The Carbondale City Council is in the final stages of considering a new $1 million in tax-exempt revenue bonds for the development of a west-side shopping complex. The project will be backed by a majority of the council despite unanswered questions as to its advisability.

The proposed development, to be built south of the Ramada Inn, will include a Super-X drugstore, a Kroger, and an Elks Lodge.

During the planning, the council has continually reaffirmed its intention to make that commercial retail development the first recipient of city-issued economic development bonds. The shopping center purportedly will increase the city's sales tax by an estimated $400,000 per year. It will produce millions of dollars in additional annual retail sales and help establish Carbondale as the retail center of Southern Illinois.

However, the council is apparently overlooking a number of problems with the project, including failure of the project to meet the council's own standards for such projects and refusal of K-Mart to submit final plans before the council's first reading of the proposed measure.

The jury selection lasted the entire day as each prospective juror answered questions from Judge Loren Lewis, special prosecutor from Chicago and defense attorney Charles Gorton.

Schwartz expressed disappointment with the rate at which the selection progressed. "It's going a little slower than I had hoped," Schwartz said. "But we have to be careful about this thing."

White faces three official misconduct and one felony theft charge. Two of the official misconduct charges are linked to White taking $100 worth of jail food and that he took 1,060 gallons of gasoline from a county pump for his own personal use.

The third misconduct charge stems from White's alleged destruction of his own jail records in connection with a trial arrest.

The felony theft charge relates to the alleged gasoline use. Earlier charges of official misconduct and misdemeanor theft were dismissed by Lewis for technical reasons prior to the trial.

Saudis raise oil price to match OPEC level

BALI, Indonesia (AP) — Saudi Arabia, in a bid for OPEC unity, will raise oil prices by 42 cents a barrel Monday by a reported 7 percent, to $32 a barrel, and match the prices of other members of the world oil cartel. Further price increases were possible Tuesday.

Saudi Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani announced the increase on the first day of an 18-member cartel meeting on this tropical east Asian isle. The meeting took place behind closed doors between the two member nations, Iran and Iraq, and he made the gathering unusually tense.

Yamani said he would not reveal the amount of the Saudi increase until after he consulted with other OPEC members. But Yemen Oil Minister Humberto Calderon Berti and industry sources said the increase was $2 a barrel, to $32 for a 42-gallon barrel of Saudi light crude. The price hike is close to New York industry newsletter Petroleum Intelligence Newsweekly's reported 5 percent.

The Saudi boost was a unilateral move, and Calderon Berti and other oil ministers said they hoped to work out a general 1981 pricing agreement Tuesday for the entire 11-member Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Iran's oil minister, Tayeh Abdul Karim, speculated the final price structure might raise the ceiling for higher-grade oil by 8 percent, to $40 a barrel from $32.

The $2 Saudi increase by itself will raise U.S. gasoline prices at the pump by an estimated 1 to 1 1/2 cents a gallon. Saudi Arabia produces 13 million barrels a day, 42 percent of OPEC's total, and supplies 8 percent of all oil imports to the United States.

At their last pricing meeting, three months ago in Vienna, Austria, the oil-exporting countries were unable to agree on a uniform price structure. Most members adopted a basic "benchmark" price of $32, but the Saudis held to $30.

Since then, the other members of the cartel had been pressuring the desert kingdom to bring its price in line with theirs.

Karim said the majority of OPEC members supported the $32 benchmark, although almost all wanted increases at the upper end of the price scale. The Iraqi said Libya and Algeria were pressing for an increase in the base price. Karim also said Iran wanted prices in the $34-$35 range.

The price hike is designed to bring Iran's creditors more revenue and to allow 12-week-old Ayatollah Param in a bid for Arab unity, raised $32 a barrel. to

Beirut, Lebanon (AP) — Iranian President Abassan Bani-Sadr said Monday that with the United States was responsible for any link between the American hostages and warned that any attempt to withhold evidence of Iranian assets would delay the crisis further.

Thursday night, the Iranian news agency reported the results of Sunday's hostage discussions between government representatives and the Algerians who are acting as intermediaries between Iran and the United States. The Magilp, an Iranian parliamentarian has asked for the return of our money and if there is any linkage between the American hostages and Algeria. This is not true. Bani-Sadr said. Iran's stayed away a news conference for foreign reporters in Tehran. "The principle reason for the delay is in the hands of those who hold real power in the United States," Bani-Sadr said.

