NATO forces punish Serb positions

Los Angeles Times
ZAGREB, Croatia—In a new phase in the Balkans war, wave after wave of American and European warplanes bombed Bosnian Serb missile batteries, air-defense radars and command centers across Bosnia-Herzegovina Wednesday in the largest military operation in NATO history.

As the beleaguered residents of Sarajevo cheered and allied aircraft buzzed overhead, NATO and U.N. officials vowed to continue punishing the nationalist Serbs until they no longer threaten the Bosnian capital and other civilian enclaves.

"The world has finally done what it should have done a long, long time ago," Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic said.

With the massive show of force, the West, after nearly four years of impotent humiliation in the former Yugoslavia, is hoping to restore its eroded credibility while forcing the Serbs to sue for peace.

USG Senate discusses spending

By Wendy J. Allyn
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Expenditures of Undergraduate Student Government officials received support and criticism from USG senators Wednesday at the organization's first meeting of the semester.

USG President Duane Sherman presented the senate with an operating budget for fiscal year 1995, which tells how much the organization plans to spend during the year and the dollar amount they have to work with.

Senator Robert Irby said he did not think the budget was as detailed as it should have been.

"It seems kind of simple (the budget)," Irby said.

Irby said with some of the criticism and controversy surrounding Sherman's summer expenditures, it was reasonable to ask that the president supply the entire senate with a list of the money Sherman spent during the summer term.

Sherman used USG funds over the summer to travel to Washington D.C. for what he has said was a further investigation of the United States Student Association. USSA is a student lobbying group which students who voted in a spring 1995 referendum agreed to fund so that USG could become a member.

Sherman has said the Washington D.C. trip was justified because he was able to gather valuable information to help determine the extent of USG's membership in the lobbying group.

Third graders show support for Moro

By Carey Jane Atherton and Donita Polly
Daily Egyptian Reporters

A parent counseling session Tuesday night and a ribbon ceremony Wednesday afternoon are ways parents and Giant City School students are trying to come to grips with the abduction of an 8-year-old student.

Demetria Moro, a third grader at the school, was allegedly kidnapped at gunpoint by her father, John D. Moro, while in class Monday at approximately 2:30 p.m.

Chris Rigdon, Giant City superintendent and principal, told parents what happened Monday when they expressed concerns Tuesday night. The parents said they were not sure what actually occurred.

Rigdon said Moro claimed to be a student from SIUC and that he was there to talk to the librarian about one of his college classes.

"I took him to the library and when I saw him talking to the librarian, I left," Rigdon said. "When he left the library, he asked some kids where the third grade classroom was."

Rigdon said according to Emma Jean Durr, the third grade teacher, Moro went into the room and said he wanted his daughter.

Rigdon said Durr stood between Moro and Demetria. That is when Moro pulled the gun and pointed it at the students and the teacher.

"He pulled the little girl by the arm, screaming," Rigdon said. "Two custodians heard her scream and one went up to the guy, but he pulled out his gun and said if he didn't back off, he'd be dead."

Mike Rohling of Southern Illinois Regional Social Services gave pamphlets and advice to the parents about what to look for if their children should have problems.

Rohling told parents a delayed reaction to the kidnapping is not unusual and he encouraged parents to let their kids talk about what happened.

"The two most common reactions for kids is fear and guilt," Rohling said. "Don't let the kids take responsibility for this. Let them express themselves in any way they can."

"Parents need to help their kids talk about what they saw, heard, felt and smelled. You need to help them through all of the sensory experiences."

Rohling said children may smell or hear something later that reminds them of the incident and they need to be prepared for that remembrance.

Rohling told parents the children need to get back to their regular routine because doing so provides the normalcy they need.

"Get kids back to school as soon as possible because it is a ritual they need," he said.

SIUC computer help desk future uncertain

By Alan Schnepf
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC Computing Advisory Committee met yesterday to discuss the future of the recently closed Information Technology help desk, but members made no decisions regarding computer assistance on campus.

Instead, the committee decided to meet again at the end of next month so they have time to explore the different options suggested in a report from IBM who studied SIUC computer facilities.

Executive Director C. Michael

Williams said IT received numerous complaints about the inadequacy of the help desk's services and decided to shut it down and start over from scratch.

IT has already allocated almost $550,000 for a new facility, the Customer Service Center, in Lentz Hall. The money was used for fiber optic wiring, hardware, software and furniture for the new facility.

Geoffrey Nathan, associate professor of linguistics, said some help was better than what the campus has now — nothing — and wished more time had been spent deciding if all the equipment was really necessary.

"I think it's something that probably should have been discussed at greater length," he said. "We simply can't afford the best, we can't afford a Rolls Royce."

George Parker, associate professor of mathematics, said although

Bosnia-Herzegovina

ATLANTIC ALLIANCE UNITY HELPED BY ATTACK —
 BRUSSELS, Belgium—Whatever success the first Western military air and artillery attacks in Bosnia-Herzegovina may have in moving the stubborn war there toward the negotiating table, they had an immediate political impact in Europe, restoring the unity and credibility of the Atlantic Alliance after months of serious internal strains over the Balkans crisis. Among the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's 16 member nations, backing for the attacks was strong, especially among key countries that have differed openly and sometimes sharply over tactics. Tensions within NATO have been driven largely by U.S. frustration over the inability of its European allies to resolve the first major post-Cold War conflict in their own back yard. Europeans have been equally dismayed by what they see as the Clinton administration's lack of leadership and its dizzying policy zig-zags.

YELTSIN DENOUNCES NATO ATTACKS ON BOSNIA —
 MOSCOW—Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin denounced the NATO bombing raids against Bosnian Serbs and their deadly artillery Wednesday, foreshadowing an end to Russia's cooperation with the latest Western efforts in the Balkans crisis. Yeltsin decried the massive air strikes and artillery assaults by NATO and a European rapid-reaction force a "cruel bombardment" likely to antagonize radical Serb nationalists who have already seized 70 percent of Bosnia-Herzegovina and laid waste to most of the rest. More than 60 NATO warplanes descended on Bosnian Serb-held territory around Sarajevo, the capital of Bosnia-Herzegovina, before dawn to strike at anti-aircraft missile batteries, communication networks and ammunition dumps in retaliation for a Bosnian Serb mortar attack on a crowded market Monday that killed 37 Sarajevans.

TED TURNER MAY SELL OUT TO TIME WARNER —
 NEW YORK—Ted Turner, the brash entrepreneur who for years has failed in his quest to buy a broadcast network and expand his growing cable television empire, has done an about-face: He's considering selling out to Time Warner Inc. Time Warner and Turner Broadcasting System confirmed Wednesday that they are in talks to merge. If the $8 billion deal is completed, Time Warner would leapfrog over the newly paired Walt Disney/Capital Cities-ABC combination to regain its place as the largest global media and entertainment company, with revenues of $18.7 billion. Turner Broadcasting would become a subsidiary of Time Warner and media mogul Turner would become an employee, albeit a vice chairman. He is expected to remain active from his home base in Atlanta, and would own about 10 percent of Time Warner's stock.

