Jobless rate may go higher

By Carl Flowers
Daily Egyptian News Editor

Area workers, already facing one of the gloomiest employment outlooks in recent years, may be in for more hard times if the economic predictions of SIU Finance Professor Donald Vaughn are realized.

Vaughn, chairman of the finance department, said unemployment in the Southern Illinois area may go as high as nine per cent in 1975. He added that this would be greater than his predicted peak for the state's unemployment rate.

"Based on comparative data for the past few years, I'd say that the state's unemployment rate will probably be slightly less than the national rate, Vaughn said. "Rates in the Southern Illinois area probably will be slightly higher than the state rate."

Vaughn predicted that national unemployment rates will reach a peak between 9 and 9.5 per cent in 1975 and that the average unemployment rate for the year will be "somewhere around 8 per cent." His predictions conflict with President Gerald Ford's latest economic forecast that unemployment would peak at 8.5 per cent about mid-summer.

Latest Department of Labor statistics indicate that national unemployment rates for January reached a 33-year high of 8.2 per cent, as more than 7 million Americans were unable to find jobs.

Vaughn made his predictions at a recent Carbondale Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

Vaughn said President Ford's recent economic proposals "will do nothing to combat inflation" on the local level, but should bring about more jobs for persons searching for employment.

One of the proposals Vaughn believes will aid the area job crisis, which has been called "the worst" since 1949 by local employment officials, is the recent release of federal funds to create jobs in local communities.

"A number of federal positions have been created to be distributed among the states, which should ease the local situation a bit," Vaughn said.

Jackson County, in the past two fiscal years, has received nearly $125,000 under Title II of the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act (CETA), which created 17 public service jobs.

President Ford's release Wednesday of $2 billion in impounded highway funds is also expected to aid the area, Vaughn said. He added that complications stemming from the state's neglect in its 1975 budget to provide matching funds for those released by the government may hinder the state's efforts to get the funds.

Operation Rebound gives dropouts another chance

By Laura Coleman
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

High school can be one of the most enjoyable times of young persons' lives.

Gus Bode

Gus says they can't tax his property—he hocked it.

They go to sporting events, dances and study with friends.

But for the 6.5 per cent of Illinois students who drop out the high school years become a period of struggle.

It's a struggle for them, first to find a job and if they're lucky enough to find one, it's a struggle to exist on the usually menial salary.

In Carbondale, the outlook for dropouts isn't quite as gloomy. "Operation Rebound" is one of a handful of programs in the state which provide an alternative to the student wishing to receive his diploma.

Keith Goffinet, coordinator of the program, said it was established in 1969 with a 3-year grant from the Illinois Department of Vocational Education. Since 1972, the program has been part of the regular funding for the district.

He described "Operation Rebound" as a place where students aren't subjected to the usual restrictions of the standard high school system. This is possible, he said, because of the smaller number of students served at Operation Rebound.

Sixty eight students are enrolled in the program this semester, Goffinet said. The students attend class in three shifts.

A required part of the program is that the students work, either full-time or part-time. Their class schedule is arranged around their working hours.

The key to instruction, Goffinet said, is the individualized teaching done by the three staff members. Students are required to complete a specified course of study in the nine-week semester, and cannot advance until the work is completed.

"Everything is the student's responsibility here," he said. "He's taken the character of an adult and he's treated as an adult."

Goffinet explained that when a student isn't able to come to the school, which is in the University City complex, he is

Court ruling won't affect county taxes

By Mary Whitler
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

While some residents of Illinois counties could face a huge increase in their local property taxes because of a recent court decision, Jackson County residents will not. Lowell Heller, supervisor of assessment for Jackson County said.

Frank A. Kirk, director of the Department of Local Government Affairs, said 68 of the state's 102 counties face a possible tax increase because of a Jan. 17 court ruling in Lake County Circuit Court which would require property to be assessed at 42 per cent of its actual value.

Heller said the ruling should not affect Jackson County because property for 1973 and '74, with a multiplier of 1.1236, was assessed slightly above 50 per cent of its actual value.

In fact, Heller said, if the 42 per cent figure is required by law, property taxes could be slightly lower next year.

Kirk said he has asked the attorney general to file an immediate appeal of the January order, which he said would force him to raise assessment levels in counties currently below the 42 per cent level.

If the appeal is denied he will seek an immediate hearing before the Illinois Supreme Court, Kirk said.

An uninformed state law requires all counties to assess property at 50 per cent of its actual value for taxing purposes.

Kirk's department is charged with the responsibility of bringing any under assessed county up to the 50 per cent level by issuing a numerical factor called a multiplier.

However, Kirk froze all multipliers shortly after he was appointed to his post by Gov. Dan Walker. He said the existing multipliers allowed assessment levels throughout the state to range between 25 and 50 per cent.

Kirk said the suit in Lake County was filed by a property owner unhappy about variations in assessment levels within the county.

Two factors are involved in the amount of property taxes paid by a property owner: the assessed valuation of the property and the tax rate.

The tax rate may be translated as the amount of money a property owner must pay for every $100 worth of property he owns.

Sheriff's wife takes jail life in stride

By Mark Kazdowski
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The thought of being close to a place where men who have been arrested for a variety of crimes are kept might scare some women, but not Margaret White. She is the wife of Jackson County Sheriff Don White. With their children, Donald, 11, and Debbie, 8, they share the third floor of the Jackson County Courthouse in Murphysboro with the jail and the juvenile room.

"The jail never frightened me," Mrs. White said of the nearness to the cells. "I've been a policeman's wife for 10 years."

Living close to the jail "gives you a strange feeling for a couple days," but one yet used to it, she added.

"Sometimes the prisoners make noises at night that can be heard in the apartment," Mrs. White said. "The first night I spent here I thought they were having a jail break."

The apartment has three bedrooms, a dining room, a living room, two bathrooms and a kitchen used to cook meals for the prisoners.

One of the major disadvantages of the apartment is the juvenile room where children under 16 are detained until their parents pick them up or they are transferred.

Juveniles cannot be kept in the cell block with the other prisoners, Mrs. White explained, so they must be escorted through the White's dining room and living room into the juvenile room.

"We really don't have many people going through the apartment," Mrs. White said. "There haven't been many people brought to the juvenile room since we've lived here."

When the meeting rooms on the courthouse's second floor are being used and a conference area is needed, the juvenile room is often used because it provides privacy for those using it, Mrs. White said.

The White's have lived in the apartment for about a month. They are still not completely moved into the spacious rooms with 12 foot ceilings, as boxes stacked along three walls of the room indicated.

"We haven't been here long enough to get things straightened out," she said. "Once we get moved in, it should be all right."

The rent-free, unfurnished apartment has been repainted and adorned with new wallpaper and drapes. Mrs. White said she is still working on drapes for some of the rooms.

She is also working as a county employee in the courthouse, filling in where needed.

"Presently I've been working in the sheriff's office helping there," she said. She also makes up menus for the prisoners' meals and keeps food in supply.

She learned to be a secretary so she could work if one of the secretaries were unable to make it to the office.

"I help out with anything that needs to be done," Mrs. White said.

