USG campaigning becomes ugly

TRAVIS DeNEAL
DE POLITICS EDITOR

The Undergraduate Student Government election campaigns became ugly in the final day before the election, with the posting of anonymous negative flyers and a person in a chicken suit cavorting around campus.

Voting for the elections takes place today from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., during which time students will choose next year's student trustee, USG president, vice president and senators.

The presidential and vice presidential candidates are Rob Taylor and Pat Kelly of the Shakedown Party, Kristie Ayres and Jackie

Smith of the Progress Party, and Sean Henry and Greg Akers of the Saluki Party.

Until Tuesday, campaigning had been fairly low key, with occasional flyers appearing at various campus locations and all flyers portraying a positive, opponent-friendly approach. However, three separate designs of flyers appeared in the Faner Hall breezeway Tuesday containing highly critical messages about Taylor and Kelly.

One such poster contained a Daily Egyptian photo from the fall of an unshaven Kelly meeting

Democratic DIVERSITY

Several Democratic candidates for statewide office converge on Southern Illinois, pushing platform of diversity, education, health care.

KIRK MOTTAM
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Making their first collective campaign appearance in Jackson County, the statewide Democratic candidates converged on Murphysboro Tuesday to sell their unprecedented diversity and pit themselves against a party who they say is running a superficial, million-dollar campaign.

Headlining the show and serving as host to a cast of predominantly northern candidates, Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Glenn Poshard sought to thank and rally his downstate aficionados while promoting his ticket, which he predicts will reverse a long-standing Democratic losing streak in November.

Poshard joins running mate Mary Lou Kearns, incumbent U.S. Sen. Carol Moseley-Braun, Secretary of State nominee Jesse White, Attorney General contender Miriam Santos, Comptroller candidate Dan Hynes and Treasurer candidate Dan McLaughlin in Democratic efforts to seize control of the top executive offices now under Republican leadership. Braun and McLaughlin were absent from the rally, but were lauded by their mates in brief addresses that served to invigorate a Democratic crowd still recuperating from a rancorous primary.

State senate and representative candidates Barb Brown and Don Stroni, for whom Poshard asked Jackson County voters to "stand tall," also made an appearance Tuesday.

His voice becoming more hoarse by the sentence, Poshard emphasized the diversity of the Democratic ballot and reinforced his message of increased access to quality education and health care. The downstate congressman promised to appoint Kearns, who serves as Kane County coroner, to oversee state health care policy during his tenure. Drawing a distinction between the two parties' campaign styles, Poshard criticized Republicans for their television-centered campaign tactics and extolled the grassroots efforts of his own party.

"There's one party in this state that thinks you can be re-elected by spending $20 million on 30-second attack ads, and there's another party that thinks you're elected by going out on the courthouse lawn and shaking hands with the people and looking them in the eye and asking them for their vote," Poshard said. "That's our party."

"This ticket, my friends, represents the face of Illinois. This ticket represents the diversity of Illinois. It represents the strength

Almanac

ON THIS DATE IN 1977:

- During a television address to the American people, President Carter warned that the nation's oil and gas supplies were running out and the reserves in other parts of the world would not be able to meet the rising demands for more than a few years longer. "With the exception of preventing war, this is the greatest challenge our country will face during our lifetimes." He urged Americans to make sacrifices and support unpopular political decisions in order "to prevent a national catastrophe."
- The Food and Drug Administration announced it would be banning the use of saccharin as a food additive because it caused cancer in laboratory animals, but would allow the continued sale of saccharin pills and powders if shown proof they were effective in controlling obesity and diabetes. The substance is still used today in certain sugar substitutes.
- Winner of 3 Academy Awards, including Best Picture of the Year, "Rocky," starring Sylvester Stallone, was playing at the Varsity Theater.

Corrections

In the secondary headline with "Faculty Union Drops Unfair Labor Charge" in the Tuesday Daily Egyptian, the number of departments affected by the settlement was incorrect. Searches to fill faculty positions in five departments resumed as a result of the settlement between the union and the administration.

In the secondary headline with "Unknown candidate touts student power tactic" Bob Hanfland's name was misspelled.

The Daily Egyptian regrets these errors.

Sociology professor dies Monday at 70

GIFT: Eynon was a local Boy Scout leader, coach, internationally published.

MIKAL J. HARRIS
DE CAMPUS LIFE EDITOR

The office at 3424 Faner Hall once served a local Boy Scout leader, an avid and published international researcher, a flag football coach, and a scholar who received about 60 research grants during his SIUC career.

But sociology department chairman Joel Best says Thomas Eynon also had a reputation as a grouch that seemed to directly contradict the high marks he received on teaching evaluations each year. Best, a longtime friend of the late sociology professor, says he became aware of that reputation shortly after his job interview at SIUC.

"I was quite shocked when I got here because he seemed grumpy to me as well," he said. "Part of his act was that he was a grumpy guy."

Best said Eynon, 70, who died early Monday morning at Memorial Hospital of Carbondale, was really someone who loved to teach and who gave substantial efforts to the community. His last gift was his body to the School of Medicine.

The SIU Board of Trustees awarded Eynon the 1998 Lindell W. Sturgis Award for Public Service in February.

Eynon's numerous other accomplishments fill his 22-page vita. Those notable achievements include serving SIU campuses in Nigata, Japan, and Edwardsville, editing The Sociological Quarterly, and his 1983 appointment to the Illinois Juvenile Justice Commission by then Gov. Jim Thompson.

Eynon received his undergraduate, graduate and doctorate degrees at The Ohio State University, and came to SIUC in 1968 as a professor of sociology and criminology. He also began work at SIUC's Corrections Center for the Study of Crime at that time.

Two years later, he laid the basic foundation for SIUC's Administration of Justice program as the department's first chairman. He built the program to include 480 undergraduate and 63 graduate students.

Eynon also directed undergraduate and graduate studies in sociology during his SIUC career, and he was teaching two classes at the time of his death. In recent years, he also spent consecutive summers teaching at the Nigata campus.

Rhonda Vinson, executive assistant to the chancellor for international and economic development, said that zest for educating never slowed as Eynon grew older.

"He kept teaching because he still loved teaching," she said. "It doesn't appear that he even rested in the summer."

Following old budget could have avoided problems, says Faculty Senate member BUDGET: Old plan died in its third year due to opposition from SIU Board of Trustees.

J. MICHAEL RODRIGUEZ
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Following through with a budget plan implemented six years ago could have deterred the collective bargaining problems SIUC has been experiencing, one member of the Faculty Senate says.

However, one administrator responds that although faculty salaries may have been increased, most disliked the plan after they realized it resulted in the loss of faculty lines.

An investigation of the whereabouts of the 1992 President's Budget Committee Salary Increase Plan was completed and presented at a Faculty Senate meeting Tuesday.

