SIU president takes job with national education commission, will remain at SIU until February; announcements made today

Problems plague presidency

Sanders' last job prior to his national commission position was chief executive officer of the Ohio Department of Education. Although the recent termination of former SIUC chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger has drawn the most attention, there were numerous other disturbing points between Sanders and SIUC faculty, students and University supporters. Among the causes of discontent with Sanders' regime are unsuccessful attempts to attract sufficient state funding, a perceived lack of concern with faculty consultation over management decisions and the President's narrowness of ideas for buying and using computers for University trustees instead of for campus improvements. Other differences for Sanders included declining enrollment, major financial problems at SIU's Nudge campus and this from a deated Sanders...

Three liquor licenses up for vote

KAREN BLATTER  DAILY EMISSARY

The City Council will take on two more liquor license applications tonight. One of the applicants is Maier Discount Den, 819 S. Illinois Ave., and the other is the Lunchroom, 315 S. Illinois Ave., Falls in this restricted area.

The Lunchroom applied for both licenses, with a vote of 5-3 for Maier and 7-0 for Karyanas. The 10-member council will only examine a proposal to the commission and present its merits and demers of all applications.

Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan said the council needs to look into entertainment in Carbondale and what needs to be done to increase entertainment options.

"There might be a plan to look at entertainment and review what we are doing to get by," she said. "There is a lot of work being done down town, and we need to look at what our plans will be for the atmosphere in the South Illinois Avenue area and downtown as a whole."

Council members all voted to discuss this area before the vote. The council Foley there will be a good amount of opinions to be interrogated.

There are four recommendations made to the City Council in consideration of the last Liquor Control Commission meeting that will consider the applications of Maier and Karyanas.

One recommendation regarding the license cap on liquor licenses to make a temporary change to council policy to allow a new license to be awarded in the Strip area only if a license is available for more than 90 days.

The cap is also in the ordinance and the council needs to listen to the overall cap. The other recommendation to the council is to vote for 16, if they change the policy for South Illinois Avenue, to allow Chicago Underground, 717 S. University Ave., to receive a license.

With this option, it is recommended that as soon as a license becomes available, the ordinance changes back to being capped at 15.

Councilman Ideal Cole said the cap needs to be looked at, and the council needs to see what will work for the city.

We need to find the right number for the city.

"Caps have to try and mandate a reasonable number so that there is not just a select few with bar licenses," he said. "The deal is to protect those who have licenses and for the public good." A cap in the 1970s was set at the number of liquor establishments present at the time, and the establishments were all lumped together in one category. The number of liquor establishments was not fixed, and, if someone wanted a license, they could be approved after completing all the necessary requirements.

The city adopted an ordinance in 1980 that prohibited new bars from locating in the South Illinois Avenue area because of the amount of bars already in the area and the effect bars had on street closures and crowds.

State senator seat challenged by SIU alumnus

SIUC alumnus Ronald Ellis announced Monday his intention to challenge Ned Mitchell for the state senate seat for the 94th district in the November 2000 election.

Ellis, a Republican and 1992 graduate of SIUC in accounting, is co-owner of WSHK radio in Anna. The Marion resident is also a public accountant and operated his own accounting practice for 10 years.

Mitchell, a Democrat, took office Sept. 12 succeeding Jim Rea, who had been in the position since 1979. Rea had taken a position in Secretary of State Jesse White's office. Mitchell was mayor of Beacon before becoming a state senator.

Dear Editor,

As a SIUC student, I am writing to express my concerns regarding the recent events that have taken place on campus. The university has a responsibility to ensure the safety and well-being of its students, faculty, and staff. However, recent reports of broken lights on campus have raised concerns about the university's commitment to maintaining a safe environment.

The problem lies not in the quality of our research and graduate education programs, but in funding. Without adequate funding, SIUC is suffering from an acute shortage of resources. Without the proper funds, SIUC faces severe financial challenges which will affect its research component. The university needs to find alternative ways to fund its research initiatives.

The problem is not confined to the Graduate School but also extends to the College of Arts and Sciences. As the Vice Chancellor for Research and Development, I have been monitoring the situation closely. I understand the financial constraints that SIUC is facing, but I believe that we need to think creatively about how we can attract more funding to our research programs.

