Hands-on recruiting boosts enrollment

LEADERS: Colleges of mass communications and agriculture leading increase.

TRAVIS DeNEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

(Editor's note: This is part one of a four-part series analyzing recruitment and retention policies of the eight SIUC colleges in light of the University's overall increase in enrollment.)

SIUC's on-campus enrollment increased by 45 students this semester, stopping a decline in enrollment since 1992. This part of the series details the recruitment and retention policies of the two colleges whose enrollment increased the most this semester.

Although the College of Agriculture and the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts turned out a higher percentage increase in enrollment above all colleges this semester, administrators from both colleges say they do not plan to relax recruitment and retention strategies.

College of Agriculture enrollment rose from 870 in fall 1996 to 922 this semester, an increase of 52 students. College of Mass Communications and Media Arts' enrollment jumped from 932 to 1,020, a gain of 88 students.

Both colleges use similar strategies in recruiting and retaining students by using a more personalized approach.

The College of Agriculture has used the same procedures for recruiting and retaining students successfully for the past 12 years.

Robert Arthur, College of Agriculture associate dean for academic programs, said the college will continue the same approach with some variation.

"We basically have the same plan we've always used, and every year, except one in the past 12 years, we've increased the number of students enrolled in our college," he said.

Arthur said the personal attention his college gives to potential and enrolled students is the biggest factor in recruitment and retention.

"We visit about 100 high schools and about 20 community colleges [a year]," he said. "We write prospective students at least two letters, and after they apply and are accepted, we send them two more letters."

Arthur said the letters show the students that his college cares about the well-being of its students.

Joe Foote, dean of the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts, says his college's enrollment increase is the result of an intensive recruiting and retaining program in the past year.

The College of Mass Communications had the greatest percentage increase and actual increase in enrollment than all SIUC's colleges.

The college's cinema and photography program alone grew by 58 students, which

SIUC flight training helps save pilot's life

EMERGENCY LANDING: Student brings plane down safely after engine failure.

DONNA COLTER
DE NEWS EDITOR

Lessons an SIUC student learned in flight training helped her stay calm Sunday when she was forced to land a plane on partial engine power.

The plane landed safely at Southern Illinois Airport. Three SIUC students in the plane were on a return trip home from Chicago's Midway Airport.

Anitra Martina, a junior in aviation management and flight, was piloting the Cessna 172 Skyhawk when at 9:45 p.m., the engine lost partial power. The plane was traveling near Du Quoin off of U.S. Route 51.

The plane did not regain full engine power.

Sean Peirick, a senior in aviation management from Orland Park, was sitting in the right flight seat, while Martina was the pilot in command. Gary Willis, a friend of Martina's and junior in information systems technology from Deerfield, was in the back.

Martina said her training in the SIUC aviation program prepared her to deal with such an occurrence. She began flying in spring 1996, received her private license in June 1996 and has 205 hours of flight experience.

"When I touched the ground I was so happy," she said. "We made the right decision in the plane. I don't know what is wrong with the aircraft. The instructors said we did the right thing."

And even after the experience Sunday, Martina woke up Monday to go to a flight lesson at 7 a.m.

"It was a great experience," she said. "It is not going to deter me at all (from flying). The aviation field is a great field to be in."

NEIGHBORHOOD SHOPPING: Leslie Brown, of Carbondale, carefully inspects the merchandise Monday at The Neighborhood Co-op, 104 E. Jackson St.

Co-op provides grocery alternatives

KAREN BLATTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Instead of walking down narrow aisles with a minimal amount of groceries from which to choose, Rose Bender is able to shop in a fully stocked, brand-new Neighborhood Co-op.

"The new store is great," said Bender, a Carbondale resident and 10 year Neighborhood Co-op shopper. "It's not as crowded as it was before and is better organized."

The Neighborhood Co-op, a not-for-profit organization at 104 E. Jackson St., has been open in Carbondale for 10 years.

Two years ago, the board of directors decided to expand the store and add a bigger variety of products.

A Co-op is an organization owned by its members. All the profits coming into the store stay in the store. Co-ops offer a feeling of community to the members because everyone has an effect on the success of the store.

Even though a membership is not required to shop at the Co-op, there are 1,900 members who pay $5 for a year-long membership. There are about 25 paid positions, but most help is through volunteers.

Carrie Calhoun, a senior in zoology from Elmhurst, is a cashier and shopper at the Co-op.

"The Co-op is more relaxed," she said. "I feel like I'm supporting a smaller company. It gives me more of a feeling of community since I am away from home."

Toni Danhour, a cashier and buyer for the Co-op, said the quality of service is better than that of a large grocery store.

"The Co-op is much more personal," she said. "There's help available to find an item or even special order it. As a member you can volunteer to work in the

Housing owner's appeal denied

OUTCOME: Court's ruling may cause changes in housing for SIUC freshmen.

SARA BEAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A string of legal suits involving the University that began four years ago has ended with the Illinois Supreme Court's refusal to hear an appeal made by the owner of Stevenson Arms, a freshmen-approved housing complex.

"I can say that we are disappointed that the Illinois Supreme Court refused to hear the appeal," said Stan Lieber, who also is an SIUC professor of geography. "However, at this point it didn't matter because the injunction was for last year, and the University and I have put it all behind us."

