Trustees approve 18.3 percent tuition increase

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

EDWARDSVILLE — The Board of Trustees voted unanimously Thursday for an 18.3 percent tuition increase effective Spring 1989 despite the recommendations of elected student representatives and a petition signed by 1,000 students to invoke a temporary surcharge instead. Undergraduate Student Government President Bill Hall presented a petition signed by 1,000 students and a unanimous USG resolution in favor of a raise in tuition through a surcharge that the board could renew or repeal each semester.

Hall said the petition was compiled in two days by a progressive student group and, ironically, by former USG senator Vince "Inakense" Kelly. Kelly was impeached Wednesday night by the USG because he is a graduate student.

Hall said a temporary surcharge would allow the board to bring tuition back down when the state appropriated more money for the University.

Hall was concerned with the fate of Illinois State Scholarship recipients who will enjoy a waiver from the tuition increase for spring semester 1989, but as of fall 1989 must pay the increase.

"When we raise tuitions to these degrees there are students who fall through the net," Hall said.

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit said to keep pace with the quality of other public universities, tuition must be raised.

Debate Candidates stand firm on the issues

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Vice President George Bush and Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, in their final face-to-face debate before the election, stressed deep differences in their positions Thursday night with the sharp attacks that have dominated the campaign.

Bush won the debate 49 to 33 percent according to a "snap poll" conducted by ABC News. The poll conducted immediately after the debate among 500 voters, had a margin of error of plus or minus 4 percent, ABC said.

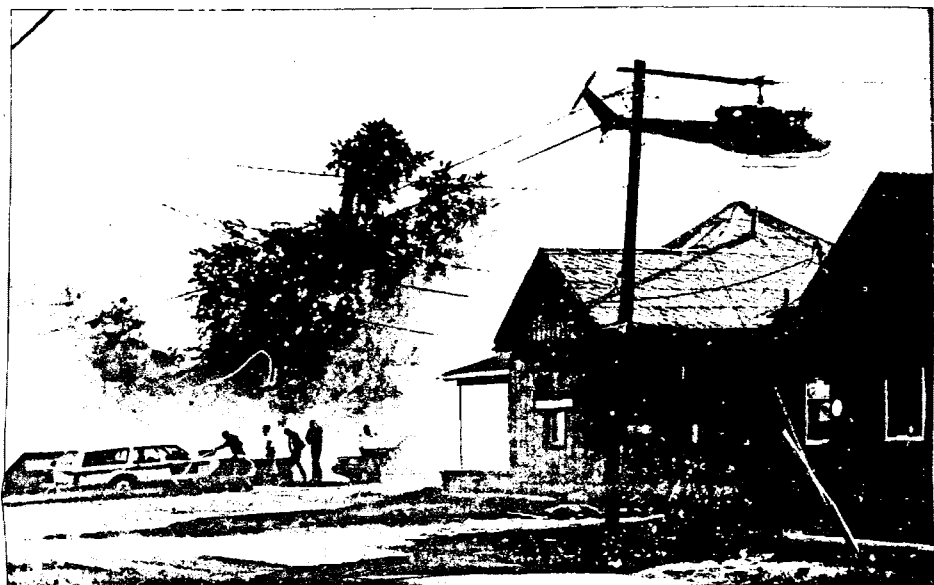

In their second nationally televised debate, Dukakis and Bush quarreled over many of the issues heard constantly during the campaign — the qualifications of Republican vice presidential candidate Dan Quayle, defense, the budget, the death penalty and taxes.

The debate was held in Pauley Pavilion on the campus of UCLA, with as many as 100 million Americans watching the critical confrontation.

Dukakis, tagged throughout the debate by Bush as someone with a "left wing political agenda," rejected both a rail-mobile MX missile and a smaller, one-warhead mobile "Midgetman" missile, but said he is willing to talk with Congress about a newer, cheaper alternative to either system to modernize the nation's land-based missile system.

But Bush — who wants to keep both missiles available as viable options, knowing only one can be afforded — countered that developing a new

Two bombs found after morning fire

After an early morning fire Thursday at 305 N. Renfro St., two pipe bomb devices were discovered by officers investigating the fire, Carbondale Police said.

An Illinois State Police bomb disposal officer was called to the scene Thursday afternoon after the bomb equipment was found. The officer asked for the assistance of an Army bomb squad, police said.

A U.S. Army bomb squad from Granite City arrived from a helicopter at 4:25 p.m. Carbondale Police officers cleared the area and asked businesses near the 300 block of Illinois Avenue to evacuate the area. Workers at Vogler Ford evacuated the area, but workers at Central Illinois Power Service were told by police they were safe

USG submits second impeachment bill

By Brad Bushue
Staff Writer

A second Undergraduate Student Government senator will face impeachment tonight because she failed to meet academic requirements.

A bill to impeach Juliana Taylor, Thompson Point senator and chair of the Committee for Internal Affairs, was submitted for senate approval and will be voted on at 9:30 p.m. at an emergency USG senate meeting in Student Center Ballroom B.

Vickie Aponte, West Side senator and author of the bill, said she submitted the bill because Taylor is on academic probation, which does not meet the minimum 2.0 grade point average required of USG senators.

The bill calls for Taylor to be removed from her presiding position on the committee, not from her senatorial seat.

Aponte said she submitted the bill in this way to avoid conflict of interest because Taylor would have been able to gather enough support from her colleagues to have the bill tabled and sent for review before Taylor's own committee, Aponte said.

Taylor could have more leverage to keep the seat on

Egyptian novelist awarded the Nobel Literature Prize

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (UPI) — The Swedish Academy awarded the 1988 Nobel Prize for Literature Thursday to Egyptian novelist Naguib Mahfouz, the first Arabic-language writer to win the 87-year-old award. The academy said Mahfouz, 77, who has written some 40 novels and short stories about ancient pharaonic and modern Egypt, won the prize because of works "rich in nuance — now clear-sightedly realistic, now evocatively ambiguous."

Nationwide strike to protest inflation in Peru

LIMA, Peru (UPI) — Security forces patrolled the capital in armored cars, rode shotgun on buses and clashed with strikers at several sites Thursday as thousands of people stayed off the job to protest skyrocketing inflation. Labor leaders said most of Peru's 80,000 state and private miners joined the 24-hour nationwide strike that began early Thursday.

China-Soviet Union summit possible next year

BEIJING (UPI) — Senior leader Deng Xiaoping said Thursday he may meet next year with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev for a summit to end nearly three decades of enmity between the two communist giants, a Finnish delegation spokesman said. The statement by the 84-year-old communist leader marked China's strongest indication that a compromise may have been reached between Moscow and Beijing on resolving the bitter differences.

Greek crowds storm showing of 'Temptation'

ATHENS, Greece (UPI) — Protesters led by a Greek Orthodox priest stormed a theater preparing to screen the controversial film "The Last Temptation of Christ" Thursday and riot police fired tear gas to break up rampaging crowds. Government spokesman Sotiris Kostopoulos said there was "no censorship in Greece" and the screening of the movie based on a controversial novel by Greek author Nikos Kazantzakis would go ahead.

Senate votes to keep death penalty in drug bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate refused Thursday to strike the death penalty for drug kingpins from an anti-narcotics bill, rejecting claims they could be tough on dope peddlers without capital punishment. By a 64-25 vote, the Senate overwhelmingly defeated the measure to replace the death penalty with mandatory life imprisonment for those convicted of drug-related murders.

Reagan signs bill to overhaul welfare system

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan, who has spent much of his political life railing against the effectiveness of federal programs for the poor, signed into law Thursday the biggest overhaul of the nation's welfare system in 50 years. In a Rose Garden ceremony, Reagan signed the legislation that is aimed at a major objective of his presidency.