Al Melone, a professor in political science and a Faculty Senate member, inquired about the plan to Geoff Nathan, chairman of the Faculty Senate Budget Committee.

The purpose of the plan was to increase faculty salaries by increasing tuition and cutting personnel to reallocate money. The plan came on the heels of the University's inability to persuade state legislators to allocate money to improve SIUC salaries, according to Nathan, who compiled information from current employees involved with the plan in 1992.

The plan died in its third year because of opposition by the SIU Board of Trustees and financial difficulties encountered by the University. There was also reluctance by both administrators and faculty to leave vacant lines permanently unfilled in order to realize funds for salary increases. The coalition forged at the beginning of the plan started to unravel.

Melone said his reason for bringing up the issue now was a form of analyzing possible solutions to current University problems.

"We need to learn from the past," he said. "If we had stayed with the program we wouldn't have problems. Now we're

A DEFINITE COLLEGIATE POLITICAL ICON FOR THE USG ELECTIONS~

DIANE LINDSEY/DAILY EGYPTIAN

Our Word

USG campaign laws need an overhaul

In any competition there are rules that need to be followed, but sometimes those rules are unrealistic or just do not make any sense. Such is the case with rules that the Undergraduate Student Government places on candidates running for office. Even worse, though, is that the candidates running for office are willingly taking advantage of this inadequate system.

The main battle that is currently grabbing the spotlight within this election is the grievance war being waged between the Saluki and the Progress parties. Sean Henry, presidential candidate of the Saluki Party, filed 11 separate grievances against the Progress Party between Friday and Monday. There have been 15 grievances filed as of this writing. Shakedown Party candidates Rob Taylor and Pat Kelly have even mentioned they might have to stop campaigning to remain in the race. Most of the grievances filed have been in regards to campaign literature that was either not approved or was deemed slanderous.

This is a prime example of how the rules surrounding campus elections need to be reformed. There is a time and place for the airing of grievances, but this year's USG candidates have taken the time to submit grievances that are childish. This is a political election and should be treated as such. The candidates have a First Amendment right to print and distribute what they want concerning their campaign, just as anyone that may be affected by that literature has the right to respond to it. Do not abuse that right.

All campaigns have rules to guide them. Unless the candidates somehow violate the Student Conduct Code or disrupt the educational function of this University, there should be no concerns.

Campaigns last only two weeks. That is not an adequate amount of time for candidates to effectively disseminate their message. Lengthening the campaign season could help curb voting based on name alone.

Candidates also are not allowed to post flyers or posters outside on University buildings or property. Being able to place flyers on the pedestrian overpass or Fanner Hall breezeway are the best means for communicating information to students. Allowing flyers to be placed in such areas would increase exposure as well.

Inconsistencies also exist within the rules. The USG constitution says that campaigning is allowed in approved areas only. Candidates are not allowed to hand out flyers in the Student Center but can stand right outside the doors and pass out literature.

Not only are the rules set up by the USG constitution disappointing, but so are those profiting from them. Candidates should show a little more professionalism and not file so many insignificant grievances against each other. Further evidence that there needs to be some reform in the election process is the simplicity of bypassing the system. Tuesday, two separate anti-Shakedown Party fliers were posted around campus. Because there was no party name on them, no one can be held responsible. If it is that easy to muddle, why have the other candidates not done this from the start?

Another problem arises with the polling places — Thompson Point, the Recreation Center, Trueblood Cafeteria, and the Student Center. These sites seem to be beneficial to the Progress Party with their locations among many of their supporters. The sites should be more conducive to demographics that will include all constituents equally. Also, only four polling places for 17,000 students? It cannot be that difficult to set up more places for students to vote, especially when student apathy is unacceptably high.

Elections are supposed to be battles, which sometimes turn dirty. As the USG elections come to a close today, it is the Daily Egyptian's hope elections next year will not be as childish.

"Our Word" represents the consensus of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Board.

Seize the moments before graduation

Lately whenever I speak to someone that I haven't seen in awhile, I will casually mention that I'm going to graduate in May. The person will then take a few steps back, give my a funeral visitation look of pity, then quickly recall a meeting that they are remarkably late for. I'm about to cross over, and I've the stench of death.

I'm going to graduate in less than a month, and that is a cold, hard fact that I can do nothing about, really. Some have suggested that I immediately change majors, which I would consider, except that the announcements have already been placed in the mail.

Others tell me to go on to graduate school, which is another possibility, except that the deadlines are past, I'm hopelessly in debt, and I'm tired of school.

Go to Europe, others suggest. "Then what?" I ask. You discover that there is no "Then what" when it comes to running away to Europe. I considered joining the Peace Corps early on this year, but then I was informed that they don't send a lot of just-graduated history majors to the Caribbean.

So right now, I'm afraid of a lot of different things, I'm afraid of not being able to find a job, but of course I'm terrified of the thought of the alternative. I'm worried about those pesky student loans that must be paid back, and I'm upset about the prospect of leaving a lot of my friends behind.

What if I can't find a job, and I'm forced to go back to work at the local Wal-Mart as the guy who makes certain that you have plenty of detergent to choose from? I'm going to graduate, and I'm scared.

For those of you experiencing the same thing, my sincere sympathy. For you others that are only amused at our anguish, here is one simple rule to live by.

Hang on. Hang on as long as you can, just like Mellencamp said in that song. Hang on as long as you can, because change is coming real soon, to make you women and men.

And I don't mean extend your collegiate career indefinitely, though that certainly is a viable option. I mean don't let your youth go to waste.

Don't take things for granted. Savor every smile from every pretty girl. Enjoy those hard-earned top grades, and laugh off the ones that aren't as impressive.

You have to grasp those silly little conversations that you have with your roommates — the ones about waking up with only one eyebrow — with all your might. Someday your conversations will be much more somber. Study hard, because you're only wasting money and time if you don't.

Buy a round for your close friends to let them know that they're appreciated. Admire the beauty of this campus, and quit griping about not finding a place to park.

The bottom line, you can only be a foolishly college student filled with an arrogant optimism toward the future one time in your life.

For your own peace of mind when you begin to age, don't leave this place without a picture book overflowing with golden age memoirs.

Union not at fault for SIUC's current problems

Dear Editor,

Faculty leaders such as Steve Jensen, John Preece, and Steve Scheiner certainly have the right to oppose the faculty union, but they would make a better case for their views if their comments were fair and objective.

Like these colleagues I am not a union member, and until lately, I have been concerned about the union's effectiveness.

However, fair is fair. To say that union members are harming collegiality or contributing to our steady decline as a university is simply not true. If we had no union we would still be a party school with weak programs, poorly prepared students who are not adequately supported, a poorly paid and demoralized faculty, and an inadequate central administration.

