Hart re-enters race for presidency

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Gary Hart, who bailed out of his bid for the White House seven months ago amid a sex scandal, re-entered the Democratic presidential race Tuesday, saying he wants to "let the people decide."

Hart, a former Colorado senator who waged a tough but futile campaign for the 1984 Democratic nomination, unexpectedly filed candidacy papers for the Feb. 16 New Hampshire primary.

"Getting back in this race is about the toughest thing I have ever done," Hart said in a brief speech on the steps of the New Hampshire Statehouse. "There is no shame in losing, only in quitting."

With his wife, Lee, looking on, Hart said he has no organization and no money, but still wants to present his "new ideas" to the voters.

Hart was the Democratic front-runner in May when he abruptly dropped out of the campaign amid published reports he had spent a weekend in Washington with 29-year-old Miami model Donna Rice while his wife was out of town.

Smiling and reaching out to shake hands, Hart deflected questions Tuesday about his personal life and family. He said he decided to re-enter the race last weekend because the election was "too important to let it pass."

"We'll talk later. We're going directly to the people and we're going to talk about issues," said Hart, adding that he will campaign "everywhere we can."

Hart — who declared three months ago, "I have no plans to run for president!" — joins a Democratic field of six major candidates that so far has seen no clear front-runner emerge since his withdrawal in May.

Reaction to Hart's announcement came swiftly.

"In a year of absurdity, there's nothing wrong with him writing another chapter," said Harrison Hickman, a consultant for the campaign of Sen. Paul Simon, D-Ill.

Hart's bid surprises experts

By Mary Wisniewski
Staff Writer

While most campus political experts and activists said they were surprised by Gary Hart's second shot at the Democratic presidential race, they differed over his motives — and his chances.

"He couldn't stand being out of the spotlight," said John Jackson, professor of political science and dean of the college of liberal arts. "He doesn't understand it's all over."

"I'm very surprised," said Joann Paine, associate professor of political science. "It's hard to imagine he'd do it to secure some position in a future administration — he'd be better off not re-entering if he wanted to do that."

But Michael Buila, senior in advertising and former chairman of the 1984 Students for Hart campaign, was very confident of the former Colorado senator's chances.

"I'm very excited," said Buila, already wearing a Hart button. Buila said he and other Hart supporters already are planning an exploratory committee to re-form Students for Hart. "We're serious. We think we can do very well in Carbondale."

Though Buila worried that the deadline for entering the Illinois primary already had passed, United Press International reported Tuesday that the deadline for New Hampshire, the first primary state, is today.

Vince Lacey, a professor of political science, said he was

University adding spring classes

By Jacke Hampton
Staff Writer

Students who found some spring classes full when they registered this fall should look again when they return from break because new classes are being added daily.

"I really don't want to say which classes will be added because I only have a partial list and I don't want to discourage anyone from looking for new sections that may be opening," R. Kirby Browning, director of admissions, said Tuesday.

Browning and acting Vice President for Academic Affairs Benjamin Shepherd said increased enrollment is the primary reason some classes are full.

Fall enrollment in on-campus programs was at 21,191, a 3.7-percent increase over last year. Enrollment including off-campus programs was at a record high 24,160.

When the enrollment figures were released, President John C. Guyon said there could be some stress in beginning general education courses. Some courses, the GED 101 composition class for example, are required of virtually all freshmen. Browning said that some additional classes are being opened in required areas, but stressed that classes also will be opening in other areas.

Aikido needs national affiliation

By Mary Wisniewski
Staff Writer

The University Martial Arts Club has until March 8 to find a national affiliation to gain sports club status, said Michael Dunn, director of Intramural Recreational Sports.

But the fate of the campus Aikido clubs is still up in the air, said Kathy Rankin, intramural sports coordinator. Rankin said UMAC, which practices Tae Kwan Do as opposed to Aikido martial arts, was given Recreation Center space "in consideration of some of the difficulties they were having trouble getting straightened out."

The Sports Club Council recommended changing the long-disputed status of UMAC at a meeting of the Advisory Board of the Sports Council Nov. 10. The Sports Club Committee, with Rankin and Dunn, approved the recommendation three weeks ago, Rankin said.

Until March 8, the club can use Recreation Center practice place, during low-use hours, said Rankin.

"They're pretty close to getting national affiliation," Rankin said, though she could not say which national organization the club would

Men's basketball to play 8 on break

By Dave Miller
Staff Writer

Men's basketball coach Rich Herrin will lead his troops into a civil war when Northern Illinois invades the Arena at 2:05 p.m. Saturday.

The Salukis, 5-3, may be in for a tougher battle than expected. The Huskies, 1-4, have out-rebounded every opponent this season. On Sunday, Bradley escaped out of DeKalb with a 84-78 victory.

"They're big and they'll be tough for us to match up with," Herrin said, "but hopefully we'll be able to continue our up-tempo game."

Senior guard Rodney Davis, the team's MVP last season, leads NIU with a 20.6 per game average. Other Huskies in double figures are senior forward Mike Grabner (11.2 ppg) and freshman forward Donnell Thomas (10.6 ppg).

Both teams have played Wisconsin but had different results. The Huskies lost at home, 87-77, while the Salukis won at home, 80-76.

In coach Jim Rosborough's inaugural season last year, the Salukis beat NIU, 87-74. Rosborough took over a depleted team after Kenny Battle transferred to Illinois, Darron White left the team and Jim Edmonson and Jerry Williams were declared academically ineligible. The Huskies limped to a 9-19 record, going 0-11 on the road.

This year is a rebuilding season. Rosborough has seven freshmen on the team, including six from Chicago. Thus far, the most productive of the lot has been Thomas.

The Salukis enter the game having won three of four. Herrin said he is especially pleased with last week's results. During what he termed a "very important week" the Salukis posted home wins against Wisconsin and Southwest Missouri and lost on the road to Eastern Illinois.

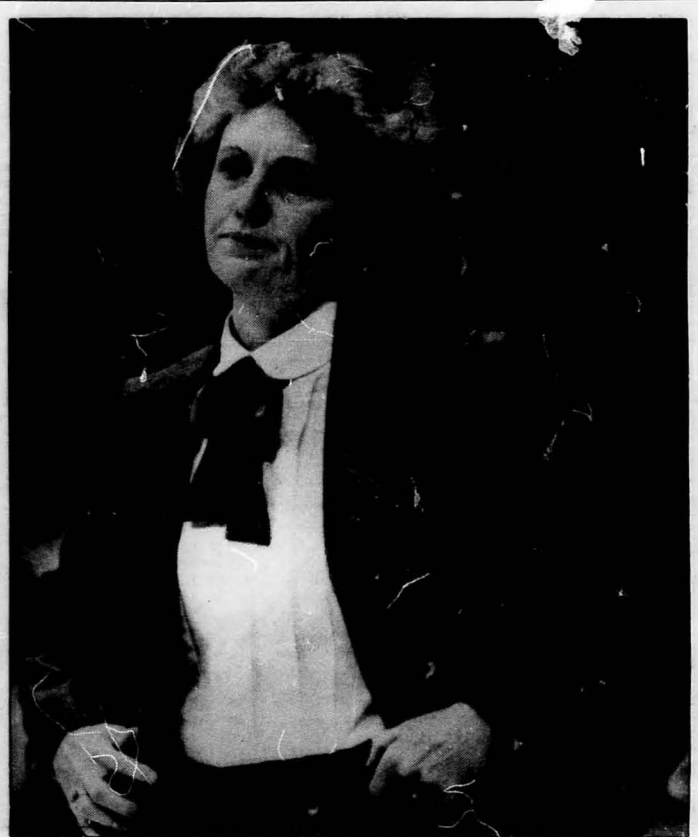

"This team has really proved it can play very good under pressure," Herrin said. "We've done a pretty good job in every situation. This ball club knows how to win the close ones."