President Carter ordered the freeing of all Iranian assets in U.S. banks abroad the Americans were captured by Iranian militant students 13 months ago.

Iran, which also demands return of the late Shah's wealth, last week rejected a reported $500 million fortune in the U.S. that the Shah left behind.

This point must be cleared up. Bani-Sadr said, "That is why they the U.S. government will return the money to us. We do not think our people will accept a solution which would result in the loss of one penny of their money."

EX-FBI officials fined, but not jailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A federal judge ordered fines — but no jail sentences — on Monday for two former FBI officials who approved illegal break-ins by private residences during the hunt in the early 1970s for radical opponents of the Vietnam War.

W. Mark Felt, once J. Edgar Hoover's principal deputy, and Edward S. Miller, former head of the FBI's intelligence division, were fined $5,000 and $3,000 respectively.

They were convicted of violating the civil rights of friends and relatives of the American underground, a leftist, occasionally violent offshoot of the anti-Vietnam War movement of the 1960s.

Last Thursday, identical charges were dropped against Patrick Gray, the acting FBI director when the break-ins took place in 1972 and '73. With Monday's sentence, the criminal case against the top FBI officials was concluded.

Felt and Miller could have been sent to prison for up to 15 years and fined $100,000 each on the 14 counts for political subversion.

Newspaper calls for calm in Poland

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Poland's Communist Party newspaper, appeared for calm Monday as hundreds of thousands of Poles gathered in Baltic port cities for ceremonies commemorating those killed by Polish troops that crushed worker uprisings 10 years ago.

Both the ruling Communist Party and the Solidarity union, which organized commemoration ceremonies for Tuesday and Wednesday, expressed fear that the emotional occasion could ignite new troubles in the tense nation.

The Soviet Union and Poland's Warsaw Pact allies have been alarmed by events in Poland and worried that Communist rule is being challenged by the new independent trade unions and by a clamor for political reforms. Western nations monitoring Soviet military activity on Poland's borders, have expressed fears that the Soviet Union might intervene to quell the unrest.

Day care center may reopen Wednesday if it gets an OK

By Melody Cook
Staff Writer

The Kurma C. Hayes child care center will be inspected Tuesday afternoon and if it passes inspection it will reopen Wednesday, City Manager Carroll Fry said Monday night.

The child care center was closed last Thursday by Fry for cleaning and sterilization after two children who attended there reportedly contacted a strain of meningitis, although later tests revealed only one of the youngsters had the disease.

Dr. Sigfried Wolff, Jackson County Health Department Director, said his department inspected the center at Fry’s request. It was performed by the department Thursday morning when the center first closed. Wolff said the inspection team was also requested to check for violations of general health and cleanliness standards.

He said violations were found, but they were unrelated to the meningitis cases and were not serious. The center was told by the health department to “clean them up,” but was not instructed to remain closed because of them.

Wolff said since the city manager ordered the center to be closed for precautionary cleaning, he is the only one who can open it.

“We did not close it and we had no reason to close it,” Wolff said.

The two children who contacted the disease, a 19-month-old girl and a 20-month-old boy, had been hospitalized in the Memorial Hospital of Carbondale for what was called a press conference on Wednesday confirmed bacterial meningitis caused by the organism Haemophilus influenzae.

Wolff said, however, that the pathologist from Memorial Hospital had called him Thursday morning after the press conference to say that the diagnosis of meningitis had not been confirmed yet because the culture tests on the bacteria had not been finished. Wolff said that when the tests were completed, only one of the children was found to have meningitis.

No other cases of meningitis have been reported to the health department. Wolff said.

Court gives itself hefty salary hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court gave its nine members, and all other federal judges, hefty pay raises Monday.

The high court ruled that Congress, once with the aid of former President Gerald R. Ford and once aided by President Carter, violated the Constitution by twice withholding previously enacted pay hikes for federal judges.

The decision raises the annual salary of Chief Justice Warren E. Burger, who wrote the court’s opinion, from $75,000 to $94,700.

The court’s eight other members got their salaries raised from $72,000 to $81,300.

According to the Administrative Office of the U.S. Courts, salaries for all federal trial judges were raised from $54,500 to $61,600, and all federal appeals court judge salaries rose from $47,500 to $51,400. The ruling affects 699 federal judgeships.

The court’s vote was 8-0. Justice Harry A. Blackmun did not participate in the decision for unannounced reasons.