On Oct. 1, the Illinois Supreme Court refused to hear the case. Lieber filed the suit against SIUC in November 1995 alleging that the University violated due process of law by changing the freshmen housing policy. The new policy would have prevented freshmen under 21 from living off-campus unless they live with their families.

The old policy, which still is in effect, states that freshmen can live on campus or off campus in approved housing until they turn 21.

On Dec. 14, 1995, the court ordered a preliminary injunction against SIUC and ordered the University not to change the housing policy until the lawsuit was dismissed or until the judge changed the order.

"The University delayed the implementation of the (new) policy until the outcome of the case," Shari Rhode, chief legal counsel for the University, said. "It is up to the Board of Trustees as to whether or not the policy is reinstated. We feel that the right decision has been made."

The SIUC Board of Trustees has yet to reinstate the new policy. Peter Ruger, the legal counsel for the Board of Trustees, could not be reached for comment.

The University originally instated the policy in 1995 after a determination that the new policy would better meet the needs of the students, Rhode said. The University had to meet state bond criteria, which requires the University to house a specified amount of students in on-campus housing.

"The reason which the University gave for implementing the freshman housing policy are still not perfectly clear, but I don't believe that they are going to reinstate it," Lieber said. "I don't think that it is an issue at this point."

In 1992, SIUC officials notified Lieber that the University would stop mailing brochures of Stevenson Arms with University brochures to potential students.

Lieber then filed a Freedom of Information Act request, wanting to obtain a listing of potential students and mail the brochures himself. The University refused his request to release the list, and Lieber filed a separate lawsuit in May 1993.

In 1995, The Jackson County Circuit Court sided with the University in the 1993 Freedom of Information Act case. Lieber appealed this decision to the 5th District Appellate Court in Mt. Vernon, which reversed the judgment and sent the case back for a new trial. SIUC officials appealed this decision to the Illinois Supreme Court, which sided with Lieber in January.

The court ruled the University had to release the names and addresses of potential students because the University made the list available to local media and campus ministries. In its decision, the court stated it felt the University treated Lieber differently because Stevenson Arms was direct competition to University Housing.

PUBLICITY: Gubernatorial hopeful plans to visit all state schools in order to present forum, get input.

KIRK MOTTRAM
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Democratic gubernatorial candidate John Schmidt will make a campaign appearance Oct. 24 at SIUC in an attempt to rally students for what should be a hotly contested four-way March primary.

Schmidt will focus on the link between students and state government while delineating key issues in his campaign, said Becky Carroll, Schmidt's press secretary. Carroll said the event will be more of a forum where students will have an opportunity to interact with the candidate.

"You've got to give students a reason to vote, and that's what he (Schmidt) will do," Carroll said. "Students have to know that the next governor is looking out for their interests. It's not government vs. the students."

"Those in the 18-to-24 age range are much wiser than people who were in school 18 to 20 years ago. They're thinking in different ways, and they seem to know a lot about politics."

Tuition will be one of the issues discussed at the rally, Carroll said. Schmidt is adamant about holding the state accountable for its policies toward higher education.

"You've got to hold government responsible for keeping tuition down," she said. "The next governor must be more proactive in keeping tuition and rates down, especially at public universities."

Carroll said Schmidt will be spending a lot of time in the Southern Illinois area, where he is little-known. Schmidt hopes to cut into the support base of opponent U.S. Rep. Glenn Poshard, D-III, a Marion native. Schmidt's SIUC stop is part of a statewide college and university tour that includes almost every school in Illinois.

Cass VanDerMeer, Schmidt's campaign coordinator for Perry County and an SIUC graduate, said Schmidt's Oct. 24 appearance is indicative of his concern for university students and the state of higher education.

"He is the best candidate for the students," VanDerMeer said. "He's got a real concern for higher education."

"And he's definitely the best candidate for female students because he's so pro-women. He's worked so hard to get money for domestic violence programs throughout his career, and of course he's also strongly pro-choice."

She also said Schmidt is not regionalist like a lot of former gubernatorial candidates, but believes that instituting economic fairness throughout the state is an integral role of a governor.

"It (his stop at SIUC) indicates a real willingness on his part to understand Southern Illinois and spend time in Southern Illinois," she said.

Schmidt, former U.S. Associate Attorney General, will be the first gubernatorial hopeful to speak at the University in a campaign capacity.

He joins former Illinois Attorney General Roland Burris, retired U.S. Attorney Jim Burns and Poshard in the quest to capture the Democratic nomination.

College Democrats say Schmidt's engagement is confirmed for noon, but the location is still to be determined. He likely will speak at the Student Center, though nothing is official.

Schmidt was appointed to the Justice Department by President Bill Clinton in July 1994.

During his tenure as U.S. Associate Attorney General, Schmidt was responsible for the devising and implementation of the 1994 Crime Bill, the Violence Against Women Act, revising criminal records for the enforcement of Brady Bill gun laws and establishing a national sex offender registry.

Schmidt also was appointed overseer of the Justice Department's Civil Rights Division where he initiated the implementation of the Motor Voter Law, the Americans with Disabilities Act and the National Task Force on Church Arson.

DENVER

Denver leaves legacy larger than his music

John Denver was so warmly embraced by middle America in the 1970s that he was probably the only figure in contemporary pop who could sing about getting high and convince you he was referring to the beauty of the Rocky Mountains.

It was, in fact, the relentlessly optimistic nature of the Denver's songs about homespun values and the wonders of nature that led the singer-songwriter to be both beloved and ridiculed.

