Neal returned to Illinois to face charges

By Kendra Helmer
DE Associate Editor

A Carbondale teen was extradited from California Wednesday and appeared before a Jackson County Circuit Court judge Thursday to face six counts of first-degree murder.

Labron C. Neal, 17, walked into the Jackson County Jail courtroom at 11 a.m. wearing leg and wrist shackles to face charges for the Aug. 11 shooting deaths of Terrance Mitchell, 16, and James Austin Campbell, 15, both students at Carbondale Community High School. Members of the victims' families were present during the hearing.

Jackson County State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec and other Jackson County officials flew to Sacramento, Calif., Wednesday to extradite Neal from a juvenile detention center, where he had been detained since Oct. 4 for a narcotics possession charge. Neal arrived in Illinois Wednesday evening.

"(Neal) was compliant during the trip," Wepsiec said.

During the hearing, which lasted less than 15 minutes, Judge David Watt Jr. explained the six counts to Neal, who remained mostly silent with his head bowed throughout the proceeding, speaking only once to give his birth date.

Watt told Neal that if he is found guilty of the murders or if he pleads guilty, he faces a minimum sentence of 20 years and is eligible for natural life in prison. Watt said Neal will not qualify for early release for good behavior because he is charged with two murders.

And because of Neal's age, Watt said the death penalty cannot be requested or imposed. Watt appointed Patricia Gross as Neal's public defender and set a jury trial date of Jan. 21, 1997.

Wepsiec made a motion for samples of Neal's blood, hair and saliva. Watt said he will decide on the motion within two to three weeks.

Neal was apprehended in Sacramento, Calif., Oct. 4 on a narcotics possession charge after an eight-week search by local and federal authorities. Wepsiec said the drug charge recently was dropped so Neal could be returned to Illinois.

Neal's bond is set at $5 million.

CURTIS K. BIASH — The Daily Egyptian

Jackson County State's Attorney Mike Wepsiec briefs a group of reporters Thursday after Labron Neal's first hearing at Jackson County jail. Neal, who was extradited from California late Wednesday evening, has been charged with six counts of first-degree murder in the Aug. 11 shootings of Terrance Durran Mitchell, 16, of Carbondale, and James Austin Campbell, 15, of Murphysboro.

Faculty votes to unionize, some urge cooperation

By Christopher Miller
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC faculty cast their votes Thursday to unionize with a final count of 388-238.

The vote in favor of collective bargaining means the Illinois Education Association/National Education Association will be authorized to represent the SIUC faculty in all negotiations with the University in matters of contracts, terms and conditions of employment.

William S. Capie, associate vice chancellor for administration, said the administration plans to work with the union to better the University.

"We respect the decision our faculty has made and look forward to working with the IEA/NEA," he said. "We believe we can work with the Education Association to advance the goals of the University."

More than 640 eligible faculty

"We believe we can work with the Education Association to advance the goals of the University."

William S. Capie,
Associate vice chancellor for administration members voted at the Student Center Thursday, an 86 percent turnout of 700 eligible voters.

Sixty-two percent voted in favor of unionizing, while 38 percent voted against it.

James Sullivan, SIUC IEA/NEA chapter president and an associate professor of an and design, said those opposed to the union should continue to keep channels of communication open with those in favor of it.

"We appeal to all faculty who voted no to keep an open mind towards the enhancement of the institution as a whole," he said.

Lionel Bender, professor emeritus of foreign language and former SIUC IEA/NEA chapter vice president, said the vote in favor of unionization means faculty will be on equal terms with the administration rather than serving in an advisory role.

He said faculty input in the decision making process will ensure that decisions are made on an academic basis rather than in terms of cost effectiveness.

Sullivan said in the long term, the presence of the union will contribute to furthering the quality of education at the University.

However, Capie said he thinks the relationship between faculty and administration will become strained:

"We can talk all we want about win-win negotiations," Capie said. "But without question, there will be issues neither side will agree on."

Capie said the University administration had underestimated the faculty's desire to unionize this time.

The last time a faculty election on collective bargaining took place was 1988. At that time, Sullivan said about 42 percent of the SIUC faculty voted in favor of the union.

"Organizations operate with collective bargaining all over the world," Capie said. "We will just have to get used to it."

To bring the issue before the faculty for a vote, IEA/NEA needed 30 percent of the signature cards sent out to eligible faculty members during the summer returned.

All faculty holding tenure or a tenure-track appointment of half time or greater were eligible to vote with the exception of law and medical school faculty, deans, department chairs, directors, short-term faculty, managerial faculty and faculty employed through other campuses, according to Illinois Education Labor Relations Board guidelines.

Faculty members will not automatically become members of the union, although they will be invited to join, Sullivan said.

Before the election, two faculty members placed a full-page advertisement in the Daily Egyptian about collective bargaining. Some administrators had raised questions about the accuracy of some of the statements in the ad.

Capie said the ad was an example of union propaganda.

The ad criticized the administration for not obtaining more state funds for the University and for not seeking faculty input on major university decisions, such as the selections of SIUC President Ted Sanders and SIUC Chancellor Don Beggs.

USG mandates senator's resignation

By Christopher Miller
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The Undergraduate Student Government senate passed a mandate Wednesday asking for the voluntary resignation of Josh Valtos, a College of Science senator. But Valtos says he will not step down.

The mandate, which passed 17-9 with three abstentions, charges Valtos with "engaging in an unnecessary verbal confrontation" with Jeff Lucas, a member of the SIUC student group Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends, and "using profane language" after the Oct. 23 USG meeting.

The confrontation occurred after the senate had tabled a bill in which the organization requested an additional $300 to fund a trip to Washington, D.C., that the group had taken earlier this semester.

Members of USG's Internal Affairs Commission wrote and submitted the mandate.

Valtos said he has no intention of resigning at this time, despite the mandate.

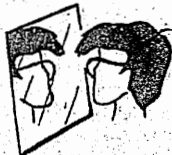

"I have no reason to resign — not yet," he said. "We'll see what happens."

Jemal Powell, a College of Mass Communications and Media Arts senator, said the passing of the mandate may set up a potentially dangerous precedent.

"Any senator who says anything controversial would be asked to

Carbondale library gives nod to slight tax increase

The Carbondale Public Library Board unanimously supported a tax increase at Wednesday night's meeting at the library, 405 W. Main St. The tax levy was approved by the Carbondale City Council on Oct. 29.

Next year's property taxes will be raised 2.4 cents per $100 of valuation. For example, owners of a $60,000 house will be taxed an additional $4.80.

Property owners now are taxed for the library at the rate of 42 cents per $100 in property value. The raise will bring the rate to about 44 cents per $100.

Trustees slapped with discrimination lawsuit

The SIUC Board of Trustees is being sued for unfair hiring practices against minorities in the SIUC School of Law.

Darrell Dunham, a professor in the school, filed a law suit against the board in federal court Thursday because the court instructed Dunham to refile an earlier suit. His original suit filed Dec. 29 did not name the proper defendants.

John Loesch, Dunham's attorney, said Dunham is not suing the BOT for money but is suing to stop SIUC from alleged discriminatory hiring in the future.

Clinton to nominate Barshefsky for trade post

President Clinton has decided to nominate Charlene Barshefsky as U.S. trade representative, a Clinton administration source said Wednesday. Barshefsky has served as acting trade representative for the past seven months.