Test: Boy was one of first to die of AIDS in 1969

CHICAGO (UPI) — Tests on tissue samples taken from a 15-year-old boy who died in 1969 confirmed suspicions he was one of the first Americans infected by a virus virtually identical to the AIDS virus, doctors said Thursday. AIDS was "first recognized and defined as a clinical entity in the United States in the early 1980s," reported a team led by researchers from the Tulane University School of Medicine.

Police await tests in Illini campus rape cases

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (UPI) — The investigation into a series of sexual assaults on the campus of the University of Illinois is beginning to focus on one man, Champaign Police Lt. Bob Soucie said Thursday. He said blood and hair samples taken from the suspect were sent out-of-state and were not expected back until next month.

Custom of footbinding explained through play

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

Drawing analogies between the Chinese custom of footbinding and the constraints that modern society imposes upon us, "Journeys of the Footbound" is a compelling, dramatic look at gender roles in familiar situations.

Researched, compiled and directed by Tami Spry, a doctoral candidate in performance studies, the plot includes transcribed personal accounts by women in pre-communist China of the pain they suffered as a result of the ideals of beauty and attractiveness that were prevalent in a severely patriarchal civilization.

The custom of footbinding, dating back to the Confucian era, involved tightly binding a small female child's foot in silk strips at an early age. The extremely painful process warped the growth of the foot, forcing it to grow in the turned-under shape of a lotus blossom, breaking the bones and causing the flesh to slough off.

The plot seeks to examine sexual stereotyping from both the male and female perspective.

Widely practiced until being outlawed in 1949, footbinding was a measure of social status. A woman's desirability and virtue was measured by how small and perfectly formed her feet were.

Walking was made extremely difficult, if not impossible. The women were often confined to wherever their husbands would carry them.

It is in the recounting of this historical atrocity that the purpose of the play is contained. By combining vignettes of contemporary advertising and situations with the personal oral narratives, the plot highlights the fact that while such physical signs of discrimination have ceased, the mentality behind such actions still survives in various forms.

The plot seeks to examine sexual stereotyping and roles from the male as well as the female perspective. Expounding upon the concepts of the yin (meaning female, which is equated with weakness) and the yang (pertaining to male strength), it places our values in a position for re-evaluation.

A Review

Including members of both sexes, the cast takes on several roles during the course of the play.

Clad simply in unisex black outfits, the characters relate their own personal encounters with all facets of physical, spiritual, and mental binding in place of self-respect.

In an effort to preserve equality among characters, the cast has no main characters nor specific roles in the piece. The message can not be fragmented into a he-said, she-said, with consequential actions story line. Rather, it is a work to be considered as a whole.

A masked male Chinese chorus compliments the women making soliloquies, completing the cast. At one point during the performance, they remove their masks, placing them on the women, who stand mute while the males share their views on male-female relationships.

The social mores focused on and the process by which they are examined is disquieting but necessary. The correlation between ideas of beauty, value, worthiness, and self-esteem and our actions is a very prevalent societal link. By understanding the background and motivation behind our behavior, we perhaps could then abolish the

Vince impeached; USG makes sense

WE DON'T DOUBT Vince Kelly's leadership abilities, but the Undergraduate Student Organization had no choice but to vote him off USG. Vince's only problem is he is no longer an undergraduate.

There's probably been a kookier example of a leader grasping at straws than Vince Kelly's attempt to keep his Undergraduate Student Government seat.

Don't get us wrong. We like Vince. We understand that he brings to student government the experience gained not only as a student but as the proprietor of a self-made cottage industry, "Vince Makes Sense," a tutoring service for math students.

Vince, though, did not use the right formula when he chose a public service career. Last spring, Vince ran for a USG seat from the East Side. Vince's problem was that he graduated shortly after the election.

Now, Vince and his supporters say that USG regulations are unclear.

How does, "must be a registered undergraduate student," grao you for clarity of statement.

Arzo Burnett, a member of the USG's committee for internal affairs, said the committee interpreted the constitution's requirements as being unclear and misworded.

SOME EVEN say that the words "must remain" should be added to the requirements. Come on. If the requirement is a person must be an undergraduate, that's what it means.

The name of the organization should give most people a pretty good clue as to the kinds of students eligible for membership.

There's no need to clarify anything. Vince simply should have opted to run for a seat on the Graduate and Professional Student Council.

While we're glad to have someone of Vince's caliber interested in USG, he'll have to help out from the sidelines.

There are many things he can do. He can continue with his giant petition campaign. He can continue to speak to the inadequacy of state funding for education.

THE PROBLEM is that if USG bends its rules for Vince, just because it likes him, it will be forced eventually to bend them for someone not as desirable.

Once there is one graduate student on the USG, the door is open for others. The natural inclination might be to allow graduates to govern undergraduates, given the fact graduates have been through it before. But, such an inclination is misguided.

Graduate students and undergraduates occupy a different set of circumstances. Graduates and undergraduates might see eye-to-eye on broad issues such as the need for increased state funding for education, but there is no guarantee that they will see eye-to-eye on everything. There may come a time when what is good for graduate students — increased funding for research, for example — might begin to cause reductions in the programs undergraduate students want.

The difference between a graduate and undergraduate student amounts to more than age. They are two different types of students, each with a unique set of wants and needs. That is the reason there are separate governmental units to represent these distinctly different student groups.

Debates are not for hecklers

ALTHOUGH THE Poshard-Kelley debates are over, the issue of audience behavior is not. In the last debates between the two congressional candidates, some supporters displayed infantile behavior indicative of schoolyard bullying.

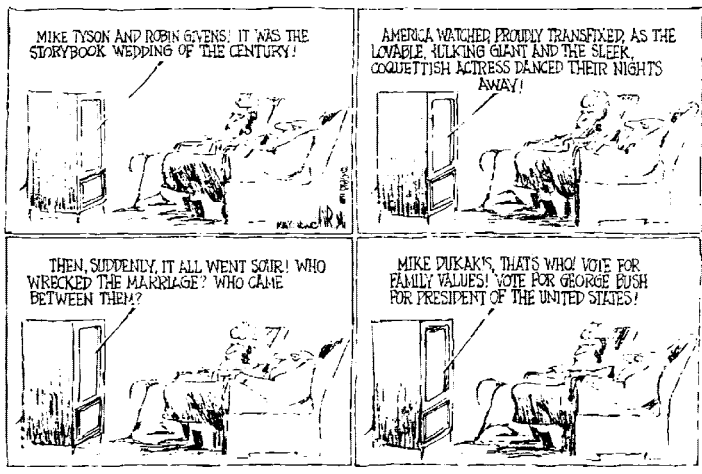

As the two candidates tried to present their views on important issues, they occasionally were subjected to heckling, fanatical gesturing and inattention, (some audience members thought it clever to pretend to read newspapers while the opposition presented his views).

THIS TYPE of behavior is juvenile and ignorant — akin to a child covering his ears and babbling nonsense in order to block out what someone has to say.

Political debates are forums for people to learn and understand more about a candidate's position, not means for deriding a politician who does not represent one's beliefs.

HECKLING THE opposition does not gain support for a candidate, but, in fact, may cause indecisive audience members to be repulsed by the infantile behavior of a candidate's supporters.

A word to the hecklers: Children, behave.

Letters

The behavior of College Republicans proves need for adult supervision

In his "spin control" letter to the editor Sept. 11, Mr. John Hopkins, "external vice president" for the SIU-C College Republicans, seems to be a bit confused. Of course, that's not unusual for someone with a high-sounding, self-important title whose own behavior demonstrates the need for direct adult supervision.

