29 wiener dogs dress up, race for charity

A dog in jean shorts had barely started its fashion walk when it suspiciously squatted in the grass.

"Oh no, he's gotta poop!" yelled a lady who noticed the dog as it paused.

Almost 30 Dachshunds and their owners gathered Saturday at the Anna City Park for Kid's Fest: featuring the 3rd annual Wiener Dog Race and Wiener Dog Fashion Show.

The event is a fundraiser for the Children's Medical Resource Network, said Ginger Meyer, an event coordinator and medical caseworker for the group. She said the group provides children with a chance to have fun and learn about health through such things as dental and vision screenings. The Children's Medical Resource Network is a four-year-old program under the SIU School of Medicine.

"We developed the Kid's Fest so we can have a fun and educational activity for kids, to raise awareness about child abuse and raise funds," Meyer said.

The wiener dog fashion show and race were the last events of the day. Crowds of people, both young and old, gathered around the 75-foot racetrack and fashion runway to cheer for the 29 wiener dogs.

Dogs came dressed as bees, princesses, skunks and — predictably — hot dogs to walk across a grassy runway flaunting their costumes on their elongated bodies and short limbs. No strings were attached — just leashes.

SIUC alumnus killed in New York plane crash

Crash also killed New York Yankees pitcher Cory Lidle

Brandon Augsburg
 DAILY EGYPTIAN

Last week's plane crash in New York City hit close to home for members of the aviation department at SIUC.

Tyler Stanger, 26, of Walnut, Calif., was killed along with New York Yankees pitcher Cory Lidle when Lidle's plane crashed into the 30th floor of the Belaire building in Manhattan on Wednesday. Stanger was Lidle's instructor, and the two were on a sightseeing flight around New York City. They were planning on taking a three-day trip back to southern California when they were killed.

Stanger graduated from SIUC in 2004 with a degree in aviation management and flight through the Mt. San Antonio College in Walnut, Calif., which is a satellite school of Carbondale's aviation program. Walnut, Calif., is located about 30 minutes east of Los Angeles.

Jeanne Scott, the aviation program adviser at the small California college, was Stanger's adviser while he was in college. She said she knew him for about five years and remembered him as a diligent and hard worker.

"For his age, he had quite a bit accomplished already," she said.

Stanger received his pilot's license when he was 17, and Scott said he was always looking to the future.

"He was very entrepreneurial," Scott said. "He was the first student who, upon graduation, wanted to open his own flight school."

Stanger opened his own business, Stang-AIR, three years ago. He offered flight instruction, rentals and sightseeing trips. A message on his Web site cited an anonymous quote: "The most dangerous part about flying is the drive to the airport."

Stanger ran the business out of Brackett Field, in nearby La Verne, Calif. He often used nearby Norm's Hangar restaurant as his pseudo office, said restaurant owner Kathy Touche. She said Stanger would come in a few times

Charles Gill now allowed on campus

One of nine Chicago-area freshmen temporarily banned from SIUC after his alleged involvement in an Oct. 6 attack is now allowed on campus again.

Meanwhile, six of the students remain barred and two are gathering material to appeal their suspensions.

On Friday, Student Judicial Affairs overturned the interim separation of Charles Gill, a freshman from Chicago studying computer engineering. The interim separations of Timothy Hart and Reshaun Scott were upheld.

Interim separation occurs when university officials deem a student a threat to the safety of the campus community. Separated students are not allowed on campus grounds. If they live in the residence halls,

An eight-page paper is the sentence for the SIUC student accused of putting a cooked pig's head on the hood of Chancellor Walter Wendler's car in May.

Student Judicial Affairs on Friday censured Garth Kiser, a 28-year-old senior from Murphysboro, and sentenced him to write a paper on how the university spends its tuition and student fee dollars.

Kiser was charged with disorderly conduct while a harassment charge was dropped. Both charges are violations of the university's Student Conduct Code.

The paper, which is due Dec. 1, requires Kiser to interview Wendler and Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Larry Dietz. Kiser said he plans to appeal the decision but said he would take the opportunity to get a sit-down interview with the chancellor.

"I'll appeal because I don't believe that the Student Conduct Code's definition of disorderly conduct is constitutional," Kiser said in an e-mail.

SIUC police on Sept. 8 arrested Kiser and accused him of putting a pig's head on Wendler's car during

Son charged with killing parents, sisters in Iowa

BONAPARTE, Iowa (AP) — A 22-year-old man has been charged with murdering his parents and three teenage sisters at their home in southeastern Iowa, a sheriff's office said Sunday.
 Shawn Bentler is accused of gunning down five family members and faces five counts of first-degree murder, the Van Buren County Sheriff's Office said. He is being held on a $2.5 million bond at the Adams County jail in Quincy, Ill.

The victims were found early Saturday near Bonaparte, according to the sheriff's office. They were identified as Michael Bentler, 53; his wife, Sandra, 47; and their daughters Sheena, 17; Shelby, 15; and Shayne, 14. Autopsies were planned for Sunday.

The sheriff's office said that it received a 911 call from Shayne Bentler at 3:38 a.m. Saturday and that she told the dispatcher her brother was "going to do something."

According to sheriff's documents regarding the 911 tape, a gunshot is heard in the background and someone screams, "Shawn, no!" The line then goes dead.

Authorities said they received a second 911 call at the same time from the cell phone of Sandra Bentler. That call went unanswered.

Bentler was arrested Saturday in Quincy, about 60 miles from the family's home, on an unrelated charge of possession of drug paraphernalia, according to the Adams County sheriff's office.

Jim Saunders, spokesman for the Iowa Department of Public Safety, said investigators have not offered a motive for the killings.

Man arrested for Franklin County slayings

ZEIGLER (AP) — A 46-year-old Illinois man has been arrested in New Mexico for a double homicide in the Franklin County city of Zeigler, said Illinois State Police.

James A. Coulter of Herrin was arrested Saturday and charged on an Illinois warrant with two counts of first-degree murder, authorities said. He was being held early Sunday at a jail in Valencia County, N.M., in lieu of $2 million bond.

Jack Weston, 31, and Amanda L. Tope, 31, of Herrin, were discovered shot to death Friday in Weston's home, police said.

The arrest resulted from a coordinated multi-agency effort involving police agencies in Illinois and New Mexico, authorities said.

POLICE REPORTS

David Sherrill Jr., 24, of Murphysboro was arrested and charged with driving with a suspended license at 3:33 p.m. on Saturday on Mulberry Street in Murphysboro. Sherrill Jr. posted bond and was released pending a court appearance.

Travis Wooley, 19, of Carbondale was arrested and charged with domestic battery shortly before 3 a.m. on Friday at the Crossings Trailer Court located north of Carbondale. Wooley was released from custody after posting bond late Friday morning, when he allegedly made a harassing telephone call to the victim. Wooley is now wanted for violation of a 72-hour bond condition and is at large.

Misty Dempsey, 32, of Desoto was arrested and charged with concealing or aiding a fugitive and endangering the health and safety of a child at 10 a.m. on Saturday as Dempsey was driving into Carbondale. Dempsey was taken into police custody.

Gregory L. Rowe, 38, of Murphysboro was arrested and charged with unlawful use of weapons by a felon at 11:40 p.m. on Friday at the 2100 Block of Roblee Street in Murphysboro. Police said Rowe was in possession of pistol ammunition. Rowe was taken to Jackson County Jail pending a court appearance.

Thomas W. Jones Jr., 24, was arrested and charged with unlawful use of a weapon and no valid firearm owner's identification card at 11:40 p.m. on Friday at 2115 Roblee St. in Murphysboro. Police said Jones Jr. had a concealed 9mm handgun on his person. Jones Jr. was issued notice-to-appear citations for both charges and was transported to Jackson County Jail.

Homecoming nothing out of the ordinary for police

Brandon Augsburg
DAILY EGYPTIAN

Homecoming has come and gone, and local police said the weekend went as planned.

SIUC Police Chief Todd Sigler said there was a good, cooperative crowd at the tailgate before the football game.

"We really appreciate the cooperation we've been getting from the people around there," he said.

He said SIUC Police did not make any arrests at the tailgate, which is an improvement from past years. Over the course of the weekend this year, the department made one DUI arrest, five underage consumption arrests and one arrest for criminal damage to property.

In 2005, they made one DUI arrest and four underage consumption arrests.

The Carbondale Police Department reported six DUI arrests, 18 underage consumption arrests and had nine reports of property damage this year. Last year, they made 23 arrests for underage consumption and had no DUI arrests.

He said most people just want to have fun on Homecoming weekend, so the officers relax a little as long as things don't get out of hand.

He said the university does a good job of spreading out Homecoming events, and that helps to take a little pressure off of the officers. He said the department works with the groups that set up events to help ensure everyone has a fun, safe time.

Sigler said the department changes its tactics for Homecoming to let the officers be more visible. He said it re-oriented the patrols, adding more foot patrols around campus and sending more officers into residence halls, something it doesn't normally do.

He said the department did not see anything out of the ordinary this year, and he said that has generally been the experience during Homecoming weekend.

Despite good feelings about the weekend, Sigler said Homecoming weekend is still a stressful time for the officers.

"There's additional folks in town, so it's a constantly busy weekend for traffic control and events," Sigler said.

Officer Randy Mathis at the Carbondale Police Department did not return calls for comment.

Grants awarded to new leadership program

Alicia Wade
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The Evergreen Terrace After School Program recently received a boost in funding to establish new leadership and programs for its youth.

The Adolescent Health Center in Carbondale will distribute the $300,000 grant from the Office of Community Services of the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services to 15 local community organizations, which includes the after-school program.

The money will be used to fund the Communities Empowering Youth program throughout Jackson County.