Selecting Barshefsky would help Clinton keep his Cabinet from becoming dominated by males, and sources said that was one of the factors working in Barshefsky's favor.

Clinton based his judgment on his advisers' strong endorsement of Barshefsky's record as a tough negotiator, a source said.

Emu new for Thanksgiving table

Versatile bird yields lean meat, medicinal oil, cosmetics

By Melissa Jakubowski
DE Features Editor

In a few years, emus may be the favorite fowl for Thanksgiving dinner or may become a popular source for beauty products, local emu farmers say.

An emu is a flightless bird from Australia that resembles a small cousin of the ostrich. The Aboriginal tribes used the bird oil in medical practices.

Bob Gullidge, owner of 100 emus at Gullidge Farms in Creal Springs, said the emu is becoming recognized internationally for its lean red meat and cosmetic value.

He said emu meat, which tastes like beef, is 97 percent fat free and is high in iron and lower in cholesterol than beef, turkey and pork. He said the American Heart Association has endorsed the emu meat as a healthy alternative to other meats.

"It has all the qualities in a good red meat that we are looking for," Gullidge said. "It can be fried, roasted, baked and stir-fried."

He said emu meat is becoming accepted by restaurant chefs and commercial supermarkets. Gullidge said the Kroger company will offer emu meat in its Texas grocery stores early next year.

But, Gullidge said an emu only can offer about 35 pounds of meat, so the bird is becoming popular for the hypo-allergenic oil found in its fat. He said a gallon of oil, which one bird can provide, can sell for $250.

"The FDA is performing chemical studies to verify the moisturizing and healing aspects of the oil," he said. "But the hides of emus are also being used for leather. And the feathers, toenails and eggs are being used for jewelry."

AMY STRAUSS — The Daily Egyptian

Emu farmer Bob Gullidge, owner of Gullidge Farms in Creal Springs, shows the small wing of an emu.

Julie Hensley, assistant to the director of the American Emu Association, said that some of the uses for emu oil are to relieve arthritis, reduce swollen joints, heal burns and cuts. It also is a body moisturizer.

"Seventy percent of the trainers in the NBA use emu oil for healing sports-related injuries," he said. "Five NFL teams and four professional baseball teams use it."

Gullidge said the emu, which has survived since the dinosaur age, is a member of the raiite family, the same family as the ostrich and the kiwi bird. He said the birds can weigh up to 120 pounds and can lay eggs for 30 years. Right now, the birds will be laying eggs until May.

Emu farming is not as popular as it was six years ago, but the market is still profitable. Gullidge urges people to look into the business. He said the Illinois Emu Association already has about 150 members, 100 of whom are from Southern Illinois.

Gullidge said today, the highest market price for a pair of birds is around $5,000. He said the competition has decreased because many people have dropped out of the business, but birds were once sold as high as $30,000 a pair.

Gullidge said people thought they could get rich quick, but when all the costs of raising emus are worked out, a person with a pair of breeder birds can make a net amount of about $12,000 to $15,000 a year.

"A lot of emu farmers work through a co-op and try to sell their birds together, which helps the small guy," he said. "The competition comes from trying to sell individual birds."

Gullidge said since the demand for emus is increasing, more people are needed as farmers.

But even with the rise in demand for the emu, the birds probably will not replace cattle or any other traditional livestock. Richard Dado, associate professor in agriculture, said:

"Economically, the price one has to pay for a emu steak is more than anyone wants to pay on a daily basis," he said. "Economically, the emu will never replace cattle."

Even though Dado said he thinks the emu might be a fad, if the emu can find a place in the consumer market, it can last.

"In order for them to remain a viable animal in industry, people will have to find extreme uses for them," he said. "It's a $30,000 pet if they can't sell them."

Trustees memorialize former IBHE chairman

By Dylan Fenley
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC Board of Trustees honored the late Arthur Quern, the former chairman of the Illinois Board of Higher Education, with a memorial resolution at Thursday's board meeting in Edwardsville.

Quern, 54, died Oct. 30 when a private plane he was traveling in crashed shortly after taking off from Palwaukee Municipal Airport in Cook County.

In a voice choked with emotion, SIUC Trustee Molly D'Esposito described Quern as a man who worked tirelessly to improve education in Illinois.

"Every citizen of this state whose lives have improved through education owes a debt to Art Quern," she said.

SIUC president Ted Sanders said Quern's death represents a loss for generations of students across the state and the nation.

"Art's passing leaves a significant void, and none of us know what the implications are for higher education as we move without him into this upcoming legislative session," he said.

Quern, who was appointed chairman of IBHE in 1991, also served as the trustee of the University of Chicago, the chairman of the University of Chicago hospitals and as a board member with the Illinois Housing Authority, the Lincoln Academy of Illinois, the Illinois State Historical Society and the

Syntegrity is good alternative for city, University, students

OPPORTUNITY IS KNOCKING AT Carbondale's door. For years, city administrators and University officials have tried to come up with solutions to the Halloween problem. Most have failed miserably, including this year's shutdown of the bars on Halloween weekend. Now someone has a new approach, and in light of past failures, it is worth trying out.

THAT APPROACH IS SYNTEGRITY. THE IDEA stems from the work of the work of former SIUC professor R. Buckminster Fuller, one of the 20th century's most forward-thinking individuals. Fuller's ideas about sound organization were teamed with problem solving by Stafford Beer, a philosopher and scientist.

A Syntegration works by linking the ideas of several people on different sides of a conflict and putting their ideas on a level playing field with no predetermined outcome or hierarchy.

SIUC ALUMNUS CORNELIUS CRANE AND retired SIUC lecturer Bill Perk have offered to start the process here to find a way to end the unrest that has accompanied the Carbondale Halloween "party" for more than a decade. Both men have experience with process and Crane helped coordinate a Syntegration between Israelis and Palestinians last summer in London.

Syntegrity has an obvious advantage over the methods officials have previously used to quell Halloween violence — input from all of the groups involved. Sure, there have been students involved with the joint task force formed by the city and University on Halloween, but those students were not at the root of the problem. Nor were they really the "everystudent" that needs to be incorporated into the process of solving Halloween. The students that were involved with the task force were student leaders — hardly representative of your average student.

SIUC Chancellor Donald Beggs has said he is leaning toward looking within SIUC to find expertise to solve the problems surrounding Halloween. We hope he reconsiders this stance considering the track record of past University efforts. We are by no means saying the University should stop its efforts. It should, however, support and get involved in other attempts to make Halloween a peaceful time in Carbondale.

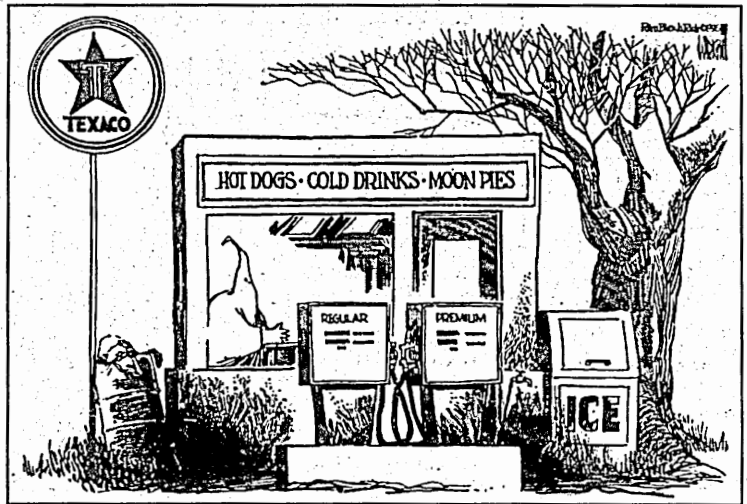

There are some problems that need to be solved before a Syntegration addressing Halloween can become a reality. This is not a project where we can simply say "Sounds good, let's do it."