His "farr-out" exclamations on TV talk shows and his "Thank God, I'm a Country Boy" enthusiasm caused fans to cheer and detractors to grit their teeth.

The tender irony of his life — which ended in a plane crash Sunday in California's Monterey Bay — is that a man who was often dismissed as calculating and superficial may eventually be remembered as a man of high integrity and idealism.

Denver not only left us a legacy of hit songs but also a history of personal commitment that echoed the highest ideals of his music. Even when the superstar days were long behind him, he continued to work tirelessly for such concerns as world hunger and the environment.

He served on the Presidential Commission on World and Domestic Hunger and supported the World Wildlife Fund, and he donated song royalties to UNICEF. He also co-founded a nonprofit environmental education center.

SAN FRANCISCO

Sex, drugs and debate concerning gay culture

In a cavernous San Francisco exhibition hall, a pulsating sea of mostly white, mostly buff, mostly shirtless men packs the dance floor, swaying to percussive music so loud it makes cars outside vibrate and conversation inside a challenge.

Navigating the crowd without brushing against bare flesh is close to impossible among partiers in black leather, skin-tight jeans and even a few in chaps that show their buttocks.

And fashion statements that would be daring anywhere else — one man wearing only a leasi — cause barely a stir.

In the dark beyond the strobe-raked dance floor, men mingle or sit at candlelit tables, nursing drinks, eyeing the action and each other. A steady stream of couples heads hand in hand for the restrooms, where a sign obliquely reminds them to "Please Party Respectably."

This is Magnitude, highlight of the latest stop on the Circuit, a series of week-end events built around all-night dance parties for gay men.

Select 2000 for SIUC greeks should remove alcohol gradually

SIUC ADMINISTRATORS TRYING TO FORCE Select 2000 upon greek fraternities must face the fact that they are trying to take alcohol out of greek chapter houses too quickly. If they cannot work with greeks in implementing Select 2000 and slowly removing alcohol from SIUC's greek system, then improving the system's image might best be left to other options.

Select 2000 is the nine-part initiative that includes calling, in part, for campus greeks of four participating campuses to remove alcohol from greek fraternity houses. The participating schools, SIUC, University of Northern Colorado, Villanova University and Florida Southern College, agreed to Select 2000's overall plan to improve the images of their respective greek systems and remove alcohol from the greek system by the year 2000. The actual implementation of this plan was left up to administrators at each campus to decide.

While administrators at UNC and Villanova are gradually phasing alcohol out of the greek system, SIUC administrators want to jump ahead of schedule and remove alcohol from fraternity houses by 1998, and this year greeks are not allowed to sponsor parties with alcohol. Administrators should consider Select 2000's student opposition and realize their actions are not at all similar to what other pilot schools are doing.

If Select 2000 is to work for SIUC, the gradual phasing-in of an alcohol-free greek system cannot have a target date of 1998. In all honesty, a target date of 2000 also may be too early for SIUC to comply with the Select 2000 initiative. These are reasons why the initiative never will be embraced by the greek system — and why Select 2000 at SIUC is doomed if administrators keep the plan on its present course.

Rejecting participation in Select 2000 is a viable option for SIUC if administrators choose to follow the lead of two fellow state schools that have taken matters into their own hands. The University of Illinois and Illinois State University are toying with self-devised plans to eliminate alcohol from their greek systems. A similar grassroots movement could be useful here. Another method would be to follow the Interfraternity Council's vote to delay phasing alcohol out of the greek system until 1998. But before either of these routes are to be investigated, SIUC administrators should salvage Select 2000 by rethinking their present intentions.

A LOOK INTO HISTORY SHOWS THAT NEARLY 24 years ago, SIU's Board of Trustees passed a resolution that allowed students of legal drinking age to consume alcohol in their on-campus places of residence. One part of that resolution stated, "This is not to say that alcohol may not have detrimental effects on the learning of individual students or that alcohol-related disciplinary problems are non-existent. This change of policy is based on the lawful right of the student to indulge his private tastes and values. Southern Illinois University at Carbondale is merely making the use of beer and wine a matter of individual choice..." Today, SIUC administrators are hoping to erase some of the campus' alcohol-related problems since that decision by forcing greek fraternities to participate in Select 2000. In essence, Select 2000 is a good attempt at preventing future alcohol-related deaths on college campuses — the recent binge-drinking death of an 18-year-old freshman at Massachusetts Institute of Technology is the latest such occurrence to receive media attention.

But while Select 2000's preventative purpose is a noble one, administrators need to realize that the elimination of a long-held individual choice from fraternity members cannot happen overnight. If this is the idea they choose to stick with, then participation in Select 2000 needs to be delayed.

Guest Column

Young is a graduate student in journalism. Guest Column appears every Tuesday and Thursday. Young's opinion does not necessarily reflect that of the Daily Egyptian.

"The queen of the people's hearts," "America's only real princess," "the most-loved woman in the 20th century." These are some of the eulogies that American mass media have tirelessly heaped on Diana, the late princess of Wales, since her death in early September. Does Diana really deserve all the tributes? I don't think so.

To speak badly of anyone who already does not exist in this world is taboo in any part of the world. I know that much. Yet for the sake of setting records straight, I would dare to break the taboo.

What kind of a woman was Diana? What kind of life had she lived since her separation from Prince Charles?

