from the Seraglio," "The Marriage of Figaro," "Don Giovanni" and "The Magic Flute," have been skillfully edited into the film. They provide a glimpse into 18th century stage production and, to modern eyes, unwittingly comic stage mechanics. Choreographer Twyla Tharp has recreated ballet in its infancy for these scenes, which include the dramatic conclusion of "Don Giovanni" in which the notorious womanizer is consigned to hell.

The film's score, entirely Mozart, is under the direction of Neville Martinson.

This plethora of talent in no way overshadows the performances of an outstanding cast. As Salieri, the mediocre composer obsessed with Mozart's genius, F. Murray Abraham achieves an acting tour de force. In his hands, Salieri becomes the villain one loves to hate. He is a man in torment, both the greatest enemy and the most worshipful admirer of the man he describes as "that giggling, dirty-minded creature" who speaks with the "voice of God."

From the bedlam of a Viennese asylum, where he is the star boarder, Salieri relates to a dismayed priest the history of his single-minded dedication to Mozart's downfall. These revelations construct his own fall from grace and vividly illuminate the unparalleled genius of his nemesis.

Tom Hulce portrays Mozart as an outrageously spoiled young rowdy. He is hilariously earthy, defiantly conceited, arrogant, crude and totally lovable. His death scene is nothing short of brilliant.

Elizabeth Berridge is marvelous as Constanza Mozart, the loving wife and sometime playmate whose childlike beauty belies her aggressive intelligence.

Christine Ebersole appears as a popular prima donna of the day, the luscious Katherina Cavalieri. Jeffrey Jones is both funny and royally dignified in his role of Emperor Josef, the indulged, musical dunce and patron of the arts. Roy Dotrice is Leopold Mozart, the possessive, destructive father who holds the key to his son's psychological Achilles heel.

"Amadeus" can be enjoyed by confessed highbrows, confirmed lowbrows and any other sort of "brows" in between. It has the best of everything. "Amadeus" is a definite, unqualified must.

Illinois opens hunting season; limit laws and safety stressed

By John Dystlin
Staff Writer

Hunting season has begun in Illinois and will continue through December. The Illinois Department of Conservation has taken precautions to ensure a safe and productive season for all involved, said Mike Carter, regional fish and wildlife manager for the Illinois Department of Conservation in Benton.

Turkey and duck seasons are already underway. Quail, rabbit and shotgun deer seasons start Nov. 17 in Southern Illinois. Goose season begins Nov. 12 and raccoon season starts Nov. 25.

Illinois is divided into two regions, separated by Interstate 64, because of the weather differences in the northern and southern ends, Carter said. The northern half has earlier hunting seasons than the southern half. Carter likens it to the growing season for the farmers.

"WE TRY to manage it so there is great success for the hunter without exploiting the resources, which are the animals," Carter said.

Hunters must follow many rules and regulations. For instance, there are limits as to how many quail or deer a hunter can take in. If a hunter is going to trap an animal, only certain types of traps can be used. The snare and box trap are illegal, while the conibar trap and the toothless jawed trap are allowed.

The limits on animals and birds can be rather complicated but are strictly enforced. A hunter can attain six quails per day and have a possession limit of 12. Carter said that means that no more than 12 quails can be in one family's freezer. A hunter can kill up to two deer a year, only if that person uses a bow for one and shoots the other.

THERE ARE also laws as to how a person can hunt. For example, geese can be shot only in the air. It is illegal to shoot geese while they are on the ground, on the water or just above the water. Carter said this is to prevent overharvesting of the birds.

Illinois has poaching laws to prevent hunters from taking in more than the law requires. A TIP line has been set up which targets possible poachers, Carter said.

"A person calls in to leave information, and can do so anonymously by calling a toll free number (1-800-252-0163). "We ask that an auto description, name of violator and the type of violation be given over the phone," Carter said. "So far it has been an effective way of catching poachers."

IN ADDITION, the Department of Conservation has officers in the field to watch the hunters. Carter said that unannounced bag checks are administered and roadblocks are set up as an incentive for hunters to comply with the hunting laws.

"We'll find people who don't respect the laws, but for the most part the hunters are honest and comply fairly well with the regulations," Carter said.

Illinois faces an abundance of deer and more deer allocations will be issued in 1985. Carter said that the population in northern Illinois is fairly sparse, but in Southern Illinois, especially in counties with many river systems, the deer population is quite abundant. The deer population can be a problem in two ways: crop deprivation because the deer eat the crops, and deer-auto collisions.

Hunting safety is another main goal of the department. Carter said safety is stressed at all times.

"BLAZE ORANGE is a law during the hunting season. For non-hunters, such as people out on hiking excursions or picture taking, we also stress that they wear blaze orange and practice precaution," Carter said. "Everybody should be familiar with the area as there are about 80,000 hunters in the woods statewide."

Carter said that hunters are trained not to shoot at the first noise they hear. He said that there haven't been cases of someone being accidentally shot in Illinois.

Many foreign students unhappy with Reagan win

Kva Ho Yoon
Staff Writer

President Reagan's re-election was something of a loss for many of SIU-C international students, who hoped the election would turn out the other way.

The students supported Mondale not because of their sympathy for the ever-struggling underdog, but because of their concern about growing international tension.

They favored Mondale over Reagan because of the former vice president's greater concern about world peace, his more explicit advocacy of human rights and his more "substantive" leadership.

Dennis Makhudu, a 34-year-old native of South Africa, said he wanted to see the Democrat win the election.

"Mondale is not warmongering," said the graduate student in linguistics. "But Reagan is a warmonger. He uses gunboat diplomacy before ordinary diplomacy."

BORIS DAMOVSKI, 25, from Yugoslavia, looked at Mondale as more concerned about a diplomatic solution to world conflicts under way.

"The Reagan administration exports force all over the world under the name of peace and democracy," the cinema student said.

Terming the American invasion of Grenada as a case in point, Damovski said, "Americans call it a liberation from tyranny. As for me, it's just an occupation. Conflicts should be first handled peacefully rather than forcibly."

PYUNG JOONG Yoon, a doctoral student in philosophy from South Korea, called attention to the increasing danger of the global nuclear war in the past four years.

Despite his support of the Reagan's administration's "very strong" posture against the expanding Communist bloc, Yoon said the U.S.-Soviet confrontation has become more of a reality because of Reagan's "uncompromising" attitude toward the Soviet Union.

Yoon said he is pessimistic about the possibility that the U.S. government under Reagan will be less reluctant to talk with the Soviets on the arms race.

Erja-Outi Heino, 22, a Finnish journalism student, said she was in favor of Mondale, because the "cold war atmosphere has been increasing" during the Reagan administration.

SOME INTERNATIONAL students took issue with Reagan's disregard for the problems of Third World nations.

Momo Rogers, a doctoral candidate in journalism from Liberia, criticized Reagan's plan to withdraw America from the UNESCO.