If Herrin is to get his wish of winning two more games before Christmas, the Salukis will have to beat Western Kentucky on the road Monday. Last season, Western Kentucky beat the Salukis, 78-58, in the Arena.

After an eight-day layoff, the Salukis travel to DeLand, Fla., to play Stetson on Dec. 30. On the way home, the Salukis will stop in Indiana to try to pay back Marty Simmons and Evansville on Jan. 2. The Purple Aces defeated the Salukis, 72-69, earlier this season in the Arena.

On Jan. 4, the Salukis come home to take on All-American Derrick Chievous and 16th-ranked Missouri.

Then it's on the road again to begin the Missouri Valley schedule. The Salukis open at Drake on Jan. 9 and travel to Creighton on Jan. 11.

Coach Cindy Scott, whose team last week notched its highest-ever rankings in the AP polls, is now working with a team whose loss record equals last season's total.

Holiday tournaments will keep Salukis busy

The men's basketball team will play eight games during Christmas break. Here is the schedule:

- Northern Illinois Dec. 19 in the Arena;
- Western Kentucky Dec. 21 in Bowling Green;
- Stetson Dec. 30 in DeLand, Fla.;
- Evansville Jan. 2 in Evansville, Ind.;
- Missouri Jan. 4 in the Arena;
- Drake Jan. 9 in Des Moines, Iowa;
- Creighton Jan. 11 in Omaha, Neb.;
- Bradley Jan. 18 in the Arena. The women's basketball team will play nine games during break.

- Western Kentucky Dec. 19 in the Arena;
- Purdue Dec. 21 in West Lafayette, Ind.;
- Eastern Illinois Dec. 30 in Charleston;
- Bradley Jan. 2 in Peoria;
- Western Illinois Jan. 4 in Macomb;

Women plunge 10 in latest cage poll

Nothing lasts forever, as the women's basketball team has found out.

The Salukis dropped out of the Associated Press coaches poll after spending 15 consecutive weeks in the Top 20.

The Salukis, 3-3, fell from their No. 13 perch after losing to Illinois, which moved up to No. 19, and Indiana.

The Salukis were ranked No. 23 in Tuesday's USA Today Top 25 poll.

Texas became the new No. 1 team after sending Tennessee, top-ranked since the preseason, to a 97-78 loss last Wednesday before a record 24,563 fans in Knoxville.

AP women's basketball poll

Texas, 6-0, received 56 first-place votes. Auburn, undefeated at 6-0, moved up to No. 2 with 5 votes for first while 4-1 Tennessee fell to No. 3 with one vote for first.

Louisiana Tech and Iowa remained in their respective No. 4 and No. 5 slots.

Virginia was No. 6 followed by Ole Miss, Ohio State, Long Beach State and Rutgers.

Women to open break play against W. Kentucky

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

The women's basketball team opens a 9-game holiday slate at 7:35 p.m. Saturday against 11th-ranked Western Kentucky in the Arena.

The Salukis snapped a two-game slide Monday with a victory over Tennessee Tech. At 3-3, the team has already lost as many as last season (28-3).

Western Kentucky (7-0) is looking to even the score after a 64-63 Saluki comeback victory last season when Marialice Jenkins converted a layup off an Ann Kaltreh steal in the closing moments.

Both teams, however, display different lineups than last year. Jenkins and Kaltreh are gone, as well as Clemette Haskins, Western Kentucky's All-America guard and third highest all-time career scorer with 1,762 points.

Lady Toppers coach Paul Sanderford, who has made four consecutive NCAA appearances, boasts the top recruit in the nation in 6-foot-2 freshman Terri Mann of San Diego, California. Last season, Mann was the USA Today player of the year and a 1987 World University Games selection.

Western Kentucky returns two starters — 6-foot-2 senior center Traci Patton and 5-foot-

10 junior forward Brigette Combs.

In other action:

The team faces its third Big Ten Conference opponent on Dec. 21, battling Purdue in West Lafayette, Indiana.

SIU-C is 0-2 against Big Ten competition, dropping decisions to Illinois and Indiana. Against the Boiler-makers, though, the Salukis hold a 4-1 series advantage.

Purdue's top gun is Sharon Versyp, a 5-foot-8 senior point guard with 1,097 career points. Christa LaCroix, 6-foot-4 senior center, led the Big Ten with 54 blocks last season.

The Gateway Conference season begins Dec. 30 in Charleston against Eastern Illinois. A poll of league coaches predicted the Panthers would finish second in the conference behind SIU-C. Eastern Illinois has four returning starters — Lisa Tyler, Ann Brown, Laura Mull and Barb Perkes.

The Salukis' first competition of 1988 is Bradley on Jan. 2 in Peoria. Despite close contests last season, the Lady Braves were 0-3 against SIU-C. Bradley has not defeated the Salukis in 10 meetings.

The Drake Bulldogs, coached by Susan Yow, come to Carbondale Jan. 7. Redshirt junior Julie Fitzpatrick, 1985 Gateway freshman of the year, and Missy Slockett, 1987 freshman of the year, lead the Bulldogs.

Northern Iowa, 0-8 against SIU-C since 1984, meets the Salukis Jan. 9 at the Arena. The Salukis won both games last year against the Panthers, 98-68 and 87-64.

The Salukis will be at Wichita State on Jan. 15 and Southwest Missouri State on Jan. 17.

Plane crashes off Brazil in shark-infested waters

BRASILIA, Brazil (UPI) — A Hercules C-130 military transport plane carrying 29 people crashed in shark-infested waters off Brazil and searchers looking for survivors found only the partial remains of a child, officials said Tuesday. The plane crashed into the Atlantic Monday at 9:30 p.m. on its landing approach to a small airport on the island of Fernando de Noronha, 220 miles east of Brazil.

Iran bombs Greek tanker in Strait of Hormuz

MANAMA, Bahrain (UPI) — An Iranian speedboat attacked a Greek oil tanker in the Strait of Hormuz Tuesday, firing a shell that hit the vessel but did not explode until seven hours later, shipping sources said. The attack took place as official Iranian media, seeking to quash speculation their spiritual leader is dying, reported the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini met with a group of Iranians Tuesday in Tehran.

Kuwait's oil minister predicts rising oil prices

VIENNA (UPI) — Kuwait's oil minister Tuesday predicted world oil prices, which began falling when an OPEC accord left Iraqi production unrestricted, will rebound soon if cartel members abide by the pact to extend production quotas and an $18-a-barrel price. Sheikh Ajl Khalifa al-Sabah said Kuwait "will be glad" to rein in its excess output to help shore up crumbling prices if several other OPEC overproducers, including Iraq and the United Arab Emirates, "did the same."

San Salvadoran rebels attack crop; 20 die

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (UPI) — Leftist rebels launched another attack on El Salvador's vital coffee crop, triggering a two-hour battle that left 20 people dead, the army said Tuesday. It was the second coffee plantation destroyed in 24 hours. The attack occurred as President Jose Napoleon Duarte faced growing political problems, with the resignation of the commerce minister and rightist charges that his new agricultural minister was corrupt.