Let's start from her scene of death. American media described her death as a tragic death. Diana and her billionaire boyfriend Dodi Fayed were on their way to a night of secret (?) romance when they were involved in the Paris accident that killed them.

An intimate dinner at a Paris hotel (with a guy better known as an international playboy and whose ex-girlfriends include Hollywood's most beautiful actresses) and speeding away from paparazzi on their way to a secret romance — what a scandalous final chapter of a life. It was the most scandalous an end as it could be to a fairy tale involving a British princess who gripped the world's media attention for 18 years.

By the way, who was Fayed? He was one of a long list of Diana's men as she was one of his women.

Since her separation from Prince Charles, Diana truly had set a new standard of royal behavior. She was bold enough to make love with a royal cavalry officer in her garden while her royal security guards witnessed. She was courageous enough to send letters to the officer in which she said she missed the scent of his flesh. Have such behaviors — that could only fit into American soap operas — could have helped Diana win the hearts of Americans?

After meeting Fayed, who is known to the outside world for nothing but his family's huge financial assets and his flair for beautiful Hollywood women, Diana made headlines in the world's tabloids with her typical bravados such as her sensational "kiss" while topless aboard Fayed's yacht. Once when blissfully confiding to her friend, Diana said that she had found real happiness in her life with Fayed. What kind of happiness? I think I know what she meant.

Then why did American news media give such a tribute to Diana's death? Because she devoted her time to humanitarian causes as the media claimed? Did she devote more time to the humanitarian cause than to her romance? I don't think so. Did her work for the humanitarian causes truly deserve such an eulogy? Again, I don't think so.

Around the time of Diana's death, we lost a really great human being who truly devoted the whole part of her life to help the underprivileged — Mother Teresa. Mother Teresa did way more than briefly visiting an orphanage just to shake hands or give a hug with a photogenic smile — all the time under heavy media limelight. Through her life, Mother Teresa showed what true love was like. She shared joy and tragedy with the world's least fortunate people while eating, sleeping and living with them — most of the time outside the limelight of the news media.

Compared to the media coverage of Diana's death, the media attention to Mother Teresa was a pity. How can you explain the media discrimination against Teresa?

What only sets Diana apart might be that Diana had physical beauty that Mother Teresa did not have. Mother Teresa probably didn't desire to have that beauty, either. No, Mother Teresa didn't have the youth and the sexiness that Diana had in abundance and fully enjoyed. But for the sake of the peace of common souls like me who believe in common sense as the leading guide of life, please stop calling Diana "The queen of the people's hearts," "America's only real princess," "the most loved woman in the 20th century," etc. If you have to give her a sensational title as you have done so many times in the past — Diana's marriage was "the marriage of the century" — it would be better to call her "one of the 20th century's most scandalous women." But don't call her death "the death of the century."

Finally, I pray that both souls have lasting peace in heaven. At the same time, I pray that Diana's death does not give the wrong message to young people: If you want to be well-remembered, die young.

Footo said gave it the highest growth rate of on-campus degree programs.

Now the cinema and photography program's enrollment may be limited because of overcrowding, he said. The cinema and photography program has more than 200 students being taught by five professors.

Part of the change in his college's enrollment in the past year, Footo said, was working with last year's freshman class to encourage participation in Registered Student Organizations.

"Our success started early last year with our freshmen," Footo said. "We built on that year."

Both colleges recruit new and transfer students extensively.

Arthur said College of Agriculture representatives visit various Future Farmers of America conventions throughout the United States.

FFA is a national organization with high school chapters that promotes agricultural careers.

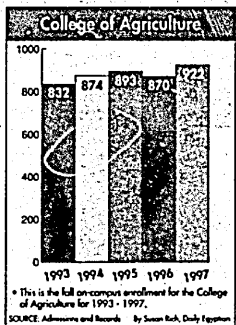

Non-student representatives of the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts travel to Illinois high schools and community colleges and tell students about hands-on programs within the college such as student radio-and-television broadcasting opportunities.

The representatives also show a recently produced college video made by students as a way of displaying the skills College of Mass Communications and Media Arts students learn.

"I talked to one student who told me that if students do that kind of work at our college, then he wanted to come here," Footo said.

Both colleges also have student ambassador programs to recruit new students and to support students already enrolled in the colleges.

The College of Agriculture has some of its top veteran scholars, called Aghassadors, contact new students after the first few weeks of school to lend support. A new mentoring program is extending the support from the Aghassadors and other experienced College of Agriculture students to new students.

"Instead of one phone call at the beginning of the semester, new students get a couple or three other phone calls throughout the semester," Arthur said.

Arthur said this allows new students who might be having trouble in classes to get help from students who have been through similar classes.

The College of Mass Communications and Media Arts ambassadors function in the same type of capacity. Footo said there likely is a relationship between student ambassador programs and increases in enrollment.

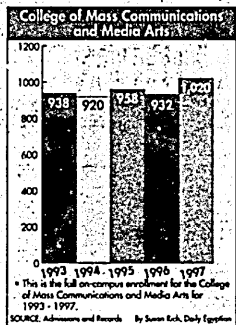

"It's interesting that the two colleges that experienced the highest growth have student ambassador programs," Footo said. "I think student ambassadors have a decisive influence on new students."

Footo credits his college's Hollywood Studies program, one of only four such programs nationwide, and having former U.S. Senator Paul Simon as a faculty member as two important recruiting tools.

The Hollywood Studies program allows cinema majors to delve into motion picture development and production.

