Nixon emphasizes desegregation plans

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — President Nixon emphasized Friday his firm intention to bring about sweeping desegregation in the South this fall but declared he would not be punitive towards the region.

"This is one country, one people, and we're going to act but not in a punitive way," the chief executive told a news conference after meeting several hours with federally sponsored desegregation advisory councils from seven southern states.

Nixon said he received "magnificent cooperation" from the bipartisan, biracial councils of prominent Southerners.

He said the administration intends to exercise strong leadership on desegregation "because we believe in order and justice and believe in enforcing the law."

The President broke no new policy ground in his desegregation comments. But they assumed extra significance by being delivered to an audience in the heart of the Deep South.

Nixon stressed several times that he's only following the mandate of the Supreme Court and intends to move in cooperation with Southern leaders and not treat the region as a "second class citizen."

The President appealed to the news media to stress what he believes will be the many peaceful examples of desegregation in the South this fall rather than isolated instances of violence and disruption.

Uphill fight seen for popular vote elections

WASHINGTON (AP)—The chief Senate sponsor of a constitutional amendment to provide for the election of the president by direct, popular vote said Friday it faces a long, tough, uphill fight in the Senate.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., reporting the measure to the Senate from its Judiciary Committee, said he expects some opponents "to use every parliamentary rule in the books" to block action.

He filed majority and minority reports from the committee, approved the proposed amendment by an 11-6 vote on April 23 and has spent the intervening weeks in drafting conflicting recommendations to the Senate.

Bayh called the present Electoral College system of choosing the President outmoded and dangerous and said its replacement by direct election would "substitute popular choice for political chance."

No time has been set for bringing the proposed amendment up for action in the Senate, but Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., recently said another amendment to guarantee equal rights for women will be taken up first.

War Vietnamized further; 15,000 troops to go home

SAIGON (AP) — In a move to Vietnamize the war in provinces around Saigon, about 15,000 U.S. troops will be sent home, and remaining combat units will play support roles to South Vietnamese forces taking over the American fighting role, official sources said Friday.

The informants said at least two full brigades and the equivalent of a third, totaling the manpower of an American combat division will be withdrawn from the 3rd Military Region, which embraces the 11 provinces surrounding the capital.

The remaining American units in that region already are concentrating on destroying enemy stockpiles in the interior areas and on supporting South Vietnamese troops who have taken over the American job of disrupting infiltration and supply lines of the enemy along the Cambodian border.

The specific units to be withdrawn cannot be named for security reasons until the move is announced by the U.S. Command.

Israelis hit targets in Jordan; accused of violating cease-fire

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli air force jets hit Jordanian army positions and guerrilla targets Friday in an action that Jordan charged was the second violation of the cease-fire by Israel within 24 hours.

The Israeli military command gave no details beyond saying the planes hit Jordanian army strongholds which have been assisting Palestinian guerrillas in their attacks against Israeli border settlements.

The Jordanian army "assists terrorists and makes it possible for them to act against Israeli civilians," the spokesman said.

The Jordanian government called the Israeli attacks a "flagrant violation" of the cease-fire agreement. A government statement issued in Amman said it had instructed its U.N. delegate to complain to Gunnar V. Jarring, the peace mediator. A spokesman said two Israeli fighters attacked civilian cars in the northern Jordan Valley with rockets and machine guns.

The Middle East peace plan, initiated by the United States and accepted by Israel, Egypt and Jordan, includes a shooting cease-fire for at least 90 days. The cease-fire went into effect last Friday midnight.

In consenting, the Jordanian government said it could not be held responsible for attacks by guerrillas, who have vowed to intensify their assaults and sabotage operations against the Israelis in order to wreck any Middle East peace settlement.

The Israelis have announced they feel obliged to protect themselves by retaliating against the guerrillas despite the cease-fire.

This was the first time Israel has hit at the regular forces of either Egypt or Jordan since the cease-fire.

The air raid was centered on army positions opposite Israel's Beisan Valley, south of the Sea of Galilee. Two Jewish settlements there came under Arab mortar attack Thursday night.

Ogilvie calls for Cairo investigation

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie told a group of white Cairo residents Friday he would consult with the Justice Department on their request for a grand jury investigation in the racially troubled city.

"They asked for a grand jury investigation of all their complaints and I told them I would discuss the matter with the Justice Department," Ogilvie told newsmen after the meeting.

Vienna SALT talks end; both sides talk of progress

VIENNA (AP)—With smiles, handshakes and the promise to meet again in Helsinki on Nov. 2 to continue Strategic Arms Limitation Talks, the delegations of the United States and the Soviet Union ended their second SALT round here Friday.

U.S. Chief Delegate Gerard Smith said at the closing ceremony in the marble hall of the Belvedere Palace that "important progress" had been made during the talks and the Soviet Union's Vladimir Semenov described them as "substantial and useful." But nothing of the actual substance of the talks was revealed.