"If a matron happens to be out, I will take care of a female prisoner," she said. "If one of the two cooks can't make it to work, I can do the cooking."

"So far we have eaten whatever has been given to the prisoners," Mrs. White said. "We feed our prisoners pretty well here."

Margaret White, wife of Jackson County Sheriff Don White, relaxes in the living room of their apartment on the third floor of the Jackson County Courthouse in Murphysboro. In the background, two men leave a preliminary court hearing held in the juvenile room of the courthouse. The only entrance to the room is through the White's dining room and living room. ## Wholesale prices dip; inflation rate slowing

By The Associated Press

A government report that wholesale prices declined in January for the second straight month provided fresh evidence Friday that the rate of inflation may be slowing. But there also were signs that the recession may be getting worse.

On the bright side: the drop in wholesale prices; an announcement that food prices may not rise as fast as expected in the first half of the year; a lower prime rate to encourage spending by business.

On the gloomy side: a report by the Association of American Railroads that more than 32,000 rail workers were laid off in December and January; an announcement by the General Electric Co. that its audio-electronics plant in Decatur, Ill., will shut down by midyear; and a large balance of payments deficit for 1974.

The Labor Department said the Wholesale Price Index dropped three-tenths of 1 per cent in January, following a half a per cent drop in December. The biggest decline came in the price of farm products which dropped 2.2 per cent last month.

The wholesale declines usually foreshadow later decreases in the Consumer Price Index although not all the savings are automatically passed on to consumers.

The Agriculture Department's Outlook and Situation Board said retail prices of food may go up 2 to 3 per cent in the first quarter of this year, followed by an increase of about 3 per cent in the second quarter. What happens after that, the board said, depends on the size of various crops and general economic conditions.

Last December, the board predicted food prices would go up 3 or 4 per cent in each of the first two quarters of 1975. In 1974, food prices rose an average of 14.5 per cent from 1973 levels.

The signs of recession came in reports about layoffs and transportation shipments.

News Roundup

Mid-East peacemaking efforts attacked

AQABA, Jordan (AP)—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger ended his "exploratory" mission to Israel and Egypt on Friday with prospects for a Sinai settlement still in doubt, then flew to this Red Sea resort for talks with King Hussein.

Kissinger said, however, he was "very satisfied" with his meetings in Israel, and Israeli Foreign Minister Yigal Allon told newsmen in Jerusalem that he hoped Kissinger's visit "will be recognized as an important opening for new political initiatives."

Before Kissinger left Jerusalem, a bomb exploded in a field less than a mile from his hotel, killing two persons. Authorities had no immediate explanation.

The Kremlin then stirred the Middle East pot by criticizing Kissinger's attempts to achieve a step-by-step settlement and calling for the immediate resumption of the Geneva peace talks.

A senior Israeli official told newsmen in Jerusalem that Kissinger did not convey concrete Egyptian proposals to Premier Yitzhak Rabin and his negotiating team.

Walker calls for wiretap investigation

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Gov. Daniel Walker called on the FBI Friday to find out whether there are or were any illegal eavesdropping or wiretapping devices being used in the Illinois Capitol complex.

In a telegram to FBI Director Clarence Kelly, Walker said, "I believe it imperative that the FBI make a prompt and thorough investigation so that the facts can be uncovered. The kind of invasion of privacy which could be involved if the evidence is substantiated is repugnant to us all."

A private firm making a check for Comptroller George Lindberg reported earlier in the week that four electronic bugging devices were in operation somewhere in the Capitol complex. The precise locations are still unknown.

Walker also urged the FBI to make any report public.

Meanwhile, the House passed a resolution earlier approved by the Senate setting up a special legislative committee to investigate the bugging and report by April 2.

Watergate conspirators denied new trial

WASHINGTON (AP)—U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica Friday rejected pleas for new trials or acquittals from the four men convicted in the Watergate cover-up conspiracy and scheduled sentencing for next Friday.

Former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell, former White House aides H.R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, and former Asst. Atty. Gen. Robert C. Mardian were convicted on New Year's Day after a three-month trial.

"None of the defendants have shown that a new trial would be in the interests of justice," Sirica said in a nine-page opinion and order which also denied motions for acquittal from all four conspirators.

Mitchell, 61, director of Nixon's 1972 re-election campaign, faces a maximum 25-year prison term and fines of $37,000.

Haldeman, 48, Nixon's White House chief of staff, could receive up to 25 years in prison and fines of $21,000.

Ehrlichman, 49, the White House domestic affairs chief under Nixon, is vulnerable to a jail term of 20 years and a maximum fine of $35,000.

Mardian, 51, a lawyer on the re-election committee staff, faces a maximum five years in jail and a $10,000 fine.

Deliberations begin in abortion trial

BOSTON (AP)—A jury of nine men and three women began deliberating Friday in the abortion-manslaughter trial of Boston City Hospital obstetrician Dr. Kenneth C. Edelin.

Edelin, 36, is charged in the death of a 20- to 24-week-old male fetus he aborted at the hospital on Oct. 3, 1973.

"A fetus is not a person and therefore not a subject for an indictment for manslaughter," McGuire said.

During the six-week-long trial, the prosecutor argued that the fetus was born the moment it was separated from the wall of its mother's womb. He claimed Edelin killed it by suffocation, holding it inside the mother's body for three minutes after separating it.

Trailer owners protest privilege tax

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Some ten to fifteen people paid the disputed mobile home owners' tax under protest in the Jackson County Courthouse Friday.

Friday was the deadline for paying the Mobile Home Owners' Privilege tax. Failure to pay under state law results in a lien being attached to the property title and a one per cent per month interest charge added to the assessed tax.

Velma Halstead, Carbondale trailer court operator, said she paid her taxes under protest because a lawsuit challenging the tax had been stalled by Assistant State's Attorney Gary Dillinger.

Dillinger denied stalling the suit, saying the law allows the defendant, the state, 30 days to file an answer to the suit. The plaintiff is faced with the burden of bringing the case to court, he said.

"We have not stalled this issue at all. Naturally, we want it cleared up quickly," Dillinger said.

The mobile home owners' chief complaint about the new statewide mobile home tax is that it allows no depreciation but charges the same rate, 15 cents per square foot, for all trailers regardless of age.

"This tax charges as much for a 20-year-old trailer as it does for a new one," Tommy Glisson, owner of Glisson Trailer Park, said.

Halstead noted this was the first time in 15 years of business she had ever protested a tax. She said she was protesting not only for herself but for many of her tenants who could not afford the tax.

"This tax hits older people, veterans and students who can least afford it. These people can't deduct this tax from their income tax either," she said.

Dillinger said that since the state is defending the law he would assume its fairness until it is proved otherwise in court.

Raymond Dillinger, county treasurer, agreed that the tax was not popular but said his office did not make the law, it merely collected the tax.

"Anytime a new tax like this comes in you can expect people to squawk, but home owners must pay taxes so why not people in trailers," he said.

The treasurer said he thought some people objected to the tax being called a privilege tax.

"People don't like having the place they live in called a privilege," he observed.

"I'll be damned if this is a privilege. A trailer is the only way I can afford to live," one unidentified man said as he stormed from the treasurer's office.

