Scholars fuse ideas at conference

Global Fusion 2000 unites international academia for communication discussion

ANDREA DONALDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Scholars and professionals from five continents will come together this weekend as part of Global Fusion 2000.

The conference, to take place in St. Louis, is sponsored by SIUC's College of Mass Communication and Media Arts and SIUC-Edwardsville's Department of Mass Communication. It is sponsored by the international divisions of the Broadcasting Education Association, the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication and the International Communication Association.

"It's an honor for SIU to be hosting it," said Max Grubb, assistant professor in Radio-Television. "It marks the first time where you have three national and international organizations coming together to sponsor a conference on communication and culture."

Leo Gher, associate professor in Radio-Television and Global Fusion 2000 manager, said he expects to have more than 200 people attend this weekend's event. He said representatives from Africa, Asia, North America, South America and Europe will be present.

Global Fusion 2000 will focus on topics such as cyberspace warfare, telecommunication technology, comparative broadcasting and international laws.

Interim Dean of the MCMA Jyotika Ramaprasad said this conference is important to the college because it is the first regional conference the college has organized since it became the College of Mass Communication and Media Arts seven years ago.

"We hope to continue to do this,"

Seniors key to November election

Candidates vie for seniors' vote by targeting Social Security, health care

DAILY EGYPTIAN

Ina Mann is not too impressed with either Al Gore or George W. Bush, but her lack of enthusiasm will not keep her from showing up at the polls on election day.

"I don't have to vote, but I'm a loser if I don't," said the 77-year-old Murphysboro resident.

That view toward voting is partially why seniors are the most solid and consistent voting block in America. This presidential election in particular has taken a turn more toward issues relating to seniors, such as Social Security and prescription drug coverage.

Following Wednesday's presidential debate between Bush and Gore, Mann and other seniors spent some of their lunch time at Senior Adult Services critiquing the two candidates' performance.

"I don't care for Bush, and after the debate I don't know what to think about Gore," said Mann.

While Mann tends to be leaning toward Gore, her friend, 90-year-old Helen Teel, said she is backing Bush.

"I like Bush," she said. "I like his forthrightness, and I think he's a good man."

Mann and Teel are precisely the type of voters the two presidential camps are targeting, and with some national polls showing the race tightening, senior voters will be very significant come November, said Laura Arnold, SIUC assistant professor in political science.

In past presidential elections, nearly 80 percent of registered-voting seniors have consistently turned out to vote. Laura said the candidates are very aware of such a number and have made sure to tailor their campaign messages accordingly.

"They are more likely to turn out on election day than any other group, and that will be reinforced by issues the candidates are talking about, especially Social Security and prescription drug coverage," she said.

Both issues are of obvious concern to Mann and Teel. However, neither candidate has done much to excite either woman concerning her respective plans. One reason is because both candidates appear to be playing politics as usual, Mann said.

"They all lie to get in there," she said. "They tend to change their minds very drastically once they're in there."

Arnold said candidates regularly use such hot-button issues to engage the electorate, and Social Security has been a major one since President Franklin Roosevelt signed it into law nearly 60 years ago.

"Social Security has been an issue for a number of years, but prescription drugs didn't become a major campaign issue until the congressional elections of a few years ago," she said.

Friends and co-workers gather outside of Mae Smith Hall Thursday night to remember the life of Rebecca Boricic.

Remembering Her Smile

Friends and colleagues remember the smile and happiness of Rebecca Boricic

ANDREA DONALDSON
DAILY EGYPTIAN

About 100 friends and co-workers gathered around the Mae Smith Hall patio Thursday night to remember the smile and mourn the death of Rebecca Boricic.

"She will be remembered, but not forgotten," said Keith "Magic" McMath, hall director of Mae Smith, at the opening of the ceremony.

Boricic, a sophomore in interior design from Tinley Park, was pronounced dead Sunday evening in her apartment. The cause of death is uncertain, pending the results of toxicology tests.

Larry Dietz, vice chancellor for Student Affairs and Enrollment Management, extended his sympathy to students and friends at the memorial service.

"I want to commend each of you for being here tonight in a show of support," he said. "I want to thank each of you for being here to celebrate the life of this young woman."

The lights went out in the lobby of Mae Smith, where Boricic worked, as the crowd stood quietly for a moment of silence before "Voices of Inspiration," a local gospel choir, sang.

Several participants in the memorial had just returned to Carbondale after trekking north to attend Boricic's wake and funeral. Following the choir, McMath ended the ceremony saying, "I'm glad that those of you who went to Chicago did come home safely. That is what we want, just come home safely."

Elizabeth Jarzen, a freshman from Oak Lawn, said she will always remember Boricic's happy attitude during her morning shift at the front desk of Mae Smith.

"She was always smiling," Jarzen said. "She was always up and awake and in a good mood."

Laura Boczek and Matt Mitroff, both friends of Boricic, hugged and consoled each other following the ceremony.

"She always made everybody smile," said Boczek, a sophomore in administration of justice, as she wiped away her tears.

Mitroff, a sophomore in economics from Wheaton, agreed with Boczek.

"I think everyone could agree with me when I say she had a beautiful smile," he said.

Course fees raised for 2001

New president, trustee formally introduced at BOT meeting

SARAH ROBERTS
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The motion to increase course-specific fees, which will affect students in art and design, equestrian and education classes, passed Thursday at the SIU Board of Trustees meeting.

The fees, which could be raised $100 or more, are expected to take effect in the fall of 2001.

Interim Chancellor John Jackson said that the administration will carefully examine the proposal's structure once it is in effect to better suit students' needs.

needs.

"We will look at the fees annually and see if we can make more regular increases in lighter amounts in the future," Jackson said.

Also approved was a proposal to spend $500,000 of Illinois First funding on the Dunn-Richmond Economic Development Center.

Graduate and Professional Student Council President Bill Peters later asked the board if SIU had a specific marketing plan to advertise the university's research facilities.