When I came here 26 years ago, SIUC was the second jewel in the state's university system.

Now we are far less, desperately competing with the local junior college to attract and retain weak students in an attempt to keep our numbers up. We are also saddled with a highly paid, ineffective, ever-growing administration in contrast to a poorly paid, ever shrinking faculty.

It may be that the only way to improve as an institution is to have a faculty union that will oppose inadequate political appointees on the Board and as president. One which will work to see that the faculty is finally treated with respect and which will ensure that meaningful educational opportunities are provided to our students.

I am particularly disappointed in the actions of professors Scheiner and Jensen in our recent chancellor search. After asking us to take it seriously, shouldn't Scheiner explain why his committee came up with such a weak slate of candidates? Shouldn't Steve Jensen explain why the fifth-best candidate out of the final four was selected (surely Don Beggs would have been better) while he helped President Sanders negate the preference of the students and faculty. In closing, these are desperate times for SIUC. Many of the faculty and citizens of our state are aware of the enormous problems we face as an educational institution.

These problems are not the fault of the union but rather the fault of our elected state leaders who determine our board and of faculty such as these three colleagues.

The faculty voted for a union because they understand that the Faculty Senate, the Graduate Council and our campus leaders have repeatedly failed. Perhaps these failed leaders should give the union a chance.

John Gregory, professor, mathematics

Learn to detect signs of abuse

AWARENESS: Session offers early warning signs for violent behavior.

DANA DUBIRNBY
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A woman is in danger of being raped or sexually assaulted at least once in her lifetime and the threat may be evident in a relationship.

This threat will be the focus of a presentation titled "Recognizing the Signs of Relationship Violence." The presentation will be sponsored by SIUC Women's Services in recognition of Sexual Assault Awareness Month at noon today in Quigley Hall Room 201.

Leena Batra, campus safety representative, and Valerie King, a counseling and administrative assistant, will be speaking on how to handle domestic violence.

They will discuss how to detect signs when a person should get out of a relationship and how to prevent violence from escalating.

Batra said domestic violence is a threat to not only SIUC students but to people throughout the country.

"In general people tend to react with a lot more explicitness in relationships," she said. "There are higher expectations, which causes violence to escalate in a relationship. It is common in the United States."

Statistics from the U.S. Department of Justice state a woman is raped every two minutes in America, and one out of every three women will be sexually assaulted in her lifetime.

Batra also said the presentation will be beneficial for people who know someone in a violent relationship. The discussion will offer information on how to help another person who may be in a dangerous situation.

"I have a lot of people come to me and tell me that they know someone who is being abused in a relationship," she said. "The presentation will also discuss what steps people can take in this situation."

Postal service sees promising future

WASHINGTON POST

Retiring Postmaster General Marvin T. Runyon painted a rosy future for his federal agency Tuesday, predicting that the U.S. Postal Service would survive the onslaughts of e-mail and faxes to become "the shipper of choice to America's homes" by 2020.

"And until there is a way to beam things from Point A to Point B, like they do in 'Star Trek,' the nation will continue to need someone to do the leg-work," Runyon told the National Press Club in a farewell address. "More and more, we will be the one doing the job."

Runyon offered his optimistic view of what has become the government's largest civilian employer three hours after he was sharply criticized by one of his biggest competitors. James P. Kelly, chairman and chief executive of United Parcel Service, accused Runyon of running "an anti-competitive, anti-free enterprise, government bureaucracy that wouldn't last one day in the free and open market of real competition."

Also speaking at the Press Club, Kelly accused the agency of using its first-class mail monopoly to subsidize an international package service that directly competes with UPS and other private shippers. Kelly also blasted the agency's request for a 33-cent stamp — a one-cent increase — as "totally unnecessary" and appealed to Congress to enact legislation to curb the agency's powers.

The UPS chief executive's harsh words reflected the increasingly competitive stance Runyon has brought to the Postal Service in his 5 years as head of what was once an annual money-losing operation. With the agency aiming at a record fourth year of billion-dollar-plus profits, postal officials are attacking UPS and other competitors by name in ads. And they lambasted UPS when it was struck by its drivers last summer.

"We must be doing something right," Runyon joked when he arrived at the Press Club. Once at the lectern, the 73-year-old postal executive who will retire next month rejected Kelly's criticism.

"That's not true," he said of UPS's charges that the agency uses profits from first-class mail to subsidize less-profitable forms of mail.

of Illinois. Let me introduce you to a ticket that will win on November the third."

The Democratic ballot contains three women and four men, of which two are African-American, four are Caucasian, and one is Hispanic. By contrast, the Republican ticket contains five men and two women, all of whom are Caucasian. The ideological differences found on the Democratic ticket are strikingly diverse as well with Poshard maintaining many conservative social positions, Braun and White leaning much to the left, and Kearns and Hynes running as moderates.

About 150 supporters assembled to hear the candidates, sprawling out across the Murphysboro courthouse steps and spilling into the street. Detractors of the ticket also came to the rally, gathering on the courthouse lawn to protest the latest ghost-payrolling allegations involving House Speaker Michael Madigan. State police have stepped in to investigate charges that Madigan used tax dollars to pay former Rep. Glenn Bradford, D-Glen Carbon, for legal work that was never done.

College Republican President Eric Woehrmann, who says his activities Tuesday were not linked to his Registered Student Organization, led the protesters, all of whom were draped in white linen sheets symbolizing the "ghosts" on Madigan's payroll. Placards with the words, "I'm on Madigan's payroll" and "Illinois citizens deserve better," bobbed up and down during the candidates speeches. The protest was interrupted, however, by police, who asked the group members to take off their sheets and refrain from protesting.

Woehrmann said one policeman, who he says could have been a courthouse security guard, ripped the sheet off of him, told him to vacate the premises because it was "private property," and threatened to arrest him. Woehrmann then allegedly began arguing with the man, saying he and his cohorts were within their legal rights to be there and the man could not "do anything" to them. The guard then allegedly told Woehrmann, "try me." This all occurred before a Poshard aide arrived on the scene to "do some major damage control," Woehrmann says. The guard was not available for comment.

"The courthouse has belonged to Democrats for years, and any time anybody challenges them, they get pissed," Woehrmann said. "He said, 'try me,' but they knew they were so wrong. The problem is nobody ever challenges them. But, we did."

Despite the distractions, the candidates seemed to convey a healthy dose of optimism as they launched their collective campaign. Audience reactions were mostly positive, ranging from "the ticket is flawless" to "this is the one; we're going to win."

Many Democrats, including Jeff Grotevant, a second-year law student from Kankakee, are excited about their party's chances in November. Grotevant, who actively supported Poshard during the primary, relishes the thought of campaigning against GOP gubernatorial nominee George Ryan. Grotevant believes the ticket's unprecedented diversity will present a formidable challenge to a relatively homogenous Republican ballot.