LEG FOUND IN BLAST BELONGED TO WOMAN —
 WASHINGTON—Casting doubts on defense theories that a severed leg found in the Oklahoma City federal building rubble belonged to the "real bomber," authorities said Wednesday the limb was that of an unidentified black woman. The conclusion, announced by state medical examiner Fred Jordan in Oklahoma City, boosted the official death toll from the April 19 bombing to 169. Defense lawyers for accused bomber Timothy J. McVeigh had speculated that the leg belonged to the "real bomber," despite the substantial circumstantial evidence that appears to link McVeigh to the explosion. But no black women have been tied to the crime or linked to McVeigh or his co-defendant, Terry L. Nichols.

LAPD REJECTS FUHRMAN; DENIES SIMPSON SETUP —
 LOS ANGELES—The police department that once rallied around Detective Mark Fuhrman now hastens to reject him. The police chief who once defended him against the charges of O.J. Simpson's lawyers now calls him a disgrace. And the Internal Affairs investigators he once boasted of outsmarting now pore over Fuhrman's work history to see if he was a brutal, racist police officer or merely a raging liar. But through weeks of intensive investigation sparked by the surfacing of the so-called "Fuhrman tapes," one conclusion of the Los Angeles Police Department remains unchanged: No matter how racist or offensive Fuhrman's personal views may be, he simply could not have planted evidence in the murder investigation of O.J. Simpson.

Fitting student needs focus of Mass Transit

By Cynthia Sheets
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Just two weeks into the fall semester, the Mass Transit Advisory Board is adapting the transit system in response to student reaction.

Route No. 5, which encompasses the Southern Hills complex, will now begin at 7:18 a.m. at the Mac Smith and Schneider Towers to update to the system is the introduction of a second bus on route No. 1, which runs the business loop in Carbondale from 1 p.m. to 9 p.m.

Larry Juhlin, vice president for Student Affairs, said the buses had to turn away an estimated 160 people last Saturday on route No. 1 because the bus had reached capacity. The additional bus was enlisted to accommodate the extra people.

"Giant City and routes to the Carbondale Clinic are two more suggestions the board will look at over time," Juhlin said. "We will first have to find what bus routes are being used and which ones aren't."

"Whenever we are turning down 20 to 30 people in an hour, we can respond immediately," said Jeff Duke, assistant director of the Student Center.

Duke said students can pick up suggestion forms for the mass transit system at the administrative offices in the Student Center.

"Students can bring in the complaint forms to the office," said Duke. "We also encourage students to call in over the phone. Anything that will make the system better for the students can go before the board."

Complaints such as buses being

Teflon lined pipe cause of Pulliam evacuation

By Julie Rendleman
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Fumes from a pipe caused the SIUC Police to evacuate the industrial education wing of Pulliam Hall Aug. 28.

"The police were called to the scene around 6:30 p.m. when the occupants of the building got concerned because they started having burning in their eyes, nose, and throat," Sam Jordan, SIUC's police director, said.

Eric Talley, chemical waste manager at The Center for Environmental Health and Safety said, "The fumes given off were from a new pipe that ran to the boiler in the basement. Inside the pipe was a Teflon line, and when the outside of it heated up it gave off a terrible odor."

"The outside of the Teflon line cooked off by itself so the smell finally went away," said Talley. "The fumes were not harmful except for the real bad smell."

Tony Wright, a graduate student in ceramics said, "The smell was very distinct. It smelled a lot like ether. Everyone kept on walking around the building, asking each other if they were using any chemicals and wondering what the smell is."

"The police evacuated us for about 30 minutes until they knew what was giving off the smell. Then they finally let us go back in the building," Wright said.

Newer, faster computers added to school labs

Kelly L. Mall — The Daily Egyptian

Matt Elston of Carbondale a junior in journalism, presents the old computers in Faner Hall that are ready to be replaced with Dell-Optiplex P-90s and Power Mac 1700s. The old computers will not be thrown out, rather they will be distributed to other educational departments.

By James Lyon
Daily Egyptian Reporter

To keep up with new technology, SIUC has upgraded 80 percent of all the micro-computers in the campus computer labs with state-of-the-art equipment, and now the University must decide what to do with the old hardware.

Patty Cosgrove, lab manager for the Computer Centers, said the new computers are much faster, have a lot more memory and will be equipped with CD-ROM capabilities.

Rhonda Thompson, shift supervisor in the College of Technical Careers lab, said what the students see on the screen is a lot like what the computers were like last year, but better.

"They are basically the same, but the students like them because they are much faster," Thompson said.

The new equipment, worth over $800,000, includes 156 I.B.M. compatible Pentium 90's, 64 Power Mac 7100's, five sun work stations and four servers.

The computers being replaced are currently being stored in the Faner computer lab. Their future has not been determined.

Mike Williams, executive director for Budgeting and Information Services, said one of two things could happen to them. One option is that the computers will be traded in to I.B.M. in return for a new financial processor.

The second option, which Williams said is more plausible, is that the computers will be distributed, upon a first-come, first-serve basis, to the different departments on campus.

Search committee should move faster

WELL, IT TOOK ALMOST FOUR MONTHS, but the search for a new dean of SIUC's School of Law is officially a national search. To be sure, this is good news to the students at the law school, many of whom expressed strong concerns when an internal search for the position was tentatively approved toward the end of the spring semester.

A national search is in the best interests of the students, and the faculty, of the school. Limiting the scope of the search to the existing faculty could have stunted the growth of the school by excluding potential candidates with fresh and innovative administrative strategies from outside the University. At a time when the law school is ranked number 124 out of 176 schools by judges and lawyers, fresh and innovative leadership is even more crucial.

THE SEARCH COMMITTEE ALSO HAS finalized the law dean job description, job qualifications, and selection process. These decisions had to be made before the search could officially begin. While the fact the search committee has finally finished the description and list of qualifications is welcomed news, it certainly took long enough. SIU President John Guyon defended delays in the decision, saying the search could not be properly conducted over the summer. Search committee chair Patrick Kelley, a law professor, said it was difficult for committee members to meet during the summer. Let us hope the search committee conducts its search for the new dean with more fervor than it has shown thus far.

This is not to say that the search for a new law dean should be completed in a few short months. The dean of SIUC's School of Law is an important position, vital to the daily operation of the school. The school seems to need a new permanent dean badly, judging from its ranking in the March 1994 issue of U.S. News and World Report. Not only did the school rank poorly in a poll of judges and lawyers, but graduates of the school average a starting salary of $23,000. The school was ranked a fourth-tier school by the publication, falling from the third tier in 1993 and the second tier in 1992.

BECAUSE THE POSITION IS SO IMPORTANT, the search committee should get down to business immediately. The law school now has an interim dean, but he should be replaced with a permanent dean as soon as possible. This does not mean the committee should rush through the selection process. Selecting a dean for the law school takes careful deliberation, and that takes time. However, the committee should do its best to prevent any further unnecessary delays.

THE FUTURE OF THE SCHOOL IS LARGELY dependent on the selection of the new dean. Whoever is chosen for the job will have a large impact on the quality of instruction at the school. It is important that the search for that individual be a national search to ensure the best person for the job is found. The search committee and the administration should be commended for finally realizing that. But unless they pick up the pace, they could seriously damage the school. That is something the students cannot afford.

Republicans and tobacco industry: A match made in heaven...or hell?

By Elizabeth Whelan
Special to the L.A. Times

Republicans and tobacco, perfect together? So it seems. In a March letter to shareholders, Philip Morris Chairman Geoffrey Bible captured the essence of this apparent alliance: "New faces and new leadership on Capitol Hill mean Philip Morris... has tremendous opportunities."

