Student vote met with BOT resistance

SARA BEAN

A student government presentation proposing that students be given a binding vote on fees met with some resistance from members of the SIU Board of Trustees.

Board Chairman A. D. Van Meter said that the board always welcomes input from all constituencies, but it ultimately is responsible for decisions on issues such as fee increases.

"The students' concerns are always a consideration for us," Van Meter said, "but the law says the board has the responsibility to make decisions such as this."

The presentation by Undergraduate Student Government President Kristie Ayres and Graduate and Professional Student Council President Michael Speck outlined three proponents for change that the student governments are supporting.

USG and GPSC proposed that all new student fees, such as a technology fee, be subject to approval by a simple majority by the student body.

The proposal also calls for a super majority, or two-thirds approval, by the student governments on fee increases over the rate of inflation on all existing student fees.

The final facet of the proposal requests that the language regarding student fees in the current board policy be changed. Section 2(a)(2) of Board Policy deals with student fees. Student government proposes that all references to fees outside that section be referred to simply as fees, and all references in that section be referred to as student fees, rather than the current "general or SIU Board of Trustees Chairman A. D. Van Meter said he welcomes input from constituencies but is not sure if the "Host a Trustee" resolution passed by the SIUC Faculty Senate is necessary.

The resolution, passed by the senate Tuesday, proposed that faculty units host individual SIU trustees whenever the board meets on the Carbondale campus in the hopes of bettering the lines of communication between faculty and the board.

College of Liberal Arts representative Mary Lamb proposed the resolution to the senate with the intentions of faculty members hosting trustees in their homes; however, some senate members expressed concern over the idea.

Van Meter said the board is always interested in talking with faculty members. He also said the Faculty Senate Carbondale students assemble first-rate art from secondhand refuse in celebration of Recycling Day Sunday.

BURKE SPEAKER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Creating artwork out of items normally found in the trash, Carbondale grade school students have been promoting the importance of recycling in wake of America Recycles Day on Sunday.

First through eighth grade Carbondale students from Brehm Preparatory School, Covenant Christian School, Winkler School and Parrish School created the art projects that are being showcased at the University Mall today from 3 p.m. until 5 p.m.

Gus Bode

Gus says: Somebody clip these six pack rings before I'm recycled.

Sponsored by the SIUC Recycling Program, Jackson County Health department and University Mall, the art show exhibit projects are made of items ranging from a teepee constructed of toothpicks to a castle created from used paper plates.

The artwork is promoting the second annual America Recycles Day — an event that encourages nationwide recycling.

Andilee Warner, SIUC Recycle Program coordinator, said it is important for people to become aware that recycling is the key to the future.

"Everything we do has an impact on tomorrow and the future," Warner said.

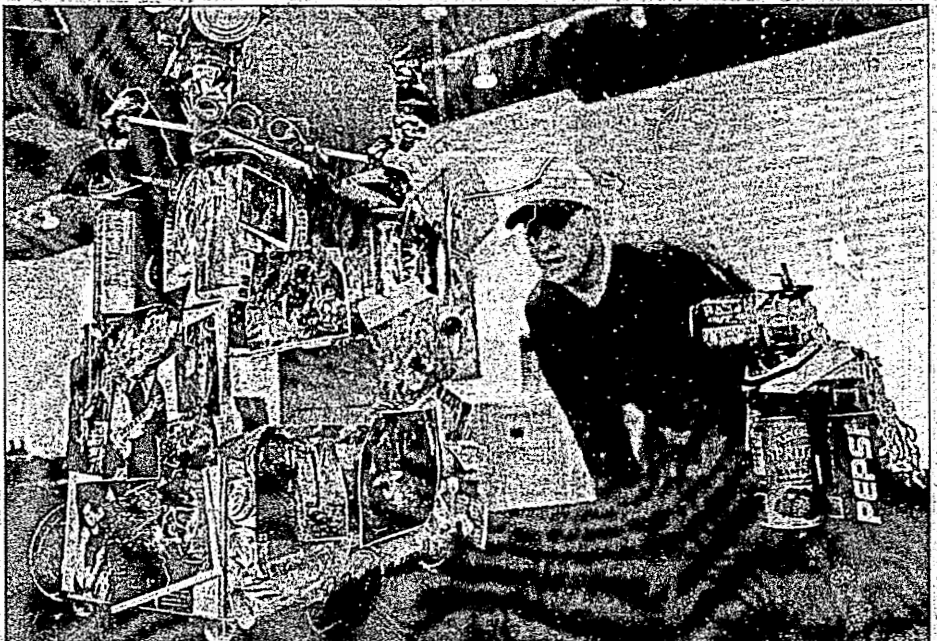

She said the future remains in the hands of the younger generation, including those such as Pete Greene, an eighth grader at Brehm Preparatory School.

Along with five other classmates in his learning cognition class, Greene created a medieval castle out of recycled items and garbage. The art project took more than two weeks to finish.

Greene said he understands the significance of recycling to the future of the planet.

"I think recycling is important because one day we'll run out of stuff we use from the earth," Greene said.

Matt Snell, a junior in physical education from Pekin and member of Sigma Nu fraternity, looks over Carbondale students' art projects while volunteering for America Recycles Day. The projects were made of recycled trash and displayed in University Mall.

The grand prize winner will receive a $50 savings bond, $25 Mall gift certificate and an annual family pass to The Science Center. Each applicant receives a free t-shirt made of recycled cotton and plastic soda bottles.

Kevin Gillespie, recycling coordinator for Jackson County Health Department, said the students made their projects completely out of recycled items or garbage to show that even artwork can come from recycling.

"This artwork brings awareness to the recycling program," Gillespie said. "People that look at this and maybe see some things that they can reuse."

The projects are on display today from 3 p.m. until 9 p.m., Saturday from 1 p.m. until 9 p.m. and Sunday from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m.

Warner said that the artwork is only a part of a nation-wide program aimed at educating people on the importance of recycling.

On a local level, SIUC's Recycling Program aims to educate as well as encourage students to get involved. SIUC has a recycling program which includes recycling bins throughout campus in various buildings.