Conference sources repeatedly have said the American presented an "outline" to the Russians and in return were asked questions.

This "outline" was never disclosed, and Friday's communique gave no indication on it.

The communique said: "A wide range of questions dealing with the problem of limiting strategic offensive and defensive armaments was thoroughly considered. The exchange was useful for both sides and made it possible to increase the degree of mutual understanding on a number of aspects of matters discussed."

A report from Washington said the Americans presented a proposal to the Russians in which the two superpowers were to freeze the strategic weapons at the amount they now have, or at a lower level.

The proposal, it was said, included an over-all numerical ceiling on each of the two nations' intercontinental ballistic missiles, submarine fired missiles and long-range bombers and also grants each side some flexibility to decide how to mix this weaponry within the set limit.

Secrecy in the talks was a joint policy of the two delegations and was justified as promoting chances for success.

After a five week preliminary round in Helsinki, where the two countries simply agreed that they wanted to talk about strategic disarmament and settle down to business in Vienna, it was expected by observers that an agreement of some sort might now be reached in Helsinki.

Refuses to pay bill

SIU student to sue C'dale

By James Hoff
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Jack Altman, a junior majoring in philosophy, said Friday he will sue the city of Carbondale for violating an agreement with him involving the payment of water bills.

Carlton Sisk, acting city manager, said if Altman does sue, the city would take a stricter stand toward students who do not pay their water bills.

Altman said he had an agreement with the city of Carbondale over the piping of water to the house he rents at 202 S. Poplar St.

The city, he said, violated this agreement when it shut off the water.

Sisk said that the agreement did not cover current water bills which Altman has not paid. Altman owes the city $82.

Altman rented the house when it was owned by an elderly woman. He acted as her unofficial business agent. When he became hospitalized, she had a stroke and was committed to a nursing home. Her house was sold to the Walker Funeral Home.

When Altman got out of the hospital, he rented the same house and received the bills the woman had accumulated. One of these was the water bill.

Altman said he made good all of the bills, including the water bill, which he said was paid through a deal made among him, former City Attorney George Floorlage, current city manager, Mel Rieff, Mayor David Keene and Sisk.

The books would be balanced and water would continue to be piped to the house he rented, Altman said. However, despite the deal, Altman said his water was recently turned off and that the city refuses to honor the agreement with him.

Sisk said that if Altman wants to sue, he can do so, because the city has not violated any gentleman's agreement.

Sisk said the woman's bills accumulated because Altman as her business agent allowed them to. Because he was responsible for her finances, he would have to pay her bills, Sisk said.

In a meeting with Altman, Sisk said, the city compromised with Altman. Water was continued to Altman's house.

Sisk said Altman allowed the water bills to build up again and in the last six months, the bills ran up to $82.

Sisk said if Altman sued, his actions would cause the city to become more strict with students who do not pay their bills.

Sisk said the only thing the city of Carbondale is guilty of is having a soft heart and letting Altman get away with as much as he has.

Altman said his letter to the city challenges its violation of the agreement with him and will lead to court.

Presley asks that taxpayers select Simonds' replacement

Wayman Presley, the head of U.S. Citizens, Inc., said Friday he hopes Gov. Richard B. Ogilvie will let the taxpayers of the area pick the successor to Eugene T. Simonds on the SIU Board of Trustees.

Simonds mailed in his letter of resignation to the Governor two weeks ago.

"The taxpayers should have a man on the Board," Presley said. "They should be allowed to select Simonds' successor."

Presley suggested that the common man should have a representative on the Board because he pays the taxes that support SIU. He recommended that taxpayers in the area should select a body of men to look for a man who knows how a good university should be run and submit his name to Ogilvie.

Presley added that Ogilvie should appoint the man the taxpayers recommend.

The Governor has not acted on Simonds' resignation yet. However, a spokesman said that the governor should act on the resignation Monday.

The spokesman said Ogilvie hasn't acted yet because he doesn't know why Simonds wants to resign and is consulting various people about the matter.

Judge refuses to halt nerve gas burial

WASHINGTON (AP)—A federal judge refused Friday to halt the Army's plan to dump 2,675 tons of deadly nerve gas into the Atlantic Ocean, but a violent storm at sea may delay it.

The National Hurricane Center at Miami said a dangerous tropical storm with winds of 60 miles an hour was approaching the Bahamas and Florida and could develop into a hurricane "with great suddenness."

The Navy said it will not attempt to move the nerve gas out to the proposed dumping site 282 miles off Cape Kennedy, Fla., as long as there is a threat of bad weather.

In U.S. District Court, Judge June L. Green declined to issue a restraining order against the disposal operation. But she said she had serious misgivings about the site selected and coupled her ruling with an "urgent request" that the Pentagon find some other spot for the sea burial.

