Opposition to Halloween plan tabled

SIUC lawyer to examine housing policy

By Chad Anderson
Staff Reporter

The Undergraduate Student Government did not reach a decision on how they would handle the Halloween weekend and moved to table the resolution until a lawyer could review the housing policy.

Andrew Ensor, USG housing commissioner, proposed Monday that USG would open Carbondale Halloween festivities to universities in five mid-west states and MTV if University Housing did not loosen their regulations on visitation during the Halloween weekend.

The rules state that visitors are allowed a maximum of 24 hours a day, seven days a week. It also states that University Housing may change the policy if a concern for the safety of the student residing in the dorms is present.

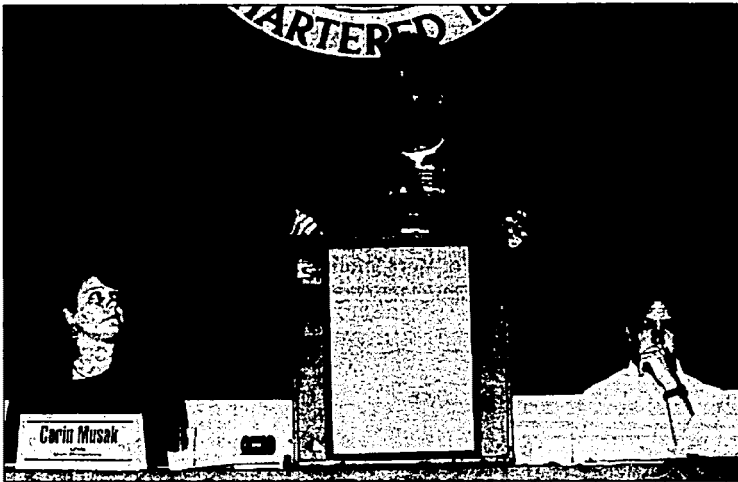

Ensor said University officials will allow a University lawyer to examine the housing policy.

USG president Ed Sawyer addressed the senate in stating an apology to the city of Carbondale, and Ensor also followed with his apology later in the meeting.

"I would like to apologize to the city of Carbondale for putting it through hell," Ensor said.

Sawyer said USG has not come to a decision on the Halloween weekend.

Undergraduate Student Government President Edwin Sawyer formally apologized to the city of Carbondale and Southern Illinois University during Wednesday's USG senate meeting for misunderstandings that resulted from a USG proposal. The suggested resolution opposed a plan by University Housing calling for restrictions on campus visitors during Halloween weekend. The proposal was tabled by USG senators for further review.

olution that had already been passed. Up till now, USG has not come up with whether or not we're opposed to it, whether or not we agree with it, or whether or not we care," Sawyer said.

Ensor said security and safety in the dorms have never been a problem, and that there would not be a problem if the University would have notified students of this before they signed their housing contracts with the understanding of the printed regulations.

Two students from Schneider Hall and Mae-Smith Tower expressed their concern on the restrictions placed on students living in those dorms.

They said coming home to their rooms and being run through two security checks had angered many students in those buildings, and petitions had been started to deal with the problem.

USG voted to strike the paragraph concerning the invitations to mid-west universities and MTV, and instead moved to insert a statement asking housing to review their visitation policy.

The debate on the resolution was tabled to be continued on the Sept. 21 meeting.

In other business, the USG nominated and elected senators to the following standing committees: finance, registered student organizations and Internal Affairs.

Plan to ban alcohol sales spurs debate

Local reaction is mixed concerning Carbondale City Manager Jeff Doherty's proposal on banning alcohol sales and closing many city bars after 10 p.m. Halloween weekend.

The proposal, presented at a City Council meeting Tuesday, would require 27 local businesses that serve and sell alcohol to close their doors at 10 p.m. from Oct. 27 to Oct. 29.

The plan allows 31 other businesses that have liquor licenses to stay open, but seize the sale of alcohol after the stipulated time.

Carbondale Police Chief Don Strom said Halloween is growing in size and becoming more dangerous and if strong action is not taken

Haiti invasion loses support

By Aaron Butler
Staff Reporter

Two local congressmen and a former SIUC president feel that President Bill Clinton should reconsider his aggressive position toward Haiti.

Clinton will speak at 8 p.m. today, and is expected to explain his plans for military action against Haiti, and ask for bipartisan congressional support.

David Carle, press spokesman for Hill Senator Paul Simon (D-Makanda), said the Senator has been arguing against an invasion.

"Senator Simon said in a meeting with Secretary of State Warren Christopher that he remains in opposition to an invasion," said Carle. "He feels that Congress should be included in any decision."

Carle said although the senator has not ruled out the use of force, he urges further investigation of the situation.

Clinton makes last-minute offer

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—President Clinton, warning Haiti's military rulers that a U.S. invasion could come any day, has made a last-minute offer to spirit them out of the country into comfortable retirement abroad if they agree to step down, officials said Wednesday.

The U.S. offer to Haiti's three top leaders includes promises of safe transportation off the island, including protection by U.S. military units, if needed, and safe haven in one of several countries in South America and Europe.

"The time is at hand and they need to leave," Clinton told reporters in the Oval Office. "And they're going to leave one way or another." How they

"Before we send one soldier, sailor, or Marine into Haiti, we need to debate this issue in the people's house, just as we did in the Persian Gulf War," Costello said. "

It is important that we discuss if this invasion is in the best interest of the United States."

David Derge, a political science professor and former president of SIUC, said he feels the invasion is a foolish idea.

Women's Center target of false flyer campaign

By Chad Anderson
Staff Reporter

Special interest groups have always had their say in politics, but flyers displaying false information about a rally have raised more than just eyebrows around campus.

Flyers displaying information about a "Feminist/Lesbians Rally" have been found around campus, mostly concentrated in the Quigley Hall area.

The truth is the center does not have a rally scheduled for Friday. The flyer said the rally will be at the Women's Center this Friday at 7 p.m., and described the subject matter that will be discussed: "Help destroy Male Patriarchy."

A patriarch is defined by Webster's New Riverside Dictionary as "A man who is venerated as leader, father, or founder, as of a tribe or family."

Juli Claussen, executive director of the center, thought the flyers were made by a small group of the community which had built up anger against the Women's Center.

She said the group behind the flyer was trying to stereotype the center as only serving feminists and lesbians. She also pointed out that the center serves many types of groups and feminists and lesbians are just two kinds of groups the center serves.

"I think they're trying to portray us to fitting this particular stereotype," Claussen said. "It's just an attempt to discredit us in some way."

The Women's Center was established in 1972, and that

OFFICIALS OPPOSE ARTIST'S 'WAILING WALL' — COLOGNE, Germany — Homeless artist Walter Hermann has faced opposition in setting up his cardboard "Wailing Wall for Peace" in the shadow of the Gothic Dom of Cologne. The Wailing Wall, he says, is a forum for anyone who wants to deliver a message against war and hatred. And tens of thousands of people have hung their messages of peace in dozens of languages on his wall. To the church, however, and to city officials, Hermann's creation is an infringement on a public plaza. A state court has ruled against Hermann, allowing the church and city to evict him from the plaza. But Hermann is appealing the decision, and the two sides are in negotiations to see whether they can find an acceptable alternative site for the Wailing Wall.