The truth about what transpired at the third Congressional debate, Oct. 5 at Kaskaskia College, is this, in our view:

1. The size of the crowd...is not an issue.

The number of supporters for each candidate was approximately equal with a marginal edge going to the Republicans. Of the three formal congressional debates, the third had the lowest attendance — fully two-thirds smaller than either of the first two.

A rather disappointing turnout for the Republicans, we should think, in a region where their voters far outnumber the Democrats.

2. The "volume" or noise intensity of the crowd...is also not an issue.

More power to the CRs if they can turn out a loud, excited, supportive, polite crowd for their candidate. We do our best to do this and expect nothing less of our opposition.

3. Behavior...this is the issue.

Mr. Hopkins and I obviously disagree on this point. In our view, the behavior of the debate crowds was decidedly different on each occasion. We believe that given the sheer size and intensity of the crowds at the first two debates, they were relatively well-behaved audiences with some exceptions.

We agree that the Democrats far outnumbered their Republican rivals both at Shawnee College and Rend Lake College, Sept. 14 and 28. Apparently, this fact is a painful source of frustration for the College Republicans as demonstrated by their collective behavior at the third debate.

Surely the CRs will agree that, unfortunately, both parties have supporters who will not be controlled by the candidate, campaign manager, or any other authority. They will do whatever they wish in support of the candidate of their choice.

There is a vast difference, however, between such isolated instances of misconduct and obviously orchestrated anti-social behavior.

The behavior of the College Republicans at the third debate was pathetic.

Mr. Hopkins, do you honestly believe your own letter, defending — in anticipation of assault — the rudeness of your group? You may call shouting obscenities, frantically waving your placards in the face of, and collectively pretending to read newspapers while your opponent takes his opportunity to speak, initiating "verbal support."

"The proper terminology is "heckling."

Democrat supporters who had enough of Professor Kelley's complacency in regard to these actions taken by your group, apparently on his behalf, and having heard enough of his conservative demagoguery, walked out in silent protest.

I, Mr. Hopkins, made an error in believing that one could calmly approach your group and respectfully submit a complaint regarding your collective misconduct. Clearly, your behavior during the debate demonstrated that none of you were equipped to participate in a thoughtful discussion of civilized behavior at public events.

By the way, we're curious. Are you the cool-headed fellow who leaped over a row of chairs to confront me?

My complaint lodged, Mr. Hopkins, I walked away as any intelligent Democrat would from a wild-eyed Republican with no ground to stand on.—Andrew J. Leighton, president, SIU-C College Democrats.

Open parking makes for punctuality

Now that the idea of a campus bus service has been pushed back to well beyond most current students' graduation date, and probably the current century, it is time to come up with a solution to the parking problems that we are encountering now.

Obviously, building more parking spaces would not only cost the University millions of dollars that could better be used on improving the education given here at SIU-C, but much of the aesthetic quality of the campus that everyone is so proud of. Therefore, a solution must not only be practical and cheap, but non-destructive as well. There is a solution, however.

The current blue-red-yellow-green lots would be kept as is until 9 a.m. At this time, all lots, including the coveted blue which are often less than three-quarters full, would be open to all cars with valid SIU-C parking decals. The primary benefit of such a plan is cost. It would cost next to nothing to implement. In fact, even the loss of revenue from parking tickets would be partially offset by the reduction in number of "ticket-givers."

Furthermore, this would mean that a new age of punctuality would dawn on SIU-C. Employees would have to be on time, or risk having to walk a mile or so to work. And students would not be late to class because some other "vehicular vulture" grabbed the spot they were waiting for.

Finally, it would keep more employees on campus, (revenue for the Student Center dining areas) and insure that professors might be in their offices when they are needed.

Although it may give civil service workers and instructors a slight edge over students, it may just bring the employees down to earth enough to realize that without students, they would not be needed. And students would concede that being such a worker deserves some benefits.—Jeffery A. Baker, sophomore, computer science.

Greenpeace protests landfill

Greenpeace, the Coalition for Health Concern and supporters marched last weekend in Calvert City, Ky., to protest a toxic waste incinerator and a landfill.

According to an article appearing in the Greenpeace bimonthly, Calvert City is a center for about nine major industries that produce about three-quarters of the hazardous waste in the Tennessee Valley.

The incinerator and a landfill, set up by Liquid Waste Disposal, disposes of industrial waste from the area and some that is trucked in from about 40 other states.

The march stopped at several of the industries and left a trail of Greenpeace posters along a 100-yard fence expressing the group's concerns, Elizabeth Braam, executive director of the Great Lakes region of Greenpeace, said.

About 300 to 400 people participated in the march that ended at the Liquid Waste Disposal plant.

Greenpeace is an environmental organization interested in preserving the environment of the earth and endangered species.

By voting for a temporary surcharge instead of a tuition increase, Pettit said, "We're putting ourselves at a considerable disadvantage. I don't know the extent to which our students want high quality (education)...but it may cost a bit more."

Board members continually stressed SIU's tuition would remain the fourth highest of Illinois public universities, while maintaining its status as the "second jewel in the state's crown." The University of Illinois is generally considered the most prestigious public university in Illinois.

However, student representatives protested that students could not take advantage of what they cannot pay for.

"Several of these arguments (from board members) are directed at our supposed commitment to students who can't afford" the tuition increase, SIU-C student trustee Darrell Johnson said. Johnson, who has only an advisory vote on the board, voted against the tuition increase, and presented an amendment in favor of a 12 percent surcharge.

The amendment failed when only Johnson and Kim Blakenship, SIU-E student trustee, voted for the amendment.

But Blakenship was one student representative who was not in complete agreement about the harmful effects of a tuition increase. After seconding and voting for Johnson's amendment Blakenship voted for the tuition increase in the next motion.

"In my view the state doesn't recognize the difference between a surcharge and an increase," she said.

Blakenship said the board should be looking for ways to keep from increasing tuition in the future.

Prior to the general board meeting, the finance committee passed a motion recommending the tuition increase 2-1 with Johnson voting against it.

Susan Ford, chairperson of the Graduate Council, said she is in favor of the tuition increase because of the lack of money coming from the state.

Ford said the board could "roll back" a tuition increase as easily as they could end a surcharge.

Pettit said "The state (by not approving a tax increase last summer) is forcing us...from a fair price charged for students to (tuition being) a source of revenue."

It's a "rock bottom" tuition increase, Pettit said.

Trudy Hale, Graduate and Professional Student Council president, said medical students contacted her and said their futures might be jeopardized by the $2,149 increase per academic year.

Hale, along with SIU-E's student body president, supported a tuition surcharge.

SIU-C President John C. Guyon did not comment during the half-hour discussion on the tuition increase.

SIU-E student pleads case on tuition increase to Board

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

SIU-E student Chris Ripperda stood before the Board of Trustees finance committee Thursday with tears filling her eyes as she absorbed the words of board member William Norwood.

"You get what you pay for," he said in response to an accusation by student trustee Darrell Johnson that raising tuition destroys the University's commitment to accessibility.

Ripperda took a deep breath and pleaded to the committee with a trembling voice, "You don't get what you can't pay for and if I can't afford the lowest tuition in the state, then where do I go?"

Ripperda was among several students who spoke to the committee, but was the only student not affiliated with student government.

"I decided I kept my mouth shut long enough," she said.

The senior in English said although she is close to graduating, the next two tuition checks will be painful ones to write.

As an undergraduate student, Ripperda will be paying an additional $246.20 for spring semester.

The committee passed the 18.3 percent tuition increase by a 2-1 vote and the board adopted the resolution by an 8-1 vote. Student trustee Darrell Johnson voted against the increase on both occasions.

"For a lot of us in the middle ground, money will be running tight," she said.