I would like to hear the university's plans for addressing this issue and ensuring that our research programs continue to thrive. It is vital for the university to invest in its research initiatives and remain competitive in the global academic landscape.

Thank you for your attention to this important matter.

Sincerely,

Forum attempts to avert future genocide

Andy Egan

The SIU Public Policy Institute will send 31 recommendations to Rawson—said. "The single acute members of Congress and the United Nations called for a small cell force available on a 24-hour basis that could send troops on peacekeeping missions to avert tragic circumstances.

This is a very difficult problem, and this symposium was a step forward," Simon said the ideal situation would have an outside commission set by Congress to conduct hearings to review the proposals from the Congress. He said there is a strong possibility a House Committee could review the proposed solutions but did not indicate when government action would take place.

Simon said he thinks the issue can be connected to both political parties in Congress without any partisan finger-pointing.

"The reality is that all of us share the blame," Simon said. Alfons Des Forges, one of the symposium participants, said the White House turned a " deaf ear" on the genocide situation:

"If something is to happen, it has to happen here in the heartland of America," said Des Forges, author of the book "Leave None to Tell the Story: Genocide in Rwanda." Des Forges said people have to care about the issue before solutions can be set in place.

"Government reacts to the voice of the citizen," Des Forges said. "It depends on how much noise we make on whether government will react."
through a combination of state fees, state contracts and grants from foundations, corporations and the federal government. ECS funding for fiscals year 1998 was about $13 million.

Sanders said ECS recruited him late last winter for the presidential position. He and ECS hired him for the final month of "tailing," Sanders said, when he declined accepting the position because of unfinished business at the University.

Understanding that ECS likely would fill the position with another candidate, Sanders was surprised when ECS recently reopened the search, and he was again approached about the position.

He pleased to know that the University would have the opportunity was a lost one.

with faculty before sizing the popular Argersinger, issued a vote of "no confidence" in Sanders' leadership upon learning of the impending decision.

The student body also expressed frustration with the action, exemplified by Undergraduate Student Government President Stan Henry.

"Argersinger] was terminated because of political reasons," Henry told the DAILY NEWS. "In the president's December agenda, and the chancellor goes in his way."

The University's budgetary plight also has been blamed on Sanders and Argersinger for having been a politically connected education official.

- Despite his resignation, SIUC had the highest percentage of student and alumni donations to the legislature in fiscal year 2000 of all state universities. The University has struggled to draw the amount of funding required to keep up with deferred maintenance needs and capital improvement projects. SIUC currently is facing major challenges in the upkeep of campus grounds and aging campus facilities. Sanders worked under former U.S. President George Bush as sitting secretary and deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Education from May 1989 to October 1991, but many campus leaders question Sanders' networking abilities with Washington, D.C., national opinion about the leadership and future of the University. Argersinger now is embroiled in a series of lawsuits against the University.

Two groups, Southern Illinois HOPE and Student for Excellence in Education, formed for Argersinger's resignation and have rallied around a common mission to, among other things, retain Sanders as president. While Sanders' resignation as president of SIU likely will be seen as a victory for SIU's campuses, rather than catering to the flagship Carbondale campus.

"There is a need to think of SIU as a system, and not just an institution," Sanders said upon his hiring. "That is why we have strong leaders on the different campuses."

Former UIS President Jackie Sanders said Sanders' resignation is not surprising given the decision to streamline administrative paperwork. Sanders also hired a lobbying firm to assist with the pursuit of state funding.

"I expect there will be a broad range of reactions from various people about the decision," Sanders said. "I think they will acknowledge that Sanders was an advocate for all SIU campuses, as suggested in an Arthur Andersen report. He formed the commission in response to local business and faculty opposition to the plan." Sanders also was instrumental in forming the Moody Commission, a group of SIU and business leaders organized to improve University efficiency and investigate the possible implementation of shared purchasing for all SIU campuses.

"I trust that they will assist us," Sanders said, and I think they will recapture the edge the contributions we have made in the last four-and-a-half years."
RA compensation may be increased

Jennifer Wig
DAILY EDITION

Compensation for Resident Assistants may be increased for next fall because it has been at least four years since their last raise.