THE FIRST PROBLEM ON THE LIST IS MONEY. A syntegration requires the participants to stay together for at least three days. That means there will be accommodations and food needed for those involved.

The city can do its part by donating the staff time of people who want to be involved, whether they are police, members of the city council or other employees. The University could help by donating the use of group-oriented facilities, like Touch of Nature.

Residents and students who want to help make a Syntegration possible should contact the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board at 536-3311, ext. 226.

The opportunity to possibly reduce the Halloween problems is at the door. It would be a shame if we do not bother to answer it.

Tow truck driver was lucky

The guy from Glen's towing, as reported in the Nov. 12 Daily Egyptian, should consider himself lucky that the only thing damaged was his pride, his shirt and his truck.

These tow truck drivers are unscrupulous. They drive around here like vultures, snatching people's pride and joy in the middle of the night. They hold you hostage until you pay whatever ludicrous amount they feel like charging.

It seems like these drivers have no lives. They drive around this pathetic little town with one mission and one mission only — taking your car.

On several occasions, I have watched these vultures tow or try to tow cars that were legally parked with permits. Some of these vultures do not have markings on their jackets or trucks and refuse to answer where they are from. Once they have your car, you are stuck. You cannot argue when they have your car behind a gate with a big killer dog.

Only this little town allows this (legal?) theft. In Chicago, where I am from, if you try to take someone's car legally or illegally, you are going to risk personal safety. It could have been a real gun that person was holding, or that driver could have been shot somewhere other than his shirt.

I am not the violent type, but some other people are time bombs waiting to explode. I recommend that any tow truck driver watch his back and think twice the next time they think about towing someone's car.

Positive stories should be printed

On Oct. 26, six members of the SIUC Ballroom Dance Club participated in the "Dancing Illini Invitational," a dance competition at the University of Illinois. Other schools participating were Ohio State University, Purdue University, the University of Notre Dame, the University of Wisconsin and, of course, the University of Illinois.

Although this was the first competition for the SIU team, they proudly took home two second-place ribbons and three third-place ribbons, as well as making it to the finals in many events.

Why am I writing a letter to the editor? Because if it is printed, this letter will be my last attempt to get this newsworthy item in the Daily Egyptian.

I approached the DE feature reporters a few weeks prior to this event. The reporter I spoke to seemed genuinely excited about the story, but told me that the paper was pretty filled up at that point with Homecoming event stories, and that she would call me after Homecoming to get the story. She never did.

I called again prior to the competition and spoke to another reporter who said she would call me immediately after the event to get the story. She never did, even after I left a few messages for her during that week. I went into the DE office on Nov. 6 and spoke to another reporter. She said it was too late to run the story.

Apparently the paper was too busy at this point reporting on the big, negative event of the Halloween riots and how students justified their actions to make a statement that there is nothing to do in Carbondale. Perhaps if the story about the Dance Club had been printed, more students would know that there are other things to do.

Dancing is a fun, positive activity. Our membership varies from 30 to 60 members at any given time. Our members attend dances put on every other week by a community dance organization.

We also have activities of our own such as pot-luck dinner dances and the above mentioned competition, as well as meeting weekly to dance on campus.

As stated in the Nov. 11 edition of the DE, there are several hundred Registered Student Organizations on campus. How about doing stories about them every week? Generally, they are on a small budget and cannot afford to advertise their activities in the media.

Please, when deciding on stories you deem to be newsworthy, have more consideration in your newspaper for the positive things that are going on for students.

Stop male genital mutilation

I recently heard a news story about female circumcision on National Public Radio. I was shocked by the grisly details of the procedure in which some Muslim women have their labia snipped off to reduce their sexual pleasure. Female circumcision often is referred to as genital mutilation by Westerners, and it seemed to me a fitting term.

But then it dawned on me one morning while I was taking a shower that my penis is circumcised! And in fact, every American male I have ever seen also has been circumcised. So why is it that I, and the other 97 percent of all American males don't have foreskin?

Most of the world's Christians, Hindus and Buddhists do not practice circumcision, while most of the world's Jews and Muslims do. In the United States, Jews and Muslims make up only a tiny percentage of the population, while Christians make up the majority. So religious custom cannot be the answer.

So I called up my mom and asked her why I had been circumcised. She told me that the pediatrician advised it for medical reasons. Apparently, a sebaceous material can build up beneath the fold of the foreskin, and if the foreskin is not retracted and cleaned regularly, certain health problems can arise. Incidents of penile cancer, urinary tract infections and STDs are all higher among uncircumcised men. Additionally, a fairly uncommon deformity of the foreskin known as phimosis requires circumcision. So as it turns out, the reason that most males in this country are circumcised is for preventive medicine.

THE LAST WORD

by Jeff Howard

The problem with medical reasoning is that we lay people assume that medical practitioners are omniscient when it comes to our health, and thus we rarely question their advice. So if my foreskin was hacked off by my 3-day-old penis without the courtesy of anesthetic — as is the customary practice — to prevent me from contracting penile cancer or a urinary tract infection later on in life because it was assumed that I would not clean myself very well, then my circumcision was indeed genital mutilation.

There are two problems with the preventative medical basis for circumcision. The first is the assumption that American men won't clean their foreskin very well, and so it is better to surgically remove the foreskin before a problem arises.

There is little doubt that a certain number of males would not practice good hygiene and thus develop health problems. But to circumcise all men to prevent some from developing health problems is akin to cutting out the gums and teeth of all children to prevent some from contracting gingivitis and other oral diseases. A similar preventative argument could be made for removing a child's appendix and tonsils at birth to prevent any health risks later on in life because those organs really aren't needed.

The second problem is that circumcision reduces the sensitivity of the glans of the penis. The foreskin in an uncircumcised penis covers the glans, keeping it warm and moist while the penis is flaccid. During sexual activity, the foreskin is retracted, thus exposing the glans. However, the glans of an uncircumcised male always is exposed because the foreskin is absent. Constant exposure to clothing thickens the skin on the glans and reduces its sensitivity. So while circumcised males have fewer penis-related health problems, they also experience less sexual stimulation. However, the trade isn't a good one because increased levels of penis-related health problems can be eliminated through practicing good hygiene.

Male circumcision has been practiced in this country since about 1870 and has become a standard medical practice, supported by spurious medical reasoning and the quasi-medical convictions of practitioners. However, in most cases, it is an act of unnecessary mutilation and should be stopped.

JEFF HOWARD IS A SENIOR IN PHILOSOPHY. THE LAST WORD IS THE SOLE OPINION OF THE AUTHOR AND DOES NOT REFLECT THAT OF THE DAILY EGYPTIAN.

Nice guys sit in back

by James Lyon

A friend went to party last week where she was approached by one of "those" guys who think they are God's gift to anyone with a double X chromosome. This heightened sense of self-esteem was mainly caused by massive amounts of alcohol. I really don't know what became of Don Juan because my friend got the hell out of there.

I think men are pigs, which is one of the reasons I date women — that and the heterosexual thing, but I digress. I can honestly say that women are my greatest weakness.