Reagan: Gorbachev to stop most aid to rebels

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan Tuesday disclosed that Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev had told him he would withhold all military aid from the Sandinistas except for small arms weapons for police. Reagan made the remarks at the start of a review with a group of Republican senators who have formed a task force to study the new treaty to eliminate superpower missiles with a 300 to 3,400-mile range. The pact was signed at last week's summit meeting.

Illinois snow delays delivery of jet fighters

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Delivery of the first two of a dozen U.S. F-5 jet fighters, ordered earlier this year and scheduled to arrive in Honduras Tuesday, has been delayed by heavy snow in Illinois, the Pentagon said. Spokesman Lt. Col. Jan Dalby said "a support plane" for the fighters was grounded by snow at Scott Air Force Base. He could not say when the F-5s, which are at MacDill Air Force Base, Fla., would be delivered.

Anti-apartheid activists arrested in S. Africa

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Fifteen anti-apartheid activists were arrested at the South African Embassy Tuesday after dumping 30,000 keys to "unlock apartheid's chains" from children imprisoned in the racially torn country. Standing in a cold drizzle, several dozen demonstrators joined in the protest, leaving the keys and 30,000 post cards demanding freedom for the children who have been arrested during a recent South Africa government crackdown on opposition groups. The post cards, which organizers say were collected from 20 states, were addressed to South Africa President P.W. Botha and pleaded for the children's release.

U.S. factories run at 81.7 percent of capacity

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The nation's factories, mines and utilities ran at 81.7 percent of their capacity in November, the highest level since August 1984, the Federal Reserve said Tuesday. At the same time, the Fed said October's capacity utilization of 81.5 was up 0.5 percentage point, better than the 0.3 percentage point increase originally reported. The November rate gained .2 percent on October's capacity, and U.S. industry is now above its average capacity utilization rate for 1987 through 1986.

Foreign students need families to share Christmas

By Curtis Winston
Entertainment Editor

While the majority of students are leaving Carbondale to celebrate Christmas break at home, many international students have to stay in Carbondale because returning home is too expensive.

The Host Family Program, sponsored by International Programs and Services, needs area families to volunteer to act as hosts to international students who are unable to make it home for the holidays on Christmas Day.

Carla Coppi, coordinator of the Host Family Program, said applications are being taken for host families and students interested in participating in the program.

"We have about four families and 40 students signed up, so we need more families," Coppi said.

"During finals week students aren't thinking about Christmas Day, they are thinking about passing their finals," Coppi said. "They haven't planned ahead, but when Christmas Day rolls around they may be lonely and will want to go somewhere."

Coppi said she places students with families until as late as Christmas Eve, but students should sign up now to be sure about getting a spot.

There are two types of host families, Coppi said. There are families who act as hosts to international students during the entire year and special hosts to international students during the holidays.

"The regular host families already have students to host, we need more families to take the extra students who want to spend time with a family during the holidays," Coppi said.

Host families are recruited by word-of-mouth and through public service announcements on regional radio, Coppi said. The program, which started in 1979, has involved up to 100 families from Carbondale, Murphysboro, Anna, Mount Vernon, Carterville, Sparta and other area communities, with more than 100 students participating.

Families and students interested in participating in the program should stop by International Student Services, 910 S. Forest St. or call 453-5774.

Students to be surveyed about transit system

By Dena Schulte
Staff Writer

A survey for the proposed campus and citywide transit system will be the focus of members of the Undergraduate Student Organization student welfare commission over Christmas break.

USO member Drayton Rose said the commission will ask the marketing department to implement a class project to create a survey to be answered by 10 percent of a randomly selected student population. "We may even survey 10 percent of the city population, too," he said.

The survey is one step that needs to be taken to compile and present a formal proposal to the SIU Board of Trustees for approval.

Members of the commission are trying to research every question that could be asked, Kristin Fabian, commission member, said.

"It's important that we show the board exactly what we want," Rose said. "We have to convince them to implement a student fee to make the system work."

Student fees for the proposed bus system would be $15 for full-time students and $1.25 per credit hour for part-time students, USO members said. City residents would be asked to pay 50 cents per ride.

Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit said he thinks the mass transit system is a good idea, but he wants to see a specific proposal before he decides to support it.

SIU-C President John C. Guyon said the USO commission needs to "carefully and thoughtfully" look at the specifications, such as a transit system.

"We need to find out what systems are available and what support levels are available — state and federal," he said. "The concept is sound, but we have to do a careful study."

USO received a formal proposal last week from American Transit Corp. The proposal outlines benefits of the campus and citywide transit system, routes and service frequency.

"We're using ATC as a model," Rose said. "We're not asking them to set up a system. They're giving us input on what we need to look at."

Rain quenches fire of peace activism

THE ARMS AGREEMENT recently signed by the United States and the Soviet Union created a potential-packed stage for the activist-minded segment of the University. One of the most important events in recent history — and easily one of President Reagan's most resounding triumphs — the arms agreement was the stuff on which peace activists traditionally have thrived, a chance to gather en masse and shout for peace and a ban on nuclear weapons.

But the opportunities for any rousing, college-style demonstrations were extinguished by the heavy rains that deluged Carbondale the day before and the day of the signing of the agreement. It would appear that most of SIU-C's activists are of the fair weather variety.

ON THE SOGGY Monday before the agreement signing, a grand total of 10 peace activists, holding signs and umbrellas, gathered on South Illinois Avenue and Walnut Street to express support for the summit and the promise it holds. These peace-minded people deserve a hearty round of applause for their diligent efforts, as grasping placards while standing in a driving rain is an act of true dedication.

Despite the dedication of the demonstrators, the overall turnout was puny. Blame it on the rain or pre-final hysteria, but the fact remains that Carbondale's peace and anti-nuclear activists — and there evidently are substantial numbers of them on campus and in the city, judging by the numbers of letters to the Daily Egyptian proclaiming membership to that ilk — did not make the scene in numbers befitting the importance of the arms agreement.

Perhaps the days of '60s-style demonstrations are extinct. And then again, maybe today's activists simply have an aversion to inclement weather.

Opinions from elsewhere

The New York Times

A woman who considers herself one pillar of a two-career-couple-with-kids finds herself fed up with the bleak image accorded this kind of family.

"I read too much about 'DINKs' — double-income-no-kids-couples," she says, "and successful bachelors who fear marriage, and once-gung-ho career women who have been won over to motherhood. And now, thanks to a new book by Shere Hite, there are married women supposedly miserably at their mates' inability to love.

"Families like mine are now supposed to be examples of how you can't have it all, stories in which mom takes the kids to the sitter, gets on the bus to go to work and finds an article on say-eyed children in day care. Times have changed since the days when few women worked and few couples divorced.

"Social policies haven't kept up. People talk wistfully about flextime or day care centers at their workplace, but most have to piece together their new-style lives. Yet one couple's frustration may be another's rich opportunity. I'm talking about the couples, happy to be married, and to have children and to work. They remember that the point about having it all is sharing it all.

Providing for a family is a lonely burden; running a household is tedious. When the task is shared, everyone gains.