Both colleges also have programs in place to increase retention by helping struggling students who are frustrated with poor grades.

The College of Agriculture's program, which is about two years old, seeks to identify students considered "academically at-risk" and offer assistance to those students, Arthur said. The college reviews exam scores from classes to determine which students might have academic problems. Advisers and instructors contact those students to offer assistance.

"Students at-risk receive a little more attention to make sure things are going OK," Arthur said.

The College of Mass Communications and Media Arts tries to identify "at-risk" students early in the first semester, Footo said.

His college offers a new program to ease new students into the college — a one-hour class that gives tours of each degree program within the college. The class also concentrates on building students' studying and time-management skills.

Footo said that although the increase of students can be credited to recruiting efforts, sometimes the amount of recruitment is insignificant.

"Some years, enrollment figures may be the result of trends totally beyond our control," he said.

Both colleges will maintain similar plans for recruitment and retention, although the strategies likely will be fine-tuned.

For example, a new initiative within the College of Agriculture is a tutorial service.

"Seniors and juniors will tutor students who might come in and say, 'Hey, I need help in my plant and soil science class,'" Arthur said.

"The faculty has gotten behind us in our efforts," he said. "It has to be a team effort to succeed."

and a bigger kitchen, which allows for more baking.

Danhour said the move was needed because the Co-op is now able to offer a more diverse range of products.

"We have more of everything now," she said. "We have a variety of frozen foods, produce, vitamins and supplements that we were able to expand to that we didn't have before."

"We needed the space. We were really crowded next door, and now we have more of everything."

The Co-op is unlike other local grocery stores because of the products sold. Bulk items including beans, rice grains and spices are sold at lower prices. Shoppers are required to bring their own containers to hold the bulk items.

"I buy a lot of items that don't use packaging," Hartman said. "I like being able to buy things without having to throw away paper and plastic."

The expansion provided a bigger kitchen that allows more freshly baked items, like bread and cookies to be made. And more cooler space helps to keep a wider majority of organically grown fruits and vegetables.

The Co-op also has a supply of preservative-free foods, which makes shopping easier for people with allergies.

Bender said she is happy about the new items the store offers.

"It's always fun to go around and find things that you usually don't find in bigger department stores," she said. "There are all these unusual items you can find here, and it is a better quality of food."

Monday. Martina said that when winds are severe, as they were Sunday night, a carburetor failure is possible. Winds reached gusts of 14 to 18 mph around 10 p.m. Sunday night.

"The carburetor is a butterfly valve that lets in air and fuel," she said. "Ice can form and clog the carburetor, which could have been the possible cause."

Martina said that she was anticipating losing all engine power.

"We were looking for a field to land in," she said. "We were at 2,500 feet and were able to get to 3,500 feet. With the power reduc-

Flying Salukis take to the skies to prepare for aerial competition.

Easing his two-passenger airplane down on the runway at Southern Illinois Airport, Paul Bretz ensures that his rear tires have touched the pavement before he lifts back into the blue autumn sky.

Bretz, the Flying Saluki team captain and junior in aviation management from Chicago, has practiced relentlessly for one of two aerial events at Wednesday's regional air meet at the Southern Illinois Airport. The meet lasts through Friday.

The requirements of the landing event are to land the aircraft near the center of a 300-foot long area of the runway.

"The reason the box is 300-foot long is because when you land a jet on an aircraft carrier, there is only about 300 feet to do it in," Bretz said.

"Imagine landing a jet on a moving aircraft carrier and catching the tailhook (the area where the cable catches the jet).

"The objective of this event is to place your rear tires as close as possible to a certain area in the box."

The National Intercollegiate Flying Association sponsors the annual regional air meets.

Southern Illinois Airport will be the location for this year's NIFA Safecon Region Eight Air Meet.

Logan Fifer, Flying Saluki pilot and a sophomore in aviation flight management from Woodstock, said dedication, education and training will allow him to successfully compete in the event.

"I want to kick some [butt] this year," Fifer said.

"This is our turf, and I don't want the U of I or Purdue to come here and beat us. They are our rivals."

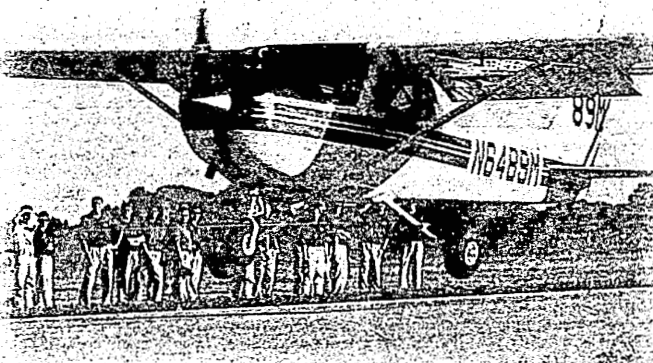

Fifer said he knew he wanted to be a pilot since he was 5 years old.

"I am a third-generation pilot," Fifer can take first place."

Fourteen members of the 22-member team will participate in the event.

"I'm really proud of the team members," said Kim Carter, head coach for the Flying Salukis.

Members of the Flying Salukis watch the landing of their teammate at a recent practice for this week's National Intercollegiate Flying Association Safecon Region Eight Air Meet.

said. "My grandfather used to fly me in his 1946 Piper J-3 Cub, and his 1970-American AA-1-Yankee."