Bible must have been assured that happy days were here again for the tobacco industry when conservative politicians, their spokesmen and right-wing journalists almost uniformly condemned Clinton's "war" against teen-age smoking. For example, House Speaker Newt Gingrich said the Food and Drug Administration had "lost its mind" when it proposed legislation to regulate nicotine as a drug. Gingrich spokesman Tony Blankley calls anti-smokers "health Nazis." And columnist Tony Snow editorialized that anti-smoking campaigns represent "federal nannysism."

Conservative pundits pounce on anti-smoking activists with gusto, questioning not just our methods, but our priorities. Gingrich declares that we should not pursue policies to discourage smoking because "we haven't won the far more serious fight about crack cocaine and heroin." Does this mean that because we have not won our war on drugs, which kill 3,000 Americans a year, we should not discourage the use of cigarettes, a legal product that kills 500,000 Americans a year?

Republicans, posturing themselves as friends of the tobacco industry, are doing themselves and America's youth a great disservice. As a public health professional and lifelong Republican I ask: Why? Smoking is a physically addictive, life-threatening habit taken up primarily in adolescence, often in childhood. Sounds like a habit conservatives would be loathe to defend and against which they would willingly campaign, just as we would campaign against child pornography or violence-laden entertainment. But, anti-smoking efforts rarely involve conservatives. Discussions of tobacco and health policies are dominated almost exclusively by well-meaning social engineers and safety alarmists whose expansive agenda all but guarantees that many on the right reflexively gravitate to the opposite camp.

In this way, liberal anti-smoking enthusiasts have poisoned the waters for the political right. Yet, just because some people cannot distinguish between serious and hypothetical risks hardly means that knowledgeable Republicans cannot muster the courage to speak out for health.

The Republican Party should seize the initiative and acknowledge publicly that cigarette smoking is the leading cause of preventable death in the United States and craft an anti-smoking agenda consistent with personal freedom and minimal government. Impossible? Not at all. Here's what congressional Republicans can do:

-Make tobacco companies play by the same liability rules as other industries. The way to do this is to remove the government-mandated warning label from cigarettes, which merely pre-empt the responsibility the industry would normally have for the consequences caused by their products.

-Disassociate themselves from the tobacco industry.

-Encourage state and local attempts to reduce cigarette sales to minors.

-Ensure that tobacco taxes cover smoking's medical and social costs.

-Appoint an impartial committee of scientists to review the effects of second-hand smoke. If this panel concludes that second hand smoke contributes to illnesses, Republicans should support efforts to protect nonsmokers.

Last month, a letter signed by me and 41 other Republican physicians and scientists was delivered to Gingrich, urging him to adopt this agenda. Unfortunately, the reaction of his spokesman Blankley, who suggested that our views were "misinformed" and constituted "intrusions into the private lives of others," suggests a blind spot in a leader who otherwise prides himself on his concern for America's next generation.

This is a time when conservatives are understandably eager to dismantle much of the government regulatory apparatus that most Americans agree is too large, too inefficient and too disdainful of the rights and choices of individuals.

Yet at the same time, we should recognize the duty of government to protect its citizens not only from physical violence but also from fraud, and especially to protect America's children. The quantifiable harm done to our children when they begin what often becomes a lifelong addiction should be viewed as a grave public danger.

Whelan is president of American Council on Science and Health.

China unworthy olympic host

In Fall of 1993, Olympic delegates had to decide which of two cities would win the right to hold the Olympics in the year 2000: Beijing, China or Sydney, Australia.

Arguments for Beijing holding the Olympics focused on its exotic locale and culture. More implicit but, at least as important, was the hope that China would use the Olympics to open its country to a more democratic way of doing things. Skepticism still remained about China's worthiness to host the Olympics because of the violent response in 1989 by the Chinese government to citizens seeking more openness in governmental policies.

The locale of Sydney provided little grist for debate on human rights. Original inhabitants of Australia, the Aborigines, could legitimately protest unfair treatment at the hands of the Australian government. However, by prevailing standards, Australia passed the test of free speech and concern for human rights. Olympics delegates could easily be seduced by the extraordinarily beautiful harbor and beaches offered by Sydney, without major pangs of guilt over basic freedoms being trampled.

As I sat glued to the television in a Sydney suburb, viewing the dramatic moment of decision, I secretly hoped that China would be chosen to host the Year 2000 Olympics. Of course, my companions, all Australians, saw things differently.

When Sydney won approval as the Olympic site, I wondered if the voters had given China sufficient consideration. Two years later, I have no doubts that choosing Sydney was the proper choice.

tries like Australia, Germany and the United States. Basing the decision of where to hold world meetings on how much freedom exists within a particular country inevitably ruffles feathers of those countries considered less free than others, such as China. Yet, recent actions by China demonstrate why holding international events in a restrictive environment entails a risk for participants.

The arrest and conviction of Harry Wu, an American citizen charged with gathering information about Chinese society, may not be an everyday occurrence when it comes to tourists visiting China. Mr. Wu apparently hid a camera and knowingly ran a foul of Chinese taboos on reporting about prison labor. However, the mere fact of his arrest could only send chills down the spines of prospective tourists. Do you dare stray off the beaten path to record a notable occurrence? After the incident of Mr. Wu, no assistance of safety by the Chinese government could be taken at face value.

Another recent policy by China that conflicts with necessary standards of being a world host concerns the non governmental women's conference being held in the Beijing area. Hopeful participants in that conference originate from all over the world, including three persons from SIU.

The Chinese government has effectively delayed and, in some cases, even denied its issue of visas for that conference. For no apparent reasons, two of the SIU participants have encountered nightmarish experiences in obtaining visas allowing entry into China. With possibly a more coherent objective, the Chinese excluded an entire group of Latin American women from the visa process. Based on reports in the media, an underlying motive of the Chinese government with its foot dragging on visas was that of squelching points of view unfavorable to its policies.

Freedom to express opinions and travel may appear a western thing, with less relevance to non westerners. Perhaps through arrogance, westerners expect others to conform to their standards.

Still, for any country wishing to host the Olympics, an international conference, or other world events, the western penchant for basic freedoms harbors a universal value.

Robert McCormick is an unclassified graduate student.

"I was strongly advised to make the visit from the outgoing (USG) President Edwin Sawyer," Sherman said. "I wanted to evaluate and take a look at their (USSA's) office to see what they're doing down there."

Irbay said with some of the controversy surrounding the trip and other expenditures, he wanted Sherman to present a list of his summer spending to all senators.

"I don't think it's an absurd request to see every expenditure, especially after all the controversy," Irbay said. "I think that's important. I think every senator should know what we're spending."

Sherman said it would be up to the senate to decide if he should present each senator with a list of his expenditures.

"This would usually be an item for the Internal Affairs Committee to look into," Sherman said. "I guess it would really be up to the senate."

Sherman said all of his expenditures are monitored by the USG executive cabinet as well as Jean Paratore, associate vice president of student affairs.

"Jean Paratore makes sure there are no foolish expenditures," Sherman said. "I do not make decisions myself on spending money."

Senator Jamal Powell said the senate mandated an audit task force last year to review all USG spending. He asked Sherman if the president planned to enact this task force.