"This is an excellent ticket," he said. "I think we can sweep the election."

Math department to restructure Math 108 class

COLORFUL: College Algebra will consist of three subsections, much like Accounting 220.

BRIAN EBERS
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The Mathematics Department is finalizing the details of a restructured Math 108 course to be implemented next semester, and students who plan to take the course are better insured against failure.

College Algebra, or Math 108, will consist of A, B and C subsections. The department's Undergraduate Program Committee made adjustments to the course to meet the numerical demands of freshmen science and engineering students who rely heavily throughout their college careers on the fundamental concepts taught in Math 108.

The course was modeled after the Accounting 220 course. Last year, Accounting 220 was sectioned into 220a, 220b and 220c because the failure rate of the course was near 50 percent.

Andrew Earnest, Mathematics Department chairman, approached the School of Accounting based on its successes.

Earnest said the restructured Math 108 course will allow students an opportunity to progress at their own pace and be less frustrated by material they can not grasp right away.

Departmental statistics show half of students who enroll in the course do not pass. For science and engineering students that means a C or better. The material in the course will not change, only it will be sectioned.

Every five weeks, an examination will be administered by the department and students who pass the exam will progress to the next tier. Students have two semesters to pass the course, and each tier is worth one credit.

"We feel that students who put forth a reasonable effort will pass the course," Earnest said.

Students who can not successfully complete the three tiers are will receive a grade of "PR", or work in progress, after the first semester. They have the option of returning to the course the following semester at the same level they left off.

Students who do not complete the course requirements in two semesters will receive a failing grade.

Mary Wright, director of Undergraduate Programs for the mathematics department, said the course can potentially save money for students who fail to pass the C level.

"Under the old system if they failed they would retake three credits the next semester," Wright said. "This way there are less credit hours they have to pay for if they retake the course."

The mathematics department began shaping ideas for the course in 1996 and approved the course last year.

"The course has positives and negatives," Earnest said. "For example, students might move to the next level to an instructor they understand better than the previous instructor."

Randy Hughes, associate professor of mathematics, has coordinated the break-off points between the three modules of progression. Hughes said students who pass Math 108a should have the same instructor in successive tiers.

"If the students passes the module," Hughes said. "There should be no change in instructors."

"This is a new thing for us to try and it is challenging for us in that respect."

The department will meet the demands of providing additional instructors by reallocating efforts by their regular faculty members.

"We hope that by offering this course the [failure rate] will get smaller," Earnest said. "This material is really fundamental for science and engineering students to understand, and we want them to have a grasp on it before they move on."

The legend of the rare record

JOHN JOHNSON
LOS ANGELES TIMES

Like any good mystery, the legend of the rarest record in the world is a collection of rumor, half-truths and lies. But everyone agrees, it begins in 1961 in Times Square Slim's dingy music shop.

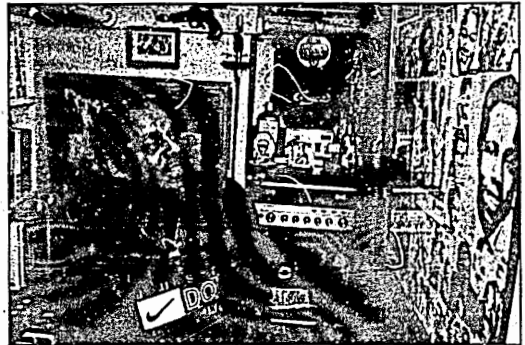

Tall and cadaverous, Irv "Slim" Rose prowled morosely behind the counter of Times Square Records, which was hidden away in a subway tunnel beneath Manhattan's 42nd Street. The light was terrible, the air opaque with railway dust, and when trains rumbled into the station, records fell off the wall.

Everyone called it the Rare Wall because hard to find rhythm and blues and vocal group records covered every square inch. Company names like Fury and Fire were drawn on the labels in a malformed, shimmering script that looked like they had been scribbled in the midst of a psychotic break.

In those days, little was known about these records. When they were issued in the early '50s, they sold almost exclusively to an urban black audience. A hit shipped thousands, not millions, and success was a hundred bucks in your pocket and the chance to make another record.

One Saturday, a group of collectors was hanging around Slim's when a man walked in with a 78-rpm record nobody had ever heard. It was a version of "Stormy Weather" by the Five Sharps, a vocal group on Jubilee Records.

The Ted Koehler-Harold Arlen composition is one of the most recorded songs in pop history. Everyone from Frank Sinatra to Ethel Waters has interpreted it; Lena Horne's 1942 version remains the most famous. But the Five Sharps' rendition was something special. Cruder, rawer, it moved at a dirge-like pace, accompanied by thunderclaps and the sound of falling rain.

numbered squares in the area between Bowyer and Steagall Halls.

The person with ticket number that matches the number of the square the dog defecates in Saturday is the winner of a $100 gift certificate to University Mall.

The groups are sponsoring the fund raiser to provide the SIUC Police Department with money for a canine unit.

"We're going to try to sell as many [tickets] as we can," Bowyer Hall Council President Sarah Manning said. "The more the better."

Of the remaining money after the prize is awarded, 70 percent will go to the SIUC Police Department for the unit.

A canine unit, including officer training, costs between $11,000 to $13,000 to start.

There are additional fees for maintenance.

"We've got crime on campus. We can't get around that," SIUC Police Cpl. Ken Sneed said. "A canine unit won't stop that, but it will provide another resource to fall back on."

Sneed said a canine unit will be trained to do building searches, find lost persons, enhance officer safety, benefit in public relations and find narcotics.

The Undergraduate Student Government voted January in favor of supporting a canine unit for the SIUC Police Department. No state universities in Illinois have canine units.

"I am in awe of the amount of support from Sara, Kristie Ayres, USG, RHA and East Campus. It's what keeps me motivated," Sneed said.

The SIUC Police Department sent letter to foundations and corporations for assistance in the project, but Sneed said response to the letters takes a long time, which is where fund raising is beneficial.

So far, the department does not have any money for the project.

The remaining 30 percent of the money collected from the fund raiser will go to Bowyer Hall to purchase vacuum cleaners.

Tickets are on sale in Lentz Hall from 4:30 to 7 p.m. for $2 through Friday. The event will take place 2 p.m. Saturday in the area between Bowyer and Steagall halls. Attendance is not necessary to win.

Sneed will be at the event to answer any questions about the project. He will also be holding a ticket.

Bureau of Labor Statistics: No rise in consumer prices seen

WASHINGTON POST

For the second time in three months, consumer prices didn't rise at all in March, with food prices stable and falling energy, apparel and tobacco costs offsetting increases in other prices, the Bureau of Labor Statistics reported Tuesday.