Warner said there is now an incentive to recycle. After filling out a pledge card, on which the applicant pledges to recycle, Warner will draw a form and the winning recycler receives a Samsonite suitcase.

Warner will then send the forms to state and national levels, where the grand prize is a $200,000 house made completely of recycled products. The winner also receives $35,000 to buy property to locate the house.

But Warner said that most people do not

CARBONDALE

- Kevin A. Radcliff, 21, of Carbondale, was arrested and charged for driving with a suspended license at 11:13 p.m. Thursday in the 1100 block of South Wall Street. Radcliff was taken to Jackson County Jail where he could not post bond.
- At 7:09 a.m. Thursday police responded with a Jackson County Ambulance Service to the Recreation Center in reference to a person who had passed out. Latoya L. Cummings, 22, of Carbondale, was taken to Memorial Hospital of Carbondale where she was treated and released. Police later discovered Cummings was wanted on an outstanding Jackson County warrant for deceptive practice. Cummings was taken to Jackson County Jail where she was later released.
- Daniel J. Raciti, 25, of Murphysboro, was arrested at 2:47 a.m. Friday on a Union County Warrant for deceptive practice. Raciti also was charged with driving on a suspended license and operating a motor vehicle with a suspended registration. He was released on $100 bond.

Almanac

THIS WEEK IN 1981:

- In Chicago, a pupil angry at being reprimanded for throwing paper airplanes in class slipped LSD into the coffee cup of his 61-year-old teacher and the woman began hallucinating. Antonette Indovina, a teacher at Notre Dame School on the South Side, was reported in good condition at a local hospital. The 13-year-old student was being held in the juvenile detention center. Police said Mrs. Indovina sent the boy to the principal office for throwing paper airplanes in class. Later the youth returned to class, and while the teacher was facing the blackboard, he dropped a tablet of "Orange Sunshine" into the coffee cup on her desk.

Professor to release new novel

CHILD ABUSE: Book describes tale of baby who died after being shaken by baby-sitter.

KENDRA THORSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Upon entering Ann-Janine Morey's office, one may view a number of pictures of her children and the different paintings and drawings they made.

The carefully glued cotton balls and popsicle sticks paint a picture of the innocence of Morey's and all children.

It is no secret that Morey, a professor of English at SIUC, is a lover of children. This love has lent a helping hand in her compelling new novel "What Happened to Christopher."

The new book entails a horrifying tale of Baby Christopher, who was shaken to death by a baby-sitter. The book includes details of the trial, intimate conversations with the family and the medical opinions of doctors about Shaken Baby Syndrome. All contribute to make a well-rounded book.

Morey, also known as "A.J.," received her doctoral degree in religion at Southern California University, is a resident of Carbondale and teaches many English classes at SIUC. She also is director of the Core Curriculum.

She said one thing that drew her to the story was that she had young children herself.

"(Christopher's story) really hits you hard," Morey said. "It is horrifying to think that this could happen to an innocent child."

The book will be officially released on Nov. 20 and will be sold at local bookstores.

Morey is also the author of "Apples and Ashes: Culture, Metaphor and Morality in the American Dream" and "Religion and Sexuality in American Literature."

Morey explained that "What Happened to Christopher" was extremely challenging to write because it was out of her realm. Her last two books have been of academic prose.

"This book was non-fiction prose," Morey said. "I had to drop all academic prose and do research in areas that I was unfamiliar with."

Morey happened to be studying child death at the time the trial occurred and by coincidence, ended up as an alternate juror.

She said the involvement with Christopher's family gave the book many interesting perspectives, and she is still involved with the family members today.

"What Happened to Christopher," by author A.J. Morey, also known as Ann-Janine Morey, will be released to the public Nov. 20.

Chicago man suspected of involvement in area thefts

A Chicago man who was stopped in Carbondale Nov. 3 has been linked to six auto thefts and burglaries in the area, police said Thursday.

Joe Louis Jones, 40, of Chicago was stopped and arrested for driving without a valid driver's license and possession of crack cocaine. Carbondale Police later conducted an investigation on several recent auto thefts and burglaries and connected Jones to the crimes through physical evidence.

Jones was paroled May 15 from the Illinois Rivers Correctional Center near Peoria, where he was serving a sentence for possession of a stolen car.

Police learned Jones was in possession of stolen property removed from a vehicle theft on West Main Street the day of his arrest. Jones was initially charged with the theft of a car reported stolen Oct. 11 from the 300 block of North Oakland Street. Police said the vehicle's stereo system was removed.

Reports on the six auto thefts and burglaries in Carbondale, to which Jones has been linked, have been sent to the Jackson County State's Attorney's Office for review. The Carbondale Police Department believes Jones may have been assisted by others in these crimes, and the investigation is continuing. The Illinois Department of Corrections has issued a warrant for Jones because of parole violations.

As of press time, Jones was being detained at Jackson County Jail. Anyone with information about Joe Louis Jones or information regarding other suspects involved in incidents related to Jones may call the Carbondale Police Department at 457-3206 or Crime Stoppers at 549-2677.

University housing to sponsor blood drive

DONATIONS:

• The Brush Towers blood drive will be 4 to 10 p.m. Monday in the basement of Grinnell Hall.

• The University Park blood drive will be noon to 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at Trueblood Hall.

• The Thompson Point blood drive will be noon to 6:30 p.m. Wednesday at Lentz Hall.

BLOOD BATTLE:

Residence areas initiate competition to encourage student donations.

ANGIE ROYER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A bloody war will be sponsored by the three University housing areas Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The University housing areas are competing against one other to see how many people will donate blood in their areas.

Students from all areas of University Housing raised money to buy T-shirts and other prizes for those who donate blood. All of the T-shirts have where the student donated blood and a personal logo of the housing area where they donated.

A student who plans to give blood must be at least 17-years-old and weigh at least 110 pounds. Students must also wait six to eight weeks before re-giving blood and wait at least a year before giving blood after receiving a tattoo.

Each area has a Resident Assistant coordinating their area in preparation of the battle. The RA coordinators are Brooke Dellow of Thompson Point, Jenna Collins of Brush Towers and Allison Gabris of University Park.

Dellow said Thompson Point averages about 75 people per blood drive. Every housing area is shooting for 90 people because of the prizes being offered.