Dillinger, assistant state's attorney, said he could give no definite date when the law suit would come to trial. "It may be two or three months, but it is not my responsibility to bring the case to court," he said.

Halstead and Glisson said the case was being postponed deliberately to strengthen the state's case by persons paying the tax. They said they paid the tax under protest so they could recover some of the money after the court rules.

"We are paying this tax now only because we want to comply with the law," Halstead said.

Early warning signs can aid heart victim

By David Ramp
Student Writer

Heart and blood vessel diseases will claim the lives of 495 Jackson County residents in 1975, A.R. Esposito, president of the Jackson County Heart Association, said.

Esposito said deaths from heart and blood vessel diseases in this state represent 56.9 per cent of the 110,259 deaths a year from all causes.

"More than 28 million Americans—one in eight—suffer from some type of heart and blood vessel disease," Esposito said. The most common forms are heart attack, high blood pressure, stroke, rheumatic heart disease and congenital heart defects.

Esposito estimated that in Illinois more than 63,000 persons will be afflicted by a heart-related disease. He added that heart diseases will place a $20 billion burden on the economy this year, including lost wages, hospital and medical care and medication.

Esposito noted, however, that early diagnosis and treatment can reduce the incidence of heart attack and stroke. He advised area residents to ask the Jackson County Heart Association for information on the early warning signs and risk factors of these two major killers.

required to call in, first to his employer and then to the school.

The program is separated into two sections, one in which the student completes all required courses which students at CCHS take, and the other in which he's required to work.

Goffinet handles all placement for the students. Teaching the students in the other courses are Kay Parrish, who teaches in the morning and afternoon,

The weather

Saturday: mostly cloudy with chance of rain high in the 40s. Saturday night, cloudy with rain likely low in the upper 30s.

Sunday: continued cloudy with chance of rain, high around 40.

Probability of measurable precipitation 40 per cent both Saturday and 60 per cent Saturday night.

and Greg Johnson, a teacher at CCHS who teaches in Operation Rebound at night.

The average age of the Rebound student is between 18 and 19. Goffinet said, adding the oldest is 21. He emphasized that the students are not of below-average intelligence. He said the average reading ability is 10.4, which means the student is about on the level of a sophomore.

Goffinet said he's not concerned with why the student dropped out of school, adding that the student must be 16 and out of school 60 days before entering Operation Rebound.

"We do not go to the students' files," he said. "We're not concerned with what the student's done. We're only concerned about what he's going to do here," he explained.

He added that the students are not given a battery of psychological or any other kind of testing. "They've been tested to death before they come here," he said.

The students are allowed to smoke at Rebound, they can get up from their studies to get a Coke, and they don't have to ask to do simple things.

They are, however, given grades, just as those in CCHS-Central. "They have to complete everything," Goffinet said. "There's no getting out of it."

He said some of the students have told him they learn more at Operation work at their own pace.

The students are "pretty diversified in their attitudes," Goffinet said. "There are those who have definite goals, they are the people who will hurry on through," he said, adding that most of the students are self-supporting. He described the majority of the students as "highly self-motivated" in accomplishing their objective of receiving a high school diploma.

Goffinet said CCHS's drop-out rate is among the lowest in the state because of the program. He said the rate would be much higher if the program did not exist because the drop-outs would have nowhere to go.

The low rate at CCHS may contribute to the below-average Jackson County drop-out rate of 5.8 per cent, according to Gordon Brown, director of the Educational Alternative Section of the Illinois Office of Education.

Brown said the state average is 6.5 per cent, and that of Cook County, in comparison, is 7.9 per cent, based on figures from the 1973-74 school year.

Comparing teaching in Operation Rebound to that in the conventional school situation, Parrish said that, with all things equal, including equipment and facilities, she would prefer the individualized teaching of Rebound.

"I enjoy seeing the change in attitudes," she said. "The chip they have on their shoulders disappears."

Goffinet is optimistic about the future of Operation Rebound, saying he doesn't anticipate any budgeting problem because he said the CCHS administration is aware of the program's relative success.

Auto workers face additional layoffs

DETROIT (AP) — With early February car sales at a 13-year low, layoffs in the beleaguered auto industry will affect 263,605 workers next week—10,500 more than this week.

Indefinite layoffs of production workers will be up 500 to 208,200, the most since fuel shortages triggered a slide in auto sales 16 months ago.

Temporary layoffs will rise to 55,405, an increase of 10,000 from this week. In all, next week's furloughs will leave 39 per cent of the industry's hourly workforce of 683,000 jobless, as the companies shut 20 assembly plants, compared to 14 this week.

The plant shutdowns and layoffs — which vary from week to week — are part of extensive production cutbacks planned by the auto makers for this quarter to reduce unwieldy inventories of unsold cars.

Industry analysts said the companies now have an estimated 83-day supply of new models, based on the early February selling rate. The stockpile is down from 93 days at the end of January, but still too high to resume normal production. A supply of more than 60 days is considered excessive.

The companies have indicated they hope to end plant shutdowns and begin recalling workers on indefinite layoff by spring if sales improve and the supply of unsold models comes down.

Sales during the Feb. 1-10 period were 138,108, off five per cent from the depressed levels of a year ago and the lowest for the period since 1962. The industry's poor performance continued despite cash rebate plans on some new models and other aggressive buying incentive programs.

Ford Motor Co. announced Friday it will shut five of its 14 car assembly plants, three of its nine truck lines and four of its 42 manufacturing plants next week.

The closings will leave the nation's No. 2 auto maker with 60,700 of its 177,000 hourly workers on layoff, compared with 63,375 this week. Ford said 25,450 workers will be on temporary layoff — down from 28,175 this week — and 35,250 workers will be on indefinite furlough, 50 more than this week.

General Motors will have seven car plants shut and 13,405 workers on temporary layoff next week. In addition 121,000 of the firm's 370,000 workers are on indefinite layoff.

Chrysler Corp. will have 59,550 of its 114,000 workers on layoff next week, up from 54,850 this week. Some 8,050 workers will be on temporary layoff at the Hamtramck, Mich., and Newark, Del., car plants, which will be closed for the week, while the others remain on indefinite layoff.

American Motors will have 8,500 workers at three assembly plants on temporary layoff and 450 of its 22,000 blue collar employes on indefinite layoff.

Many of the laid off workers are eligible for company-paid Supplemental Unemployment Benefits which, together with regular unemployment compensation, provide them with nearly 95 per cent of their take home pay for up to a year.

However, Chrysler and GM have been forced to cut back SUB benefits because of extensive and prolonged layoffs.

Save the rails

The 1973 Rail Reorganization Act has resulted in a proposal from the U.S. Department of Transportation (DOT) to abandon "excess" freight lines in central and Southern Illinois. The plan has justifiably brought down the wrath of Rep. Paul Simon (D-Ill.) and we hope Congress listens to him and not DOT.

Simon said he is co-sponsoring legislation to delay implementation of the federal government's abandonment plan which would, if unchallenged by Congress, take effect Sept. 24. If lines specified by DOT are abandoned without consideration for alternate avenues of freight transport, the economy of this region will be dealt a severe blow—something it cannot stand in light of its already depressed state.