Steve Kirk, assistant director of Residence Life, said they are considering whether to raise compensation, and if so, the amount of increase RA's will receive. "The decision will be made by the end of the semester," he said. "We haven't made any decisions about that yet," Kirk said. "We feel like they work very hard, and we want to compensate them, as well as we can.

University Housing considers RA compensation annually, but this year the issue has been examined more closely to increase the number of applicants. While there is no shortage of RA's on campus, Kirk said he would like to see a larger selection to choose from.

During a student's first and second semester as an RA, he or she receives $325 each semester and free room and board, which includes a single room and a meal plan. Third-semester RA's receive an additional $50 each semester.

Kirk said that if RA compensation is increased, student dormitory charges may also increase. Students pay $2,572 each year to live in a double room and $1,191 each year to live in a single room.

He said he would like to see an additional $1,000 paid to RAs to cover the RA raise.

Several options will be considered by the council in regards to the applicants. While current policy, the license could be granted if a permanent, opaque wall separates the area of sale and there is a separate entrance and check-out facility for liquor.

City Council members seem to have mixed feelings about the applicants.

Councilman Mike Neill said that there are no restrictions under the cap in letting Discount Den get a class C packaged liquor license, but he is considering other aspects of the business.

"Discount Den is legitimate to be approved, but we have to consider its location and the access to it," he said.

Councilwoman Maggie Flanagan said she did not want to divert her attention on the issue ahead of time, but was looking forward to the dialogue at the meeting.

"I know my feelings about this, but I'll like to see what others have to say," Flanagan said. "We need to do a lot of discussion about it."

Discount Den previously applied for a class C liquor license during the summer of 1998 but withdrew the application before the Liquor Advisory Board could consider it. The reason given at the time was that the landlord did not approve of liquor sales.

"Karen Blaster contributed to this article."

At the Sept. 21 meeting, the council discussed weekend closing of the 500 block of South Illinois Avenue. At that meeting, the council requested reports from local business owners about what they wanted for the situation.

The report recommends the council continue to treat the late night crowd situation on the Strip in the same way, with the police determining when to close the street.

The council will also review and discuss class C packaged liquor licenses before they act as the Liquor Control Commission and vote on a packaged liquor license application for Discount Den, 819 S. Illinois Ave.

That ordinance was abolished in 1990 when Six Bar and Billiards, 517 S. Illinois Ave., was granted a license. "We were just told some of the same arguments were presented then as there are being presented now for lifting the restrictions on the area."

In 1990, further caps and classifications were put on liquor licenses. The cap was already set at 59, which was how many liquor establishments were selling liquor, including bars, restaurants and packaged liquor stores.

The council at that time decided to create classifications for each type of license to make awarding licenses easier and to put limits on the types available.

Establishing caps on class B licenses for bars and taverns and class C licenses for packaged liquor sales was recommended and approved at the time. The cap was set as the number of establishments at the time, which was 17 class B licenses and 8 class C licenses.

In 1995, two businesses with Class B liquor licenses closed, so the council then decided to lower the cap to 15 licenses. The council also approved a policy that further limited the number of licenses in the Strip area.

Under the policy, no new or transferred licenses are allowed in the area from Walnut Avenue to Grand Avenue, and from University Avenue to the railroad tracks. That limits the number of bars in the area to five.

Two years later, Walgreens Drug Store, first located in University Mall and now at 1201 E. Main St., gained its liquor license. Also in 1997, Time Square Liquors, 7002 W. Main St., closed, which opened the cap for two licenses.

One of these two licenses is the one that Paul Bartlett, owner of Discount Den, 819 S. Illinois Ave., is applying for. His license and two other liquor licenses will be reviewed and voted on at tonight's Liquor Control Commission meeting.

In July, another business closed, allowing one class B-2 license to be available under the cap. This is the license that Matt Maier and John Rustamov are applying for.

The council, acting as the liquor control commission, has much to take into consideration when making decisions at tonight's meeting.

Doherty recommended several options to the council about what kind of action they can take about the caps in the city in the council agenda.

"Included in the four options presented to the council is lifting the policy of not allowing any new or transferred liquor licenses in the Strip area."