But back to the party scene. The question I asked a couple of women I worked with was, "What could a guy do at a bar to gain the attention of a woman he found attractive without placing him in the same category as all the drunken idiots who approach her?" The majority of the answers were that she would really like a guy just to be nice and talk to her like she is a real person.

Now I am not good at pick-up lines. In fact, I don't know any. And besides, a girl can only hear, "Hey baby, I have a chubby candy-cane in my pocket for you!" so many times from a drunken Casanova. So how does one distinguish himself from that category?

I guess the answer is to be nice, although it still doesn't answer the question of how to approach someone. I think my problem is that in my mind, there is this stereotype I have of guys in the movies who look like they just came from a romance novel cover who make the women immediately swoon. That almost never happens in real life, unless the girl has had too many drinks, which is probably why the guy approached her. Some people look at bars as "meat markets," which places a black mark on any guy there to begin with. So in some cases, a guy has no chance in hell.

So what is my answer? I don't have one. I guess all I can do is wish people luck if they try to meet people in a bar. But I would like to give some advice to all beautiful women. Next time you are at a bar, look toward the back where a few of the shy guys are. That is where the nice guys sit. The truth is, beauty scares a lot of people, and it is hard to compete when every man in the world would give his soul for an opportunity to meet you. Did that sound to sickeningly sweet? Sorry, I'll be at bars tonight. See you all there.

'Adopt-a-Patch' planned for Thompson's 16 acres

By Colleen Heraty
Daily Egyptian Reporter

University officials have agreed on a plan that will allow students, faculty, and anyone else to lend a hand in the restoration of Thompson Woods.

The 16 acres of wooded campus is the home of large black oak trees, some believed to be more than 150 years old and at the end of their life spans. Officials say the woods need help if they are going to remain an oak hickory forest.

The program, called "Adopt-a-Patch," will allow people who want to take care of a section do such things as plant trees and seedlings, pull weeds and dig holes, Philip Robertson, head of the Thompson Woods Management Committee, said.

The committee still is in the process of drawing up guidelines that will set a procedure the volunteers would have to follow, Robertson said.

"Working in the woods will make people feel like it is a little more of their own," Robertson said. "The University just doesn't have the budget or manpower right now to help the woods, so it is going to have to come from the community."

Paul Roth, faculty adviser to the Forestry Honorary Society, said in the past, the forestry clubs have been able to do very little with Thompson Woods because approval was needed for everything.

The Adopt-a-Patch program will allow the clubs to take care of a portion of the woods without constant approval, Roth said.

He said the idea is to try to perpetuate a native woods that can be used for enjoyment, wildlife and education.

"We would be more actively involved, and this gives students a chance to show something they have accomplished and have a little pride in doing," Roth said.

"It would be a very good learning experience and public service activity that the woods deserve."

Rance Butler, SIUC associate director of risk management, said whenever a volunteer comes on University property, the University must decide what risks there may be.

"Generally we try to encourage volunteers on campus," Butler said. "We don't see a problem with any risk as long as those who worked on the woods signed a release form for liability in case they get hurt."

Restoration of the woods already has included herbicidal spraying, planting and removal of trees and plans for a controlled burn.

Bruce Francis, superintendent of grounds, said many of the overmature oaks have been removed because officials have been worried that a strong windstorm will cause a

Anne Frank film personalizes experience for students, faculty

By Travis Akin
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Even though Amy Wells did not go through the Holocaust, she said the showing of the film "Anne Frank Remembered" made the crimes of the Nazis more vivid for her.

"The film personalized the Holocaust and put a face to the atrocities," Wells, a graduate student in theater from Reno, Nev., said.

"It happened to a real person — not just a faceless group of people."

About 150 people watched the documentary film in the Student Center Auditorium Wednesday.

After the film, there was a panel discussion in which two SIUC faculty members and one graduate student answered questions from the audience.

Thom Thibeault, an SIUC instructor who teaches the Honors Program course, "A Clockwork Nightmare," a study in the everyday life of Nazi Germany; Richard Blumenberg, an instructor in the Cinema and Photography Department; and Jan Jacobs, a graduate student in history from Carbondale, were the panel members.

Frank lived for only 15 years, but her diary has been translated into 55 languages and has been read by millions worldwide.

The film, which is narrated by actor Kenneth Branagh, tells the story of her life as seen through the eyes of people, including Miep Gies, who preserved the diary and gave it to Frank's father after the war.

Wells said the film's personal accounts of the people who knew Frank had a profound impact on her.

She said she had read the "Diary of Anne Frank," but she was not aware of all Frank had to go through in the Nazi labor camps.

The film documents the life of Frank and her family while they

"The SS guards leading children to die were not foaming-at-the-mouth madmen; they were the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker."

Thom Thibeault, SIUC instructor

hid from the Nazis.

It also tells the tale of her death in a Nazi labor camp in Poland in 1945.

The movie featured many people who knew her personally and were in the camp where she died.

Blumenberg said the film did a good job of telling the whole story.

"Through the archival footage and the music in the movie, you see the larger picture," Blumenberg said.

"You see everything from the expressions of a young girl experiencing adolescence to the controlling and deadly nature of the Nazis."

The discussion included many aspects of the Holocaust. Members of the panel talked about some of the policies that the Nazi government used to exterminate the Jews.

Blumenberg said one of the most evil aspects of the Holocaust was the way the Nazis used body parts of Jews for Hitler's cause.

"The Germans harvested everything," Blumenberg said.

"They used fat from the bodies for soap."

"After World War II, warehouses were opened up that had huge piles of hair from dead bodies."

The harvesting of dead bodies was not the only crime of Nazi Germany.

Jacobs said the worst part of the genocide of the Jews was that it was a planned event and was carefully carried out to the last detail.

"It was a conscious decision and an organized plot," Jacobs said.

"That is what makes the Holocaust so horrible."

The acts of the Nazis were surprising for some because Germany is a civilized nation that leads the world in science and philosophy.

Thibeault said the Germans committing the crimes were not crazed lunatics but were very ordinary people who were part of a very civilized country that somehow went down the wrong path.

"How was it that the most civilized nation in the world took such a giant step backward?" Thibeault asked.

"The SS guards leading children to die were not foaming-at-the-mouth madmen; they were the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker."

"They were just like everyone else."

Thibeault said there are people in the world today capable of the same crimes.

He said given the right circumstances, many in today's culture could do what the Nazis did during World War II.

Blumenberg said because racism and prejudice are still a part of the world, the lesson learned from Frank's life still applies today.

"We should be continually vigilant to be active and not passive when there is any indication of prejudice on any level," Blumenberg said.

"Whether it is reasons of race or color, we must constantly act against it."

Lawsuit against former students to be refiled

By Brett Wilcoxson
Daily Egyptian Reporter

"I attacked the complaint, and an amended complaint is going to have to be filed within 21 days."

John Clemons, Defendant's attorney

A civil lawsuit filed against two former SIUC students allegedly involved in a 1994 assault is going to have to be refiled following a conference between attorneys and a Jackson County Circuit Court Judge Thursday morning.

Douglas North, of Casey, is seeking in excess of $50,000 from the defendants for permanent personal injuries he allegedly suffered as the result of an incident that occurred May 6, 1994, outside of the former American Tap tavern, 518 S. Illinois Ave.

Brad Olson, assistant to North's attorney Edward Eytalis, would not elaborate on the injuries North allegedly suffered in the attack.