"I know I'll get more than 90 people to come the Thompson Point Blood Drive," Dellow said.

Prizes being offered at the blood drives include food from a wide variety of restaurants. The biggest prize being offered is a limousine ride for two.

To win any of these prizes a student must make an appointment to give blood and keep that commitment. The appointment cards will be put into a collection, and then a random drawing will occur.

The area that wins will receive a banner stating they had won the 1998 Blood Battle.

Dellow said she likes the idea of the Blood Battle because it may gain more participation.

"It is also a good opportunity to meet new people and get more ideas for future blood drives," Dellow said.

Our Word

RA's are proper prophylactic pushers

Student Health Program's and the Wellness Center's new program of distributing condoms in the residence halls is a long overdue action.

With the new program, residents can receive free condoms with literature from their resident assistants, instead of having to go to the Wellness Center on Greek Row.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN feels that condom distribution is a good idea for the students in the residence halls. Since many SIUC students fall into an age group that is statistically high with the number of STDs, sexually active students should take the necessary steps to protect themselves.

Public Health Services predicts that by the age of 20, one-fifth of sexually active people would need treatment for an STD. Youth between the ages of 15 to 29 account for 86 percent of all the people in the United States with STDs, according to a study conducted by CDC National AIDS Clearinghouse in 1994. These statistics are frightening, and the only way to decrease these numbers is by protecting yourself. If used properly, condoms can be nearly 100 percent effective in preventing the transmission of most STDs and pregnancy.

The distribution program will be effective because students are more likely to talk and receive condoms from their RA rather than talking to staff at the Wellness Center. Some students consider their RA as a friend and a person they can talk to about personal issues.

Even though we believe abstinence is the best way for prevention, we understand it is far from realistic. If choosing to partake in sexual activities, protection is necessary.

RA's should make sure that when they pass out condoms that the residents know how to use them properly and realize the importance of safe sex. One way to do this is the RA's should make floor programs where staff from the Wellness Center talk to students about condoms.

All students who live in the resident halls should take advantage of this program, but more importantly, all students who are sexually active should take all possible measures to prevent themselves from becoming a statistic.

Reflections on the non-secular

I was out in my backyard on Wednesday with my friend, Stos Stockton, shooting my new air rifle at an impossibly small target when he burst out in laughter.

"Did you read this letter to the editor in the DAILY EGYPTIAN?" he asked.

"No," I replied as I leveled my gun and took aim.

He started reading the article out loud, and when he reached the last sentence my body went through a spastic shudder that caused me to accidentally yank the trigger. I missed the target and I could hear the pellet sizzle through the air until it hit my roommate's dog, who was 50 yards beyond the target. He yelped, and I quickly reloaded in case he decided to exact some sort of retribution. He's half Rotweiler, so I was quite relieved when he simply wandered around in a circle trying to figure out what the hell had bit him.

"Dear God," I mumbled. The letter Stos had read to me was an attack on fanatical Christians and culminated in comparing them to Hitler. "I hope it was anonymous."

"Nope, it's got his name right here."

Stos said, shaking his head. "The Christians are going to lynch the poor bastard."

"No they won't," I said, keeping an eye on the dog who still looked quite upset. "They're Christians."

"Hi! I'm more afraid of ultra-fanatical Christians than just about any other movement in this country," he said.

"For the love of God!" I said. "They're going to lynch you now!"

"You're right," Stos said, looking around quickly to see if anyone had heard him. "I'm going to have to get out of the Bible Belt before they catch me. Maybe I'll head down to Miami, I'll blend right in with all the other hedonistic savages."

Later on in the evening I was thinking about what's been happening lately in this country, and especially the conflict between Christians and non-Christians. Each side has stereotyped the other resulting in non-Christians calling Christians "Better-than-thou hypocrites," and Christians trying to pass legislation "to stop those sinning sou's from corrupting our country." The thing is, I know good people on both sides.

My mother is a devout Christian who has helped numerous people out of the goodness of her heart. She would never hurt a soul.

On the other side, I have a friend in Miami who is adamantly opposed to the belief in any higher power, and I have never met a better human being.

What it comes down to is a complete breakdown in tolerance among everyone. Why do heathens feel threatened by people who choose to go to church and believe in God? Why must Christians persecute those who believe differently than they believe?

What? Christians persecute? Yes, they do. Just look at the Conservative Christian Coalition. They are trying to enact laws which outlaw what they consider wrong.

What happened to separation of church and state? Religious beliefs are not supposed to invade our laws. Look what happened in the dark ages when the Catholic church ruled European politics — civilization was put on hold and more people were put to death in the name of Christianity than Hitler ever killed (there I go comparing Christians to Nazi's. Dear Lord, will this madness ever stop?).

This is not an attack on Christianity. I know too many good people who believe in Christ to simply label them "evil." I just think everyone needs to stop, look around and realize what is going on. People need to stop worrying about other people's personal lives and start worrying about their own.

Forget about your religious beliefs, whatever they are, and decide whether treating a gay neighbor with love and kindness, or treating that same neighbor with hate and contempt based solely on their sexual preference, is extolling the virtues of a good human being.

Gone but not forgotten?

Dear Editor,

After reading the article entitled "You Are Not Forgotten" in the November 10th edition of the Daily Egyptian I was left in a state of confusion. In the entire article there was not one mention of the Vietnam War or any other war for that matter. It came across to me that perhaps many people have forgotten.

There are still 2,197 military personnel still unaccounted for in Southeast Asia. Do we ever hear about them? Men like Lt. Cdr. Larry James Stevens who was shot down over Laos on Valentine's Day 1969 and never seen again. Evidence has surfaced since 1990 that proves the existence of living men still being held prisoner in Vietnam. In testimony before a Senate Select Committee in 1992 former Defense Secretary James R. Schlesinger testified that the Nixon Administration had every reason to believe that men were being left behind. Our government sold these men out in order to try to save some face.

The government emphatically denies that this man and other men like him could be alive. They choose to look the other way and ignore the facts. Government officials have done everything in their power to discredit every lead that has been presented to them. These are men that served our country. Men like me and you. Men that took orders and followed them in order to preserve what we hold most dear, our freedom. They gave their all and what did the government do for them? They turned their backs on them.