POPULATION POLICY CHANGES OVER DECADE — CAIRO, Egypt — Ten years ago, the United States abruptly reversed decades of population policy and announced that the human species' spiraling numbers were not necessarily the problem everybody thought they were. Population, the U.S. delegation told the 1984 international conference in Mexico City, was "neutral as a variable" in global development. But at the 1994 International Conference on Population and Development in Cairo, the U.S. delegation has led the way toward adoption of a comprehensive package of strategies for curbing population growth, including issues like the empowerment of women and adolescent access to sex education and contraceptives.

BARRY OVERCOMES RECORD TO WIN PRIMARY — WASHINGTON — In a startling political comeback that could have national repercussions, Marion Barry Tuesday overcame a highly publicized conviction and imprisonment for smoking crack cocaine to win the Democratic nomination for mayor. Barry, who mobilized younger and poorer black voters around his theme of redemption, defeated City Councilman John Ray and the incumbent mayor, Sharon Pratt Kelly, in a hard-fought race. With 100 percent of the vote counted, Barry had 48 percent. Ray had 37 percent and Kelly trailed badly with only 13 percent of the electorate. Four other candidates accounted for the rest of the vote.

L.A. COUNTY ENCOURAGES FIRE PREVENTION — LOS ANGELES — The dry season has returned to Southern California and, with it, the increased danger of wildfires like the ones that destroyed more than 500 houses in Malibu and Aladena last November. This year, hoping to fight fires with an aroused citizenry, the Los Angeles County Fire Department has sponsored a series of homeowner "expos" featuring the latest residential firefighting technology and techniques. In a departure from widely accepted policies governing the role of civilians in fighting fires, officials have stopped discouraging people from taking hoses into their own hands when the desert winds and glowing embers blow.

REPUBLICANS LOCALIZE NATIONAL PROBLEMS — WASHINGTON — Mindful of widespread voter discontent over national issues, Republicans are trying to make their fall campaigns a referendum on the party in power. Democrats, putting their faith in the old axiom that all politics is local, are striving to define each race in terms of what it means for each individual political battleground. The difference between the two approaches reflects the sharply contrasting outlooks for each party. To avoid debacle, many Democratic candidates are trying to distance themselves from President Clinton and his sagging poll ratings.

RENWICK CRAFTS GALLERY CURATOR RETIRES — WASHINGTON — A change of command is in progress behind the majestic steel and brass gates that mark the entrance to the Renwick Gallery. Michael Monroe, a 20-year veteran of this department of the Smithsonian's National Museum of American Art, which features the work of American craft artists, has announced his retirement at age 54 from the post of curator-in-charge, effective next May. Last year Monroe served as an advisor to the White House during the Year of American Craft, helping to assemble 70 pieces for its first craft collection, unveiled last Christmas.

GPSC gives approval to one tuition increase

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

The Graduate and Professional Student Council decided Wednesday to support a 3.5-percent tuition increase at SIUC but to unanimously oppose 14.9-percent and 16-percent tuition increases for the law and medical schools.

The increases will be voted on by the SIUC Board of Trustees Oct. 13 in Edwardsville, and if approved will take effect in fiscal year 1996.

The motion to approve the 3.5-percent increase for undergraduate students and graduate students not enrolled in the law or medical schools also stated that the council is dissatisfied with the increase, though they will not dispute it.

Bill Hall, GPSC representative from community development, said the increase is seemingly reasonable, but it places tuition beyond levels which are set by Illinois Board of Higher Education guidelines.

Hall said while the IBHE recommends that tuition charged to students only account for one third of instructional costs at the University, the current tuition at SIUC accounts for approximately 36-percent of instructional costs.

Jon Coleman, representative from education administration and higher education, said he is concerned that the University may not be following IBHE guidelines.

"If tuition is over the one third marker, then they (the University) are violating the rules," Coleman said.

"We (GPSC) need to consider action whereby the Board of Trustees should be made accountable to follow their own rules."

SIUC Chancellor James Brown said the 3.5-percent tuition increase is within the guidelines of IBHE, because the board recommends state universities match the tuition increase rate with the inflation rate, which also is 3.5-percent.

Hall said the increase would mean students would have to pay an additional $182.50 in tuition costs.

"That means for a average student worker who makes $4.25 an hour has to work an additional 43 hours, or two weeks, in order to earn the extra tuition money," Hall said.

"Many students already work through Christmas break and don't have time to earn the extra amount."

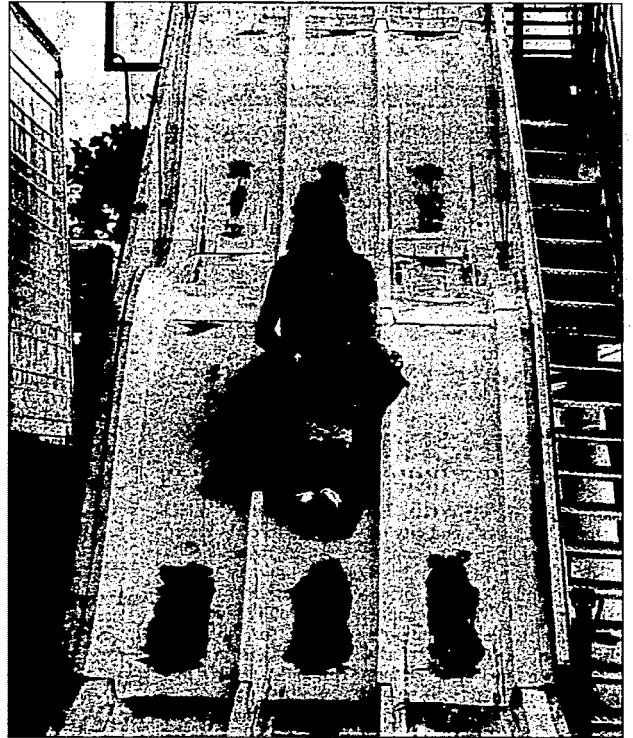

Hall said between the years of 1990 and 1994, tuition has risen by 44.2-percent.

But representatives of GPSC unanimously decided to oppose the law and medical school tuition increases because they were excessive.

"If I were to start in a program (such as the law or medical schools), and half-way through the tuition cost jumped 20-percent, that would be something I would not be prepared for because I didn't plan on it," Coleman said.

Hall said if approved by the SIUC Board of Trustees, the law school increase would cost law students an additional $500 in tuition for fiscal year 1996.

A resolution that would provide graduate students a chance to voice complaints about the University through special advisors, which was scheduled to be voted on Wednesday, was tabled until Oct. 9 until further research can be completed.

SIU researchers may lose funding for drug study

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

A drug patented at the SIUC School of Medicine could help people suffering from Alzheimer's disease, but testing may stop in February due to non-renewal of funding, researchers say.

Dr. Robert Becker, a psychiatrist with the school, said he will have to end his study of the drug, metrifonate, because he does not think the National Institute of Health will renew the grant.

"Even though we've had good effects with this drug, our grant runs out next February, so we will have to finish," he said. "We've gotten to the last phase of testing to determine if it really is helpful or not, but there are other studies that need to be done."

Becker said the NIH, which has given $515,000 for the drug study during the last five years, probably will discontinue its support because it is low on funds.

Further study of the drug would require approximately $715,000 to study 100 Alzheimer's patients — 50 to receive the drug and 50 to Betty Portz, who taught school in Carbondale's District 95 for over 20 years, should have enjoyed a happy retirement with her husband, Herbert, professor emeritus from SIUC.