All the judges involved would also have gotten raises under legislation hiking government salaries that the House had tried to push through before adjournment of the 96th Congress. Salaries of other federal employees are not affected by the Supreme Court ruling, however.

Burger’s 29-page opinion devoted seven pages to justifying why the Supreme Court should not have disqualified itself.

The court relied on an ancient legal doctrine, the “rule of necessity,” which allows federal courts to rule on subject matter — such as income taxes — affecting all federal judges.

In other matters Monday, the court:

— Refused to allow San Francisco school officials to set aside at least $25 percent of all new construction contracts for minority-owned businesses.

Student votes are important

This year, however, due to a new voting law passed by the Illinois legislature, city elections cannot and will not be held during the spring break period. My campaign seat on the city council is based on issues of concern for residents of the Carbondale area. We need aldermanic government to provide equitable representation on the city council for all of Carbondale. We need to attract light industry to Carbondale to provide jobs for the citizens of Carbondale, while protecting the quality of life in our community. Traffic congestion in Carbondale is a problem which demands greater attention. To what extent will the Illinois legislature respect Home Rule powers is a question which must be answered.

While some may attempt to label me as "the student candidate," the facts reveal that I have been both a student and a resident of Carbondale. Along with assisting with leasing at SIU, I represent my neighborhood on the city council and have served in the Student Senate. I was also a Daily Egyptian reporter active in the SIU administration.

After receiving a bachelor's degree at SIU-Carbondale, I have worked at minimum wage jobs and have had the opportunity to attempt to live a living from the income that I have made.

How many of our present candidates share with us the weight of life in Carbondale under our conditions of typical small-town life and have experienced those conditions, and I want to improve them. I believe that these experiences will enable me to represent all of Carbondale.

I urge all SIU students to agree with my view of Carbondale and our future. I urge that the effort to register and vote be made. Students can have a voice in city government, if they choose to speak up — and to be the student candidate for City Council.

When does human life begin?

I believe that these experiences will enable me to represent all of Carbondale.

The point is, there are no valid generalizations about some life being a complete mystery to us. All we can say about some individual cases which can only be a matter of opinion.

University needs to keep promises

In regard to Randy Roguski's letter in the Dec. 12 edition, 'Slu-C's housing allowance,' I was pleased to hear that the university's new combined salary will be comparable to what other state institutions pay their top executives.

The fact that some of our administrators are the best paid in the state. Presumably, SIU considers higher pay to be synonymous with quality. Many students and we have all the important people taken care of, how about having Dr. Sharr, student council executive director be held to the same standards? Suppose the promises that the SIU-C Civil Service, faculty and graduate students have been given all the same? Or, possibly, not make promises that cannot be kept.

Civil Service employees are still paid less than at our sister school, the University of Illinois, and less than our division in Springfield, for comparable job positions. It seems to me, knowing that some SIU faculty and staff have left SIU-C for higher pay, that credibility and efficiency of the faculty would improve with pay comparable to similar institutions.

This might also bring better relations between faculty, staff and students. Why not try a little more to make us all happy.
Public prepared for severe weather, survey finds

By Melody Cook
Staff Writer

There were a few surprises, but generally the Carbondale Emergency Services and Disaster Agency's survey indicated that most people know what to do in case of severe weather.

"We did it to see what areas we should concentrate further programs on," Randy Jackson, emergency services coordinator, said.

Jackson said one of the most surprising answers on the survey, given out randomly to University Mall customers in October, was that most were not aware of the safest shelter during a tornado.

About 40 percent of those surveyed thought the southwest corner of their houses is the safest spot in a tornado, where weather researchers formerly thought it was. Only 16 percent knew that meteorologists now recommend using the northeast corner, Jackson said.

"The uncertainty was probably based on the fact that shelter areas have changed over the years," Jackson said.

About 30 percent of the survey participants said they were not aware of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Association Weather Radio System available to consumers in the Carbondale area. Jackson said the NWSA is a radio that only carries a continuous broadcast of weather information on the Southern Illinois area. It has an alarm that sounds when severe weather threatens, he said.

Jackson said that was one of the areas the ESDA would deal with in the future because of the increasing amounts of damage it is causing.

A total of 34 people indicated that they live in mobile homes, and of those only 10 percent said they evacuate their residences in threatening weather. This indicates that the ESDA needs to develop some programs for mobile home dwellers, Jackson said.