Simon said he supports the moratorium on abandonment at least until 1977 to "buy time for the communities that would be adversely affected by the cuts."

As a result of this proposal, grassroots resistance has formed even though DOT has yet to pinpoint clearly which rail lines would go. The final plan is scheduled for release in July, subject to input from hearings to be conducted by the Interstate Commerce Commission (ICC).

Hearings already conducted by the Illinois Commission for Economic Development (ICED) concluded that power companies, grain operators and small businessmen are opposed to the strangling effects abandonment would have on their enterprises. The ICED held its public hearings in the spring of 1974 to "give folks in the community a chance to express their opinions," said ICED's Director Robert Mattson. That is something the Washington bureaucrats of DOT have failed to do.

Not only do we support Simon's proposed moratorium, but, we would like to see alternatives established for abandoned lines. Under DOT's proposal, lines would be cut that are not "proven" economically worthwhile. This means farmers and grain operators not having large enough shipments to merit service would lose their freight service. This would inevitably force some to liquidate because they would not be able to meet higher costs incurred by increased distances to their markets. Result: More people forced to join the already swelled unemployment ranks.

Small farmers, grain dealers and businessmen need rail service (rails provide the lifeline for these products) or they will not have markets for their goods. The problem is especially acute in Illinois because it is the largest shipper of grain in the country.

We urge passage of Simon's bill and delivery of a message from Illinois citizens to Congress that we need our rail lines. Since economically faltering railroads, such as the bankrupt Penn Central, have made the DOT proposal necessary, transportation officials should consider revitalizing these failing industrial giants.

Once again, the people would be forced to bear the economic burden created by mismanaged industry.

Finally, as Simon said, "we shouldn't be tearing down our poor rail service; we should be building it up."

Will Green Earth hatch its $102,000 nest egg?

George Karnes, Carbondale dentist and chairman of Green Earth Inc., seemed too mild a man to be the center of a maelstrom.

He almost appeared bewildered by the controversy surrounding his organization's handling of over $100,000. The city allocated the funds last June. He instructed his secretary to hold his appointments and led the reporter to his office, a tiny cubicle the size of a broom closet with barely enough space for a small desk and two chairs.

"I'm a bit pressed for time," he explained. Karnes, a man in his 30s, fit the role of a harried dentist. He wore a blue smock, black shell-rimmed glasses and a surgeon's mask over his mouth and nostrils—evidently an effort to avoid the season's flu epidemic.

Slight tension edged the voice of the former city councilman. His organization sits on a nest egg worth $102,826 like the last dodo bird in the world, protecting its offspring. He and six companions hold absolute, unquestioned jurisdiction over the funds. Green Earth's seven-member board of directors include a former head of the city planning commission, a bank president, the SIU chairman of the Department of Plants and Soil Sciences, and former SIU Interim President Hiram Leasor.

Since its founding Green Earth has attracted the barbs of media editorialists. In May, 1974, Carbondale announced windfall profits of $221,000 derived from a water and sewer bond. State law requires the city to surrender such funds to non-profit, non-governmental organizations.

Seven persons chartered Green Earth, Inc., on May 24. Karnes said that the not-for-profit corporation was formed to take advantage of the funds by purchasing and maintaining natural areas around the city. The city council rejected June 3 budget requests submitted by the Easter Seal Society, the Archway School and the United Fund, and awarded the young organization the largest portion of the allocations.

Mayor Neal Eckert said Friday that though the others had met eligibility requirements for funding, the council decided to choose organizations which proposed expenditures on a non-continuing basis close to Carbondale.

Basil C. Hedrick, professor in the University Museum, said Friday a more logical decision would have awarded the "green-belt" funds to the Carbondale Foundation for a Better Environment, a recognized organization. However, a technicality arising from its charter made the CFBE ineligible for funding.

Karnes said, "that, apparently, was the initial impetus to form the corporation. We had basically the same purpose (as the CFBE)."

Since June the corporation has held closed meetings. It has opened only one session for citizen suggestions; Karnes said he foresaw another open meeting sometime in the late spring or early summer. Green Earth's secrecy and inactivity attracted continual attention from the media.

Karnes, as chairman, became a focal point in the issue. After the Southern Illinoisan launched initial attacks against Green Earth, he withdrew behind closed switchboards and uncompromising secretaries. A reporter must go to him personally to gain an audience.

Karnes explained the closed meetings as keeping land speculators ignorant of future purchases by Green Earth and providing an intimate decorum which would be impossible in the public limelight. He previously has told this to the press, he said. "We're all private citizens meeting on private time."

Green Earth is contemplating purchases, but has yet to commit itself, Karnes said. The corporation has worked slowly to insure careful planning, he said. Interest collected on the $100,000 will make the fund go further; Green Earth will stretch out purchases over a number of years, he explained like a math teacher illustrating an algebraic problem.

All decisions lie solely in the realm of the seven-member board of directors, he said.

"The public will have input whenever we feel it's time to bring in public input," Karnes stated. "The public will have no vote."

Karnes impressed one as a quiet Alexander Hamilton, one of the pillars upon which this nation was built, who clearly expressed his sentiments about popular democracy.

Wasn't it Hamilton who reportedly snorted, "the people. The people is a great beast! Government is the realm of the rich; the well-born." Green Earth, Inc. could never be accused of disappointing ole' Alexander.

Walker's new council has a big job to do

By Dave Iyata
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The newly established Governor's Advisory Council for Economic Development in Southern Illinois faces a monumental task.

Little Egypt's financial status is the poorest in the state, despite previous undertakings by citizens' committees to work fiscal miracles in this depressed area. The development council, chaired by Carbondale Mayor Neal Eckert, must outperform all former efforts lest the local economy go under due to lack of commerce, industry and population growth.

Southern Illinois now lacks the monetary base on which to maintain solid economic self-sufficiency. Consider these statistics:

Southern Illinois now lacks the monetary base on which to maintain solid economic self-sufficiency. Consider these statistics:

According to research conducted by Rep. Paul Simon (D-Ill.) in 1974 local per capita income was $2,454 compared to a state average of $3,483. Mean family income here averaged $7,501, while the overall state figure was $10,957. About 15 per cent of Southern Illinois families live below the poverty level; compared to a statewide tally of 7.7 per cent. In federal revenue sharing funds, each resident of Little Egypt received $8.67 in 1973; statewide distribution of funds averaged $9.79 per person.

According to the Illinois Bureau of Employment in Chicago, 1,811 of a 18,729-person work force were jobless in the five southernmost counties of the state (Pulaski, Alexander, Johnson, Massac and Union).

This December, 1974 figure represents 10 per cent unemployment, compared to a national average of 8.2 per cent.

In these five southernmost counties, 6,308 persons, or approximately 131 out of every 1,000, receive some kind of public aid, according to current state records. The statewide ratio for aid recipients is 91 per 1,000.

The same records show that in the four northeastern counties of Illinois containing the Chicago metropolitan area (Cook, Lake, Will and DuPage), approximately 54 persons out of every 1,000 received public aid.

Population growth in Southern Illinois has lagged behind that of the rest of the state. While the general population in Illinois increased by 10.2 per cent between 1960 and 1970, the population in the 24th Congressional District grew by only 2.2 per cent. "The exodus is massive to Chicago and St. Louis," Simon observed during his recent campaign.