Jamie Corr, assistant program director for University Housing, works with the Evergreen Terrace After School Program. She said the program strives to put kids in action in the community.

"We are trying to develop and empower youth," Corr said. "We promote the idea that they can do some community service and get out and help."

The Evergreen Terrace After School Program is an on-campus organization that offers activities for children once school is dismissed. Corr said children in the program recently participated in the Lights on After School event with the Boys and Girls Club of Carbondale. The children colored paper light bulbs that, after being displayed at J.C. Penney, Inc. store will be sent to state legislators to remind them of the importance of after-school programs.

"We're just reminding them 'no budget cuts,'" Corr said. "We want to keep the lights on."

The grant is part of a nationwide effort, chaired by First Lady Laura Bush, to raise awareness of the struggles that today's youth, especially at-risk boys, face, according to the Web site for Helping America's Youth.

Corr said the Evergreen Terrace After School Program has a Girl Scout troop, but activities for boys are difficult to maintain.

"The boys are kind of envious of the Girl Scouts," Corr said. "But we really have no consistent leadership for the boys."

She hopes with the grant money, stable leadership for the boys can be trained and new programs can be developed.

Melissa Case, Violence Prevention Coordinator for the Adolescent Health Center, said the grant is used to help other organizations grow, and this one would be used to develop leadership, organization, new programs and community engagement.

Leftist, billionaire appear headed to runoff in Ecuador election

Monte Hayes
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

QUITO, Ecuador — A banana tycoon waging an old-fashioned populist campaign and a leftist outsider who is an admirer of Venezuela's President Hugo Chavez were virtually tied in Sunday's presidential election and looked likely to be headed to a runoff, exit polls showed.

Alvaro Noboa, Ecuador's wealthiest man, had 27.2 percent of the vote compared to 25.4 percent for Rafael Correa, a U.S.-educated economist, according to a poll by CEDATOS-Gallup. The poll, which had a margin of error of less than 2 percent, surveyed 40,000 voters.

A second poll, conducted by Informe Confidencial, had Noboa with 28.5 percent of the vote and Correa with 26.5 percent. The pollster said it interviewed 6,560 voters across the nation, with a margin of error of 1.5 percent.

A runoff will be held Nov. 26 if none of the 13 candidates gets 50 percent, or at least 40 percent of the valid vote and a 10-point lead over the rest.

Correa, 43, had surged ahead in recent polls before the election by pledging a "citizens' revolution" against the discredited political system. That has resonated with Ecuadorians, who forced the last three elected presidents from power.

A victory by him would further push Latin America to the left, with Ecuador joining left-leaning governments in Chile, Bolivia, Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay.

Standing in Correa's way, however, is Noboa, 55, who proudly points out he is Ecuador's biggest investor, the owner of 110 companies. He says he will use his business skills to bring Ecuador's poor into the middle class.

Making his third run for the presidency, Noboa moved up quickly in the polls in recent days to a close second behind Correa.

Both U.S. and Venezuelan officials — apparently wary of tilting the race with ill-advised comments, as both have done in recent Latin American elections — have been studiously silent about the rise of Correa, who last month called President Bush "tremendously dimwitted."

Despite that silence, Correa on Sunday accused the United States of meddling in the election.

While providing no specific examples, Correa told the Venezuelan-based Telesur TV network that Washington knows "that we are not going to be anyone's employee and that we will make our sovereignty respected."

He reiterated that he opposed a free-trade pact with the United States and would not renew in 2009 an agreement that allows the U.S. to use an Ecuadorian military base for drug surveillance flights.

Correa has also said he will renegotiate contracts with oil companies to secure more profits for his country's coffers. Although a relatively small producer, Ecuador's 535,000 barrels a day account for 43 percent of the national budget.

Many Ecuadorians, meanwhile, have been attracted to Noboa's promises to provide cheap housing and create a million jobs in this small Andean nation of 13.4 million people, 76 percent of whom are poor, according to UNICEF.

Driving up to a polling station in a red Mercedes Benz on Sunday, Noboa thanked Ecuador's poor for their support, saying: "I will keep my promises to you on housing, jobs and health."

Standing in line to vote in a school patio in Quito's colonial center, Julio Lopez, a 55-year-old tailor, said he planned to cast his ballot for Correa.

"If he governs well, perfect. But if he doesn't, we'll use the same belt he used for his campaign to run him out of office," he said. During the race Correa brandished a belt and promised to "give the lash" to the country's corrupt politicians.

Bar and restaurant workers get lung cancer twice as often as people in other jobs.

It's not a business issue.

It's a public health crisis.

A typical "non-smoker" who works in a smoky bar or restaurant involuntarily inhales almost a pack of cigarettes during an 8-hour shift.

Making all workplaces in Carbondale smoke-free including restaurants and bars, would protect workers and customers from the dangers of secondhand smoke.

6.6 magnitude quake strikes Hawaii

Greg Small
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

HONOLULU — A strong earthquake shook Hawaii early Sunday, causing a landslide that blocked a major highway on Hawaii Island and knocking out power across the state, authorities said.

The state Civil Defense had unconfirmed reports of injuries, but communication problems prevented more definite reports. Gov. Linda Lingle issued a disaster declaration for the entire island, saying there had been damage to buildings and roads.

The quake hit at 7:07 a.m. local time, 10 miles north-northwest of Kailua Kona, a town on the west coast of the Big Island, said Don Blakeman, a geophysicist at the National Earthquake Information Center, part of the U.S. Geological Survey.

Blakeman said there was no risk of a Pacific-wide tsunami, but a possibility of significant wave activity in Hawaii.

The Pacific Tsunami Center reported a preliminary magnitude of 6.5, while the U.S. Geological Survey gave a preliminary magnitude of 6.6. It was followed by several strong aftershocks, including one measuring a magnitude of 5.8, the Geological Survey said.

"We were rocking and rolling," said Anne LaVasseur, who was on the second floor of a two-story, wood-framed house on the east side of the Big Island when the temblor struck. "I was pretty scared. We were swaying back and forth, like King Kong's pushing your house back and forth."

Betsy Garties, who lives in North Kohala on the northern tip of Hawaii Island, said she was lying in bed with one of her two young children when the quake struck. She first stood under a door frame as safety experts advise, then found that too wobbly for comfort and ran into the yard.

"It was strong enough that it was wobbling, so you almost lost your balance running out into the yard," Garties said. "The house was visibly rocking."

The quake caused widespread power outages, and phone communication was possible but difficult. By mid-day Sunday, power was restored to Hilo on the Big Island and was starting to be restored to Maui, said Chuck Anthony, a spokesman for the Hawaii National Guard. Officials did not have a firm estimate of how many people were without power.

In Waikiki, one of the state's primary tourism areas, worried visitors began lining up outside convenience stores to purchase food, water and other supplies. Managers were letting tourists into the darkened stores one at a time.

Karie and Bryan Croes waited an hour to buy bottles of water, chips and bread. "It's quite a honeymoon story," said Karie as she and her husband sat in lounge chairs surrounded by their grocery bags beside a pool at ResortQuest Waikiki Beach Hotel.

Republican senators call for new strategy in Iraq

WASHINGTON (AP) — Two leading Republican senators called Sunday for a new strategy in Iraq, saying the situation is getting worse and leaving the United States with few options.

Sens. Chuck Hagel of Nebraska and John Warner of Virginia are part of the growing list of Republicans who are speaking out against President Bush's current plan for Iraq as U.S. casualties rise.

"The American people are not going to continue to support, sustain a policy that puts American troops in the middle of a civil war," Hagel said on CNN's "Late Edition."

Hagel said he agreed with Warner, chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, who said after a recent visit to Iraq that it was "drifting sideways." Warner has urged consideration of a change of course if the Iraq government fails to restore order over the next two or three months.

NEW ORLEANS — Asked to tell which of five likely bioterror weapons would cause specific symptoms, emergency room doctors in Chicago did poorly.

The 36 physicians and 37 doctors in training missed more than two-thirds of the questions about chemical weapons and more than half of those about biological agents, according to a report presented Sunday at the convention of the American College of Emergency Medicine in New Orleans.

A.U. refugees plea for international protection

KASSAB, Sudan (AP) — Refugees in the camps scattered across Darfur live in fear, saying the African Union peacekeeping mission does little to protect them even as rising violence is driving away crucial humanitarian aid.

"You have been here for three years now, and what have you done for us?" a tribal leader bitterly asked a delegation of AU soldiers and police that came to the Kassab refugee camp last week.

As they often must, the peacekeepers patiently explained to camp delegates that they had come to Darfur only to monitor the violence and have no mandate to fight it.

"You are witnessing what happens, but you aren't helping," retorted Attaieb Adem, a leader of the 25,000 refugees in Kassab.

Security Council approves North Korea sanctions

Edith M. Lederer
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

UNITED NATIONS — The U.N. Security Council voted unanimously on Saturday to impose punishing sanctions on North Korea including ship searches for banned weapons, calling Pyongyang's claimed nuclear test "a clear threat to international peace and security."

North Korea immediately rejected the resolution, and its U.N. ambassador walked out of the council chamber after accusing its members of a "gangster-like" action which neglects the nuclear threat posed by the United States.

The U.S.-sponsored resolution demands that the reclusive communist nation abandon its nuclear weapons program, and orders all countries to prevent North Korea from importing or exporting any material for weapons of mass destruction or ballistic missiles. It orders nations to freeze assets of people or businesses connected to these programs, and ban the individuals from traveling.

The resolution also calls on all countries to inspect cargo leaving and arriving in North Korea to prevent any illegal trafficking in unconventional weapons or ballistic missiles. The final draft was softened from language authorizing searches, but was still unacceptable to China — the North's closest ally and largest trading partner — which said it would not carry out any searches.