Ex-Cadet clinging to old values, Bush

Editor's note: The St. Louis Post-Dispatch recently sent its reporters around the country to gather interviews with ordinary voters who will help choose the next president. This is one story in a series.

By Charlotte Grimes
St. Louis Post-Dispatch

LEXINGTON, Va. — As a freshman "rat" scurrying around the fortress-like campus of the Virginia Military Institute here, Bill Klobus was struck by the school's devotion to certain qualities: discipline, stability, order, leadership.

That was more than a quarter-century ago. Now, back for the 25th reunion of the Class of 1963, Klobus thinks in the same terms about this year's presidential election.

"You have to keep a country or a boat on an even keel," says Klobus, an avid sailor. "You can't have erratic changes in policy every four to eight years and expect things to function."

SO, COME Nov. 8, he will be voting for stability and order in the person of the Republican candidate, George Bush — even though he disdains Bush's choice for vice president, Indiana Sen. Dan Quayle, as "very unattractive."

As Klobus, 47, talks about the election, the reunion atmosphere here around him is rich in reminders of his time here — throbbing sounds of Marvin Gaye hits, the cultural cadence of the early '60s; cadets in once-Confederate gray.

Tall, blond, son of a New York sea captain, Klobus — despite his Yankee roots and accent — is typical of much of this class and this school. Founded in 1839 with the help of a former officer of Napoleon's artillery, the Virginia Military Institute's beige, crenelated buildings hunker atop steep granite mountains in western Virginia. Its heritage is conservative and full of romanticized anachronisms.

THIS IS not a career-officer factory, like West Point. The model here is Cincinnatus, the "citizen-soldier," about 80 percent of its graduates, like the members of the Class of '63, finish their obligatory two-year military tours and become lawyers, doctors, real estate brokers, businessmen. Klobus owns a roofing company on Long Island.

Yet this is also the school of "Stonewall" Jackson, "Chesty" Puller and George C. Marshall. George Patton spent a year here before defecting to West Point. Jackson, who fell for the Confederacy at Chancellorsville, Va., is buried here. In another Virginia Civil War battle, at New Market, Va., gray-clad VMI cadets marched 60 miles from their school to turn back Union forces — winning for their heirs a prized battle flag.

TODAY, BLACK, white and Asian-American cadets stride out of Jackson Arch. Distinctively, VMI — state-supported and with heavy federal subsidies — remains an all-male bastion.

Freshmen here are called "rats." Chins tucked, shoulders braced, ramrod stiff, they march fearfully in what is known as the "ratline." The freshman year is known for its physical and psychological hazing intended to weed out the unsuited. Survivors are bound together by the ratline's shared hardship; a classmate becomes forever a "Brother Rat" — also the name of a 1938 movie about VMI starring, aptly, Ronald Reagan.

THIS ONE-TIME Rebel redoubt is now a Republican one. Bush-Quayle posters adorn the cadet coffee shop. Klobus, who served in Vietnam, frowns at the mention of Quayle, who joined the National Guard and avoided combat service in that war. "I would not want as a potential commander-in-chief," he says, "somebody who in a time of conflict seeks refuge in any safe haven."

The Class of 1963 was on the cusp of eras. They came to VMI under Eisenhower. They marched at the head of Kennedy's inaugural parade. Many fought in "Johnson's war." This was the last VMI class of the Vietnam era touched lightly by that war. Only one of its 180 members died there.

New going into middle-age — many balding, nurturing paunches, only a few still cadet-slim — they look to the future, warily, for security in what they have. And by their Republicanism, many, like Klobus, see themselves as preserving the values they learned here as rats.

TO KLOBUS, the important items for the next president are drugs, crime and the Soviet Union. His wife, Sieglinde, was born in Czechoslovakia and spent part of her childhood at the end of World War II in a concentration camp run by the conquering Russians. The Klobuses do not trust the Soviets. Glasnost, says Bill Klobus, is "the Trojan horse of the 20th century."

To quell crime and drugs, Klobus wants severe penalties, like confiscating all of a drug dealer's property. Bush, Klobus says, is "qualified" to fight those ills.

ASSIGNMENT AFRICA:

TAME A RUNAWAY DESERT IN NIGER.

Runaway deserts are threatening tropical forests into extinction. Peace Corps Volunteers are needed in 44 countries to help restore natural resources. In the Peace Corps you will develop professional skills in a broad range of forestry techniques including dune stabilization, agroforestry, nursery management, forestry management, etc. You will make technical and management decisions far greater than you would be offered in a starting position in the United States. International firms and government agencies acknowledge and value skills mastered during Peace Corps service. For example, former Peace Corps Volunteers are on staff at most of the 155 U.S. Forest Service forests.

missile takes eight to 10 years. Dukakis also said he opposes the death penalty, while Bush said he supports it, and each said the other would be likely to raise taxes.

Bush also defended his choice of Sen. Dan Quayle, R Ind., 41, as his vice presidential running mate, an issue that has dogged the Republicans since Quayle was picked and emerged again last week when Quayle debated his Democratic counterpart, Lloyd Bentsen.

"I have confidence in him," Bush said. "And I have never seen such an unfair pounding of a young senator. I have never seen a campaign where the presidential candidate has campaigned against the vice presidential candidate."

In response, Dukakis said he picked Sen. Lloyd Bentsen of Texas for his vice presidential candidate because he was the "best qualified man" for the post.

The two candidates also repeated their differences on abortion. Bush opposes abortions except in cases of incest or when the life of the mother is threatened. Dukakis, who supports abortion, said the issue was "who makes the decision. It has to be the woman." On taxes, Dukakis said he wants to get the Internal Revenue Service to do a better job collecting taxes. Bush said he thinks the economic expansion will continue and new taxes will not be necessary.

"I want to keep expansion going and I don't want to kill it off with taxes. I won't do that." Bush also pledged not to a planned tax cut "unless you fund the Social Security trust fund."

On the death penalty — prompted by a question to Dukakis in which he was asked whether he would favor the death penalty if his wife were raped and murdered — Dukakis said, "I've opposed the death penalty. I don't see any evidence it's a deterrent. There are better and more effective ways to deal with violent crime."

Dukakis was asked if he would vow to balance the budget within a four-year term. He said he could not make that promise, but said his goal would be a "steady, gradual reduction in deficit... which will require tough choices on spending, good, steady economic growth and require us to go out and collect billions and billions of taxes owed and not being paid."

Dukakis did not rule out raising taxes but said it would be "grossly unfair" to impose taxes on working Americans when so many taxes are going unpaid.

Bush countered that as governor of Massachusetts, Dukakis had balanced his state's budget only because he was required to do so by law.

Bush and Dukakis maintained their basic positions on defense spending. The vice president said America's arsenal can be modernized within proper spending limits. The Massachusetts governor said his opponent's math "does not add up" because the nation, he said, cannot afford all the weapons Bush proposes. Bush blamed Congress for choices" about the defense budget.

The debate heated up when both candidates discussed their postures on Social Security, an issue that could sway millions of elderly voters.

Bush said Social Security was not "created as a welfare program," but as a "supplement to retirement."

"I don't want to fool around with it," Bush said. He acknowledged that he supported freezing annual cost of living increases for Social Security recipients in 1985, and conceded that the administration made a serious mistake. He asserted that Dukakis, at a national governor's conference, had also favored a freeze in cost of living increases.

Dukakis responded by saying "George Bush a few years ago said Social Security was basically a welfare program."

"The reason we raise concerns... is because Republicans, once they're elected, go in there and start cutting" Social Security, Dukakis said, adding he was convinced Bush "will do it again."

The vice president said America's arsenal can be modernized within proper spending limits.

The Massachusetts governor said the nation cannot afford all the weapons Bush proposes.