Alzheimer's robbed her of that.

"It's hard to describe the things that you do, but it's a full time job," Herbert Portz said of his 8-year experience of caring for his wife, who died of the disease in 1991.

Portz is now married to Jan Lerner-Portz, whose husband also died of the disease.

The two now volunteer their time at the Southern Illinois chapter of the Alzheimer's Association, located in the Senior Citizens' Center at 409 N. Springer.

The Portzes currently are assisting the organization in arranging the "Memory Walk" for Oct. 8, to benefit the local chapter.

Portz said the event, which he hopes will raise $10,000, will be the second sponsored by the local chapter.

"About 70 people walked last year," he said. "This year I think we ought to get at least 200."

Louise Gollhofer, a chapter member whose husband, John, is in the early stage of the disease, said increasing participation in the event is important.

"The more people we can get out to the memory walk, the better," she said.

"There's a great need out there."

Bomb threat clears classrooms in Lawson Hall

By Connie Fritsche
Staff Reporter

A bomb threat called in to the SIUC Police Department yesterday afternoon had University instructors reacting in different ways.

Sgt. Frank Eovaldi of the SIUC Police Department said a bomb threat was called in to the department around 1 p.m.

He said officers immediately dispatched to Lawson Hall and informed all the instructors present that there had been a bomb threat.

Eovaldi said instructors were given a choice to either evacuate their classes or to stay.

After the instructors were informed, the officers searched the building for anything unusual, he said.

Eovaldi said he believes all the classes he informed were evacuated.

John Stahl, an instructor in zoology, was teaching Introductory Zoology when the threat occurred. He informed the class of the threat but did not evacuate the classroom and continued his lecture with minimal disruption. He said he was not aware of any students leaving the class.

Stahl said he has been teaching when bomb threats have occurred before.

He said he believes they happen about once every other year.

Charles Fligal, an instructor in music, was teaching Music Understanding when he was informed of the threat.

Fligal said the officers told him that he had a choice to stay or evacuate.

He said the students were listening to a recording at the time and he that had not informed the class of the threat.

He said he could not recall ever receiving a bomb threat while he was teaching.

Sue Davis, of University News Service, said that the police department tapes calls and has the capability of tracing threats.

She said every case is different, but that the police always inform the instructors when there is a threat.

She said that generally the instructors have discretion on whether to evacuate or not, but there are times when the police will evacuate.

"The same thing doesn't happen with every threat," Davis said.

"If police think that it is a real call and they have time, they evacuate."

Davis said, at this time, she is not sure if there is a written policy on informing students about bomb threats.

Eovaldi said that making a bomb threat is a class four felony.

Davis said that the school does prosecute anyone who is found to have called in a threat.

Students can rescue Halloween festivities

OCTOBER 31ST WILL BE HERE SOON, AND once again University and city officials are forced to keep the city from going up in flames amidst the revelers. The SIUC Halloween fest has provided Carbondale with a certain mystique, and city officials with a never-ending slew of problems. The city council has an obligation, and rightfully so, to help maintain a safe city for the all of Carbondale. As a result, the council has started discussions on how to keep Halloween under control this year. The University is in the same familiar position of trying to come up with a method of bringing the festival down to acceptable levels of mayhem.

The Halloween mystique that some students are so enamored with is also at the root of the crowd-control problem. The fest is known across the state and beyond as the place to come for Halloween. And come they do. Last year, there were 148 arrests in Carbondale for violations including fights, public and underage consumption and public urination. Of these 148, 87 were people from out of town. Clearly, the problem of crowds spilling onto the strip is made worse by the arrival of an undetermined number of people coming to Carbondale for the one weekend blowout.

HOWEVER, IN RESPONSE TO THE ONSLAUGHT of Halloween both the Council and University have taken what appear to be hurried and rash measures. Alcohol is the obvious cornerstone in the celebration, and this is where city's efforts are concentrated. City Manager Jeff Doherty will put before the Council on Oct. 4 a proposed ordinance banning the sale of liquor after 10 p.m. over the three weekend days nearest to the holiday. This action, the Council hopes, would keep people from drinking, congregating and taking over the strip.

The University has attempted to strike at the influx of non-students into Carbondale by creating temporary restrictions on residence halls. The students of residence halls will not be allowed to have guests overnight during the Halloween period. The University has determined this as the best way of keeping out-of-towners to a minimum.

MANY STUDENTS ARE VOICING OPPOSITION to both the city and University measures. Undergraduate Student Government has questioned the legality of the guest ban. In both cases it seems as though the city and University are coming together in an attempt to make the students behave, but without soliciting any student input. The natural reaction of the students, when feeling excluded from the decision-making process, is to be on the defensive. How are students expected to react when they are seen as a problem to be solved? Would not a more productive solution be to open a line between the University, city and students? If students feel compelled to salvage the Halloween celebration, they need to make some suggestions in the next 46 days:

Letters to the Editor

Netsch's state tax plan explained

I would like to respond to the article published in the September 12 issue of the Daily Egyptian entitled "Edgar slams Netsch's education plan".

First and foremost, I would like to explain what the Edgar campaign so fondly refers to as Netsch's plan to raise your taxes 42 percent. Obviously to ask a voting citizen to pay 42 percent each year would be political suicide.

Currently in Illinois personal income tax is three percent. The 42 percent increase is of the current three percent. In other words, if you divide three (current income tax) into 1.25 (proposed increase) you will come up with a 42 percent increase. Which isn't quite as bad as what the Edgar campaign tries to lead the average voter to believe.

What Edgar fails to tell you is that this tax increase will be offset largely by property tax reductions. What the proposed increase amounts to is, $1 billion for elementary and secondary education; $1 billion for property tax reductions and $500 million for personal exemptions. Dawn Clark Netsch's plan in no way detracts from funding for higher education.

As a college professor herself, Netsch has always demonstrated total commitment to higher education. She is right to focus initially on the major problems failing our elementary and secondary schools.

If the quality of the education in secondary schools increases, maybe fewer college students would need to spend the first two years of their higher education learning or relearning things generally taught at high school or lower level.

Netsch has the best plan for solving the educational crisis in Illinois.

Student questions containers laying out

While my professor droned on I carefully studied the contents of two petri dishes. Both of them contained several growths of grayish-white blobs of bacteria. Next to these was a vial of green-yellow liquid of unknown origin. As with the bacteria my attempts at identifying what the containers held was thwarted. There were no labels.

The scene just described is not of a biology student diligently trying to determine the contents of the mystery containers in a lab. It took place in a classroom on this campus. The class was an administration of justice class. The materials described were carelessly left lying about on a coat rack in the back of the classroom.

This past summer there were several examples of dangerous outbreaks of bacteria in the U.S. The most recent concerned a researcher who was contaminated at a lab at a well known university. He failed to follow procedure by not reporting the incident and subsequently exposed dozens of people before he fell ill.

So why then in light of recent scares of virus outbreaks is there a biological hazard in room 201 at Quigley Hall? You'd think with all the media attention labs across the country would be cracking down and following procedure. This does not sound like procedure to me.

I never thought that the cost of my higher education could be my life.

—George Holtz, senior, administration of justice

Football Salukis cheered on by peer

As a student at SIU, I would like to take a minute to publicly express my thoughts regarding the Saturday SIU-Ole Miss football game. First of all, one must question why this game was ever scheduled.