The consumer price index was flat in January and up only 0.1 percent in February. The CPI was up at an annual rate of only 0.2 percent in the first quarter.

"Inflation remains utterly absent," said Bruce Steinberg, chief economist at Merrill Lynch & Co. in New York, who predicted that consumer prices will "rise less than 1.5 percent in 1998. . . . Inflation has never been so low so far into an (economic) expansion."

In a separate report, the Census Bureau said retail sales declined 0.1

percent last month to $218.4 billion, after two strong months of growth. The Bureau also revised February's results upward to a 0.7 percent gain from the 0.5 percent rise reported earlier.

Sales fell at auto dealers by 0.7 percent and purchases at both building materials and furniture stores also fell 0.6 percent.

Analysts weren't sure whether the small drop in sales was a sign that consumer demand may be growing less rapidly than at the beginning of the year — which could signal a slowing in U.S. economic growth — whether it was a one-month blip. Some analysts said the very late date for Easter, which was last Sunday, may have caused consumers to delay some of their spring spending until this month.

"We will need to average the March and April data to get a more accurate view," said Dana Saporta of Stone & McCarthy, a New York financial markets research firm. "To the extent the later Easter lowered March sales, they may get a boost this month."

However, even with the March decline, consumer spending in the first three months of the year likely rose at a 5 percent annual rate or more after adjustment for inflation, the analysts said.

USG Elections

 Issues	Sean Henry Saluki Party	Kristie Ayres Progress Party	Rob Taylor Shakedown Party
Shared Governance	Thinks current USG is overrun with "cliques." It is very important to have close open relationship with USG, GPSC and administration.	The concept of shared governance is critical to student input on academic and administration issues. Understanding of the system in which they operate and their credibility and persuasive ability with University administrators is integral to positive change.	Wants to work to ensure that administration incorporates all student input on an issue before making a decision. Student body-generated concerns are a priority over USG senate-generated concerns.
Faculty Union	Opposes strike by faculty union. Thinks students have been overruled by administration and union in negotiating process.	Recognizes the rights of the Faculty Association and the importance of quality faculty. Encourages faculty and administration to seek the best interest of students in mind and keep binding arbitration rather than a strike which they believe would have negative impact on students.	Supports faculty union and encourages administration to meet the union's contract demands.
Housing	Thinks USG can have "positive effect" on residence life. Has worked to upgrade cable, install ATM machines and laundry machines in University Park.	More needs to be done to improve affordability and quality of student housing on campus and off. Proposed standardized lease, hold landlord/tenant forum and compiled a USG housing complaint/resolution catalogue.	Will use experience as a Resident Advisor to further improve quality of life for students on and off campus.
Select 2000	Though vocally supported Select 2000 in Sept. 97, says he has changed his mind and thinks it should be repealed.	It is something the students should rise up against, but should be fought in the courts.	Opposes Select 2000 measures, but believes greek system should follow pre-Select 2000 regulations. Greeks should not act irresponsibly where alcohol is concerned.
Technology	Computer technology is also substandard when compared to other state universities. Must be high priority for USG.	Worked with university this year to improve technology on campus. Believe student government should play an instrumental role in the development of an information technology strategic plan.	Technology on campus needs improvement. University should continue on path started this year by Computing Advisory Committee.
RSOs and Funding	Thinks current RSO funding is a failure. The process needs to be revamped. "Cliques" must be eliminated from the funding process to ensure a fair outcome.	Stability needs to be built into RSO funding process to eliminate large variations from year to year. The funding process timetable needs to be moved up earlier in the spring to allow for a more timely and thoughtful analysis of funding requests.	RSO funding process should be reformed so that RSOs have better representation on the senate. Priority One RSOs such as Black Affairs Council and Student Programming Council should have seats on the senate.
Student Apathy	Doesn't think USG has made themselves known to students effectively. Wants to utilize Student Center display case, newsletters and advertising.	Want to increase student involvement through direct interaction with RSOs and town hall type meetings in residence halls.	Will raise student awareness and encourage student participation in USG meetings and administrative actions. Already have displayed ability to motivate large numbers of students. Will use "electronic democracy" to generate student input on issues.
Diversity	Wants to set up Campus Diversity and a Minority Student Advocate Commission in addition to the existing six USG executive committees. USG should sponsor social activities to promote student togetherness and improve relations with SIUC's diverse student body.	Is a huge problem on campus, should be more interaction between USG, SPC and minority groups, such as BAC, to host events.	USG senate should be restructured to eliminate college seats, which do not encourage diversity within the senate. Several at-large seats should be created. International students also need more representation on USG.
City	Wants to work with city leaders to get things accomplished.	Believe in active involvement of USG in city issues. Effect city issues through support of student voter registration and turnout in city elections.	USG should continue its positive relations with the city established with this year's executive staff. USG should encourage the University to become more involved with city events.
Alcohol	Favors 18-year-old bar entry age.	Believe the students are adults and should be treated as such. Will stand and fight for student rights in campus social policy decision-making process.	The University should be more lax in its approach toward alcohol at events. Administration financially is concerned with the unrealistic goal of risk elimination rather than the practical goal of risk management.

Gus Bode

Gus says: I hope there isn't a poultry turnout at tomorrow's USG elections.

Since the beginning of the USG campaign, though, Taylor and Kelly have vowed not to file grievances against their opponents.

The Progress and Saluki parties, however, have filed grievances on an almost daily basis ranging from complaints of candidates handing out flyers without prior consent of the Election Commission to improperly handing out flyers in the Student Center to using the USG newsletter as a forum for one party.

In addition to the Shakedown-unfriendly flyers, a student dressed in a chicken suit clucked across the Student Center and Faner Hall breezeway claiming to support the Progress Party. However, Progress leader Kristie Ayres said she did not know the mystery man in the chicken suit.

Taylor and Kelly said they are concerned with the number of students who will vote, and they want to see a record number of students determine this year's election. Last year, less than 1,500 of SIUC's 18,000 eligible on-campus students voted. The Action Party ticket of Dave Vingren and Megan Moore won with 553 votes.

To combat this, the Shakedown leaders are pushing the act of voting more than their own party. Though they have set up information booths for their party during the past two days, they tell students the number of voters is more important to them than who wins the election. This mirrors a similar message Kelly used last year

IRS' paid informants may be unethical tactic against taxpayers

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — Americans voluntarily hand over most of the $1.3 trillion owed to the Internal Revenue Service each year, but a tiny fraction of tax collections depends on an obscure and increasingly controversial IRS program of using paid informants.

Motivated by a combination of greed and revenge, informants are typically business associates, employees, acquaintances, neighbors or former spouses of tax cheats. Many experts say the program is one of the most unseemly parts of the U.S. tax system.

However, IRS officials say they exercise great care in handling the informants, weeding spurious allegations, and that the rewards play an important role in the nation's tax enforcement system.