Respecting rights of individuals means respecting the right to pray

There may be no irony whatsoever in the cuts in religious studies and two very interesting issues concerning the University this semester: that of the proper address for the "one with no name" and whether any state, (or for that matter community, neighborhood, or individual) can refer to the one with no name in public.

I have thought of a prayer, in light of the issue, and want to sneak it in the Daily Egyptian before a "public law" is written against doing so:

"There is a light born inside each soul, that makes us cherish love. In the hope that everyone may share, we each struggle to follow our own path. Every day countless millions suffer and perish, and we are fortunate to even be alive."

Ten generations ago, America's founders fought to win, for the first time in history, the freedom to establish a government that would protect the rights of individuals to refer to the one with no name in whatever fashion they desired.

Respecting this right means the state must grant individuals not only the right to believe as one wishes, but also to practice those beliefs in public. It seems absurd, for instance, to be forced to pray in a closet. Is a church a closet? It is, if that's the only place where one can pray.

If there is anything in this whole controversy to be proud of, it is that this discussion is being held in public. This point will have little value, however, if in the process of discussing we talk ourselves into a situation in which we lose all rights to express and exercise our beliefs.

Personally, I hope I have lived my life with sufficient humility, purpose and compassion to receive the blessing of all those with "names combined" and that the one with no name understands and forgives me for thinking this is all a little silly and immature.

The fact that others take it so seriously is what scares me. When people start being offended by others to the point of creating an issue about the exercise of freedom, there is reason to be concerned. When people start telling each other the light in their souls is offensive to display in public, it's time to stop joking around and tell them they are wrong. — Harvey Woods, alumnus.

BAC program needs SIU-C support

SIU-C administrators remind us constantly of the University's services and commitment to the African-American student. If we judge by its actions, we come closer to the truth.

For example, during Thanksgiving break of the fall of 1987, assistant professor Luke Tripp, coordinator of the Black American Studies program, was not recommended for tenure. Several people felt that Tripp would not be recommended for tenure because of his posture on controversial issues affecting the black community on local, national and international levels.

In 1978, there were three Black American Studies faculty members. Some left the program because of either their ambiguous future at SIU-C or because they were denied tenure.

To the detriment of the BAS program, these faculty positions were never filled. Courses have been staffed by adjunct faculty, who have excellent credentials but lack the background or foundation that faculty members such as Dr. Tripp or Dr. M.K. Mootry brought to the classroom. This final edict leaves the Black American Studies program in a nebulous position. What is the position of the SIU-C administration regarding this program?

The program provides many African-American students with the background and foundation to survive in this Anglo Saxon-orientated culture. The only legitimate response to the Black American Studies program would be for it to take its rightful place in the context of history. However, we all know that is not going to happen. — Ronald Wright, senior, finance.

Democrats' outlook unclear

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Gary Hart's bid to resuscitate his Democratic presidential campaign put his six rivals in the awkward position Tuesday of acknowledging his right to run in a field that may again be called the "seven dwarfs."

Hart was the front-runner for the 1988 Democratic presidential nomination when he quit the race in May because of a sex scandal, but none of the half-dozen other contenders has emerged to claim the mantle — a factor Hart cited in announcing his re-entry.

The other candidates reacted with caution to the announcement, as they had to his withdrawal seven months ago, and only Republicans openly applauded — apparently confident the move can only add to disarray within the Democratic ranks.

Former Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt, one of the Democrats in the back of the pack, described Hart's revival as "a surprise under the Christmas tree" and delivered this assessment of what it means: "He will either be a front-runner or the ghost of Christmas past in a matter of days."

Frankahrenkopf, head of the Republican National Committee, said with a smile, "I think it's great. I love it."

In a statement, the GOP leader said Hart's candidacy "is a clear indication of the continued disillusionment and confusion in the Democratic Party."

The other Democratic candidates — Massachusetts Gov. Michael Dukakis, Rep. Richard Gephardt of Missouri, Sens. Paul Simon of Illinois and Albert Gore of Tennessee, and Jesse Jackson — offered generally non-committal responses to Hart's move, with most stressing they are interested in the issues, not the other contenders.

Simon, who was the Democratic frontrunner in Iowa, according to the latest Des Moines Register poll, conceded Hart's decision

Donna out of Hart race

NEW YORK (UPI) — You soon may be seeing more of Gary Hart on your television, but you'll see a lot less of Donna Rice.

Rice, whose reported weekend with the former Colorado Senator sparked a sex scandal that temporarily derailed his bid for the White House, was dumped as the No Excuses Sportswear girl Tuesday, hours after Hart re-entered the presidential race.

"Donna Rice will no longer serve as model and spokesperson for No Excuses Sportswear," said the company that markets the line of women's clothing. "The television commercials Ms. Rice made for No Excuses will no longer be shown and have been withdrawn from broadcast."

Hart was the Democratic front-runner in May when he abruptly dropped out of the campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination amid published reports he had spent a weekend in Washington with Rice while his wife was out of town.

would affect every campaign. "You never know what may happen anywhere in this business of politics," Simon said.

Later, Simon issued a statement saying: "I entered this race before Gary Hart withdrew. I decided to run because I sensed a void. I'm not going to change anything about my advocacy of our needs for a national government that genuinely cares about the people and their problems."

But Harrison Hickman, a consultant whose firm is doing work for Simon, said, "In a year of absurdity, there's nothing wrong with Hart writing another chapter."

"I guess they can go back to calling them the seven dwarfs" — an allusion to the disparaging assessment of the Democratic field.

Hickman said Hart will have a lot of explaining to do to about his personal affairs — notably the trust with Miami model Donna Rice, the final straw in a pile of "character" questions that led him to quit the race before.

Dukakis said Hart's decision to re-enter the race will "add zest" to the campaign and he called the announcement "an interesting development."

"I said when I first announced this was going to be the most unpredictable race in history," said Dukakis, adding he does not expect to lose either support or staff to Hart.

Gephardt said Hart's decision will not affect his own campaign. He said he entered the race to fight for economic change for workers, farmers, older Americans, trade and foreign policy.

"This was true the last time Gary Hart was a candidate and it continues to be true today," Gephardt said. "1987 has been a mighty strange year."

Jesse Jackson said "Hart has every right to re-enter the race ... The American people will determine at the polls whether his re-entry was the right thing to do."

In Atlanta, Democratic National Committee Chairman Paul Kirk said, "Well, my advice wasn't asked. He made a personal decision. The voters will have to make a decision."

And Senate Democratic leader Robert Byrd of West Virginia reacted with a sour expression and obvious displeasure.

"It's a crazy old world, isn't it?" Byrd said.

not surprised by Hart's decision. "He had to cover a large campaign debt — now he can get federal funds. That's probably the real story."

"It's hardly unexpected since (Mikhail) Gorbachev nudged (George) Bush out of second place," said Steve Parmenter, outreach chairman for SIU-C Students for Jackson and graduate student in political science. "The Republicans look so weak since the summit. Everyone thinks they're a pushover."

But Larvestor Gaither, head of Students for Jackson, said he has doubts about Hart's chances.

"I don't think he will be as effective as he was," Gaither said. "I think it's going to hurt Simon more than any other candidate. In 1984, Hart had all the support in this area. That support switched to Simon."

Parmenter agreed that Illinois Sen. Paul Simon would suffer from Hart's surprise decision. "Simon's in because Hart's out," Parmenter said.

Tim Larson, a representative of Southern for Simon, said he was shocked by Hart's announcement.