Counsel for Gov. Claude Kirk of Florida and a New York conservationist group who are trying to block the Army move planned an immediate appeal to the U.S. Circuit Court in Washington. Kirk joined forces with the Environmental Defense Fund in the court fight.

Judge Green, in telling of her misgivings, noted testimony at a day-long court hearing Thursday that this would be the first time the Army had sunk lethal chemicals in waters of such great depth. The spot selected is 16,000 feet deep.

Judge Green said the pressure at such depths posed the danger of a sudden and simultaneous crushing of all the concrete containers, releasing all the gas at once.

Two years ago, she noted, the Army disposed of some gas in 7,000 feet of water off New Jersey and subsequent checks by Navy scientists showed no detectable harm to marine life there.

The Army has expressed nervousness about any further delay, saying there has been some evidence of leakage in the concrete and steel coffins containing the nerve gas rockets now being loaded aboard an old Liberty ship at Sunny Point, N.C.

Borman in Poland for talks

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—Spaceman Frank Borman, special representative of President Nixon, held a half-hour meeting at the Polish foreign ministry Friday with Franciszek Stachowiak, deputy director of the Asian department, to discuss problems of American prisoners of war in Vietnam.

Leaving the ministry, Borman said: "We had a fine and friendly, very friendly talk. We discussed American prisoners of war in Vietnam and, in fact, all prisoners of war—on both sides."

Borman leaves Warsaw Saturday for Stockholm and plans to visit Paris and Geneva.

Neon lights provide brilliance at Tokyo's Ginza

By Keith Busch
Special Writer

TOKYO—No matter what the hour between dusk and dawn, the Ginza, entertainment center of Tokyo, is not the Orient, can attract all eyes upward. The variety, color and ingenuity of the neon signs topping the tallest buildings of the district glow with a brilliance unmatched anywhere.

In 1948, Japan's first post-war neon sign, advertising a vitamin pill called Metabalin, was put atop the Kyu-kyodo stationery store at Ginza 4-chome. This one spot of brightness was the forerunner of others, bigger and brighter, that give Tokyo more neon per square foot than any other city in the world.

Toshio Kobayashi is credited with reviving the nights of Ginza. Now president of Senkoshu Advertising Co., he says, "I dreamed of a city brilliant with lights—but then it was only a dream then. We put the sign on top of the Kyu-kyodo building because it was the only building standing. So now you know how much of a dream it was.

Though there were neon signs in Japan before 1945, it is only since the end of the war that the nation has begun to realize their advertising potential. Now even the tiniest farming town has a neon sign in its even tiner entertainment district.

For the really spectacular, though, one has to go to the Ginza. It is here that Kobayashi believes is the largest neon sign in the country, the one circling the famed Nichegeki Theatre. Built at a cost of 50 million yen ($139,000) it is 32 feet high and 330 feet long.

Across the street is the most interesting and amusing sign in Japan—the moving, peeping Pepsi-Cola ad atop the Fujiya Confectionary at the Sukiyabashi Intersection.

As a one of a kind sign in Japan, it is neon cinema, a moving, pulsing procession of animated cartoons, baseball and dancers that parade across the 30-foot-square screen to delight diners in the restaurants on top of the Sony and Hankyu Buildings.

All this is accomplished by a process called Leigh-Epok, named after the man who invented the process. Very simply, it is a film, either taken from life or an artist's drawing board and projected onto a transistor screen. This screen instantaneously transfers electric impulses to a control panel, which in turn passes the message onto the outdoor sign.

The cost of the sign is enormous. Pepsi reports that it cost 20 million yen ($55,000) to build and 30 million yen a year to maintain.

Despite the fact that the Pepsi sign is the only Leigh-Epok sign in Japan today, Kobayashi put one up 11 years ago in Osaka, the third of its kind in the world. Later he erected another in Shibuya, both of them for Takeda Pharmaceutical Co. The high cost of maintenance, however, forced Takeda to give up the idea.

For all the signs' brilliance and apparent sophistication, they are still manufactured in small factories on the outskirts of large cities, just like before the war.

Tokyo Neon produces the neon and argon gas with which the light tubes are filled. The color of the tube depends on the type of gas used and the color of paint with which it is mixed. The natural color of neon is brilliant red, argon is a deep, shiny blue. By using different combinations of gas and paint, workmen can create a spectrum of 26 colors. Purple, says Y. Hirobe, company president, is the most difficult to get just right.

Neon costs 5,000 yen ($14) a liter; argon, 2,000 yen ($5.50). This is enough to light up about 1,000 yards of tubing, or about halfway around the Nichegeki Theatre. The gases usually have to be replaced about every three years.

Whether the ground-level sights please the viewer or not, as long as the lights are on, the Ginza will be a bright place to visit.