U.S. Ambassador John Bolton said North Korea's proclaimed test "poses one of the gravest threats to international peace and security that this council has ever had to confront."

"Today, we are sending a strong and clear message to North Korea and other would-be proliferators that there will be serious repercussions in continuing to pursue weapons of mass destruction," he said, in what appeared to be a clear warning to Iran, whose nuclear ambitions come before the Security Council again next week.

North Korea's U.N. Ambassador Pak Gil Yon countered by blaming the United States for forcing the country to conduct a test because of its "nuclear threat, sanctions and pressure."

Iraqi government postpones conference

Christopher Bodeen
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq's government indefinitely postponed a much-anticipated national reconciliation conference Sunday as a two-day spree of sectarian revenge killings and insurgent bombings left at least 86 Iraqis dead.

Meanwhile, a militant network that includes al-Qaida in Iraq announced in a video that it had established an Islamic state in six provinces, a propaganda push in its drive to force the withdrawal of U.S. forces and topple the American-backed Iraqi government.

The Mujahedeen Shura Council — an umbrella organization of insurgent groups in Iraq — said the new state was made up of six provinces including Baghdad that have large Sunni populations, along with parts of two other central provinces that are predominantly Shiite.

Responding to the statement, the speaker of the Iraqi parliament, Mahmud al-Meshhedani, derided the group's leaders as "vulgar with no religion, who only kill others under the pretext of jihad (holy war)."

"Those who believe in this council are ignorant and those who follow it are foolish," al-Meshhedani said. "This council caused the sectarian conflict as well as the displacement of both Shiites and Sunnis."

The militants' announcement appeared mainly symbolic, since no Iraqi insurgent group has the strength or authority to act as a rival government and none controls territory.

It underscored, however, the weakness of Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki's government and its inability to bring Iraq's deeply divided politicians together.

In announcing postponement of the reconciliation conference, the Ministry of State for National Dialogue said only that the gathering, which was planned for Saturday, had been put off for "emergency reasons out of the control of the ministry." The move reflected the upheaval worsening violence has wrought on efforts to stabilize the government and curb bloodshed.

With tears in his eyes, Dr. J. Kevin Dorsey, provost of the SIU School of Medicine, introduced the recipient of the Alumna Achievement Award at the Inspiring Women's Gala.

"Susan, you are simply the best," Dorsey said.

Dr. Susan L. Nagele of Kitale, Kenya, graduated from the SIU School of Medicine in 1981. After completing her residency with the SIU Family Practice Center in Carbondale in 1984, she felt her calling was beyond the borders of the United States.

"I knew that I wanted to do some overseas mission work for about three to six years," Nagele said.

Nagele returned to Carbondale on Saturday night to receive her award after 20 years in Tanzania, Kenya and war-torn southern Sudan. There, she worked as a primary care physician, learned three different languages and dealt with substandard hospital conditions.

"It's a great honor," Nagele said. "There are a lot of people here who helped me to do what I've done, and I'm very grateful for their contribution to my education. I'm very grateful in some small way to encourage other women."

She went on to say the United States is a blessed country where anyone, especially women, can achieve whatever he or she wants, which is an opportunity many women around the world do not have.

Nagele was one of five women to receive an Inspiring Women award, which were given for the third year at a dinner in the Student Center ballrooms. The other recipients were Gayla Borgognoni of Carbondale, Yolonde Peterson of Marion, Janet Proctor of Golconda and Dixie Lee Travelstead of Du Quoin. Each was given a glass bowl, inscribed with the words "Inspiring Women" and a plaque.

Borgognoni was recognized for her financial accomplishments in southern Illinois, becoming the first woman broker in the area, the first female member of the Rotary club and the first woman to serve on the Carbondale Business and Development Board.

Peterson was honored for her musical achievements in Marion. She currently serves as musical director at the First United Methodist Church in Marion and has worked to bring music and the arts to the community for more than 50 years.

Proctor serves as the state's attorney for Pope County and has worked as an advocate for senior citizens. She assists seniors with issues related to health, food, abuse and extended care.

Travelstead, known for her work with the youth of Du Quoin, said she was overwhelmed by the honor. She attributed her accomplishments to her 101-year-old mother, who, with only an eighth-grade education, taught Travelstead how to be the woman she is today. Her mother was unable to attend because of health-related issues.

Four students were also honored over the course of the night with scholarships from the Inspiring Women program. Recipients were: Justina Pruemmer, a senior from Dieterich studying elementary education; Jordana Pulliam, a junior from Harrisburg studying elementary education; Natalie McLean, a freshman from Anna studying English; and Danielle Spratt, a freshman from Oregon studying psychology.

The night also included silent and live auctions, featuring SIU President Glenn Poshard as the auctioneer. Proceeds from the event will go to finance scholarships for next year's recipients. The highest sellers were a year's tuition at John A. Logan College for $1,800 and a Caribbean cruise for $3,100.

Peterson summed up the intent of the night during her acceptance speech.

"This is a few inspiring a few until there is a whole generation of women inspired," Peterson said.

Israeli and Palestinian governments to meet

Mark Lavie
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

JERUSALEM — Prime Minister Ehud Olmert on Sunday said a planned summit with Mahmoud Abbas has been put on hold because of the Palestinian president's insistence that Israel release large numbers of Palestinian prisoners — the latest setback for U.S.-led efforts to restart peace talks.

Abbas has denied demanding a prisoner release as a condition for a summit. Israel insists that before it frees any of the estimated 8,000 Palestinians it is holding, a soldier captured in June by Hamas-linked militants in a cross-border raid must be returned.

Olmert announced late last month that he soon hoped to hold a meeting with Abbas, but the preparations bogged down over the prisoners. The two have met only once since Olmert took office in March, an informal chat in Jordan.

"We offered to meet with Abu Mazen, but apparently he is not interested," Olmert was quoted as telling a Sunday meeting of lawmakers from his Kadima party. Abbas is also known as Abu Mazen.

"He is conditioning a meeting on the release of prisoners and we will not release any prisoner's until (captured soldier) Gilad Shalit is released."

The season isn't over yet, Saluki fans

SIU's football team suffered its first loss Saturday, succumbing by a 37-10 score to Illinois State in front of a raucous homecoming crowd in Bloomington.

As it tends to be in sports and in life, this kind of bad news comes with multiple folds. The loss is bad enough, but with the loss comes the requisite drop in the polls. The Salukis came into the game ranked No. 7 in I-AA; expect that number to be somewhere closer to the teens in the upcoming poll.

Now at 2-1 in the Gateway Football Conference, the Salukis have fallen to a third place tie in the standings behind undefeated ISU, Northern Iowa and Youngstown State, which leads the Gateway with a 3-0 record.

All this can be disheartening to a Redbird-hating, Luke-Drone-cursing Saluki fan. But to the fans: You should know that this is far from the end. So if anyone tries to get in your ear talking about "here we go again," or "what backwoods college is going to eliminate us from the playoffs this year," just brush them off and hit them with one of these facts, or something else, which show the Salukis are still very much in control.

There has been no better win in the Gateway this season than SIU's Big Ten victory at Indiana.

- SIU controls its own destiny. With three more games against the only teams left with winning records in the conference, only one of them has a chance to be undefeated when they play SIU. After this weekend's clash versus 2-1 Western Kentucky and a visit to 1-6 Missouri State, the Salukis go against Youngstown State and UNI in consecutive weeks.

Those two teams go at it this weekend, and one will no longer be without a loss in the conference.

- The Redbirds have more than cupcakes on their menu: Illinois State's schedule features three winnable games (Western Illinois, Missouri State and Indiana State), but two of them are on the road, and the Redbirds will also face Youngstown State and Northern Iowa, ending the season in Cedar Falls.

- The Salukis know what they are capable of. There has been no better win in the Gateway this season than SIU's Big Ten victory at Indiana, which looks even better after the Hoosiers shocked No. 15 Iowa this weekend. Those type of wins are usually precursors to something special.

Plus, the Salukis have looked hungry all season, like they have something to prove. There was little complacency in star running back Arkee Whitlock's post-game comments Saturday. The Walter Payton Award challenger gained 144 yards against Illinois State.

"Yards don't mean anything for me," Whitlock said. "I'm determined to win football games."

Many coaches believe that successful teams need the occasional loss to re-focus them to do greater things, and maybe this weekend's loss will do that to the Salukis.

We'll never know unless we pay attention, so keep going out to McAndrew. Show the Salukis you still believe, and show the Hilltoppers they have no chance because this weekend's home game will say a lot about how far this team will go.

Flu kills thousands, costs billions, and it's all preventable

THE PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER

Fall is upon us, so flu can't be far behind.

Each winter, seasonal influenza kills 36,000 to 40,000 Americans, hospitalizes more than 200,000, and costs the economy more than $10 billion in lost productivity and direct medical expenses.

The best way to avoid its debilitating symptoms — high fever, headache, sore throat, muscle ache, exhaustion, runny nose — is an annual flu shot.

Now's the time to make those appointments.

Public health officials predict an abundant vaccine supply for the first time in four years — about 100 million doses. That's good news. Anyone who needs a vaccination should be able to find one.

In October 2004, the United States was caught by surprise when British health officials discovered contamination in flu vaccine supplies and cut off delivery from a Liverpool plant run by Chiron Corp. Since then, the Food and Drug Administration has stepped up inspections of U.S. suppliers.

People with high risk of flu complications should be sure to be vaccinated. They include children ages 6 months to 5 years; pregnant women; people over 50; nursing home residents; people with chronic illnesses; and health-care workers.

But healthy adults should line up this year, too. Beyond the protection shots afford individuals, widespread participation would shore up the U.S. public health system.