Jackson cited the research park as part of an initiative to promote research. The funds will go toward the improvement of water, electric and telecommunication utilities, as well as road and parking lot construction.

Board Treasurer Elaine Hyden also disclosed the financial report for the fiscal year 2000, which outlined the University's expenditures and income.

"There are no surprises here. Our expenses and our revenue are almost perfectly balanced," Hyden said.

After the board agenda items were completed, Student Trustee Ben Syfert commented on what he called "excuses" made by the Athletic Department regarding its deficit.

"I think they should be paying off the debt," Syfert said after the meeting. "I don't want to underestimate the value of the Athletic Department—the fact is they're $800,000 in the hole."

Thursday's meeting was also significant as it

NEWS IN BRIEF

CARBONDALE

New gas station at Wal-Mart to appear soon

Carbondale residents will have yet another place to refuel during the holidays when a new gas station opens in November on the southwest corner of the Wal-Mart Supercenter's parking lot, 1450 E. Main St.

Wal-Mart manager Terry Godwin said construction began Monday on the new station, which is being built by the Arkansas-based Murphy Oil Company. Godwin said the station should be up and running by the second week of November, but because of Wal-Mart's limited involvement in the project he was unable to further comment.

The Carbondale Murphy Oil station will join three other Illinois stations—located in Danville, Litchfield and Mattoon—that are part of an Illinois market Murphy hopes to capitalize on. Other local gas stations said they had no particular worries about how a new station would affect the market.

Rec certification time changed

The SIUC Sports Officials club is offering Illinois High School Association certification for basketball and wrestling. The classes are scheduled from 5 to 8 p.m. Sunday and Oct. 22 at the Recreation Center Alumni Lounge. The program costs $20. Once certified, officials can make up to $200 a week for 15 hours of work.

Magic in the air for Family Weekend

Sarah Peace excitedly awaits her parents' arrival today for Saluki Family Weekend.

"During Family Weekend, other parents are down, and it is a chance to hang out with our friends and their parents," said Peace, a junior in English education from Naperville, who plans to attend the tailgate and football

This weekend is an opportunity for parents whose only view of campus is their son's or daughter's dorm room on moving day to get a feel for the campus and all it has to offer.

"Southern Magic" is the theme for Saluki Family Weekend 2000. The Special Programming Council has brought in magician and illusionist Drew Thomas as just one of this year's "magical" events.

Teresa Quinn, director of campus events for the SPC, sees this weekend an educational as well as entertaining opportunity for the entire family.

"It gives a warm and inviting atmosphere for the parents," Quinn said. "We want to let the parents know their children are in a safe,

Ballet blends the past and present in an evening of historical costume and dance

MARKET TRAVEL
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Kaleidoscopic skirts and Aztec headdresses still dance in the ancient wind of Mexican villages.

Theo Shanab, founder and director of the Ballet Gran Folclórico de Mexico, continues to roam those villages when the company is not jetting around the world performing its award-winning ballet.

"Most of our costumes are hand-embroidered," Shanab said. "We try to make them as authentic as possible by visiting anthropology museums and villages. Then we adapt them to the stage."

The elaborate costumes have captured world audiences and impressed the toughest American newspaper critics. Accompanied by music, the costumed dancers do more than sway and chant; they give a visual history of Mexico spanning a thousand years of myth and tradition.

Last year, the ballet's members were honorary guests of the Tivoli Gardens in Copenhagen, Denmark. They have celebrated this living memoir with Thailand and Saudi Arabia. They have dazzled New York, Paris and London. Tonight they will share Mexican history with Southern Illinois at Shryock Auditorium.

"Anglos like this great folklore because it's alive," Shanab said. "They would not have a chance to see it on their own. Oaxaca [a Mexican state] has 360 villages, each one with a different custom and different costumes. We can't do everything or we'd never finish the show, so we do one or two numbers from each state."

Maria Rosa Bell, a lecturer in the Spanish department, plans to take her 4-year-old son to the performance to show him cultural differences.

"Definitely it's a cultural experience," Bell said. "It's a world-famous event. There's lots of music, the clothes are colorful and wonderful and I think I will enjoy it."

Religious and warrior rituals are the Aztec roots of Mexican folk dance. The performance starts with these but soon winds one through the struggles of the revolution.

Elegant, sombrero-clad conquistadors seduce with lassos. Waiters prompt the quick heels of Spanish señoritas to tell their love stories. The ancient evolves into the traditional. The show ends with Mexico's national dance, "The Mexican Hat Dance."

The costumes accompany this cultural evolution with music spanning from tribal to mariachi. It embraces the past and the present.

National Endowment for the Arts, is sponsoring the event. Tres Hombres Mexican Restaurant, 119 N. Washington St., is the local sponsor.

Gary Robinson, co-owner of Tres Hombres, said he is excited to see the show because of its excellent reputation.

"Shryock likes to put on first-rate shows and we decided to play a small part in it," Robinson said. "We wanted to help support the arts in the community and expose people to a different culture."

Gods and devils, ceremony and ritual, the walking dead, oppression, passion, carnivals, and the transition from tribal to Spanish influence have been studied with creative detail. The extravaganza not only entertains, but enlightens.

"If I were to say it's a wonderful show, I'd be bragging," Shanab said with melodic Spanish intonations. "You have to see it to believe it."

Meet "Kid A," Radiohead's child prodigy

Searing and creepy, the best album of the year

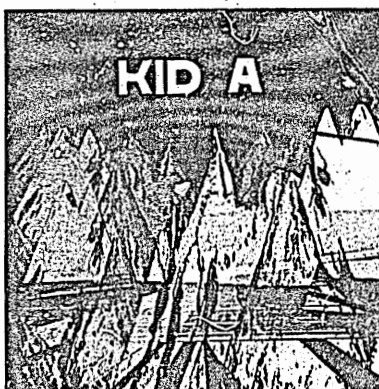

KELLY DAVENPORT
DAILY EGYPTIAN MUSIC CRITIC

Imagine a cave. Make it evocative of Dante and Hades swirling with surreality. Fill it with bass-playing ogres, bleating humpback whales, jazz players possessed by Miles Davis' ghost and cold computerized beeps and boops. Add one feline Brit singer. Let 'em all yowl and hoot. Then roll tape and burn a CD.