"Just because the New World Information Order is not acceptable to the United States," he said, "they are pulling out of the U.N. organization. The Americans are insensitive to the Third World's needs."

The NWIO has become a controversy since the UNESCO adopted it as a resolution in 1980 because of its stand that nations should control the flow of news across their borders.

The United States and several Western countries have denounced the NWIO "as a danger to press freedom and an invitation for government control of media systems."

On the other hand, the Soviet Union and some Third World nations have advocated it as a proper exercise of the sovereignty of each nation over incoming information.

Yoon EXPECTS no improvement in "democratic development" in South Korea as long as Reagan is president.

Noting the Reagan administration has consistently ignored the human rights issues of the world, he said the Philippines is a good testimony to Reagan's basic approach: American interests before human rights when they are in conflict.

"President Carter advocated human rights diplomacy," Yoon said. "But Reagan has given up the policy almost entirely. This is why his administration openly supports several dictatorships just because they are anti-Communist."

with Reagan's policy toward the government of South Africa. The black student said he is "amazed" that the American government tolerates the apartheid of his country in the name of its "constructive engagement policy."

"Reagan and his people are hoping the serious racial segregation in my country will get better," Makhudu said. "It's out of the question. They are just naive and ignorant."

THE FOREIGN students generally liked the presidential and vice presidential debates. The debates, they said, provided the Americans with a good chance to observe "real" Reagan and Mondale.

Yoon said, "They offered unique opportunities for the people to scrutinize candidates for their strengths and weaknesses."

Former CIA agent says U.S. already at war in Nicaragua

By Sarah Rohrs
Staff Writer

The United States is already at war in Nicaragua through the covert activities of the Central Intelligence Agency, said John Stockwell, former CIA agent in a lecture at the Student Center.

Stockwell spent 13 years in the CIA and left the agency in 1977. Since, he has openly criticized and exposed the activities of the CIA through his books and lectures.

Stockwell told the audience which packed the auditorium Monday that while he was in the CIA, the agency lied to the American public through statements made to the U.N. Security Council, made 35 false briefings to Congress and pumped stories into the western press to make people believe that CIA forces were on the defensive from Communists when the reverse was true.

"The CIA would bribe journalists to slant stories 'to create the impression in the public's mind of what we wanted the public to believe, so they would be sympathetic and would think what we wanted them to about Communist aggression,'" Stockwell said.

That was done so that the CIA could continue its covert activities and destabilization of countries outside the scrutiny of the American public, Stockwell said.

"Covert action and destabilization (of a country) is not something new that the CIA has invented to do in Nicaragua. The CIA has done it before, more times than you would possibly dream," Stockwell said.

The CIA has engaged in 16,000 to 20,000 covert actions since the CIA was formed in 1947, Stockwell said, and is currently involved in 50 countries.

Destabilization is a form of putting pressure on a government, Stockwell said. The social and economic fabric of a country tears apart, so that food cannot be produced nor taken to markets to be sold, he said.

The objective of covert activity is to bolster the existing governments, despite what the people of those countries want, Stockwell said.

Throughout American history, there have been 200 incidences of putting troops into other countries to manipulate civil wars, Stockwell said. The CIA is responsible for overthrowing 30 democratic governments in favor of oligarchies, he said.

Currently there are 65 wars and what is so frightening about "our war-crazy society," Stockwell said, is that there are 25,000 nuclear weapons on earth that have the capacity to destroy the world 100 times.

Despite this, the United States is built on a war economy, with wars materializing every 10 years, as regular as clockwork, Stockwell said.

Although the Nicaraguan people want the Sandinista government, President Reagan has said he will do whatever is necessary to destroy the economic and social base of the popular government, Stockwell said.

The stage is set for the war, he said, and the government has been planning it for three years by laying down the propaganda base and by having "a dress rehearsal in Grenada."

The war in Nicaragua will differ from the Vietnam conflict in the planning that has gone into preparing the public for war by the Pentagon and the CIA.

"The Pentagon has published stories that say the problem with the Vietnam War was lack of preparation for the support of the American people," he said.

The Reagan administration has commissioned the CIA to suppress people working against the national security interests of the country — working against the CIA, Stockwell said.

"If you lobby against the CIA's programs in Nicaragua, the CIA has been ordered by the president to surveil you, build files, bug your home and office and penetrate into the roots of the groups against the war efforts there," he said.

The government, the CIA and the Pentagon have prepared the public for a Central American war through propaganda, especially television commercials, making Armed Service life seem glamorous and exciting, Stockwell said, and through implementing "politics of paranoia," Stockwell said.

By keeping things unstable and keeping enemies on all sides of the borders, "people will let the government spend any amount of money on arms," he said.

Nuclear arms and weaponry is the most profitable business on earth, he said, and the Reagan administration will spend $2.5 trillion on building up the military and building more nuclear arms.

Fraternity members serve community

By Debra Colburn
Staff Writer

Alpha Phi Omega isn't a typical fraternity.

The difference is that many of the members are women and anyone is welcome — as long as they enjoy serving others.

Alpha Phi Omega is a coeducational national service fraternity whose members do 40 hours of service a semester. APO members walk the saluki mascots at football and basketball games, clean up after E Night and Springfest and marshal the homecoming parade.

They also do large-scale projects such as work with Red Cross blood drives, organize a Boy Scout Camporee every spring, and have a pinewood derby in which cub scouts make cars out of pinewood and have a competition to see which are fastest.

Service chairwoman Mary Beth Davis said the group is barely a part of the Inter-Greek Council and no one seems to know who they are but, "Even if people don't know who we are, we know and we do a good job anyhow."

"We're different from everybody else. We are not a social fraternity, and we're proud of it too," she said.

The SIU-C chapter was founded in 1948 and it has been coeducational since 1978. SIU-C's chapter has about 25 active members and 12 pledges.

The national fraternity began in 1925 with a group of former Eagle Scouts. Frank Reed Horton, the founder, set down three cardinal principles — leadership, friendship and service.

One of Davis' favorite projects are the parties that are held at Southern Manor, a local nursing home. The group provides fruit juice and tries to get residents to talk and sing with them.

"For me, the best things we do are the smaller projects," Davis said.

The group also works through the Senior Citizens Center. Members rake leaves, shovel snow, wash windows and talk to people.

Davis said they also take a group of children from Evergreen Terrace to the St. Louis Zoo and near Halloween they have a Haunted House for them.

Since the group uses its own money for some of the projects, members sometimes work at Shryock Auditorium as ushers and hold bake sales. Members pay $5 in dues each semester which also goes into the funding of projects.

"Through service projects we get to know each other and develop leadership skills," President Vince Baker said. "Many of the members are or have been in such leadership positions as being resident assistants or student life advisers. We tend to attract high-quality people. It is a good way to develop leadership skills and get that kind of position."