The Bush administration has encouraged drug manufacturers to increase their capacity to produce vaccine to prepare for a possible flu pandemic — a far more lethal virus that could kill 500,000 Americans, hospitalize more than 2 million, and cost the economy billions. The world is warily watching the virulent Asian avian flu, H5N1, for signs that it's mutating into a virus that passes easily from human to human. If it does, the world will need a vaccine quickly.

The plentiful supply of flu vaccine this year, ironically, could actually discourage future production if people don't take advantage. Drug companies that do not sell the bulk of their seasonal flu supply — it does not keep from year to year — may be reluctant to keep producing it.

Seasonal immunization also may help public health officials devise distribution strategies in the event of large-scale immunizations.

Take a break from raking leaves during October or November. Flu shots will be available in shot and nasal mist forms in multiple locations. They're smart medicine. A dose of prevention now could stave off misery later this winter.

Has P.C. gone too far?

LENE ADOLPHSON

Political correctness is unpopular with the American public. Political correctness has changed the verbal landscape.

Now, obese people have eating disorders. The retarded are developmentally disabled. Wayward children have behavior disorders. Drunks and dope addicts are substance abusers, and poor people are economically disadvantaged. Lazy people have "motivation issues." The main objection to political correctness centers on the fact that people believe constraints have been placed on their language and speech.

In some respects, this argument has merit; political correctness has at times impeded controversial debates. However, others argue political correctness only sheds light on offensive language and practices, and it is not a barrier to honest and straightforward discussions. So, where does the answer lie? It would seem that the anti-P.C. and pro-P.C. crowds are arguing over apples and oranges. It is important to be able to engage in honest discussions about genuine problems and to do so candidly. Nevertheless, the politically correct supporters are right, too. Certain terms, words and practices are offensive and need to be done away with.

So, while I wrote this column, I began to ponder this issue, and I asked myself several questions, such as why do we need political correctness? Do we need to become politically correct? Were we politically incorrect? Were people humiliated and disgraced because of their body size, gender, sexual preferences, viewpoints, race and looks? Were racial and sexual insults common at one time in the country? Were gay people relegated to secrecy? Were women and minorities second-class citizens? Were insults hurled at people because of their intellectual disabilities? More importantly, were people emotionally hurt by the usage of certain terms? Was there a need for the citizenry to change its attitudes and language? The answer is an overwhelming yes!

In short, the situation needed correction. Nonetheless, somehow being politically correct became entangled in a different issue. Political correctness in many cases subverted the discussion of serious problems, and as a result, we now see the sugarcoating of America. Yet, after careful analysis, it is quite apparent that because of the legacy of close-minded attitudes, repression and offensive language, our society needed to become politically correct in terms of its conduct toward the traditionally oppressed. Changing the behavior also meant changing the language. It took the women's movement and the civil rights movement to raise the public's consciousness about the status of women and minorities in American society, which I might add, was a politically incorrect environment.

Regrettably, there was a time in the United States when sexual and racial harassment was acceptable. Moreover, referring to women as girls, broads, babes, chicks and beavers was permissible. Before sexual harassment legislation, women in the workplace were often subjected to sexually directed jokes, leers, pornographic cartoons and other forms of inappropriate behavior. It was acceptable to openly use racial epithets, and I would submit that this was not morally, socially or politically correct.

The gay and lesbian movement has also raised awareness of their plight. Without a doubt, the behavior that has been perpetrated against gays has not been politically correct by any means. Some ministers have made verbally abusing gays as the centerpiece for many of their moral crusades. For years, GLBT individuals were forced to stay in the closet. Those who were courageous enough to openly reveal their sexual preference faced extreme ridicule and violence. Many gay people have endured untold abuse because of their sexual preferences. Shunned by their families, friends and religious institutions, gay individuals live a life filled with scorn and condemnation.

So, the question remains, has political correctness gone too far? For most, the answer is a resounding yes, and from this columnist, an enthusiastic maybe. However, if it has gone too far, it is because political incorrectness went even further.

It might be nice, but...

ERIC RANCATORE

Google's mapping service is a little too close for comfort, there should be some protection of privacy

I woke up on a normal morning, and it seemed to be everywhere. My morning ritual of watching CNN surprised me as well. Before my very eyes, they were crediting their map technology of Iraq to Google Earth. So with my ever-growing curiosity, I jumped on the World Wide Web to see what the buzz was all about. Turns out, this technology was pretty easy to use and quite shocking with these high-resolution pictures.

At this point in time, I had completely lost interest in the technology, until an event I didn't even expect to happen, happened. As I returned to my dorm room later that evening, my roommate was diligently at work on his laptop computer. I began pulling some books out to begin studying when he called me over to look at something on his computer. As I walked over, he had Google Maps on his computer screen. He had one of the high-resolution pictures loaded on his computer. It was a picture of my house. Google Earth surprised me.

I felt a slight discomfort, which made me question the ethics of Google Earth. This technology gives anyone the capability to log on to a computer and scour the entire world — obtaining an address to search and using that to pinpoint any area of the world is about all of the extensive training you need.

But how big of a security risk is that? Anyone with a computer, from any walk of life, can search for the specific location of your home. They can see how many trees are around the area as well as whether you have a pool or not. As I use the technology, I can even see the deck we built in our back yard as well as the dark gray color of the roof. This is getting even more uncomfortable.

In a day and age when it seems like the Amber Alert system is being used way too often, this tool seems to make an unnerving connection with sexual predators. If they can get a last name, now they're able to look up an address and further their research by locating the specific location of a person's home.

Is it me, or does this seem like a tool that needs to have some closer analysis?

Sure, this is a great resource when you want to look across the world for a school research project or get an idea of land layouts. Yes, anyone on any public street can come and take a photo of your home. However, does this put people at risk by putting all these high-resolution pictures online, being able to track down pictures of a child's walk home from school?

Google Earth might be a great tool when giving a viewer an idea of where a place is in the world or in putting a place to a name. Also, it might be integral for people researching landscapes. However, this information seems too accessible and too user-friendly. Maybe if there were not so many stories about missing children and child abductions, then I would be more comfortable with this.

Google Earth has surprised me.

Bush: Disciple of direct action?

DEAR EDITOR:

Currently, there is a debate in the political arena claiming President Bush's actions in the war against Islamic-fascism have created more terrorism. It appears that some people hold to the premise that radical Islamists will somehow magically disappear if we leave Iraq. Those who hold to this line of reasoning feel that it is President Bush's actions that have created more radicals.

Would it be accurate to also say that Martin Luther King caused more racism by intentionally creating a crisis during his marches for equal rights? Dr. King stated in his letter from Birmingham jail that, "The purpose of our direct-action program is to create a situation so crisis-packed that it will inevitably open the door to negotiation." Many people during Dr. King's time felt that the actions of Dr. King were making things worse, just as there are those today that claim that President Bush is making things worse. Both Dr. King and President Bush took firm action to deal with problems that for too long had been ignored.

Confronting a problem often exposes injustices that were already present. Islamic-fascism has wanted to bring down western civilization and submit us to their brand of theocracy long before President Bush took office. Likewise, racism existed long before Dr. King took to the streets. Despite these similarities, there is also a significant difference. Dr. King lived in a nation that valued rationality, therefore non-violent methods of direct action were ultimately effective. Unfortunately, President Bush does not have the option of using non-violent action when dealing with the pre-rational, Islamic-fascists. They are not interested in negotiations and can only be defeated by force.

Rec center classes ineffective

DEAR EDITOR:

As a dietetics student at SIUC, classes that are offered at the Student Recreational Center, like energy healing, seem very ineffective to me. The energy healing class is described as a class that uses "a variety of hands-on and hands-off techniques to balance and re-align the energy field within and surrounding the body will be introduced to affect physical, emotional and spiritual health..." One of the best ways to induce relaxation and healing is to partake in a nice little jog around the Campus Lake and eat a balanced diet. Not only does this give me clarity, but it also gives me peace of mind that my body is getting stronger and healthier. For more of a description of this class, students can check it out at http://www.siu.edu/~oirs/programs/pages/siuc\_fit.html. ## Darfur refugees plea for more protection from the international community

Alfred de Montesquiou

KASSAB, Sudan — Refugees in the camps scattered across Darfur live in fear, saying the African Union peacekeeping mission does little to protect them even as rising violence is driving away crucial humanitarian aid.

"You have been here for three years now, and what have you done for us?" a tribal leader bitterly asked a delegation of AU soldiers and police that came to the Kassab refugee camp last week.

As they often must, the peacekeepers patiently explained to camp delegates that they had come to Darfur only to monitor the violence and have no mandate to fight it.

"You are witnessing what happens, but you aren't helping," retorted Attaieb Adem, a leader of the 25,000 refugees in Kassab.

Since fighting between rebels, the Sudanese army and a militia of Arab nomads began in 2003, some 200,000 people have died in Darfur and 2.5 million have been displaced.

The AU mission came in 2004, but refugees' anger over their perceived ineffectiveness is strong.

"If there is nothing you can do, then you might as well go home, so that the United Nations come," Adem said.

He referred to refugees' widespread hope that August's U.N. Security Council resolution to send 20,000 U.N. peacekeepers to Darfur will be implemented. The AU force's mandate expires at the end of the year.

However, Sudan's president fiercely opposes the proposal, saying it would breach the country's sovereignty. For now, the U.N. seems bent on buying time by sending more than 100 military and civilian advisers to reinforce the AU mission and pushing for its mandate to be prolonged in order to avoid a dangerous security vacuum.

But refugees in Kassab say they do not see how their security could get any worse in their camp, on the frontline of a murky war zone where some 2,000 rebels clash with about 5,000 Sudanese soldiers and another 2,000 militia.