Obviously, money was the incentive, but is any amount of money worth risking injury to our players—especially prior to the beginning of conference play?

The verbal support from the SIU Administration and the community for the 1994 football team has been welcomed change. This verbal support needs to be backed with actions. I would like to take action and let the players of my football team know that they have support from their peers.

It takes a tremendous amount of courage and integrity to meet the challenge given to them by the athletic administration.

The way I see it, our team was asked to go up against one of the nation's top defensive teams at a time when we could least afford it. Well, they did it! They may have not won the game, or scored a touchdown, but they played with determination and guts against a I-A school that is given 32 more scholarships than SIU gives to its football program. Way to go guys! You did a great job—keep up the hard work.

the worldwide spread of democracy, we will need to expand our military to ten times its current size," said Derge. "What we tolerate in terms of atrocities in Rwanda, China, Bosnia, and other areas in the world is far greater in scale than Haiti."

"Particularly amateurish on the part of Clinton is his failure to consult Congress in the deployment of the two aircraft carriers. This destroys what credibility we leave, he added, "is up to them."

"If they decide to leave, we'll help them with the arrangements," Secretary of State Warren Christopher said, adding that the administration is "taking special steps" to make sure that the Haitian leaders could negotiate a deal if they choose.

One official said that secret emissaries have been sent to each of the three top officers in Haiti's regime, Lt. Gen. Raoul Cedras, Brig. Gen. Philippe Biamby, and Lt. Col. Jean-Michel Francois, to seek negotiations on the terms of their departure. But other officials refused to confirm that.

The aim of the offer is to entice one or more of the officers to leave the country voluntarily — an event that U.S. officials believe would lead to the collapse of the Haitian army and make it unnecessary for the United States to invade to accomplish its goal of reinstalling exiled President Jean-Bertrand Aristide.

The United States has long said it would be willing to help the leaders step down, but in recent weeks, U.S. officials have been now the parties will return to their former numbers of over 20,000 in the late 1980s.

"In the past, there was beer-can throwing, slam dancing and people jumping of roofs," he said. "I think this event is growing."

Patrick Smith, president of the Graduate and Professional Student Council, said there could still be problems even if Doherty's proposal passes.

"If the people get gassed up till 10 then get turned loose on the street, it may not be the best thing to prevent riots on the strip," he said. "If the city is going to close the bars early, I will probably recommend to grad students that they stay off the Strip."

Richard Simpson, co-owner of Hangar 9, 511 S. Illinois Ave., said the city needs to address the problems associated with Halloween, but the timing of this is causing him problems.

"I stand to lose a substantial amount of money because I have to reschedule bands that have been booked for months," he said. "There should have been a proposal presented last fall or this spring when there would be more time to discuss it."

Lester Browne, general manager of Garfield's Restaurant and Pub, University Mall, said he was very surprised by Doherty's proposal.

"Almost all of our sales after 10 p.m. are from alcohol sales so we would make no money after this time," he said.

Browne said most of the drunk and disorderly problems on Halloween come from underage drinkers, and no one has been arrested for underage consumption in his establishment.

Scott Kelly, manager of SideTracks, 101 W. College, said he thinks Doherty's proposal will increase chances of, "rape and violence."

"This will cause a lot more problems off the Strip," he said. "At least partiers on the Strip are centralized where police can deal with them."

Kelly said he thought the police had done a good job of controlling Halloween the past two years and did not see a need for the change.

Strom said he estimated the crowd size on South Illinois Avenue last Halloween to be around 1,000 people, but the snowy weather discouraged larger numbers.

He said that the department spends an additional $10,000 in overtime costs to put every available officer on the streets during Halloween.

"The mass of people downtown pose a large potential for violence," he said. "We are putting police officers at serious risk of injury, and for what? It's needless."

Simpson said although he was not happy with the timing of the proposal, he agreed it was time something was done.

"It is a terrible problem," he said. "The proposal would be effective in halting the sale of liquor."

Strom said he would rather see people congregate at smaller parties than on the strip.

"People come in from out of town and party downtown where there is no responsibility or accountability," he said. "The 70 to 75 officers on the strip are not enough if things get out of control."

makes it one of the oldest in the country, according to Clausen. It serves the purpose of a social change organization and offers free and confidential services to the community. It also operates a shelter for women fleeing from violence.

It was started because a need for a help center was noticed.

"We are here to improve the quality of life for women troubled by sexual and domestic violence," Clausen said.

have left with our allies."

Derge was referring to the USS America, deployed Tuesday, and the USS Eisenhower, deployed Wednesday, both from Norfolk, VA.

Derge also said Clinton's actions in sending 30,000 troops to fight were inconsistent with his own past behavior when he avoided serving in the armed forces during the Vietnam War.

their families safely out of Haiti could pose problems. Lower-ranking officers in the army have reportedly threatened to kill the commanders if they try to leave, so U.S. officials have had to consider "extracting" them in a virtual rescue mission.

Several senior officials said that they do not expect that kind of action to be necessary. Nevertheless, in case some kind of covert operation is needed, Clinton recently sent Congress a secret intelligence "finding" notifying them of the possibility, officials said.

A key part of the plan, one aide said, is that the United States is offering each of the three top officers a separate deal — in hope that at least one will accept.

The result would be a split in the regime's leadership that officials hope could lead to the army's collapse.

"We're going to leave no stone unturned to give (Cedras) an opportunity to make that decision, which is the right decision," Christopher said on PBS television.

North Korea rejects U.S. nuclear agreement

Los Angeles Times

TOKYO — In an attempt to alleviate Japanese and South Korean uneasiness, Robert L. Gallucci, America's chief negotiator with North Korea, declared here Wednesday that the United States will insist that North Korea clarify the history of its nuclear development as part of any Washington-Pyongyang agreement. He also offered an unqualified assurance that the United States will insist on North Korea accepting a South Korean light water reactor as the only "politically, economically and technologically feasible" replacement for two new gas graphite reactors that North Korea is now building.

So far North Korea, in its public statements, has rejected both demands.

Gallucci made the statements in separate news conferences at the U.S. Embassy and the Japan National Press Club.

Federal report describes cost of illegal aliens

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A federally commissioned study Wednesday offered support to state governments that have complained loudly about the costs of illegal immigration and insisted that Washington take a larger share of the burden.

In its most dramatic example, the report calculates that seven high immigration states will spend nearly three times as much on incarcerating illegal immigrants who have committed crimes after entering the United States as Congress has appropriated for next year.

Conducted by the Urban Institute, a Washington think tank that in the past has often stressed the benefits of immigration, the study is certain to become a significant and controversial entry in the ongoing debate over how federal, state and local governments should share the costs of services to illegal immigrants and the taxes that they pay.

Alice M. Rivlin, acting director of the Office of Management and Budget, which commissioned the report, said in a statement that it "provides the best information to date about the costs that states incur and the revenues they receive in connection with undocumented aliens."

Led by Governors Pete Wilson, R-Calif., and Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., several state governments have argued that illegal immigrants represent a huge net drain on their treasuries and that Washington should make up the alleged shortfall because policing the nation's borders is a federal responsibility.

California and Florida have filed lawsuits to get more federal funds.