The group is made up of different kinds of people, Baker said. About half the members are black, half are white, and half are women. People of different religions belong to the group along with international students and handicapped students.

The members gain the required 40 hours by working at different service projects throughout the semester. Those projects can be an hour long or even 14 hours long.

"I like to provide services," Baker said. "It gives you a good feeling and that's the best reason to join. Those who stay around do so because they enjoy service. If you don't like to help people, you won't stay around."

Local official candidate to utility board of directors

By Lisa Eisenhauer
Staff Writer

The one-year-old Citizens Utility Board, a privately funded watchdog group, is committed to providing utility consumers with a means to make their concerns known to the Illinois Commerce Commission, said Robert Pauls, candidate for CUB's first elected board of directors.

Pauls said that CUB, unlike other agencies that are supposed to oversee utility companies, is willing to become involved in controversial cases on behalf of consumers.

"It's getting harder and harder for low and moderate income people to gain representation on issues that affect them," he said. "CUB is an attempt to reverse this."

CUB's 11-member board was appointed by the governor and a few members of the legislature.

In the coming election, which will be held by mail Dec. 1-22, CUB members in each of the state's 22 Congressional Districts will elect one board member.

At last count, CUB had 44,590 members statewide and 917 in the 22nd District, which encompasses 16 southern counties. Pauls, director of Carbondale's energy division since 1979, estimated that the group's membership increases by about 10,000 each month.

One of his goals, if he is elected, will be to build CUB's membership to a size large enough to hire top-notch professionals to evaluate and challenge utility company rate increase requests. All requests for rate increases must go through a hearing process held by the ICC. CUB now represents customers at these hearings, Pauls said, but this representation would be better if resources were increased.

Preventing utility companies from taking advantage of consumers is one of the ICC's duties but Pauls said the commission does not perform this duty well.

"It's the Commerce Commission's job to allow companies to make a fair profit, but to provide services for citizens at the lowest cost," he said.

"It's generally perceived that the ICC has not been responsive in its ability to act as that watchdog."

Pauls said CUB was formed to ensure that consumers are not overlooked. Aside from representing citizens at rate hearings, he said CUB tackles complaints from customers about problems with utility companies. But its ability to take on such cases is limited because its funds are low, a situation Pauls said increased revenue from a larger membership would improve.

Flight school students trained for all situations

By Thomas Mangan
Staff Writer

The twin-engine Cessna 310 roars down the runway. The pilot, in firm command, adjusts the throttle, pulls back on the controls, makes adjustments for a strong cross-wind and, as if by magic, heads for the wild blue yonder.

The flight is part of a class, Aviation Flight 209, taught by the SIU-C flight training school. Pilot David Deen, a senior in business, has spent nearly four years at the controls of single-engine planes accumulating flight time necessary to get a chance at his twin-engine certification.

During his flight, Deen must learn how to react to emergency situations brought up by his instructor, Gene Biggs. Most of the time is spent flying and landing with one engine shut down, and a turbulent sky doesn't help matters much.

Despite a relatively rough flight, Deen lands safely with one engine shut down, and talks over the flight with Biggs. Biggs points out problems and suggests possible solutions, reminding Deen that "most of the situations we went through will never happen to a pilot, but if they do, you'll know how to react, just in case."

Biggs has been flying planes since 1954, and in the interim he was a public school teacher for 20 years. He has been a certified flight instructor for 18 years, seven of them with the SIU-C Air Institute at Southern Illinois

Airport

The Air Institute teaches student pilots how to fly everything from two-seat, single-engine Cessna 150s to Lear jets, but most instruction is done in the 18 Cessna 150s and 152s, along with six 172s and the 310, all owned by SIU-C.

Prospective pilots may have plenty of planes to chose from, but they also need plenty of money. A private pilot's license costs $1,999 for 25 hours of dual flight with an instructor, 19 hours of solo flight and five hours in a flight simulator. The additional hours necessary to get a certified flight instructor rating cost up to $7,000 for 82 hours of dual flight and 81 solo hours.

Biggs says that the cost of a license through the Air Institute still costs less than most private flight schools, because private schools usually charge by the hour, and the SIU-C course is completed more quickly.

Biggs says that while physical dexterity and coordination come in handy for pilots, superhuman qualities aren't necessary. "Most pilots are regular people with a desire to fly."

Safety is a major consideration for all pilots. "All of the instruction is focused on safety from the very beginning," Biggs says. "Pilots need to learn to cope with an aircraft in the event of an emergency." He also points out that the Air Institute hasn't had a single crash since its inception.

Fatal vehicle accidents are down

By John Krukowski
Staff Writer

Statistics released by the Illinois State Police last week show a decrease in the number of fatal vehicle accidents so far this year, both in rural areas and to a lesser degree in the entire state.

There have been 699 rural fatalities through October of this year, a decrease of 44 from the same point in 1983. In Southern Illinois District 13, the State Police handled five fatal accidents in October, compared with 10 in October of 1983.

Sgt. William Brooks of District 13 headquarters in Du Quoin said that the number of fatal accidents his department handles has been steadily decreasing for the past three years. Brooks said it's difficult to determine why this is so, although he said that the State Police's "Remove Alcohol Impaired Drivers" program and its increased efforts to catch speeders might be playing a part in the decrease.

Total fatalities statewide this year total 1,283, six less than from the same date last year.

The State Police figures also indicate that District 13 troopers were assigned to 209 accidents during October, 28 of which involved deer.

Brooks said that the October figures indicate "no big increase or decrease, but the seriousness of the accidents is declining."

Brooks said he expects the number of vehicle accidents involving deer to increase through December, because early winter is the animals' rutting season and they tend to wander around more than usual. It's not unusual during the month of November for District 13 State Police to handle 10 accidents a week involving deer, Brooks said.

Smokers to take break from habits during 'Smokeout'

Millions of cigarette smokers across America will be taking a break from their habits Thursday as the eighth annual Great American Smokeout, sponsored by the American Cancer Society, takes place.

The theme of the Smokeout is "Take A Day Off From Smoking." Some smokers will pledge not to smoke for at least 24 hours. People who want to take the pledge can call their local American Cancer Society unit to arrange to receive the certificate. The number in Carbondale is 457-4429.

The Wellness Center is sponsoring the smokeout at SIU-C. Resident assistants for on-campus housing, fraternities and sororities have been asked to inform their residents of the smokeout, and a limited supply of certificates and posters are available from the Wellness Center.

Arts workshops for children, parents and teachers slated

Workshops in dance, drama, music, painting and other arts for handicapped and non-handicapped children, their parents and teachers will be held from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Thursday in the Student Center.

The Very Special Arts Festival is part of a nationwide series sponsored by the National Committee on Arts for the Handicapped.

Also scheduled is a performance of "Jack and the Firebird," an original SIU-C Playwrights' Theater play and the reading of several outer space adventure stories.