That's Radiohead's "Kid A." These reluctant saviors of rock n' roll return with a slinky, sonorous album that'll suck you in like quicksand.

Gorgeous android Thom Yorke spins his songs with trippy fervency, pulling something shining from the distorted digital mush. You will want to spend days cemented to your headphones.

The beauty of "Kid A" is its quicksilver; every fresh listen brings new associations. Banshees, UFOs and toy pianos pop in and out of the aural fog. And the tunes melt into each other as lapping waves do.

"The National Anthem" rides a heavy bassline with phantom voices and synthesized gunk howling in the background. Fractious saxophones and trumpet squawk, too — a Coltrane heroin high.

"Everyone around here is so alone. So alone," Yorke laments.

On "How to Disappear Completely," Yorke elevates plaintive, slurred lyrics to an art form.

"I'm not here/this isn't happening," he moans. "Disappear" is also one of the few tracks with discernible guitars. Corporate radio will have a hard time swallowing that.

And therein lies the record's mystique. Is this an art album? A new direction for this already très avant-garde band? Will Radiohead come back to rock?

I don't care either way. I just want to go noogie and shiver with the delicious "Kid A." Make sure you two meet.

Music Business Association strives to drum up interest in organization

SIUC students exhibit talent at Melange tonight

CODELL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Myssi Sauder is setting aside her heavy metal ways to move to something more acoustic.

Sauder, a junior in music business from Lisle, will play her own rock ballads and a cover song as part of a live performance from the Music Business Association. The Registered Student Organization, which achieved RSO status in Fall 1998, was formed to provide an opportunity of networking for music students and professionals. It now consists of about 25 members.

The performance tonight will serve as a way to obtain experience and promote the group while providing entertainment.

"Seeing all the other people play will be cool, but I really just want to play," said Sauder.

Sauder will be joined by 17 other musicians in the second year of the performance at Melange.

The performance will offer different genres of music ranging from Sauder's hard-rock ballads to the soothing sound of the violin.

Jun Mikami's biggest hope is that his performances will provide a relaxing environment to the audience while playing his violin to the theme of "Schindler's List," among other songs.

"I am hoping the people will feel something through the pieces I play," said Mikami, a senior in music business from Nara, Japan.

The performance at Melange is only one of many activities the MBA participates in. The group recently made a trip to Nashville, Tenn., to meet with several professionals in the music business. Chris Hollis, the president of MBA, said there should be more classes available that cater to music business majors.

"If you teach them how to think through the music business process, they will be able to use it in the real world," said Hollis, a junior in music business from Waverly.

Hollis will join the performers in a classical-guitar trio. While the music is the focus of the event, the performances will also give experience to students in such fields as radio television. The other positions include working on lighting and sound.

However, the main focus of the event is to provide an entertaining evening and promote the MBA.

"I'm hoping lots of people will show up," Mikami said. "I would like people to know what the Music Business Association is about and even get some new members."

"It just shows the candidates attempt to further appeal to older voters."

Despite Mann and Teel's skepticism, elderly voters still come out to regularly cast their votes, said James Lindsey, an election judge for the Makanda Township.

Lindsey, himself a visitor to the Senior Adult Services, is working as an election judge for a third year, and said they expect at least 400 voters on election day, many of whom will be seniors.

"If they say they'll be there, they'll be there," he said. "You see the same ones over there all the time. It's very seldom if they miss it, unless they're sick or something."

Arnold said such dedication is not unusual for a generation that came of age during the Cold War and the Great Depression. Much of their core American values can be traced to those periods, she said.

"The notion of civic participation was very meaningful to them. They grew up with voting as a civic responsibility," she said.

But along with civic participation, senior voters are major players in terms of the political spectrum. With toss-up states such as Florida and Pennsylvania winning the senior vote will be key in securing a majority in electoral college votes come November, Arnold said.

"With this being such a close race, the elderly voting population will be very significant in those key states," she said.

Image seminar counteracts Breast Quest 2000

Women's Action Coalition to peacefully protest
Breast Quest 2000

GINNY SKALSKI
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Sifting through a past edition of Elle magazine, Ruby Stoneking pauses when she spots an image of a woman sitting Indian style sporting a black business suit. She cuts it out to be placed on a poster board proclaiming the positive images the media use to portray women.

Stoneking was one of about 15 people to attend an image seminar Wednesday hosted by the Women's Action Coalition. The seminar was sponsored to send an alternative message to Breast Quest 2000, a contest sponsored by Sixx Bar and Billiards, 517 S. Illinois Ave., that will give away a pair of breast implants to the winner of the contest.

The Women's Action Coalition is encouraging students to peacefully boycott Sixx this weekend instead of picketing to draw attention away from the bar.

Sixx management did not return DAILY EGYPTIAN phone calls regarding the boycott.

"A contest like that sends negative messages to women and we didn't like the negative images," said Greta Salamando, a graduate assistant for Women's Studies. "We're asking people not to go to Sixx, don't give your money to Sixx."

The seminar discussed the role media and society play in setting standards for what women should look like. The first portion of the seminar allowed participants to cut out both negative and positive images of women from magazines. The images were then pasted to poster boards for everyone to compare.

"I'm so desensitized to this stuff I don't even know what's negative anymore," said a junior in elementary education who asked that her name not be used.

The student, 28, had a breast implant five years ago, a decision she said she made without much thought. She was a waitress at Hooters, a restaurant well known for its scantily clad waitresses, and wanted to earn more tips.

She had the implants removed about 18 months later after more and more reports were surfacing about leaking implants. After they were removed, she discovered one of her silicone implants had been leaking. One of her friends is participating in Breast Quest and the former Hooters employee is trying to discourage her and get her to think about it more.