The study only examines the seven states with the largest populations of illegal immigrants — Arizona, California, Florida, Illinois, New Jersey, New York and Texas — and on many specific points it differs with cost and revenue estimates produced by state governments.

But the report generally supports the assertion that illegal immigrants present substantial costs to state governments.

The report puts a $3.1 billion annual price tag on the cost of educating undocumented children in public schools.

In July, President Kim Young Sam of South Korea and Prime Minister Tomichi Murayama of Japan agreed that the two nations would insist on a clarification of North Korea's past nuclear record as a prerequisite to cooperating with any agreement the United States might work out with North Korea.

Officials of both nations have expressed fears that the United States might drop attempts to learn how much plutonium North Korea may have produced in the past — suspicions range up to 22 pounds — in favor of stopping future North Korean production of 352 pounds of plutonium a year through reprocessing of spent fuel from the two new reactors.

Gallucci, however, declared that "the United States certainly would not cooperate in ... the supply of any significant nuclear equipment" if North Korea does not make clear "what happened in the past" by submitting to special inspections by the International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA), Gallucci said.

The United States, he said, would be flexible about when, during the process of implementing an overall agreement, North Korea would allow the special inspections.

But "it is inconceivable that the United States, Japan, or South Korea would tolerate an indefinite failure to resolve the historical question."

Gallucci said the United States also is concerned about the continuing construction of the two new reactors that "would produce hundreds of kilograms a year — eventually thousands of kilograms over 10 years — of plutonium."

"The strategic significance of these reactors ... as components of a nuclear weapons program ... is quite large," he said.

The two reactors combined, he said, could enable North Korea to produce more than 160 kilograms (353 pounds) of plutonium annually.

A 50-megawatt reactor could come on line in 1996; a 200-megawatt reactor "a year later," he added.

The ambassador-at-large said he was aware that North Korea has sounded out "countries other than South Korea" about a light water reactor as a substitute for the gas graphite reactors it has offered to scrap as a part of an overall agreement with the United States.

But "after quite a bit of work and consultations with other governments," the United States now believes South Korea must be involved in any agreement, he said.

"The only technically, politically and financially viable model would be one in which South Korea played a central role, both in financing and construction," he said.

Program teaches 'facts of life'

By Sylvia Chalem, RN
Student Health Programs

There are so many misleading messages and so much misinformation in society about sexuality that it is difficult to separate the myths from the real "facts of life."

Consider, for example, the choice to become sexually active and the decision to choose and use birth control. No area of human sexuality suffers from more misleading myths.

How many people know that:

■ Secretions emitted from the penis prior to ejaculation contain sperm?

■ Sexual intercourse during the menstrual period can result in pregnancy?

■ 80-90 percent of all sexually active women will become pregnant in one year's time without effective contraception?

People who choose not to take precautions against pregnancy may be uncomfortable talking about sex with partners. They may believe the popular image that discussing sex beforehand is less romantic.

Few role models in the media teach that contraception is a part of sexual activity.

Many people do not feel that they are at risk — it won't happen to them.

Wrong.

More than 20 percent of college women who are sexually active become pregnant.

Some college men and women just don't think about contraceptive options; some are afraid to ask. Choosing the right birth control method is an important life decision-making and how to communicate with your partner will be addressed.

To Your Health

Students deserve accurate, updated information to help them make a wise choice.

To meet this important health need, the Student Health Program provides Birth Control Options sessions on Tuesdays from noon to 1 p.m. and Wednesdays from 1 to 2 p.m. in the Kesnar Hall classroom across from the Health Service Clinic.

People needing contraception for the first time, or those who wish to update their knowledge regarding birth control, should attend a Birth Control Options session before making an appointment at the Health Service Clinic.

The Birth Control Options sessions will include information on the pros and cons of all available birth control methods, with the emphasis on proper use. In addition, Sexually Transmitted Disease (STD) prevention, decision-making and how to communicate with your partner will be addressed.

The staff at the Student Health Programs believe that contraception is a shared responsibility. They actively encourage both men and women to attend the Birth Control Options session. Studies show that contraceptive use is more effective when both partners are committed to its use.

Talking about contraception may be difficult, but it can enhance the commitment of a relationship and is definitely easier than dealing with an unwanted pregnancy or STD.

Your health is too important to be left to chance.

The Student Health Programs encourages people to attend the Birth Control Options session and to bring a partner.

Men, as well as women, need to share responsibility for contraception.

For more information call the Student Health Programs Wellness Center at 536-4441.

Country stars record album for AIDS group

The Washington Post

This week marked the release of "Red Hot + Country," the fourth installment in the Red Hot Organization's ongoing international campaign to raise research funds for, and public consciousness about, AIDS.

RHO projects, which include albums, television specials and home videos, have earned more than $7 million for AIDS programs since the group was founded in 1989.

Like 1989's "Red Hot + Blue" (Cole Porter covers), 1991's "Red Hot + Dance" and last year's "No Alternative" (featuring alternative rock bands), the 17-cut "Red Hot + Country" is a multi-artist project.

This time, Kathy Mattea is acknowledged as the guiding force in getting other Nashvillians involved.

According to RHO founder John Carlin, getting country artists involved wasn't always an easy task.

"It's always a danger to stereotype anything, whether it's people with AIDS, homosexuality or musical genres," warns Carlin, who also served as the album's executive producer.

"Within country music there are still very conservative elements — musically and socially — that would not go near a project like this, and there are certainly many people we approached who did not want to participate."

"But within the country music community, there are a lot of socially conscious individuals as well, like Kathy Mattea."

"It's wrong to think that any particular genre as a whole would have a typical response to any particularly political issue," he said.

Professor to experience CNN

By Stephanie Moletti
Senior Reporter

An SIUC instructor from the Department of Radio and Television who was awarded an eight-week-faculty fellowship at the Cable News Network will bring back the latest knowledge on technology to the department.

Kenneth Keller, associate professor in radio and television and head of the broadcast news specialization in the department, was chosen from 30 national applicants for the fellowship at CNN's Atlanta headquarters.

Keller will leave sometime this weekend for the fellowship which begins Sept. 19.

"This is something I've been wanting to do anyway," he said. "We have former students working at CNN and I have wanted to spend some time down there."

Joe Foote, dean of the College of Mass Communications and Media Arts, said Keller is a particularly valuable faculty member and will be missed.

"This is one of the most prestigious internships in the field," Foote said. "I think he (Keller) had a yearning to get back into it. He's a faculty member at the top of the game. The rewards far outweigh the temporary inconvenience."

Foote said Keller will have the daily opportunity to learn the newest techniques in broadcast news.

"Aside from personal rejuvenation, he'll learn the latest techniques," he said.

Two years ago Keller spoke with one of the senior executive producers at CNN, who mentioned the network beginning a faculty fellowship program in the future. Keller said he followed that meeting up with a letter and formal application.

"I was hoping to do it this summer, but they informed me that I had been chosen for the fall," he said.

Keller said he is looking forward to catching up with the constantly changing technology.

"I want to learn more about the latest techniques in processing news and CNN has always been in front (with the latest technology)," he said. "I'm hoping to roll up my sleeves and get back to work again with real deadlines and real responsibilities."

"The students kept me in it, but it's (radio and television) in your blood."

Keller said he hopes to bring back technique elements and make contacts for students in the future.

"I'll learn more about the internal policies and politics," he said.

Keller's eight weeks will overlap upcoming elections and the O.J. Simpson case, so he expects to be busy.

During the first couple weeks of the fellowship, Keller will spend time learning the phases of the network's news operations.

"They will give me more time to actually do hands-on stuff," Keller said. "I'm really looking forward to it. The older you get, the more you realize it's a young person's business with the long hours and deadlines."

Keller said he expects to spend a lot of time writing, editing, doing segment production and conducting background research.

"This is an opportunity I certainly didn't want to pass up," he said. "Hopefully, it will bring me back here next semester refreshed, with new ideas."

Keller has been at SIUC since 1984. He worked as news director at Rock Island's WHBF, a radio and television station for seven years and was executive news producer at KNXT-TV, the CBS affiliate in Los Angeles.

Three faculty members nationwide are chosen each year for the CNN fellowship.

Applicants must teach TV journalism and agree to return to academic appointments following their training.

Keller will receive a $2,000 stipend from CNN to cover housing costs and meals during his eight-week stay.

subjects was measured through performance tests, she said.

While placebo users showed a decrease in test performance, the subjects who used the drug showed no performance loss, Vicari said.

Lata Unni, assistant professor of psychiatry, said blood tests show the drug appears to produce a desired chemical effect in its users.

"(Cholinesterase) is inhibited to the level we want it to be at," she said. "Blood tests show we can inhibit the enzyme."

Unni said the drug appears to work by inhibiting cholinesterase, an enzyme believed to be responsible for the breakdown of acetylcholine, a neurotransmitter associated with memory function.

Despite his imminent loss of research funding, Becker said he still may be able to market the drug.

"I hope to have it on the market in three years," he said.

Although the drug does not cure the disease, Becker said impeding the progression by a decade or more would be sufficient in treating it.

Fire started in local candy store

Machinery transformer spark sets balloons, papers ablaze; no injuries

By Anika Robertson
General Assignment Reporter

A local store at the University Mall, 1237 E. Main, caught fire early Wednesday morning.

A small fire broke out in Mr. Bulky, a candy store, according to a report written by Assistant Fire Chief John Manis.

A transformer inside of a piece of machinery sparked off the blaze which spread fire to papers and balloons near the counter area, John Manis said.

Mail security guard Bob Simon immediately notified the Carbondale police department after discovering the fire.

Simon noticed smoke coming from Mr. Bulky at approximately 4:40 a.m.

Three fire trucks were dispatched to the scene, Manis said.

Alice Marlow, manager of Mr. Bulky, said she was glad no one was injured.

"The Mr. Bulky corporate office will remodel the store and we will be back in business in two to three weeks," she said.

All food products will be replaced, Manis said.

Damage to the store was mainly due to smoke and water, Manis said, but estimated damage costs could not be obtained at this time.

There have been no previous fires in the University Mall.

Several months ago, Sbarro, an Italian food store in the Food Court notified the fire department after a pizza that was left in an oven disintegrated and produced a lot of smoke.

The oven was set on a high self-cleaning temperature hours after mall closed.

Air traffic controllers taking heat

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The union representing air traffic controllers said Wednesday that it was not their responsibility to monitor radar continuously during early morning hours and that controllers on duty at National Airport when a small plane crashed into the White House early Monday were "conducting their duties as required."

Obviously angry that controllers appeared to be getting the blame for failure to detect the plane, the National Air Traffic Controllers Association (NATCA) said the two controllers were performing required administrative duties and had no reason to look at radar screens.

The union release strongly suggests that air surveillance and notification to White House security is routinely limited; at least, in the early morning hours when the president normally is asleep.

"Controllers on the midnight shift are required to monitor the radar only when aircraft are scheduled to enter their airspace," the NATCA release said. "Neither the tower controller nor the radar controller were working any aircraft movements at the time of the incident. In accordance with their responsibilities, they were conducting standard administrative duties in preparation for the heavy morning traffic flow."

The union's statement also raises additional questions concerning the existence of detailed and clear lines of accountability on the division of labor between the Federal Aviation Administration and the Secret Service, which is directly responsible for protecting the president.

A joint press release Wednesday from the FAA and the Secret Service made clear that FAA plays a role in providing the Secret Service with air space information that is "vital." The release also noted that the FAA and Secret Service have "heightened security procedures" pending the completion of a comprehensive review of the current system.

Battle of the Bands to begin

By Dave Katzman
Staff Reporter

The nine-week search for Carbondale's best musical group begins tonight at Beach Bumz with the 11th Battle of the Bands.

Eighteen groups will compete every Thursday night at 9 p.m. over the next nine weeks.

A panel of four judges will rate each band on a ten-point scale in the following categories: originality, audience response, stage presence, and musical and technical content. Judges are chosen from different areas of the Carbondale music scene, including disc jockeys, professional musicians, writers and fans. The judges are kept for the whole competition.

For the first six weeks, one band will be picked from each set of three. The semi-finals follow, when the weekly winners duel for two spots in the finals. The third final slot will be filled by a wild card entry.

Over $2,000 in prizes are available for the three finalists. The first-place winner will receive $1,000 worth of equipment from St. Louis Music Supply. Ten hours of studio time will be rewarded to both the second and third place finishers.

Last spring's winner, Cruces, has broadened its playing area since winning the title. The band placed into the finals of a St. Louis Battle of the Bands since winning in Carbondale.

Cruces' bassist Scott Doudera said it was a good feeling for the

The battle's 1988 winner, Stoneface, went on to open for national acts including Molly Hatchet and Robin Trower.

Joe Castrejon, president of Sound Core, Inc., said winning the battle brings a lot of exposure to a band.

"A lot of SIU grads are big agents now," Castrejon said. "They call us to look for bands to go on tour for bigger bands."

"Once you win, other bars start hiring you. Students from Chicago and St. Louis go back home and say, 'This band is good.'"

Bands come from all over the area to compete, including Cape Girardeau and Springfield. Different musical styles are represented and bands with similar sounds are not lumped together.

The battle was an annual event, but this year it took place in the spring and fall. A summer battle was planned, but not enough bands signed up.

Raging Fear, Cryptic Warning and Fulcrum will compete tonight.

The Battle of the Bands will take place every Thursday at 9 p.m. for the next nine weeks at Beach Bumz, 611 S. Illinois Ave. Tickets are $1.00.

band to win after existing for over two years.

"At the time, it was a tremendous morale booster and a sense of satisfaction to finally accomplish it," Doudera said. "Shortly afterward, we picked up a manager and moved on to a larger music showcase."

Webb presents recital

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

Playing the organ she helped build in Shryock Auditorium is just one accomplishment of Carbondale resident Marianne Webb.

Webb, a professor of music and University organist, will present a free Faculty Organ Recital at 8 p.m. Sept. 16 at Shryock.

She will play works such as "Prelude in C Major" by Boehm and "Fantasy in F Minor" by Mozart, as well as selections by Bach, Saint-Saens and Widor.

She has been playing for 44 years and still enjoys it.

Webb worked with Franklin Mitchell, tonal director and vice-president of the Reuter Company, on the organ in Shryock.

Webb

She made detailed plans and specifications for the organ.

"The organ is custom designed for Shryock and SIU needs," Webb said.

Webb earned a Bachelor of Music degree from Washburn University and a Master of Music degree from the University of Michigan. She has also studied music in Paris.

She has traveled extensively throughout the United States and Europe presenting solo recitals, masterclasses, workshops and seminars. She is a member of the American Guild of Organists through which she has served in various chapter offices and performed at regional conventions.

Pipe Dreams, a nationally broadcast program from Minnesota Public Radio, has broadcast her as the feature performer.

Webb, who hails from Kansas, has been with the School of Music since 1965.

Dishonest brokers fear investigation

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—The Securities and Exchange Commission disclosed Wednesday that it plans to launch a sweep of small- and medium-sized brokerage firms across the country to ferret out evidence of dishonest stockbrokers.

SEC Chairman Arthur Levitt Jr. announced the sweep at a congressional hearing looking into the problem of "rogue" stock brokers who repeatedly defraud small investors. Over the next six to eight months, he said, the SEC staff will visit "scores" of brokerage firm branch offices.

Levitt said the sweep will be similar to a series of examinations the SEC has carried out at the nation's nine largest brokerage houses. In May, the agency said the earlier sweep had led it to open 40 formal disciplinary investigations.

"To those who would prey on unsuspecting investors, this is a warning: Clean up your act, or we'll do it for you," Levitt said.

During the hearing, Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., chairman of the House Subcommittee on Telecommunications and Finance, sharply criticized the National Association of Securities Dealers, the New York Stock Exchange and the SEC, which often take years to bring cases against brokers who blatantly violate securities laws.

Scientists identify genetic factor in some breast cancer patients

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — A group of scientists said Wednesday they have found a gene that appears to be responsible for almost half the cases of the breast cancer that runs in families.

The announcement ends a race among nearly a dozen laboratories that began four years ago when another research team described in general terms the gene's location.

The discovery illuminates only a small corner of a disease that, overall, is the second most common cause of death by cancer in women. Nevertheless, it gives researchers a toe-hold in the strenuous effort to understand the complex biological events leading to the illness.

"This is an extremely important development in our understanding of cancer... (but) it does not at this stage represent a cure or something that American women can take action on today," Harold E. Varmus, director of the National Institutes of Health, said Wednesday at a news conference where the findings were announced.

Only 5 percent of breast cancer cases occur in women whose families show a clear proclivity for the disease generation after generation. The remaining 95 percent of cases arise "sporadically," with little or no evidence that inheritance plays a large role. The newly discovered gene seems to be involved in about 45 percent of inherited cases of breast cancer.

Preliminary research suggests, however, that it has no role in sporadic cases.

The gene, called BRCA1, has some as-yet-undiscovered normal function. Only in mutant form does it raise a woman's risk for breast cancer and, to a lesser degree, ovarian cancer. Though having the mutant gene is not an assurance that a woman will get either disease, researchers estimate about 85 percent of such women will develop one of these cancers.

"This is an extremely important development in our understanding of cancer."

—Harold E. Varmus

Identification of the gene may lead eventually to a test that will allow women in high-risk families to learn if they are among those carrying the mutant form.

Such a test, however, is years in the future and its usefulness is unclear. Other than surgical removal of the breasts — an option that a few high-risk women have taken — there is no way to prevent breast cancer.

"This is not a time to rush this kind of testing into the general practitioner's office," said Francis S. Collins, director of the NIH's National Center for Human Genome Research.

There will be about 182,000 new cases of breast cancer among women (and about 1,000 in men) this year, according to government statistics. About 43,000 women die of the disease each year.

The discovery was described by researchers Wednesday, even though it will not be published until next month, in the journal Science.

Word that BRCA1 finally has been found was reported Tuesday night by NBC News.

The research was led by Mark H. Skolnick of the University of Utah Medical Center and Myriad Genetics of Salt Lake City. Scientists at NIH's National Institute of Environmental Health Sciences, McGill University, Eli Lilly and Co., Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center, Duke University and the Faculty of Health Sciences in Tab Linkoping, Sweden, also contributed to the research.

In 1990 a scientist at the University of California at Berkeley, Mary Claire King, wrote that in some families with multi-generational breast cancer there appeared to be an abnormality on chromosome 17.

Skolnick and his colleagues studied eight families with what appeared to be inherited risk of breast cancer.

Using a variety of molecular biology techniques, they narrowed the possible location of BRCA1 to a relatively short stretch of chromosome 17.

They then looked for differences in that stretch between family members and people in the general population who had no family history of breast cancer.

Eventually, they found abnormal stretches of DNA — the genetic building blocks that make up chromosomes — in four of the eight families.

1995 season. Ownership representatives from 26 of the 28 major league teams signed a resolution calling off the rest of the season; the statement was faxed to each club Tuesday. The two owners who declined to sign the document were Peter Angelos of the Baltimore Orioles and Marge Schott of the Cincinnati Reds. Angelos drafted his own resolution with reworked language, and Selig said that Schott wanted to continue this season with replacement players.

The two sides continued to blame one another for the negotiating stalemate.

"I think what's interesting today is that when we got the announcement from Bud, as well as being disappointing and tragic, it seemed to me it was anticlimactic in the extreme," Players Association chief Donald Fehr said during a news conference at a Manhattan hotel. "From what we've seen from the owners over the past few weeks... there appeared to be no urgency, no desire to go to any extraordinary lengths to find an agreement."

Said owners' negotiator Richard Ravitch: "I hope the tragedy of the past 34 days has taught everyone that this cannot be repeated next year. We need to get down to some earnest collective bargaining as soon as possible. ... The job of a union is to participate in collective bargaining. Threats of strikes and strikes do not produce solutions. Only earnest bargaining does."

Selig spoke of a "cooling-off period," while Ravitch said an owners' meeting could take place in the "not-too-distant future" and indicated that he'll contact the owners Friday and be in touch with Fehr soon. Fehr will begin conducting a series of regional player meetings next week.

Fehr said the union would not necessarily oppose participating in binding arbitration, but Selig responded: "This will only be solved at the bargaining table."

The owners have offered the players 50 percent of baseball's revenues in a proposal that calls for a payroll floor and ceiling for each club. The players vehemently oppose any sort of salary-cap and say they want to maintain the free-market system in which the average player salary has soared to nearly $1.2 million a year. Late last week, the union made a proposal to the owners that would increase the degree to which the teams share their revenues — and subsidize the game's small-market clubs — but the owners contemptuously rejected the plan, saying it contained no mechanism for curbing players' salaries. Face-to-face talks broke off Saturday.

The economic and commercial law subcommittee of the House Judiciary Committee is scheduled to conduct a hearing on the owners' longstanding exemption from federal antitrust laws next Thursday.

Administration officials said President Clinton has no plans to intervene in the dispute. "We will follow it, but I don't think at this point there are any plans for action," White House press secretary Dee Dee Myers said.

There are many casualties. Until the players went on strike Aug. 12, this had been shaping up as one of the most invigorating seasons in memory. San Diego's Tony Gwynn had a chance to become baseball's first 400 hitter since Ted Williams batted .406 in 1941. San Francisco's Matt Williams, Seattle's Ken Griffey Jr. and the Chicago White Sox' Frank Thomas had opportunities to challenge Roger Maris' single-season home run record of 61.

The New York Yankees likely were en route to breaking the longest postseason drought in franchise history. The beleaguered Cleveland Indians had opened a magnificent new downtown ballpark and were having their best season in 40 years. The Montreal Expos at last had won over the town's hockey fanatics and had the best record in the major leagues.

"I'm just sick about this," said Expos General Manager Kevin Malone, adding that the franchise expects to suffer operating losses of approximately $20 million this year and probably won't be able to keep the nucleus of its team together for whenever baseball is played again. "I just can't see why they couldn't work something out."

Estimates are that the players will lose roughly $230 million in potential income this year because of the strike. Disbursements from their approximately $175 million strike fund — stockpiled from withheld licensing dividends — will begin this week. The players, who haven't received paychecks since Aug. 15, will be mailed checks of up to $10,000 apiece from this disbursement, and have made plans for supplements of up to $10,000 each on Oct. 1 and as much as $5,000 apiece on Oct. 15. Major league managers, coaches and trainers also receive payments from the players' strike fund.

The 28 teams reportedly could miss out on somewhere between $500 million and $600 million in potential revenues this year due to the strike. The clubs have no strike insurance but do have lines of credit. Sources say that Fehr already has warned Selig that the real labor war begins now, and that as many as six teams could be out of business by the time the next big league game is played — perhaps as late as next June, some union officials say privately.

Conclave Club chops way to contest

By Chris Clark
Staff Reporter

Brenda Mager stands over a large log and chops hard at it with an axe as wood sprays to the ground with each stroke. After cutting a v-shaped notch into one side, she turns and does the same to the other side, cutting the log completely in half.

Mager is a member of the SIUC Conclave Club which is 200 people strong. The club is made up of both men and women, lumberjacks and lumberjills as they call themselves. Members compete in two competitions each year that harken back to days gone by.

"It's a tribute to the way things were before they were mechanized," James Stole, president of the Conclave Club said.

The club is currently practicing for the Midwest Foresters Conclaves to be held at Lake of the Ozarks, Mo., on Oct. 22. They have finished in first place for the past two years. The group also won the Forest Glen Preserve competition this past April.

Members of the club practice their events every day for long periods of time, sometimes until dark, because these competitions require speed, strength and skill.

In the bucksaw event, the object is to cut a "cookie," or thin round piece of wood off the log in the shortest amount of time.

Another timed event is the log roll. Members roll a 12-foot log through a 50 x 50 L-shaped course using only a peavey, which is a pole with a hook at the end. Time penalties are assessed for touching the log with anything else.

The pulp toss requires a four-man team to throw four-foot logs between two posts placed three feet apart from 25 feet away. Each log weighs approximately 30 pounds.

The bolt toss is similar to the pulp toss except the log is six feet long and weighs 60 pounds. The contestant also gets to take three steps before throwing it.

Stole said the club is very strong in the speed chopping and bucksaw events. Because he can only take 35 members to Missouri, however, he must hold time trials for those events before the competitions.

Stole said that of all the events, he hears the most about the tobacco spit competition. In the tobacco spit, contestants stand 10 feet away from a piece of paper that resembles graph paper.

The object is to spit tobacco juice onto the paper and cover as many squares as you can. The person with the most covered squares after three attempts wins.

"A lot of parents don't like that event, because they think it promotes the chewing of tobacco," Stole said. "That's why we try to do that event early in the day, like eight in the morning."

SEMO netters hit Saluki defense hard in match

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

The Saluki volleyball team suffered another setback Tuesday night at the hands of Southeast Missouri State.

SEMO beat the Salukis three out of five games, 8-15, 15-11, 15-10, 5-15, 15-11, which ended an SIUC winning streak of 11 straight contests against the Otahkians.

Saluki head coach Sonya Locke said the match was exactly what she expected from SEMO.

"Any team plays well at home, and SEMO was no different," she said. "I expected for us to come to Cape Girardeau and play a tough match, and that is what happened."

The match was a back-and-forth battle from the beginning, as SIUC took a one game lead, but then began to falter.

Locke said SIUC had consistency problems that caused them to lose two straight matches.

"Our blocking was atrocious," she said. "We had no blocking at all in this match, and that hurt us."

With SIUC down two games to one and on the verge of being sent back to Carbondale, Locke said the Salukis showed some heart and got back into the match.

"I think it showed some guts to be down two games to one going into the fourth game of a back and fourth match and pull out a very decisive victory," Locke said. "The team played hard and forced a fifth game."

NCAA rules call for the fifth game of a match to be decided by rally score. Rally scoring means that every serve results in a point. There are no side outs in rally scoring.

Locke said the Salukis got down by four points early and couldn't come back.

"We had just come off of a big win in the fourth game and were up for the deciding fifth game," she said. "We dug ourselves in a hole early in the game and just couldn't recover."

SIUC lost the fifth game 11-15. The Salukis were led by junior setter Kim Golebiewski's 38 assists, four kills and 10 digs. All-Missouri Valley Conference pick Deb Heyne had 13 kills, two service aces and 11 digs.

SIUC extended its record to 1-5 overall and 1-1 in the MVC. The Otahkians, who were a pre-season pick to win the Ohio Valley Conference, are 5-4 overall and 0-0 in conference play.

The Salukis return to the court Sept. 16 to take on Tulsa in the season home opener in Davies Gymnasium at 7 p.m.

Ball season officially over; strike leaves tangled mess

The Washington Post

NEW YORK The once-unthinkable for baseball had become the inevitable by the time the game's acting commissioner, Bud Selig, made matters official Wednesday. Selig announced the cancellation of the remainder of the 1994 major league season — including the World Series, which won't be played for the first time in 90 years because of the bitter labor dispute between the team owners and on-strike players.

"There's an incredible amount of sadness," Selig said during a late-afternoon news conference in Milwaukee. "It's hard to articulate the poignancy of this moment. There's been failure on so many fronts. ... We can only hope now we constructively move forward to solve our problems, rebuild the damage and take the game to the heights it can reach."

"We felt pragmatism dictated this," added Selig, the Milwaukee Brewers' owner. "I know the short-term pain is intense. But if this can serve as the impetus to a long-range solution, then maybe there will be some good that comes from this."

The strike, which reached the 34-day mark Wednesday, will wipe out the final 52 days and 669 games of the regular season, plus the postseason. It also is threatening to spill over into the

SIUC soccer league keeps growing

By Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

The World Cup sent Americans into a soccer frenzy last July and the SIUC soccer league is getting ready to capitalize on a growing sport.

The SIUC International World Cup Soccer League, sponsored by the International Student Council, will start play on Sept. 24, and end with the championship final in late October.

There will be around 20 international and American teams divided up according to nationality. Representative nations who are unable to field a full squad will be combined with other students to form United Nations squads.

International Student Council president Wan Kamal Wan Napi said there is more interest about this year's league because of the growing popularity of the sport in this country.

"Since the World Cup was in the United States, more Americans are getting involved with soccer," he said. "People are really excited about soccer in this country, and I have had a lot of Americans interested in playing in this league."

He said the added American interest is great for the sport and international players.

"With more Americans playing in this league, it helps build better relationships between international and American students," Wan Napi said. "Everybody can learn soccer and a lot of different things from each other."

The league, which started in 1982, will be divided into four groups by nationality.

Khaled Abdel-Jabbar, a senior in Cinema from Palestine and a member of the Palestinian league team, said he is happy that this league lets him play under his country's name.

"It has always been a dream of mine to play for my national team and now I get a chance to represent my country in this league," he said.

Abdel-Jabbar said there are over 60 million people playing soccer in the United States today