"I was a supporter of Hart in the last election," he added.

But Larson said that while Hart is a good candidate, he should have stayed out. "It just complicates matters, he has no chance of winning."

Buila agreed that the biggest problem for Hart's Illinois support is Simon's Illinois support, but still was confident. "We have the ideology behind us," he said.

John Jackson said: "He was clearly a front runner. He would have been a strong candidate."

But Jackson said that to win a campaign, a candidate needs media support, public support and money. "Hart has none of these any more."

Buila's answer to doubts over Hart's chances echoed Hart's own: "The American people will decide the next president, not the Miami Herald," Buila said.

The Miami Herald broke the story connecting Hart romantically with Donna Rice, which led to Hart's withdrawal from the race in May.

join. The finances of UMAC and the University Aikido Club were investigated by SIU Security and Internal Auditor offices early last spring.

The UMAC was under investigation because records of its turnover of dues and test fees to its national organization, the American Moo Duk Kwan Society, were incomplete. The trouble also involved a political dispute between former UMAC master instructor Elliot Freeman and national society master instructor Todd Jones.

An investigation by University Police Captain James Kirk found UMAC innocent of any wrongdoing, Kirk said. Kirk would not release a copy of the investigation.

In a letter to UMAC members dated Dec. 4, Rankin said UMAC cannot satisfy its requirements for national affiliation if Freeman is an officer, or serves as liaison for the club. UMAC cannot pay Freeman any money, nor practice, instruct or evaluate UMAC members at the Recreation Center.

Former head instructor of the University Aikido Club, Tod Kingston, resigned Jan. 6 and became head instructor of the Sandrift Aikido Club.

During September and October, three campus Aikido clubs, Sandrift Club, Japanese Arts and Sports Club and University Aikido Club, battled over which club would gain sports club status.

21 die in accidents in snowy Midwest

A blizzard that paralyzed the southern Rockies and Plains roared through the Midwest Tuesday, closing down just about everything in its path, including the world's busiest airport in Chicago, knocking out power to thousands and piling up cars on slick roads.

The violent storm system, which also produced severe thunderstorms and triggered killer tornadoes across the South, has been blamed for at least 21 deaths since Saturday.

Residents of the nation's midsection, usually accustomed to such December outbursts, were caught off guard by the intensity of the storm, which dumped up to a foot of snow from Missouri to the Great Lakes region, closing schools, businesses, roads and government offices en masse.

"We were having such a good winter so far that no one thought it would hit us this hard," said a police dispatcher in Ottumwa, Iowa, hit by nearly a foot of snow. "People didn't remember how to drive in the snow."

In many areas, the snow was accompanied by a bizarre mix of heavy rain, lightning and thunder. The storm produced blizzard conditions in southern Wisconsin, where the heavy snow was whipped by 70-mph winds.

The storm weakened over Lake Michigan at about noon, although heavy snow con-

Tornado hits West Memphis, killing six

WEST MEMPHIS, Ark. (UPI) — National Guard troops patrolled the streets to prevent looting Tuesday and deaths rose to six from a tornado that struck without warning and devastated downtown before jumping the Mississippi River and hitting Memphis, Tenn.

The twister touched down at 9:45 p.m. Monday and devastated a path three-blocks-wide and 1½ miles long on the southeast side of West Memphis, a town of 30,000, before demolishing 10 to 15 houses across the river.

Police Lt. Gary Gitchell said West Memphis does not have a warning siren and that one might not even have helped. "Last night it was just here," he said of the twister. "It was that quick."

Following a foot-by-foot search of collapsed homes, businesses and three apartment complexes, rescue authorities Tuesday said six people were killed and 250 were treated at hospitals on both sides of the river, with 27 admitted.

Leon McGoogan, director of the Arkansas Office of Emergency Services, said the preliminary survey showed 100 houses destroyed or heavily damaged, 35 businesses destroyed, three apartment complexes heavily damaged and an elementary school destroyed. The early damage estimate was $22 million.

"This is a very rough estimate," McGoogan said. "I don't think it will be any lower, but it could be higher."

Downtown was choked with downed trees, utility poles and lines, and debris of all description. Pieces of metal were wrapped around tree limbs 30 to 40 feet off the ground. Several dozen transport trucks parked along Interstate 40 were damaged.

Mary Spears, a church volunteer at the community center, said she was in Memphis when the storm hit. An odd thing, she said, was that it was "real cold, then for about 30 minutes or an hour it got so hot you had to pull your coat off."

"It was blazing hot outside and the sky was red, red," she said. "The next thing I knew there was torrential rain and the sound. It sounded like 20 jets taking off."

Police Lt. Gary Gitchell said some looting occurred during the night, particularly at a supermarket where looters might have taken contaminated food, until National Guard troops started patrols.

tinued to pile up across Wisconsin, northern Illinois and lower Michigan. New England also received some snow from a separate storm system, which was expected to intensify by today.

"It would have been a lot easier storm if we could contend with the snow without the drifts," said Lyle

Alexander of the National Weather Service Public Service Unit in Kansas City, Mo., buried under 12 inches of snow.

In Chicago, the morning rush hour was a nightmare as stalled and abandoned cars and trucks littered area roads, buried under nearly a foot of snow and slush. All roads in nearby McHenry County were closed.

Faculty to review grievance policies

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

The controversy swirling around the University's faculty grievance procedures this semester has caused the faculty senate to launch a full-scale review of the procedures.

At stake, opponents of the current procedures say, is the ability of faculty members to get a fair hearing of their complaints and to protect themselves from retaliation for holding views contrary to those of the University administration.

Administrators say the review is necessary to maintain the reputation of the grievance procedures and ensure they are working properly.

THE CONTROVERSY has pitted the administration against two unions trying to organize faculty and staff at SIU-C — the University Professionals of SIU-C and the Illinois Education Association. The unions have taken up the cases of two professors who claim the University's grievance procedures have not worked for them.

One of the professors, William Hammond of the School of Music, has exhausted his appeals and faces dismissal from the University for having his request for tenure denied. Hammond, who claims he was denied tenure on the basis of personal rather than professional considerations, is suing the University for allegedly violating his right to due process of law.

THE OTHER professor, Kenneth Ruder of the Department of Communication Disorders and Sciences, contends that he was punished by the dean of the College of Communications and Fine Arts for his opposition to the University's 2-percent plan. Ruder's grievances were rejected last month by a CCHA faculty committee.

Ruder claims the committee violated several provisions of the University's grievance procedures, a charge CCHA Dean Keith Sanders has denied. Ruder intends to appeal the decision to Benjamin Shepherd, acting vice president for academic affairs.

SOME ADMINISTRATORS say the unions have taken up the cases merely for publicity. But union spokesmen say they illustrate the problems with the grievance procedures.

Both Charles Zucker, an organizer for the IEA, and Herb Donow, president of UP, say the biggest problem lies in the appeals process. Zucker and Donow say the appeals process is stacked against faculty members, particularly when appeals reach the Board of Trustees, the "Supreme Court" of the University's appeals process.

The board alone has the power to decide whether a grievance deserves a final hearing. It rarely calls for hearings, Zucker and Donow claim, because it is reluctant to go against the wishes of the administration.

BEFORE A case goes to the Board of Trustees, it is heard by the Judicial Review Board, which consists of five faculty members. The president of SIU-C then either accepts or rejects the JRB's decision on the case. If the grievant isn't satisfied with the president's recommendations, he or she can appeal the decision to the board.