I urge all of you to take time to think about what I have said. What if it was a member of your family that was missing? What if it was your brother, father, or friend? I encourage you all to become involved and not forget what these men did for our country and what our country has done to them. Gone but not forgotten? Think about it.

BAC Conference a success

Dear Editor,

This past weekend, the Black Affairs hosted their 9th Annual Leadership Conference. The event was a monumental endeavor which involved contracting national speakers, soliciting and scheduling workshops, arranging for hotel accommodations, etc. Following last year's poor attendance, this year was truly a make-or-break event. The men and women of BAC have much to be proud of. The conference attracted nearly 300 students from as far east as New York and as far south as Alabama. They did an extraordinary job and deserve our highest praise. Of particular note are Sean Smith, Coordinator of BAC; Romante Archer, Assistant Coordinator of BAC; and Del Marcus Collins, Conference Coordinator.

At a time when we read about students who shame themselves and bring dishonor to the university, it is important and fitting that we appreciate the BAC leadership, member and volunteers who have honored themselves and our community. Bravo BAC — a hard job well done!

Open your mind to Japan

Tea party at Kumakura Gardens draws students who are interested in Study Abroad Programs in Japan.

ANGIE ROYER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The soft Japanese music played in the Japanese Teahouse as Thomas Saville offered Japanese refreshments such as Tea Candy, Pretz Salad and Pocky to people stopping by the Teahouse.

Saville, coordinator of the Study Abroad Programs, hosted a tea party in the Japanese Teahouse in the Kumakura Gardens behind Faner Hall, to anybody who wanted more information on studying at SIU's Nakajo campus in Japan.

"Rather than having a boring presentation, we have some students here who have actually gone to Nakajo and people who are interested can ask them questions," Saville said.

Saville said it would make sense to present information of the Study Abroad Program in Japan in the Kumakura Gardens because the gardens are honoring the mayor of Nakajo.

The Kumakura Gardens are part of the Dorothy Morris Gardens, which resemble Japan with a tea-house and exotic Japanese plants.

Saville said going to Japan to study is a good opportunity for SIUC.

Students do not have to have any knowledge of the Japanese language to go.

Jonathan Schmitt, a junior in linguistics from Trenton, spent January to July in Japan and was at the Japanese Teahouse to answer any questions about studying in Japan.

"It's a great experience and it opens your mind to a different culture and to your own," Schmitt said.

Schmitt said he had went through a culture shock for the first two weeks he was there.

"It's something you can't escape," Schmitt said, "but it went away, and I felt totally at home."

The food is another change when a student takes classes in Japan.

"The food was different," Schmitt said. "Some things were good and some wouldn't suit my taste bud."

The cost of studying in Japan can cost $8 to $9,000 per semester depending on personal needs and travel expenses.

"You can spend more than that," Schmitt said. "I often had to call home for money. Soda costs more than a dollar there."

Schmitt said the Nakajo campus is nice and tight knit. "Everybody there knows everyone's face," he said. "People are on a first name basis."

Schmitt said the Study Abroad Program in Japan is made for anybody that is interested.

Those who should not participate are those who cannot accept or conform to a new culture.

"You have to go out and meet people instead of staying in your room and thinking about home," Schmitt said, "or it'll be harder to adjust."

Jason Glasco, a junior in photography from Cobden, stopped by the Japanese Teahouse to eat some Japanese food and to get more information of the Study Abroad Program in Japan.

"I want a chance to study a different culture and see the differences from the United States," Glasco said.

had invited the board to attend a social gathering to allow the two groups to meet in the past.

"We were pleased to do so,"

Van Meter said. "It was most informative."

Van Meter said he was not familiar with the resolution though he had read something in the paper about it. He said he does not understand why the senate felt this was necessary and believes that the board has been very receptive to their ideas.

"I don't know of any board that is more open to constituencies than this board has been," Van Meter said. "I don't understand it and will not comment on it further."

Morey said that some family members were more hesitant to talk to her than others.

"All of the family agreed with the project but some liked the project more than others," Morey said. "The family's lives had moved on."

The book tells the story of Christopher's mother, Rhonda Attig, who placed him under the care of Gary Gould, her boyfriend at the time. While Attig was gone, Gould shook the baby. Christopher died Aug. 4, 1994, of severe head trauma.

An order filed in November of 1996, the court commented that "the evidence presented against the Defendant at trial was overwhelming." Gould was sentenced to 10 years in prison but was released after three years because of good conduct.

"What Happened to Christopher" first introduces the Shaken Baby Syndrome and the way that Morey first became a juror, along with her personal involvement with the story.

Morey also writes about interviews with Attig's family and their background, ranging all the way from the time of Christopher's premature birth, to the places they lived and their opinions of the other family members.

The events that Morey covers include the relationships of Attig's mother and father and the days leading up to the day of Christopher's death. Morey also discusses the aftermath of the situation and the depression that Rhonda eventually slipped into in.

At the end of the book, Morey gives an update on the entire family and how they currently view the entire situation. She summarizes all of the information and sends forth the message that she hopes to accomplish throughout writing this book.

Morey said that the main purpose the book serves is to educate. She said that 1000 to 1500 children are shaken per year, about 25% of the children suffer from severe brain damage.

Morey also hopes that parents hire care takers that are mature and emotionally stable enough to properly take care of children.

"The most important thing that this book states is at the very end, never shake a baby," she said.

Is it Live, or is it DEAD?

Jazz group pays tribute to the Grateful Dead.

STORY BY
DANA DUBRIWNY

ALTHOUGH THE GRATEFUL DEAD IS NO LONGER A PERFORMING ENTITY, ADMIRERS OF THE DEAD'S MUSICAL INGENUITY HAVE CREATED A SUB-GENRE OF GRATEFUL DEAD COVER BANDS.

While some bands mimic the Dead's tunes note for note, there are those bands that take it one step further, into the improvisational time and space the Dead was known for.

Of all the Dead cover bands, there is one that has reached the depths of the Grateful Dead's ocean of talent, not ironically, calling themselves Jazz is Dead.