"I wasn't looking at the big picture when I decided to have this surgery done," she said.

"I wasn't raised to feel inadequate."

Stoneking, a freshman in Chemistry from Arenzville, attended the seminar because she is writing an essay for her English class about how media portray women as extremely thin. As she flipped through magazines looking for negative images of women, she said she would never participate in Breast Quest.

Stoneking said she is confident with her appearance and can not understand why women would want everyone to know they desired breast implants.

"I think women should be confident with their bodies and the way they look," Stoneking said.

Justin O'Neill was the only male who participated in the seminar. He said he feels Sixx is creating an "atmosphere like what happened at

I was glad to see that [the Women's Action Coalition] is doing something more positive than just having a boycott. Just talking about the problem doesn't do anything, but having a [seminar] like this is a step toward a solution.

Gatsby's last year." He was referring to an incident in which two men allegedly beat up an SIUC woman at Gatsby's II Bar and Billiards, 610 S. Illinois Ave., when she would not dance with them.

"I was glad to see that [the Women's Action Coalition] is doing something more positive than just having a boycott," said O'Neill, a May graduate of SIUC. "Just talking about the problem doesn't do anything, but having a [seminar] like this is a step toward a solution."

Morris Library expansion to be named for Jeanne Simon

Simon

GEOFFREY RITTER
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Jeanne Hurley Simon spent her life in a love affair with books and libraries. And even after her death, her passion has not been forgotten.

Eight months after Jeanne died while recovering from an operation to remove a malignant brain tumor, campus officials are planning to honor her life's work with a 50,000-square-foot expansion to Morris Library's north entrance.

According to interim Dean of Library Affairs Jim Fox, Jeanne had been involved in planning the project since it came up about two years ago, and naming the final product in her honor is an appropriate memorial.

"Her work and charm helped bring a lot of people to the project," Fox said. "When she died, it just seemed a natural thing to do."

Currently in the planning phase, the project's progress hinges upon receiving $1.9 million for architectural planning purposes — a figure included in SIUC's fiscal year 2001 budget proposal to the Illinois Board of Higher Education.

Scott Kaiser, spokesman for the Office of the President, said he anticipates no problem in the state doling out the money for the project's planning and eventual construction phase.

First hatched during the administration of former SIUC Chancellor Jo Ann Angersinger, the two-story expansion to the library's north entrance, facing Pulliam Hall, would serve as a new main entrance to the building and provide the library with a "front door on campus," Fox said.

The heart of the library would move into the new wing, with the front desk and several offices housed within. With additional funds being sought from private donors, Kaiser said the project could be completed in the next three to four years.

"It's been mentioned for several years that renovation needs to be done to Morris Library," Kaiser said. "It is a great library that we need to make even better."

Jeanne was a great believer in and supporter of libraries. I know she would love it, and I know I appreciate it.

PAUL SIMON
husband of Jeanne Hurley Simon

And making it better was one of Jeanne's goals all through life, said Paul Simon, director of the Public Policy Institute and Jeanne's husband of almost 40 years. The two shared a common interest in libraries as husband and wife, Paul said, and he continues to regularly check out books from Morris Library.

The honor is something Jeanne would have loved, he said.

"Jeanne was a great believer in and supporter of libraries," Paul said. "I know she would love it, and I know I appreciate it."

Internet II: a new beginning

New technology expected to enhance research

DAILY EGYPTIAN

The University is hoping to change the way research is done on campus with the implementation of new cutting-edge Internet technology.

Internet2 is designed to enhance research within campus departments. The new advanced technology offers better Internet capability than existing Internet connections.

Along with a faster connection through a broader bandwidth, I-2 will also provide researchers with the ability for multicasting — which allows content to be shared with multiple users.

University officials are not planning to extend the new technology to students at this time, but once the system is in place, the University will explore the possibility of making I-2 available for the entire campus.

"This is directed more toward the research people," said Vice Chancellor for Administration Glenn Poshard. "It's not a matter of hooking the whole campus up. It will mainly be in those colleges where fairly intensive research is taking place."

Other campus officials who are not directly involved in University research are also contemplating ways to utilize the new technology.

John Koropchak, dean of the graduate school, said I-2 will aid his department in the areas of teleconference with other entities around the state, and also provide the school with the ability to interact more closely with statewide agencies.

This is directed more toward research people. It's not a matter of hooking the whole campus up. It will mainly be in those colleges where fairly intensive research is taking place.

GLENN POSHARD
vice chancellor for Administration

"It will, I'm sure, have a positive impact on what we do here," he said. "It is something important that the campus needs. There are a number of things we could improve, and it will help researchers everywhere have better communication."

I-2 is expected to cost the University a total of $200,000, including a $25,000 one-time membership fee and $100,000 for a Local Area Network (LAN) upgrade to existing systems. The new system will not interfere with the University's current Internet system, but will it will help in research, he said.

"It will greatly facilitate our goal in taking on more intensive research," Poshard said. "With the kind of research University we are, we don't want to be without this connectivity."

Poshard said the University expects to have I-2 in place by the end of the year. SIUC will join more than 160 universities from across the nation that have already signed up for the new technology. Northwestern University, the University of Illinois-Chicago and the University of Illinois at Urbana Champaign are among the institutions in the state.

Until SIUC joins those universities, officials will work on establishing the necessary connections on campus for the new technology.

TWA flies visitors from St. Louis to campus

Prospective students fly free from St. Louis to Southern Illinois Airport to tour SIUC

MATT BRENNAN
DAILY EGYPTIAN

About 95 prospective students from the St. Louis area will gain a different view of SIUC this weekend — from thousands of feet in the air.

Instead of hopping on a bus or a train, the visitors will fly to Southern Illinois Airport in an MD-80 that Trans World Airlines will provide on Saturday.

The event is geared toward students who have a career interest in aviation. Once the prospective students arrive at 9 a.m., they will receive a tour of the aviation facilities and the campus.