According to the congressman's records, the 1974 age distribution in Little Egypt was: Ages 0-24, 41.8 per cent; 25-64, 43.5 per cent; and 65 and over, 14.7 per cent. This compares to statewide figures of 44.9, 45.2 and nine per cent, respectively.

Statistics paint a bleak picture of the area's economy. Five downstate counties approach the depression level of 15 per cent unemployment. More families live on less money here than anywhere else in Illinois. This underprivileged region receives fewer revenue sharing funds per individual than any other part of the state. Young people flee Little Egypt.

Mayor Neal Eckert

What can he do for Little Egypt?

The governor's council must act decisively to put Southern Illinois on its feet and bring it up to parity with the rest of the state. Major industries — manufacturing, service, agriculture and construction — need stimulation, possibly through state and federally sponsored programs. Revenue sharing in Southern Illinois communities should increase. Young persons must be encouraged to stay in the area and tourists convinced to come and spend vacation dollars in Little Egypt.

Most persons agree the potential for economic expansion exists in this region. The governor's council must act to help Southern Illinoisans realize this possibility.

Foresters know about ecology

To the Daily Egyptian:

The SIU Foresters have been receiving a lot of criticism from the opinion of some that Thompson Woods has been severely mistreated.

Thompson Woods was extensively studied before any action was taken and the present course of action was determined to be the best. This study involved several groups and many individuals from various campus sectors. As it stood, the stately black oaks of Thompson Woods were on the verge of extinction due to their overmaturity and the encroaching new growth of weedy species. Presently small openings are being created for the natural succession of black oak and other desirable species to take place. Also, in some areas desirable native species will be planted.

The openings were created by removing only 33 out of more than 2000 trees present in the woods. These 33 trees were either dead or potential hazards near pathways. Other action taking place is controlling the several species of vines which are choking the growth of younger trees.

Thompson Woods in its present state is not in a natural ecological condition as would be found in nature. Asphalted walks, light poles, snow fences, sheds and other various unnatural structures are present. Many species, not typical of an oak-hickory climax forest of Southern Illinois were planted in the woods such as Beech, Mimosa and other ornamentals.

Foresters, contrary to many people's opinions, are very much aware of ecology and have no intention of cutting Thompson Woods for profit. Some material is being removed from Thompson Woods to help maintain the woods as an aesthetically pleasing experience. This is also beneficial to regeneration and the safety of students.

Boston and busing

To the Daily Egyptian:

Dave Hamburg's "Busing havoc" (February 4), full of the very emotionalism he decried, seems designed to create heat and not light. Accepting the TV image of the Boston situation instead of penetrating the distorted coverage (see "Boston: The Agony of Responsibility," Columbia Journalism Review, January-February, 1975), Hamburg tells us that Boston has been "rocked" with violence, as if the whole city has been up in arms. Instead, one particular area has had relatively minor disturbances, generally resulting in a few arrests each day and perhaps an occasional knifing. (Compare Chicago on a "normal" weekend!)

More serious is Hamburg's distortion of the legal situation. We are told that the busing was imposed to "achieve racial balance." President Nixon's "code word" to avoid responsibility for desegregation under the law. In fact, the busing was imposed to eliminate official segregation because Judge Garrity found that the Boston School Board had segregated officially. The remedy he imposed is of a type clearly upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court for both the North and the South whenever such segregation is found; the busing is wholly within the city of Boston. Massachusetts state law has required desegregation and the U.S. Supreme Court has required it for twenty years, but the Boston School Board sat and did nothing to meet those requirements, despite several years of constant prodding. When, after all that, a judge finally issues an order in line with the rulings of the highest court in the land, his action is hardly unreasonable.

Hamburg complains about the "racism" involved in busing children. Presumably the racism, if there is any, comes from identifying the race of the school children so we can tell whether a remedy is effective and segregation has stopped. As such, it has come about only because the blacks initially were denied the equal protection of the law to which the Constitution entitles them. Hamburg also objects to whites being sent to black schools of "lower quality." If they are of lower quality, shouldn't he examine why they are so? Perhaps it is because the School Board, like Chicago's, spent less money per capita in the black schools than in the white ones. This being the case, the remedy is to equalize spending, not to use past white failure to meet responsibility as a continuing excuse to defeat present remedies. Similarly, we might not have to spend the money on busing about which Hamburg complains if equal facilities had been provided earlier.

Complaining later, like Hamburg's, is always easier than acting with fairness earlier; it may also be cathartic, but it is hardly constructive. One would hope that Hamburg would recognize his charge as an editorial writer to educate, not miseducate, and to speak to a campus constituency which contains far more than supporters of a "busing backlash" position, and which contains blacks as well as whites.

Leave poor Danilo alone

To the Daily Egyptian:

I find it disturbing, and quite inappropriate, that editorial space continues to be used to criticize and question the character of Danilo Orescanin.

Between you and me, Wes Smith, Orescanin is a respected member of the business faculty, and your comments do little to encourage a positive image for SIU or the College of Business.

Finally, the fact remains that Orescanin was found not guilty in a court of law. What you are suggesting by prolonging this issue is that your position better equips you to see guilt or innocence than does the state's attorney's office. May I suggest that you do not, and that we start giving people's character some respect where it is due, and refrain from using the media as an instrument to drag people's names, and readers' eyes, through smut and Mississippi mud.

Local scouts get honors

To celebrate National Boy Scout Month, local scouts held their City Wide Court of Honor Thursday night at the First United Methodist Church.

Troops 66, 68 and 183 were present for the festivities. During the evening 250 awards were handed out to individual members of each troop. The ceremony was highlighted with the presentation of Eagle Scout awards to three scouts from troop 66.

Honored were Eugene Kamarasy, 16, son of Mr. and Mrs. Egon Kamarasy and Robert Hesketh, 14, and Ryan Hesketh, 15, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hesketh.

All scouting awards are earned and all Eagle Scout applicants must complete a project.

Kamarasy cleaned and renovated a local cemetery, while Robert Hesketh made a display case for Eagle and other Scouting awards for the First Methodist Church. Ryan Hesketh made a bus shelter for school children.

In keeping with the scouting theme of the month, Local Troop 66 will have first aid and knot tying displays and competition on exhibit at the University Mall Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Police will ticket autos

SIU Security Police will begin enforcing parking regulations along Lincoln Drive in the vicinity of the Student Center at 8 a.m. Wednesday, Capt. Robert Presley said Friday.

Presley said the number of cars parked along Lincoln Drive near the Student Center "has gotten out of hand." He said SIU police have not been vigorously enforcing the no-parking rules due to the number of special events taking place at the Student Center recently.

"The parked cars on Lincoln Drive pose a traffic and safety hazard," Presley said. He said advance knowledge of the crackdown would hopefully save motorists from getting a parking ticket Wednesday.

Beg your pardon

The graduate housing story which appeared in Friday's paper inaccurately stated that University housing will offer graduate student housing at Thompson Point and University Park in 1978.