Court records state that North was assaulted by two former Delta Chi Fraternity members Cory Vandever, 25, from Arcola, who graduated from SIUC in 1994; and John Giese, 25, from Dunlap, who graduated in 1995.

North, Vandever and Giese could not be reached for comment.

The lawsuit states that North was walking in front of the tavern when he was hit from behind in the head.

The defendants then hit and kicked North in the head, chest and stomach regions until he was unconscious, the records state.

Olson said North did not know his alleged assailants and had never seen them prior to the altercation.

Court records state that North attempted to escape the assault between conscious states by crossing the street to Stix Bar and Billiards, 517 S. Illinois Ave., but Vandever and Giese allegedly dragged him away from the business' entryway and continued the assault until they were restrained by Carbondale Police and third parties.

Carbondale Police charged Vandever and Giese with battery, which was a case separate from the civil lawsuit.

Olson said Vandever and Giese pled guilty to the battery charge and received a fine of $300, $300 in restitution and 18 months conditional discharge.

The SIUC and the national chapters of the Delta Chi Fraternity also were originally named in the suit but have since been dropped.

The complaint originally stated that both chapters were negligent because, on the evening of the assault, the fraternity sponsored a social event at the American Tap during which intoxicating liquors were sold with the group's knowledge and consent.

The complaint stated that the fraternity failed to maintain order, provide security and monitor the members and their alcohol consumption, allowing them to become unruly and present danger to the public.

But Olson said the charge was dropped from the suit in early summer because Eytalis did not believe there was sufficient evidence to charge the fraternity.

The lawsuit now charges Vandever and Giese with intentional tort.

Olson said intentional tort is when someone purposely injures someone else and is the opposite of negligence, in which the injury was incidental.

Olson said Thursday's conference is standard procedure in any civil lawsuit.

"It was an opportunity for the judge to review the case and make sure it is proceeding as it should be," he said.

John Clemons, the attorney representing both defendants, said he challenged the suit at the conference, and North is going to have to

Racial ads get customers with humor

The Washington Post

For companies pitching products abroad, the lure of using racial images in ads stems from the belief that racial gags are still considered to be one way to draw customers through humor. "It is viewed more as clever and witty than offensive, viewed as a use of humor, which remains a very powerful advertising tool, to sell products," said Stephen A. Greyser, a professor of consumer marketing and advertising at the Harvard Business School.

But companies also use racial images in foreign advertising because cultural sensibilities regarding stereotypes in advertising remain very different from those in the United States, experts say. In the case of Kellogg, for instance, the company's Cracker Nut cereal ad — showing a white hunter meeting a group of monkey-faced African — was "inspired" by Tintin, the Belgian comic dating back to the 1940s that used distasteful representations of Africans, but is never-less considered in France and other countries to be popular comic art.

The ads "weren't meant to offend anyone — just to appeal to the French," said Anthony Emory, Kellogg's spokesman. "Obviously, we were wrong, and we take the blame."

Indeed, marketers view some foreign consumers as being more tolerant of ethnic parodies. For instance, in the June issue of British Esquire, the British bottler of Kirin, a Japanese beer, ran an advertisement of two geisha girls with a slurping samurai crooning this caption: "My karaoke singing used to sound like fowand howring banshee but now I sing rike spawo and hafu recod contract with Wonco (after drinking Kirin Beer)."

"We saw nothing offensive about the ad — we thought it was quite funny, actually," said Alasdair Fraser, who worked on the ad for Team Sacchi, a subsidiary of London-based ad giant Sacchi & Sacchi. The spots were pulled after they were criticized by Japanese newspapers, and Kirin executives in Tokyo became enraged.

"We wanted to appeal to British lager drinkers," he said. "We thought a Japanese character who spoke the way a Japanese person might speak would be funny — certainly more interesting than putting a beer bottle in front of Mount Fuji." How do such ads come about overseas? Some U.S. companies argue that ethnically insensitive international ads often result from a series of bad decisions made at their overseas subsidiaries. In February, for instance, a London-based ad firm working for Ford used a doctored photo of workers from one of the automaker's European plants for an ad campaign.

To create the appearance of a Caucasian work force, the faces of six Indian workers were replaced with those of white employees for an advertisement. The photo was originally doctored to run in Poland only, but the company said it was inadvertently picked up by its British marketers, too.

resign," he said. Lucas said he defends Valtos' right to his opinions.

"He needs to have a right to free speech," Lucas said.

Sam Vallicelli, a West Side senator, said this is not a free speech issue, however.

He said Valtos must represent his constituency and not let his personal views dominate his senate action.

The senate ended five weeks of controversy Wednesday by passing the GLBF funding request.

The senate voted 27-1 with six abstentions to approve the request to cover part of the group's expenses for its trip to view the AIDS quilt earlier in the semester.

The senate denied the request at its Oct. 16 meeting by a 20-6 vote but voted to reconsider the bill at its Oct. 23 meeting.

Kris Bein, GLBF co-director, said during a presentation to the senate that GLBF intends to put on programs aimed at educating students about AIDS with both pictures and experiences from the trip.

"The desire to educate is the force behind this request," Bein said.

Daniel Leibler, a College of Applied Sciences and Arts senator who voted against the bill, said there are six places in the area where a person can go to get free AIDS information including Jackson County Health Department, Williamson County Health Department, the Wellness Center, Student Health Programs, American Red Cross and the Carbondale Crisis Center.

"This is the student body's money," he said.

"There are six different places where one can get AIDS information free of charge. I'm not against viewing quilts, and I'm not against AIDS education."

Autumn Kimple, a West Side senator, said the AIDS issue may be easier for a student to discuss with other students, noting that if an AIDS program saves a life, it is worth the $300.

"I'm glad that GLBF issue is over and has been resolved," she said.

In other business, the senate considered two changes to its constitution — one to increase the stipends for executive officers and another dealing with the number of senate seats.

The first would increase the stipends for the president, from $1,500 to $1,800; vice president, from $1,300 to $1,600; chief of staff, from $1,300 to $1,600; and the executive assistant from $200 to $800.

A second proposed amendment would set guidelines for altering the number of senate seats to reflect the number of students within a constituency on an annual basis.

The earliest a vote on the proposed changes could take place is Wednesday because senate rules prohibit a vote on constitutional amendments at the same meeting in which they are introduced.

dead tree to fall onto a trail and hurt someone.

Also, Francis said the tall oak trees still standing have been preventing oak seedlings from growing.

And the trees that have been removed have allowed exotic plants to thrive, overpowering the oak seedlings as they try to grow, he said.

When the large trees are cut or fall down, a gap is opened in the forest canopy, allowing sunlight to stream in, Francis said.

Oak seedlings need sunlight to grow, and while this should be an opportunity for them to thrive, they have been thwarted by exotic vines, he said.

Japanese honeysuckle and creeping euonymous vines are not native to the area, and were probably brought here by birds, Francis said.

Exotic weed control, planting seedlings, and planting trees are most important in the restoration, Robertson said.

"Early spring and late winter are times to get things done," Robertson said. "Hopefully by spring we will have people working in the woods."

file a new suit.

"I attacked the complaint, and an amended complaint is going to have to be filed within 21 days," he said.

Olson said Clemons challenged the wording in the suit, and Eytalis agreed to refile a more specific suit.

Olson said this type of challenge is common in civil suits, and it does not mean that any of the charges are going to change.