The program, co-sponsored by the Illinois State Board of Education, the SIU-C College of Communication and Fine Arts, Southern Illinois Arts and local organizations and businesses, is open to the public. Those who plan to attend any of the workshops must register at the registration table outside the ballrooms.

One-woman performance set

A compilation of poetry spinning women's fairy tales, friendships and fantasies into a prismatic new pattern of life will be presented at 8 p.m. Wednesday at the Calipre Stage at the Communications Building.

"Spinning," a one-woman performance is adapted, directed and performed by Carol Benton, a second-year

Ph.D. student in speech communication. "Spinning" features works by such authors as Adrienne Rich, Judy Grahn and Olga Broumas.

A critical dialogue moderated by Judy Cassidy will follow the admission-free performance.

The Calipre Stage, an interpreter's theater, is located on the second floor of the Communications Building.

Lincoln-Douglas painting on display

By Thomas Mangan
Staff Writer

A unique piece of Southern Illinois history is on display in the SIU-C University Museum. It's a painting depicting a Lincoln-Douglas debate that took place in Jonesboro during the late 1850s. While many of the debates have been recorded by artists through the years, few of them will match the museum's painting for sheer size. The painting is more than 10-feet-square. Abraham Lincoln, Stephen Douglas and the people of Jonesboro on hand for the debate seem almost life-sized. The painting's frame had to be dismantled so that it could fit through the museum doors.

The painting is the only surviving section of a mural painted in the 1930s by a Karl Kelpel, a German immigrant who worked for the Federal Art Project of the Works Progress Administration. It originally graced a wall in Wheeler hall, the former SIU-C library, until Morris library was built. When the new library opened, the mural was taken down, rolled up and placed in storage in the Morris Library basement.

The mural gathered dust and deteriorated in the library basement until the early 1970s, when it was almost thrown out to make room for more books. Ralph McCoy, Dean of Libraries at the time, asked the museum to take the mural.

During the past five years, Evert Johnson, SIU-C University Museum curator of art, has been restoring what was left of the mural. Most of the original mural was damaged beyond repair, but the section now on display was salvageable, and Johnson was able to restore the painting to its original condition.

Restoring old paintings is an involved process that must be done with painstaking care.

With this painting, the canvas had to be cleaned, stretched and varnished back to life. "Conservation" stretchers tenuously held the old canvas together while new canvas was adhered to it. All of this was done with the utmost care by Johnson and a group of students in his Introduction to Museology class, along with the staff of the museum's art division.

The efforts of Johnson and his associates not only salvaged the painting, but saved the University the cost of a professional restoration. "A professional restoration would cost thousands," Johnson said. The canvas, stretchers and framing for the painting cost less than $500.

Even with cost considerations aside, Johnson said the painting's worth, in terms of dollars, could not be estimated, because of its size and historical significance.

Survey reports packaging peeves of consumers

NEW YORK (AP) — Spray cans that won't spray and cookies that crumble, "easy-open" cartons that cause us to fumble, plastic wrap that to the roll stubbornly clings — these are a few of our least-favorite things.

That was the conclusion of a survey that asked consumers to rate their annoyance with packages that say "tear here" but don't tear, with rolls of toilet paper that can't be unfurled without a cascade of tissue and with 18 other misadventures in product packaging.

Warwick Advertising Inc. compiled its list of 20 top packaging peeves based on 500 telephone interviews with homemakers earlier this year. Then 5,000 homemakers were mailed questionnaires and asked to indicate whether they found each peeve very annoying, somewhat annoying or not annoying.

About 3,700 answered. "That's a very good response," said Bernard Mounty, Warwick's research director. "This is something people are interested in. If you go into supermarkets you would have heard this all before."

The top peeve in the survey, which was unveiled in the November-December issue of Consumers Digest, was "Spray cans that won't spray," which 93 percent rated "very annoying."

Next came "Cartons that leak" at 81 percent and "Cans with tear-off tabs that cut fingers" at 75 percent.

"Packages marked 'cents off' that aren't any cheaper" were deemed very annoying by 73 percent, followed by "Packages saying 'push here' or 'tear here' that don't work and often break fingernails" at 67 percent.

Sixty-five percent said they were very annoyed by "Cookie boxes containing crushed cookies," and 63 percent had ill will toward "Plastic wrap that sticks so you lose the end."

The top 10 was rounded out by "Drippy meat packages" at 62 percent and "Toilet tissue that you can't unroll without ripping several feet of tissue" at 61 percent.

The bottom half of the terrible 20 included such enduring complaints as "Can't tell how fresh a product is because it is not dated" (52 percent) and "Resealable packages that can't be resealed" (48 percent).

The scale, Mounty noted, "measures the intensity rather than the frequency of the problem."

Mounty said almost all the problems cited could be corrected, but some at more cost than others. Stopping cookies from crumbling, for instance, might mean expensive retooling at the factory where they are packaged.

Mounty said he was surprised by the comparatively mild distress caused by "Not knowing what additives mean" (number 15, with 43 percent very annoyed) and "Food packages that don't show nutritional information" (last, with 31 percent).

"Activist groups always say the consumer is dying for this information, but when you get down to it they care much more about convenience and the pocketbook," he concluded.

Author discusses women in Arthurian legend

By Susan Sarkauskas
Staff Writer

Science fiction writer Marion Zimmer Bradley recently undertook a project of a different sort. The result was the New York Times bestseller novel "The Mists of Avalon" a retelling of the Arthurian legends from the viewpoint of independent women in them.

Zimmer spoke of "My Search for Morgan le Fey" Friday night at Davis Auditorium. Her lecture was sponsored by Women's Studies, the Graduate and Professional Student Council, Women's Services, and the Sociology Department.

Zimmer told of her interest in retelling the Arthurian cycle, from before the legendary king's birth to the end of Camelot. She was intrigued, she said, by a phrase in Sir Mallory's "Morte d'Arthur": "Morgan le Fey was not married, but put to work in a nunnery, where she became a great mistress of magic." Morgan le Fey was the half-sister of Arthur.

Bradley said she was curious as to what kind of nunnery would teach magic to its novitiates. She began her search for Morgan le Fey by first trying to find the historical Arthur. Bradley's research led her to believe that either a historical Arthur, or a tribal chieftain that performed many of the same exploits listed in the legends, must have existed around the end of the 4th century A.D. It was about that time that the Christian name "Arthur" began appearing in parish baptismal registry's, she said.

The existence of Morgan le Fey, Bradley said, can only be proven by legend. Supposedly she and the Lady of the Lake, another woman in the legends, tried to seduce the court of King Arthur. Fey was enamored of Lancelot, who was a close friend of King Arthur and lover of King Arthur's wife, Guinevere. She could have helped Arthur if the seduction had taken place.