The militia, called the janjaweed, were recruited among nomad Arabs to help quell the ethnic African rebels and are blamed for much of the looting and violence against refugees.

But rebel violence and hostility to aid workers also has escalated since May, when one rebel faction signed a shaky peace agreement with the government.

Humanitarian groups and AU police say they withdrew from Kassab in September mostly because of the rebel violence.

The camp's clinic closed, so refugees in need of treatment trudge to the nearest town. Refugee women say taking that road, or even collecting firewood around the camp, exposes them to robbery and rape.

"Every day we risk being beaten, or even worse," said Kharidja Ibrahim, some of whose family had gone wood-gathering that morning. "We're waiting. In a few hours, we'll hear what has happened to them."

Tribal leaders say security has grown so bad that armed men now plunder the camp at will.

"Four days ago, they came in broad daylight and stole 84 goats," said Sheik Abdallah Shariff. He said nights are even worse.

"We can't sleep, we go to bed with our shoes on," in case they have to flee, he said.

Egyptian Maj. Ahmed El Serafy, who commands AU police in the sector of Darfur that includes Kassab, says improving security in Kassab is urgent for what few forces he has — 82 police for an area of 13,000 square miles.

"I knew it was going to be bad, but I never thought it would be this bad," he said.

College volunteering up sharply since 2002

Justin Pope
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some call them lazy, more interested in partying hard than helping out. But a new study shows college students volunteer at a rate that's grown sharply over the last few years.

The number of college students volunteering grew more than 20 percent, from 2.7 million to 3.3 million, between 2002 and 2005, according to a study being released Monday by the Corporation for National & Community Service, a federal agency. The growth rate for college students is more than double that for all volunteers.

"We have observed a historically significant surge in service interest by college students, probably the most remarkable increase since the 'Greatest Generation' of World War II," said Steve Goldsmith, the former mayor of Indianapolis and chairman of the corporation.

Altogether, about 30 percent of college students are volunteering, with tutoring and mentoring the most common activities.

Utah, Idaho and Oklahoma had the highest percentage of college students volunteering, while Georgia, New York and Nevada had the lowest.

The study uses data from the Current Population Survey, a regular household survey conducted by the government that in 2002 began asking questions about volunteerism.

That means the study doesn't show the trend before 2002, but much of the spike in volunteerism seems to date to the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

"What's remarkable is students who were in high school at the time of 9/11, and are now in college, have kept their interest in service at exceptionally high levels," Goldsmith said.

About one-third of K-12 schools now have service learning in the curriculum. A few colleges, and many individual college courses, have made service work mandatory.

But Goldsmith said he does not believe such mandatory service explains the increase, noting other indicators such as strong demand for slots in the corporation's AmeriCorps program. A recent national survey of college freshmen found the highest level of interest in helping others in 25 years.

Coal plant boom poses big questions

Steve Quinn
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DALLAS — A building boom that would add scores of new coal-fired power plants to the nation's power grid is creating a new dilemma for politicians, environmentalists and utility companies across the United States.

Should power companies be permitted to build new plants that pollute more but are reliable and less expensive? Or should regulators push utilities toward cleaner-burning coal plants, even if it means they will cost more and are based on newer, yet still unproven, technology?

How those questions are answered will have huge implications over the next few decades. It could determine how Americans light, heat and cool their homes and businesses, the rate of return on utility investments and the potential environmental impact of the new plants.

Nowhere do these competing interests play out with such force as in Texas, where 16 new coal-fired plants are proposed — 11 of them by Dallas-based TXU Corp., the state's biggest power company.

The scope of TXU's 5-year, $10 billion plan is considered bellwether and being closely watched by industry analysts, lawmakers, competitors and environmentalists across the United States.

"TXU put its stake in the ground and said it will (build the plants) faster and cheaper than anyone else," said Daniele M. Seitz, analyst with investment firm Dahlman Rose. "So they have something to prove."

The company is hardly alone, however.

Some 154 new coal-fired plants are on the drawing board in 42 states. Texas and Illinois are the only states where 10 or more plants are planned, according to the National Energy Technology Laboratory.

Energy analysts say factors driving coal's resurgence are soaring power demands, volatile natural gas prices and a favorable investment market.

Coal now accounts for about 50 percent of the power generated in the United States. By the year 2030, that share will increase to 57 percent, according to Energy Department forecasts.

The United States has the world's largest coal reserves, enough to last for the next 200 to 250 years, analysts believe.

Larry Makovich, managing director for consulting group Cambridge Energy Research Associates, said the urgency to bring more power-generating plants online cannot be understated.

"A fundamental reality of the power business is there is no single fuel of choice, so if you are going to survive in the long run, you need to have a good mix of fuels and technologies," he said. "If we are going to keep supply and demand in balance, you're looking at a five-year lead time, so you have to get started building these plants now."

The argument over how TXU should build power-generating plants plays out almost daily with critics and proponents weighing in on the potential merits and drawbacks of the company's plans.

TXU says the proposed plants will meet the state's growing demand for power, give a sorely needed economic boost to nearby small towns and will reduce toxic emissions by replacing older, less efficient plants.

"The coal plant of today is so much cleaner; it makes so much less emissions than what most Americans and Texans can conjure," said Mike McCall, chief executive of TXU's wholesale division. "It can be a good, viable resource without really harming the environment."

Critics, however, counter the company is driven by profits and is rushing to beat more stringent federal restrictions on carbon dioxide emissions in an era of escalating concerns over global warming. Texas already produces more carbon dioxide than any other state, a fact that worries big-city mayors downwind of the proposed plants.

The debate soon could end up in federal court. Dallas attorney Rick Addison recently announced plans to sue TXU, alleging potential violations of the federal Clean Air Act.

"It's remarkable and unnecessary the amount of pollutants they are going to put in the air," said Addison, a member of the Houston-based Locke Liddell and Sapp law firm. "The only way to get these issues resolved is at the highest level and reviewed under the appropriate law."

Organizers frustrated by lack of debates

Christopher Wills
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

SPRINGFIELD — They promised to debate the issues important to voters, backed out of scheduled events and then blamed each other.

In the end, efforts to arrange debates between Gov. Rod Blagojevich and challenger Judy Baar Topinka produced nothing but political finger-pointing by the candidates.

Groups that spent months arranging debates describe a long, frustrating process of e-mails, phone calls and conflicting information from the campaigns — only to have one or the other back out at the last minute.

“There was a feeling that we were getting caught in the middle and there was nothing we could do,” said Debbie Kirman, executive director of the Illinois League of Women Voters. “We are definitely disappointed. At the end of the day, it’s the voters that lose out.”

Early in the campaign, Blagojevich challenged Topinka to 10 debates; Topinka said there should be a dozen.

The Democratic governor and his Republican challenger met once on a Chicago news program in May and took part in a formal debate last week that was broadcast on radio stations across the state. They also sat down together for a closed-door meeting of the Chicago Tribune editorial board.

But other debates — in Rockford, Marion, Springfield and at least three in Chicago — fell through.

In editorials Wednesday, both the Chicago Tribune and The (Springfield) State Journal-Register condemned the candidates’ failure to debate more.

“Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas found a way, in an arduous era, to put the people first. Why can’t these candidates?” the Tribune asked.

The candidates blame one another. Topinka says Blagojevich, with a lead in the polls and millions to spend on TV commercials, wants to run out the clock until the Nov. 7 election. Blagojevich insists his challenger stalled and waffled.

But the facts suggest both candidates share the blame.

James Bennett, editor of the Southern Illinoisian newspaper in Carbondale, said Topinka’s campaign turned down a proposal to debate on Sept. 5 — the day after Labor Day — because she planned to campaign during that holiday weekend, and the debate would make the trip too grueling.

Blagojevich and Topinka orally agreed to debate Sept. 26 in Marion, Bennett said, but Blagojevich backed out because of a scheduling conflict. The governor proposed staging a southern Illinois debate Oct. 3, though neither side formally agreed.

On Oct. 3, Bennett said, Topinka met with the Southern’s editorial board in Carbondale before holding a news conference, chiding Blagojevich for not being in town so they could debate.

Green Party candidate Rich Whitney placed most of the blame on Blagojevich, saying the governor should have made debates a top priority.

“He has something better to do when he’s running for governor? That just does not wash.”

Bennett said the candidates almost seemed to be playing a game of “one-upsmanship” in their finger-pointing over who is to blame for debates falling through.

McDonald’s, Chipotle end partnership

Sandy Shore
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

DENVER — After an eight-year partnership, the Big Mac and the burrito have said a final goodbye.

McDonald’s Corp., the world’s largest fast-food company, has divested its stake in Chipotle Mexican Grill Inc. after allowing shareholders to exchange 16.5 million Chipotle Class B shares for 18.6 million of Oak Brook, Ill.-based McDonald’s own common shares.

The move, completed Friday, helps McDonald’s focus on its core brands while casual restaurant chain Chipotle gains more flexibility for growth. Other than the ownership change, it will be a stay-the-course mode for Chipotle.

“There really isn’t going to be any sort of big change in the way we run the business,” Chipotle founder and

Chief Executive Officer Steve Eells said Friday. “Very, very much the same.”

Analysts have applauded the move and have forecast sustainable growth for Chipotle over the long term.

“It’s just a great company. Nothing there has changed,” RBC Capital Markets analyst Lawrence Miller said. “Their biggest challenge is just maintaining the integrity of the brand.”

Pope proclaims four new saints

Names include nun who worked in American frontier

Frances D'emilio
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

VATICAN CITY — Pope Benedict XVI gave Catholics four new saints Sunday, bestowing the honor on a 19th-century nun who struggled on the American frontier, a bishop who tended to the wounded during the Mexican Revolution and two Italian clergy.