Celebrity Series to present drama, ballet and opera in fall

By Ken Berryman
Student Writer

The 1970-71 Celebrity Series, continuing in its fourth consecutive year, will include eight performances beginning in the fall, according to Mrs. Marilyn Hylland, assistant to the coordinator of special programs at SIU.

The season performances and dates include "Adaptation/Next," Nov. 15; "Hamlet" starring Dame Judith Anderson, Dec. 6; "Hadrian VII," Jan. 29, 1971; "The National Ballet," Feb. 7; "Forty Carats," Feb. 14; "George M.," March 7; Goldovsky Grand Opera Theatre, March 13; and "Zorba," April 24.

Paul Hibbs, coordinator of special programs at SIU, said the purpose of the series is to bring cultural entertainment to this area.

"Southern Illinois," he said, "has always been thought of as culturally deprived and the Celebrity Series is an attempt to provide this kind of entertainment to the students and the community as a whole."

He said that although the University is close to St. Louis, the price to attend events of this calibre is usually beyond what students can afford.

"The price for a ticket in St. Louis might be as much as $15," he explained, "while our most expensive student ticket has been $3 and as low as $1.25."

The Celebrity Series is not 100 percent self-supporting, according to Hibbs, but is subsidized by student government and has received help in the past from the University as well as the Illinois Art Council.

"If we did not receive help," he said, "then we would have to raise the price of tickets and most students wouldn't be able to afford them."

Mrs. Hylland said that the season program will provide a variety of programs.

"We will provide dramatics, comedy, ballet, opera and musicals," she said.

According to Mrs. Hylland, the first two performances will be given in the University Theater in the Communications Building because of remodeling in Shryock Auditorium.

"If they complete remodeling after the first two scheduled performances," she said, "then we will move back into Shryock."

Prices for tickets have not been designated yet, according to Mrs. Hylland, because of the remodeling and different seating arrangements at Shryock Auditorium.

"We expect 1,150 seating capacity," she said, "and this will enable us to have more seats with greater variability in price range for tickets. Tickets may be purchased at the University Center Central Ticket Office.

Performances will begin at 8 p.m. instead of 8:30 p.m. as they did last season.

Humane Society's concern is the right people for animals

By John Ziebold
Student Writer

"Dogs, cats, rabbits, bats, a price for every purse, a pet for every person."

Sound like an advertisement? It could well be an ad for the Jackson County Humane Society where dogs, cats, and at times, even rabbits and bats are taken by people who don't want them and are then put up for adoption.

The Humane Society, started in 1956, is located about three miles west of Carbondale on New Route 13. At any given time about 35 dogs and 20 cats are housed in the kennels, along with occasional rabbits and at least one bat. All of these animals, except the bat, are put up for adoption by the pet-seeking public.

The kennel is being managed by Paul Gibson and his wife Re. Paul and Re are as concerned about getting the right people for the animals as they are in getting the right animal for the people.

"We want the animals to have good homes," Re said. "They should be treated well and fed. Most dogs can't live off the land."

Most students shouldn't adopt pets, according to Re.

"What are they going to do with them after they leave here?" she asks. "Many say they will give them to their parents, but what if the parents don't want them? We're not trying to discriminate against students," Re said. "They move so often though, and most landlords do not allow pets. What are the students going to do with the pet then?"

"About 25 per cent of the dogs taken out by the students are returned," said Re. Other animals are abandoned when the student leaves town or the novelty of the pet wears off. "We've had a big drop in the number of students getting pets since we raised the placement fees," Re said.

Many people fail to get their pets the rabies shot and dog license required by law. The animals must have a rabies shot and a dog license, each costing $5, or the dog may be picked up and the owner fined.

Stray or injured dogs and cats are picked up by the Carbondale Animal Warden, Bob Zabka.

"Bob does a lot of work he doesn't have to do" Re said. "When he picks up an animal, he'll spend hours trying to find its owner before he finally brings it out here."

In trying to find the owner, Zabka is helping the owner as much as the animal. There is a $5 fine plus $1 a day boarding charge for animals taken to the kennel.

"The police are very helpful too," Re said. "They are always bring out dogs for us. About half of the police have adopted animals from here."

About half a dozen calls are received each month concerning cruelty to animals. Mrs. Eugina Hunter, a member of the board of directors for the society, checks out every complaint.

"A lot of these turn out to be a misunderstanding rather than cruelty," Re said.

"We have a fine group of people on the board of directors," Re said. "Every member of the board has certain responsibilities and they all work hard. Not one of them gets paid for the time and service they give."

It costs between 10 and 15 thousand dollars a year to operate the kennels. Most of these funds come from placement fees, which are $12 for dogs and $8 for cats. This price includes a free checkup and free spaying for female pets. Other funds include donations, membership fees, an annual antique show and United Fund. From these funds, the society takes care of about 3,500 animals each year, including food, shelter and medical care.