"It's just a game that attorneys play to wear down their opponents," he said.

Olson said after the suit is refiled, it will be reevaluated at another similar conference.

John Budstick, former operator of the American Tap, was also originally named in the suit, but he too has been dropped from the suit.

Budstick was named because the defendants became intoxicated at his establishment and later injured someone, Eytalis has said. But Olson said Budstick's name was dropped in late spring because the statute of limitations had run out.

In other business, the board approved a $2.4 million plan to renovate the Marketplace and Roman Room areas of the Student Center to turn the areas into a shopping-mall style food court.

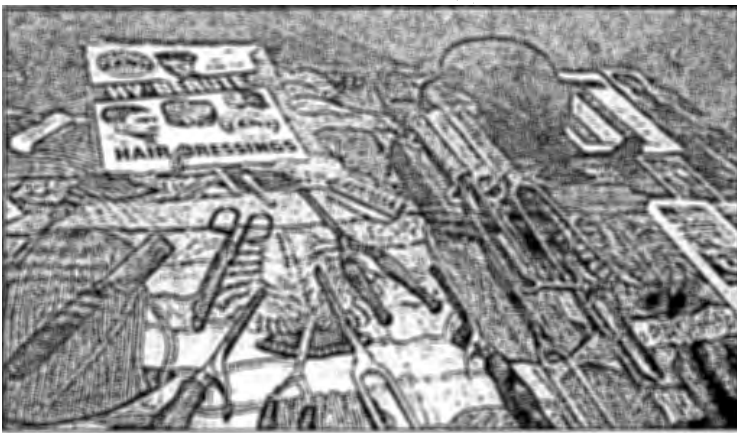

"We're trying to provide a wide variety of food," Lawrence Juhlin, associate vice chancellor of student affairs, said.

The board also approved the plans and contract for replacing the roof of Boomer Hall in Thompson Point and approved a plan to renovate Lindgren Hall to accommo-

The board also agreed to create a year-long celebration honoring Delyte W. Morris, who during his tenure as SIU president from 1948 to 1970 oversaw the growth of SIU from a single campus with about 3,000 students to a multi-campus institution with more than 35,000 students.

The celebration will begin in September 1998, the 50th anniversary of Morris' appointment.

Black students often spend hours grooming their hair while remaining totally ignorant to the political, personal and ethnic significance and history of their hair, a professor says.

Nancy Dawson, an SIUC professor in Black American Studies, gives presentations, titled "Our Hairitage," which deal with the issue of black hair because, she believes African Americans and members of other cultures do not realize the symbolism of black hair.

One of the most important messages Dawson said she was trying to get across while speaking Tuesday afternoon at the Student Center Video Lounge to a crowd of about 70 people is that the head is the crown and glory.

Dawson said she believes African Americans experience a lot of hair stress because of their preoccupation with achieving the hair texture that is acceptable by people in power.

She said African Americans, who have a kinky grade of hair, perm, straighten, use concoctions they believe will make their hair grow and dye their hair because long, straight, and blond-colored hairstyles are the images of hair portrayed by the media.

Dawson said this can relate to a skin-color complex for African Americans.

At the presentation, Dawson showed combs used by blacks, some of which were from Ghana and other African countries, as well as slides of different hairstyles.

She also showed different types of tools that have been used for straightening black hair and the oils used on the scalp.

"We need to research our own hair and not try to imitate others," Dawson said.

"We should value the history and the natural texture of our own hair and adorn our heads."

Marjo J. Collins, a senior in recreational education from Chicago, said he would like to see more presentations like this. Collins said he fully understood the things Dawson was saying and said he agrees with the points she made.

"It's very important for more of these types of presentations to be given because it is informative," Collins said. "I believe all black people need to stop perming their hair because it does something physically to their scalps; and it does something mentally to their minds."

Dawson said black hair has seen several changes since the era of slavery. She said blacks went 400 years in America without the type of combs used in Africa.

Also, some of the other changes are those which came from the 1970s Afrocentric movement when blacks were expressing pride in their culture through clothing and songs — but most of all through hair.

However, in the 1990s African Americans are more concerned with the management of the hair and tend to wear hairstyles that are easy to keep up.

Darice Jones, a junior in radio and television from Chicago, said she wears a style that is comfortable and common among African Americans. She said she did not consider the meaning behind it.

"I have braids in my hair, but it doesn't have any ethnic or cultural meaning behind it," Jones said. "It's just easier to maintain."

Rashad Jackson, a junior in business management, also said he learned new things about the meaning of black hair by attending the presentation.

"I found it most interesting because she actually took the time to research the history of black hair and the things that are essential to black hair-care management that normally people would care less about," Jackson said.

Black hair is becoming a large issue in society, and a lot of corporations are capitalizing on it, like white-owned companies that are selling products with brand names blacks identify with, Dawson said.

However, there also have been cases of discrimination against black hairstyles.

Dawson cited a situation where a junior high school banned hairstyles that are popular within the African-American community.

"We become victims of discrimination," Dawson said. "There is never any discrimination against chemical relaxers — only ethnic hairstyles."

The case she referred to involves Rickover Junior High School, in suburban Chicago, that outlawed certain black hairstyles because officials believed them to be gang related.

AMY STRAUSS — The Daily Egyptian

A wide selection of incense is sold at Discount Den, 819 Illinois Ave., Carbondale.

Incense still popular among students for variety of reasons

By Mikal J. Harris
Daily Egyptian Reporter

After spending an evening studying, Jason Adams said the calming aroma of his favorite incense helps him unwind.

"It gives you peace and calm — a really serene type of a feeling," Adams, a junior in psychology from Chicago, said.

Incense burning has evolved into more conventional forms from its original usage thousands of years ago, and college students are adapting the benefits of the aroma to their everyday lives.

Adams, who also said he uses the Egyptian Musk body oil version of the popular incense fragrance, said he uses incense in a variety of ways, including as a relaxation aid and as an air freshener.

"I use incense just to calm my aura, to make the air fresh or to give mental relaxation," he said. "I light incense when I'm studying or just chilling in my house."

Webster's New World Dictionary states incense can be made up of substances such as gums and resins on wooden sticks or charcoal blanks that can produce a pleasant odor when burned.

The ritual of burning incense has been around for thousands of years, and its usage is mentioned in religious and historical testaments like the King James version of the Bible.

Some Web sites about incense, including Virtual Jerusalem, instruct how to use incense in religious ceremonies. According to the site, incense is burned to release a pleasing fragrance, while the smoke is said to fulfill religious purposes, such as an offering for Jewish holidays.

However, some college students said they are using incense for their own reasons.

Andre Brown, a senior in elementary education from Chicago, said he prefers lighting incense because it is better for the environment and less harmful to the skin than other forms of fragrance.

"They're more natural than aerosol sprays or perfumes that contaminate the ozone layer," he said. "Those same sprays or perfumes have the potential to irritate your skin."

Adams said incense also is more economical than aerosol sprays.

"You can get more use out of incense, so that makes it cheaper. A spray may only last for about two minutes, and air freshener is so chemical."

Loni Burton, a sophomore in psychology from Chicago, also said she prefers incense to aerosol fragrances. She said incense is so effective that sometimes it does not need to be lit to be fragrant.

"My roommate and I have a big jar of incense sticks in our dorm room, and you can smell them throughout the room," she said.

The smell of incense greets people walking past the open door of Plaza Records, 825 S. Illinois Ave.