USG calls meeting for funding

By Brad Bushaw Staff Writer

An emergency meeting was called Wednesday by the Undergraduate Student Government senate when four members of the Committee for Internal Affairs left the meeting to prevent 59 executive appointments from being approved.

When four committee members left the USG meeting Wednesday, the remaining senate members could not continue the meeting because they no longer had quorum. This left several Registered Student Organizations without funding approval.

The committee prevented the approval of bills to fund 11 RSOs with nearly $15,000. The emergency meeting, USG President Bill Hail said, is primarily to complete the business of approving the funds for the RSOs.

Hail said the committee completely disregarded RSO funding requests.

Hail said the committee presented a bill to reduce the 59 appointments to 15 after personal interviews were conducted Oct. 6 and some appointees did not attend.

When the senate rejected their proposal, "the committee erroneously used parliamentary procedure to halt the good work of the majority."

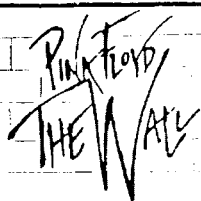

USG chief of staff Brian Skinner said the committee is not following constitutional rules. It is in a power struggle with the senate — trying to manipulate the USG by restricting executive-appointed positions.

Skinner said the committee was given the right to recommend appointments for senate approval, but its members were overstepping their boundaries by grilling the appointees.

Student finally sees dad

By Richard Goldstein
Staff Writer

Shortly after 5 p.m. Thursday, Wanda Hall sat in her Thompson Point dorm room. "I'm hungry," she said, and laughed nervously.

Wanda was waiting for her father who had just called to say he was coming from the Ramada Inn. He had traveled from Livingston, Mont. to visit her.

Waiting for dad is not that big a deal for most people, but for this 18-year-old freshman in pre-law it will be the first time she and her father have met face-to-face.

"I'm excited," Wanda said. "It's going to be great."

Wanda said she has been writing letters and exchanging pictures with her father, Jerry Kiger, since August. "I talked with him on the phone right before I came down here (to Carbondale)."

But until August, Wanda said, Jerry Kiger didn't know he had a daughter.

"I'm a surprise," she said. Wanda's father attended the University in 1965 and 1966 where he met her mother.

Wanda said her mother told her father, but her father doesn't remember being told.

Mildred Shelton, a former social worker at the Massac County Mental Health and Family Counseling Center, tracked Jerry down after Wanda's request.

Shelton said it took her three months to find him. When she finally contacted him and told him his daughter was looking for him "he was shocked."

Wanda Hall, freshman in pre-law from Metropolis, meets her father, Jerry Kiger, face-to-face for the first time Thursday evening at Baldwin Hall.

"Later on he called me back within a couple of days and wanted to talk to me," Shelton said. This was in July. By August, Wanda had talked to her father on the phone.

Wanda said she has been writing letters and exchanging pictures with her father since August.

"It makes me feel good as a counselor," she said. Shelton said she had never found "a parent that didn't know about the child."

When Jerry Kiger arrived at the front of Baldwin Hall and rang Wanda to come down and open the door, he commented, "This is different."

Father and daughter embraced when she came out of the door while other dorm residents squealed with pleasure.

"We were almost crying," one resident said later.

When the two got up to her dorm room, Wanda showed her father her photo albums.

"This is my Aunt Wanda, where I got my name," she said.

in the building they occupied.

Two members of the sqw 4 and Carbondale Police officers entered the house and prepared to take the devices to the city's industrial park.

Officers placed the devices in a city dump truck filled with sand. Soon after 5 p.m., the truck left the scene escorted by several police cars, fire department vehicles and an ambulance.

The devices were detonated at 6 p.m. in a large field in the city's industrial park, two-and-a-half miles north of Carbondale on Route 51.

Police believe one device was a partially assembled explosive device without any explosives. When the other device was blown apart, police discovered it contained a large sum of cash in 10s and 20s. The currency was dated from the early 1930s, police said.

The investigation into the incident is continuing, police said.

The fire began after a resident, Stan Wright, started a fire in a wood stove. Wright said he started the fire in the stove at 2:30 a.m.

Subway Sandwiches sinks

No warning given to employees prior to closing

By Phyllis Coon and Brad Bushue Staff Writers

Twelve Subway Sandwiches and Salads employees arrived to work Tues. Sept. 4 to find they no longer had a job, an employee said.

"The employees, not even the manager knew what was happening," Lynne Brumbaugh, an employee trainer, said.

Things started getting unusual on the weekend of Sept. 29, Brumbaugh said.

"The corporation came down and we had a half-price sale over the weekend," Brumbaugh said.

"On Tuesday morning at 2 a.m. when the store closes they started giving away things that didn't belong to the corporation like plants and staplers."

On Tuesday the corporation had arranged a meeting with the employees, but the corporation didn't show, Brumbaugh said.

"I don't know what happened," Brumbaugh said. "I don't know if they panicked at the situation or what."

Subway Sandwiches and Salads is a franchise with offices in Connecticut and Colorado, she said. The store in Carbondale was owned by Network Crossroads Unlimited Inc., Brumbaugh said.

"The people who own the Carbondale stores are the ones screwing us over," Brumbaugh said. "They still owe us four weeks in pay. They were always bad at paying us."

Because of financial troubles at the store, employees didn't know when they were getting paid, she said.

"When we were paid it would be in cash because when we got paid by check it would bounce," Brumbaugh said.

Employees at the store have contacted Rose Nevels at the Department of Labor at the Federal Building in Carbondale, she said.

"Rose is working to get our pay," she said. "But it looks like the owners have flown off the face of the earth."

Nevels is threatening to sue the corporation for the back pay, Brumbaugh said.

"Rose has talked to an accountant of the owners who is doing paper work so we can get paid," Brumbaugh said. "But the accountant won't finish the paper work until his retainer is paid. If they're not willing to pay him who knows what we'll have to go through."

Brumbaugh said the owners are acting like they're cooperating, but they always say two more days, which always turns into two more months.

"Turnover at the store was so fast because of the University community," Brumbaugh said. "We had a whole new crop at least once a month. I stayed at the store so long because I was 'insane'. But I didn't want to leave because I had so much seniority."

The employees weren't the only people the store owed money to, Brumbaugh said.

"A manager and I estimated one night that the store owed as much as $70 to 75,000," Brumbaugh said. "They owed the Central Illinois Power Service and several food distributors. There was no reason for that store to be that deep in debt. The store pulled in plenty of money."

The store's utilities were turned off at one time, she said.

Brumbaugh said she has heard several rumors from the corporation as to what is happening at the store, but has been unable to get the truth.

"But if they are doing something illegal I hope they are put behind bars," Brumbaugh said.

Corporation could reopen local store

By Phyllis Coon and Brad Bushue Staff Writers

The note on the door of Subway Sandwiches and Salads, in the Grand Avenue Mall, gave little more information than an address to forward mail, but there were the names of two local attorneys.

"I'm not at liberty to say what is happening with the local Subway Sandwiches and Salads store," Rebecca Whittington, of Feirich Schoen Mager Green, said. "But litigation will be filed next week."

After the litigation is filed Whittington said she can release more information.

The firm is representing the national corporation, which is filing a suit against a group of local people, Whittington said.

"I can't release any of the names," Whittington said.

Whittington confirmed Sept. 3 as the last day Subway Sandwiches and Salads was open.

"It closed very abruptly and the employees were unaware of what was happening," Whittington said. It is likely that the national corporation will reopen the store, she said.

"The corporation is searching for new owners," Whittington said.

Record imports boost trade deficit to $12 billion

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Record imports kicked the U.S. trade deficit back into double digits in August, up to $12.2 billion, the Commerce Department said Thursday, and Democrats lost no time in making the report a political issue.