Twenty-four SIUC alumni will be working on the TWA flight. They will help answer questions and get a chance to visit the school again themselves, said David NewMyer, chair of aviation management and flight.

Once the plane lands, the visitors will be paired up with SIUC students to aid them through their day.

"We try to pair them up with our students in the corresponding program," said Tiffany Huszagh, an undergraduate student worker in aviation management from Kildeer.

The SIUC students will answer any questions the visitors may have on the tour of the aviation facilities and the campus.

NewMyer said the school draws a lot of students from the Chicago area. What they would like to do is increase exposure in other areas of the state.

"We're trying to get greater exposure for the University in the St. Louis area," said NewMyer.

NewMyer said SIUC needs greater exposure in that region, because it is closer to SIUC than Chicago, but we are not drawing as many students from there.

TWA is donating the use of the airplane for the day. NewMyer estimated that this will cost them somewhere around $10,000 in expenses and lost profits.

The plane will depart from Southern Illinois Airport at 3:45 p.m., and arrive back at Lambert Airport in St. Louis around 5 p.m.

MINESBOK PARK - DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Union County Colorfest, "Pumpkin Town," will take place Saturday and Sunday at the Choate Mental Health and Developmental Center in Anna. Each year the pumpkins represent a different theme. They will be sporting the faces of cartoon characters for the 2000 Colorfest.

Colorful festival needs workers

Union County Colorfest includes numerous events, fewer volunteers

JENNIFER WIG
DAILY EGYPTIAN

From tractor pulls and softball games to Hee Haw shows and colorful pumpkins, the Union County Colorfest has pulled out the stops for the ninth-annual fall celebration.

But the celebration may be dying out faster than the falling leaves the festival celebrates, according to some representatives.

Kevin Cox, chairman of the Dongola Colorfest, said small communities need this type of festival.

"I'd hate to see it die," Cox said. "It brings the people to town. It's [about] getting to see each other and celebrating fall."

The Union County Colorfest includes the towns of Anna, Jonesboro, Lick Creek, Alto Pass and Dongola. Last year eight towns were included in the festival.

Cox said there is not enough interest and he became the chairman only to keep the festival alive in his town.

Despite his gloom about the festival, Cox is excited about the events in Dongola this weekend, which include tractor pulls, softball tournaments, craft tents, food vendors and an antique-car show. Music will include bluegrass, country and blues. All the events will be at the Dongola Ball Park, exit 24 off Interstate 57.

Cheryl Gee, coach of the "Pumpkin Town" event in Anna, is excited about her participation in the event. Gee leads residents and patients of the Choate Mental Health and Developmental Center in the annual decoration of 250 pumpkins. Each year the pumpkins represent a different theme, sporting the faces of cartoon characters for the 2000 Colorfest.

"It's a pretty creative thing we do," Gee said. "It gives our patients a chance to get out and do something to make themselves feel like part of the community."

show, will return to Anna, thanks to Connie Boyd. Boyd is the writer, director and producer of reenactments and songs creating a "jam-packed show" for the Colorfest. This is Boyd's third year participating in the event, and second producing Hee Haw entertainment.

Boyd is also fearful of the fading festivities, but said she will continue to do her part.

"It's my way of giving back to the community," she said. "We always plan to do the show."

The show is presented at the Anna-Jonesboro High School Auditorium, 608 S. Main St., Anna, at 7 p.m. Saturday and 1:30 p.m. Sunday. The cost is $4 for adults and $1 for children. Part of the proceeds are donated to the Union County Chapter of the American Cancer Society.

Anna is also the host of the sixth-annual biathlon, a five-kilometer run followed by an 18.2-mile bike ride through Union County. The biathlon begins at 8:30 a.m. at the Choate Mental Health and Developmental Center grounds, 1000 N. Main St., in Anna.

Chris Wells, who organizes the biathlon, said the festival's problem is in the interest of the residents who are working for the community.

The Union County Chamber of Commerce has been working to put together a unified committee for the annual festival, which may solve future participation problems.

"It's difficult to get volunteers to help promote a community event," he said. "People need to realize that Colorfest is for the benefit of the whole community. It's intended to bring people into Union County who wouldn't usually be here."

Other events include historical tours, bands, food and crafts at the Lick Creek General Store, exit 36 off Interstate 57, an art show and sale at the Jonesboro Square, 202 Public Sq., and bands, seafood and wine at the Alto Pass Winery, 8515 Highway 127, Alto Pass.

sonable cost.

"This means they also get to interact with many scholars whose work they've read in their classes, whose names they've heard and whose research they have to emulate," she said.

Grubb said he is going to the convention because he has an extreme interest in telecommunication.

"It appeals to a topic that I'm obviously interested in — electronic communication — on a global level," Grubb said.

Grubb is looking forward to the weekend because it will give him the opportunity to share his cross-cultural study of the use of the Internet by American and Japanese people. He said the conference will give him the chance to exchange ideas with other scholars.

"We will have a large number of people presenting research in the communication area," Gher said.

Gher said he wants to see a lot of discussion among the diverse crowd of scholars that will be present at the conference.

"It should be a global dialogue. Often times, policy begins with academic discussion," Gher said. "We hope to begin new dialogues in search of peace."

SIU President James Walker will give the welcoming address at tonight's opening ceremony.

"SIU is certainly important in terms of being a part in this project," Walker said. "It is extremely important to the University and the community to be involved."

The keynote address, "From Obligation to Opportunity: New Visions for Media," will be provided by Hussein Amin, a professor at American University in Cairo, Egypt. marked the first board meeting attended by SIU President James Walker as well as new trustee appointee Gene Callahan.

"This is a good time for me and a great time for all of us," Walker said after being introduced by board chairman A.D. VanMeter.

VanMeter took a minute to praise Callahan, who was appointed Wednesday by Gov. George Ryan.

"He is a man of great principle, great interests and a man of commitment," VanMeter said. "I think the governor was extremely wise to appoint him."