Once inside, an array of incense-toting names like Rump-Shaker, Black Magic, Jamaica Fruit and Foxy Foxy Lady, greet customers at the door.

"We have to reorder incense about every week," owner Kim Curlee said. "It's something in demand."

Although both Adams and Brown said they prefer to buy their favorite incense in Chicago, area businesses have picked up on the incense trend by ordering and selling the product in bookstores, discount stores and record shops.

Curlee said the popularity of incense among today's college students is a carryover from its first mainstream usage in the late sixties. He said some of those 1960s college students still buy incense.

"Lighting incense is something that baby boomers can continue to do," he said. "For them, just lighting a stick of Patchouli incense is a subtle reminder of a time of theirs."

At Discount Den, 819 S. Illinois Ave., the incense is stocked between black lights and candles.

"Incense has always been popular among college students," Manager Dennis Haworth said. "It was popular when I was in school."

Haworth said since coming to Discount Den in 1987, incense has been a product that always has sold well for the store. He said the practicality of incense may be a determining factor in its popularity among students.

Navy, Air Force to review sexual harassment policy

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The Navy and Air Force plan to review the way in which the military's zero-tolerance sexual harassment policy is communicated to their employees in the wake of recent reports of rape, sexual harassment and other sexual misconduct at two Army training bases.

The Army is conducting a much broader investigation into all 17 of its training bases across the country, including the review of hundreds of complaints of assault and harassment.

Navy Secretary John Dalton sent a hand-written note and met with top Navy and Marine Corps officials this week "to make certain we are doing everything we can to be sure this type of behavior isn't occurring" in the Navy, said Capt. Charles Connor, spokesman for the Navy.

Gonzalez named MVP

Newsday

Juan Gonzalez, the slugger who strikes fear in pitchers opposing the Texas Rangers, is the American League Most Valuable Player for 1996 by the vote of the Baseball Writers Association of America. And, possibly, by mistake.

Gonzalez outpooled Mariners shortstop Alex Rodriguez, 290 points to 287, to become the second MVP in the Rangers' history.

But a ballot cast by a baseball writer in Oakland may have had as much to do with the outcome as anything either player did on the field.

John Hickey of the Oakland Tribune voted Gonzalez first and Rodriguez seventh on the 10-place ballot, awarding the winner 14 points and Rodriguez four points. Rodriguez was named first, second, third and fourth on each of the other 27 ballots.

Guard duty: In exhibition action, Saluki guard Jessie Phillips, a sophomore from Sigourney, Iowa, holds Donna McGray of the St. Louis Express at bay. Phillips scored 4 points in SIUC's 89-70 victory over the Express Thursday night at the SIU Arena. SIUC will take on the Netherlands National Team to close out preseason action Saturday at 4 p.m. at SIU Arena.

Tonight, the Salukis go up against a Bradley team that has won its last two matches and is No. 2 in the MVC in blocks per game, averaging 2.55 a game.

SIUC leads the overall series against Bradley 16-4. SIUC beat the Lady Braves in only three games earlier this season, but freshman setter Debbie Barr said Bradley wants to go to the tournament just as much as the Salukis, and they will not take that for granted.

Saturday night, the Salukis take on fourth-place Northern Iowa, one of the toughest teams in the Valley. The Panthers were the Valley's top team last season and beat SIUC earlier this season in three games. UNI leads the series over the Salukis 16-7.

After the Lady Braves play SIUC tonight, Bradley will travel to Evansville University Saturday. Wichita State plays at Creighton University tonight and at Drake Saturday.

Sophomore middle blocker Marlo Moreland said the Salukis will not be pressured by UNI's current rankings.

"Either way it goes, we will play hard," Moreland said. "We won't worry about the standings. We'll go out and play like we're in first place."

BASKETBALL

Basketball Salukis sign Terrier

By Ryan Keith
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Carbondale native Josh Cross signing with the Saluki men's basketball team Thursday is significant in more ways than one.

Cross, a 6-foot-4-inch forward at Carbondale Community High School, is not only a talented basketball player, but his signing also continues two impressive traditions of basketball players in Carbondale.

First of all, Cross' signing marks the third season in a row that the Salukis have brought in a former Terrier. Junior guard Troy Hudson joined the squad for the 1995-96 season, while junior forward Rashad Tucker transferred to the Salukis this season after completing a successful junior college career at Southeastern Community College in West Burlington, Iowa.

Second, Cross will continue an impressive tradition of athletic brothers in the Cross family. Two of his brothers played Division I college basketball: Dan, who starred for the University of Florida and led the Gators to the Final Four in 1994, and Joe, who is a freshman playing for Florida International University. Josh's other brother, Leinard, plays Division I-AA football at Eastern Illinois University.

Cross, who signed a letter-of-intent Wednesday to open the NCAA's Early Signing Period and returned it Thursday, said he is excited about coming to SIUC because they offered him the chance to play.

"I talked to a lot of schools," Cross said. "All of them told me they'd love to have me but I'd have to sit out a year. SIUC told me they'd love to have me, and I'd play next year."

Saluki Coach Rich Herrin said that not only is Cross a good player, but he also is a good person.

"Josh is a class individual," Herrin said. "He is a great athlete with good skills. He is very gifted and makes other players better."

As a junior, Cross averaged 9.7 points and 11.5 rebounds per game for the Terriers. While he didn't put up stellar offensive numbers, most of the scoring load fell on his brother, Joe. With Joe gone, Josh said he will look to become the Terriers' leader this season.

Cross will join Tucker and Hudson as former Terriers in the Saluki program. While Tucker and Hudson did not play with Cross at Carbondale, Josh said he looked up to both as role models during their successful high school careers.

Hudson said Cross is an excellent addition to the Saluki program.

"Josh is a terrific player," Hudson said. "He can do a lot of things on the court, and he is very athletic and unselfish with the basketball."

According to NCAA rules, high school seniors can sign letters-of-intent during two designated periods of the school year. While most athletes wait until the spring to announce their intentions, Cross said committing to the Salukis early was an easy decision.

"I just wanted to get it out of the way," Cross said. "I wanted to commit early and concentrate on my senior season."

Herrin said Cross will benefit from signing early more than the Saluki program will.

While Cross played on the inside last year, he is expected to move to a guard spot for the Salukis. Cross played point guard in a Five Star Camp this summer, and Herrin said he is a very good outside player.

"He can put it on the floor," Herrin said. "He can handle and pass the ball, and he is a great asset to our team."

Cross' signing leaves the Salukis with two available scholarships for next season.

The only question facing Cross is his ability to shoot the outside jump shot.

"He needs to improve from 15 to 20 feet and out," Herrin said. "Once he does that, he can be a very solid guard for us."

CROSS COUNTRY

Cross country teams apprehensive about performance at next meet

By Donna Colter
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The women's cross country team competes in the District 5 cross country meet Saturday in Peoria, yet Coach Don DeNoon has no idea what level of performance he will see from his team.

The Salukis finished first in their first four meets this season before making a slow decline and finishing fourth at the Missouri Valley Conference meet Nov. 2.

"I still feel we are the better program in the MVC, but we didn't do it on that day," DeNoon said. "I'll have to wait and see, but maybe they will prove me wrong again."

"Our biggest mistake at the MVC meet was not going out strong. We need to go out strong for the first mile and then hang on at that point."

The district competition will consist of eight schools from the Big 12 conference, along with nine of the MVC schools. DeNoon said he thinks the Big 12 will dominate the meet.