But Zucker and Donow claim the board acts merely as a rubber stamp for the administration.

"The Board of Trustees, as a matter of course, rejects the last appeal of faculty members," Zucker said. "What we've seen is a pattern where a faculty member is in a lose, lose situation. It's led us to believe that it's almost impossible for a faculty member to win a grievance at this University."

Both Charles Zucker, an organizer for the IEA, and Herb Donow, president of UP, say the biggest problem lies in the appeals process. Zucker and Donow say the appeals process is stacked against faculty members, particularly when appeals reach the Board of Trustees, the "Supreme Court" of the University's appeals process.

DONOW ADDED: "For the Board of Trustees to reverse a president's decision indicates a lack of confidence in the president. And they really don't like to do that."

But board chairman Harris Rowe said reviewing grievances is not one of the board's duties. The board's mandate "doesn't say anything about our being hearing officers," he said. "We don't feel as though any of us are qualified — especially with a tight agenda around us — to act as a hearing body."

Rowe said the board has delegated the authority to review cases to the chancellor.

"IT'S NOT a matter of being a rubber stamp," he said. "We get voluminous material and we're entitled to raise questions ... I don't think we could bring any higher level of fairness to the grievance procedures if we were sitting there as a hearing body."

Rowe noted that after the board rejected Hammond's appeal last month, it urged

Chancellor Lawrence Pettit to "reassure himself of the fairness of the grievance process."

Pettit says he hasn't made a judgment on whether the grievance procedures should be revised. "Matters like this should be reviewed periodically, especially when there are charges of unfairness," he said.

PETTIT SAID he has instructed the presidents of SIU-C and SIU-E to take a particularly hard look at how grievance hearings are conducted on their campuses. "But that doesn't mean that I necessarily think anything is wrong with the policies."

One solution that Donow and Zucker proposed is broadening grievants' opportunities to submit their cases to binding arbitration. Under current guidelines, cases can only be submitted to binding arbitration if both parties agree to do so.

"THE POINT is, there's really nothing in it (binding arbitration) for the Board of Trustees," Zucker said. "What is the incentive for them to go to binding arbitration? To my knowledge, nobody has ever gone to outside binding arbitration here."

'Throw Momma' succeeds with DeVito, Crystal talent

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

By now, many of you have seen Danny DeVito's hit Billy Crystal over the head with a cast iron frying pan in the previews for "Throw Momma From the Train."

If you haven't seen it, you may be luckier than most, because that scene is probably the most hilarious movie moment in a long time and may be even funnier if you do not know when to expect it during the movie.

Film Review

There are plenty of funny scenes in the movie, but it is a shame that the producers decided to deplete the power of the best one to entice viewers to see the movie.

But "Throw Momma From the Train" succeeds anyway, and it is due mainly to the comedic abilities of DeVito and Crystal.

DeVito stars as Owen Lift, a would-be mystery writer who still lives under the thumb of his domineering mother.

Crystal plays Larry Donner, a novelist whose ex-wife steals his first novel, which climbs to the top of the bestsellers lists and brings her world acclaim. Larry, filled with extreme hatred for his ex-wife, experiences a writer's block and cannot complete the first sentence for a new novel.

Larry also teaches the creative writing course that Owen has enrolled in and one day Owen overhears Larry curse about his wife and say: "I hate her. I wish she was dead."

But the story takes off when Larry critiques one of Owen's mystery stories.

The problem with Owen's story, Larry points out, is that there are only two characters, one of whom is the victim. The solution, Larry advises, is to eliminate the motive and he sends Owen to an Alfred Hitchcock movie to learn how to motivate a murder mystery.

After seeing Hitchcock's "Strangers on a Train," Owen mistakenly assumes that if he kills Larry's wife that Larry will kill Owen's momma. Each will have an alibi at the time of the murder, thus eliminating each other's motives.

The problem is that Larry never had the plan in mind and does not have an alibi at the time of his wife's death.

What follows is a series of hilarious attempts to kill Momma, which culminates in an attempt to throw her from a train.

Momma is played repulsively by Anne Ramsey and there are times when you may root for either Owen or Larry to murder her. Momma slaps, yells, punches and kicks at everyone, and is a gross caricature of the wicked old lady that lived on your block when you were growing up.

Even Larry, who is convinced he cannot murder

Owen's momma, is tempted to do so when she hits Larry in the groin with her walking cane.

"She's not a woman," Larry says. "She's the Terminator."

"Throw Momma From the Train" marks DeVito's fine motion picture directorial debut. DeVito seems absorbed by close-ups and camera angles, which enhance the texture of the film and sometimes adds to the humor of the scene.

DeVito probably grew up watching Bugs Bunny and Road Runner cartoons, because his first movie seems to be a direct influence of the type of slapstick and pratfalls associated with the Looney Tunes cartoons.

'Momma' becomes No. 1 movie

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — "Throw Momma From the Train" whistled into 1,470 theaters around the country last week and loaded up with $7.3 million to take over the No. 1 track at the box office.

The Danny DeVito-Billy Crystal black comedy dealing with a conspiracy to dispatch a mother and sister made its debut at the top of the rankings.

The fast-paced romp directed by DeVito derailed "Three Men and a Baby," the Tom Selleck-Ted Danson-Steve Guttenberg comedy, which had been at the head of the pack for the past two weeks.

"Three Men and a Baby" grossed $7 million, a 16 percent drop from the previous week. In three weeks it has earned $34.6 million playing in 1,016 theaters.

Another newcomer, "Wall Street," made a bullish debut with $4.1 million on only 730 screens. The Oliver Stone film stars Michael Douglas and Charlie Sheen in a drama of the chicanery of stock market manipulation. It was No. 3.

Skidding from No. 2 the previous week to No. 4 was the uproarious Steve Martin-John Candy comedy "Planes, Trains and Automobiles," which dropped 27 percent. It grossed $3.6 million in 1,578 theaters for a three-week total of $22.2 million.

The fall season's biggest hit, "Fatal Attraction," continued to attract crowds with a gross of $2 million playing on 1,340 screens. In 13 weeks it has amassed $117.2 million.

Arnold Schwarzenegger's "The Running Man" began to pant for breath, dropping back to the No. 6 spot with a gross of $1.8 million. In five weeks it has earned $31.6 million.

Worth noting was the debut of Steven Spielberg's new drama, "Empire of the Sun," a heralded World War II story of an English lad's misadventures in China when the Japanese invade. "Empire of the Sun" was No. 9 with a gross of $1.3 million, in a scant 225 theaters in its opening frame.

So far in 1987 all films have brought in $3.7 billion as opposed to $3.3 billion in 1986 and $3.4 billion in 1985.

The top 10, last week's gross, total gross, weeks in release:

1. "Throw Momma from the Train," $7.3 million, 1 week.
2. "Three Men and a Baby," $7 million, $34.6 million, 3 weeks.
3. "Wall Street," $4.1 million, 1 week.
4. "Planes, Trains and Automobiles," $3.6 million, $22.2 million, 3 weeks.
5. "Fatal Attraction," $2 million, $117.2 million, 13 weeks.
6. "The Running Man," $1.8 million, $31.6 million, 5 weeks.
7. "Cinderella," $1.6 million, $21.1 million, 4 weeks.
8. "Nuts," $1.4 million, $16.7 million, 4 weeks.
9. "Empire of the Sun," $1.3 million, 1 week.
10. "Dirty Dancing," $844,229, $51.4 million, 17 weeks.