Sherman said if the senate decided to form such a committee, he would not stand in its way.

closing the desk was Williams' decision to make, he does not necessarily agree with the logic behind the choice.

"This is what administrators are paid for, but his attitude seemed to be that nothing is better than something," he said.

Williams said he believes without properly trained employees and adequate equipment, the help desk does more harm than good.

"I've listened to people (complain) over and over," he said. "That's why I will only settle for the best."

With the average civil service salary at just under $34,000, cost to staff a new lab the way Williams has said he would like would be nearly $600,000.

However, Williams admitted the desk may never be what he envisions, because the money may simply not be available.

Williams said there is no money left in the SIUC budget to increase IT's appropriations this year, however, and there are concerns about the voids that will be created elsewhere in IT if its funds are reallocated.

talk about what happened and listen to each other. They also said the children felt bad for Demetra.

At Wednesday's ribbon ceremony in the Giant City School yard, Diana Lomax, president of Giant City School Progress Association, said the children are coping with the situation well. Lomax told children the ribbons are a way to let people know that they have not forgotten Demetra.

"Since you were Demetra's friends and classmates, we (GCSPA and the school faculty), thought you would like to help us put some ribbons on the trees," Lomax said to the children.

Lomax told the children to remember what the ribbons stand for in case someone asked them.

The third graders are also writing notes to Demetra and making cards for Demetra's mother, Lomax said.

Giant City School Board President Bob Buffington, said they have offered Demetra's mother any help she may need.

Police said, as of 2 p.m. Wednesday, Moro was still at large.

Mobil Corp. goes to Moscow

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - Mobil Corp. said Wednesday it is launching a joint venture to build as many as 50 gas stations in and near Moscow.

Gail Campbell Woolley, a Mobil spokeswoman, said the project with a Russian company, Bakar, will be the largest of its kind by a foreign company in the Russian capital.

"We see this as a significant opportunity," Woolley said. "With privatization in Russia and an increase in the number of cars, we expect major growth in that market."

An Italian oil company, Agip, and a Greek fuel supply company, Kommos, already have entered the Moscow market, but on a much smaller scale, Woolley said.

Mobil is the second-largest oil company in the United States. Bakar, its partner in the Moscow venture, will supply fuel from a Moscow refinery.

The two companies so far have signed only a memorandum of understanding, Mobil said, and many details of the venture have yet to be worked out. Financial details were not disclosed.

Moscow has an estimated 300 gas stations, far too few for a city of more than 10 million people. Many of these are state-owned filling stations, notorious for their poor service. But a number of privately owned stations providing better service have opened in recent months.

The Mobil joint venture would open its first station in Moscow in 1996.

age from air strikes and artillery attacks was considerable, although full assessments were still being made. Targets reported hit included Lukavica, the Serbs' principal military barracks just south of Sarajevo, and a key munitions factory in the central Bosnian town of Vogosca. — While allied officials boasted of the mission's success, one French Mirage fighter was apparently shot down by rebel Serbian gunners. The fate of the two-man crew was unknown. And three Spaniards who were members of an European Union monitoring team, as well as two of their employees, were reported killed when their armored vehicle was struck by shells in a Serb-held suburb of Sarajevo. — Bosnian Serb leaders reacted defiantly, but several hours into the air raids, Bosnian Serb army commander Gen. Ratko Mladic contacted U.N. officials to seek a cease-fire. Western sources said Mladic offered to withdraw his big guns from around Sarajevo, but U.N. officials laid down more conditions before they would agree to call off their jets, the sources said. — Arriving in the Serbian capital of Belgrade, a U.S. delegation pressed ahead with a peace initiative, hoping Wednesday's attacks will strengthen, not derail, the effort. There were indications that the Serbs had agreed among themselves on new responses to the latest international proposals. — While President Clinton said he hoped the military action had taught the Bosnian Serbs that their quest for a "Greater Serbia" had reached its end and U.N. secretary-general Boutros Boutros-Ghali said the mission has his full support, Russian President Boris N. Yeltsin contended the bombardment would not help bring peace to the Balkans and he condemned it.

Wednesday, U.N. and NATO forces continued attacks against Bosnian Serb military targets, pummeling strategic sites such as command centers, ammunition dumps and individual tanks and artillery.

Officials said successive waves of NATO warplanes—both from air bases in nearby Italy and from the U.S. aircraft carrier Theodore Roosevelt—flew repeated missions near Sarajevo and other cities such as Tuzla and Mostar.

Both NATO and U.S. officials refused to disclose many details of the assault and its effects, assuring that the information might be of use to the Bosnian Serbs.

There were mixed reports about the extent of the damage from Wednesday raids.

While NATO officials proclaimed the missions largely successful, Pentagon officials were cautious.

There was no immediate indication how long the allies would continue their attacks, but a senior U.S. military official said NATO was prepared to sustain the bombing for at least two more days.

In the first allied casualty of the week's operations, a French Mirage 2000 fighter-bomber—one of the more than 60 warplanes involved in the 200-plus sorties flown against targets in Bosnia—was shot down by anti-aircraft missiles near the Bosnian Serb's self-styled capital of Pale.

Initial indications were that the pilots ejected safely, and French Defense Minister Charles Millon vowed to do everything in his power to rescue them.

NATO immediately launched search-and-rescue teams.

Pentagon officials also confirmed that they have ordered another dozen or so warplanes to fly from bases in the United States and Europe to the area around Bosnia to augment existing U.S. air teams.

Wednesday, British, French and Dutch artillery joined the assault around Sarajevo, firing some 600 rounds against Bosnian Serb gun emplacements and ammunition dumps.

At the United Nations, secretary-general Boutros Boutros-Ghali reported that French Gen. Bernard Janvier, the commander of all U.N. forces in the Balkans, said he demanded that Gen. Ratko Mladic, commander of the Bosnian Serb army, withdraw all his heavy weapons beyond a 12-mile exclusion zone that surrounds Sarajevo.

Although he stated the United Nations was not at war with the Bosnian Serbs, Boutros-Ghali warned that "if they persist in their unacceptable attacks upon civilians, the United Nations will continue to support NATO's use of air power."

Late Wednesday, Mladic rejected the U.N. demands, according to reports from Pale.

Allied leaders launched their military assault before dawn Wednesday in reprisal for the lethal shelling Monday of Sarajevo that killed at least 37 people, most civilians, and injured 80 others.

The marketplace attack was blamed on the Bosnian Serbs. It was one of a series of incidents that has drawn condemnation from the world community; the rebel Serbs power to rescue them.

NATO immediately launched search-and-rescue teams.

Pentagon officials also confirmed that they have ordered another dozen or so warplanes to fly from bases in the United States and Europe to the area around Bosnia to augment existing U.S. air teams.

Williams called the deal with I.B.M. a "long shot." He said the second option is more realistic.

In addition to new campus computer technologies, the computer lab that was formerly in room 9B in the C building has been moved to room 112 in the CTC building. The lab was moved in order to make room for a new media center.

Cosgrove said many of the students do not know about the new lab at CTC. She said the lab there is usually less crowded than the lab in Faner and is much closer for some of the students.

"The lab is really close to Thompson Point, and that would be ideal for them (the students)," Cosgrove said.

Carnival of Craziness

Carnival offers fun for entire community

By Mary Rose Roberts
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Campus may become a maze of madness when the Carnival of Craziness takes over the Student Center at 7 p.m. tonight.