When you decide it's time your family had a pet, stop by the kennels. There's likely to be just the pet you want, and for the small placement fee you buy a lot of love.

Open, flexible major

Undergrad film program initiated

By William H. Moy
Student Writer

The Department of Cinema and Photography has implemented a new curriculum, which will give SIU one of the most complete undergraduate film programs in the Midwest, according to Robert E. Davis, chairman of the department.

Although the department has a still photography program of national reputation, Davis said, it has never before offered a major in film and cinema, as it does now.

The objective of the film and cinema program is to provide students with a background in the history, theory and practice of photographic communication.

It calls for an open flexible kind of a major designed to meet the interests and career plans of the individual student.

Three fields of specialization will be available to students: concentrating in photography; cinema, photography and cinema; photography. Within each specialization there will be many options open to students.

The department hopes to offer graduate and master degrees in still photography in another two or three years, according to John Mercer, professor.

The first courses in photography at SIU were taught in 1955 by William Horrell.

From 1955-60 the department had three darkrooms in an old house—one of the darkrooms was a janitor's closet.

In 1960 the department got seven darkrooms in the Agriculture Building and some space in Building 0834, where a film editing room was installed.

The department is currently housed in two barracks and in the Agriculture Building—a total space of 4,712 square feet. It is scheduled to move into the Communications Building Stage II in early 1971, where it will occupy 8,276 square feet. The area for still photography will be doubled and the film editing facilities will be increased six times.

The department now has six darkrooms and two shooting spaces. In the new building there will be 27 darkrooms and eight shooting spaces for commercial photography.

The University Film Production Center will also be housed in the building. The center has a soundproof studio and sound mixing facilities that will be shared with the cinema department.

Basic silent film editing rooms, advance editing rooms, screening rooms and sound transfer rooms will be housed in the basement of the main portion of the Communications Building. Students will be able to study classical films frame by frame.

According to Mercer, the new facilities will probably be the best in the Midwest, and, with the exception of UCLA, as good as any in the country.

The new building will make it possible to serve more students and to implement the new program on a larger scale, said Davis.

'Kelly's Heroes'

War flick has a confusing approach

By David Daly
Daily Egyptian Special Writer

Approval of the army portrayed in "Kelly's Heroes" demands a Hell's Angels mentality and the outlook of a sergeant in the French foreign legion.

Nevertheless the film is well made and effectively tells the story it sets out to tell. "Kelly's Heroes" was filmed in Yugoslavia. The distance of foreign parts lends little enchantment to this film however.

A war film that takes place during a chaotic campaign of World War II can't make up its mind whether it wants to go the route of the war-is-hell satire of "M.A.S.H." or try the war-is-fun-and-games path of "The Dirty Dozen." It therefore winds up in limbo someplace between the two.

Clint Eastwood (again) is cast as a biased private who inadvertently discovers that the Germans have $16 million in gold bars in a bank some 30 miles behind the front lines. When his platoon gets a three-day leave after a particularly bloody campaign, he talks platoon leader Telly Savalas and the rest of the gang into penetrating enemy lines for the big jackpot.

The pursuit of the gold turns out to be a series of bloody adventures for the men of "Kelly's Heroes." There are lots of nice lines about the "natural greed of man, the insanity that prevails under the pressures of battle," and the like. But it is not very funny, not with all the spilled guts and death with which director Brian G. Hutton clutters the landscapes.

Among the performers is the young Canadian actor who scored so well in "M.A.S.H." Donald Sutherland. Sutherland comes across well as a zapped-out tank commander who wires his tanks for sound to soothe him as he rolls into battle. Sutherland plays him like a hippie Napoleon, and his episodes in "Kelly's Heroes" are frequently diverting.

MacLachlan comments on university's function

By Terry Peters
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The university's role in society and the financing of the Center for Vietnamese Studies and Programs were the topics of discussion at Thursday night's meeting of the Concerned Persons for Peace in Southeast Asia.

Bruce B. MacLachlan, assistant to the chancellor, spoke to a group of about 30 persons attending the meeting in the Student Christian Foundation. Acting Chancellor Willis E. Malone was scheduled to speak, but sent MacLachlan in his place as a last-minute substitute.

After the group heard reports on its political activities—supporting Adlai E. Stevenson III in his Illinois senatorial campaign and circulating petitions in support of the McGovern-Hatfield "Amendment to End the War"—MacLachlan outlined the varying theories of the university's proper function in society.

"The university is the only institution which makes the preservation, reinterpretation, extension and promulgation of knowledge its primary function," MacLachlan said.

"It is important for society that the institution carry this on," he continued. "There are corollary functions which may logically or spuriously be ascribed to the institution, and to the extent that they don't conflict with its prime function, they are at least tolerable distractions."

MacLachlan said the notion that Universities should take stands on public issues as institutions is not so far removed from the reality of pre-World War II higher education.