The IRS pays the informants up to 15 percent of the taxes it recovers from their tips — up to a maximum of $2 million — though the vast majority of informants end up empty handed.

After a series of recent congressional disclosures about widespread taxpayer abuses, watchdog groups are growing concerned about the ethics of the agency's informant reward program.

"We should refocus our efforts on good citizenry, not bribing people to answer questions," said John Berthoud, president of the nonpartisan National Taxpayers Union, who called on the IRS to end the program in an interview with the Los Angeles Times.

The program, authorized by Congress, has been sharply criticized by individuals who say they were victimized by bogus allegations, and even by informants, who say the IRS has stiffed them on their rewards.

The Senate Finance Committee, which has been broadly investigating IRS abuses over the past year, is expected to unveil new evidence later this month that taxpayers have been devastated by aggressive IRS investigations based on phony information from snitches.

Tax attorneys' and accountants generally decry the informant reward system, asserting that the government is on thin ice in offering money to taxpayers to turn each other in. They argue that a cornerstone of the U.S. tax system is the protection of taxpayer privacy, and that the IRS is wrong to encourage people to breach confidential business or family relationships. In one case, a St. Louis tax accountant informed on his own client.

deeper than ever.
 "This is one of the closest things we had to collective bargaining."
 Melone said the agreement was unanimous and every constituent agreed to the proposal.

"We had an agreement, but it wasn't lived up to," he said.

John Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, said that in general employees were happy about a faculty salary increase, but it took a few years for people to witness the bad end of the agreement.

"There would have been far fewer faculty if the plan was implemented," Jackson said. "It was clearly a cannibalization of positions."

Melone said the plan would have avoided problems instead of creating them.

"A lot of problems could be solved if people could stick to their guns," he said. "If they had stuck to that we may not have been in the situation we are in today."

Springtime weather

Southern Illinois residents enjoyed a beautiful Tuesday afternoon at Crab Orchard Lake. Tuesday's high was 75 degrees, but thunderstorms are forecast for Wednesday and Thursday with the highs in the mid 70s.

Train shipment of napalm generates political firestorm

LOS ANGELES TIMES

A decade ago, it was a barge loaded with garbage that generated an international stink, floating homeless down the East Coast because no one would take its contents.

Now it is a rail car filled with napalm, bound for the Chicago area, from Southern California this week amid a runaway debate about how best to dispose of the deadly chemical remnants of the Vietnam War.

The train left Fallbrook in northern San Diego County Saturday carrying two 6,000-gallon drums of napalm in one of its cars. It rumbled through Texas Tuesday, headed for an Indiana treatment plant as the first step in a two-year plan to dispose of 3 million gallons of the jellied gasoline and turn it into industrial fuel.

But there is a hitch: The treatment plant no longer wants the stuff, and an array of powerful people in the Midwest wants the train to turn around.

The political maelstrom that the disposal has generated in Chicago in recent weeks "has made it impossible to continue with this napalm recycling project." Pollution Control Industries President Robert L. Campbell said Tuesday. The "tug of war" over the issue has given the company no choice but to pull out of the $1.7 million contract, he said.

Navy officials, hoping to finally overcome numerous false starts in their 16-year-old effort to get rid of the napalm, were blindsided by the company's withdrawal. And while officials scrambled to find a solution Tuesday, no one seemed certain what would happen to the train bound for nowhere.

"We really don't know what's going to happen at this point. We're reviewing all our options," said Lee Saunders, spokesman for the Navy's environmental division in San Diego.

knows what he wants to happen.

"I'm hopeful the train will simply turn around and go back to (the Naval Weapons Station) at Fallbrook and return the napalm there. Then we can roll up our sleeves and work with the Navy to address an urgent need to get rid of it in a safe and sensible way," he said.

Since 1973, the Navy facility in Fallbrook has housed the military's entire arsenal of napalm in 33,000 unfused bombs. But Southern California politicians have been pushing with increasing stridence for its disposal, noting that some of the bombs were leaking toxins.

As part of the plan approved by the Navy at a total cost of $25 million, hundreds of shipments of the napalm were to be sent by train over the next two years to the PCI plant in East Chicago, Ind., outside Chicago. There it was to be treated and turned into fuel for cement kilns.

D.C. to investigate how killer was freed

WASHINGTON POST

WASHINGTON — After a murderer on parole in Washington stabbed his daughter to death, it wasn't money Gertrude and Gerfried Pruckmayr wanted: They sued instead for answers, demanding that the government tell them how a killer could be freed to kill again.

District of Columbia attorneys promised the Pruckmayrs Tuesday that the city's new inspector general will investigate the 1993 parole of Leo Gonzalez Wright and the apparent government lapses that preceded the murder of Bettina Pruckmayr on Dec. 16, 1995.

Inspector General E. Barrett Prettyman Jr. will report his findings no later than January 1999, describing how Wright was freed and allowed to remain free despite parole violations. The report will document the errors, if any, of individual government workers.

"It will be fair and complete," Prettyman pledged. "We're going to attempt to improve the system."

For the Pruckmayrs, who drove from Media, Pa., to sign the eight-page agreement, the announcement marks a bitter-sweet turning in their lawsuit and their lives. Dropping their complaint, they are investing in the hope that a shocking death might be better explained and never repeated.

"I feel this is some progress. We don't want people to just shrug it off and say, 'Oops,'" said Gerfried Pruckmayr, 65, a chemist. "We have some pieces of the puzzle, but we don't know how they fit together."

Clinton headlines discussion on race

LOS ANGELES TIMES

HOUSTON — President Clinton tried Tuesday to invigorate his national race initiative by headlining a televised discussion of race and athletics, but critics said the event epitomized one of the fundamental problems afflicting the yearlong effort.

The discussion panel initially assembled by cable network ESPN to discuss the impact of racial stereotyping and discrimination on professional sports consisted of six blacks and four whites, including Clinton.

It was expanded at the last minute to include a Latino, St. John's University basketball player Felipe Lopez, but the damage was done. Latino advocacy groups continued to complain that the panel — and Clinton's race initiative in general — focuses too much on black-white conflicts and not enough on the complicated multiracial issues that reflect America today.

"Race is a hard issue," acknowledged Judith Winston, executive director of the president's advisory commission on race, before the 90-minute televised discussion began Tuesday evening. "We knew that starting out. There's always something."

Other participants in the 90-minute session were former Cleveland Browns running back Jim Brown, New York Jets wide receiver Keyshawn Johnson, Olympic gold medalist Jackie Joyner-Kersey, Minnesota Vikings Coach Dennis Green, Georgetown University basketball Coach John Thompson, and ESPN analyst and baseball Hall of Famer Joe Morgan, all of whom are black.