The planes that will be used in the competition are Cessna 152s. A Cessna is a two-placed aircraft, meaning it seats two people.

This year marks the first time since 1990 that the Flying Salukis have sponsored the meet. There are 11 NIFA regions in America and 15 teams in region eight.

Four teams from each region advance to the national meet.

Last year, the Flying Salukis placed seventh overall in the national competition in Battle Creek, Mich.

"I'm pretty confident flying these planes," Fifer said. "Everyone on the team is dedicated, and I feel like we

"They are out there (flying and training) for four or five hours a day, five days a week.

"I think we will do really well in the navigation event, and I feel confident that we can take first place."

The simulation comprehensive area navigating event takes place indoors and requires the pilots to plan a simulated 200-mile trip.

Bretz said his love for aviation sprouted when he was a child.

"I can remember MacDill Air Force Base when I was younger."

"I went into the Navy to become a pilot. I would like to fly for the airlines someday, but for now, I'm concentrating on the event," he said.

"We have a strong team, and we will take first place."

Indians pitcher suggests Hersher doctors baseball

SOMETHING FISHY: Ogea backs up claim by Orioles' manager that Indians ace is cheating.

BALTIMORE SUN

CLEVELAND — Cleveland Indians pitcher Chad Ogea admitted before Sunday night's game what Orioles manager Davey Johnson suggested and many others within baseball have long maintained: Not all of Orel Hersher's pitches are legal.

Asked to address Johnson's allegations that Hersher repeatedly moistened the ball by going to his mouth and neck during Saturday's 2-1 Indians win, Ogea stunned a media gathering by saying, "I've known Orel for three years. He cheats. And just about everybody else does. Why not?"

Unsure whether Ogea was joking, a follow-up question drew a further response. "He showed me how to cheat, but said I couldn't use it until I was 35. If I stay around that long, I'll get the privilege to cheat."

Hersher was asked to address Ogea's comments but declined. Team spokesman Bart Swain said the pitcher was receiving treatment and had nothing to say.

Indians general manager John Hart said: "Orel does not doctor the baseball, period," when informed of Johnson's comments.

Hart doesn't mind such talk. "It's the postseason," he said. "I'm sure there's some gamesmanship involved. If that's what people think, that's great."

Johnson raised the issue after Saturday's second inning when he complained to plate umpire John Hirschbeck that Hersher was repeatedly wiping moisture onto the ball, a rules violation.

"I know from my experience that Orel likes to put water on the back of his neck," said Johnson, whose managerial path has closely mirrored Hersher's move from the National League to the American League. "He prefers to have the cover of the ball wet as opposed to dry, and he will get water wherever he can get it."

"He was going right from his mouth to the ball, and that's illegal. I wanted to point it out to them, and at least have Orel thinking about it."

The issue only added heat to a series that has seen Indians manager Mike Hargrove curse Johnson for trying to gain advantage through delay tactics.

Hargrove became infuriated Saturday when Johnson took trainer Richie Bancell with him to the mound to check on Arthur Rhodes. At the time, Randy Myers had yet to begin warming and Hargrove believed Johnson's visit was actually a stall.

"We felt Davey was trying to buy time to get Randy Myers ready," said Hargrove, who pointed and shouted at the Orioles manager while complaining to the umpiring crew. "In my mind, he was trying to buy time. I felt it was not right, although there is nothing that can be done about it."

"It worked for Davey. But it's no big deal."

Hargrove said anyone who doesn't expect managerial gamesmanship at this time of the year "is missing the boat," but he stopped short of making the accusation against Johnson.

"You do what you can to combat it. Some of us choose to do it; others don't do it. I don't look at Davey Johnson asking the umpires to check Orel's baseballs as gamesmanship. I really don't look at Davey going out there to try and buy time for Myers as gamesmanship."

Johnson has been involved in the two longest games in terms of time in LCS history. His New York Mets needed 4:42 to defeat the Houston Astros in a game in the 1986 NLCS, which lasted 16 innings. The record stood until Saturday's 4:51 marathon, which was won by Cleveland in 12 innings.

"I only like to look back to a couple days ago. I might get the wrong flashback," he said. "I try to remain positive."

Johnson said he didn't have trouble sleeping after Saturday's loss.

"I turn the page pretty easy," he said. "There's nothing you can do about it. All you can do is try to make sure it was the right call, and they seemed pretty certain about it. That's it."

"I have never felt that one play cost you a ballgame. They've come awfully close to costing you a ballgame, though."

Though he caught all 12 innings in Game 3 and has played every inning of the postseason, Sandy Alomar was back in Cleveland's lineup. Hargrove said he considered giving Alomar the night off for five seconds.

"This is the postseason, and Sandy's fine," Hargrove said. "I talked to the trainers today, and Sandy's had almost a full day to recover. I would probably have to arm-wrestle Sandy to keep him out of the lineup now."

continue to play up to our level of play."

Though the team failed to win both matches, freshman defensive specialist Audra Allen said there were some positives from the squad's performance. The win against Drake was the first for SIUC since 1994.

"It was a good learning experience because it was our first win on the road," Allen said. "It was a good confidence-builder for everyone."

Now with an overall record of 8-8 and 5-4 in the Missouri Valley Conference, the Salukis stand at fifth place in the MVC. Drake dropped to 1-14 and 1-7 in conference play, while Creighton improved to 9-7 and 6-3.