Graduate housing will be offered in the two areas for fall, 1975. Joe Gasswer, assistant housing director, added that some space may be offered for graduate students at Southern Hills, although no firm decision has yet been made.

Politicians to report on lobbyist activity

CHICAGO (AP)—Illinois legislators and major lobbyists will be spotlighted in a series of reports prepared by a newly formed non-partisan committee.

The formation of Project POLL (Profile of Legislators and Lobbyists) was announced recently.

It will be headed by Kenneth Bode, a former research director for the Democratic party's National Commission on Party Structure and Delegate Selection. Board members will include Republicans, Democrats and independents.

Bode said profiles prepared by his group will detail voting records, legislation supported, special-interest-group rankings of legislators and campaign contributions.

Information also will be developed on the committee assignments, legislation office holders want to pass and their educational and professional backgrounds.

Bode said legislators will be urged to co-operate in the project and will be offered the opportunity to make their own unedited comments published with the profiles.

Bode said co-chairmen of the group are Republican Alice Irlig and Democrat Steven Schwab.

Schwab heads the Committee on Illinois Government. Irlig ran for Cook County assessor in November.

Other Republicans directing the group are former state Reps. Alan Johnston; Thomas Roeser, director of Project LEAP, a political watchdog group; and national GOP Committee woman Hope McCormick.

Democrats include Angelo Geocaris; Jeanne Hurley Simon, a former state legislator and wife of Congressman Paul Simon; and Dora Williams.

Bode said he hopes to have the profiles published by late fall.

New city office to hear and act on complaints

City Manager Carroll J. Fry announced Thursday the creation of a Citizen's Assistance Office designed to improve communications with and service to Carbondale citizens.

The main function of the office is to receive complaints and help solve them, Fry said.

Sandra Plapp, secretary to the manager, and Ron Ruskey, administrative intern in the city manager's office, have been named citizen assistant officers, Fry said.

Plapp is uniquely qualified for the position because of her knowledge of the city and its departments, Fry said. Ruskey is an SIU student and will have a good feel for student complaints and concerns, Fry said.

Ruskey said the office will provide a "focal point for access to the city government."

Plapp said that currently there are quite a few complaints and questions every day.

The name, address and phone number will be asked of each who uses the service, so that the city can follow up on the complaint and check to see if the problem has been solved.

Bergt's conducting improves orchestra

By Michael Hawley
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

There is one thing which everyone seems to be in agreement about with regard to the SIU Symphony Orchestra—Robert Bergt has tremendously improved the group during the five months he has been conductor.

Although Wednesday night's concert wasn't quite as good as last semester's, they proved once again that SIU has an admirable symphony orchestra deserving of the packed house it played to in Shroyok Auditorium.

The selections of Wednesday night's concert, which included choreographed Bach, a composition giving the contrabass unusual solo status, a musical-oratory tribute to Abraham Lincoln and a Mozart symphony, demonstrated that variety, besides being the spice of life, can add verve to any musical program.

The concert began with J.S. Bach's "Overture," for which dance instructor Holly Catchings had choreographed dances for each section. A first-time affair for an SIU Symphony concert, both the Southern Illinois Repertory Dance Theater and musicians pulled the event off with the elegant air of King Louis XIV's court the piece was meant to suggest.

Dressed in costumes of the period, the dancers entertained the king and queen on stage with high-spirited competition of pas de deux and solos. Catchings' interesting spacial arrangements, while confined to traditional Baroque movements, also enjoyed a freer balletic influence.

For most of this piece the orchestra played finely, particularly the strings which dominated it. It seemed the brass section had most of their problems in the Bach selection, and there were a few moments when the orchestra and dancers fell out of time with each other.

Domenico Dragonetti's "Concerto for Contrabass and Orchestra" showcased the artistry of Salvatore Macchia, an SIU School of Music faculty member who is allegedly one of the finest contrabass players in the country. Hearing the handsome contrabass sounds in the unnatural lead position was both a freakish and exquisite experience.

The fascination of watching Macchia's technique take control over such a huge instrument was as demanding of attention as the sound it produced. Demonstrating his ability to play long and difficult runs in the first and third movements, only occasionally did Macchia run into difficulties with them. The more subdued and mellow andante second movement evidenced his impressive vibrato technique.

Probably the least inspirational piece of the evening, even though it was intended to be just that, was an over dramatic interpretation of Copland's "Lincoln Portrait." Supposedly selected to inspire admiration and patriotism on the former president's birthday, the composition musically punctuated a narrative text embodied with portions of Lincoln's speeches chosen by the composer. The text was effectively read by SIU Chairman of Religious Studies, John F. Hayward.

For the most part, the symphony fared well with Copland, indicating significant headway over last year's attempt at one of his pieces. Again, there were problems with the brass, but they could afford to be discordant with Copland's work, which they could not be with the Bach.

Special attention must be given here for the symphony's most valuable asset, the woodwinds. The entire section was masterfully proficient during Wednesday night's concert, with particular note going to clarinetist Yusuke Taniguchi's brief, but keenly sensitive solo passages.

In keeping with the belief that idle minds are the devil's workshop, an entertainment by five male members of the dance company was provided in the balcony lounge during intermission. Performing an 18th century sword dance arranged by country dance expert Mildred Dickenson, who recently visited SIU, the participants seemed to have as much fun rendering the dance as the sardine packed audience did watching it.

Concluding the concert after the intermission, the orchestra performed Mozart's "Symphony No. 40 in G minor." Admitting a personal preference not to hear Mozart symphonies live, the piece was a bit too resounding for the more delicate treatment it deserves. Technically, the orchestra was at its best on this last number. Although the strings tended to falter throughout, they got themselves together for the spritely fourth movement and ended in grand style.

Judging from their past two concerts, probably what the SIU Symphony Orchestra holds for the future is increased virtuosity under Bergt's conductorship.

Automobile tune-up expenses vary with engine and garage

By Jim Murphy
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

If old man winter has made it crystal clear lately that it's tune-up time for your car, don't bother shopping for a local bargain rate on the service.

A price-comparison survey made of tune-up service charges at several Carbondale service stations, including Penney's Auto Store, indicates that the best policy for saving money on tune-ups is the do-it-yourself method.

The trouble signs that point to the need for a tune-up are numerous, said L.D. Willey, the supervisor of the Automotive Technology Program at the School of Technical Careers. Willey said obvious indicators are poor gas mileage, lack of acceleration and spark plugs misfiring.

The Daily Egyptian price comparison survey reflects basic price information. Those interviewed at each location stressed that the price for a tune-up varies with the number of cylinders, and the make and model of the car.

"It isn't really fair to put an average price on the cost of a tune-up," Willey said.

A salesman at Penney's Auto Store, Ron McNulty, said $34.88 for an eight cylinder car is a flat price. He said Penney's charges $29.88 for a six cylinder tune-up.

Rolf Schilling, part owner of Ed's Standard, 600 E. Main, said the tune-up policy of his station is to charge a flat service rate of $20 for eight cylinder cars and $18 for six-cylinder autos. This price, he said does not include the price of the parts for the tune-up—spark plugs, points and condenser.