He cited Woodrow Wilson, Nicholas Murray Butler and, probably the "last member of this breed," Robert M. Hutchins, as university presidents who spoke out on social issues.

The theory of the university as a critic of society was questioned by MacLachlan. "I don't accept this as the first order of priority," he said, "though it probably follows as a corollary of the university's primary function. But I don't consider it to be the bounden duty of the university."

When the discussion shifted to the Vietnam study center, MacLachlan said he anticipated that it would remain on campus, and that the vote of students in the May referendum to remove it was not a legitimate exercise of the majority rule principle.

"I think SIU should stand behind the Vietnamese Studies Center," MacLachlan said when told that its continued presence may lead to further disturbances.

"There are worse things than having a university destroyed over a principle," MacLachlan continued. "Majority vote in academic matters doesn't impress me one little bit."

William J. Moffett, a graduate student from Carbondale who is a leader of the Student Mobilization Committee, challenged MacLachlan's position on majority rule.

"A surgeon wouldn't consult a printer about an operation," Moffett said. "But that's not the kind of thing we're talking about."

"We're talking about the A.I.D. (Agency for International Development) grant," Moffett continued. "The reasons for our opposition to A.I.D. are well-known, and on questions like that, the majority shall rule."

Moffett also took issue with MacLachlan's contention that many of the critics of the center oppose it simply for the sake of opposing a center dedicated to the scholarly study of Vietnam.

"I think I can speak for some of those people who were out there in the streets," Moffett said. "And we don't want that center on campus because it is funded by A.I.D. We're not attacking scholarship."

Asked if the administration would call in the National Guard if another crisis occurred, MacLachlan replied that the Guardsmen had been well behaved, and implied that they would be called in again if deemed necessary.

"It was the state police who came in for kicks," MacLachlan said. "They weren't being paid, they weren't concerned about proper arrest procedures, and they didn't participate in the legal proceedings afterward."

"They just came to crack skulls," MacLachlan concluded. "At least, that was my interpretation of their behavior."

Moffett criticized SIU President Delyte W. Morris for saying, after the University was closed, that "rednecks" and right-wing militants from local communities were on the verge of sabotaging the University for harboring radical students.

From his experience, Moffett said, members of the local communities were arming out of fear of a student attack on them. He rapped Morris for making statements which could exacerbate the situation.

MacLachlan, asked why a Vietnam study center was sought by SIU when the likelihood of protest was so high, said the reason was opportunism.

"First, there were gobs of money available for such a center," he said. "Second, there were more people at SIU than any university but MSU (Michigan State University) who had been in Vietnam and had a personal interest in the country.

"And third, there were a large number of Vietnamese students on the campus as a result of SIU's work in Vietnam during the 1960s," MacLachlan concluded.

Recital scheduled

James Guzzardo, a senior in the SIU School of Music, will give a clarinet recital at 7 p.m. Monday in the Home Economics Auditorium.

Sonata of Paul Hindemith, Four Melodic Studies of Arthur Aunkin and Sonata, Op. 120, No. 1 of Johannes Brahms will be performed.

Guzzardo is giving this recital in partial fulfillment of the requirements for the bachelor of music degree. Andrea Saunders will be the accompanist. Admission is free.

Reds on religion

HONG KONG (AP)—One charge leveled by Red China against the Soviet Union in the flareup of antagonism between the two Communist countries, is that the Russians are promoting a revival of religion.

The purpose, says Peking Radio, "is to intoxicate the Soviet people, speed up all-around capitalist restoration and maintain the tottering rule of the revisionists."

Postcard postmarked in 1917 finally arrives in Carbondale

The Carbondale Post Office this week received a postcard that had been postmarked Jan. 25, 1917. It had been recently sent from Miami, Fla., and was postmarked on the back Aug. 10, 1970.

The postcard, mailed to Miss Freida Stoneman who then resided at 214 W. Monroe St., Carbondale, in a house long since torn down, is no longer alive.

Miss Talbot, who had written on the card "I'm here yet, but I guess not for long," in 1917, may also be deceased now.

Raymond Vaughn, distribution clerk at the Carbondale Post Office, said, "Some descendant of the family may have placed the card back into the mail. It may have been a practical joke."

"Also it is possible it may have been in the post office all these years in a piece of equipment," Vaughn added that there is a possibility it could have been in a mail pouch that had not been used since the card was placed in it.

The message was just routine gossip about the weather, which was cold and the prevalence of measles. A 1917 one-cent green stamp with a picture of George Washington was the only postage on the card.

Bill introduced to encourage use of coal with low sulphur

WASHINGTON (AP)—A bill introduced Friday would establish a 22 per cent tax depletion allowance to encourage use of low sulphur coal as a means of reducing air pollution. This is the same tax break now given oil.