Callahan, father of SIU baseball head coach Dan Callahan, assured meeting attendees his son's position would pose no conflict of interest and that he would excuse himself from baseball-related issues.

"I don't speak for my son and my son doesn't speak for me," Callahan said, adding he was proud to be a Democratic appointee to the board and would serve to the best of his capabilities.

Quinn was not in her position during the summer when plans for this weekend were finalized, but she wants this weekend to be geared toward the entire family.

"We want to give the students as well as the family something different from their everyday events," Quinn said.

Thomas, who performs in the Illusionara act at Six Flags St. Louis, will perform at Shryock Auditorium Saturday at 8 p.m. Thomas' website says his act joins glitter and family entertainment. His show is known for the finale, when Thomas mysteriously materializes a Harley Davidson motorcycle from thin air. Tickets for Thomas' performance are $15.

Each group is allowed eight minutes to sing and dance to whatever they choose, usually in costume. Traditionally, organizations would sing their fraternity or sorority song, but this year musical selections range from an Elvis medley to Green Day to swing dancing.

The Sigma Kappa and the Delta Zeta sororities are teaming up, putting on a performance themed "together." The two groups will perform songs including "Let's Get Together" from The Parent Trap and "We Go Together" from Grease.

The two sororities decided on this theme because the Sigma Kappa president, Lindsey Geradot, has a blood sister in the Delta Zeta sorority.

Kristen Suryk, president of the Delta Zeta sorority, said all the sisters voted on the idea and wanted to join forces for the sing, including a possible duet from the blood sisters.

"Both of our sororities are based on sisterhood," Suryk said. "We usually do it by ourselves. We thought it'd be something different."

Suryk was excited about the freedom to choose their own theme this year.

"It's easier when we don't have something set," she said. "We have more to choose from. We can do our own thing rather than be restricted."

The Theta Xi fraternity will judge the event, with six members rating performers based on choreography, costumes, music and group participation. Trophies will be awarded for first place and runners-up in addition to awards for the most original, best costume and group participation.

Twelve members of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority practiced Thursday by the fountain on Old Main, singing different words to "Manic Monday" by the Bangles.

Michelle Snelten, activities chair for Alpha Gamma Delta, said they hope to win this year because after 13 consecutive wins, they lost last year. Their theme is nine-to-five, focusing on what the women do every day. Snelten said the theme was to "show everyone how we are."

Adams expects about 300 parents to attend and hopes students who see the program will enjoy it too.

"It's nice for the Greeks to get the chance, like public relations," Adams said. "It's nice for others to see that aspect of the Greek system."

FRED'S Live Music Every Saturday Night!

THINGS TO DO PARENT'S WEEKEND THIS FALL!

1. On Friday night don't let any black cats cross your path... It's Friday - the 13th.
2. Saturday morning go see Fern at Harbaugh's and ask her about the new Mexican skillet.
3. Afterwards, drive to Giant City State Park and admire the fall colors.
4. Saturday afternoon go see Robbie Stoke's band 4 on the floor at the Von Jakob Winery in Pomona. Please note how many times Robbie has to adjust the sound set. I'll bet he'll make 8 or more adjustments. He's so anal about sound.
5. Saturday night come out to Fred's and listen to the Country Sounds of Stealing Grace, live from Evansville.

South Carolina launches partnership to oversee skills training for students

DAVE HEUREUX
KNIGHT-RIDDER TRIBUNE

Steve Byrne wants to work in sports marketing some day. At 17, he's already studied tourism and general marketing while still in high school.

Lauren Young is 17, and intends to major in business at college. She's taking comprehensive courses in multimedia computer presentations and Microsoft Office.

Nathaniel Wingard is 16, and hopes to work in computers. He's studying to earn a network administration certificate from Cisco Systems.

All three are taking advantage of local programs that will help prepare them for high-wage, high-technology careers.

On Monday, state leaders launched a statewide program called "Carolina Careers: South Carolina's Skills Education System." Carolina Careers will be a statewide partnership of educators and executives that, for the first time, will oversee what has been a series of local partnerships between schools and employers.

"We're forming 16 regional consortia around the state to make a consistent package, and fill in the information gaps for students and parents," said James R. Couch, director of Career and Technology Education for the S.C. Department of Education.

Carolina Careers builds on the Work-to-School programs devised in 1994. The new program links the resources of 86 school districts, 16 technical colleges, plus two- and four-year colleges and universities, local chambers of commerce and business partners.

"It'll be a coordinated effort," Couch said. During a brief kick-off ceremony at the Cisco Systems plant near Lexington, Gov. Jim Hodges noted that the state's work force no longer can thrive with just a high school diploma.

"Eighty-five percent of the jobs now being created require education beyond high school," he said.

The Carolina Careers program will continue to emphasize a mix of academic skills and specific practical work skills.

Students spend most of the day in high school, but undertake specialized skills training, such as computer networking, away from regular classes.

"Our skills education program will be rigorous, helping kids discover their unique talents with an active, hands-on education," said S.C. Education Superintendent Inez Tenenbaum, state education superintendent.

The statewide program also will help provide many of the 50,000 new skilled professionals South Carolina businesses need to hire each year.

"Our economic advantage will come from a well-skilled, well-educated work force," said Hunter Howard, president and CEO of the S.C. Chamber of Commerce.

Many U.S. manufacturing and research companies have had to hire foreign specialists to make up for the lack of Americans interested or skilled in technology.

"These [technical] skills are not a priority for many American students," said Jim Hudgins, executive director of the S.C. Board for Technical and Comprehensive Education.

Putting the pieces together

Men's golf travels to Tuscola for the Eastern Illinois Invitational

JAVIER SERNA
DAILY EGYPTIAN

An entire team effort will be the focus of the SIU men's golf team as it heads to Tuscola this weekend for the two-day Eastern Illinois University Invitational on Monday.

Earlier this week, in the Bradley Fall Classic in Peoria, the team's top two finishers landed in the top 10, but the other three were led by junior Mike Smith, who placed 29th, landing the team fifth place overall.