As for Morgan le Fey learning magic in a nunnery, Bradley said that many vestiges of ancient religions, including Druidism, were incorporated by the Roman pagans and later the Christians when they conquered England. Thus, certain practices have survived over the years, including the celebration of Midsummers Day as St. John's Day.

Further proof of the connection of Morgan le Fey with supernatural religious practices comes from descriptions of her appearance, Bradley said. Fey is portrayed as a small, dark-haired and dark-skinned woman. Legend has it that Britain was inhabited by a small, dark people at one time, who may have been fairies. The name Fey, according to Bradley, means "fairy."

Other characters in the legends may have practiced magic too, Bradley said. Merlin, Arthur's adviser, may have been either Christian or pagan, because of his different behavior. Also, Merlin may have been a hereditary title, not a name, she said.

Bradley said that all retellings of the Arthurian legends reflect the concerns of their authors, and the preoccupations of their times. Mallory's version, she said, was influenced by the emergence of society from domination of the Church. Mallory's dared to have an unadmirable hero — Lancelot. Lancelot was a good knight, but a bad Christian, because of his affair with Arthur's wife.

Tennyson's "Idylls of the King," based on the legends, was written during the Victorian age, reflects that age's concern with empire-building, and it's justification, she said. Tennyson stresses personal loyalty and morality, as well as the need to develop order from chaos. Arthur is viewed as trying to extend civilization to uncivilized people.

Bradley said that her novel reflects the preoccupation of the last half of the 20th century with one of its greatest events, the emergence of independent women in society. The society of Arthur was not viable without women, she said. They were integral to the belief in the virgin Mary, who was venerated almost cultishly throughout Europe. This, too, Bradley believes, may be the result of a transference of practice from ancient pagan religions, where goddesses were worshipped. It could be, she said, that Morgan le Fey was rebelling against Christian practices and returned to goddess worship, Bradley said.

In any event, the women in the Arthurian legends show the conflicts resulting in society as a whole as England changed from a matriarchal to patriarchal society, and from pagan religions to Christianity, Bradley said. For this reason, she decided to add her interpretation to the others.

Author advises writing class

By Susan Sarkauskas
Staff Writer

Marion Zimmer Bradley, science fiction novelist and 30-year veteran of the publishing business, shared her experiences and gave advice to a creative writing class Monday morning.

Bradley, author of the Darkover science fiction series of novels, is probably better known for her non-science fiction novel, "The Mists of Avalon," a retelling of the Arthurian legends from the viewpoint of several women featured in the legends. The novel was featured on the New York Times bestseller list for four months. She spoke Friday night on her research into the existence of Morgan le Fey, half-sister of the legendary king of England.

In addition to writing short stories and novels, she has served as editor of several science fiction anthologies and magazines, including "Sybil Leek's Astrology Journal" and a Darkover fiction magazine, "Starstone." Bradley said it takes her about three months to write a novel, although it took her eight months to complete the first draft of "The Mists of Avalon." She said some writers consider it a good day's work if they write two typed pages a day. "I personally like to move faster," she said. She tries to write about 10 pages a day.

"She decided to write the 'Mists of Avalon' after her publisher asked her to write a novel about Lancelot, the best friend of King Arthur and lover of Arthur's wife, Guinevere. She asked instead to do a book on Morgan le Fey. 'The editors trusted me — they knew I would deliver something interesting. They might not have taken that chance with a beginner.'"

She urged student writers to keep writing, even though their initial submissions to publishing houses will probably be rejected. The only way to learn to write is to do it, she said, and turning out more work helps writers recognize faults in their earlier stories and novels.

A writer must try to find an editor who is in a risk-taking mood, she said, and then listen to that editor's suggestions. Editors have as much or more to lose than writers, because their job depends on their finding good writers.

To develop skill as a writer, Bradley believes it is necessary to be observant. "Eavesdrop on people — try to get a picture of them from the way they talk. Dialogue is the best way to create a character," she said.

Reading the "Writer's Market" handbook published annually by "Writer's Digest" is helpful in getting work published, she said.

Bradley said that aspiring science fiction writers should not be discouraged by a lack of technical science knowledge. "You can always learn enough of the language to create it," she said. "I think technology is very dull, anyway."

Freshman should be ineligible, Midwest football coaches say

CHICAGO (AP) — Midwest college football coaches are in favor of making freshmen ineligible and increasing the number of scholarships offered to help offset the ever-growing lists of injuries.

Mike White of Illinois and Dennis Green of Northwestern, their seasons completed, attended a meeting of Big Ten football writers Tuesday while Hayden Fry of Iowa, Bo Schembechler of Michigan and Earle Bruce of Ohio State commented in telephone interviews.

All were in favor of making freshmen ineligible, as was Gerry Faust of Notre Dame, who was reached in an earlier interview. With the exception of White, they also favored having 105 scholarships instead of the current 95.

"I'm not sure we need more scholarships," White said, "but the freshman rule needs more intelligent thinking. There is too much pressure on freshmen."

Faust was in favor of several changes. "I'd like to see a tightening of academic requirements, more scholarships and the freshman-ineligible rule," he said. "We need more scholarships because of the injury factor. The players are quicker and stronger, and no team seems to come out of a game without injuries."

"Make the freshmen ineligible and have them play a separate schedule of maybe four games," said Faust, who was in favor of upping the scholarship figure to 120.

Fry, his Big Ten title hopes slipping away because of injuries, said the players "are bigger and stronger and when there is a collision, something has to give. The scholarships have to be upped. The players have surpassed their protective equipment.

"Nowadays, you not only have to be a good coach, but you have to be the luckiest guy in the world."

Fry alluded to his own situation: Iowa lost tailback Ronnie Harmon suffered a broken leg and on the next play, quarterback Chuck Long suffered a knee bruise. Both came in a 10-10 tie with Wisconsin. The following week, the Hawkeyes lost to Michigan State 17-16.

"We had all kinds of things going for us and then..." Fry was referring to the fact that the tie and the loss cost the Hawkeyes the chance of clinching the title and Rose Bowl bid.

Michigan has been hit with a rash of injuries from the very start and Schembechler said he "would not oppose the freshman-ineligible rule if scholarships were upped to 105. Make them ineligible for a year and give them four years."

"Our numbers are down. We have had practices where there were 20 guys who could not play."

Bruce said it doesn't matter what the coaches want because "nobody listens to the coaches. I'd like to have 10 more scholarships but it won't happen. You no longer have five tackles at one position. You have two or three and if one gets injured that's when it really hurts."

Green admitted he has improved the program at Northwestern by playing freshmen but said, "I believe freshmen should not be eligible. They should address the issue of academics, give them a chance to get their feet wet."

Big Ten Commissioner Wayne Duke said the conference has always been for the freshmen-ineligible rule.

USC football bounces back

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The University of Southern California's proud football tradition, tarnished in recent years, is shining brightly again.