Admission fee is $2 for access to all carnival activities including musical acts, karaoke, skill tests, palm reading, and comedian Tommy Blaze. The rookie of the festival, "Kids Storyland" is a program focusing on children's education.

Yvette Gray, director of the Student Programming Council campus events, said comedian Tommy Blaze will entertain crowds tonight at Ballroom D in the Student Center at 8 p.m. He has appeared on comedy specials including "An Evening at The Improv" and "Showtime's Young Comedian's Showcase."

"He reflects on the ironic aspect of dating life and female/male relations," Gray said.

Starbilly and judge nothing's rock-n-roll will resound in the Ballrooms at 9 p.m. Also, the Groove Merchants will perform jazz in the Big Muddy Room. Karaoke will be in the International Lounge from 7 to 11 p.m.

The bungee run is a novelty consisting of a rope, the power of the runner and a snap that brings them back to the starting part. It is similar to a bungee jump, but no heights are involved. It is located in Ballroom B from 7 to 11 p.m.

If you are looking for action, "Pulp Fiction" starring John Travolta, Uma Thurman and Samuel L. Jackson, will show in the Student Center Auditorium on the second floor at 8 p.m.

Al Harper, WIDB program director, said the rap contest starts at 10 p.m. in the Roman Room.

Individuals will have 30 seconds to a minute to give their best hip-hop lyrics to pre-chosen music by Big L's song "MVP, Most Valuable Poet." First, second and third place will be awarded cash prizes. Consolation prizes include free CDs and cassettes.

"Bring your friends," Harper said, "because you win by crowd approval."

Gray said Helen Taylor will read palms and predict the future of many students and community members in the study lounge at 8 p.m.

This is the first involvement by WSU in the Carnival of Craziness. Gray said she approached Beverly Love-Wallace, the "Ready to Learn" and outreach coordinator for WSU-TV, and asked her to make a presentation for the family with her program "Ready to Learn" at 8 p.m. in the Ohio Room.

"We are targeting older children because of the later hours the event is held," Wallace said.

Ghostwriter, part of the "Ready to Learn" program, is a friend in a computer that assists children in problem solving. It is a commitment WSU believes will help children prepare for the educational competition in the 20th century. The program gives children the option to act like detectives by leaving clues about certain events.

"Let's say one of the programs is growing a garden," Wallace began. "Children become sick and through clues, the child using the program will discover toxic waste had been buried there."

Another program shown is "Reading Rainbow" which has been hosted by LeVar Burton for the past 11 years. Wallace said children come onto the program and present their favorite books that coincide with the topic of the day.

"It features certain books each episode and encourages reading," she said.

Wallace said "Where in the World is Carmen Sandiego?" strengthens children's knowledge of geography and other cultures. Rock-appella, the singing group that performs the show's theme song, will be on hand during the activities.

"They learn about geography, customs and people," she said.

"Puppet Place" is a puppet show focusing on the diversity of the world's cultures using characters like an Apache Indian named Sky, Leon, a African-American and Ben, a boy in a wheelchair, Wallace said.

Paula Todd, children's librarian for the Carbondale Public library, will tell stories as well as sing songs and the SIU Bookstore will put on a show called "Rabbit Ears Rainbow."

Louisville's Starbilly slugging its way to a record deal with appeal

By Dave Katzman
DE Arts/Entertainment Editor

Sometimes, somebody does something so excellent that they have to live up to those expectations for the rest of their lives.

That is the case for Peter Searcy, vocalist of Carnival of Craziness headliner Starbilly. A former member of the legendary Louisville punk outfit Squirrel Bait, Searcy said that many of his old fans expect Starbilly to be nothing but a sequel of his former band, and the necessary emotional ingredients that propelled Squirrel Bait to cult status have somewhat faded.

"I'm 27, not 17," he said, "I don't have the same angst. I still have plenty of angst, but it doesn't always come out in the music."

In addition to Squirrel Bait, Starbilly also features ex-members of Big Wheel and Fanci Panz on the other instruments.

Starbilly's clean heavy pop sound provides the perfect backdrop for Searcy's voice (rated as the second best in rock by "Spin" magazine, much to Searcy's dismay). With all the feeling of Eddie Vedder minus the whining, many who hear Starbilly end up dropping the dreaded "P J" words in their descriptions.

"I don't think that's a bad thing," he said. "I'd rather sound like Pearl Jam than Journey, but there's no attempt for us to sound like that."

While Starbilly does bear a resemblance to the heroes of grunge, its sound is far removed from Seattle. The instruments are simultaneously soft and heavy, sort of like a pillow with a wooden core — definitely major-label material. But it is Searcy's voice that steals the attention of the listener.

"I'm really influenced by the guy who played Judas on the "Jesus Christ Superstar" album," he said. "I didn't realize it until recently."

Starbilly's CD, "Master Vibrator," was released in March, less than a year after the band's formation. In the five months it has graced the shelves of record stores across the country, it has sold over 6,000 units, a very good showing for an independent release.

Starbilly was in an Atlanta studio last week recording a demo for MCA Records, one of several labels that have been shadowing the band.

Searcy said the prospect of signing to a major is exciting, but he has his reservations.

"It looks good, but those things could turn to shit," he said. "I want to be very cautious about this. I don't want to be a tax write-off."

"I see so many bands that suck on major labels, and I don't want some indie band to look at us and think that."

Searcy said he is very happy with his present label. Buzz Records out of Chicago. He said Buzz splits all profits evenly with the band, something he has never experienced in his musical career.

"They have a great attitude about music," he said. "I like their approach and their ideas about music."

I'm sure Buzz feels the same way about Starbilly and will be say to see them go.

Starbilly plays at 10 p.m. tonight during the Carnival of Craziness in the Student Center Ballrooms. Judge nothing will open. Cover is $2.

judge nothing places genrefication on trial regardless of what the critics have to say.

"Judge nothing, lest thou be judged" is an old adage that could very well be adopted by Alton's judge nothing, which has the formidable task of opening up for Starbilly during tonight's Carnival of Craziness.

Judge nothing was formed during the eighth grade tenure of drummer Andy Dykeman and vocalist/guitarist Doug. The duo, along with a changing menagerie of bassists, covered its favorite rock songs of the time.

A revelation came to the group in the form of punk rock. Dykeman said judge nothing saw its calling when the band realized it could play better than most of the punk rockers out there.

To this day, Dykeman associates the band with punk rock.

"I think punk rock was more of an attitude and a fashion statement than the music for ourselves," Dykeman, baccalaureate of philosophy, said. "We're not doing it for the money, we're doing it for the music."

That's a common sentiment of bands trying to ride the tide stirred up by the success of watered-down "punk" bands such as Green Day and Rancid.

But Dykeman refuses to stamp the punk rock seal on his band's music.

"We just kind of play the music," he said. "We've never sat down and said, 'let's do a ska song' or 'let's do a thrash song.' It just happens."

Dykeman cites the influences of

The Wright stuff

Michelle Wright

By Dave Katzman
DE Arts/Entertainment Editor

Michelle Wright has always been around music. As a child growing up in Merlin, Ontario, a community of 600 residents 45 minutes north of Detroit, she watched her parents practice and perform country music on the weekends, occasionally joining them on stage.