French-born Mother Theodore Guerin endured harsh conditions on the American frontier and resisted the objections of a local bishop in pursuing her dream of establishing Catholic education for pioneers. She established a college for women in Indiana, which enrolled its first student in 1841.

Among those at the ceremony on the steps of St. Peter's Basilica were ailing Chicago Cardinal Francis George and five Indiana churchmen. George, who is recovering from cancer surgery, flew to Rome with hundreds of alumnae, trustees and students of St. Mary-of-the-Woods College in Indiana.

"The Church rejoices in the four new saints," Benedict told a crowd of several thousand at the end of the two-hour ceremony. "May their example inspire us and their prayers obtain for us guidance and courage."

After enduring a long sea and land journey, Guerin, born Anne-Therese Guerin in Brittany in 1798, turned the porch of a drafty farmhouse into a chapel for spiritual comfort. By the time of her death in 1856, her order was running schools and orphanages in Indiana, the pope noted.

In the crowd was the American man whose restored vision was judged by the Vatican to be the miracle necessary for Guerin's sainthood.

"Being here with so many faithful, seeing the pope," said Phil McCord, "it's really overwhelming." McCord, a 60-year-old engineer who manages the campus of Guerin's order, recalled how he had faced a corneal transplant after damage from cataract surgery.

He entered the chapel at the college, asked Guerin for help and his eyesight started to improve the next morning, said McCord, the son of a lay Baptist minister.

Young people from the Indiana delegation waved blue scarves when the pope praised Guerin. Many of them wore T-shirts with Guerin's image.

The pope also elevated to sainthood Bishop Rafael Guizar Valencia, a missionary who risked his life to tend to the wounded during the Mexican Revolution, sometimes disguising himself as a street vendor or a musician.

Guizar Valencia, who died in 1938, was a great uncle of the Rev. Marcial Maciel Degollado, the founder of the Legionaries of Christ order of priests whom the Vatican restricted from public ministry this year amid allegations Degollado sexually abused seminarians.

Benedict praised Guizar Valencia for working tirelessly in "the beloved Mexican nation," even facing persecution, to ensure that seminarians were properly educated "according to the heart of Christ."

A dozen years after the bishop's death, when his body was removed from a cemetery to the cathedral in Xalapa in the Mexican state of Santa Cruz, his remains showed little sign of decay.

"We register them in the roll call of the saints, and we establish that in all the Church they will be devotedly honored among the saints," Benedict said as he read the canonization ritual in Latin.

Also joining the ranks of sainthood was Italian Rev. Filippo Smaldone who pioneered education for the deaf and founded an order of nuns, the Congregation of the Salesian Sisters of the Sacred Hearts. The order has convents in Brazil, Moldavia, Paraguay and Rwanda. Smaldone died in 1923.

The other Italian, Rosa Venerini, was also a social pioneer, advocating education for young girls in Italy. Veneri, who died in 1728, founded the Congregation of the Holy Venerini Teachers order of nuns and pushed to establish the first public schools for girls in Italy.

Louie Bennett, an 11-year-old from Lake Creek, dressed his dog, Fudgie, in a tuxedo. His aunt's dog, Little Bit, strutted in a wedding dress. Bennett said he has wanted to participate in the show since it began.

"I've been waiting to do this for about four years, and I finally made it," he said.

After a few minutes of showing off, a winner was chosen. Bill and Kathy Marks of Marion won first prize. Their dog, Aimee, was dressed in a green sheep outfit.

Kathy Marks, who made the outfit, called Aimee her "wolf in sheep's clothing."

"I wanted it to be something original and something that a Dachshund would look good in," she said.

A race followed the fashion show. Because of the number of dogs, the race was run in different heats, with the winner of each race competing in the final showdown. As some dogs ran the wrong way, others took off down the racetrack toward the shouts and encouragement of their masters.

The winners of the race were the dogs of Brian Neely of Olmsted and Regina Purcell of Cairo. The two said they decided to enter the race after they received a flier from their martial arts instructor. They enticed Purcell's dog, Saddle Sue, toward the finish line with a squeaky toy.

"If you tease the dog, it gets her adrenaline pumping," Purcell said.

Purcell grinned ear-to-ear after winning the final race.

The turnout for Kid Fest this year was more than previous years, Meyer said.

"I am so pleased with the way things turned out," she said.

The medical group specializes in examinations for children who have been sexually or physically abused. About 250 to 300 children up to 17 years old are seen each year, she said. The network also provides education and training to other doctors and professionals regarding child abuse.

they are removed from their rooms until a hearing clears them or finds them in violation of the Student Conduct Code.

The nine students were forced off campus shortly after the Oct. 6 attack in a campus parking lot that left a sophomore with facial and head injuries. The attacked student also lost between $90 and $100, according to the police report.

Police questioned the students after the victim said he was assaulted by a "group of black males."

Since being separated from the university, several of the students have found shelter at the Rock Hill Missionary Baptist Church on Marion Street in Carbondale.

Gill, Scott, Hart, Brandon Gaines, DeShaun McGee, Vincent Mack and Christian Jennings are scheduled to appear before Student Judicial Affairs separately this week. They all have been charged with several violations, such as disorderly conduct and physical abuse. Each faces the possibility of suspension.

Johnnie Jones of the Chicago-based Make a Difference Youth Foundation said he was surprised Gill was linked to the attack. Jones said Gill was a standout in the foundation, which prepares students for college life.

"He's a good kid who got caught up in a bad situation," Jones said.

All the students, except for Gill, are still banned from campus. On Thursday, university officials suspended Derrick Reese for three years and Aric Anthony for two years. Reese and two non-students were also slapped with criminal charges of mob action, robbery and aggravated battery.

Reese's father, Derrick B. Reese, said his 18-year-old is scheduled to take a polygraph test Oct. 26 in regard to his criminal charges. Both Reese and Anthony plan to appeal their university suspensions.

Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Larry Dietz, spokesman for the students' hearings, said he was not certain on specifics of Friday's decisions. He said any student whose separation is lifted can return to regular student life, but the charges remain until a formal hearing in which a final decision is made. Dietz said he did not know why Hart's separation was lifted.

"It doesn't mean that they didn't do something wrong. That's still an allegation that will have to be dealt with," Dietz said.

Separated students, even if cleared of wrongdoing, might not be able to make up for missed coursework when they return to SIUC, Dietz said. The students' professors can decide whether the students can make up their grades, and Dietz said many professors have made accommodations in the past.

Several discrepancies have arisen in relation to the attack, including a wrong date on the incident's police report and incorrect media reports.

Documents from Student Judicial Affairs contained names of students who were cleared of being involved in the attack and who were no longer associated with the hearings. Also, one document indicated around 16 students were involved, while another said up to 30 were involved.

Democrats up against proven Republican turnout machine

Liz Sidoti
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON — In the battle for control of Congress, Democrats hope enthusiasm trumps Republican efficiency.

Otherwise, they concede, they will have problems on Nov. 7 as a party still struggling to catch up with the GOP's ability to turn voters out of seeming thin air.

"Makes me green with envy," says Ellen Malcolm, the president of EMILY's List, which backs female candidates who support abortion rights. She was speaking of the Republican Party program that relies on reams of polling data, publicly available information and consumer choice records to identify likely GOP voters in even the most Democratic precincts.

Republicans most recently put their prowess on display in California, where they turned out enough conservatives in June to elect Brian Bilbray to the House, and a few months later in Rhode Island, where they motivated moderates and independents to vote for Sen. Lincoln Chafee in a primary.

Democrats hope technology is not the deciding factor in the upcoming election that will determine the majority party in the House and Senate. Democrats need to gain 15 seats in the House and six in the Senate to knock Republicans from power.

"They don't have some secret stash of voters," says Karin Johanson, executive director of the Democratic Congressional Campaign Committee.

"If the Republicans are less enthused, the independents are breaking our way, and the Democratic base is highly enthused, then we're in very good shape," she said.

For now, at least, polls indicate Democrats have momentum on their side.

Likely voters say they have a low opinion of Congress and favor Democrats over Republicans to control the House and Senate. These voters also say they trust Democrats more than Republicans to handle the economy and the situation in Iraq, although it is unclear whether that sentiment will carry over to Election Day.

An Associated Press-Ipsos survey found 47 percent of Democrats are angry at the GOP-controlled Congress, while only 15 percent of Republicans are enthusiastic about their congressional leadership. An AP-Pew poll found that anger is driving Democrats to vote.

Getting people to vote is even more of a challenge in a midterm election year. Voting levels drop compared with presidential election years. In 2000, 59.5 percent of people in the United States age 18 or older voted. That fell to 46.1 percent in 2002, then climbed to 63.8 percent in 2004, a presidential election year.

As recently as the 1990s, the Democratic Party consistently won the turnout battle, relying on aggressive work by precinct captains and labor leaders in urban areas home to Democratic base voters.

a week and brought his students with him to discuss the finer points of being a pilot. She said he always came into the restaurant with a smile.

"He'd walk in with an aura of kindness," she said. "You could see that with Tyler, he was just a nice person."

Touche said everyone around the airport admired him for his dedication to quality flight instruction and for his cheery attitude. Scott said Stanger was well-liked around the California campus as well.

"It's a tremendous loss, and there has been an outpouring of sympathy and condolences from the students because he was so well-liked around here," Scott said.

David NewMyer, chairman of the department of aviation management and flight, met Stanger at graduation. He said even though Stanger was not a student in Carbondale, the department still felt the loss.

"Sadly, in aviation, sometimes this happens," NewMyer said.

He said aviation is a safe profession, but when things go bad, they get a lot of publicity.