'Empire' gets best picture

NEW YORK (UPI) — Steven Spielberg's "Empire of the Sun" was named Tuesday best picture of 1987 by the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, whose annual awards are considered harbingers of Hollywood's Oscar awards.

Spielberg was also named best director for the Warner Brothers film starring juvenile actor Christian Bale and John Malkovich.

Deadline for Film Festival entries announced

The deadline for entering films and videos for competition in the Tenth Annual Big Muddy Film Festival is Jan. 15, as the Department of Cinema and Photography readies itself for the week of campus screenings of festival entries and presentations by guest filmmakers, held Feb. 1 to Feb. 7.

Entry format is limited to 16mm films and three-quarter inch videocassettes. Video entries must be produced originally as videos (not film to video transfers) and will be judged separately from film entries.

The entries must have been completed after December 1986 and must not have been entered in previous Big Muddy competitions.

Awards of $1,500 will be awarded to the winning entries. The winning entries will be shown in a Best of Festival screening, which also features the honorable mention entries.

The winning and honorable mention entries also may be shown on the "Best of the Big Muddy Film Festival" program to be aired on WSIU-TV, a public television station.

The festival program includes a tribute to Japanese filmmaker Akira Kurosawa, which includes the films

"Seven Samurai," "Ikuru," "Dersu," and "Kagemusha." The jurors also will present some of their films.

For details and entry forms contact: Big Muddy Film Festival, Department of Cinema and Photography, 1101 Communications, Carbondale, Ill. 62901 or call 453-2365.

Mailing tips for movers, vacationers

Moving? Going on vacation? Leaving school for the holidays?

Then make sure you receive all of your mail, all of the time.

The U.S. Postal Service says it's simple, as long as you pay heed to some simple tips:

1. When you move, fill out one (1) change-of-address card for the whole family. Pick one up at the local post office before you actually move, and fill it out completely.

Information you must provide includes names of all persons who will be moving, new address, old address, and the date the new address will go into effect. Turn in the card at the post office service window, or drop it in the mail. (Postage is pre-paid, thanks to the post office.)

2. Don't forget to check in with your new post office when you get to where you're moving. Notify your new postal carrier or post office of your new address—even if you moved only across town.

First class mail, letters and such, will automatically be forwarded. Second class mail, magazines and newspapers, will be forwarded for 60 days free of charge.

3. Be sure to send in change-of-address forms to publications you subscribe to. Credit card companies, banks, utilities, schools, churches and civic groups should also be notified of your new address as soon as possible.

4. If you're going for the winter (or making any other kind of temporary move), have your mail forwarded while you visit. Use the standard change-of-address card and mark the appropriate box to indicate the change is temporary. You will be required to fill in "start" and "stop" dates.

5. Vacationers, college students enjoying a semester break, and others on short trips can have their mail held at the post office until they return. Notify your carrier in writing, or fill out a written request blank at the post office.

Follow these simple tips and your mail will follow you—or be waiting for you when you get back.

Student gets merit award

William A. West, a journalism student, Country Club Road in Murphysboro, has received a certificate of merit in the General News Writing Competition of the William Randolph Hearst Foundation's 28th annual Journalism Awards Program for a story concerning rural fire boundaries.

West finished in the top 20 among 123 students from 67 schools entered in the contest.

Jennifer L. Kauth, a University of Washington student, took the first-place award, a $1,500 scholarship.

Retiree establishes scholarship

By University News Service

A retired professor of clothing and textiles, who remembers what it's like to be a student, has established a $10,000 scholarship endowment fund through the SIU Foundation to assist students engaged in educational research.

"I'm a firm believer in education and I know what it's like to work your way through college," said Rose Padgett, who earned her master's and doctorate degrees while working and teaching on the side.

Padgett, who chaired the clothing and textiles department from 1963 to 1972, set up the Dr. Rose and Essie Padgett Scholarship fund to help a junior, senior or graduate student who is also a member of Sigma Xi, a national science honorary organization.

She knows the lengths to which some students go to finance their educations, recalling how she measured and sewed window curtains for a dormitory at the University of Tennessee in return for room and board for a time while she worked on her master's degree in the 1950s.

Padgett and her late sister, Essie, both natives of Bradford, England, came to Carbondale from Purdue University in 1962, when Rose accepted an associate professorship at the University. Padgett taught for 15 years, retiring in 1977.

Given for the first time this fall, the Padgett award went to Michael Woods of De Soio (R.R. 1), who is working on a doctorate in botany. Woods, a native of Williamsburg, Ky., earned his bachelor's degree at Cumberland College, Williamsburg, and his master's degree at Murray State University, Murray, Ky.

The award, worth $200 this year, will be sustained by interest earned on the Foundation endowment.

Padgett, herself a member of Sigma Xi, worked on a committee which helped establish a local Sigma Xi chapter at the University in 1963.

"My first love was teaching and then research," Padgett said. "I wanted to establish something for educational research and chose a scholarship for Sigma Xi because of its strength and background."

Padgett specialized in textiles research and the economics of the textile industry, as well as teaching. She earned an international reputation as a textile scientist and did considerable research on natural and synthetic fabrics. Her work included studies of flame-retardant and soil-release materials.

She helped pioneer interior design instruction at SIU-C and helped build the program, which later evolved into a department of its own.

Padgett, a naturalized American citizen, came to the United States in 1949 as a graduate student in a high school teacher exchange program. She spent the following year as an associate professor at the University of Tennessee, where she earned a master's degree in 1951. She earned her doctoral degree from Purdue University in 1955, where she taught as assistant professor from 1955 to 1962.

Counseling program gains accreditation

By University News Service

Graduates who plan to counsel alcoholics and drug abusers should find more job opportunities, thanks to newly-earned accreditation in that field, a professor in the counseling program said.

The graduate student training program in the University's Rehabilitation Institute has been accredited by the Illinois Certification Boards Inc. The private non-profit organization spent more than a year reviewing the Institute's courses, faculty, teaching materials and internship sites in alcohol and substance abuse counselor training. It is the only Illinois education institution outside the Chicago area to be accredited.

Accreditation means that new graduates automatically become certified, with certification being transferable to more than 30 other states.

In recent years, counselors to alcoholics and drug abusers frequently drew from their own histories of substance abuse to help others. In many cases they had little formal training, according to Patrick F. Taricone, assistant professor in the Rehabilitation Institute.

But mental health agencies are now looking more to counselors with professional training in substance abuse, Taricone said. Certification is "almost becoming required," and many working counselors are returning to school to gain it.

Most of the 17 SIU-C students now enrolled in the Rehabilitation Institute's substance abuse counseling program have bachelor's degrees in fields ranging from psychology to recreational therapy.

Enrollment has increased by about 25 percent since the Institute began seeking accreditation. And a number of treatment agencies call the Institute each month seeking qualified professional counselors, Taricone said.

Within the last two to three years, approximately 20 of the program's graduates have been placed as counselors in drug and alcohol abuse programs across the nation.

"Certification makes the program more attractive to students and to employers," Taricone said.

The alcohol counselor training program began in 1977. It gradually expanded to include drug abuse counselor training, officially recognized as a concentration in 1986.