"The University of Missouri, University of Nebraska and Iowa State University are all ranked in the top 25," he said. "We would have to be in the top two to advance to the NCAA, because I can't see that any MVC school would receive an at-large bid."

An at-large bid can be received by a team if it did not finish in the top two of its district, but beat another qualifying school from another district in a previous competition.

The biggest MVC threat could come from champion Southwest Missouri State University and runner-up Drake University, DeNoon said.

"If Drake and Southwest run like they did in our conference championship, they can press Nebraska and Missouri," he said.

Three individual runners can qualify for the NCAA meet Nov. 26 in Tucson, Ariz. The one possibility for SIUC could be senior Kim Koerner. Another individual threat could come from MVC champion Sue Daggett of Illinois State University.

"With Kim finishing second in the

"If they get mentally prepared, we could have a good weekend."

Bill Cornell, Men's cross country coach

MVC, we have an occasion when more than one person from the MVC can qualify for nationals," DeNoon said. "That is rare."

Daggett ran away from the competition at the 1995 District 5 meet, finishing with a time of 17:50, 20 seconds ahead of the closest competitor.

With a team, or as an individual, Koerner said she would be happy going to the NCAA meet.

"My ultimate goal would be for the team to make it," she said. "But to go to nationals would be amazing. I have already accomplished so much more at SIUC than I have ever dreamed, so anything is a bonus."

There only have been two SIUC runners to advance to the NCAA meet — Vivian Sinou in 1987 and Jennie Homer in 1994.

As for the team's chances of making the top two, DeNoon said the team has to regain its fighting spirit if it wants a chance.

"If they can run like they did at the beginning of the year, then they can be competitive," he said.

The SIUC men's cross country team will have its biggest competition coming from the Big 12 conference, among them will be champion Nebraska.

"Right now we are ranked seventh in our district," Coach Bill Cornell said. "We hope to do a whole lot better than that."

The biggest threat coming from a MVC school could come from MVC champion Indiana State, and Cornell said the team is confident they can beat the Sycamores.

The Salukis will run 10,000 meters Saturday — 2,000 more than a usual competition. Cornell said the distance could be a factor, but not a big problem.

"They have done the training for it, and they have the background for it," he said. "If they get mentally prepared, we could have a good weekend."

Freshman Andy Bosak said the team knows what needs to be done to go to nationals.

"We know what we have got to do, and that is no worse than second," he said.

Senior Stelios Marneros is one Saluki who has the possibility of making the NCAA meet as an individual. Marneros won the MVC individual championship Nov. 2.

The District 5 meet begins with women's competition at Newman Golf Course in Peoria at 11 a.m. Saturday. Men's competition will follow at noon.

of the 1994 season — a season in which SIUC went 1-10 under Watson's first year at the helm.

"It's the last game for the seniors, so we have to go out and execute," Jones said. "There are no tomorrow's."

Both Jones and Gagliano, who are both highly sought after by the NFL, have witnessed their share of Saluki slides.

After beating Washburn in the 1993 season opener, the Salukis lost six in a row to finish the season at 2-9.

In 1994, the Salukis lost the first six games of the season, plus the last four.

But the Indians should present the Salukis with their best opportunity to end the five-game slide.

Like the Salukis, the Indians have seen their fair share of troubles this season, most of them in the form of injuries, that have resulted in a 2-7 record for John Mumford's crew.

Mumford will play his seniors Saturday as well.

"This game is more of a rivalry, and we have to play our seniors," Mumford said. "We've played them all year. Our kids are worn down, but I know they will play hard Saturday."

Mumford does not have to tell Jones that because he isn't taking SEMO for granted.

"SEMO is a good defensive team," Jones said. "Their record doesn't really reflect what their defense has done. They held Murray State to 19 points, and that is saying a lot."

While Jones is pretty much destined for the NFL, Gagliano remains unsure of whether or not he will continue his game to the next level.

He contends that is entirely up to the NFL.

"I've played sports all my life, but this is the last guaranteed game," he said. "It's the last one I know for sure I can play in. I hope to take my game to the next level, but you never know."

But win or lose Saturday, and given the disappointing season the Salukis have had this year, Gagliano wouldn't trade any of it for anything.

"We have never won a ring," Gagliano said. "I would not trade anything for the career I've had at SIUC. I've had a great time here."

"Even though we've had some tough times on the field, I know I made the right decision coming here."

FOOTBALL

Seniors aim to leave with win

By Michael DeFord
 DE Sports Editor

PAT MAHON — The Daily Egyptian

Saluki senior punter Mark Gagliano wants nothing more than to end his SIUC football career the same way it began — with a win.

The 4-6 Salukis' 1996 campaign comes to a close Saturday against long-time rival Southeast Missouri State University at McAndrew Stadium.

"This game is real big because it's the last one," Gagliano said. "My first game was a win over Washburn. Now I want to end it with a win."

Gagliano has led the nation in punting all season long and is one of 17 seniors who will close out their Saluki careers Saturday.

With all that has happened to the Salukis this season, the Collierville, Tenn., native said a season-ending win would mean a lot to the senior players.

"All of the seniors just want to end their careers on a winning note," he said. "This senior class is unbelievable. There is so much talent there, and everyone contributes. We have been through a lot together the last few years."

Unfortunately, the Salukis have not enjoyed a whole lot of success this season, and a winning note will be measured in a 5-6 record — providing the Salukis can upend SEMO.

Yet despite the frustrations, the missed opportunities and the five-game slide, Gagliano said the Salukis' season finale means more to the seniors as any game has this season.

"It's been exciting this season," he said. "When you are a senior, everything gets bigger. It seems to mean more to you, and this game is no different."

"I think we have had a good season. We've worked hard. And even though we hoped to be in a better situation, nobody has quit."

Saluki Coach Shawn Watson has relied heavily on his seniors this season. Most of those seniors are starters and have been responsible for a majority of what little success the Salukis have enjoyed this season.

Watson said that scenario will unlikely change Saturday against the Indians.

"Our objective is to (say as many of the seniors as we can," Watson said. "We're in a situation where most of our seniors are starters anyway."

"So we're going to be able to play all those guys without a doubt."

Unlike Gagliano, senior tight end Damon Jones began his Saluki career with a 26-35 loss to the University of Tennessee-Martin during the first game

VOLLEYBALL

Spikers zero in on MVC tournament goal

By L. Bruce Luckett
 Daily Egyptian Reporter

Winning one of its final two conference matches of the season will ensure the SIUC women's volleyball team a spot in the upcoming Missouri Valley Conference Tournament.

The spikers' bid to the tournament rests with a win over Bradley University tonight or a win over the University of Northern Iowa Saturday night at Davies Gymnasium.

Coach Sonya Locke said the Salukis have not lost sight of their goal.

"We will all be disappointed if we don't make it to the tournament," Locke said. "That has been our goal all season."

The tournament runs from Nov. 22 to Nov. 24 at Southwest Missouri State University. Tournament host SMSU owns a 12-4 conference record and already has clinched a spot in the tournament.

Illinois State University, with a 17-1 conference record; Drake University at 14-2; and the University of Northern Iowa at 12-4 also have ensured their spots on the six-team tournament roster.

SIUC is clinging to a fifth place berth with its 6-10 conference record. Meanwhile, Wichita State University and Bradley University each own 5-11 records and are looking to fill the final spot.