Adlai: History will prove ‘I was right’

WASHINGTON - Adlai E. Stevenson, D-Ill., leaves the Senate after 10 years, saying he might have been a little ahead of his time, but history will prove him right.

"I feel that history, which moves with great rapidity these days, will prove that I was correct," the retiring senator told reporters at a Washington office last week. "I was right. I might have been a little ahead of my times, but the effects are bearing fruit." Stevenson, 50, was rocked upward by the most patrician name in Illinois politics. His great-grandfather was vice president of the United States. His father was governor, twice the Democratic nominee for president and ambassador to the United Nations.

Adlai E. Stevenson III - in recent years he has stopped using the "Jr." - began his political career in 1950 with a successful run for the Legislature and five years later was in the U.S. Senate.

Elected in 1956 to serve out the term of the deceased Everett McKinley Dirksen, Stevenson easily won a full term of his own in 1958. During a decade in the Senate, he has been known to the public church as a chairman of the Ethics Committee, and as a person who is dislikable and still considers minor compared to his work in the field of energy, exports and industrial policy.

But Stevenson's unorthodox views on energy and industrial policy as a member of the Banking and Commerce committees have often fallen on deaf ears in the Senate. And politically, his fortunes have been mixed at best. Jimmy Carter mentioned him as a possible running mate in 1976 but chose Walter F. Mondale instead.

An attempt by Stevenson early this year to arouse interest in himself as a challenger to Carter flickered out almost as soon as it began. In a recent interview, the verdict on Stevenson has increasingly been favorably cast. That or he is a conscientious worker and a provocative idea man but too dull and prosaically the political rough-and-tumble.

In 1968, Stevenson announced he would retire voluntarily after this term. When asked why, he merely says it is time for him to "step down."

In a recent interview, Stevenson was asked what he would do differently if he were starting over in the Senate but knew what he knows now.

"I think there's a great value," he said, "in getting to know people well and talking intimately with them and exchanging information and ideas with them. I think I've been a more effective senator if I'd done more of that."

He was talking, he made clear, about his fellow senators.

They'd know more about what I was up to, what I was doing and what I wanted to do, and I'd know more about how to help them. I'd be wiser. They would be, too.

When Stevenson leaves the Senate he will return as a partner to his old Chicago law firm. He says he hopes to remain involved with issues he has cared about in the Senate and just how he will do that is unclear. He says he might run for governor of Illinois in 1982, but that is not likely.

The only odds I can give you, he says, are less than 1 in 10 of a possibility to which I'll give the most serious consideration after I leave the Senate. I want to make the decision early in fairness to others. I hope to make it maybe by sometime in April.

"I think it's largely going to be a very subjective question and that is whether I'm really feeling up to that major commitment," he says. "I know what campaigns are like. I know what Springfield is like and I've really got to be farms to go. And I don't know whether I'm going to be."

Santa should check list twice

PONTIAC (AP) - Elderly Mary Parisi made a lifesize Santa Claus out of rags and straw dressed him appropriately and placed him in a chair in her front yard.

"It was her way of wishing passing neighbors a merry Christmas," Mrs. Parisi's daughter, Patry, said Monday. She always made Halloween figures and put them out front, but this was the first time she made a Santa. And she says it will be her last.

Police were called when Santa's beard and stuffed head started to burn.

After Santa burned up, police said there was evidence of arson. A cigarette butt was found. They speculate that someone put a lighted cigarette in Santa's mouth.

"No one ever bothered my things - Halloween things. How could they do this to Santa?" said Miss Parisi.

A poster of a butterfly talking to a caterpillar is on the wall. "You can fly but the cocoon must go," it reads.

The poster is on a classroom wall of the Carbondale Special Education Cooperative, where multi-handicapped youngsters attend school and learn how to fly—despite balky cocoons.

Located in the basement of the Styer's Nursing Home just west of Carbondale, the co-op tries to teach these children some of the more basic functions of life.

"We have been given the children with the poorest prognoses and we try to recycle them to make them more productive for society," said Dr. Marvin Ott, head of the co-op. "We find the kids who can function, then we move them on. Our end goal is to help them so they are not a burden on society."

The children, 3 to 21 years old, are divided by age into five classrooms. Their, Ott said, they are on individualized programs of exercise and therapy.

Connie O'Dell, a teacher in charge of the youngest group, gripped a long-handled spoon that Alemeda, 3, already had hold of. Together they guided a full load of Jell-O to Alemeda's mouth.