As she grew older, she continued to sing and began to develop a following. But her eyes were cast south of the border toward her goal — Nashville, Tennessee.

"To come to Nashville was always a vision," she said. "If you're a country singer from Europe or Canada, you set your sights on Nashville."

In 1990, part of her vision came to be reality. Arista Records' Nashville section signed Wright, and released her two albums, "Michelle Wright" and "Now & Then" over the next couple of years.

Wright said she was thrilled to achieve the echelon of success associated with moving south to Nashville.

"It's been a big part of my hopes and dreams," she said. "Now, it's real and it's a privilege."

"Now & Then" has gone double-platinum in Canada (200,000 units), and she is only 25,000 away from her first American gold record (500,000 units).

Wright said that her career is much different in America.

"I have a different level of career in Canada," she said. "I've been there for many years. I'm still just breaking through in America. I'm a headliner in Canada and still an opener in America."

Wright said her writing style is considered non-traditional by country standards, moving away from typical topics.

"The biggest challenge I face is choosing to approach my life and career as I do," she said. "I don't try to write about typical country in the typical country way. It's a little eclectic. I hope as I break through in America, I will be accepted for it."

Wright said Arista has a large influence on the material she is allowed to record.

"We're selling a product and there's certain restrictions on country music," she said. "The label has asked me to stay within the boundaries. As you break through, you are given more freedom to create."

Her current album, "The Reasons Why," has not been released in America, but it also has gone double-platinum in Canada.

Wright said that in addition to singing, she is interested in pursuing an acting career.

"Like Reba (McEntire, a fellow country singer who is also an actor), I wouldn't want to limit myself, so I've got to give it a shot" she said. "I believe I have the potential to do these things, so I want to find out."

But don't expect Wright to trade in her microphone and guitar for scripts and cameras anytime soon.

"I think that I will always keep making music," she said. "It's a real passion for me to express myself in song."

In addition to hosting next month's Canadian Country Music Awards, Wright is up for three awards: Entertainer of the year, female vocalist of the year and album of the year for "The Reasons Why." The show will air on TNN Sept. 25.

Wright is finishing up work on her upcoming album, tentatively titled "I'm Not Afraid," slated for a February release.

Michelle Wright opens for Clay Walker at 8 p.m. Saturday at the Du Quoin State Fair. Tickets are $16 for seats close to the stage and $14 for seats further out.

Sen. Bradley slams Congress; state voters cheer for more

The Washington Post

DOWN THE SHORE, N.J.—In one of the timeless rituals of late summer at the New Jersey shore, Bill Bradley, the former basketball star who now aspires to be a former senator, walks the beaches every summer from Cape May north to Sandy Hook, mixing with thousands of sun-soaked constituents. This week, with trademark devotion to routine, he materialized on the horizon again, a towering figure in knit shorts, a faded shirt and old New York Knicks socks, now slouched terminally around his ankles.

But this year's walk, which ended Wednesday, was anything but routine. It was Bradley's first unscripted appearance since announcing he plans to leave the Senate because America's "broken" politics neglect real people and real needs. While handfuls of constituents approached him in past years, dozens mobbed him this week on beach after beach saying the Democrat had spoken for them, handing him babies to hold in snapshots, declaring themselves ready to follow him to a third party— or anywhere.

In a powerful measure of plummeting voter faith in the political system, Bradley, who almost lost in 1990 to a then-obscure Christine Todd Whitman, appears to have achieved the consummate connection with voters by declaring he doesn't want the office they awarded him.

The senator had little in the way of solid proposals to offer—and the beachgoers in turn seemed unsure what they wanted other than for him to run for president. And so he and they traded emotions more than ideas. It was as if he had become a giant projection screen for thousands of individual hopes and frustrations about the political system; the government spends too much, the government doesn't spend enough, affirmative action is bad, affirmative action is necessary, all I hear is Packwood and Whitewater but what about my job and my health insurance?

"I came here to commend you," said Roger Feldman, a small business owner, who as a Knicks fan in 1969 named his first boy "Bradley" for the all-pro forward.

"You took a step. You're committed like I've never seen you committed. Now get angry. Say to both parties, 'I'm not gonna take it any more. This is bull The most profound thing you can do for this country is beat 'em on your own.'"

"I didn't realize it at the time," Bradley said later, "but the decision not to run again kind of opened up a willingness on the part of people to hear some of the things I was trying to say. It's like: 'He's not just saying this to get my vote.'"

Prudential's penalties continue to grow

The Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK—Prudential Securities' huge penalties from its limited partnership debacle have grown again as a federal judge Wednesday cleared the way for a $110 million class-action settlement on behalf of most investors not already covered by earlier awards.

Prudential spokesman Charles Perkins said Prudential's fines, penalties and settlements totaled in excess of $1.5 billion—not counting the latest settlement.

The latest settlement came in a civil racketeering class-action pending before U.S. District Judge Milton Pollack in Manhattan. The suit was filed as a kind of "catch-all" case to cover people who, for a variety of reasons, weren't covered by an earlier settlement between Prudential and the Securities and Exchange Commission, or by other class action settlements involving specific partnerships.

Clinton Krislov, one of the lead lawyers for investors in the suit, estimated that the settlement would cover 100,000 people.

In an interview, Pollack said the settlement covers a large number of investors who had never bothered to file claims against Prudential. "This is supposed to reach all those who either have not thought about their losses, or having thought about it didn't want to go to the trouble or expense of pursuing a claim, the judge said.

In a written statement, Perkins said, "We believe this is a fair resolution to resolve remaining claims from investors in limited partnerships."

Although Prudential would like it to, Wednesday's settlement won't end all claims pending against it from its partnership disaster. Investors who are still pursuing individual lawsuits or private arbitration cases may still go forward with their claims, although they will have to send in notices "opting out" of the class action settlement by an Oct. 30 deadline, Krislov said. He said, however, that the settlement won't have any effect on investors who still have claims pending on the settlement pool administered by the SEC.

During the 1980s, investors poured about $8 billion into some 700 limited partnerships sold by Prudential. The company marketed them aggressively to retirees and other small investors, often falsely claiming that the investments were safe alternatives to bank certificates of deposit. Most of the partnerships produced losses.

In 1993, Prudential settled with the SEC, and agreed to set up an open-ended fund to cover claims by investors. In 1994, it reached an unusual settlement of federal criminal charges, agreeing to pay an additional $330 million into the SEC fund and admitting criminal wrongdoing in exchange for being put on probation for three years.

Japanese scholars to visit center

By Lori D. Clark
Daily Egyptian Reporter

Seventeen visitors from Japan, representing 10 Japanese colleges and universities, will be visiting sites in the United States which were important to John Dewey's life and career.

This visit includes SIUC on Tuesday, Sept. 5 because it is an international center for Dewey studies, Larry Hickman, director of the Center for Dewey Studies said.

Hickman said following the death of Dewey's widow, Dewey's papers, letters, manuscripts and other items were deposited in the SIUC Special Collections.

Some of Dewey's collected works have been edited at the Center for Dewey Studies, and some of the letters are currently being edited at SIUC, Hickman said.

The Japanese representatives are not coming to SIUC for research or study, but to find out what information is available on Dewey.

Japanese education was quite influenced by Dewey, and Japan holds a great interest in him, Barbara Levine, textual editor for the Center for Dewey Studies said.