After several so-so seasons and then the school's worst record in 23 years, 4-6-1 in 1983, the Trojans have come back to post an 8-1 record, win the Pacific-10 title and a Rose Bowl berth, and vault to the No. 7 national ranking.

They beat then top-ranked Washington 16-7 last Saturday to earn their first spot in the Rose Bowl in five years, and victories in their three remaining games would make the Trojans contenders for the national title.

Ted Tollner, Southern Cal's second-year head coach, can't pinpoint reasons for the team's impressive turnaround, but he doesn't seem particularly surprised by the rapid reversal.

"I think real football people, those who know me and what I know about football, never doubted me," Tollner said. "The programs I've been involved with, the people, have been successful."

He was an assistant at Brigham Young University, San Diego State, then Southern Cal.

John Robinson, who left Southern Cal to become the Los Angeles Rams' coach and remains a staunch Trojans' fan, said he sees no great mystery in the team's success this year.

"Tollner's a fine coach, and he's done a great coaching job," Robinson said of his replacement.

Southern Cal has essentially the same players as a year ago, but Tollner said their added experience, plus another year of the team and coaching staff working together, and other intangibles probably have been the key factors.

The Trojans had been on NCAA probation, banning them from bowl appearances for 1982 and 1983, and were blocked from playing in televised games in 1983 and 1984. Recent court rulings negated the TV sanction, however, and they've played in televised games this year.

"The fact that we could be on TV and knew that we could go to a bowl game are some of those intangibles," Tollner said, citing the parity among college football teams now that perhaps makes intangibles even more important.

The 1984 Trojans, unlike most of the powerful Southern Cal teams of the past, don't really have any offensive "stars." Fred Crutcher has been generally effective at tailback, and Tim Green has become a steady but unspectacular quarterback after taking over the job when starter Sean Salisbury suffered a knee injury early in the season.

Steckel's drug tests may be violating NFL rules

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Coach Les Steckel of the Minnesota Vikings may be violating the National Football League's collective bargaining agreement by ordering surprise urine checks to detect whether his players use drugs, players union officials say.

"I think he's treading a thin line," Vikings tight end Steve Jordan, the team's player representative, said. "I didn't even have to read the contract. I knew if they were asked to take a drug test, they didn't have to."

Asked about ordering spot urine tests, Dick Berthelsen, a lawyer for the NFL Players Association, said, "a team can't do it."

NFLPA President Gene Upshaw said he has received calls from player representatives in other cities asking what was going on.

Steckel's urine testing was revealed Oct. 26 by defensive end Randy Holloway, who had just been cut by Steckel. Holloway, now with the St. Louis Cardinals, underwent chemical dependency treatment in 1982 and said the Vikings were testing for drug use.

By that time, Jordan said one or two players had come to him after receiving slips of paper in their lockers asking them to undergo urine tests.

Steckel told the Minneapolis Star and Tribune last week that eight to 10 players had been tested and they agreed to the tests on a regular, unannounced basis. The first-year coach later reduced that number, saying, "I wonder if it was even eight."

Only players with histories of drug use have been tested, Steckel said, but he said in a team meeting earlier this season that any player may be subjected to surprise urine tests. He said he made the sweeping statement so players with drug histories wouldn't feel like "bad guys."

According to article 31, section 7 of the NFL's collective bargaining agreement: "The club physician, upon reasonable cause, may direct a player to Hazelden (a treatment center at Center City, Minn.) for testing for chemical abuse or dependency problems. There will not be any spot checking for chemical use or dependency by the club."

Vikings General Manager Mike Lynn refused to confirm the testing, but said it would be "impractical" to send players 45 minutes away to Hazelden for testing, implying a justification for testing players at the Vikings' training center in Eden Prairie.

"You read about careers being totally ruined," Steckel said. "I don't want that to ever be on my conscience that I have a player that was involved in a drug situation, where it destroyed not only his career, but his life."

Ditka puzzled by second-half play

LAKE FOREST (AP) — Coach Mike Ditka can't seem to put his finger on why the Chicago Bears don't play as well in the second half as they do in the first.

"I don't have an answer to that. I don't know, honestly," Ditka said Monday, one day after the Bears were blanked in the second half of a 29-13 loss to the Los Angeles Rams.

In running up a 7-4 record and building a three-game lead in their division, the Bears have outscored their opponents 157-77 in the first half but have been outscored 101-67 the rest of the way.

"It's a problem we have to overcome," Ditka said. "We seem to fizzle out in the second half. It's not the things we're doing, it's how we're doing them. It's the lack of execution."

Ditka wouldn't blame Sunday's loss on injuries that kept quarterback Jim McMahon, defensive tackle Dan Hampton and cornerback Leslie Frazier out of the game.

Steve Fuller, filling for McMahon, came off well in his first start in two years as he completed 21 of 27 passes for 227 yards.

"Steve played exceptional," Ditka said. "Now we need some other people to play to his level. We found a quarterback we can win with."

"Hampton is very important to our defense but we had some people who didn't play as well as they had been playing," he said.

"But give the Rams some credit," Ditka said. "They are 7-4. They beat the (St. Louis) Cardinals. They beat the Bears. Maybe the Rams are a pretty good football team."

"It would be foolish not to give them credit," he added. "They have an exceptional back in (Eric) Dickerson. Their quarterback (Jeff Kemp) did not have a great day, but when he had time he was resourceful and their line did a great job."

Ditka was asked if the Bears had a tendency to grab an early lead and leave the rest up to their defense — which had been super this year before going against the Rams.

"That could be part of it," Ditka said. "But I hope not. We have to look for 27 points in every game we play. I was unhappy about the loss but we did some good things."

The Bears, who are 4-0 against divisional opponents and play four teams in the NFC Central in their last five games, are now striving to improve their record to where they can get the home field advantage in at least the first playoff game.

Lombardo assists Saluki gymnasts

Men's assistant coach helps Meade guide strong squad

By Stan Go!
Staff Writer

Saluki men's gymnastics coach Bill Meade is well known in the world of gymnastics, but few people outside of the gymnasts know Bob Lombardo, Meade's assistant coach.

Meade has guided the Salukis to four national championships and five second place finishes at the NCAA Championships, but Lombardo has also played a big role in the success of the Saluki gymnasts since his arrival in Carbondale three years ago.

Lombardo, 32, spent five years as gymnastics coach at North Chicago High School before deciding to attend SIU-C to pursue a degree in electronic data processing.

"I CAME to Carbondale with my wife (Zan) to see the school and to do some camping, and we liked the school," Lombardo said. "Then I came to a workout that summer, met Coach Meade, and he said he'd try me for a week."

Lombardo has been a part of the Salukis ever since. Meade considers Lombardo a fine teacher, and credits him with helping the gymnasts improve on many of their more difficult routines.

"Without a doubt, a lot of the success we've had the last couple years can be credited to Bob," Meade said.