The Salukis return home to Davies Gymnasium for a non-conference match tonight against Eastern Illinois University. SIUC has fared much better at home this season with a 7-2 record, as opposed to a 1-6 mark on the road.

Locke does not want her players to look past EIU because it is a non-conference foe. She said the team will prepare for the match no differently than a conference matchup.

Allen said the team must follow Locke's advice to be successful in tonight's match.

"We just have to take each game one at a time," Allen said. "We look at each team individually, not matter what conference they are in."

Tennis team overcomes adversity at championship

HARD WORK: Salukis keep on improving with every game, setback.

TRAVIS AKIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC women's tennis team faced some trouble at the Missouri Valley Conference Individual Tennis Championship in St. Louis last weekend, but two of the team's doubles squads overcame the adversity to post solid performances.

The No. 3 doubles team of freshmen Keri Crandall and Laura Waggoner finished third with a record of 2-1. Meanwhile, the No. 2 doubles team of junior Mardee Crane and senior Helen Johnson was 1-1, losing in the semifinals to a team from Wichita State University.

Crane said she and Johnson played well because they were communicating better. She said the support she received from the team also helped her performance.

"There was a lot of team spirit," Crane said. "That is a big help in a match. I felt we made a big improvement (last weekend)."

But not all of the doubles teams fared as well. The No. 1 doubles team of seniors Molly Card and Sanem Berksoy finished the tournament with a 0-2 record.

SIUC women's tennis coach Judy Auld said Berksoy and Card played well, but could not put it together enough to win.

Auld said the tournament was a learning experience to prepare for conference play beginning in April.

"Basically, we had not seen our conference opponents until this match," Auld said. "The big key is the chance to size up teams and to see which teams made improvements and which teams went down. What it comes down to is that in this conference, there are a lot of schools who can beat each other on any given day."

Auld said the solid play in doubles combined with the fact that many of her players were struggling with their games during the tournament showed that SIUC could compete in the conference.

Card lost in two straight set matches at the No. 1 spot. Auld said Card is adjusting and is playing opponents she has never played before.

"Molly played two tough matches," Auld said. "It may take some time to get some experience. The losses were not the result of Molly making bad decisions or making errors. She was just not capitalizing on points she needed. In this situation, the other players got the better of her."

Berksoy, though, won the consolation match at the No. 2 position after losing her first match in two sets. She went on to win three matches and now has 102 victories and is second on the all-time win list at SIUC.

Juniors Jennifer Robison and Maria Villarreal struggled in the singles competition, as both Robison and Villarreal were 0-2 in two straight set losses.

Robison said she simply never got her game together.

"I was a little cold and things didn't happen," Robison. "I knew what I had to do, but didn't execute. I was on defense more than I should have been."

But even though SIUC struggled in singles competition, Crane had success in both singles and doubles. Crane finished 1-1, losing in the semifinals of the No. 7 singles.

"Winning my round was a big confidence builder," Crane said. "Consistency also was a big factor. I did not let my mind drift, and I was not losing focus."

The Salukis travel to Louisville, Ky., Friday for the Louisville Invitational.

New coliseum may bring pro football

LOS ANGELES TIMES

Criticized stadium deals in Oakland, Calif., and San Diego and a frustrated owner in the San Francisco 49ers' Edward DeBartolo, who is quietly making threats to move again, have become the foundation of hope for a new Coliseum and the return of professional football to Los Angeles.

Edward Roski, co-owner of the Los Angeles Kings, will present the outline for a $300 million financing plan for a new Coliseum to the NFL owners' stadium committee here Tuesday morning. The plan, according to sources, includes the expenditure of $150 million in public funds.

The new Coliseum plan relies on the use of surplus state sales taxes to benefit not only Roski's project but other troubled "entertainment" interests in California, such as the 49ers.

Roski and his partner, Denver billionaire Philip Anschutz, who propose leasing the new Coliseum from the city for $1 a year, have also factored in a successful city-wide referendum as part of their plan.

"After 13 months and an exclusive opportunity to prepare a viable plan for the new Coliseum, we will be very interested to see what they have come up with," said Roger Goodell, the NFL's executive vice president for league and football development.

However, a Los Angeles city official who already has reviewed the financial plan, expressed disappointment. "Without the state piece of the deal, they don't have a thing. It all hinges on getting the state money, and that's downright speculative."

NFL insiders, meanwhile, continue to cling to the hope that Los Angeles Dodger owner Peter O'Malley will get a supportive push from Rupert Murdoch after O'Malley sells the baseball team to the media billionaire.

"It wouldn't be surprising to see O'Malley direct the construction of a stadium (at Chavez Ravine)" said an NFL owner, "and Murdoch making it available to an NFL owner with no charge for the land just to give Murdoch that much more exposure and increase the value of his holdings. That makes a lot of sense for Los Angeles, and for the NFL."

Roski, meanwhile, has been traveling to football games around the country trying to change that kind of thinking and the perception people have of the Coliseum.

Women's golf ends fall with 12th-place finish

The SIUC women's golf team ended its fall schedule with a 12th-place finish out of 18 teams at the Lady Kat Invitational in Lexington, Ky., Sunday. The Salukis fired rounds of 316, 320 and 322 for a total of 958. The University of Kentucky captured its own tournament title with a three-round score of 912. Other Missouri Valley Conference team scores included Illinois State University in 11th at 957.