"If the city gives up on that policy and lets itself work out, [the policy] will not achieve its objective of why they were established in the first place," Doherty said. "It takes time to occur."

Led by senior Herman Louw and Randy McPherson, men's swimming team collects its third win of season

PAUL WLEKLINSKI

Many Missouri Valley Conference teams don't have what it takes to even swim with the men of SIU swimming and diving team. Not only do they not have the talent or compete with the Salukis, most don't even have the courage to race against SIU.

The University of Evansville men's swimming and diving team is just one of the few that are willing to face the Salukis as it ended the dominance of the five-time MVC champions Saturday ending the Salukis 117-93. The victory is the third this season for the Salukis as they improve to 3-1 for the season.

"Everyone is a team that is struggling to rise up," said Rick Walter, SIU men's swimming and diving coach. "I give them all the credit in the world for trying that. There's a couple of conference schools that won't even swim us because they know our talent."

"It's a big win because we need to continue to establish where we fit in the conference," said head coach Don DeNoon.

Freshman Amber Mullins' three first-place finishes help women's swimming team improve its record to 2-5

PAUL WLEKLINSKI

The SIU women's swimming and diving team quickly squandered any notions the much improved Purple Aces of the University of Evansville had of upsetting the Salukis.

The Salukis made the point loud and clear that they were the team to be reckoned with in the Missouri Valley Conference again this season as they defeated Evansville 123-94 in the Recreation Center pool Saturday to improve their record to 2-5.

"We feel like we're the conference champs, and anyone somebody comes in here, we want to let them know we're still the change," said Mark Kluemper, SIU women's swimming and diving coach.

"For us, that was a big factor. We wanted to make a strong statement. I think Evansville thought they might have had a shot at beating us, but our team jumped on them early and, I think took the wind out of their sails."

Salukis close out cross country season placing 14 out of 25

CHRISTINE BOLIN

SIU women's cross country senior Joy Curran never allowed a lack of confidence to get in the way of having the best year of her collegiate cross country career.

"Out of the four years I have been here, this season was my favorite," Curran said. "Everyone was so strong, and we all had good attitudes. I know being a senior it was bound to happen."

Curran and her senior teammates ended their cross country careers after meeting their match in the NCAA Midwest Regionals finishing 14th of 23 teams.

Kansas State University dominated the 8K race placing four of its runners in the top 10 to advance to the NCAA Championships in Bloomington, Ind. Nov. 22.

The two teams that finished ahead of SIU at the Missouri Valley Conference Championships earlier this season --- the University of Northern Iowa and Wichita State University --- again topped the Salukas finishing eighth and ninth in the regional, respectively.

Curran (18:31) finished the race first for the Salukis crossing the line with a time of 18:31. Senior Jenny Monaco (18:45) ended her collegiate career finishing seventh, and junior Becky Cox (19:02) finished ninth.

Freshman Katie Methen (19:16) took the 10th spot, freshman Erin Simone (19:28) placed 13th, senior Erin Lebby (20:04) wrapped up her career by placing 14th, and freshman Katie Henning (20:40) rounded out the Salukis field by placing 15th.

"I thought we were ready up until the sound of the gun," head coach Don DeNoon said. "It was not the finish we wanted."

Finishing 14th in the Regionals may not have been the ideal way to complete the 1999 cross country season, but that does not mean the Salukis will be walking away unsatisfied.

The Salukis ended the season winning four of their first five meets. In the MVC Championships, SIU placed third --- an impressive turnaround from last season's eighth-place finish.

Three Salukis, Curran (who owns the 14th best time in school history with 17:55), Methen (who is 16th in school history with 17:58) and Simone (who is 19th with 18:11), broke into the top-20 all-time record books with their respective times.

Furthermore, seniors Jenny Moraitou and Erin Lebby improved their previous times this season moving up to eighth and 11th in the school's overall best times, respectively.

Additionally, the Salukis ended the season with a ninth-place ranking in the 42-team Midwest region.

DeNoon hopes the success from cross country will carry over to the track season, which begins Dec. 11.

"We went out strong and had a great season," DeNoon said. "We will see what we can do with track this season."