"I train assistant coaches like I do gymnasts — I demand a lot. Bob's responded well, and he fits in well with the team," Meade said.

Lombardo competed as an all-arounder at Miami Dade Community College for two years before he was recruited in 1975 by Northern Illinois University. At NIU, he competed as an all-arounder under Huskies' Coach Chuck Erlich, an SIU-C graduate and former gymnast of Meade's.

"I wasn't a superstar, but I did my part for the team. I considered myself a solid all-arounder," Lombardo said.

LOMBARDO GRADUATED from NIU in 1977 with a degree in health and physical education, and soon took the job at North Chicago, and was named the North Suburban conference Coach of the year in 1981.

school kids because I found a lot of satisfaction and pleasure in teaching beginners," he said. "They learned a lot and it was a positive experience for them."

Lombardo said coaching at North Chicago was more of a job than is his assistant's job at SIU-C.

"I don't think of this as a job. It's a lot of fun and the atmosphere is so good. I can tell the gymnasts to try something and they can do it. It's not like that in high school.

"It's a pleasure and an honor to work with such high-caliber gymnasts, and I thank Coach Meade for the opportunity," he said. "He trusts me, and he gives me much responsibility," Lombardo said.

LOMBARDO MONITORS the gymnasts each day in practice and videotapes their performances regularly. He constantly offers advice, and specializes in his three favorite events: the horizontal bar, the floor exercise and the vault.

"These are the greatest bunch of gymnasts I've ever been around. I have a lot of respect for them, both as gymnasts and as friends," Lombardo said. "I know I've taught them some gymnastics, but I hope I've also set a good example for them."

"We're very lucky to have a guy like Bob in our practice area. He's done an excellent job," Meade said.

Brewer may renege on commitment to SIU-C

By Steve Koulos
Staff Writer

On Wednesday, men's basketball coach Allen Van Winkle hopes to sign three players who verbally committed to SIU-C in late October.

But the most highly touted player, 6-5, 190-pound forward Jerome Brewer of Vincennes Junior College in Indiana, is apparently having second thoughts about attending SIU-C.

In last week's edition of The Sporting News, Brewer said he was going to break his verbal commitment to SIU-C and was leaning toward signing a letter of intent with Oklahoma.

"I'm assuming he is a man of his word and is going to sign with us unless he says different," Van Winkle said. "The best thing is to wait and see what happens."

Van Winkle left for Vincennes Tuesday afternoon and hopes to return to Carbondale Thursday with Brewer's signature on a letter of intent. The early one week signing period begins on Wednesday.

Last month, Van Winkle described Brewer as the best small forward junior college player in the nation. Last season, Brewer averaged 21 points, nine rebounds and shot 54 percent from the field for Vincennes, which qualified for the National Junior College Athletic Association Tournament at Hutchinson, Kan.

Van Winkle said he hopes he will sign his other two committed players, 6-5 guard Thad Matta of Hoopston, Ill., and 6-9 forward Todd Krueger of Lone Tree, Iowa.

Matta averaged 16 points, seven assists, and 5.5 rebounds to lead Hoopston East Lynn High School to a 26-6 record last season.

Krueger averaged 12 points and nine rebounds for Lone Tree High School, which finished with a 21-3 record and was a quarterfinalist in the Iowa Class 1A state tournament.

PLAYOFFS: Football needs them

THE HUGE success of the NCAA basketball tournament should give them a clear indication of how well a similar playoff system in football would work. Fan and media attention would be immense. School spirit would reach new heights. But most important, a true national champion would be decided.

A NCAA Division I-A playoff would likely include a minimum of eight teams, and a maximum of 16 teams. Champions of the major conferences would be invited and the rest of the spots could be filled by at-large berths. If the playoffs were started no later than early December, it could be completed on New Year's Day, giving fans an opportunity to watch football on that traditional holiday.

TRADITION IS another primary reason the NCAA is reluctant to banish the bowl system. But, with the dramatic change college football has undergone since the Supreme Court denied the NCAA's right to control college football telecasts, tradition has largely gone right out the window. College football is big business. Tradition and big business are not exactly compatible combinations.

The days of naming a mythical college football national champion should be ended. As in any other sport, the champion should be decided on the field, not by a biased, often inaccurate poll.

Expos set to name Rogers as manager

MONTREAL (AP) — The Montreal Expos have called a news conference for noon EST Wednesday when they are expected to name Bob "Buck" Rogers the new manager of the National League baseball club.

Rogers, a former manager of the Milwaukee Brewers, managed the Indianapolis Indians, the Expos' Triple A affiliate in the American Association last season.

Rogers replaced George Bamberger as manager of the Brewers in 1980 and piloted Milwaukee to an American League playoff berth in the strike-shortened 1981 season.

He was, in turn, replaced by Harvey Kuenn early in 1982, the year the Brewers won the AL pennant but lost to the St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series.

Sandberg claims National League MVP award

NEW YORK (AP) — Second baseman Ryne Sandberg, who led the Chicago Cubs to their first championship in 39 years, was named the Most Valuable Player in the National League Tuesday, gaining 22 of the 24 first-place votes cast by the Baseball Writers Association of America.

Sandberg, who also had two second-place votes, totaled 326 points in the balloting, easily outdistancing first baseman Keith Hernandez of the New York Mets, who finished with 195. Batting champion Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres was third with 184 points. Hernandez and Gwynn each had one first-place vote.

Player	1st	2nd	3rd	Total
Sandberg, Chi	22	2	—	326
Hernandez, NY	1	12	2	195
Gwynn, SD	1	7	8	184
Sutcliffe, Chi	—	2	8	151
Matthews, Chi	—	—	1	70
Sutter, STL	—	—	3	67
Schmidt, Phi	—	—	1	55.5
J. Cruz, Hou	—	—	1	53
Murphy, Atl	—	—	—	52.5
J. Davis, Chi	—	—	—	49

Chicago pitcher Rick Sutcliffe finished fourth with 151 points and left fielder Gary Matthews, another Cub, was fifth with 70 points.

Atlanta outfielder Dale Murphy, the NL MVP each of the past two years, finished ninth this time with 52.5 points.

Sandberg became the first Cub to win the MVP Award in 25 years, since Ernie Banks won consecutive awards in 1958-59, and he was the first second baseman honored since Joe Morgan of Cincinnati won in 1975 and 1976. Other Cub MVPs were Gabby Hartnett in 1935, Phil Cavarretta in 1945 and Hank Sauer in 1952.

Sandberg batted .314 with 36 doubles,

19 triples, 19 home runs, 84 runs batted in and 32 stolen bases as the Cubs captured the National League East Division, their first title since the team won the pennant in 1945.

Hernandez batted .311 with 94 RBI for the Mets and Gwynn batted .351 with 33 stolen bases for the Padres.

Sandberg and Hernandez were the only players mentioned on all 24 ballots cast by the BBWAA committee, which consisted of two writers from each of the league's 12 cities.