At Rich's East Main Service, the flat tune-up service rate for an eight cylinder car is $12.50. Rich Taylor the station owner said. He said he sells a Shell tune-up kit which includes the necessary parts. The kit, runs from about $9.50 for a Volkswagen to $18.45 for a larger model car, he said.

Verlin Tackett, co-owner of Don's Shell, located at Grand Avenue and Wall Street, said he charges the same price for an eight cylinder tune-up as Rich's, $12.50. This price also does not include parts, only labor. He said he charges $9.50 for tune-up service on a six cylinder car.

Lee Dietz of Murdale Texaco, 1501 W. Main, said the tune-up price for an eight cylinder car averages between $26 and $35. "Dietz said that the tune-up price for a six cylinder car averages $10 less than an eight cylinder auto.

At Thompson's Texaco, 601 S. Illinois, Greg Aldridge, a mechanic at the station, said, "We seldom charge over $30 for the tune-up on an eight cylinder car." He added that the final price figure would depend on the make of the car.

Echoing the feelings of the others interviewed, Aldridge said, "You have to take the time and the difficulty of the job into the price consideration."

Larry Georgeff, owner of Larry's Veach, 509 S. Illinois, said his average price on an eight cylinder tune-up was "right at $30." He said the average price of a six cylinder tune-up runs $25.

Radar patrol serves double purpose

HARTSBURG, Ill. (AP)—A part-time policeman with radar equipment is helping to keep this tiny central Illinois town's streets safe and its treasury full.

"Everybody seems to think we're out for the money, and we aren't," said Hartsburg Mayor Fred Ritterbush. "Our prime concern when we hired the radar patrolman was to make the streets safe for the school children who have to cross it, for church-goers and for the farmers taking their grain trucks to the elevator."

Ritterbush hired Roger Shane, a police equipment salesman, more than a year ago to patrol a half-mile stretch of Illinois 121 which goes right through the center of Hartsburg, population 363.

Ritterbush said speeding motorists were fined $19,000 in 1974, more than half of the amount it takes to run the town for a year.

The second largest source of income for the town was the city's $12,247 share of the state sales tax, the mayor said.

The speed limit on either side of the half-mile strip through Hartsburg is 55 miles per hour. Motorists are warned that the speed will drop to 45 miles per hour in town, however.

Town clerk Wayne Coffey said the patrol has been effective from a safety standpoint.

"We had a few accidents where people were pretty badly mangled because someone decided he wanted to fly through the town. There hasn't been a major accident since Shane was hired," Coffey said.

Part of the traffic fine money goes to pay Shane, who gets $15 an hour. He works on an irregular basis so motorists will never know when he may be patrolling the streets.

Coffey said without the fine money he town could survive, but that with it "we were able to buy a few small items we couldn't have purchased otherwise."

Shane contends he is not operating a speed trap.

"My definition of a speed trap is one which is set up by the local officials just to trap speeders. We didn't set the speed limit in Hartsburg. The state transportation department did," Shane said.

But among those stopped have been a few state legislators, immune from tickets while on their way to and from sessions of the General Assembly in Springfield.

Some have complained to Rep. Jack Lauer, R-Broadwell, who represents the Hartsburg district. Lauer, who said some motorists have been ticketed for going two miles per hour over the limit, is sponsoring a bill which would require patrolmen like Shane to receive special training.

Shane said he has had police training, has attended several FBI seminars on police work and that he supports Lauer's mandatory training proposal.

Skylab photographs aid SIU archaeologists

By James Dillard
Student Writer

Using National Aeronautics and Space Administration (NASA) Skylab photographs to predict locations of prehistoric sites, an SIU archaeological team is conducting the first scientific exploration of an ancient 100-room complex atop an Arizona desert mountain. Project director George J. Gumerman, chairman of SIU's anthropology department, recruited students, archaeologists and specialists in hydrology, botany and geology for the 30-man team. Excavation is under way at the site, located 30 miles north of Phoenix,

The exploration is funded by a two-year $79,200 grant to SIU from the Gumerman said.

Gumerman did archeological survey work in central Arizona in 1971-72, using research grants from NASA and the National Geographic Society. The current project is a continuation of that investigation.

The Skylab photographs predict locations of potential prehistoric sites by showing environmental factors that scientists can determine as favorable to prehistoric occupation. They enable researchers to identify biological and geological zones and to assist in studying current environmental conditions, Gumerman said.

"Our primary objective is to see how the environment shaped these cultures and how the people adapted the arid environment to their needs as they evolved from gatherers and hunters to an agricultural society," Gumerman explained.

SIU test excavations reveal that the early mountain farmers grew squash, corn and cotton in the lowlands below. Archaeologists believe the region was occupied by at least three distinct cultures from about 500 B.C. to about 1450 A.D., Gumerman said.

Gumerman's team hopes to discover how the people utilized the scarce water resources to grow crops on hundreds of acres of arid land.

Pottery and other artifacts unearthed by the field researchers will be studied for clues to the social structure, tools and cultural interrelations of the mountain people. Pollen samples will be analyzed to determine varieties of food resources, both indigenous and those produced by cultivation.

"With the diversity of specialists among our researchers, we hope to get an overall picture of the whole environment of that era and the living patterns of the societies occupying the site," Gumerman said.

Excavations will continue until the desert heat in May drives the field team into the laboratory. Digging will resume in September, Gumerman said. Laboratory researchers will study the salvaged materials until June, 1977.

Hefner takes a pay cut

Inflation hitting Playboy, Inc.

CHICAGO (AP)—The boss is taking a 25 per cent cut in pay; coffee for employes that used to be free now costs a dime; pop is up double to a dime. Such spartan economies are not what you'd expect from Playboy's $200-million empire and they add another burden on pleasure magnate Hugh Hefner.

Hefner, already troubled by vigorous federal and local investigations into the alleged use of hard drugs at his mansions, received no solace from the latest earnings report issued recently.

It showed a before-tax loss of $667,040 for Playboy Enterprises Inc., in the second quarter, down from a $1.4 million profit for the same period the previous year.

Furthermore, because of the weekend economy, Playboy has reneged on previous roster estimates and says it can't expect to approach total earnings last year, one of Playboy's worst in the past decade.

Most activities were affected by the lower earnings but the company's epicurean network of hotels, clubs and casinos suffered the most. The result—strict economy measures recommended by a team of efficiency experts with a target of saving $6 million a year.

Hefner's annual salary will be reduced from $308,000 to $220,350; ending free coffee for 2,000 employes at its headquarters will alone save about $50,000; Muzak piped into the elevators at Playboy headquarters has been turned off; employes will travel less and in coach rather than first class; Hefner will reduce use of his flying luxurious playpen—a refurbished DC9—to absolute necessities.

Hundreds of exotic plants are gone from the headquarters and so are some high-priced employes. There will be fewer parties with less extravagant spreads at the mansions in Chicago and Los Angeles.

Hefner will enjoy more frequently one of his favorite dishes—pot roast.

"I guess we're watching pennies to take care of the dollars," said one employe surprised at the cosmetic nature of some of the cutbacks.

There's also a wage and hiring freeze in effect and some expensive production methods for the magazines will be curtailed.