The panel's four white participants were Clinton, San Diego Padres Owner John Moores, and San Francisco 49ers President Carmen Policy and University of Georgia Athletic Director Vince Dooley.

Sunday, after a Latino advocacy group wrote to Clinton objecting to the composition of the panel, ESPN announced that it was adding Lopez, a Dominican. The network said it had tried unsuccessfully to include more Latinos and noted that the audience would reflect their views.

when running for student trustee. At that time Kelly said he was encouraging people to vote for one of his opponents rather than not vote.

Taylor's campaign message is a simple one.

"Vote for me or against me," he said. "Every vote is a vote for student empowerment."

Saluki's Sean Henry said as the final hours before election day approach, his level of excitement and enthusiasm has more than doubled.

Henry spent Monday and Tuesday rallying support from Registered Student Organizations, fraternities and sororities and groups of students eating meals in residence hall cafeterias. The grassroots-style campaigning has left the Saluki Party with many supporters, Henry said.

"I feel a lot more confident in our party after this afternoon," he said.

"We're getting a lot of support from many different, diverse organizations. In fact, I'm surprised at the amount of support we have now."

Prescription drugs may kill thousands yearly

WASHINGTON POST

Properly prescribed medications may kill more than 100,000 people a year, taking more lives than diabetes or pneumonia, according to a new analysis that suggests prescription medications cause more harm than previously believed.

The new study, which will appear Wednesday in the Journal of the American Medical Association, estimates that 76,000 to 137,000 people died in 1994 from such treatments. That would make so-called adverse drug reactions between the sixth and fourth leading cause of death in the United States.

Moreover, of the 33 million hospitalized patients in 1994, some 2.2 million had a nonfatal reaction serious enough to require medical attention, the researchers say.

Although some experts questioned the study methods, the new estimates put the problem in the most dramatic light yet, suggesting that despite saving perhaps millions of lives, medications bring on more misery than previously acknowledged.

The study "puts into clear perspective that adverse drug reactions are a major form of death and injury that can be prevented," said Dr. Sidney Wolfe, director of the Public Citizen Health Research Group and author of the book "Worst Pills, Best Pills." He said the injuries and deaths detailed in the study are nearly twice as high as estimates recently done by his consumer group.

The findings should not encourage people to abandon vital medications, said the study's leader, Dr. Bruce Pomeranz of the University of Toronto, who added he was surprised by the death toll. "What's needed is more awareness of the potential problems with taking some drugs. Before you take a medication, you should know about its risk-benefit ratio," he said.

The Pharmaceutical Research and Manufacturers of America, a drug industry group, cautioned patients not to panic. "Prescription medicines are safe and effective when used properly," Alan Holmer, the group's president, said in a statement.

The analysis did not specify which drugs were most risky or which diseases patients had when the adverse reactions occurred. But other studies have found that the drug types causing the most serious medical problems in hospitalized patients are painkillers: from narcotics that halt breathing to aspirin pills that induce stomach bleeding; antibiotics and anti-viral drugs, which can cause severe diarrhea; and cardiovascular and anticoagulant drugs, which can cause a range of problems, including internal bleeding.

SIUC honors top athletes

Wright, Berksoy receive Athlete of the Year Awards

TRAVIS AKIN
 DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Senior diver Alex Wright had enough reasons to believe he had won one of the two Athlete of the Year Awards at the 1998 Saluki Letter Winners Banquet Sunday night.

With only one award left, SIUC Athletic Director Jim Hart was reading the list of senior athletes leaving the athletic program. When he got to the names of the swimmers and the divers, he mentioned the crowd would hear from Wright again.

It was no surprise when his name was called as the male recipient of the award.

"It was best thing that could have happened to me," Wright said. "When Jim Hart slipped up and said we would be talking to Alex later, I leaned over and asked coach (Dave Ardrey) what that meant. He said he thought that meant that I was getting the award."

The award is based primarily on the athletic accomplishments of individual athletes, sportsmanship and strong motivational skills.

Wright qualified for the NCAA championships and finished 19th on the 10-meter platform, 29th on the 1-meter and 32nd on the 3-meter. He also was named the Missouri Valley Conference Men's Diver of the Year.

The female recipient of the award was senior tennis player Sanem Berksoy. She has 119 wins, which is tied for the all-time win record at SIUC. Berksoy should break the record this weekend in a match at the University of Evansville.

In addition to being the female Athlete of the Year, Berksoy was one of the Daily Egyptian Outstanding Senior Athletes of the Year, one of the Saluki Booster Club Scholar-Athletes of the Year and the Virginia Gordon Scholar-Athlete recipient.

Berksoy, a native of Turkey, said she owes much of her success to her teammates, who have helped her during her four years at SIUC.

"Tennis is an individual sport, and other than at this college, I have never played tennis as a team," Berksoy said. "I have learned the importance of sharing emotions with the team and winning as a team. I have relationships with my teammates and my coach that have helped take the pressure off me and help me concentrate on my sport."

Berksoy has a 3.97 grade point average in mechanical engineering. She said the secret to her success is keeping everything separate.

"I just try to keep focused," Berksoy said. "I try to keep sports and academics separate. When I am on the court, I think about tennis. When I am in the classroom, I think about academics."

Other winners included senior basketball player Branda Anderson and men's tennis player Brian Etzkin, who both won the Outstanding Leader-Athletes award for their accomplishments on and off the field.

Senior track star Lorraine Parkinson won the Strength and Conditioning Award. Senior swimmer Jeff Clark was the male recipient for Saluki Booster Club Scholar-Athlete award.

Basketball stand-out Shane Hawkins was the male recipient of the Daily Egyptian Senior Athlete of the Year award.

The Egyptian's sports staff considers many factors in choosing its Outstanding Senior Athletes of the Year. The award is given to the athletes who stand out in both athletics and academics, show an unselfish attitude and lead their teams with character and sportsmanship.

"This decision was anything but easy," said Sports Editor Ryan Keith. "Sanem and Shane are excellent examples of what hard work and discipline can help student-athletes accomplish. They were great leaders who always showed dignity in victory and defeat."

High jumper vaults into top spot; thanks coach for support

NO. 1: SIUC track and field coach claims Loren King has talent to become All-American.

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC track and field freshman high jumper/hurdler Loren King is hoping to follow in the footsteps of his mentor and role model — assistant coach and former Olympian Cameron Wright.

Under the tutelage of the 1996 U.S. Olympic high jumper, King proves to have boundless potential.

"Loren King can accomplish anything he sets his mind to," Wright said. "I think Loren King has the talent to become an All-American and even an Olympian. I can see him jumping 7'2" this year. I don't want to put any limit on his future."

King, a zoology major, won the Missouri Valley Conference Indoor Championship in the high jump with a jump of 6 feet 9 inches (Feb. 27-28 in Normal) but expects to increase that jump in the outdoor championships (May 13-16 in Cedar Falls, Iowa).