Many of the children in the co-op are deformed. O'Dell said. She looked up from feeding Alemeda. "If the kids' bodies are not aligned properly we try to get the child symmetrical." Several devices to do this were strewn about the classrooms. One such contraption, called the prone stander, looks like an overgrown baby's car chair with a hydraulic jack on its back. It's designed to help some of the larger children who have been bedridden for years to gradually get used to standing.

Ott said the coop is a new way to teach disabled youngsters. "I think we're a pioneer," Ott said. He claimed there are few schools trying to teach the multi-handicapped like the co-op does. He said the impetus for these schools was the 1975 Right To Education law. It was the first legislation that said every child is entitled to an education.

Upper Midwestern states like Illinois seem to be in the forefront of states complying with the law, Ott said.

In another room Joe was hiding. Carefully manipulating his fingers, he was trying to hide his 130-pound frame behind his hands. No amount of coaxing could get him out of his hiding place.

"Most people have never seen kids like ours," Ott said. But neither had O'H when he first started the co-op, five years ago.

"It was shocking the first time I walked through here," Ott said. Many of the children were surviving on baby food, he said. Almost all were horizontal in beds or bean bag chairs. Urine and feces were among the litter on the floor.

Santa gets some strange requests

CHICAGO (AP)—A 7-year-old girl in Oklahoma wanted" spaghetti for Christmas because, she said, she'd been good this year. She had no idea she was to have a "veggie tree," a "new tail for my dog," or, most unusual of all, "a new alligator." She also wanted "a new ride in Santa's sleigh," "snow in Florida," and "a new tail for my cat."

The survey said many of the 5,000 youngsters who were talked to by Santas had Christmas wishes centering around their families. A little girl in Decatur, asked for "a new house for mommy, so she and daddy will be together again." Another child wished for "a brother or sister so I won't be the youngest."

One child in the Southwest asked for her father back who was killed in a car accident. Heading the Christmas list for boys, the survey showed, was anything to do with "Star Wars"—vehicles, action figures, stuffed toys. Next are electronic games, then race cars and trucks. These wants haven't changed from last year, the survey noted.

While boys usually express their wants in general terms, girls usually spell out exactly what they would like to find under their Christmas tree. Dolls again are the big favorite.

Santa gets some strange requests

CHICAGO (AP)—A 7-year-old girl in Oklahoma wanted hearing back and made her wishes known to Santa Claus in sign language.

A survey of 5,000 store and mall Santas across the country by Sears, Roebuck and Co. showed these other unusual Christmas requests by kids:

"A bar of soap," "a bathtub."

Steal a Christmas kiss under the mistletoe

By Carol Knowles

Staff Writer

For most people, the hanging of green clusters of mistletoe from doorways and ceilings above traveled pathways is just part of the holiday festivities. Few people are aware of the many legends surrounding the plant.

In the language of flowers, mistletoe means “give me a kiss.” According to legend, each leaf may claim a kiss from any girl standing under it. The ritual calls for removing one of the shining white berries and giving it to the girl. After all the berries have been picked, no more kisses may be stolen.

Mistletoe flowers vary greatly in color from white, orange, scarlet, golden yellow, green, to purple and black. In the tropics some trees are so full of flowering mistletoe that they appear to be on fire. Philosopher’s have wondered if the “burning bush” Moses referred to in the Old Testament could have been a bush covered with the blazing flowers of the mistletoe.

In ancient Britain, mistletoe was the sacred plant of the Druids. On the sixth day of the first new moon, the Arch Druid towered over his people wearing a white robe and golden jewelry around his neck and wrists. He cut the branches, allowing the mistletoe to fall on his white robe. Mistletoe was said to be allowed to touch the earth.

As a sacrifice to the gods, the Druids killed two white bulls, feasted on them and drank water in which the mistletoe had been soaked. The drink was believed to be a remedy for all sickness.

Because of the pagan associations of the Druids, mistletoe is seldom sanctified for use in church decorations, but is common in homes.

Although legends of the mistletoe are believed by some to be distinctly English, Australians also have a story.

Every New Year’s Eve, people decorate institutions and lavers with wreaths. Sylvester, an ancient and ugly man with a flaxen beard wears a wreath of mistletoe around his head. Anyone passing under the wreath decorations gets a rough hug and kiss from Sylvester. At midnight, however, Sylvester is driven out by the people—thus banishing the old year.