Stacy Skillman shot rounds of 76, 77 and 76 to lead the Salukis with a 229. Liz Uthoff shot a 240, Jami Zimmermann ended with a 244, Jamie Smith fired a 245, and Jamie Schmidt added a 249 to round out the Salukis' effort.

Youngstown State holds on to No. 1 in Division I-AA

The Youngstown State University Penguins, who moved into the No. 1 spot last week, remained atop the Sports Network Division I-AA poll after a 52-17 thrashing of the University of Buffalo Saturday. The Penguins garnered 65 of a possible 95 first-place votes for 2,328 points.

Youngstown State grabbed nine more first-place votes this week and lead the second-ranked Montana Grizzlies by 55 points.

Youngstown State, winners of the national title in 1991, 1993 and 1994, was awarded the top spot for the second-straight week by the pollsters, made up of the TSN selection panel and Division I-AA sports information directors. The 6-0 Penguins face a tough test this week, as they travel to the University of Northern Iowa to take on the 24th-ranked Panthers.

The top seven teams held on to their slots this week. The 4-1 Grizzlies blanked Idaho State 48-0 Saturday. The University of Villanova Wildcats, McNeese State University Cowboys and Western Illinois University Leathernecks complete the top five.

Rounding out the top 10 are the University of Delaware, Western Kentucky University, Southern University, Georgia Southern University and Eastern Illinois University.

The second 10 includes Northern Arizona University, Stephen F. Austin University, Jackson State University, East Tennessee State University, Nicholls State University, Troy State University, Murray State University, William & Mary College, Hampton University and Eastern Washington University.

Florida A & M University, Furman University, South Carolina State University, the University of Northern Iowa and Southwest Texas State University captured the final five slots.

Rams' wide receiver Bruce returns to lineup Sunday

St. Louis Rams wide receiver Isaac Bruce returned from a two-game absence because of a hamstring injury and caught two passes in a 30-10 loss to San Francisco Sunday. However, the Rams were without running back Lawrence Phillips, who is suffering from turf toe. Phillips has 383 yards on 101 carries this season.

Bruce has been bothered by a nagging hamstring injury all season. He missed the first two games of the season, then aggravated the problem in a Sept. 14 game against Denver and had not played since.

Bruce totaled 14 yards on his two catches in Sunday's loss, during which the Rams mustered 113 yards.

Women runners win at St. Louis

VICTORY: Monaco, Steele, Larsen record top ten finishes.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Two experienced runners who have struggled this season rebounded with solid efforts to give the Salukis their first win of the season Saturday at the All Missouri Border's States Cross Country Championship at Washington University in St. Louis.

Senior Raina Larsen and junior Leah Steele finished 18 seconds behind sophomore Jenny Monaco to pace the Salukis.

Monaco finished in third place out of 176 runners with a time of 18 minutes and 21 seconds in the 16-team meet. Steele finished in seventh place with a time of 18:39, and Larsen came in eighth place with a time of 18:39. Emily Richard of Washington University won the meet with a time of 17:35.

Freshmen runners Marissa Jelks, who finished in 12th place with a time of 18:44, and Becky Cox, who finished 23 with a time of 19:04, rounded out the top five for the Salukis, giving the team 53 points.

Augustana College followed SIUC with 80 points, and Washington University placed third with 123 points.

The Salukis had two second-place finishes at Carbondale Sept. 6 and Bradley University Sept. 12, and two fourth-place finishes at the Commodore Classic Sept. 20 and at the Oct. 4 Saluki Invitational.

Cox said the conditions at the meet helped boost the team to victory.

"It was wonderful to finally win our first meet," Cox said. "We pushed each other along, and the nice weather and flat course really helped us out."

Jelks said she attributes her best finish of the year to her continual improvement and tough practices.

"We've had good workouts, and I've been trying to improve on my finish because I haven't been very good at that," Jelks said.

The Salukis will be in action Saturday at the Chattanooga Invitational in Chattanooga, Tenn., in their last meet before the Nov. 1 Missouri Valley Conference Championships in Springfield, Mo.

Spikers' winning streak snapped at four

MATCHUPS: Salukis stopped by Creighton after beating Drake for first road win.

SHANDEL RICHARDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The SIUC volleyball team stretched its winning streak to four games with a win over Drake University in Des Moines, Iowa, Friday, but outside hitter Marlo Moreland says a lack of focus prevented the Salukis from reaching five consecutive victories.

After recording its first road victory of the season against the Bulldogs 15-7, 15-3, 3-15, 15-10, SIUC suffered a loss to Creighton University, 15-7, 13-15, 15-9, 8-15, 11-15, Saturday to end its winning streak.

SIUC controlled a one-game advantage over the Lady Jays Saturday but were unable to close out the match. Creighton won the final two games, taking the match in the fifth and final game.

Moreland, a junior from Lancaster, Texas, said the team may have become overconfident after getting the early lead against Creighton.

Moreland had 14 kills and 18 digs against Drake, and recorded 17 kills along with 17 digs against Creighton, to lead the Salukis both nights.

"On Friday night, we came into the game on a roll, and we put (Drake) away early," Moreland said.

"Saturday, we played around with (Creighton); a little bit and didn't put them away."

SIUC coach Sonya Locke was disappointed with the outcome against Creighton but knows her team can rebound from the setback.

"At least I can say that we won the first match," Locke said. "I don't think it's going to hurt us at all because we could've come home worse than that. I just hope we can