Hickman said Dewey is one of the best known philosophers in America.

"He is one of two or three of the most important philosophers and educators," Hickman said. "He was active in the political and social life of his time. He influenced the thoughts of presidents and statesmen."

Dewey was active in founding the American Civil Liberties Union, the New York Teachers Union and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Hickman said.

"They're just coming to see what we have and to get a feel for Dewey and what is going on in Dewey research," Levine said.

Levine said a great resurgence of interest in Dewey is occurring because what he had to say during his lifetime, is relevant to the problems of society today.

Other stops on the representatives visit to the U.S. include Burlington, Vt., the University of Chicago and the University of Vermont, Hickman said.

Those involved in the Center for Dewey Studies said they are excited about the visit.

"We're looking forward to meeting the colleagues from Japan. We hope they'll like their visit and come back again," said Hickman.

¹Yes, you wouldn't give your money away to just anyone, would you? Neither can we. Offers expire October 31, 1995. No payment of principal or interest will be required for 90 days. Interest accruing during the 90-day period will be added to the principal and will bear interest which will be included in the repayment schedule. *The monthly payment quoted above is an estimate based on a total loan amount of $1,212.98, which includes a sample purchase price of $1,099 for the Power Macintosh 7100 CD system shown above. The total loan amount also includes a 6.0% loan origination fee. Interest is variable based on the Commercial Paper Rate plus a spread of 6.5%. For example, the month of August 1995 had an interest rate of 12.21% with an annual percentage rate (APR) of 13.97%. Monthly payments may vary depending on actual computer type, terms, total loan amount, state and local sales taxes, and a change in the monthly variable interest rate. Prequalification expedites the loan process, but does not guarantee final loan approval. Subsequent acceptable verification documents must be received before your loan is approved. punk-rockers The Descendents and All on judge nothing's of its music, influences that occasionally peek through in its music.

judge nothing's four-month old CD, "I'm a Big Girl Now," roller-coasts through a variety of tempos. One minute, Doug will croon over soft instrumentation. The next, the disc explodes like a shaken-up pop bottle.

This variety of sounds has landed the group prime opening slots for some of today's most popular acts, including Green Day, Bad Brains and Fugazi.

One may think that its impressive resume might have altered the way judge nothing perceives itself, but Dykeman said he knows his place in the scheme of things.

"We're all just songwriters and musicians and we're not that special," he said.

Some critics disagree with Dykeman's modesty. judge nothing has received glowing reviews from such national publications as "Billboard," "Alternative Press" and "Maximumrockroll." The band has been heard regularly on radio in several larger markets, and a constant touring schedule has forced judge nothing down the waiting throats of the music-loving public.

judge nothing's modesty has led to the incorrect grammar that forms its name. Dykeman said the lower casing of the name reflects its unimportance.

"It just seems more unlike a big rock thing," he said. "It's trying to not put too much in the name."

International customs up for review

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—Clinton administration officials have rejected two vice presidential task force recommendations that would reduce customs inspections at international airports and create an "open border" with Canada in an effort aimed at eliminating delays at customs checkpoints.

U.S. Customs Commissioner George Weise said the federal government has considered many ideas intended to improve entry and exit procedures at international portals, but relaxing border inspections is one of the bad ideas offered by the National Performance Review, a task force on reinventing government headed by Vice President Al Gore.

"That's just not reasonable," Weise said. "It's not doable at any time in the foreseeable future. It's kind of pie in the sky and it's not being considered seriously."

Federal officials Wednesday unveiled details of the task force's accepted proposals affecting customs and immigration policies. Miami International Airport, which has been designated as a federal "reinvention lab," will test the new law enforcement practices aimed at speeding travelers through the nation's busy international airports.

Customs officials said the new procedures at the Miami airport will allow federal inspection agents to collect information about passengers before they arrive at immigration stations in the airport and help law enforcement officers detect passengers or materials that should not enter the country. The interagency test will comprise officials from Customs, the Immigration and Naturalization Service, the Agricultural, Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, the Passport Agency, the Fish and Wildlife Service, domestic and foreign airlines, as well as local and regional governmental groups.

Bob Stone, the task force's project director, said the Miami airport test, if successful, could be expanded to other domestic ports-of-entry, including Los Angeles International Airport, within 18 to 24 months.

"We're going to run our offense, that doesn't change anything we do.

"You try to wear him into the situation, but Reggie's proved to be a gamer, a guy that comes along in a game situation and takes on challenges," he said.

"We're going to be smart as coaches yet at the same time we are not going to hold anything back because he's a freshman."

Darnell Hendricks, the Dawgs strong safety, said the team is very excited about the Salukis chances this season.

"I know good things are going to happen to this team this year," he said.

"It's hard to put into words, but I get so excited when I think about this season that I get hot flashes and goose bumps on my arms."

Senior center Larry Mullins said the squad has a lot more talent than when they met SEMO a year ago, in which the Indians won 24-14 at McAndrew Stadium.

"We're a totally different team this season," he said.

"We actually have backups at every position, and I mean good backups.

"That means we're all getting pressure everyday in practice and that forces us to practice better and improve daily. And, there's no doubt about it, the first game is a key to the whole season."

Kickoff at Houck Stadium is at 6 p.m.

Government, possibly in October.

Several benefits will come as a direct result of this decision. The club will face tougher competition. Many of the teams played are from Big 10 schools, such as Iowa and Michigan State. The team is also guaranteed an eight-game spring schedule, with four games at home. Burkott said that the expanded schedule will result in "good exposure". Being on a young team, the players also hope to improve their skills and gain experience.

Members believe that the exposure from league play will increase school-based support and funds.

Players appear to be excited about joining the league. Burkott said, "It's everyone's dream to play Big 10 teams."

Wake up

Young caliber season.

Finally, wild card fever has hit baseball, and it is good.

The Chicago Tribune's Bernie Linicome said it best in his column on August 28.

"Wild-card fever. I got it, I think. I could practically see it hanging over Wrigley Field Sunday. Or maybe it was just an atmospheric inversion. This is so new, it is easy to be fooled."

The Cubs aren't the only team to give their fans some excitement for the first time in years.

Philadelphia, San Diego, Texas, Seattle, and Milwaukee all have a shot at making the playoffs.

That's a lot of happy fans that should be happy, if they weren't so worried about contracts and negotiations.

Baseball put life back into the game by introducing the "new" playoff system.

I think it's the best thing to happen since round wheels.

There is nothing more exciting than having your favorite team in the playoffs, and nothing more special than smelling that cool, crisp October air in your favorite stadium.

So, to all the fans out there, I say "Wake up."

When was the last time you checked the score box?

Do you even know if your team is in contention, or are you too worried about grudges and money?

Chad Anderson is a sophomore in journalism from Roscoe.

of the level of volleyball I want them to play on a day-in, day-out basis.

"Every match will be a tough fight and I am looking forward to that kind of challenge because as a coach it is up to me to have the team ready—and we're too much of a veteran team not to be."

Senior outside hitter Alicia Hansen said this year's squad has the most talent she has seen since joining the team in 1992.

She shares the same optimism toward this weekend's tournament as her teammates do.

"This season is going to be tough, but we have had a good preseason and we have been practicing really hard," she said.

"We are loaded with talent." Hansen said it is important for the team to stay mentally prepared as well.