On Capitol Hill, Democratic vice presidential candidate Lloyd Bentsen of Texas said the new trade figures illustrate the Reagan administration's failure to develop a tough trade policy.

"It makes our point," he said. "It's just obvious this country does not have a trade policy. They have not made trade a priority for our country. They have just turned the other cheek."

Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd said the figures showed that "we have not solved our trade problems" and added, "The long awaited light at the end of the tunnel has turned out to be an onrushing freight train loaded with imported goods."

But White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater, citing a "continually rising level of exports," chose to interpret the figures as good news and said, "The fact remains that the trade deficit in the last year has dropped by more than $30 billion."

So far this year the trade gap has reached $92.3 billion and if it continues at this rate for the rest of the year will total $138.5 billion, an improvement over the $170.3 billion of 1987 but a far cry from the days of a trade surplus.

August imports were a record $39.7 billion, up from $36 billion in July, while exports rose only slightly to $27.5 billion, the department's Census Bureau said.

Plummeting imports dramatically improved the July merchandise trade deficit from $13.2 billion in June to a seasonally adjusted $9.5

billion, the lowest monthly figure since $8 billion in December 1984.

Hugh Johnson, chief investment analyst with First Albany Corp., called the report a disappointment.

"Generally people were expecting something in the order of $10 billion to $11 billion and were hopeful and wishing it wouldn't be $12 billion," he said, adding that the high deficit figure "puts downward pressure both on the dollar and the bond market."

"The Federal Reserve doesn't have the room to lower interest rates and to ease monetary policy," Johnson said. "The road to lower interest rates ... is simply not going to be smooth."

C. Fred Bergsten, director of the Institute for International Economics, said the new trade figures confirm that current economic policies simply are not adequate to end the trade deficit.

Even further devaluation of the dollar, which makes U.S. goods cheaper and imports more expensive, will not be able to cut the trade deficit to below $100 billion a year, Bergsten said.

"What's needed now more than ever before are changes in domestic policy," he said.

Officials conduct massive Jamaican drug gang arrests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal and local authorities Thursday conducted a massive nationwide sweep against 435 members of so-called Jamaican drug posses in what Attorney General Dick Thornburgh called a "major breakthrough" against "urban terrorism."

In a news conference in Washington, Thornburgh announced the arrests of more than 120 people with a total of 435 expected in about 20 major metropolitan areas and the District of Columbia.

"These arrests on charges of (cocaine) crack trafficking and firearms violations leading to urban terrorism identified with the Jamaican posses represent a major cooperative effort and a major breakthrough," Thornburgh told reporters.

In U.S. District Court in Miami, an indictment — which included murder charges — named 34 members of the "Shower" posse that operates in south Florida.

Stephen Higgins, director of the Treasury Department's Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, called the Shower gang "the largest, most violent" of the Jamaican narcotics and firearms trafficking gangs.

Authorities said the Jamaican posses in the past year were involved in more than 700 narcotics-related homicides and more than 1,400 slayings in the past 3 and a half years.

Higgins said a total of 435 arrest warrants were being executed, with the largest number of arrests being sought in Houston, followed by Miami and New York. A total of 76 search warrants also had been issued.

Higgins said the sweeps began at 8 p.m. Wednesday. Also confiscated in the arrests were 45 handguns and three sawed-off shotguns.

Federal authorities said Jamaican posses have staked out a large piece of the nation's drug and firearms trafficking and allegedly are involved with kidnapping, robberies, assaults, domestic and international gun trafficking, money laundering and fraud.

Higgins said that according to statistics from the Drug Enforcement Administration, Jamaican organized crime posses are involved in 40 percent of the cocaine "crack" trafficking in the United States.

Singer's wife frees jailed poor woman

MANCHESTER, Tenn. (UPI) — The wife of Grand Ole Opry star Little Jimmy Dickens paid $2,500 to free the mother of two young children who had been jailed 99 days because she didn't have enough money to post the bail in a worthless check case.

"I am happy, very happy, but I am nervous," a tearful Lydia Roberts, 36, of Nashville, said as she left the Coffee County Jail Wednesday night for a reunion with her children, mother and sister.

Roberts, 36, of Nashville had not seen her children since July 6 when she was jailed by Circuit Judge Gerald Ewell. The judge sentenced Roberts to three years' probation for passing two worthless checks for $2,106 provided she serve 48 hours in jail and make restitution. But he ordered her to post $2,500 bail in case she failed to make restitution.

Mora Dickens, wife of the country music singer, pulled up in front of the jail Wednesday night in a black limousine, then went inside and paid the bail in cash to free Roberts. Dickens said she and her husband learned of Roberts' plight in the newspaper.

Panel of historians reports kids aren't grasping subject

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

Cave man to spaceman. Many history courses fly through yesterday's events, but a panel of historians said the curriculum doesn't require enough from students.

The Bradley Commission on History in Schools called for required history studies for all students, including kindergartners.

But many students in kindergarten are unable to grasp such detailed information, Marilyn Sanders, a teacher at the early childhood center at Glendale School, said.

"Half of them know such everyday details as where they live, but further topical details may be vague," Sanders said.

When historical information is needed it is integrated into another topic being taught, Sanders said.

"The students were out for Columbus Day, but they may not know why," she said. "We can teach them who Columbus was and use the globe to show them where we are talking about, but it's too much for them if we go any further in detail."

"The students were out for Columbus Day, but they may not know why."

—Marilyn Sanders

Other calendar events that Sanders teaches her students history through include president's birthdays and other patriotic holidays.

"When it's appropriate we teach history," Sanders said. "It's not in-depth like in the upper grades though."

The panel described current courses as "seriously inadequate in both quantity and quality."

In the Carbondale school system, students take history courses each year from first through ninth grade, Jane Charles, guidance counselor at Lincoln Junior High School, said.

"In the first grade the history course starts out with things in the community like the farm and the city," Charles said. "The course content progresses into other areas each year."

The schools follow the Illinois Office of Education guideline that a certain amount of the school day must be spent in historical studies, Charles said.

"But the guideline doesn't specify between historical studies or social studies," Charles said.

Students at Lincoln Junior High School are required to take a two-year history course, which covers history up to the Civil War in the seventh grade and through the Civil War to modern times in the eighth grade, she said.

"Building a History Curriculum," the panel's report said that at least 50 percent of current students are not studying either world history or Western civilization.

Enough history courses are offered to students at Carbondale High Schools, Diane Daniels, guidance counselor at Carbondale High School East, said.

"Students have a choice of history or social studies electives they can take other than required courses," Daniels said. "It's difficult for students to take all the courses that colleges require today much less take an extra elective."

If the high school offered more history courses Daniels said students probably wouldn't be able to fill them.

"We can always add classes," Daniels said. "We just have to have enough students, enough classrooms and enough teachers."

Juniors are required to take a one-year course of American history and seniors are required to take a one-year course of American government, Daniels said.

Last day for bank in mall

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

The Bank of Carbondale will close its facility at the University Mall today at 3 p.m. after more than 10 years of service.

Clark Davis, vice president of public relations, said the bank was closing its facility at the University Mall because of the limited services it provided.

"There was no bank officer there to provide bank loans," he said. "The financial consultant services were limited."

In response to the closing of the mall facility, the main branch, at 216 E. Main, will extend its drive-up hours, effective Saturday, to 6 p.m. Monday through Thursday, and until 7 p.m. Friday. The drive-up will be open 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday.

Scott Frisch, a bank employee, said the closing may present an inconvenience to mall shoppers who use the facility to cash checks or make deposits. He said the limited services offered there sometimes made customer service difficult.

William Whitson, president of the Bank of Carbondale, said the closing would not effect the bank employees at the University Mall.

