Ruby's crime deemed act of instability

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—FBI agents cast a wide net after the November 1963 shooting death of Lee Harvey Oswald, trying to determine whether Dallas nightclub owner Jack Ruby had acted alone or as part of a Mafia- or Communist-led conspiracy to silence President Kennedy's assassin. Newly released records showed Tuesday.

Ultimately, the agency concluded that Ruby was an unstable person who had acted impulsively and on his own when he shot Oswald at point-blank range as the accused assassin was being transferred to the Dallas County Jail two days after Kennedy was killed.

The stunning moments were captured live on national television.

Before reaching their conclusion, FBI agents interviewed informants from New Orleans to Chicago and from Los Angeles to New York, gathering often "strange" and conflicting data about Ruby.

The details of the bureau's efforts and conclusions are contained in a 21,000-page FBI "headquarters file" on Ruby, which was made public Tuesday by the National Archives.

Release of the long-secret files marked the second time this year that U.S. archivists opened once-

Gay-rights act ruled unlawful

Los Angeles Times

DENVER—In a victory for gay-rights advocates, a Denver judge on Tuesday ruled unconstitutional a Colorado measure banning local laws that protect homosexuals from discrimination.

Denver District Court Judge Jeffrey Bayless also made permanent his injunction blocking the law from taking effect, saying that Amendment 2 "violates the fundamental right of an identifiable group to participate in the political process."

Bayless deliberated two months before returning his ruling following an eight-day trial that hinged on whether the popular vote may violate fundamental rights.

The ruling also provides a national forum for debating the legal rights of gays in the 1990s.

During the October trial, dozens of expert witnesses gave opposing views on whether gays should have the same anti-discrimination protections as religious and racial minorities and whether homosexuality is chosen or based on genetic and environmental factors.

In his 17-page ruling Tuesday, Bayless said that evidence presented at the trial did not show the existence of "militant gay aggression in this state that endangers the state's political functions," as attorneys for Colorado had argued in order to try to prove a compelling reason to uphold the amendment.

The judge noted that backers of the amendment insisted during the trial that "homosexuals are condemned by Scripture and therefore, discrimination based on that religious teaching is protected within freedom of religion."

"On balance," Bayless ruled, "this court concludes that the two rights, the religious right to discriminate and the homosexuals' to participate in the political process, can coexist."

But Bayless refused to rule that gays are a disadvantaged minority group who should receive special protection from the courts.

In the first of several hastily called Denver news conferences Tuesday, state Attorney General Gale Norton said that she plans to appeal the ruling to the Colorado Supreme Court.

"It is absolutely clear," Norton said, "that this case is one that need to be decided by a higher court."

Hailing the ruling as a victory, gay-rights groups called off a year-old national boycott of Colorado that cost the state as much as $120 million in lost convention and tourism revenues but had limited impact on the state's multibillion-dollar tourism industry.

Jackson County Clerk says no to sixth term

By Kellie Huttes
Administration Writer

Jackson County Clerk Robert B. Harrell, D-Carbondale, stated in a letter to his committee members Monday that he has withdrawn from the race for county clerk.

Harrell, who has served five terms, for almost 20 years, said he is resigning because he wants to spend more time with his family and travel, not because of the voting controversy surrounding

Family, travel to become Harrell's top retirement priority

SIUC students.

He was last elected in 1989.

George Everingham, a member of Harrell's committee, said Harrell's wife has been wanting him to resign for a long time.

In his letter to the committee Harrell said he would endorse and support democratic county clerk candidate James L. Pribble, D-De Soto.

Harrell said he discussed his possible resignation to Pribble in the spring, and asked him if he would be interested in running for county clerk.

"I had thought about resigning for a while because I have 10 years of retirement built up at SIUC, 20 years as the county clerk. I will be 64 in March. I don't want to over stay my welcome as clerk."

Harrell said he was concerned about who would succeed him as clerk, and Pribble is a chance to leave the office in good hands, he said.

"Jim (Pribble) would be a good public servant—I actively sought him out and asked him if he would be interested in running," Harrell said. "I have worked with him on the (Jackson) County Board and appreciate his abilities. He is very knowledgeable and has the intelligence and stability to make a fine county clerk."

The recent controversy between the county clerk's office and SIUC students regarding correct voter registration did not sway him to drop out of the race, he said.

The clerk's office is sending out address-verification notices to all registered voters in the Carbondale area, Harrell said.

"This is not the first time there has been a controversy at the Hotel draft may be OK'd despite board concerns

Lease negotiations persist as funding questions continue

By Shavanna Donovan
Administration Writer

A final lease draft for a 160-room, campus hotel may be signed between SIUC administration and the Turnkey Development Consortium this week despite SFU

Board of Trustee concerns.

A final draft could be discussed and approved by officials this week before it would be sent to developers, SIUC student trustee Mark Kochan said.

"It is a wait-and-see attitude," Kochan said. "A lease could be given to the developers soon, and it will probably be an either or situation."

Officials attribute the hotel delays to satisfying the SIUC Board of Trustees and legal-counsel concerns of University funding and responsibility.

James Tweedy, vice president for administration, said the lease still is being negotiated.

"We are still talking and we want to be sure to incorporate a performance bond and letter of credit that the trustees asked for," Tweedy said. "We will keep working it out."

The idea of a campus hotel was approved by the trustees last spring. Hotel construction was scheduled to begin in August, but without a signed agreement plans have not been approved.

The proposed hotel will be constructed adjacent to the Student Center in an L-shape that would wrap around the south end of the center with the long end connected to the south end. The short end would wrap around and behind the center brushing against Thompson Woods and the patio.

HUNGARY SEEKS SMOOTH POWER TRANSFER — Reacting smoothly to the death of Prime Minister Jozsef Antall, Hungary's ruling party has proposed that Interior Minister Peter Boross complete Antall's unfinished term, signaling that it does not want early elections. Boross, who became interim prime minister when Antall died of cancer on Sunday, is known as a conservative, blunt and bland politician. Director of a Budapest catering company from 1965 to 1989, he entered politics when communism collapsed four years ago and rose to the top by virtue of his close friendship with Antall.

COALITION GOVERNMENT FIGHTS TO SURVIVE — Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa battled to keep his coalition government afloat Tuesday in the stormy wake of his decision to end the Japan's ban on rice imports, but opposition politicians were equally at sea over how to proceed. With the current session of Japan's parliament scheduled to end Wednesday, the opposition Liberal Democratic Party is weighing the risks and benefits of some form of no-confidence motion to challenge Hosokawa's government.

TOP MILITARY ADVISOR ADDRESSES PRESS — Gen. John M. Shalikshvili, who maintained a low profile in his first two months as the nation's top-ranking military officer, made a charming and occasionally steely debut in the Pentagon press room Tuesday with a tour of the national security horizon. In all it was a laudless performance by the president's new senior military adviser. Shalikshvili's public affairs advisers had urged him to raise his profile in modest steps, projecting an image of quiet competence without making much news on controversies of the day. Shalikshvili did that, and even flattered the press.

WEST'S RUSSIAN POLICIES QUESTIONED — The strong anti-refugee sentiment in Russia's parliamentary election is causing soul-searching about whether the West contributed in some way to the backlash and whether a change in strategy now could protect the still fragile economic transformation. Few doubt that Sunday's vote, in which the ultranationalist Liberal Democratic Party bested all other parties, was in large measure a protest against what many perceive as harsh economic policies imposed on Russia by the West.

FBI EXAMINES GERMAN, U.S. HATE GROUPS — Suspected links between extreme racist groups in Germany and U.S. hate organizations are under examination by the FBI, its director disclosed Tuesday. After meetings with cabinet ministers and top officials of BKA, the German counterpart of the FBI, FBI Director Louis J. Freeh, stressed that the inquiry is just getting under way. But his pledge to BKA President Hans-Ludwig Zacher, who provided leads for the inquiry, that it would be conducted "vigorously" marked the first official acknowledgment that the United States is investigating such transatlantic links.

U.S. TO REVIEW HUGE ALASKAN TIMBER SALE — The new head of the U.S. Forest Service Tuesday agreed to a request by conservation groups that the agency review a huge timber sale in Alaska's Tongass National Forest, which the groups allege violates federal environmental laws. The sale of 267 million board feet of standing timber in the Tongass, the nation's largest national forest, had been approved by the regional forester in Alaska. Under the decision Tuesday by Forest Service chief Jack Ward Thomas, senior agency officials will have 30 days to review the terms of the sale and study allegations by a Forest Service whistle-blower.

Business leader recovering in Chicago hospital

By Jeff McIntire
Business Writer

An SIUC alumnus who is the founder of one of the world's largest lessors of computer technology is recuperating from a colon-cancer operation in a Chicago-area hospital.

Kenneth N. Pontikes, a 1963 alumnus, founded Comdisco, Inc. in Rosemont and the Pontikes Center for Management of Information in Rehn Hall.

Pontikes was diagnosed with colon cancer Monday and is recovering after a successful operation, company officials said.

James Stanton, senior vice president of the multibillion-dollar company, said Pontikes is expected to return to work in January.

Stanton said company employees all were relieved to hear that Pontikes will recover.

"It's been a major concern because we are a very people-oriented, family-type company, but we are all relieved to hear the positive news," he said.

Mary Mester, vice president of corporate communications for the company, said company employees were closely following the updates on Pontikes' condition.

"Ken Pontikes is someone who touched the lives of many people, so obviously many of us were concerned," she said.

Moster said the Pontikes family requested privacy and is not available for comment.

Pontikes, who graduated from SIUC in marketing, is an active member of the College of Business and Administration External Advisory Board and has made a difference for the university, college officials said.

Michael Haywood, director of minority programs and undergraduate recruitment for the business college, said Pontikes is a highly regarded alumnus.

"He is a person the college is very proud of for his accomplishments," he said.

Heralding Hanukkah

Jewish community celebrates traditions with festival of lights

By Charlotte Rivers
Entertainment Writer

A festival that started in 165 B.C. with a miracle still is celebrated every year in Jewish homes throughout the world.

Hanukkah, also known as the festival of lights, celebrates the rededication of the Temple of Jerusalem after it was used for pagan rites for three years.

The holiday, which began Dec. 9 and ends tonight, is symbolized by the menorah, which holds eight candles that are lit each night.

Robin Gross, director of the Hillel Foundation, said the tradition holds special meaning for the Jewish faith.

When the temple was reclaimed by Judah Maccabee in 165 B.C., there was only enough oil to keep the eternal flame burning for one night, Gross said.

"There was a miracle and the light burned for eight days, which gave them enough time to get more oil and the flame was kept burning," she said.

Today, the miracle is remembered each night of Hanukkah, when an additional candle is lit for each of the eight days.

"The message is about the freedom to worship and religious tolerance," Gross said.

Sam Goldman, SIUC professor of educational administration and higher education, said that, to him, the holiday symbolizes re-dedication.

"It stands for renewal and freedom of religion," he said. "It is a family festival, when special foods, especially latkes which are made from potatoes, are served, there is a ceremony for lighting the candles and an exchange of gifts between family members."

SIUC student Aaron Tabackman, a junior in radio and television from Meriden, Conn., said it is difficult to retain his religious heritage in a Christian society.

"Growing up in a Catholic neighborhood, I tried to assimilate myself and it was hard to express my Jewishness," he said.

"Since college, I have a stronger sense of my heritage."

Tabackman said college, which is more diverse than his hometown, has helped him develop a pride in his faith.

Although he is not doing anything special to observe Hanukkah because he is studying for finals, his family observed the holiday when he was a child.

"We did the lighting of the candles and had gifts," he said.

"The gifts were usually some smaller ones and then one big gift on the last day."

SIUC student Earl Zeligman, a graduate student in finance from West Hartford, Conn., said he grew up in a community that was predominantly Jewish.

"I never felt Jewish until I came to Carbondale," he said.

"But, because I have always associated Jewish communities with cities, I was amazed to find a Hillel Foundation and a synagogue here."

Zeligman said that because the Jewish community in Carbondale and at SIUC is small, it tends to be overlooked, even though the University stresses its diversity.

"It disturbs me that there is a display for Christmas in the Student Center and nothing for Hanukkah," he said.

Voting laws reflect apathetic behavior

THE SUBJECT OF STUDENT VOTING IN relation to voter registration laws and in-person absentee ballots has been on the lips of students and city officials in recent weeks. The fact that the primaries are scheduled during SIUC's spring break was enough to make members of the Undergraduate Student Government and of the Graduate and Professional Council call for a change in absentee ballot rules. And as if this scheduling conflict was not enough to discourage students from voting, the Jackson County Clerk's office began issuing notices, during the week of finals, informing students they needed to verify their addresses or be dropped from the list of registered voters.

The fact that the city has been resistant to the proposal of allowing SIUC students to vote through in-person absentee ballots and chose to mail out notices during the busiest time of the year for students, should tell this segment of the population something — no one believes students will be voting anyway. The accusations of apathetic behavior directed at students have long existed, and unfortunately for the state of American politics are not without foundation.

WHILE STUDENT LEADERS HAVE CONTINUED to fight for students' rights on voting issues, not much has been heard from the rest of the student body. Perhaps if students were to get out and vote on a regular basis, instead of just complaining about the state of the world around them or completely ignoring the issue, more attention would be paid to their interests.

At one time SIUC was known for its radical student protests, which were about more than just fines for jaywalking. This is not to say all students on campus are indifferent to political issues, because some are involved. Unfortunately it is the majority that dictates the image society has of students, not the minority made up of those who are active. Universities are designed to be places of higher learning in charge of shaping tomorrow's leaders and preparing them to make a difference or at the least some societal contribution.

The student turnout during the last presidential election was the largest in nearly a decade, but the question remains: Were students really interested or did Tabitha Soren and the MTV Rock the Vote campaign just have them pumped up? If this was the case, the state of future governmental affairs may end up in the hands of such upstanding citizens as Beavis and Butthead.

STUDENTS SHOULD DEPEND ON THEIR elected campus representatives to plead their case to the City Council on the absentee voting issue, for that is why we have these officials. However, if these representatives are the only ones interested in what is going on there is no point in fighting to change things. It is surprising that nearly 200 students were present at the meeting on raising bar entry age, but few could find the time to lend their support on the voting issue.

Students who have received notices about their voter registration status should do their best to rectify the situation, so that they are able to vote in the primaries if they choose to do so. It was bad timing on the part of the Jackson County Clerk's office to send out the notices during a time when most students rarely sleep much less read their mail, but the situation does not have to turn out poorly.

The time has come for students to let their own voices be heard by the city, not just those of their leaders. Those in charge of voter registration and the laws surrounding it are more likely to pay attention to 21,000 voices, than to two they have heard all semester. The future of the democratic process in the state and the country depends on what happens today; students can no longer afford to stay silent.

Letters to the Editor

Intolerance caused rampage

"Handyman turned hate into murder." Well spoken.

How ironic that you need a headline like that so soon after doing your work on racial and other forms of intolerance.

Racial intolerance played a big part in the decision of the accused to go on a rampage.

If my guess is correct, though, something deeper and more pervasive worked on this man for a long time before he boarded a commuter train with murderous intent.

He and the twenty-three people he is said to have shot are to some extent victims of emotional isolation.

When I was a nurse, I had patients like Colin Ferguson.

Usually my patients were suicidal, but they felt a hate something like the hate Ferguson felt and acted on a similar murderous impulse.

They also acted with that same lethal sense of emotional isolation that Ferguson so obviously shows.

Look at the list of people Ferguson hates: Caucasians, Asians, and among African-Americans, "Uncle Tom Negroes, rich Black attorneys, and so-called civil rights leaders." With so many people to hate, whom does Ferguson have left to like?

Not many.

That makes for a sense of isolation. That makes people do desperate things, such as murder and suicide.

You can do at least two things to reduce the chance of future rampages like the one in New York.

First, you can support further research into emotional isolation, its effects, and ways to reduce it.

Secondly, you can look around yourself for people who seem to show signs of emotional isolation and try to get help for them.

Pay attention to little things that sometimes mean a lot. People often signal big frustrations in little ways. Maybe if someone had cared enough to notice Ferguson's anger and arrange counseling for him, New York would have five fewer funerals today.

As always, a big thank you to the Department of English Doctor Mary Lamb who encouraged me to use my experience as a nurse to understand suicidal theories in Stevie Smith's poetry.

Doctor Leland Person supported my looking at Chopin's "Awakening" from the same point of view. One day my research may save a life or two. If it does, give the credit to SIU.

Locks a waste of time, money; student criticizes new security

In the triads, security door locks and bathroom locks are being installed on each floor.

Everyone in the building will have the keys to each security door.

Only the residents living on that floor will have keys to the bathroom door lock.

I feel this is a waste of time and money. In my building, most residents do not want the extra locks. The extra locks are a big inconvenience.

The people who decided to put the locks on said the locks are for our protection and to keep bathrooms from being trashed.

Only one floor has had their bathroom trashed.

It happened once before this and another time the locks were installed.

What will happen when someone has to vomit and cannot get the door unlocked in time?

What happens if fire is blocking one of the stairways?

How many people will look for their keys before leaving the building?

A lot of people would be hurt because they did have their keys to open the security door to get to the other stairway.

These locks are a waste of time and money.

This is another example of how the University wastes our money.

—Viver Johnson, pre-business, freshman Student wants an 'alternative'

This Thursday evening, in an almost reflex response, I plan to go to Detour's after my final. I recently read a review of the bar by Dan Page in Insider Magazine.

The article really knew how to make the place sound phenomenal, but what I want to know is whether anybody ever questions the monotony of the place and music they play week after week, time and time again, every Thursday in the same order? For "alternative" Thursdays, they offer little alternative but a lot of repetition.

—Aaron Tobackman, Radio and TV, junior

Letters to the Editor

Professor professes beliefs on religious issue

The editorial "Church may turn tide toward gay tolerance" (L/E 12/14/93) implies opposing homosexual behavior is equivalent to hating people who practice such behavior. If a doctor urges a patient to stop smoking, is that hating him? Fighting against cigarette advertising is not equivalent to hating smokers. Nor as a professor, am I hateful to mark incorrect answers as wrong.

In the scientific or academic realms there is some consensus about what is correct. In the moral realm each individual forms value judgements, based on his or her view of the world. Without a common starting point, we arrive at differing conclusions about what is wrong behavior.

Having weighted evidence in my realms, I have concluded that the best starting point is accepting the authority of the Bible (as it is written, not as conveniently interpreted to agree with what we feel, however sincerely).

The Biblical "Love you neighbor as yourself" is not simply a warm feeling toward others, nor indiscriminately approving of their behavior. Biblical love is caring enough to seek the best for another. "Best" includes both the present and the eternal aspects. God describes it as living in an obedient and loving relationship with him through Jesus.

Throughout the Bible (not just in Romans or Leviticus as implied by the editorial) homosexuality is declared to be wrong.

Since hatred of another person is another person is always wrong, I and many other people oppose not only the practice of homosexuality, but also those who hate homosexuals. Finding out that a friend of mine has chosen a homosexual lifestyle has not changed my appreciation and love for that friend, even while I believe their behavior is wrong.

Do the editors extend their tolerance to those of us who sincerely accept the authority of the Bible?

—Paul Gibson, Asst. Professor, PLSS.

Putting religion in schools will not solve social ills

I am writing to you in response to the letter written by Steven Mitchell in the December 9 edition. Though it is not my place to belittle or criticize any other member of this university, I feel that his letter required a rebuttal of sorts.

To begin with, I would be very interested to see the almanac from which Steve retrieved his facts.

I find it very hard to believe that a fact about cohabitation after 1962 would be available anywhere.

Secondly, even if such statements were proven to be factual, I fail to see the relevance between any of the statistics and the separation of church and state.

Do you think that requiring prayer in a public school on the south-side of Chicago will stop the Vice-Lords from killing the Folks? Stop Sussie and Jim from having unprotected sex? And how may marriages will you save by forcing children to worship the Lord?

What about children who are Jewish, Muslim, or even Agnostic? I have no problem with you raising your children to worship God, but then send them to a private school. After all, that's what they are there for.

Aside from not being a universal solvent, putting religion back in our schools is also against the constitution.

We need to teach our children to have faith in themselves, and to have the courage to do what is right; that is how we build a brighter future. Everyone is entitled to their civil rights, so raise your children the way you see fit, but please let me do the same with mine.

—Hamilton Arendsen, freshman, Political Science

Professor commended for defense

I should like to publicly thank Professor Howard Allen, History, for his vigorous defense of the PhD program in political science in a letter to the DE on December 10.

The Board of Higher Education's mandate is to control costs, a fine objective, but its reliance on false figures and Kafkaesque methods suggest it is more interested in justifying its own existence.

The long-term effect of IBHE "hits" will be to erode SIUC's status as a major comprehensive university.

If the University community, citizens and legislators of Southern Illinois want to keep such a University in this end of the state, they are going to have to fight for it.

—William, S. Turley, Director of Graduate Studies; Political Science

apologize for nothing. Sometimes, individuals of strong character must stand on unpopular ground. If the cause be just, fair, and accurate there is no shame.

—Andrew J. Ensor, SIUC student

Ensor critiques DE

Writing and being published is not always what it is cracked-up to be. Particularly when addressing the issue of homosexuality.

The first creditable analysis of the deviance called homosexuality was done by Sigmund Freud.

Since this original thesis, and even in the face of politically correct removal of homosexuality from their professional list, Psychology continues to help homosexuals.

In law, homosexuals have been identified as a suspect group.

The U.S. Supreme Court addressed this issue and asserted that laws criminalizing homosexuality in a Georgia case did not violate anyone's liberty.

The "right" in homosexual rights is little more than a marketing sound-bite.

If there has been any misinformation on this issue I blame the Daily Egyptian.

The DE provided a subjective, one-sided forum for homosexuals, which was the cause of my first letter. They then negligently used this writer's name as part of a letter headline and shifted the focus from the issue at hand to make this writer the issue instead. This is called propaganda.

For those of you who came to me and shook my hand, and you were by far the majority, allow me to offer my most sincere thanks.

For those who were in opposition and were not shy, allow me to offer my respect.

For those of you who acted cowardly, please permit God to be my witness when I say that I wish none of you any harm or ill will.

For those of you who complained to the organizations to which I am a part, I only ask for your understanding. I have willfully subordinated myself to others in an opportunity at working on making a positive contribution. It's something I have faith in.

Should the president of USG, of my hall, or the dean of COLA decide in the best interests of the organization, that I should be silent on said issues, be certain in the knowledge that I would be silent! Still, intellectually I am always prepared to be put to my proofs. I

'Liberal' media berated; editorial ignores reality

This response is in reference to the editorial on December 9, "Statistics can cause misconstrued beliefs."

First off, who creates these liberal editorials, and why are they not signed by the author?

Now for the real issue. If things work the way this editorial depicts, there would be no employment discrimination.

Something does sound a bit wrong here. The writer is correct about one thing, "a person should be hired regardless of sex, race, or ethnic origin."

But if you think reverse discrimination does not take place, I simply invite you to come back to the planet Earth and try to get a job in a so-called competitive employment arena!

The writer is half correct on yet another point, "...the more qualified applicant should be chosen."

However, it is not so ludicrous to expect any place of business, including a university, to hire on the basis of sex, race, or ethnic origin.

At present, there are several positions open at SIUC and Chicago, where anyone other than a male should only apply!

This is unofficial of course!

This is the last point. If equals are to be treated equally, then they are not simply fill out the EOE cards father the position is filled and not before?

Treating unequals as equals seems more the current practice solely to provide better percentage ratios and not to "hire the "best qualified person" for the job.

Hopefully, people who read these editorials will not blindly accept all they are spoon-fed by the media and actually think for themselves and see the correctness to the way things really are!

Fatalities increase during holidays, drivers warned to exercise caution

By Katie Morrison
Health Writer

As the holidays get closer, people get caught up in parties and the spirit of the season and sometimes forget it also is a time drinking and driving fatalities are at their highest, state officials say.

"Statistics show that alcohol-related fatal crashes increase during the holiday season," Gov. Jim Edgar said. "While the percentage of crashes has decreased over the last three years, it is important that public/private partnerships continue to work together to further reduce these tragedies."

"During last year's Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day holidays, 57 percent of traffic fatalities involved drivers who had been drinking, compared to 48 percent for the year as a whole," Edgar's office reported.

"It is important to remember the dangers of drinking and driving, and those serving alcoholic beverages play an important role in keeping our highways safe," Edgar said.

Edgar has been working with the Hotel-Motel Association of Illinois and the Illinois Restaurant Association to remind state residents to drive sober this holiday season.

The associations are working to raise public awareness through the "Drive Sober and Live to Celebrate Again" campaign.

Metabolism Rates of Alcoholic Beverages

The human body can metabolize one drink an hour. The SIUC Wellness Center defines one drink as:

- one shot
- 12 oz. beer
- 4 oz. of wine

SOURCE: SIUC Wellness Center
by Stevani McClure, Daily Egyptian

While drinking is not the only cause of highway car accidents, it does play a key role, Matt Fritz, graduate assistant for drug and alcohol programming at SIUC's Wellness Center, said.

To avoid the dangers of drinking and driving, Fritz recommended the 0-1-3 rule for alcohol consumption — no alcohol if driving, pregnant or physically impaired; one drink each hour and three drinks an occasion.

"Especially if you are driving, zero drinks is the only safe alternative," Fritz said.

While the body metabolizes one drink an hour, the misconception many people have is that they can continue drinking at this rate without getting drunk, Fritz said.

"You're still inebriated — metabolizing just means the body is processing it," he said.

Fritz said alcohol indirectly can cause accidents because it slows down the body's reaction time.

Even a day later, the body still may react slower from alcohol, he said.

"The sedentary effects can go past 24 hours," Fritz said. "You need at least 24 hours of rest before a long drive — but I recommend 48 hours."

SIUC students going home for the holidays need to remember to rest if they are going to drink the night before traveling, he said.

And just because people may not be drinking does not mean they do not need to be careful, he said.

Fritz suggested keeping alert of other drivers who may have been drinking by watching if they weave and staying clear of getting rides home with people who have been drinking.

Accounting students win contest

Competition challenges students professionals on tax problems

By Melissa Edwards
Special Assignment Writer

Four students from SIUC's School of Accounting recently placed third in a tax competition sponsored by the largest accounting firm in the world.

Michael J. Crane, Brian J. Horan, William E. Hughes and Mitchell B. Weiss were members of SIUC's graduate team which competed against nine other teams from around the country in the Arthur Anderson Tax Challenge.

Randall L. Hahn, an associate professor in accounting, said the competition is important because it allows students to put their educations to work.

"The real world is competition," he said.

"These sorts of competitions are the essence of education." The students had seven hours to complete an imaginary tax problem, he said.

Hughes, of Red Bud, said the participants were not like the typical stereotyped accountant.

"It is a billboard for why you'd want to be an accountant," he said. "Arthur Anderson rolled out the red carpet."

Horan, of Olney who graduates this month, said the head-to-head challenge was exciting.

"It's a culmination of everything we've learned," Horan said.

The competition allows the nation to see the quality of the accounting program at SIUC, he said. This is the second year in a row SIUC has placed third in the competition.

Joseph K. Arimond, director of public relations at Arthur Anderson in Chicago, said the company sponsors the competition to promote career awareness and innovative ways of teaching.

"It is a way of promoting tax education across the country," he said.

"The contest combined not only tax knowledge, but other skills such as teamwork, Crane, of Makanda, said.

Weiss, of Buffalo Grove, begins work with Arthur Anderson in January.

SIUC is one of only three teams to return to the national contest this year, and Weiss said this demonstrates the quality of the school.

He said he hopes SIUC's success leads Arthur Anderson to return to recruit from this campus.

Pet owners often resentful of Humane Society efforts

By Angela Hyland
Special Assignment Writer

Whether they are providing shelter for animals picked up off the streets or attempting to rescue abused or neglected animals, Humane Society workers say they often are viewed as the "bad guys."

When animals who appear to be a stray are brought to the shelter by animal-control workers, Janet England, manager Humane Society of Southern Illinois, said she often has to explain to owners that workers are not to blame.

"We're not the ones that picked the dog up," England said. "We're the ones that have been feeding it for the past three days."

England said Humane Society employees are criticized not only when animal control workers bring pets in, but also when workers try to intervene when animals are neglected or abused.

"The typical reaction (from owner) is: 'You can't tell me what to do — these are my pets,'" England said.

Individuals who are abusive to animals often are abusive to workers as well, England said. When owners are told their animal is being neglected, they often become angry, she said.

"They'll often tell you to take it (the pet), then they'll tell you obscure things you can do with it," she said.

England said many people who abuse their pets do not think they are being mistreated.

"People only see what they want to see," she said.

In the bottom drawer of her desk, England keeps a collection of photos. They include images of dogs with little body weight and little fur. There also are several photographs of a horse tied to a patch of bare ground.

The horse's head hangs down and its ribs are visible through its dirty, brown coat.

The horse in the photograph was 3 years old, but it was so malnourished and underfed it looked like a pony, England said. That night, however, the mare delivered a baby, she said.

"Since then, the pony has been adopted out and is living happily forever," England said.

Most calls reporting abuse are not so serious, she said.

In fact, most calls are nothing more than feuds between neighbors.

"Someone may be angry at-out a dog barking, so they will report the animal is being neglected," she said.

Lloyd Nelson, Jackson County animal control officer, said few of the abuse calls his office receives are founded.

"Many people reprimand or train their pets in ways other find abusive," Nelson said. "But even though it may not be the way you or I would treat the animal, they are, in effect, in compliance with the law."

Illinois law requires animals to receive sufficient food, shelter and water.

"Many people think this implies that an animal (kept outdoors) must have a dog house and be kept dry," Nelson said. "But if the animal can get under a trailer or a porch, by definition, this constitutes shelter."

Unless an animal is injured physically, losing weight or in some other way being treated in a manner that could lead to its death, there is little animal-control officers can do, Nelson said.

England said few complaints are made about students abusing pets.

"Students get a bad rap as pet owners," she said. "Obviously, they're an educated group, and they understand these things shouldn't happen."

the executive director of the SIU Alumni Association, said that Pontikes also is respected outside the business college.

"Pontikes is very valuable, both to the Alumni Association and to SIUC," she said. "Anytime an alumnus makes contributions like he has, both to his college and to the SIU Foundation, it is very important." Haywood said Pontikes was inducted into the college's Hall of Fame and awarded the college's Entrepreneur of the Year award in 1986, and he founded the Pontikes Center in 1989.

Pontikes founded the SIUC chapter of student marketing fraternity Pi Sigma Epsilon.

IBM-updated FAA program increases total cost to U.S.

Washington Post

WASHINGTON—The mammoth IBM-led program to modernize the U.S. air traffic control system has racked up $1.2 billion in new cost overruns, federal officials said Monday. They ordered a "top-to-bottom" review of the project, one of the largest and most tortuous in federal procurement history.

The report from the Federal Aviation Administration caught Congress by surprise. In recent months, the agency has repeatedly sent it upbeat accounts of progress at a job whose estimated value now has risen to $5.9 billion.

The about-face, officials said, results from discoveries by new FAA chief David Hinson. "It was a program out of control," said

Richard Mintz, spokesman for the Department of Transportation, parent body to the FAA. "This is an effort to restore control and accountability."

The criticism came the very day that International Business Machines Corp. was celebrating the signing of a deal to sell for $1.6 billion the subsidiary handling the job, Bethesda, Md.-based IBM Federal Systems Co. IBM's share of the total modernization program is now estimated at $4.6 billion.

The FAA said it would seek assurances from IBM that the sale of its federal contract unit to Loral Corp. would not further complicate the project. Federal lawyers are looking over terms of the sale to ensure that the interests of the agency and taxpayers are protected, said

FAA spokesman Bob Buckhorn.

It was unclear whether the FAA's new stance might threaten the sale. Loral Chairman Bernard Schwartz said his company was up to the job. "A customer might look at Loral's track record and have confidence," he said. "... I hope the FAA will look at history."

IBM did not make an official available to discuss the FAA's move. In a statement, the company said, "We have been working with the FAA for some time and we are confident the program is under control and can be completed to the requirements we have been discussing with the FAA on an ongoing basis."

"We will continue to cooperate with the FAA in any further review or assessment of the program," IBM's statement said.

Agencies' budget crunch prompts hard decisions

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—Labor-intensive federal agencies now being budget-crunched have an important decision to make within six weeks that will affect hundreds of thousands of individuals as well as the national economy. They can either:

■ Offer one-time payments of $25,000 or less to longtime employees at or near retirement who would volunteer to leave their government jobs, or

■ Start the complex, expensive and morale-slashing process of launching reductions in force that could dump thousands of unwilling employees, most of them women, minorities or recent hires. Those laid off would be entitled to taxpayer-financed severance and unemployment benefits that could cost more than buyouts and carry over into the 1995 fiscal year when budgets will be tighter.

Given the political problems associated with President Clinton's pledge to cut the federal payroll by 252,000 and the disruptive nature of RIFs, the administration will push for early congressional approval of a government-wide buyout/early retirement package.

Rep. Steny Hoyer, D-Md., a member of the House leadership and a master of legislative maneuvering, is expected to add the buyout/early out package to a veto-proof supplemental appropriation.

Agencies would be allowed to offer buyouts/early-outs by occupation, location or office to workers who quit or retire within a specified period.

Early retirees would get immediate pensions (reduced 2 percent for each year they are under age 55) if they had 25 years service or if they were age 50 with 20 years service. Regular retirees (age 55 with 30 years, age 60 with 20 years or age 62 with five years) wouldn't take any pension hit.

Spielberg's 'Schindler's List' dream come true, masterwork

Newsday

NEW YORK—A few years ago, many people in Hollywood were chuckling over the comment by Steven Spielberg that he had only read Alice Walker's "The Color Purple" because it was a little book, meaning that there weren't so darn many pages to muddle through.

The admission confirmed what most of his detractors had felt all along, that the wunderkind of the box office, a genius at creating film action and manipulating audience emotions, was an intellectual lightweight when dealing with real subjects, and they could only shudder at the prospect of his doing to Thomas Keneally's historical novel "Schindler's List" what he did to "The Color Purple."

With the arrival in theaters of "Schindler's List," the true story of a German industrialist (played by Liam Neeson) who saved more than 1,300 Jews from the Nazi death camps, it is as if no one else could have done it.

The 3-hour and 15-minute, black-and-white film is a masterpiece, measured against any standard, and by far the most important movie event of 1993.

If Spielberg is not rewarded with an Academy Award for this piece, his "Color Purple" fans can break into their old "it's a conspiracy" refrain and we can all sing along.

Spielberg said from the beginning that he intended to make "Schindler's List" for himself, which we took to mean he would not compromise the material in order to please the broadest possible audience, an urge as strong in him as a cat having to scratch a couch.

He does overlay one late emotional scene, but it is an otherwise remarkably unsentimental picture.

In retrospect, it would have been difficult even for the old Spielberg to treat the Holocaust as entertainment, but there was no way of anticipating how profoundly honest and blunt a story he would tell.

Using hand-held cameras for almost half the action, Spielberg has given his camp and Jewish ghetto scenes the look of a documentary, and intercut them in such seamless fashion with the dramatic story, you feel you are being sucked in as a heartsick witness to a man-made catastrophe.

Groups prepare unsafe toy list for consumers

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON—It's time for that marathon sprint around the Palace of Toys to grab up delights for all the little cherubs on your holiday list.

But don't assume a guardian angel is watching over the safety of all the toys on the shelf.

Guardian Angels R Us. That's the message from consumer groups, regulators and even toymakers, though these groups differ greatly on how big a problem dangerous toys are in this country.

"Parents should not assume that the toys they find on the shelves are safe," said a report by the U.S. Public Interest Research Group, a non-profit consumer-oriented lobbying organization.

PIRG is one of three groups issuing lists of toys they consider unsafe and warning parents to be more vigilant.

Donald Wilson, vice chancellor for financial affairs, said trustees want to guard the University from any complications with the hotel.

"We want to make sure the University's financial interests are protected because this is not a University hotel and what space we use, we will pay for," Wilson said. "We want to prevent the situation of putting the hotel in and then moving out."

Wilson said University groups, such as the Alumni Association, were interested in renting space in the hotel.

The hotel is still a possibility, he said.

But Kochan said he has reservations about the hotel market.

"Some recent developments, such as the Holiday Inn renovations, Days Inn and Comfort Inn coming in, has made me a more cautious supporter of the hotel," Kochan said. "There are many considerations to think about before a hotel should be approved."

Tweedy said the developers are interested.

"They will be serving a different market than the local one," Tweedy said. "They still want to build here because it would be a good opportunity for growth."

Harry Wirth, Plant and Services Operations director, said a time frame has not been set for a possible agreement.

Despite delays and re-writing the lease, Wirth said the talks are still positive.

University," Harrell said.

"Students have no knowledge of what has happened in the past — they have no history and no past — they are in and out of Carbondale in a matter of a few years — this is a minor controversy, there have been many more major ones before."

Mike Spiwak, president of the Undergraduate Student Government, said the notices are a major problem for students in Carbondale.

"I hope whoever is the next county clerk will recognize the students needs and rights to vote," Spiwak said.

"We are an extremely large and important constituency in Jackson county and this should not be regarded as minor."

He said the purge, notices the clerk's office is sending out to residents asking them to verify their addresses, is happening at a bad time.

"Why now when students are studying for exams and getting ready to go home for the holidays?" Spiwak said.

"If they (the clerk's office) have not done a purge in more than five years, why now?"

Harrell will finish his term Nov. 30 when he officially will step down as Jackson County Clerk.

confidential materials related to the assassination 30 years ago.

The records were ordered opened by Congress under the JFK Assassination Records Collection Act of 1992, which required that all relevant documents in the government's possession be sent to the National Archives for public viewing.

The first batch of 800,000 papers, made public last August, included files from the CIA, the Warren Commission that investigated Kennedy's slaying, the 1975 Rockefeller Commission that investigated CIA domestic activities and the House Select Committee on Assassinations in 1979.

Among the newly released files were interviews in which FBI agents probed Ruby's past career and associations, as well as his mental health.

One typical interview dated Nov. 25, 1963, was with an informant named Lou Lebby of Albuquerque, N.M. According to the report, Lebby was a former bookmaker who had lived near Ruby in Chicago and knew him by his nickname, "Sparky."

In another interview, Eva L. Grant, Ruby's sister, said her brother had been "very upset" over a full-page Dallas newspaper advertisement critical of Kennedy on the eve of his visit, according to the files. Grant said Ruby was a great admirer of the president.

N. Korea gives remains of 33 Korean War dead

The Baltimore Sun

PANMUNJOM, Korea—A picture of a woman with a boy in the background, a safety razor, four buttons, a camouflage net.

These were part of a short list of small items, carried to the grave by 33 servicemen who fought and died under the United Nations flag four decades ago during the Korean War.

The possessions and the bodily remains were finally returned Tuesday, in a quiet ceremony at Panmunjom, in the demilitarized nether world meeting place between North and South Korea.

On North Korea's side each casket was opened, an inventory read, and then the casket was re-closed. The coffins were then lifted by four North Korean soldiers and carried to the thin concrete strip separating their country from the rest of the world.

On the other side, four soldiers stood waiting, one each from the United States, Thailand, the Philippines and Korea, representing the joint U.N. forces that fought in the Korean war.

"Those fallen patriots whom we receive back to freedom gave life for liberty," said U.S. Army chaplain Major James Himmelslach in a brief service. "May they be at rest as they journey back to their families."

Since the Korean War ended in 1953, the United States and more than a dozen other countries that jointly took part in the Korean War, have petitioned the North for these remains with little success.