Scandinavians considered mistletoe an “all heal,” using it to treat sickness. It was called a plant of peace and responsible for resolving misunderstandings, bringing good luck and enhancing fertility.

Italians hung the mistletoe from the rafters of their homes to keep out the evil spirits, while the French and Swedish wore it as jewelry to prevent sickness.

Today’s custom of kissing under the mistletoe comes from the Norse legend of Balder. The god of sun, art and summer. Balder was popular among the other gods and creatures of the universe because of the delight they shared basking in the warm winter sun. Although Balder had no enemies, he began experiencing frightful nightmares in which his life was being threatened by some mysterious force.

Balder sought protection from the gods. Finally, Balder’s mother, Frigg, announced she would exact an oath from every creature and substance in the universe that they would not harm Balder.

Frigg neglected the mistletoe, however, because it just wasn’t a very pretty tree too immature to take an oath. Leki, an evil spirit who hated Balder, made an arrow from the mistletoe. He gave the arrow to Helder, a blind god, who struck Balder with the mistletoe and killed him. Frigg became the white berries of the mistletoe.

Balder’s body was buried in the ground, and Frigg wept over him, saying “from now on, no one will be allowed to touch mistletoe.”

got the credits the staff had given him with turning around the story. He said every child gets a birthday present, and a Christmas present, with most of them being paid for out of staff members’ pockets.

Not all special education programs are new. One was born with a hearing loss, but said he didn’t know it until he was four years old. “I was lucky,” he said, because Detroit had a program for children his age. He was still able to go to school normally, though once a week he had to see a woman who taught him how to read lips and adjust to his slight speech impediment.

Net team boosted by lower flights

"Out of our 42 wins..." Blair said.

"It was just fantastic because I didn't know who would win between Scott Lewis and Chris Macey. Macey won the all Saluki match 11-7, 11-8, and went on to defeat Illinois State's Sue Konie 11-3, 11-6. Blair was also impressed with Beyer's first round match against ISU's Mary Kiernan, which Beyer won 11-2, 11-3.

"Beth's first match was what you call 'book badminton.'"

Funeral services set for former
Saluki mat coach

Funeral services are scheduled for 10 a.m. Saturday at Huffman Funeral Home in Carbondale for former SLU wrestling Coach James Wilkinson, who died Thursday after suffering a heart attack at his home.

Wilkinson, 63, was a professor of physical education at SLU and served as the chairman of the department of physical education from 1967 to 1978. Wilkinson was born in Goshen, Ind., and was a three-time graduate of Indiana University. He came to SLU in 1949 and established wrestling as a varsity sport the following year.

He was the Salukis' head wrestling coach from 1956 to 1966, during which time he compiled a 16-52-6 record. In 1964, he was named national coach of the year by the United States Wrestling Coaches Association after SIU finished fourth in the NCAA Division I national championships. Ironically, present Saluki Coach Linn Cooper finished third in the balloting that year for his efforts at the University of Colorado.

Wilkinson's 1965 and 1966 teams finished second and third respectively in the NCAA Collegiate Wrestling Championships, and eight of his last 10 teams finished in the national top 15 in either Division I or College Division.

In March of this year, Wilkinson was named to the Illinois Wrestling Hall of Fame. Wilkinson is survived by his wife, Mildred, a son, Jay, and a daughter, Carol. Burial will be in Oakwood Cemetery.

Blair said, "It was like all at once she understood exactly what she had to do. She made her opponent run and forced her into the farthest corners of the court."

Ball State outscored the Salukis in singles, 22-27, but SIU-C had 15 doubles victories to BALL's 10. Ganni Norris and Kathy Sikora teamed to win the A-flight doubles title over EIU's Kris Kelly and Jo Obrzcki, 15-8, 17-16. Beyer and Macey took the B-flight consolation with a 15-3, 14-6 win over Ball State.

SIU-C managed only two singles wins in the A flight—something that Blair tried to keep his finger on.

"After Saturday, I can feel pretty confident that our D flight singles will be solid all year," Blair said. "With the four flights, I think it's a matter of just playing instead of worrying about winning or losing.

"Actually, I don't care if we win or lose as much as if they perform up to expectations—according to the Paul Blair racing form. If they lose but play well and work hard, that's what I look for.

There Is No Such Thing
As Instant Arthritis
BY DR. ROY S. WHITE
Doctor of Chiropractic

It seems as if we are living in an age when everything is right now. Take arthritis, for example. We all saw the TV commercials that showed a lady painfully fumbling with the bow on her dress while the announcer suggests she should seek temporary relief.