The victory by the second baseman gave the Cubs a sweep of the BBWAA's NL postseason awards.

Sports

Major college football should adopt playoffs

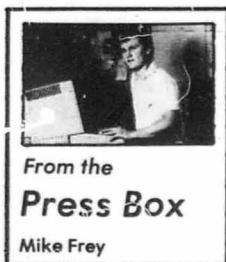

A topsy-turvy collegiate football season has proven once again the need for the NCAA to introduce a legitimate format to determine a Division I-A national champion.

The flaws in the present bowl system were in evidence on New Year's Day, when the Miami Hurricane upset previously unbeaten and top-ranked Nebraska 31-30 in the Orange Bowl.

Miami, who had been defeated by Florida for its only loss of the season, was declared the national champion. But an outcry from Coach Pat Dye of Auburn lessened the significance of Miami's victory.

Dye's Tigers had defeated Michigan 9-7 in the Sugar Bowl, and they too ended the year with just one loss — to Texas. Dye felt that his team should have been named the national champions, and who's to say he was wrong? Auburn had played a schedule that was as demanding as Miami's. The only logical way to solve the question would have been to schedule a showdown between the two schools.

A SIMILAR scenario could be unfolding this season. Washington, the No. 1 team last week, suffered its first loss of the year, a 16-7 setback to Southern California. The Huskies were the fourth team to be knocked from the top spot this season. Nebraska, which had held the No. 1 spot before being beaten by Syracuse 17-9 on Sept. 29, was in the No. 1 spot once again.

From the Press Box

Only two undefeated teams, South Carolina and Brigham Young, remain in the Top Twenty. As champions of the Western Athletic Conference, BYU is forced to go to the Holiday Bowl. If South Carolina wins its last two regular-season games against Navy and Clemson, it will probably go to the Orange Bowl.

The Orange Bowl will also take the Big Eight Champion, probably Nebraska. That would set up a confrontation between the No. 1-ranked Cornhuskers and No. 2-ranked Gamecocks.

If that were to occur, Nebraska would be favored. If they won, the Cornhuskers would be declared national champions with one loss.

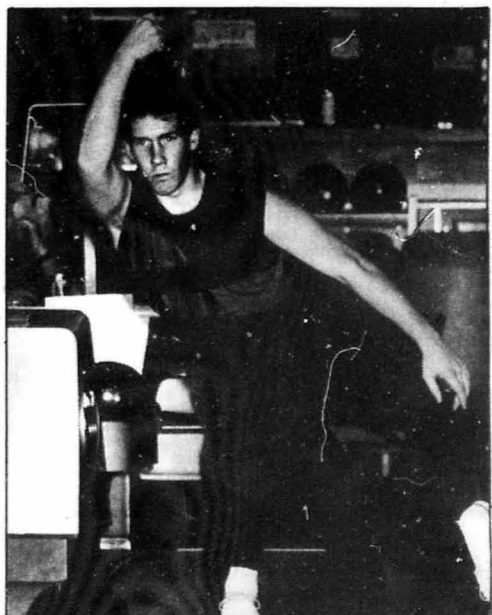

HOWEVER, THERE are at least five other teams — South Carolina, Oklahoma State, Southern Cal, Washington and Texas Christian — that stand an excellent chance of ending the year with one loss and no ties. Brigham Young could go undefeated. So how can the NCAA justify Nebraska as its national champion?

It can't. It's that simple. As in past years, there would be a lot of bickering and complaining, and no one would be happy.

Without a doubt, the present bowl system brings in a wealth of revenue for college football. That's the reason the NCAA hierarchy has been reluctant to do away with the system.

However, it appears that these people are so steadfastly committed to the bowl system that they can't see the forest for the trees.

The SIU-C bowling team is currently leading the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference with a 25-4 record following their six-game sweep at Ellisville. Brad Casner, pictured, collected 1214 pins for a 202 per game average. Teammate Don Schwind collected 1308 pins to raise his season average to 204 — tops in the GCAC. The bowling team will close out its season this weekend when it plays its final 13 games at Granite City and Florissant, Mo.

Hoyas top pick in cage poll

Georgetown, the defending national champion, was overwhelmingly selected as the nation's No. 1 team Tuesday in the Associated Press' preseason college basketball poll.

The Hoyas, who return 7-foot, two-time All-American center Patrick Ewing as well as 84 percent of their offense from last season when they won a school-record 34 games against three losses, received 35 first-place votes and 1,248 rating points from a nationwide panel of 63 sportswriters and broadcasters.

Illinois was No. 2, followed by DePaul, Indiana and Oklahoma.

Two longtime members of the Top Twenty, however, were missing. North Carolina, which finished No. 1 last season before losing in the NCAA tournament, was 21st in the preseason — the first time since 1972 that the Tar Heels have not started a season ranked.

And UCLA did not get a single point in failing to make the preseason poll for the first time since it began an unprecedented streak of seven straight NCAA championships in the mid-1960s.

Illinois, which finished 26-5 last season and fell one game short of the Final Four, collected four first-place votes and 1,044 points.

DePaul's Blue Demons, who will be playing under a coach other than Ray Meyer for the first time in 42 years, had three first-place votes and 1,038 points. Indiana, like Illinois a member of the Big Ten Conference, had the only other first-place vote and finished with 994 points. Oklahoma, which will face Illinois in the Tipoff Classic Nov. 18, had 945 points.

Much-improved Duke, one of three Atlantic Coast Conference schools to make the Top Twenty, was sixth with 848, narrowly edging St. John's, 839, while Memphis State, 753, Washington, 662, and Southern Methodist, 646, round out the Top Ten.

The Top Ten is laden with returning Olympic players. Ewing, Indiana's Steve Alford, Oklahoma's Wayman Tisdale, St. John's Chris Mullin, SMU's Jon Koncak all played for Alford's college coach, Bobby Knight, on the gold-medal winning U.S. team. Joe Kleine of No. 16 Arkansas is the only other returning U.S. Olympian. Washington returns Detlef Schrempf and Christian Welp, who both played for the West German Olympic team at Los Angeles. Indiana's Uwe Blab also played for the West Germans.

The Second Ten consists of Nevada-Las Vegas, Syracuse, North Carolina State, Louisiana State, Virginia Tech, Arkansas, Louisville, Kentucky, Kansas and Georgia Tech.

Besides Duke, the ACC has North Carolina State and Georgia Tech in the Top Twenty. Two other conferences — the Big East, with Georgetown, St. John's and Syracuse; and the Metro, with Memphis State, Virginia Tech and Louisville — had three teams in the poll.

Two of last year's Final Four participants, Houston, which lost All-American center Akeem Olajuwon to the pros, and Virginia, which lost its starting backcourt to graduation, did not make the poll. The same fate fell upon National Invitation Tournament champion Michigan.