"It's just very sad, it's inexplicable," NewMyer said. "We won't know what happened until the investigation is over."

He said the aviation department is giving away a scholarship Friday in honor of another graduate who died in a crash in Iowa. He said the department is working with Stanger's alma mater to find a way to properly remember him.

"We want to honor him in the best way possible, either here or there," NewMyer said.

Stanger is survived by his pregnant wife, Stephanie, and their infant daughter, and Lidle is survived by his wife, Melanie, and their 6-year-old son. The Federal Aviation Administration is continuing to investigate the circumstances of the crash.

the spring semester, along with a poster board stating, "Wendler, stop pigging out on tuition $$!!" University authorities also accused Kiser of sending a mass e-mail that contained a picture of the pig's head on the car and the typed message, "Next time it won't be cooked!!!!!"

Kiser has said the chancellor has no sense of humor, a claim that Wendler denied Friday.

"It's not that I can't take a joke. I take jokes every day. I've been told I'm too jocular at times," Wendler said.

Wendler said he could have looked past the pig head incident if the mass e-mail had not been sent.

"It wasn't a threat, but again, it was something that normal people would say, 'Gee, that doesn't sound quite right,'" he said.

On Thursday, Kiser went to Wendler's office with a box for the chancellor. Inside were farm animal figurines, a package of pork chops, a Wild West toy gun and sheriff's badge, play hand cuffs and a T-shirt that had on it a picture of the head on the car and the phrase, "Wendler sucks! SIU's resources dry."

Wendler was at the SIU Board of Trustees meeting and not in the office. Kiser instead spoke with two office staffers and eventually a SIUC police officer.

Wendler said his position calls for a certain amount of "teasing and chiding," but he was upset Kiser made his office workers feel uncomfortable.

"I understand that's part of the job, but those people aren't paid to put up with that stuff," he said. "I just don't think it's right. It's rude and inconsiderate."

Kiser has yet to hear word on whether a criminal charge of disorderly conduct was dropped in Jackson County court. The county's online court database has no record of disorderly conduct for Kiser.

The state's attorney's office on Sept. 28 wrote Kiser a $75 check as reimbursement for his bond.

Wendler said he is always open to comments and criticism.

"The more thoughtful and rational the concerns are and the way they're expressed, the more likely that everybody will pay attention to them," he said.

Today's Birthday (10-16-06). You provide inspiration to others, and they do the same thing for you. This year is about reflections; what you give you get back, magnified.

To get the advantage, check the day's rating: 10 is the easiest day, 0 the most challenging.

Aries (March 21-April 19) Today is a 9 - You have a tendency to get way out on the leading edge. You don't have to be foolish about it, though. It takes discipline to be a survivor.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) Today is a 5 - Even if you know the answer, don't tell unless you're asked. People who are not listening to each other won't listen to you, either.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) Today is a 9 - One of your natural talents is a willingness to ask questions. That will be required now, as you sort the fact from the fiction.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) Today is a 6 - Get your group to agree on a goal and stick to it, until it's done. Teach them to be loyal to one another, and to you.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) Today is an 8 - Let others do the talking now. You watch and look and listen. When you make your move, don't waste an ounce of energy.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Today is a 5 - You have something hanging around in your closets that you can put to use. Don't buy new, save your money. You'll need it very soon, for something else.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Today is an 8 - You'll find out about trust and moderation. A little exaggeration could turn into a very big deal, so take care.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Today is a 5 - Keep most of your comments to yourself. The others don't need to know what you really think. Besides, you'll save a lot of time.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Today is a 7 - Keep the others motivated. You can't do what they are doing directly, but you can make absolutely sure they do it. Welcome to management.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Today is a 5 - Caution is advised, but you already do that. Take charge of the situation, and find out as much as you can. You can use this situation to your advantage.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Today is an 8 - Don't try to vanquish a noble adversary all by yourself. Get a lot of people on your side, and then attack.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) Today is a 7 - Keep at a difficult job, even though you'd rather do anything else. Once this item is scratched off your list, you will finally relax.

SIU

Junior quarterback Luke Drone torched the Saluki secondary for 280 yards. In their previous five games, the Salukis allowed only 166 yards through the air.

Kill said it was more than Drone that chopped his team down.

"Drone is a special quarterback, and he did a great job," Kill said. "He doesn't make mental mistakes. I don't think we had a defensive breakdown. It was a team breakdown."

ISU head coach Denver Johnson said the focal point was the beginning of the second half. With a 17-10 lead, the Redbirds had the opportunity to firmly place themselves in control of the contest. In a six-play drive, the Redbirds marched 63 yards in only 2 minutes, 26 seconds to take a comfortable 24-10 advantage.

The quick strike was capped off by Drone's perfectly thrown 36-yard touchdown pass up the right sideline.

"I think that drive really kind of started to tilt it downhill in our favor," Johnson said.

For the Salukis, nothing seemed to be favorable in a game in which they committed seven penalties, fumbled twice, threw their first interception of the year and gained only 112 yards of total offense in the second half.

Senior running back Arkee Whitlock was held without a touchdown for the first time this year but finished with 140 rushing yards.

The game-high total meant nothing to Whitlock.

"Yards don't mean anything for me," Whitlock said. "I'm determined to win football games."

SECONDARY

Five minutes later, Drone and company scored again when he connected with Horton for a 68-yard touchdown pass to make the score 30-10. Horton ran a simple out-route and was wide open without a Saluki defender within 10 yards.

"We were running our base stuff," Drone said. "In the pass game, we didn't change anything. (The receivers) were just running great routes."

The Salukis seemed lost on nearly every ISU passing play in the second half, allowing receivers to run freely on each passing attempt.

Drone did not throw an incomplete pass in the second half, going 7-for-7, while throwing for passes of 30, 36 and 68 yards.

Both Kill and ISU head coach

Denver Johnson attributed the dominating Redbird passing attack to the amount of time Drone had to hold on to the ball — stemming from the offensive line's pocket protection.

"If you got time to hold on to the ball and let the pass patterns develop, then people are going to be open," Johnson said. "(Drone) did a good job of letting things develop and going to the right place with the football — you have to trace that back to protection."

Johnson told Drone at halftime to beat the secondary deep because of SIU's defensive coverage.

Saluki cornerbacks regularly guarded ISU receivers in press coverage in the first half — a coverage putting backs "right on the toes" of ISU's receivers, Drone said.

Drone and the Redbirds exposed the coverage in the first few minutes of the second half and lit up the Salukis' secondary for 152 passing yards and two touchdowns in the third quarter alone.

Kill said the team wasn't surprised by the way Drone played, calling him a "special kind of quarterback."

Drone praised the efforts of his offensive line after the game and said when given the luxury of time, he could drop back, look at all three options and make a decision as to where to throw the football.

"The bottom line is that they have some people wide open, and you can attribute that to good protection," Kill said. "If you let the quarterback hold on to the football for a long time, he is going to complete it."

Cross country has mixed results at Bradley Classic

Scott Mieszala
DAILY EGYPTIAN

The SIU women's cross country team once again turned in a remarkable team performance at the Bradley Classic, but the men didn't perform up to expectations, even with an individual title.

The women took first out of 13 teams and were led by senior Cherylynn Schilling. Schilling, who completed the 6K in 22 minutes, 24 seconds, was the third runner to lead the Saluki women this year.

"It's exciting for her," head coach Matt Sparks said. "She's been here four years and been in our top five for four years but never been a number one runner."

All five of the Salukis' scoring runners finished in the top 10.

Schilling led a flurry of runners for her fourth place finish, followed by Beth Whalen of Western Illinois University. Immediately after Whalen trailed senior Brittani Christensen, who took sixth with a time of 22:26.

Seniors Katie Birm and Sarah Rinker placed seventh and ninth, running 22:29 and 22:32, respectively.

Rounding out the scoring for SIU was freshman Nefeteri Williams, who placed 10th with a time of 22:40.

Also notable for the Salukis was the return of senior Lindsay Wagner (13th, 22:54). The return of Wagner, coupled with a new runner leading the way virtually every week, gives SIU the versatility to challenge for a conference championship.

Freshman Jeff Schirmer finished first overall in the men's 8K race with a time of 25:12, while SIU's top runner, sophomore Mohamed Mohamed, did not compete in Friday's meet so he could rest.

"One of the reasons we had

“Since we weren't running our top guy, I felt like we all needed to pick it up a little bit more and still try to pull off a win.”

— Jeff Schirmer
freshman Saluki runner

Mohamed sit out this week was to give some of the younger guys on the team an opportunity to step up and perform," Sparks said. "Jeff really took that to heart and ran like an upperclassman."

Mohamed has been named the State Farm/Missouri Valley Conference Cross Country Athlete of the Week twice in a row. He was given the meet off to rest in preparation for the MVC Championship on Oct. 28.

"We weren't running Mohamed today, so I felt like I had a really good chance to pull off a win," Schirmer said. "Since we weren't running our top guy, I felt like we all needed to pick it up a little bit more and still try to pull off a win."

The second Saluki to finish was junior Kevin Doran. Doran placed fourth overall with a time of 25:39.

However, the rest of the men failed to finish in the top 20, leading to a fourth place team finish out of 13 teams.

"Some of the younger guys we were looking to step up didn't perform like we wanted them to," Sparks said.

The Saluki cross country team has the weekend off before heading to Lincoln, Neb., for the MVC Championships on Oct. 28.

Saluki Banter

In the National League Championship Series the New York Mets and the St. Louis Cardinals are now playing for the right to play the Detroit Tigers in the World Series, who just swept the A's in the ALCS. At press time, the Cardinals had a 2-1 series lead. Which team will represent the NL in the World Series?