Mind you, he doesn't suggest correction, but simply a pill's worth of partial relief. You'd think there was something called "instant arthritis." I think that practically everybody that now suffers from arthritis once experienced a twinge of pain in the knee or finger that stiffened after a minor stub or a crick in the neck.

The place where arthritis starts, and as far as I'm concerned that is where it should end. Please believe me, there is no such thing as instant arthritis. If an individual has a little bursitis or feels cranky when he or she gets up some morning, it should be accepted as nature's warning.

It is at that time that diagnosis and treatment should be sought. There's no disputing that arthritis is a costly, miserable condition. But I wish people wouldn't simply resign themselves to facing it. The public must learn to fight the battle with arthritis when they can win.

If the battle is to be won, in other words, it must be fought where and when it can be won.

I don't think you'll find an arthritic disputing this point.

"Great Scott" keys Saluki win

The Salukin' Karl Morris soars over Roosevelt's Mike Aspan (55), Fenyes Corree (24) and teammate Johnny Payne for two of his 12 points in Monday night's 85-65 Saluki victory at the Arena.

The bests and worsts of 1980 Saluki sports

A trend in column-writing during the Christmas season is to list the bests and worsts in a certain subject area for the previous 12 months. So here's a review of the year's high and low points.

Here, I'm reviewing basketball in general because most of them were so delightfully, disgustingly awful.

1. BEST SINGLE-TEAM PERFORMANCE: This goes to the Saluki men's basketball team for its 114-86 victory over New Mexico State in February. The team held an incredible 29-2 lead at halftime. Not bad for a ballclub that finished with a 9-17 record.

2. BEST SINGLE-TEAM PERFORMANCE: This team's 15-1 loss to Wichita State in the Missouri Valley Conference championship game. No fair imitating the Chicago Bears.

3. TOP INDIVIDUAL ACCOMPLISHMENT: This one's quite a tie between the track team's David Lee and men's swimming's Roger Von Joanne. Lee won an NCAA championship in the 100-meter intermediate hurdles, and Von Joanne set an American record Saturday in the 200-yard butterfly.

4. WORST PROMISE: The Harlem Globetrotters were supposed to have a new track by now according to SI-C's athletics moguls. From the Pressbox would like to know why the administration keeps putting off telling us something it could have done today or yesterday.

5. SHOT OF THE YEAR: No question about this one. Barry Smith's slam dunk against Eastern Illinois in the last game of his four-year career is the obvious choice.

6. WORST III-POLL: The women's field hockey team started with 12 wins in its first 15 games, then lost eight of its last nine. Gee, those field hockey uniforms weren't supposed to have tight collars.

7. GREAT ONE OF THE YEAR: Co-Riffers in this category are women gymnast Pam Harrington and men's basketball's Charles Nance.

8. BIGGEST BONDOGGLE: SI-C's athletics administrators constantly are talking about how the rising costs of travel may make it harder for them to keep teams here. Why, then, is the football team scheduled to play in Fresno, Calif., Canyon, Texas, and McNeese, Louisiana, this season?

9. BEST QUOTE: After wading through tons of generic quotes, we finally came up with the "best." The award goes to men's tennis Coach Will McNaughton. After losing two straight matches by 6-2 scores, he said, "I'm not discouraged." Nothing like the power of positive thinking.

Runner-up in this category is basketball Coach Joe Gottfried. "We couldn't buy a basket," he said after the team lost to Evan- ville last Wednesday. Considering the state of the men's athlete's budget, he's probably right.

10. WORST OVERSTATEMENT: Women's swimming's team was supposed to have nine consecutive dual meets since last season. The problem is, who knows about it?

11. BEST SPICEY ROUTINE: Another award goes to the Saluki football team. During the loss to Tulsa, the SI-C "quarterback" fumbled. The loose ball was recovered by a Saluki running back, who, in the heat of the moment, turned to score a touchdown.

12. BEST PRIVY SEE: Definitely the touching Mark Hemphill Day ceremonies. SI-C helped a paralyzed football player while giving credit where it was due.

13. The Pressbox' cap goes to Assistant Athletics Director Fred Huff for coordinating the activities.

14. MOST SPOOKING GAME: How many of you out there just woke up, as I did, from the Saluki-Charlotte basketball game? For those of you who didn't attend, there's no truth to the rumor that a Muzak concert was held at halftime.