The players know that in order to finish in the upper tier, they will all have to play precise, consistent golf.

Anything less than that, and they'll remain at the middle of the pack.

"We're coming together," said team captain Brandon Bullard. "We've got what we need. We just need some more scores to put it all together."

Bullard missed the Fall Classic because of a misunderstanding that left him suspended for one day of tournament play by the NCAA. As the most experienced player on the team, the return of his leadership and consistency will be welcomed back.

Junior Brian Kolmer, who finished ninth in the Fall Classic, is one player who understood what the absence of Bullard meant.

"We didn't have Brandon ... so we were already at a disadvantage right there," Kolmer said.

Another player that will be relied upon to step up his play is Mike Smith, who along with Kolmer and Brad Dunker, had transferred from junior colleges this fall. Dunker led the team last weekend, tying for fifth overall, but Smith ended up in 29th. When the Salukis took third place in the Drury Invitational last month, Smith's 19th place finish was a major reason the team fared so well.

"I think there is a lot of internal pressure just to play good because we know that we can, but three of us are new here and we're kind of getting our wits about it," Smith said before conceding, "I'm not playing as good as I can be."

But with third, sixth and now fifth-place finishes so far this season, the team has reason to be proud with sights set on bigger and better things. But that means a well-rounded team performance, and not just a great effort from one or two players with a wide curve for the rest of the team.

"We've got a solid team right now ... we're really going to have to be mentally prepared and play the best that we can," Smith said.

been talking, but we'll see if they can back it up tonight.

"I've got myself for the favorite," chuckled sophomore forward Jermaine Dearman. "I have a few tricks up my sleeve I'm going to have to pull out."

Freshman Sylvester Willis, who was redshirted last season, said he had something tucked away in his back pocket for everyone, but added "you'll have to come to see it."

"He always says that," responded Dearman to Willis' back pocket reference. "We'll see. We'll see."

Senior forward Josh Cross will also play a factor in the outcome, while transfer Toshay Harvey could be a sleeper.

"I just hope none of them hurt themselves," Weber said.

The night will conclude with a 20-minute scrimmage from the men's and women's squads. The men are fresh off last season's postseason NIT appearance, while the women, who will be guided by first year head coach Lori Opp this year, struggled to a 8-20 mark.

The regular season starts Nov. 17 for the men, who are home against Long Beach State, while the women open up a day later on the road against Illinois-Chicago.

"Midnight Madness last year, it was incredible," Opp said. "The atmosphere was great, the players loved it. It was the biggest crowd we played to all year unfortunately, unless we're on the road."

And while Friday the 13th is usually categorized as a day for superstitions and black cats, the only animals lurking in Davies Gym will be Maroon and White Dawgs.

"To the coaches, it's not that big a deal, but for the kids it's a big deal, and for the community and fans I hope it's a big deal," Weber said. "It's just the celebration of the basketball season starting."

very hard."

The major bright spot for SIU has been its running game. Sophomore running back Tom Koutsos has rushed for 703 yards in the first five games. He has been called on to carry SIU's struggling offense, and Quarles said this week that he has no intention of lightning his star running back's load.

But a win — and beginning to turn around what has thus far been a very disappointing season — is the only thing on Koutsos' mind.

"We are disappointed at 1-4, but we're not going to let down," Koutsos said. "We've got to prepare for Drake like we do for Kansas or any other game. We are not going to take Drake lightly and hopefully we'll come out with a win."

Salukis look to knock off giant

SIU volleyball welcomes two MVC rivals, including powerhouse Northern Iowa

JENS DEJU
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The SIU volleyball team will be hoping to play the role of David this weekend when it faces the Goliath of the Missouri Valley Conference, the University of Northern Iowa.

Northern Iowa, the two-year reigning MVC Champions, come into town on a 46-match conference winning streak dating back to 1997 tonight at 7 in Davies Gymnasium.

In fact, the last time the Salukis defeated Northern Iowa was back in 1993. They have lost 13 straight since, bringing their all-time record against the Panthers to 7-23.

Despite all of this history going against SIU (8-10, 1-6 MVC), the Salukis are not intimidated by the much decorated Panthers (14-4, 7-0 MVC).

"I don't know if it's really intimidation, I mean we have to respect them because they are a good team, but we also have to give ourselves credit," said sophomore outside hitter Kristie Kemner. "We've worked just as hard as they have. We need to take all our talents and everything we do and [apply] them into the game."

SIU head coach Sonya Locke echoed her player's belief that they should not be intimidated by Northern Iowa. If anything, there is a feeling of excitement.

"There's the sense that if somebody's going to knock them off, we'd like to be the ones to do it," Locke said. "Especially being at home, the chances of that are greater than if we're playing them at their place."

There's the sense that if somebody's going to knock them off, we'd like to be the ones to do it.

SONYA LOCKE
head coach, SIU volleyball

The match against Northern Iowa tonight will come before SIU basketball's Almost Late Night event at Davies Gym. If the volleyball Salukis are to do the unexpected and dethrone the kings, they are going to need to play a lot better than they have been recently.

"We're just going to need to play consistently. We've had games where we've started out really slow and then we'll play well and then we don't finish," Locke said. "Then we start out really strong and don't finish. I'm just looking for them to play consistently."

Locke added that while she hates losing, it is easier to take when the team plays their best and gave themselves a chance to win the match.

"If we're going to go down then I would prefer that it's because it's a real hard fought match and our hitting percentage is good and our blocking is good and our digging is good but the other team was just better than us that day," Locke said.

Not only will the Salukis attempt to defeat Northern Iowa this weekend, but they will also have their hands full with Bradley University, which comes to town Saturday.

"We're really going to have to pull together, actually go out there with confidence, believing that we can do this," Kemner said. "Yes, they're two top teams in the conference, but this will be a good start for us if we come out, pass well and play with a lot of confidence."