JORDAN WILSON

"When Jeff Suppan hits a home run and limits the talent-heavy Mets lineup to under five hits and zero runs in game three, you know you are getting the right bounces. Of course I am taking the Cardinals to win this thing. Here's another secret: They will win the World Series, too."

"As long as the Cardinals don't win it all, I could care less. And once the Cardinals lose, baseball will be dead to me."

Men's tennis continues to improve

Saluki men's tennis made its mark at the Marquette Invitational over the weekend with multiple comeback wins from its veteran player.

Junior Rodrigo Lama led the way for the Salukis, winning his first two matches in the main bracket. He trailed early in both matches but was able to come from behind to make a semifinals appearance. Lama's run ended in the semifinals when he lost in straight sets.

Lama won 1-6, 6-4, 10-2 in the first round of the main bracket. He won his second-round match 6-7, 6-2, 10-5 to make the semifinals. Lama lost to Trent Hagan of Marquette in straight sets 6-2, 6-0 to end his tournament.

Five teams competed in the three-day tournament.

Lama said the tournament results showed what he was capable of doing. He said it was a much better performance than his first action of the season. At the Middle Tennessee State University Fall Invitational on Sept. 25, Lama lost in straight sets in the first round.

"If I continue to play like this, I'm going to get good results," Lama said. "The rest of the team did well in their consolation matches, and they are continuing to improve."

Lama's teammates fared well in the consolation brackets. Freshmen Lucas Waked and Karl Nilsson both lost their first-round matches in straight sets, but neither of them gave up.

In the consolation bracket, Waked did not lose a match. He won his semifinal match in dominant fashion 6-4, 6-3 before going on to the finals, where Waked beat Mark Rutherford of Marquette in straight sets 6-2, 6-3.

Nilsson also had moderate success in his consolation bracket. After losing in the first round of the main bracket, Nilsson won his first collegiate tennis match against Eric Hines of the University of Wisconsin-Green Bay 6-4, 6-4. He went on to lose in the second round in straight sets.

Nilsson said he was happy to notch his first college win but sees where he can improve. He said he is continuing to work on his form to get better results in the Intercollegiate Tennis Association (ITA) Mid-American Regional at Tulsa, Okla., on Oct. 19.

"I'm just trying to keep my head up," Nilsson said. "I was really nervous going into the first match, then I settled down."

The Salukis didn't perform favorably in every facet of the tournament, however. In doubles action, SIU went winless before Lama's back spasms ended the team's day. Aside from that, head coach Dann Nelson said he was proud of his team's performance.

"There was a lot of improvement, especially from Lama's individual performance and Nilsson's first collegiate win," Nelson said. "Now the team has to work on their doubles play."

Men's basketball gets first 2008 verbal commitment

The SIU men's basketball team received a verbal commitment Sunday from Riverside-Brookfield High School junior Chris Parrish, according to chicagohoops.com, a high school basketball Web site.

Parrish is the first 2008 recruit for the Salukis.

Parrish led the Bulldogs in scoring last year with 15.2 points per game average. He also pulled down 5.8 rebounds a game while helping RBHS to a 15-11 record.

Parrish was selected as an all-conference player for the Suburban Prairie Conference East Division.

Parrish follows the pipeline of Saluki recruits who played for the Illinois Wolves AAU summer program.

Mike Mullins, father of sophomore point guard Bryan Mullins, is a coach for the Wolves.

So far, Bryan Mullins and redshirt freshman Christian Cornelius have come to SIU after playing with the Wolves. Carlton Fay, a 2007 recruit who verbally committed to SIU, also played for the Wolves.

Parrish could not be reached for comment, and Mike Mullins did not immediately return phone calls.

The big letdown

JORDAN WILSON

dailyegyptian.com

The feeling was anticlimactic. Watching SIU's game Saturday against Illinois State was kind of like seeing an atrocious movie after the previews made it look like a can't-miss, unforgettable cinematic adventure.

The game was tagged as the best Division I-AA game of the weekend, and many considered it a showdown of the best two teams in Illinois.

The Redbirds' 37-10 victory made it clear which team that was and negated all the pre-game hype.

For anyone wearing maroon, watching the game probably wasn't worth the four-hour trip or the almost three hours it took to play out.

Heck, even my friends from Illinois State were already at home and napping before the fourth quarter started.

This Saluki team must have missed something.

The score wasn't supposed to be lopsided. Quarterback Nick Hill was supposed to throw for more than 88 yards. The Salukis' defensive line was supposed to make a mockery of ISU's top-rated pass game.

The game was supposed to be — well, a game. Too bad it wasn't.

The Redbirds dominated everything from the pre-game warm-ups, when ISU's student section pelted the Salukis with plastic footballs while they huddled, to the postgame celebration, when cheers of "We don't give a damn about southern Illinois" rang from ISU's locker room.

The Redbirds controlled all of the on-the-field happenings, too, by out-gaining the Salukis by more than 200 yards, not turning the ball over and making the big plays when SIU didn't.

SIU head coach Jerry Kill called it a team breakdown. It looked that way.

"They got us out of our rhythm defensively, and they got in a rhythm offensively," he said.

Usually, the Salukis' game plan goes something like this:

Give Arkee Whitlock the ball.

Watch Arkee run.

Watch Arkee score.

Pass the ball.

Then, watch Arkee run some more.

While Whitlock was still the game's leading rusher with 140 yards, his drudgery on the turf didn't open up SIU's passing game.

"We didn't execute the game plan like we should," Hill said. "They got momentum and rolled with it."

The road doesn't get any easier for the Salukis. They face a Western Kentucky squad that is much better than its 3-3 record indicates.

Hill said the important thing is how the Salukis rebound from the blowout.

"There's only two things you can do after a loss like this. You can either hang your head and think about it all week about things you could have done different, or we could just bounce back," Hill said.

If the Salukis can do the latter, Saturday's monumental letdown will be a thing of the past.

SIU defense collapses in second half

Jordan Wilson
DAILY EGYPTIAN

NORMAL — It was the wrong time for Nick Hill to throw the ball to a guy in a different-colored jersey.

With his team looking to regain the lead late in the second quarter, SIU's junior quarterback was picked off for the first time since his high school days.

From that point, the Redbirds took the ball — along with every ounce of momentum the game had left to offer — and cruised on Saturday to thump the Salukis 37-10.

"I probably put our defense in a hard situation throwing that pick late in the first half," Hill said. "I shouldn't do that."

After the interception, the Redbirds scored 23 straight points and severed the Saluki secondary, which entered the game as the top-ranked pass defense in the Gateway Football Conference.

SIU (5-1, 2-1 Gateway) looked to avenge a 61-35 loss to the Redbirds in 2005, a game during which the No. 1 nationally ranked Salukis were stunned by a .500 SIU squad.

Much like the 2005 upset, Saturday's game didn't pan out as many would have thought.

SIU's game against No. 5 Illinois State was billed by many as the best Division I-AA game of the week and the matchup of the best two teams in the state, regardless of division.

The No. 7-ranked Salukis entered ISU's homecoming game with the best record in the Gateway Football Conference, the second best running attack in the nation and the league's top pass defense.

The Salukis left dejected and on the wrong side of a lopsided defeat.

SIU junior receiver Jason Horton, who had a 68-yard touchdown grab, said the Redbirds didn't get the game they expected from the Salukis.

"It seemed like we were going out there, and they completely gave up and just didn't want to play no more," Horton said.

The Salukis looked combative early when they took a 10-7 lead with 11:47 remaining in the second quarter. Senior tight end Braden Jones found himself open in the end zone and corralled a Hill pass for an 8-yard touchdown.

The lead was short-lived, as that was the last time the Salukis had anything worth celebrating.

ISU (5-1, 2-0) made sure of that by posting the last 30 points of the game, which dispelled any potential Saluki comeback.

SIU head coach Jerry Kill said his team was outdone in every facet of the game.

"It was a team breakdown. We got beat to the punch in all phases," Kill said. "We didn't play good team football, and they had a lot to do with that. We had some mental errors we didn't have the first five games."

One of those things that was tough to sustain was the Redbirds' balanced offensive attack. No. 5-ranked Redbirds accumulated 499 yards of total offense compared to SIU's 279.

SIU secondary gives up two touchdowns in third

Brian Feldt
DAILY EGYPTIAN

SIU head coach Jerry Kill said his team was beat in every aspect of its 37-10 loss to fifth-ranked Illinois State University on Saturday.

Not many, though, glared more than SIU's secondary — or lack thereof.

ISU showed off its top-rated passing offense as it dominated against a Saluki passing defense that ranked first in the Gateway Football Conference.

The result: Redbird junior quarterback Luke Drone passed for 280 yards and two touchdowns.

The Saluki secondary, which had been stellar before Saturday and turned in a respectable first-half performance, did not resemble that of a top Division I-AA team in the second half.

SIU's defense allowed only 166.2 passing yards a game entering its matchup with ISU and only gave up three receiving touchdowns all season before Saturday's game.

The Saluki defense kept the game close in the first half by only allowing 17 points but let the Redbirds rack up 127 passing yards. The secondary then crumbled in the second half as Illinois State's passing attack exploded.

"We had wide open guys in the first half and had wide open guys in the second half," Drone said. "There is always a place to go with the ball in this offense. We just found the guys that were open."

Redbird receivers Pierre Jackson and Jason Horton both recorded more than 100-yards receiving and scored a touchdown. Jackson's 113 receiving yards were just seven behind Horton's game-leading 120 yards.

Jackson scored three minutes into the second half on a pattern up the right sideline when Drone hit him with a perfect pass, allowing Jackson to never break stride. Kicker Kevin Mazur's successful PAT gave the Redbirds a convincing 24-10 lead.