Rep. Roman C. Pucinski, D-Ill., sponsor of the measure, said the allowance is a way to increase production of this type of coal which in turn would reduce to acceptable limits the pollution of coal-using power plants and steel mills.

The tax break would apply to locating, building and operating low sulphur coal mines, and processing regular coal into the same form.

The Chicago congressman said more low sulphur coal will be needed especially in light of new local ordinances in his city and elsewhere which demand the fuel's use.

And, Pucinski continued, unless low sulphur coal production is increased the nation will be faced with the prospects of major power blackouts in the future.

Onetime bush league player becomes big league manager

By Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — When Walter Alston was summoned to Brooklyn from Montreal to manage the Dodgers there was grumbling among the troops.

Alston's exposure to the major leagues at that time was somewhat less than unlimited. He had been with the St. Louis Cardinals just long enough to strike out in his only time at bat. His performance in the field was not as unfortunate. He did not drop one of the two balls he handled at first base.

In that era before the term superstar was invented, the Dodgers were loaded with old-fashioned stars. Along with being two-time defending champions of the National League, they had finished first four times in seven seasons and had placed no lower than third in nine years.

Some of the players developed super-eggs to go with their talent, and did not appreciate the idea of this bush leaguer giving them orders.

It finally came to a point where Alston had to win their respect. The alternative was a managing career that would parallel his playing record. He invited one of the more outspoken stars outside for a private "discussion" concerning who was running the club. The star declined the invitation, and Alston has been The Man ever since.

Alston went on to employ a somewhat less dramatic but even more convincing method to prove his right to manage in the big leagues. His teams have won six pennants and the World Series four times.

The lesson the Dodgers learned was not lost on other baseball organizations, many of which hired men with similar backgrounds. Right now, Lefty Phillips (Angels), John McNamara (Athletics), Frank Lucchesi (Phillies) and Earl Weaver (Orioles) are managing without the benefit of any playing experience in the majors. Preston Gomez (Padres), Charlie Fox (Giants) and Mayo Smith (Tigers) were around long enough to get their names in a few box scores.

George Lee (Sparky) Anderson of the Cincinnati Reds belongs on the same list. His glorious major league career was a season of 152 games as second baseman with the Philadelphia Phillies. A .218 batting average earned him a one-way trip to the minor leagues.

It would not have been an upset if the stars on the Reds had taken one look at Anderson's record and told him to take a hike. What they did was look at their own record. Since the late Fred Hutchinson took them to the pennant in 1961, they have been the most disappointing team in the majors in terms of expectations vs. results.

Anderson did not have to challenge anyone. All he had to do was manage.

Manage who? He obviously did not interfere with such all-stars as Pete Rose, Tony Perez and John Bench. General Manager Bob Howsam reserves credit for the deal which brought Jim McElhenny from the Angels. Wayne Simpson was just another prospect until he grew up while playing in Puerto Rico for Jim Fregosi.

None of this hurts Anderson's candidacy for Manager of the Year. He deserves the honor because he is the man who tied things together in Cincinnati. He turned a great group of losers into an even greater group of winners.

"The day is past when a manager chooses the clubhouse and treats up the farmers," Anderson has said in explaining how he does his job. "You treat ball players as gentlemen, you have to be considerate."

"You don't speak to a ball player one time and ignore him the next. You don't get jumps when you lose."

This is the Alston system. It's the winning system. It's even-tempered. It's respectful. It's not overbearing. Let the players do their thing.

Sound nice and easy? It isn't. Ask Dick Sisker, Don Hoffer and Dave Bristol. All had the opportunity with the Reds. All failed. Sparky Anderson is succeeding.

Softball tourney to start Tuesday

Championship playoff action gets underway Tuesday in two of the three SBU Men's Softball Leagues. The third League will hold its title game Wednesday night.

Representatives from the various teams in the leagues met Friday afternoon in the Intramural Office to decide on the dates, times and officials for the games.

The 12-inch fast pitch championship game will be played on Field No. 6 at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday. The Freedom Slips will be competing with the Greeks for the league crown. Officials for the game will be Larry Bunting, Denny Partridge and Jack Stafford.

A three-way tie for second place in the 12-inch slow pitch league will require a playoff with the winner meeting the regular season leader, the God Squad, for the overall championship.

Teams locked in the three-way deadlock for second place are the Green Hornets, MacDonald's Big Macs and Bob's

Mob. The first playoff game, between the Green Hornets and the Big Macs, will be Tuesday at 8:30 p.m. with Ed Marrapese and Ira Robinson officiating. The winner meets Bob's Mob Thursday at 6:30 p.m. Officials will be Bunting, Partridge and Stafford.

The playoff winner meets God Squad in a double-elimination playoff beginning Aug. 24. All 12-inch fast pitch games will be played on Field No. 1.