Davis said the consolidation made it possible for the bank to provide better service at the main branch.

Fraternity working for senior citizens

By Kimberly Clarke
Staff Writer

Deciding to spread some goodwill around Carbondale, Craig Maddox, philanthropy chairman of Tau Kappa Epsilon, initiated a program for senior citizens.

"Simple jobs that the older people aren't able to do, we can help them with," Maddox said.

Fliers were put up at the Jackson County Senior Citizen Services, 409 N. Springer, informing those in need of services that the members of the Tau Kappa Epsilon fraternity can do odd jobs free of cost.

"We think it is fantastic because some are no longer capable of doing some of the work because of health reasons," John S. Holmes, social service outreach worker at the service center, said.

Interested senior citizens fill out forms, and Maddox contacts them, inquiring about the type of job and what tools are needed.

Hockey team plays SW Mo. today at Stehr

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

After the field hockey team was handed a 2-0 defeat by St. Louis last week, Coach Julee Illner has searched for the secret to turning things around and halting the three game losing streak.

"I wish we had a secret ingredient," Illner said, "because we played relatively well against St. Louis. We had our chances early on. We had spurts where we dominated."

The Salukis will get plenty of opportunities to get back on track as they play four home games in the next three days.

Two of the opponents have already been beaten by the 3-9 Salukis this season.

The first game is at 4 p.m. today against Southwest Missouri. The Salukis beat the Bears 3-0 on Sept. 3 behind goals by Cindy Oppermann, Jenny Cordes and Julie Mayor.

Since that game, Oppermann has emerged as the team's scoring leader.

The Salukie play Eastern Kentucky at 1:30 p.m. Saturday, then take on Bellarmine and Louisville starting at 10 a.m. Sunday.

SLEEP, from Page 28

Stadium parking lots — The theme tailgate party competition starts early. Prizes will be awarded for the tailgates with the best Saluki spirit.

Field hockey vs. Eastern Kentucky, 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Stehr Field — The Salukis lost to Eastern Kentucky 3-0 last season, but have a 6-4-1 series advantage.

Football vs. Indiana State, 1:30 p.m. Saturday at McAndrew Stadium — Coach Rick Rhoades is trying to turn things around after the team took a 31 point drubbing by Eastern Illinois.

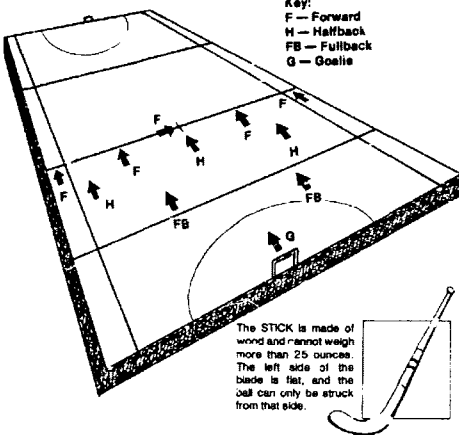

Volleyball vs. Southwest Missouri, 4:30 p.m. Saturday at Davies Gymnasium — Southwest Missouri is coached by Linda Dollar, the winningest coach in women's volleyball with 611 career victories. The Bears were ranked No. 1 in the conference poll of coaches.

Field hockey vs. Bellarmine (10 a.m.) and Louisville (2 p.m.) Sunday at Stehr Field — The hectic sports weekend concludes. This is the first meeting with Bellarmine this season, but the Salukis did defeat Louisville earlier in the season 2-1.

Spectator's guide to field hockey

The FIELD is 100 yards long, 60 yards wide. Lines are marked every 25 yards. The striking circle is a circumference of 15 yards from the goal. The GAME is divided into two 35 minute periods.

HOW THE PLAYERS LINE UP

The job of the five FORWARDS is to advance the ball upfield and attempt to score. Stickwork and passing are primary skills.

The three HALFBACKS switch from offense to defense. Speed and stamina are essential because they cover the widest expanse of the field.

The two FULLBACKS are mainly defensive players. They try to stop the advance of the ball before it reaches the striking circles.

The GOALKEEPER is the last line of defense. She must defend the goal, or cage, which is 4 yards across and 7 feet high.

Tennis feels positive about league chances

By Megan Hauck
Staff Writer

The women's tennis team will wrap up its fall season this weekend in St. Louis at the Gateway Fall Invitational, and the Salukis are going into it with a positive outlook.

"Overall, we have the potential to do real well," Coach Judy Auld said. "Everyone has a chance to be at the top of their bracket. It's just going to depend on the luck of the draw."

The draw will consist of seven singles brackets and three doubles brackets, none of which will be seeded.

The Salukis, minus Maria Coch, will compete in the top six singles. Coch, a senior, was injured in a bicycle accident last week.

"It's a disappointment for her," Auld said, "she ended up winning the championship of the No. 6 flight last year, and she had the potential to finish high in the No. 5 flight this year."

"I anticipate she'll be back for the spring, but the spring season is all dual meets."

Coch is receiving treatment for a sprained neck and post-concussion symptoms. Her absence will allow Julie Burgess, a senior who saw most of the action at the No. 7 spot, to fill in at No. 6.

Auld said the individual tournament will be a chance to watch conference rivals Wichita, Drake and Indiana State — teams the Salukis haven't competed against this fall and won't see until the spring.

The Salukis will get a two-week break from practice after the tournament in St. Louis.

"We really cut back on practice because we're getting close to finals then," Auld said.

Lineups

"Both of our tailbacks run pretty well. They are very similar players in that they do not really break away."

The Sycamore offense is run by junior quarterback John Sahn. Sahn has yet to play a full season with Indiana State — he had hamstring and knee problems as a freshman and ankle problems last fall.

"This is the first year we have had him this far into the season, knock on wood," Raetz said. "He is right where we want him to be — on the field. So much of what we do revolves around what he does."

"He is not hurt right now, but when you have a medical history like his it is always weak to week."

Sahn is second in the conference in passing with a rating of 121.2, but is also second in the league with eight interceptions.

"Generally, he has had no difficulty throwing the ball in general," Raetz said. "The interceptions have come a few times at the end of a half or on a deep play when there is thorough defensive coverage."

The Sycamores' do have depth at quarterback, as senior Kyle Frondorf has seen plenty of action with Sham injured so often.

"If Sahn is there, then he is No. 1," Raetz said. "We like to think we have a good backup. Actually, Frondorf has taken more snaps the past two years."

A third staple in Raetz's offense is receiver Steve Ehringer. The junior has racked up 436 yards on 23 receptions. He leads the conference with an average of 4.6 yards per reception.

Volleyball set for Wichita

By Lisa Warne
Staff Writer

The women's volleyball team will face Wichita State in its first Gateway Conference match at 7 tonight in Davies Gymnasium.

Wichita State coach Phil Shoemaker is in a good mood even though some of his players are injured.

"We have some bumps and bruises, but we'll be able to play," Shoemaker said.

Starting setter Kari James has a stress fracture in her hand. The No. 2 setter, Yuchyi Yang, has a broken hand, though she still might play because her cast is not rigid. A third setter, Janet Hartly, has a broken leg.

The Salukis play Southwest Missouri at 4:30 p.m. Saturday.

Walk-on tryouts set for basketball

The men's basketball team will have walk-on tryouts at 8:30 p.m. Monday at the Arena. Call coach Rich Herrin for more information.

Men runners set for District championships are what we are working toward all season long," he said. "The meets before (the championships) are more or less primers to get us ready for conference."

Beauchem attended high school in Byron, Illinois, where he ran track and cross country. He also played basketball and football his first two years.

"I started running cross country in junior high," Beauchem said. "My junior year (high school) I started getting serious about running so I quit football and basketball to concentrate on running."