"We are looking forward to USC, but we are not going to the tournament just to play them."

Alicia Hansen
SIUC outside hitter

"We are looking forward to USC but we are not going to the tournament just to play them," she said.

"We have two more games after them."

Following Friday's match against the Trojans, SIUC will face the Wildcats of Northwestern on Saturday followed by Loyola on Sunday.

The netters stay on the road facing Loyola Sept. 3 and Evansville on Sept. 6 before hosting Indiana St. and Austin Peay in the Saluki invitational beginning Sept. 8.

New Refund Policy Revised Deadlines to Withdraw or Drop Courses

A new refund policy approved by the Board of Trustees authorizes a pro-rata refund for students officially withdrawing from the University through 60 percent of semester. The policy also changes the deadlines for withdrawing from all classes or dropping courses and receiving a refund.

Students 'Officially Withdrawing' from the University:

Duration of Course

8-16 weeks
4-7 weeks
less than 4 weeks

Last Date to Withdraw to Receive a Full Refund

Last day of 2nd week
Last day of 1st week
Day of First Class Meeting

Students who withdraw from the University after the full refund period stated above will receive a pro-rata refund through the 60 percent of the duration of their course enrollment period. An administrative fee will be assessed to all students who withdraw from the University and receive a pro-rata refund. The amount of the fee will be the lesser of 5 percent of all assessed charges, or $100.

Students Dropping Courses, but remaining enrolled at the University:

Students dropping courses must drop the course by the above deadlines for a full refund. Students who drop a course after the above deadline, but remain enrolled at the University, will not receive any refund and will receive a "W" or a final grade. October 16th remains the deadline for dropping a full semester length course without a final grade (A, B, C, etc.).

Dawgs to circle wagons around Indians

By Doug Durso
DE Sports Editor

The second year of SIUC football head coach Shawn Watson's era begins tonight, and optimism is at a high level — even against a nationally-ranked opponent.

The Salukis travel to Southeast Missouri State to take on the 20th-ranked Indians.

Watson, however, is not worried with SEMO's ranking or playing on the Indian's home field.

"We're concerned with them across the board, yet I think if you believe in what you're doing with your kids and the program you're going to be a concern," he said. "I think SEMO is a great opponent. I'm not taking anything away from them by saying that."

"I'm more worried about Shawn Watson's house than I am about somebody else's."

The Indians return 16 starters from a team that went 7-5 a year ago, and Watson said their experience will be a factor.

"SEMO has an experienced football team back," he said. "I've heard and read and seen a lot of things written about their defensive front being inexperienced, but you look at it. All those kids played last year."

Offensively the Indians will start senior Shane Kennedy at quarterback. Kennedy is coming off a fractured collarbone, which forced him to miss the final six games a year ago. SEMO is deep at receiver, returning its top three of last year, including Jon Riley who caught 31 passes last season.

"I think they have guys who can make plays for them in the receiving corps," Watson said. "I've seen both quarterbacks play last year, I saw one play and we experienced the other guy — and they can make plays."

"I think they have a very good offensive line. Their one question mark probably is going to be the tailback position, but that kid was like third in the country in return yards, so he is a great player."

While SEMO is going with a veteran at the quarterback position the Dawgs will counter with Reggie Kennedy, a redshirt freshman, who will be taking his first collegiate snap.

Watson said Kennedy being a freshman will not interrupt the Saluki offense in any way.

"I've been there before," he said.

No Fear: SIUC volleyball not phased by USC match

By Micheal Deford
Daily Egyptian Reporter

The SIUC volleyball team begins its 1995 campaign this weekend when they travel to South Bend, Ind., to face the 12th ranked University of Southern California Trojans at the Notre Dame Invitational.

Coach Sonya Locke said she is not intimidated in any way when it comes to meeting a nationally ranked team such as the four-time national champion Trojans.

"I don't see this match with USC as a new challenge," Locke said. "Every time we step on the court it's a new challenge."

"I am not going to turn this match into a life threatening situation."

Locke said SIUC needs to play a team with the caliber of USC, and is looking forward to the opportunity.

Locke's players echo her attitude about the match.

looking forward to the competition.

"Playing USC will be great because it gives us an opportunity to play a team we have never played before," Herdes said. "It will give us an idea of where we are and what we need to improve on for conference matches."

Despite a talented and tough conference this year, Herdes said she is very optimistic about the '95 season and very confident in the team as well.

"We have a lot of talent this year," she said. "We had a good preseason and we are very confident."

As junior middle blocker Jodi Revoir puts it, this season will be an all out war.

"There are a lot of great teams in the conference this year and it's going to be tough," Revoir said. "The match against USC will show us where we are as a team."

In addition to USC, the netters will face eight non-conference opponents this season, including five teams from last year's 48-team NCAA tournament. SIUC will face Memphis, Arkansas St. and will have two matches against Missouri Valley Conference rival Northern Iowa. Northern Iowa was picked No. 1 in the MVC preseason coaches poll.

Locke said the talent that SIUC will face this year will be an incentive for the team to play better.

"I'm really excited to play teams the caliber of USC and Northwestern," Locke said. "Our players are going to get a taste

Rise and shine: Baseball's back and it a good time to be a fan

With everyone pouting and complaining about "the strike", greedy players, and how poor of role models there are in baseball, I thought it was only appropriate to say, "Wake up."

This is a great time to be a baseball fan. Some of the best competition and play in the past decade is going on right now. Some of this is due to the new divisional alignments and wild card races, but hey a chance for the playoffs never hurt anyone's competition level.

One reason for some of the great play is the abundance of young, talented players. Chipper Jones and Hideo Nomo are both having great seasons competing for Rookie of the Year honors. Tim Salmon, Chuck Knoblauch, Frank Thomas, Mike Piazza, Derick Bell, and just about anyone in an Indians uniform are having fantastic seasons and pounding the ball around the diamond and out of it.

The veteran players are also showing some outstanding leadership. This is a great season for breaking records. Eddie Murray is quietly closing in on 500 home runs, and showing the youngsters in the clubhouse what a Hall of Famer is. Who would have thought Murray's name would be on the same list as Williams, Mantle, Ruth, and Aaron? Greg Maddux is trying to win his fourth consecutive Cy Young award. Hell, his name might as well be Greg "Cy Young" Maddux. Edgar Martinez is putting together a great season in Seattle, and Tony Gwynn is going almost unnoticed with another banner year.

The biggest surprise in baseball, I can't decide on. When was it decided that the Red's, Rockies, Red Sox, and Angels are great teams?

My basement bargain pick of the century: Tim Wakefield. He gets released by the Pirates, and then, leads Boston's staff with a Cy

Lacrosse club bound for national collegiate league

By Melonie Gray
Daily Egyptian Reporter

SIUC's Lacrosse Club received a welcomed surprise this year. The club has been invited to join the National Collegiate Lacrosse League.

The club has only been in existence for about one year and until now, the members have been forced to play games at smaller schools throughout Illinois.

SIUC's Lacrosse Club was called to join the National Collegiate Lacrosse League after someone from University of Illinois spotted the team. There is wide-spread support for the club's move, most of which comes from teams played in the past.

Doug Burkott, a member of the Lacrosse Club said the club is in the process of becoming a Registered Student Organization. The issue will be handled at the next meeting of the Undergraduate Student