"The Grateful Dead — they would go to a place of experiment," keyboardist T Lavitz says. "They each had beautiful chords, but they were sensitive to each other."

"We're trying to improvise together, off each other. We reach plateaus, and we'll stay on a jam until we reach it. This band hits musical plateaus everytime."

It is no wonder why Jazz is Dead reaches the level of musical mastery because each member has his own impressive background to contribute.

Lavitz co-founded the Grammy-nominated Dixie Dregs and played with Jefferson Starship and Widespread Panic. Lavitz also has four solo albums — all of which are on Billboard's jazz charts.

Lavitz recommended that guitarist Jimmy Herring play for Jazz is Dead at its inception in January. Those who have benefited from Herring's addition include Phish, Blues Traveler and Widespread Panic.

Known as the "drummers drummer," Bill Cobham has played with the best of the best, ranging from the seminal fusion band Dreams, to the ultimate musical explorers Miles Davis and the Mahavishnu Orchestra.

And if Cobham is known as the "drummers drummer," then Alphonso Johnson surely is the "bassist's bassist." This Philadelphia-born musician has played with Weather Report, Santana, Wayne Shorter and with Bob Weir's Bobby & the Midnighters.

auditions to join the band.

Lavitz said his fondest memory of the Grateful Dead was his experience in auditioning for the band.

"We were jamming this part so good," he says, "and I remember Jerry standing over me with his glasses on his nose, shaking his head yes."

"Bob Weir said, 'Unfortunately, we need a keyboard player who's a singer.' Jerry told me, 'Man, you're great. I'm sure we'll work together in some way.' It dawned on me several months ago that here I am, playing his music."

"Playing the Grateful Dead's tunes with an all-star band, Jazz is Dead has become a masterful cohesive unit.

"Collectively, we have 100 years on the road," Lavitz said. "Everyone gets along and every night is good. Even a bad night is a good night."

NOT ONLY IS IT THAT EUPHORIC FEELING AFTER A COUPLE OF DRINKS OR THAT HUMMING SOUND IN THE DRUM OF YOUR EARS, IT IS THE NAME OF THE CHICAGO-BASED BAND THE BUZZ, WHOSE NAME IS AS VERSATILE AS ITS MUSIC.

The band's wide musical range has allowed it to share the stage with such musical greats as Buddy Guy, Otis Rush, Chris Duarte, The Flaming Lips, Chuck D of Public Enemy and Government Mule.

Whether it is an urban swank club, gritty rock venue or open air festival, the Buzz has the ability to satisfy all audiences — and it has.

Because of the Buzz's fan base, the band released its self-titled debut album, a collection of demo recordings, and in May 1997, the Buzz won the Rock 103.5 Chicago Rock Off, out of a 500-competitor "Battle of the Bands"

Traveling across the midwest in their Chevy sports van, members of the Buzz are touring behind their new release, "Highway."

The album has gained airplay on more than 200 college radio stations and will make another appearance on WDBX from 4 to 6 p.m. tonight.

Following its two-hour interview and air time, the Buzz will be performing around 10 p.m. at the Copper Dragon Brewing Co., 700 E. Grand Ave., as the opening act for Jazz is Dead.

The DAILY EGYPTIAN had the opportunity to speak to Chris Bernhardt (bass and vocals) of the Buzz while the group was heading toward Illinois. Calling from a pay phone at Kate's Coffeehouse in Alpine, Texas, Bernhardt gave the inside "buzz" on the band.

Let's talk about the start of the band. How did you guys find each other?

Bernhardt: "Basically me and Frank met S. Buddy Guy's Legends in Chicago. He had seen me play a couple of times because he was the

Performance

Hypnotist/comic set to captivate audience tonight.

STORY BY CHRIS KENNEDY

A LUCKY MALE WILL THINK HE'S GOING THROUGH LABOR TONIGHT AT 9 AT COO COO'S NIGHTCLUB, 10240 SAMUEL RD. IN CARTERVILLE.

It will not be the result of alien insemination or a breakthrough in science. It will merely happen through the suggestion of the mind by America's Funniest Hypnotist, Nate McVicker.

McVicker has traveled the country for the last four years honing his skills. He first came in contact with hypnosis when he was in high school and a hypnotist came to a post-prom party he attended.

"It was the funniest thing I'd ever seen and I promised myself I was going to learn how to do that," McVicker said.

He enrolled in a hypnosis class and received his certification through the National Guild of Hypnotist, which allows him to perform in all 50 states. It also gives him an edge over his competition because most hypnotists are not certified.

McVicker is famous for keeping his audiences laughing, and he has gained a deep respect from fellow certified hypnotherapist, Lionel Feeney.

"I have seen a lot of hypnotists. I firmly believe that Nate McVicker has what it takes to be the best hypnotist, bar none. You definitely do not want to miss his performance," Feeney said.

Don Benitone is a Hypnosis instructor at John A. Logan College and has been involved with the field for over 40 years. Benitone is also a fan of McVicker.

"Nate McVicker is an outstanding hypnotist," he said. "His performance is excellent. His shows are highly entertaining to the young, old and all in between."

People's disbelief in hypnosis is something that McVicker tries to dispel.

"There is no secret to hypnosis," he said. "It's not magic. I mean, I don't know a thing about magic."

"All hypnosis is really, is a fancy word for relaxation. It's an altered state of awareness. We get into the subconscious through talking and push the conscience away."

Anyone can be hypnotized, although some people are better subjects than others. Those who are able to follow simple instructions, have an active imagination, trust their hypnotist and are willing to cooperate will get the most out of hypnosis.

Myths and Hollywood over-dramatizations have perpetuated the belief that people under hypnosis can be brainwashed to do things such as murder, steal, rape and pillage. McVicker assures his subjects that his hypnosis is harmless.

"I've never made a fool out of anyone," he said. "I'm not going to ask anyone to bark like a dog or act like a farm animal. You'd never do anything under hypnosis that you didn't want to do."

"If you don't normally go around Southern Illinois barking like a dog, you're not going to do it just because I tell you to [under hypnosis]."

That's not to say strange things don't happen at McVicker's shows. People have eaten onions thinking they're apples, normal citizens believed they were celebrities such as Pee Wee Herman and Richard Simmons, and men think they have gone through labor.