That move paid off for Beauchem who set a record in the mile at Byron High School (4:16.9) — a record which still stands. He was also third in the state in cross country and second in the mile his senior year.

Beauchem, a recreation management major, is now using his running talents in both track and cross country for SIU-C, where he won the 3,000-meter steeplechase race at the 1987 MVC outdoor track championships, and placed 24th at the MVC cross country championships last year.

Beauchem, selected as the team leader, also plays mediator at times. He said it's not unusual for him to joke around before a race or at sometime when the team least expects it.

"It's not unusual for me, when it seems I should be most serious, to come up with a joke or two," Beauchem said. "Then there are other times that I am the one who has to get serious when everyone else is joking around."

Beauchem said though he jokes around sometimes before a race, it often takes something extra to prepare for the race.

"Other times I'll have to look around for something to make me mad," he said. "That will usually get me ready to race."

But when it comes down to the big one, the conference championships, Beauchem said "it's all business."

"I'm totally serious when it comes to the conference," he said. "I'd like to finish in the top five in the conference championships this year. To do so, I'll have to run my best race ever."

Beauchem said when he first came to SIU-C it was tough for him to adjust to the rigorous training plan that coach Bill Cornell required.

"When I was a freshman I ran terribly," Beauchem said. "Coach probably should have cut me, but he didn't. I was surprised that he gave me another chance."

Beauchem said since then he has had the utmost respect for his coach.

"That's really all coach asks for you to respect him," Beauchem said. "In turn he'll respect you. He is flexible and changes his program each year to build around the new group of athletes."

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

The men's cross country meet will be run Saturday in a rather unique setting, on a farm just outside of Champaign. The farm, formerly inhabited by University of Illinois coach Gary Weineke, is the planned site of the District IV championships.

Saluki coach Bill Cornell said the farm has been transformed into the home field of the U of I cross country team because of problems resulting from usual race locations.

"A lot of schools are trying to get away from running on golf courses," Cornell said. "The reason is the golfers and runners tend to get in each others way."

Cornell said even though the Salukis will compete at Iowa State in the District V meet, they entered the race anticipating a large number of team entries, with stiff competition.

"Originally I was told there would be a large number of teams participating," Cornell said. "But the deadline was Monday and as of right now only four teams are entered."

The four teams include the U of I, Iowa, Illinois State and SIU-C.

"The U of I coach expected teams to participate in the meet to get a preview of the course they would run on in the districts," Cornell said.

With only three other teams, it seems the Salukis might not have much competition, but Cornell said that is not the case. "Illinois is always tough, and Illinois State is our main competition from the Valley," Cornell said.

The Salukis will be looking to revenge an earlier loss to ISU in the Saluki Invitational, Cornell said.

"Right now it appears everything is falling into place for the team. Last week's meet at Murray State did my backup guys a world of good."

Cornell said this week he'll be running his first-string squad.

Indiana State boasts strong offense

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

Traditionally, Indiana State has had trouble with the wishbone offense, and Sycamore coach Dennis Raetz isn't expecting things to get any easier with the Salukis' style Saturday.

"We played it better (against Southwest Missouri), but not great," Raetz said. "Southern has a better idea on throwing the ball and a generally better concept of what to try."

The Sycamore defense is having its troubles. Indiana State is last in the Gateway in total defense, allowing 390.6 yards per game.

"Western Illinois threw the ball about 50 times against us, Eastern threw it about 40 times and Salem threw it about 46 times," Raetz said. "We are seeing an awful lot of throwing, and as a consequence, the team's yardage is increasing."

"Without question we could be playing better, but that accounts for it in some respects."

Raetz said the Sycamores will not necessarily be trying to stop the Salukis' offense.

"I don't know if you can ever shut down the wishbone unless you have superior personnel. We will try to contain it as best we can. They have a good mix of throwing and running the ball.

"We want to try and hold them up on pass defense. I don't know if our linebackers are as quick as their linebackers. Their quarterback last year gave us trouble because he was quicker than our linebackers."

The Salukis' defense will have the task of stopping the Gateway's leading rusher, Tori Vactor.

Vactor is averaging 106.8 yards per game on 84 carries, and is also leading the conference in scoring with 7.2 points per game.

ference in scoring with 7.2 points per game.

"He is really a great rusher and may be the best kick returner in the nation," Saluki coach Rick Rhoades said.

"We think he could improve," Raetz said. "He is a great blocker and he runs very hard, much like (Saluki Chuck) Harmke. He has adequate speed."

Raetz said Vactor and the Sycamores' other tailback, Ray Wallace, are big keys to Indiana State's offense.

Senior runner places team over himself

David Beauchem, senior captain of the men's cross country team, stresses the importance of a team effort in his sport as opposed to the individual glory sometimes present in other sports.

"The individual time we run doesn't matter as much as the place we finish in the race," Beauchem said. "We joke about beating each other, but our main goal is to finish ahead of as many athletes from the competing teams as we can."

Only the top five finishers from each team count in the final point tallies. This stresses the importance of a team concept rather than an individual's performance, Beauchem said.

"I finished as the No. 2 runner on the team in the Kentucky Invite," Beauchem said. "That is what's important. With (Jon) Dennis as the No. 1 runner, that will probably be my role the rest of the year (No. 2 runner)."

Beauchem said course conditions can greatly effect where you finish in the meet.

"Certain courses are tougher than others and the time you ran the week before sometimes carries little meaning to the next race."

After a slow start this year, Beauchem is now running the type of race he said he is capable of, and he is ready to help his team try to win the Missouri Valley Conference title.

Sleep unlikely during whirlwind sports fest

Saluki sports junkies: this one's for you.

A major promotion, football, basketball, volleyball and field hockey will provide round-the-clock action this weekend.

Saturday's football game against Indiana State is the centerpiece event.

Those die-hard fans interested in attending all the events had better catch up on their sleep now or have a supply of caffeine ready.

Personnel in the athletics department are already planning for brief intervals when they can sneak in a few hours of sleep.

Most likely time to catch up on sleep: 2 a.m. to 6 a.m. Saturday.

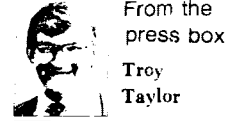

Four major athletics facilities on campus will be needed — McAndrew Stadium, the Arena, Davies Gymnasium and Stehr Field — requiring extensive administrative coordination.

Mike Perkins, assistant athletics director in charge of event management, will have his hands full.

"The key is being prepared far in advance, preparing your help and hoping for good weather," Perkins said.

Perkins' wife Sally, athletics trainer for female athletes, also will be spread thin. As the supervisor for student trainers, she must assign trainees and be at all events herself.

"There's a lot to coordinate," Mrs. Perkins said. "I'm in charge of ushers and first aid workers at football, and having trainers at all the events. I have to make sure the training room is open before competition and make sure there's enough ice and coolers to go around."

The demand for ice is the biggest problem in logistics, Mrs. Perkins said. Football, field hockey, volleyball and concessions all have demands for ice.

Game action starts today. Here is a schedule of events:

Field hockey vs. Southwest Missouri, 4 p.m. today at Stehr Field — Coach Julee Illner's team is looking to break a three-game losing streak. The Salukis (3-9) beat Southwest Missouri 3-0 in the season opener.

Volleyball vs. Wichita State, 7 p.m. today at Davies Gymnasium — This is the Gateway Conference opener for both teams. The Salukis (6-10) were picked by conference coaches to finish fifth in the standings. Wichita State is 15-8.

Men's basketball practice, 12:01 a.m., Saturday at the Arena — Coach Rich Herrin is getting an early start to the season. This is the earliest a team can practice according to NCAA regulations.