Kennedy defends 1985 decision against equal pay in different jobs

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Supreme Court nominee Anthony Kennedy defended Tuesday his controversial 1985 decision to strike down a ruling that said Washington state's women employees should be paid the same as men in different jobs.

That case has angered women's groups and is one of the reasons cited by the National Organization for Women for opposing Kennedy's nomination to the high court to replace retired Justice Lewis Powell.

Kennedy, 51, wrote the opinion for a unanimous three-judge panel of the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, and he told the Senate Judiciary Committee on his second day of confirmation hearings that the Washington state scheme went far beyond federal laws such as the Equal Pay Act and Title 7 of the Civil Rights Act, which require equal treatment for women.

"You must from the onset distinguish between equal pay and comparable pay," Kennedy said in response to a question from Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio. "The Congress of the United States has a statute that says women and men in the same positions have to be given the same pay. That is not what this case was about ... This case was about the theory that women should be paid the same as men for different jobs" of comparable worth.

"The Congress of the United States has a statute that says women and men in the same positions have to be given the same pay. That is not what this case is about."

On other topics, the nominee reiterated his belief that a right to privacy does exist in the Constitution. Though not specifically cited in the document, the right to privacy is the underpinning of many landmark Supreme Court decisions, particularly the 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision permitting abortion.

"It's very clear to me that privacy is a most helpful noun in that it seems to sum up rather quickly values we hold very deeply," he said.

Answering questions from Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., about criminal law, the nominee said the exclusionary rule, a thorn in the side of the Reagan Justice Department, is a "workable part of the law enforcement system." The rule throws out evidence, and often the case with it, that was gathered illegally.

He also characterized the Miranda rule requiring police to inform suspects of their rights to remain silent and to an attorney, as "almost a revolution" in law that may have gone beyond the necessity of the case.

In a related development, the American Bar Association released its formal report on Kennedy, giving him the highest rating of "well qualified."

Kennedy's remarks and the generally muted tenor of this week's Senate proceedings are in sharp contrast to September's confirmation hearings for Judge Robert Bork, President Reagan's first choice to replace Powell.

Bork, viewed by some senators as a right-wing ideologue, was constantly on the defensive during his confirmation hearings. On Oct. 6, the Senate rejected his nomination 58-42. The second nominee, Douglas Ginsburg, withdrew in November.

Reagan OKs independent counsel bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Reagan signed a new independent counsel bill into law Tuesday, despite a pending court challenge and his own reservations about the law's constitutionality.

In a surprise move that the president conceded was "extraordinary," Reagan signed the legislation, passed overwhelmingly in the House and Senate, that renews and strengthens the current law for the next five years.

At the same time, however, Reagan said the administration would continue its efforts in court to have the law — enacted in the wake of the Watergate scandal — thrown out because it illegally encroaches on executive authority to prosecute.

The independent counsel provisions of the 1978 Ethics in Government Act, triggered at least seven times since Reagan took office and under which the first formal charges were brought forward this year, currently are under legal attack in the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia.

U.S.: Dollar need not slip

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. government reiterated Tuesday that it is not seeking further declines in the dollar and continues to work closely with economic allies to maintain stability of exchange rates.

The statement by White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater was the same as it was the day before and he said, "I'll say it tomorrow."

"As the president has stated ... and this represents today's thinking, we are not seeking a decline in the dollar."

'Angels' set to deliver gifts to Mall for needy children

Toys for the University Mall's Christmas for Kids program will be delivered by angels.

Harper Angel Flight, a fund-raising organization sponsored by the Air Force and ROTC, is co-sponsoring the program with the Mall Merchants Association, the Southern Illinoisan and TCI Cablevision.

Requests were taken from needy families who wanted gifts for their children. The group received about 2,500 requests this year, Julie Hampe, commander of Angel Flight, said.

"This year it's down a little," Hampe said. "There were less requests than expected with so many people laid off from work, but the toys are better quality this year, she said.

The toys that have been collected are being repaired by Harper Angel Flight members with the help of Arnold Air Society, a group of Air Force cadets, and Civil Air Patrol, auxiliary Air Force members.

The toys will be handed out today and Thursday in front of J.C. Penney at the University Mall.

World's reindeer future uncertain, professor claims

By University News Service

While Rudolph and all of his friends get Santa's loving care, America's largest herd of living reindeer faces an uncertain future, according to an SIU-C lecturer.

American oil companies want Alaska's arctic coastal plain in the National Arctic Wildlife Refuge opened for oil development. James M. Glover is convinced that such a move would be bad news for arctic wildlife, especially the Porcupine Caribou Herd-North American reindeer.

Unlike smaller caribou herds in Alaska, the Porcupine group has a single calving ground. Each summer the 280,000 member herd migrates to the northern coastal plain where the young are born.

"I fear that it would be very difficult to have oil development there without causing a decline in the size of the herd," Glover, who teaches in the College of Education, said.

Alaska's arctic coastal plain has been described as one of the richest wildlife areas in the world. Caribou, grizzly bears, polar bears and dozens of bird species make their home in the refuge and the adjacent Northern Yukon National Park in Canada.

Oil development would pump up the state's stagnant economy, but it would also mean construction of roads, air strips, drilling platforms, a city to house several thousand people, a sewage system, recreational facilities and all the other requisites of community life.

All would be constructed where the caribou pass through or actually go to for calving.

"It's all speculative," Glover said. "Nobody can guarantee that oil development would impact the caribou, but I think there is a great chance that it would."

Glover, an avid environmentalist, says the Reagan administration is favoring the oil industry's proposal "very, very strongly." He estimates there is a 50-50 chance a decision on the issue will come before President Ronald Reagan leaves office.

Prudhoe Bay is located about 250 miles to the west of the proposed site at Katovic. Drilling and oil development started there about 18 years ago.

"It shows what can be expected," Glover said. "Since 1973, 2.5 million gallons of oil have spilled on to the tundra." Figures come from the U.S. Department of the Interior.

Toxic waste is another problem. About 58 million gallons have been dumped. "That includes a lot of metals such as lead and chromium," Glover said.

Man's presence also drastically affects the wolf population, and wolves prey on caribou and other wildlife. "They keep the caribou population under control and keep the herd healthy by removing many sick and old animals," Glover said.

Wolves usually abandon an area once man moves in, and those that stay are often shot. Oil exploration will disrupt the dynamics between the Porcupine Caribou Herd and the wolves, Glover says.

Experts estimate at least 3.2 billion barrels of oil are located under the tundra. It would take the United States just 200 days to use that much if it were the only available source, Glover said.

Caribou have lived on the coastal plain for centuries. About 1,000 Indians and Eskimos still depend on caribou for food and to a lesser extent for clothing.

"It's a culture that would be destroyed without the caribou," Glover said.

Most national conservation organizations are lobbying against the proposal to open the area to oil exploration.

"Even if the caribou could be saved, the wilderness character would be destroyed," Glover said.

COLLEGE STUDENT INCOME.

A good part-time job that doesn't interfere with class schedules, student activities and study time is pretty tough to find in most college towns. That's why the nearby Army Reserve makes so much sense to students.

After completing Basic Training and Advanced Individual Training, you serve one weekend a month (usually two 8-hour days, so Saturday and Sunday evenings are yours). And you earn over $75 a week to start. You go to two weeks of annual training at full Army pay.

If a part-time income could help, stop by or call:
