Kevin Hill, a senior studying radio-television, performs Nov. 3 at the Crown Jewel Lounge as part of the Carbondale Comedy Night. Among the topics up for dissection were relationships, the recent election and prime time television. The weekly event, which was started by SIUC students, has grown substantially, said Tim O'Laughlin, a regular performer at the events.

Alden "Bacon" Jarrett, 3, fights with Matt "Ducky McFeelgood" Stearns during Dagorhir practice Oct. 13 at Evergreen Park. Alden's mother, Megan "Allura" Jarrett, said Alden has come to practices since he was a baby, and he and his 3-week-old brother Faolin will be raised by the battlefield. "My kids will be running this field someday," she said.

COVER PAGE BOTTOM RIGHT: Victoria Freeland waits for a volunteer to pack food and toiletries into a grocery bag during the Veterans Stand Down Sept. 8 at the Marion VA Medical Center. Freeland, an Army Veteran who served in the Vietnam War in the Criminal Investigation Command, lives in Fairfield and said she has been attending these events since 1976, a year after her neck was broken in an accident. Sylvia Jackson, chief of voluntary services at the Marion VA Medical Center, said the name of the event correlates with a pause in combat to allow soldiers rest and relaxation. The service provides veterans with food, shelter, clothing, health screenings and other services once a year.

Editor: My experience as photo editor at the DAILY EGYPTIAN cannot be summed up into one wonderfully descriptive word. In fact, there are quite a few words I could use to describe the vast sea of emotions that overwhelmed me almost every day at work this semester, but for the reader's sake I won't delve too deeply into them.

In all honesty, I can look at my time as photo editor in a very positive way. I have learned so much, not only about myself, but also about the faces behind the DAILY EGYPTIAN. I have gained a new and well-deserved appreciation for the entire staff of the DE. Most importantly, I have found a family in the photo staff.

Edyta Blaszczyk, your YouTube finds soothed my soul. Isaac

Smith, Panera Bread is, indeed, a window to my heart. Steve Berczynski, you are the only co-worker I could stand to be neighbors with. George Lamboley, alarm clocks are essential for life. Pat Sulphin, you may no longer call me boss lady. Gonna Ord, let's go hiking sometime soon. And last but not least, Dan Dwyer, you better come back and visit me.

Thank you, DAILY EGYPTIAN, for another amazing semester. I owe you. — Jess Vermeulen

(TOP) Dalton Sims, 3, takes an up-close look at a Brahma bull at the 5th annual Welcome Back Barbeque at St. Germain Square Aug. 23. Petting zoo animals were brought from Missouri by Debbie Thorsen, who owns St. Germain. The event is one of many put on by the staff at St. Germain apartments, among other social activities such as twice-monthly Sunday brunches. Don and Delayna Beattie, who work at the apartments said letting students relax and get to know one another is important. "In a way, that's why we're here," said Beattie.

Ron Kempfer cuts hair Nov. 12 for residents of the Community Integrated Living Arrangement Home at his barber shop in Chester. Kempfer has been cutting hair in Chester for 45 years. Kempfer said he started cutting hair in Carbondale in June of 1963 and moved his business to Chester two years later. "I got married and she didn't want to live in Carbondale, so I said I would come here for a year. I've been here ever since," he said.