While the Braves (10-6, 3-4 MVC) may not have the same history as the Panthers, they are still an obstacle that the Salukis need to overcome to make it to the MVC Tournament.

"They'd be nice wins to get us moving in the right direction and these are two top teams that we can knock off," Kemner said. "We have the capability and the talent to do so, and if we do that, people will have to start respecting us more and maybe we'd start believing in ourselves."

Women netters finish fall on high note

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The SIU women's tennis team concluded its fall season by winning five of seven singles matches and two of three doubles contests against Murray State University Wednesday in Murray, Ky.

Ana Serrot, Erika Ochoa, Tana Trapani, Rachel Morales and Sarah Krismanits all won their singles matches in the No. 1 through No. 5 slots, respectively.

Serrot and Ochoa paired up to win the No. 1 doubles competition, 8-2, while Krismanits and Keri Crandall teamed up for a victory in the No. 3 position, 8-3.

Saluki head coach Judy Auld was pleased to finish the fall season with such positive results.

"It was nice to finish up in a dual meet," Auld said. "We had some good young players perform well for us this fall. I thought our doubles teams played especially well all season."

Auld suffered a blow to her program when her top two players—Simona Petrutiu and Pamela Floro—elected to transfer before the season started, but Auld had some gutsy performances from players that were forced to step up and play at higher rankings.

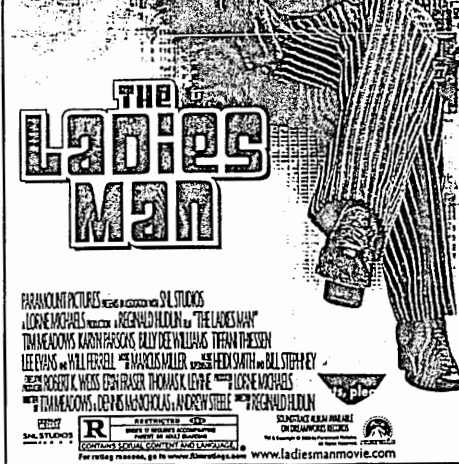

"It pushed people to do more," Auld said. "I think you just have to do what you have to do to step up and keep going."

The college basketball season officially begins tonight at Davies Gym

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Now that Rolan Roberts is in town, Davies Gym has breakaway rims.

The SIU basketball transfer will make his inaugural appearance tonight for Almost Late Night, SIU's version of "Midnight Madness," marking the official start of the college basketball season. The first official practice for the Salukis is Saturday morning.

"We purchased breakaway rims because of Rolan," said third-year Saluki head coach Bruce Weber. "I was afraid with his 250-some pounds and his forward strength that we might be in trouble if he pulled that rim down, so we've got breakaway rims."

The brawny Virginia Tech transfer will have to sit out this season due to NCAA transfer rules. However, he is allowed to participate in tonight's festivities, giving Saluki fans a sneak peek of the 2001-2002 season.

But Saluki fans can also catch a glimpse of the 2000-01 men's and women's Dawgs as Almost Late Night kicks off at 11 tonight, with the doors opening at 10:15. Fans can come to Davies at 9:30 for a tailgate party with free food and soda, as the men's and women's coaching staffs are doubling as chefs.

And the food should be scrumptious, as Weber claims he's quite the grillmaster. "I'm from Wisconsin, I've done brats for quite a while, so I think I can go with the best of them on that," Weber said. "Now you get in some other stuff I'm not sure I can deal with it."

But back to basketball. The event is slated for Davies Gym rather than the SIU Arena for the second straight year to create a more intimate atmosphere. Roberts has been hyped as the odds-on-favorite to win the slam dunk contest, although he almost bowed out of the competition because Davies' rims were not breakaway before this year.

"The dunks I do require breakaway rims," Roberts said.

While Roberts has been talked up as the man to beat by teammates and Weber, he'll have some competition on what is being billed as an extremely athletic Saluki squad. Several players have

Salukis aim to get well versus Drake

Struggling SIU can't afford to underestimate pugnacious Bulldogs

ANDY EGENSE
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The SIU football coaching staff made a change in the 2000 schedule to make this week's home game a little easier.

Drake University, a Division I-AA non-scholarship team, has taken the place of what was supposed to be a mid-season contest versus the University of South Florida, and will travel to McAndrew Stadium for a 1:30 kickoff Saturday afternoon.

The Bulldogs (5-0) have gotten off to a great start with decisive wins against lower level teams such as McKendree College, St. Ambrose University, San Diego State and Valparaiso University.

So the Salukis aren't looking past them.

"How can we ever look somebody?" questioned senior linebacker Teddy Sims. "We can't overlook anybody. We feel like we're the underdogs. They are 5-0, and they should be the favorite. Whether they're non-scholarship or not, they are getting the job done. They're winning and we're not."

SIU is coming off a 42-17 Homecoming loss to Western Illinois University, but even after the rough start, the Salukis (1-4, 1-1) could conceivably still contend in the Gateway Conference.

But for now, Drake is the main priority. SIU senior quarterback Sherard Potette said if the Salukis do not take Drake seriously, SIU could be in trouble.

KERRY MALONEY - DAILY EGYPTIAN

The SIU football team takes on Drake Saturday at McAndrew Stadium. The Salukis badly need a win against the Bulldogs, who are 5-0 but are a non-scholarship team.

"It'll be very hard for us to not overlook them. It's important for us that we don't so [Drake] doesn't come up and sneak up on us," Potette said. "We need a win this week to get us going into our conference schedule."

SIU can use this game as momentum for the remainder of conference play. The Salukis are in a three-way tie for second place in the Gateway Conference standings with the University of Northern Iowa and Southwest Missouri State.

The Salukis play at Southwest Missouri State next week.

But SIU football head coach Jan Quarless is not looking any further than the Saturday game versus the undefeated Bulldogs.

"I think [Drake is] very enthusiastic, I think they are an intelligent football team," Quarless said. "They do what most people are doing. They set their schedule up very well ... so now they are 5-0 and you can see that they play together and work