Tuesday's precise, quiet service, however, was the third in two weeks, representing a small, symbolic concession by the North at a time when many figures in the Clinton administration have voiced concern over the re-sumption of hostilities in a war that stopped but never ended.

In an unusual moment, a senior North Korean officer approached a western reporter on the northern side of the demilitarized zone and asked in very good English, "How does the United States feel about the repatriation of the remains?"

"I'm sure the United States is grateful, but I do not speak for the United States," the reporter replied. "This is thanks to the generosity of our Supreme Commander and Dear Leader," he said, referring to Kim Jung il, commander of the North Korean military and his father North Korean President Kim il Sung. "We hope for a positive reaction from the U.S. military."

The officer, handsome, taller than most of the other Koreans, dressed in a long green overcoat, was asked his name. "Lt. Col Ri," he said. No first name. "They just call me Lt. Col Ri."

Over-the-counter medicine often ineffective as remedy

By Gretchen Oestreich
Student Health Programs

To Your Health

While consumers spend billions of dollars annually on over-the-counter (OTC) products to treat colds and flu, a majority of these remedies have shown to be either ineffective or only marginally effective in relieving symptoms.

Moreover, since most cold products are a "shotgun" approach to treatment (they aim to treat multiple symptoms with a variety of drugs), users often waste money on drugs for symptoms they don't have.

At the same time, consumers increase their risk for unpleasant side effects.

Most oral OTC cold remedies contain some combination of the following: antihistamine, decongestant, cough suppressant, and analgesic.

Antihistamines are agents that dry membranes by blocking the action of histamine, a chemical compound that caused the itching eyes, nasal and sinus congestion associated with allergies such as hay fever.

Histamines, however, play a limited role in colds.

Although antihistamine may relieve some symptoms of runny nose and sneezing, they do so by way of side effects of the drug.

In addition, antihistamine thicken mucus and cause drying of mucous membranes that can make a cold or cough worse.

Decongestants are drying agents that relieve nasal congestion and stuffiness.

They act by constricting blood vessels and shrinking swollen tissues, thereby opening nasal passages.

Topical decongestant (Nose sprays and drops) have shown to be more effective than those taken by mouth.

When applied directly into the nose these drugs tend to stay in the nasal passages and deliver a greater concentration of the drug that the pill form can provide.

However, overuse of these products can produce "rebound congestion" — stuffiness worse than the original problem, so they should be used sparingly and only for a few days.

While oral decongestants do not produce the same rebound congestion as topical products, they are associated with other side effects, among them: mouth dryness, insomnia, anxiety, and high blood pressure.

To reduce the risks of these associated symptoms, most oral decongestants contain relatively little active ingredient, hence are of limited value in reducing cold symptoms.

Nearly half the people affected by colds experience cough as a troublesome symptom.

Two major categories of medication exist with which to combat cough: "expectorants" — drugs intended to help liquefy and loosen phlegm, making it easier to cough up, and "suppressants" — that which act on the central nervous system to reduce the urge to cough.

Interestingly, many individuals cold preparations contain both, an approach which would appear to offer limited if any benefit.

Prevention and the time-honored treatments such as rest and liquids (including chicken soup) remain the cornerstone of treatment when it comes to colds.

The judicious use of OTC products can help relieve symptoms, however, experts recommend choosing products that treat only your specific symptoms, NOT the entire range of possible symptoms.

For more information about the treatment of colds, stop by the cold self-care center in the Student Health Assessment Center located in the Student Center.

Scarlet fever not dangerous threat

The Washington Post

Scarlet fever, the bacterial infection that once decimated young children, today is a relatively mild and increasingly common illness.

Infections of severe streptococcus and their complications have been on the rise worldwide since the 1980s, according to Edward Kaplan, head of the World Health Organization's streptococcus laboratory at the University of Minnesota.

With that increase, he said, have come more cases of scarlet fever, which is caused by an infection with group A streptococcus.

Increasing cases of scarlet fever have been reported in recent years in parts of Europe, including the former East Germany, Italy and Scandinavia, and New Zealand and Australia.

While anyone can develop scarlet fever, the average patient is generally a younger child, 4 to 8 years old.

Transmission occurs through sneezes and coughs that release bacterial particles into the air and are picked up by others close by.

Sharing food and drink can also spread the disease.

slowed by a gimpy knee and is just starting to return to 100 percent. Herrin said Carr was on one-leg in Saturday's game.

"He didn't practice Thursday or Friday, but he looked ready on Saturday for the game," he said. "But you could see he thought he was in better shape than he really was. He has made some progress since then and I think he close to being all the way back."

The Dawgs will no doubt need both players to fill big roles if they are to have success over the next month.

Missouri won the Big 8 tournament last year. Illinois State is the favorite to win the Valley this season. St. Louis University is much-improved over last year, and Drake and Wichita State will be tough simply because they are conference road games.

Herrin said the schedule is tough for a reason.

"I always say I'll play anybody in a home and home," Herrin said. "We are not going to go places just to play for guaranteed money and short-change our fans."

"There's no sense in that when you can make money at home."

One area of the schedule that might pose a concern is the fact that the Dawgs play Missouri and Illinois State within three days of each other.

q Both games are high-octane rivalries and could bring on a letdown period afterward.

"There is always the possibility of that happening," Herrin said. "That's why we try and not put too much emphasis on any one game."

Thursday's action tips-off at 7 pm at the Arena.

Kings, was injured at about 9:15 p.m. PST after a home game against the Clippers.

Police said he was making a left turn at a stop sign in his Toyota 4-Runner truck when he was rammed in the driver's side by a 1980 Buick station wagon without its headlights on.

The truck lost its left front wheel and axle, while Hurley, who was not wearing a seatbelt, as required by California law, was thrown from the vehicle and landed face down in shallow water in a drainage ditch.

An off-duty policeman saved Hurley from drowning. Marder said.

Hurley was alone in the truck. Dan Wieland, 37, was driving the Buick and suffered a fractured leg. Police said his driver's license has expired. Blood tests were being conducted on Wieland, but detectives said there was no evidence alcohol was involved.

Teammate Mike Peplowski, one of the first people on the scene, said Hurley recognized him. Peplowski accompanied Hurley to the hospital.

Hurley's sister, Melissa, 13, an eighth-grader at Our Lady of Mercy in Jersey City, said friends and relatives began gathering at the Hurley home as soon as they heard the news, and that her parents, Bob and Mary, left to be with Bobby on their last flight out of Newark Monday.

Melissa and her brother Danny, a junior guard on a leave of absence from the Seton Hall basketball team, planned to join their parents Tuesday.

"Everybody's really worried," said Melissa, wearing a Kings T-shirt and a St. Anthony jacket. "This morning the phone was going crazy. Melissa said she planned to stay with an aunt, while Danny spent much of the day at his uncle's Jersey City home.

A family friend, Eddie Ford, answered the phone at the Hurleys' house and said the family was "very appreciative for the literally hundreds of calls from people in the neighborhood and elsewhere."

At St. Anthony, principal Sister Mary Felicia addressed the 300-member student body over the public-address system in the morning and asked them to pray for Hurley.

"We're a very small, close-knit school," she said. "He's still very much a part of us. Sophomore Celeste Ragland said there was a rumor around school that Hurley had been paralyzed. "We all prayed; I felt bad."

Meanwhile, at Duke, Kryzewski said center Cherokee Parks, who played with Hurley for two seasons, called the coach at 2:30 a.m. to check Hurley's condition. And senior Grant Hill said, "You almost take things for granted when it comes to life, but events like this make you appreciate what we have."

Bobby's injury came on the heels of what already had been a difficult week for the Hurleys.

After performing poorly against St. John's at Madison Square Garden Dec. 4, with Bobby in attendance, Danny left the team, citing "personal reasons." Several people close to Hurley say he needed a break from the pressure of trying to live up to Bobby's legacy and of falling short of expectations he had for himself, not to mention those of a demanding father, a demanding college coach and demanding fans.

Dawgs hope to stuff foes' stockings

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

While most SIUC students are home stuffing their stockings over the Christmas break, the Saluki basketball team will try to stuff some of its toughest opponents of the season.

After this Thursday's game against Southeast Missouri, the Dawgs face Wichita State in a road conference game, St. Louis University at the St. Louis Arena, Missouri and Illinois State at the SIUC Arena, and Drake on the road.

It is an intimidating slate, but head coach Rich Herrin said he has not looked at any game except for the upcoming, SEMO contest.

"Southeast Missouri is a decent team," Herrin said. "They can shoot the three, and really put some points on the board quickly."

SEMO is led by guard Curtis Shelton's 17 points a game, but the entire squad is capable of having a big night. The Indians went 16-11 last year and are back with a starting line-up that has three seniors and two juniors.

As if the schedule were not tough enough, the Salukis may play Thursday's game without starting point guard Chris Lowery.

Lowery is out with a hamstring injury and his progress is day-to-day.

Herrin said fans may get to see Lowery on Thursday night, but nothing is definite right now.

Saluki women to be busier than Santa during holidays

By Kevin Bergquist
Sports Writer

If last season's results are any indication, the SIUC women's basketball team can look forward to more presents than lumps of coal in its stocking this holiday season.

The Salukis (3-2) will face seven teams over the semester break, including four Missouri Valley Conference foes.

Last season, SIUC was 7-4 against those opponents.

Two of the Salukis' first three games will feature non-conference rematches in which SIUC will look to avenge a pair of losses to Northern Illinois and Arizona State.

The first game at Northern Illinois Friday will feature a team on a three-game win streak against one headed the opposite direction with a three-game skid.

Northern Illinois (0-3) is winless so far this season, but has had SIUC's number lately. The Huskies have won four straight over the Salukis, including a 84-80 win last year in Carbondale.

UNI has suffered all of its losses to Western schools, losing to Oregon and Southern California after opening the season with a 68-60 loss to Loyola-Marymount.

The Huskies can get a win before playing SIUC, but it won't count. UNI plays Athletex in Action in an exhibition game Wednesday night in DeKalb.

Friday's game will pair two teams in the rebuilding process. The Huskies return only one starter, while the Salukis lost all five starters from last year's team.

"They're similar to us because they have young talented players," NIU head coach Jane Albright-Dieterle said.

"SIUC has posted some good wins and games they lost have been real close."

A win in DeKalb would be SIUC's first since 1982 and would give the Salukis the first half of a two-game payback scenario for four straight losses to the Huskies.

"We are very upset; the last two or three years we should have won (against UNI)," SIUC associate coach Julie Beck said.

"(Payback) will come in as a factor."

There will be no bigger payback if the Salukis win in a rematch with visiting Arizona State Dec. 20.

The Sun Devils thrashed SIUC 72-43 last year in Tempe, Ariz.

The loss was the worst in SIUC head coach Cindy Scott's 17 years.

The loss in the last game before the team broke for Christmas dampened the team's holiday spirit.

"The ASU game ended terribly last year," Beck said. "We want to show them what we are really made of."

The ASU game will once again close out the pre-Christmas slate for the Salukis, who will return to the court for their last 1993 game Dec. 30 at Evansville.

Scott said the games could go a long way in helping maintain the steam the Salukis have built up during their three-game winning streak.

"These next two are big ones that can give us some momentum," Scott said.

"UNI has had our number, and Arizona State really put it on us last season. We'd like to break for Christmas feeling good about ourselves."

After dealing with the Aces Dec. 30, the Salukis will open the new year by opening their Missouri Valley Conference schedule with four straight home games.

The Salukis produced seven of their 19 wins last year against their first four MVC foes, including a sweep of the home-and-home with Northern Iowa, SIUC's Jan. 2 opponent.

UNI was left for dead in the MVC preseason coaches poll, pulling the infamous No. 9 slot.

The Panthers will look to prove that ranking wrong with four starters back from last year's 10-17 team that finished tied for seventh with a 4-12 league mark.

UNI is off to a 2-2 start so far with wins over Missouri-Kansas City and Morehead

Friends, fans concerned with Hurley's condition

Newsday

JERSEY CITY, N.J.—As Bobby Hurley lay in serious condition in a California hospital Monday, family, friends and fans in his hometown of Jersey City and his adopted home at Duke expressed both concern for and confidence in Hurley's recovery.

"The whole team has been worrying about him and talking about him," Billy Lovett, a senior co-captain at Hurley's alma mater, St. Anthony High School, said during practice at the Jersey City Army. "We look up to Bobby, and know he'll fight through this."

Duke Coach Mike Krzyzewski, who won two NCAA titles with Hurley as his point guard, said he fell to his knees in prayer when he learned of Hurley's Sunday night accident. "He's the most positive kid I've been around during my coaching career," Krzyzewski said.

Hurley 'Basketball' family faces tragedy, problems of sons

Newsday

In retrospect, the high point of the season for the Hurley family of Jersey City occurred 10 days ago at Madison Square Garden.

Although neither of Bob and Chris Hurley's sons played to the level of his ability and both their teams lost, what matters now is they were together again, if only briefly.

That the reunion was brought about by basketball was entirely appropriate.

Basketball was the center of their lives. It was the bond between the father, a hard-driving high school coach, and the two boys, Bobby and Danny.

Aside from one occasion when their college careers intersected on a court in Philadelphia, the brothers have rooted openly for each other.

Their final exercise in mutual admiration, at least for the remainder of the 1993-94 campaign, happened Dec. 4.