"If you've never seen a guy in labor, I guarantee you should come out," McVicker said. "We'll have them giving birth to the largest baby ever."

McVicker said that each show is different because the crowds are different and reactions to the same suggestions can differ drastically depending on the person.

The people who come see McVicker are usually in their mid-20s to mid-40s, but all ages are welcome.

"I just hypnotized a 92-year-old guy the other night," McVicker said. "Hypnotism is for everyone."

The mind is a powerful organ, and hypnotism taps into some of that stored power.

"There are six stages in hypnosis and once you're in that stage it's like being on LSD—so I've been told—or something like that," he said. "You're totally hallucinating."

"If you're in that last stage of hypnosis I can tell you everyone in the audience will be totally invisible... and you'll be able to hear people but you won't be able to see anyone. Then I tell them that when I snap my fingers they'll be able to see their heads."

McVicker's shows are distinct because he uses onions, "magic" glasses, cups of water and anything else he thinks will make the show more enjoyable for the audience.

McVicker encourages those who are doubtful about the validity of hypnosis to come out and see the show.

"A lot of people don't believe in hypnosis, but that's what's great about it—you don't have to believe in it for it to work."

'The Siege' offers a subtle precaution

"The Siege" is good — flat out, pure and simple. It's a good political thriller with lots of cool explosions, a little sex and gunplay galore. It's jammed full of emotional bits, causal and elaborate plans, American ideals, family issues and a consortium of different races, beliefs and creeds.

It's along the lines of "Outbreak" or "Deep Impact." It serves as a warning by showing an extreme example and extreme reactions. It plays off of an existing phobia and heightens it to a point that leaves the audience to assume preemptive measures against the problem before it goes to the extreme, as if to say "look out."

BEN NEMENOFF
MOVIE CRITIC

A big problem that plagues films like "The Siege" is getting too caught up in its own mission, realizing it, and covering its tracks with intricate camera movements, special effects and cardboard characters so that through our emotional involvement, we are distracted from the problems with the film's core and its exaggerated mission.

What happens then is a film that spends too much time on its form and not enough on its content. The point is either buried under the mess or forgotten entirely.

So yes, "The Siege" is an entertaining film. It will keep you in your seat for two hours and five minutes, but the standard trap it falls into makes it typically average.

RATED "R" for violence, language and minor sexual themes.

we just don't get the time to practice. Most of our new songs come out on stage. We are an improvisational band so we feed off the audience. That's why improv works. We just let it happen. Hopefully we'll sound like a cohesive unit that sounds like the Buzz."

You have an extremely eclectic collection on your new album, "Highway." Can you explain that?

Bernhardt: "We all listen to different kinds of music and have different influences. Frank listens to hard metal as a kid, and Jay studied at Berkeley in Boston and has a very rich jazz classic rock background. Mike studied at DePaul and has played in a circus band, and I am all over the place, from early John Coltrane to Velvet Underground.

Everything you hear influences you, and you can let it happen in your playing or not. We choose to let that happen."

What is the biggest obstacle for the Buzz?

Bernhardt: "We aren't a specific genre. In smaller towns it's fine because they are used to different types of music each night. Chicago is very segregated, and for us, that's very hard. People will be like 'what are they doing here playing in a blues bar when they just played at an alternative club?'"

We aren't a specific genre, and it hurts us. You compromise enough in your life, you don't want to compromise in your music."

Mother e-mailed girl's nudes to men

KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

CHARLOTTE — A southeast Charlotte mother is charged with setting up sexual liaisons between her teen-age daughter and three out-of-state men.

The 44-year-old woman, whose name is being withheld to protect the identity of her daughter, e-mailed nude photographs of her daughter — from the time the girl was 14 — to men and then set up encounters at Charlotte hotels, said V.K. Rivera, a Charlotte-Mecklenburg police investigator.

The mother has been charged with three counts of felony child abuse-sexual act. Sending child pornography over the Internet is a federal crime, Rivera said.

Charges are pending against three men, Rivera said. Their ages range from mid-20s to mid-40s, Rivera said.

The men allegedly involved are from California, Colorado and New Jersey, according to a source close to the investigation. The suspect from California is a pediatrician, the source said.

In 1995 and 1996, the mother apparently made contact with the three men in Internet chat rooms, Rivera said. She used the Internet to pose as a 17-year-old girl. She e-mailed nude photographs; she took of her daughter, saying they were of herself, Rivera said.

Then, she arranged to meet the men at hotels in Charlotte. But instead of going herself, she would send her daughter, Rivera said. After the encounters, she would ask her daughter to give her details about what happened, Rivera said.

Police took warrants out on the mother and she turned herself in Thursday at the Mecklenburg County Jail.

She was released on $5,000 bond, Rivera said.

"The mother has been very cooperative," said the woman's attorney, James Gronquist.

"There's been enough damage done to the daughter."

About six weeks ago, the mother provided police with a 19-page written statement about the incidents and also handed over the hard drive to her computer for evidence.

"When she came to me," Gronquist said, "what she basically said was, 'What I've done to my daughter is terribly wrong. How do I go about starting to fix it to correct the wrong?'"

Gronquist said the mother took her daughter to a therapist, knowing that the daughter would tell her counselor what she had done and that the counselor was legally required to report it.

"She knew that what she had done was about the most terrible thing a parent could do," Gronquist said.

The mother is "very upset," Gronquist said, and now is "getting the help that she needs."

need an incentive to start recycling. Recycling statistics alone often are enough encouragement.

One ton of paper from recycled pulps saves 17 trees, three cubic yards of landfill space and prevents 60 pounds of air pollution, according to the SIUC Recycling website.

The average person uses 600 times their adult weight in garbage during their lifetime.

The energy used to produce one day's worth of junk mail in America is enough to heat 250,000 homes.

Gillespie said the main goal of America Recycles Day is to encourage people to buy more recycled products and reduce the waste through recycling.

"Recycling helps out in a number of ways," Gillespie said. "We have to take care of the Earth and ensure its protection."

Those interested in learning more about recycling and signing up to win, can contact SIUC Recycling Program at 453-8131.

mandatory student fees."

Ayres said although she believes that the current fee structure is good, it is an area that can be improved. She cited three instances in the presentation where fee increases have taken center stage with students.

The hotly contested health fee increase in 1978, student support of a recreation center fee in 1989 and the infamous athletic fee debate in 1997 were all examples of student debate on fee increases Ayres offered to the board.

Ayres said that no other Illinois universities currently have a policy that allows students a binding vote on fee increases and believes this is an opportunity for SIU to be a leader in the state.

Trustee John Brewster said although the proposal will be considered seriously and student input is always appreciated, he does not see the board going to a position of making student approval mandatory.

"Authority has to follow responsibility or vice versa," Brewster said. "The students' real role in this process is with their feet."

"I don't think that the board of trustees can turn over their responsibility on fee decisions when we are the ones that get the blame if something goes wrong."

An eight-percent turnout by the student body in the Spring 1998 Undergraduate Student Government elections led Trustee George Wilkins to question whether such a proposal was a good idea.

"If only eight percent turned out [in the election] and you ask for a simple majority, that would mean that only five percent of the student body would be deciding on the fees," Wilkins said.

Ayres said she believed that the dismal student turnout stemmed from the perception by students that their votes did not matter.

Trustee Bill Norwood said he was concerned that students voting on fees would not look at the long-term picture and that could have harmful effects on projects.

"It is difficult to vote on fees when you are only here for one, two or three years," Norwood said. "The Board of Trustees has the ability to see down the road when making those decisions."

Speck said he felt students had shown the ability to make intelligent decisions, with regard to long-term effects.

Board members said, however, they felt the authority and responsibility of decisions on fee increases rested with the board.

Van Meter said that the board has a difficult job because they must represent the total University. He said they serve to represent the interests of several constituencies.

Police plan dig for more bodies at site tied to John Wayne Gacy

JOHN O'BRIEN
KNIGHT-RIDDER NEWSPAPERS

CHICAGO - John Wayne Gacy was executed in 1994, but Chicago police are preparing to find out whether he went to his death with a secret.

They are making plans to dig up a small pie-shaped area behind a Northwest Side home, based on a ground radar survey indicating that human remains may be buried there.

A former Chicago police detective once ran into Gacy in an alley there, holding a shovel, a recollection that along with the computer data from the radar is responsible for opening the new investigation.

Still, even as police seek a search warrant for the dig, they are more than a little skeptical about what they may find. Recollecting Geraldo Rivera's plunge into Al Capone's vault, they fear being held up to ridicule if the tip does not pan out and they don't want to create a circus atmosphere.

The computerized data from the radar indicates, but does not prove, the presence of as many as four bodies buried at about 40 inches, according to sources.

If successful, the search, and identification of remains through dental records could bring closure to the families of some long-missing young men.

Any recovery of human remains also would validate the suspicions of a former Chicago police detective who is at the center of the new Gacy development. His recollections prompted the Better Government Association to examine the site with the ground-penetrating radar, according to sources familiar with the probe.

This week the state's attorney's office took a statement from former Detective Bill Dorsch, now a private investigator. Dorsch described for prosecutors the night in 1975 when the headlights of his car fell upon Gacy, holding a dirty shovel, next to the Northwest Side alley where the new search is proposed.

The time was 3 a.m., according to the statement, and Dorsch, driving home from his police shift, was startled to see anyone in the alley, much less Gacy, whom he knew as a local building contractor who occasionally dressed up as a clown to entertain children.

Recalling the encounter in an interview, Dorsch related Gacy's quick, almost upbeat reaction.

"I stopped and said, 'John, what are you doing out here at this time of night with a shovel?'"

He said Gacy approached his car, smiled and replied: "Well, with all the kind of work I do, there just isn't enough time in the day. So here I am."

Dorsch drove on, thinking nothing more of the encounter. That is, until the arrest of Gacy and disclosure of his crawl-space cemetery three years later. Suddenly, the alley encounter took on new significance.

"I thought back to the time I'd found him in the middle of the night, holding the shovel, and asked myself, 'Was he burying a body back then?'" Dorsch said.

At the time, Gacy's mother was renting a nearby apartment also frequented by her son, according to sources familiar with Gacy's past.

Dorsch said he immediately contacted the Cook County sheriff's office, which had assumed jurisdiction because Gacy's house was in an unincorporated area just outside Chicago. But his telephone call to a sheriff's hot line, while answered, apparently went no further.

No one from the county police, he said, ever got back to him. "I'm sure they were swamped with work about Gacy and got lots of calls like mine," Dorsch said.

Gacy, whom police have linked to 33 killings of young men and boys, went to his death by lethal injection without any mention of the suspected site. He was executed on May 10, 1994, at Stateville Correctional Center, near Joliet.

Gacy's murder spree is believed to have begun six years before his arrest in December 1978. A search of his home in unincorporated Norwood Park Township at the time uncovered 27 murder victims in a dank crawl space.

But the macabre retrieval of dead men didn't stop at what soon became known as Gacy's house of horrors. The bodies of two more victims were unearthed in his back yard; four others were fished out of the Des Plaines River.

Gacy never confessed to the murders or gave a complete accounting of the crimes, and investigators have speculated that there could have been more than 33 victims.

In recent months, ground-penetrating radar, provided by a New Jersey firm was slowly rolled over the site, shooting bursts of energy into the ground.

Printouts of the radar imagery, examined by experts, indicate skeletal outlines, possibly as many as four sets. One set of images appears to show a skull, a ribcage and a shoe, according to sources familiar with the investigation.

Officials with the Better Government Association could not be reached Tuesday.

How the test, arranged by the BGA, came about in the first place is a story in itself that hinges, ironically, on another crime - the so-called Palatine Massacre. In that unsolved case, seven people died, shot to death in a fast-food restaurant in January 1993.

Earlier this year, the BGA, which had conducted an exhaustive study of the massacre investigation, released a report highly critical of the police response to the crime.

Dorsch had been consulted in that case by the BGA because of his reputation for solving homicide cases while a police detective. In the course of his Palatine work he broached the subject of the Gacy alley encounter.

Dorsch had been unable to put the sight of Gacy and his shovel out of his mind. What had he been digging?

Advances in technology have aided the inquiry so far. The radar, which has been used in other criminal investigations in recent years, has often been used to probe for hidden pipes, gas lines and other impediments to the development of commercial and residential sites.

for catches in a season with 58, breaking the record he set last season — still more.

Senior quarterback Kent Skornia has propelled himself into third-place in most yards, completions and touchdowns on the Saluki list.

"I've been disappointed, obviously," Quarless said. "But from top to bottom, I like this football team. We may lack some things, but they're trying hard."

If they try hard enough, the Salukis could come away with victory in the last game for the seniors. Skornia, wide receiver Ray Barnes, cornerback Jean Baptiste and fullback Bryan Nolbertowitz are among the 15 players down to their last hurrah.

"I know the seniors want to go out with a bang," Quarless said. "So, I think they'll pick it up a little bit. Hopefully, the younger guys won't let up. As a senior, you never want to leave your university with a loss."

SEMO is the perfect opponent to end the skid. Much like SIUC, they are in the midst of a season not to remember.

They have lost four straight, and their four losses by fewer than seven points on the season mimic the Salukis.

This year, the Indians' run-oriented offense is keyed by halfback Corey Williams.

He has 639 yards on the year and 11 touchdowns. Their leading receiver is Dante Bryant (41 rec. for 483 yards).

The game gives the Salukis a chance to avenge last year's 28-17 defeat. The Indians overcame a 17-point, fourth-quarter deficit in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

At least the Salukis have the home-field advantage this time.

"I'd prefer to end here than some place else," Quarless said. "I think the emotion that arises from the fans and the school is extremely important in the development of this football team."

place and people come in there and sit down and they'll be looking around instead of worried about the game," Weber said.

"I've been there before because we were at Iowa (when he was at Purdue University) when they opened their new place and those fans didn't stand up until halftime. They were sitting in those cushioned seats and looking around and feeling good about it."

The Racers, however, hope to enjoy the same success in their new home as they did in their old arena. MSU returns a powerful front line from last season's 29-4, 16-2 Ohio Valley Conference Championship team.

Junior Forward Isaac Spencer (13.4 ppg and 8.1 rpg) is a dominating force inside. Spencer led the OVC in field goal percentage last season (62.6%) en route to his OVC Newcomer of the Year award.

Also returning for the Racers is junior forward Rod Murray (9.5 ppg and 4.7 rpg) and senior center Duane Virgil (8.2 ppg and 5.9 rpg).

As intriguing as the match-up would be, Weber said he is not going to play the MVC's 1998 Newcomer of the Year as much as Thunell would probably like to play against the Racers' intimidating frontcourt. Thunell is showing signs of his lack of conditioning during the last couple weeks.

"I know he was hurting in the end (of Monday's practice)," Weber said. "He's out of condition, so we'll just have to wait and see."

Thunell is looking forward to playing again after watching the leadership team struggle in its 80-72 victory over North Melbourne, Australia last Friday night.

"I'll definitely try," he said. "I knew coming in that I'd have to be one of the leaders, and that's just something every team needs. And I try."

Saluki football preview

Saying goodbye to McAndrew

JESSICA ZAMORA/Daily Egyptian

Senior quarterback Kent Skomia sneaks away from a Western Kentucky University defender Saturday. Skomia plays his final game in a Saluki uniform this Saturday at McAndrew Stadium.

VICTORY? Seniors look to end collegiate career with win, break seven game skid.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
SPORTS EDITOR

A seven-game losing streak can do a lot to a football coach's outlook on a season.

SIUC coach Jan Quarless is a prime example. He used to come off as a coach who places little value on statistics. He used to ignore stats and look at only wins and losses.

Now that Quarless has had nothing to stare at but losses the past seven weeks, the great strides the Salukis have made statistically are becoming more satisfying to look at. Saturday, SIUC (2-8, 1-5) ends an unsatisfying season against Southeast Missouri State University (3-7, 2-5) with a lot to be happy about statistically. Game time is 12:30 p.m. at McAndrew Stadium.

"I think you can look at it statistically," Quarless said. "We're 70 yards plus per game now. Our rushing average has gone up almost 100 yards per game. Skomia's thrown for maybe 10 yards more per game."

"Our third down conversion rate has gone up. Our fourth down conversion rate is about equal. Our defense has allowed less yardage per game overall. There are a lot of keys that you can look into to tell we are a better football team statistically speaking."

True indeed, and the statistical accolades should continue to come Saturday. Tailback Kariton Carpenter can add to his long list of achievements. He needs two touchdowns to become the school's single-season leader — there's more.

Junior wide receiver Cornell Craig needs two receptions to break Reggie Fowler's record for career catches (125). Not to mention Craig has already set a new mark

Thunell, Dawgs to begin regular season

GAME ONE: Junior standout to join team against Murray State Racers on road.

COREY CUSICK
SPORTS REPORTER

SIUC junior forward Chris Thunell has already beaten the odds once and intends to do it again.

Thunell, who missed two exhibition games after appendectomy surgery Oct. 21, is expected to return to the lineup Saturday when the Salukis open the season at Murray State University in Murray, Ky.

Thunell's quick recovery from surgery has impressed much of the Saluki basketball program, including head coach Bruce Weber.

"Anyone else on the team, they would not play this quick," Weber said. "He's the only one, because of his desire and his toughness and his tolerance of pain."

Thunell underwent surgery only three weeks ago and suffered complications from surgery afterward. But, the healthy and recovered preseason All-Missouri Valley Conference selection is now focused on helping the Salukis open their season with a victory.

"I feel 100 percent," Thunell said. "Really, I didn't hold the ball for three weeks, so I've been coming in every night and shooting, working on my ball handling, and I feel pretty good."

"Sitting out really hurt. I'm just real anxious to get back and do anything I can to help the team."

After successfully conquering one obstacle, Thunell now has his sights set on crashing the Racers' grand opening of their new arena.

"It would be huge," Thunell said of winning the opener at the Regional Special Events Center. "We need something to set the pace for the rest of the year. I think that's the place to do it."

Weber hopes that the essence of the new arena will distract Racers fans from the ballgame.

"I'm hoping this is a nice new