One regular season game between the Rathole and The Castle, remains to be played in the 18-inch slow pitch. The game will be played Monday. If the Rathole wins Monday, it will be in sole possession of second place and a berth in the title game Wednesday. If they lose, a playoff between the Rathole and the Happy Daze will be held Tuesday. All 18-inch slow pitch games will be played on Field No. 2. Officials for the contest will be Tom Pike, Rick Weistransky and Dave Dorton.

Scrimmage track meet planned for local team

Two SBU teacher corps participants, Willie Clayton and Ernest Gardner, will be holding a scrimmage track meet today at 9:30 a.m. at a local high school field in a warm-up session for their five-member team of Carbondale students. The students will be going to the Summer Jamboree state championship meet at Pekin, Ill., next week.

Clayton said the scrimmage meet today will consist of several individual sprints and relay events. Donations are asked of 10 cents for children and 25 cents for adults. All proceeds will go for equipment for the track program.

Clayton, Gardner and several other SBU students will compose the team that will run against the five high school and junior high team members. The five competing in Pekin include John Norman, Bob Robinson, Max Norman, Ray Clayton and Patty Biggers. The four boys will compete together in the 440 and 880-yard relays. In addition, Robinson will compete in the broad jump, Clayton in the 50-yard dash, and Max Norman in the 100-yard dash. Miss Biggers will compete in the girl's 100-yard dash.

All five were winners in the state regional tourney two weeks ago.

Clayton said he and Gardner were coaching the group as a part of their duties in the teacher corp. The team will depart for Pekin Thursday and will compete Friday and Saturday.

Cubs rehire Leo for '71

CHICAGO (AP) — Leo Durocher, still colorful and controversial at 64, was given a note of confidence by owner Phil Wrigley Friday in the form of a 1971 contract to continue managing the Chicago Cubs.

Terms were not disclosed. At the same time, Durocher hired an old buddy and one of his former New York Giant coaches, Herman Franks, as a Cub coach. Franks replaced Joe Becker, who collapsed with heart trouble at Wrigley Field Wednesday.

"Yes, you could say this was a vote of confidence," Wrigley told The Associated Press. "I think Leo has done an excellent job."

Durocher, after a 10-year managerial hiatus, was hired by Wrigley to take over the "Gowdaddens" Cubs in 1966. Leo's first season under a three-year contract found the Cubs finishing 10th and last in the National League.

But in 1967 Durocher picked up the Braves to a first division finish for the first time in 20 years, taking third

That year, Leo's contract was extended through 1969 and in January, 1969, Wrigley signed Durocher through 1970.

As ever, Leo was not at a loss for words, asserting: "It's great to be invited back by Mr. Wrigley and John Holland, my general manager. Simply marvelous. This is some kind of organization."

"To me contracts don't mean anything. People want you or they don't want you. I've worked for some great organizations. I never worked for a bad one. It's just that some are better than others and this happens to be a great one."

Asked if reaching the working man's normal retirement age of 65, he might quit after next season, Leo snapped:

"Retirement? I've given that subject no consideration."

Durocher said he was elated to hire Franks, dismissed as San Francisco manager after the 1968 season and since directing his private business interests in Salt Lake City.

Green Bay, Bears clash in Shrine game

MILWAUKEE, (AP) — The two oldest foes in the National Football League—the Green Bay Packers and the Chicago Bears—will be at it again tonight with a lot of new faces.

The two teams clash in the annual Midweek Shrine Game at the Milwaukee County Stadium.

Among the new Bears are linebacker Lee Roy Caffey, running back Elijah Pitts and center-catcher Bob Hyland, all old Packers.

The Packers have at defensive tackle rookie Mike McCoy of Notre Dame, who came to Green Bay indirectly from Chicago. Draft rights to the 6-foot-5, 284-pounder were obtained from the Bears by the Packers for the three veterans.

Chicago defeated Houston, 23-13, last week while Green Bay struggled from behind to tie the New York Giants, 31-31, in the exhibition season opener.

The Bears have also added safety Phil Clark from Dallas, defensive lineman Bill Staley and Harry Gunter from Cincinnati and running back Craig Baynham in trades. The Bears, mired last season when they dipped to a disastrous 1-13 record, have moved George Seals to defense to improve the pass rush.

As in the past, Chicago's offense is geared around the shifty running of Gale Sayers, who rushed for 1,032 yards last season after knee surgery the year before. Bobby Douglas, the leftshander from Kansas, is expected to open at quarterback.

Green Bay will probably lead off with veteran signal-caller Bart Starr, who saw very limited action in the Giants' clash. Don Horn and Billy Stepien will also operate as the Packers' offense.

For the second straight week, Donny Anderson and Jim Grabowski will open at running backs. Travis Williams, who led the packers in rushing last year, has a deep thigh muscle pull and will not dress for the Bears' contest.

Also sitting out the game will be Jim Weatherwax, reserve defensive lineman, who has a muscle pull.