"There'll be some better guys that redshirted last season (indoor), but I feel I'll still be on top," King said.

King was forced to step up as the Salukis No. 1 high jumper after top jumper senior Neophytos Kalogerou suffered a torn Achilles tendon in the first meet of the indoor season (Dec. 6 in Normal).

However, King's competitive drive has pushed him to a greater level of expectation.

"Nobody likes to lose — I'd rather get second place with a PR (personal record) with a big jump than just get first place with something I've done a million times," King said.

King relishes that he is receiving the best coaching offered in the MVC in a former Olympic high jumper at his side.

"That helps me about 100 percent more than a lot of kids in our conference because they don't have any coaches like that at all," King said. "I look up to him — he's jumped some big heights. He knows the techniques very well."

Along with King's high jumping ability, he also has progressed into one of the Salukis' top hurdlers during the past few meets.

Men's head coach Bill Cornell was surprised when he noticed King's hurdling ability.

"He's got unlimited talent," Cornell said. "I'd like to see him in a national meet in both the high jump and the hurdles. We signed him as a high jumper, but his best event could become the 400-meter intermediate hurdles."

King first realized he could become a hurdler when sophomore teammate Charlie Stelk saw his NICE FORM: Loren King, a freshman in zoology from Glen Ellyn, soars over the high jump bar during practice at McAndrew Stadium Tuesday.

King's progress toward reaching All-American status would put him among some Saluki greats, including his coach and role model.

"We've had so many All-Americans here, it would be great to be in that group," King said. "To put your plaque on the wall would be real nice and that just sets you out for bigger goals later on."

Wright said he was surprised by King's energetic and friendly approach toward track and field.

"Loren is friends with everybody," Wright said. "It always bewilders me when I see him at a meet. It seems like he knows everyone at the track meet. When I competed I usually only knew the people on my team. Loren has friends from everywhere."

King said being friendly is just part of his personality, and he does not change it at a meet.

"When I get there I just relax," King said. "You're tentative if you don't know the people around you, so I'm just sitting there getting pumped up and talking to people."

Wright foresees King having a great career at SIUC and eventually reaching the All-American and Olympian status he did.

"This kid is going to be very special," Wright said. "SIU will be proud to say they have him, and we're looking forward to three more years with him."

SIUC BASEBALL

Diamond Dawgs travel to Kentucky to battle Racers

The Saluki baseball team will try to end a three-game skid in a mid-week battle with Murray State University 3 p.m. today.

The Salukis lost the last three games of the four-game series against the University of Evansville last weekend at Abe Martin Field. The Salukis have now lost nine of their last 10 games and have a record of 13-24 overall and 7-11 in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Murray State has a record of 14-25, but the Racers have won five straight games.

The game Wednesday is the first of three consecutive games against Ohio Valley Conference teams. The Salukis play at Austin Peay University Saturday and play the Governors at home Sunday.

Baseball coach Dan Callahan said the Salukis cannot play with the kind of lackluster performance they had last weekend.

"The way we played Saturday and Sunday, I don't know if we can say any team will be a mediocre opponent," Callahan said. "We've got to play better than we played this weekend or we couldn't beat the college for the visually impaired."

"I hate to say this but we are not very good right now. We have dreamt up more ways to lose than any team I have been associated with."

SIUC SOFTBALL

Salukis play Aces for final home game of the year

The SIUC softball team plays host for its final home games of the season this afternoon at IAW Fields.

The Salukis (23-10-1, 5-3) face the University of Evansville (24-14, 5-3) at 3 p.m. SIUC, which lost only four home games last year, has already dropped six on the season.

Both teams enter the contest losers of three of their last four games and in a four-way tie for third place in the Missouri Valley Conference. The Salukis are looking to end a three-game losing skid.

SIUC is coming off one its worst performances of the season. The Salukis were throttled by Southwest Missouri State University 13-6 in the second game of a doubleheader Sunday.

SIUC's pitching staff hopes to rebound from the setback. Sophomore pitchers Carisa Winters, Tracy Remspecher and freshman Erin Stremsterer all had disappointing efforts against the Bears. Despite this, the Salukis still own the lowest ERA (1.20) in the conference.

The Aces should provide a good test. They lead the Valley in hits (275), runs scored (186) and runs batted in (154).

Curts K. Busch/Daily Egyptian

YOU'RE OUT! Saluki catcher Brook Hattermann, a junior from Groveland; holds up the ball for the umpire to see after tagging out a baserunner at third base at the end of a rundown. The Salukis won the first game of the doubleheader against Wichita State Saturday afternoon at IAW Field 2-1 but fell in the second 4-3. The Salukis play their last home games of the regular season this afternoon at IAW Fields against the Evansville Purple Aces.

Injuries continue to plague SIUC gridmen

DEPLETED: Only 40 players healthy during spring drills; coach forecasts slow recovery.

1998 Football Outlook

RYAN KEITH
DE SPORTS EDITOR

SIUC football coach Jan Quarless is beginning to hate the word depth.

Since his January 1997 arrival at SIUC, Quarless has had to build a program with a team depleted by transfers and injuries. With spring drills set to wrap up Saturday, Quarless and his staff are just as unsure about this season as they were a year ago.

Injuries to several key players have dropped the Salukis' numbers in camp to around 40 players, as much as 30 less than in past years. The losses have been especially painful at quarterback, where returning senior starter Kent Skornia has missed almost the entire camp with a broken bone in his left foot.

"In 22 years of coaching, I've never witnessed this," Quarless said. "Like I said 14 months ago, I knew this lack of numbers wasn't just going to go away in a year."

"There is not going to be much difference, and there won't be in this program in '97, '98 and '99. I think the truth of the matter is we have been the only quarterback in camp, and Quarless did not look forward to having that situation. But the veteran coach sees it as a blessing in disguise in building Lovelace's confidence.

"I think Kent Skornia is the type of guy that will come in July or late June when that cast comes off and work his fanny off to get ready for camp," Quarless said. "Consequently, I think we've prepared Brock Lovelace for hopefully a position he will hold someday. I don't think he was hurt one bit, and I think it added tremendously to his growth."

In the meantime, Quarless will rely on his 20 recruits and several walk-ons to increase numbers when camp begins in August.

"I think we're going to have to do the same thing we did last year — keep our fingers crossed and hope the injuries will heal," Quarless said. "You'll add your recruiting class and then get some quality walk-ons, and that's something we're striving to do. Hopefully, we'll add numbers that way until we can get this thing stretched out to 85 or 90 numbers. But it's going to take some time."

"Are we ahead of last year? Sure we are because we've been together an entire year. But we're going to have to hit on all cylinders and continue to improve."