The economic news was not unexpected. In fiscal 1974, Playboy's profits skidded more than 40 per cent. Some executives blamed Hefner's past autocratic business style and his distaste for delegating authority. Others say, however, mismanagement, poor marketing and unexpected economic developments, including increased competition from similar glossy magazines, contributed to the decline.

Nevertheless, Executive Vice President Robert S. Preuss, who had earlier predicted a turnaround this year, said without cover price increases for the major publications—Playboy and Oui—the second quarter of fiscal 1975 could have been a lot worse.

The dreary financial news came as Hefner was still recovering from the loss of his friend and executive secretary, Bobbie Arnstein.

Miss Arnstein, convicted in federal court for conspiracy to distribute cocaine, was found dead of a drug overdose in January his Chicago mansion the next day. Hefner blamed her suicide on the federal drug investigation which he described as a "politically motivated, anti-Playboy witchhunt."

Hefner charged that if Miss Arnstein had concocted evidence of hard drug use against him, she never would have been indicted. He said he was the target of a government conspiracy because of his Playboy social philosophy.

U.S. Atty. James R. Thompson said Hefner's charges were "off the wall." Nevertheless, the investigation—more than a year old—was continuing.

A Cook County grand jury also was directed to investigate the death of a former Playboy bunny who died of a drug overdose.

Hefner said there was evidence that Miss Arnstein was convicted on the basis of perjured testimony and added that government prosecutors could not accept that he was not involved in hard drugs.

He said he never encouraged the use of narcotics at his mansions and he and his staff never distributed hard drugs to his guests.

"She was crazy, but in a very beautiful way. He gave off an aura of 'I am a man who works for a living.'"

SIU faculty member to exhibit drawings of natives in Mexico

By Michael Hawley
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A tall, blue-eyed blond, Dan Wood, SIU assistant professor of art, was considered a rarity in smaller villages of Mexico, where people had never seen an American before.

He remembers taking his drawing materials into the village plaza on hot afternoons. Within a short time as many as 50 curious people would come close to observe, chatter and joke.

He would be introduced to them as a famous American artist, and some of them ended up posing for as many as 20 hours while he transformed their brown faces into detailed pencil drawings.

Two series of such drawings, one of Mexican folk life and the other of Morisma, an ancient Mexican festival celebrated in August, were the result of Wood's six-month sabbatical leave in Mexico, which ended Dec. 21, 1974.

The drawings brought invitations to hold three one-man exhibitions in the cities of Zacatecas, Guadalupe and San Luis Potosi next summer. Wood will return to Mexico for the June openings, and do more drawings of the people he came to regard as "absolutely the friendliest people I have ever met."

Wood had two reasons for choosing Mexico as the place to take a sabbatical: A person can live there for a small amount of money (although Wood claims that is changing), and the SIU Department of Anthropology has extended roots into Mexico through its research studies of ancient ruins, paving the way for other visitors from SIU.

The opportunity to exhibit his works came when the "town father" of Zacatecas, a wealthy patron of the arts, saw the drawings in the hotel where Wood stayed. Interested and impressed, he extended Wood an invitation to exhibit his art in Zacatecas, and put him in contact with the right people in the other two cities.

The exhibit, which will travel from city to city, will also include works that Wood produced in the United States and Europe. Wood's work is included in the permanent collections of the Philadelphia Museum of Art, the Brooklyn Museum and others.

Wood sketched many of the 4,000 participants of the Morisma fiesta, an event celebrating the battle of the Christians and the Moors.

One subject he sketched was the elaborately costumed "King of the Moors," the head of the fiesta.

"The first night he came to pose for me he sat like iron, very formal and dignified. One person heading a festival of 4,000 people. That's pretty important.

"The second night he asked if he could bring along his oldest son who was interested in art. I said, 'Sure.' The following night he brought some of his other sons, and the next night his daughter was with him. The situation eventually became very informal to say the least," Wood said.

Wood said informality was usually the rule when Wood attempted to work. At times, admirers surrounding him would get hectic and a little irritating, he remembers. Unfamiliarity with the language also presented problems for Wood, although he now claims to know 'conversational' Spanish.

But complicating problems, like the language barrier, also made things interesting. He said he enjoyed the novelty of adapting to a new culture.

But the 'new culture' Wood adapted to during those six months was an impoverished one. It presented a special problem to him as an artist; coming to grips with one's sensitivity.

Artists are overly sensitive people, Wood claims, and in order to survive they must set themselves somewhat apart from their surroundings, even though they feel a desperate need to change them.

"But even though the people were very poor, there was humanism in the streets. In the Mexican people I found a stimulation and vivacity you don't see in America anymore. The other night I went into Merlin's looking for models for my classes, but I couldn't find anyone interesting enough."

Two models Wood may have wanted to bring back from Mexico are Jose and Pasquala, whose drawings by him comprise a set titled "Husband and Wife."

"Pasquala worked at the hotel I stayed at and she used to call me 'the white dove' because I wore white shirts and pants. When she'd see me in the hotel she'd start fluttering her arms and making bird sounds. She was quite old and slightly insane, I think, but I couldn't really tell because of the language barrier. Yeah, she was crazy, but in a very beautiful way," Wood reflected.

One day while sitting in the hotel lobby, Wood saw a man walk past the front door on the street. His clothing was "rippled to shreds," but his spirit possessed a tremendous ability. Wood's imagination immediately drew parallels to Don Quixote.

"He gave off this incredible sensation which seemed to say, 'I am the salt of the earth,' an aura of 'I am a man who works for a living.' I thought to myself, 'I have to draw him.'"

The man turned out to be Pasquala's husband, Jose, and a sitting was arranged. Thinking back, Wood admits he's "not really into drawing old people," but the tale-telling age lines of Jose and Pasquala couldn't be disregarded.

Unlike the completed drawings of Jose and Pasquala, many of the ones to be included in this summer's exhibition still need finishing. Exhibits are "a hell of a lot of work," Wood claims, with approximately 50 to 70 hours of work being devoted to each drawing.

Walker requests legislature to work with him on economy

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—Gov. Daniel Walker urged the Illinois General Assembly Thursday to work with him in a new spirit of partnership to help the state weather the stormy economy.

In his annual State-of-the-State address to a joint session of the legislature, Walker painted a grim picture of the state's economic condition and urged lawmakers to join him in an effort to provide needed services without raising taxes.

"While recession and inflation beset us on one side, soaring crime rates, environmental problems and energy shortages attack us from other sides," Walker said in his 30-minute speech in the House chambers.

"Every proposed spending increase must be balanced against the plight of the people—the people paying the sales and income taxes. They must not be asked to pay more," he said.

Walker, a Democrat who has had a hostile relationship with legislators in both political parties, urged the General Assembly to work with him and not against him.

"The Constitution makes us not rivals for power, but partners for progress," he said, borrowing a quote from former President John F. Kennedy.

Reaction to the speech from legislative leaders was mixed.

Senate President Cecil A. Partee, D-Chicago, issued a generally noncommittal statement in which he pledged "to work with Gov. Walker for the common good of all the people of Illinois."

The Republican leaders of both the House and Senate, meanwhile, criticized the governor for glossing over major problems of his own making and for trying to force government into the daily lives of all the state's residents.

Walker urged the legislature to consider before any other program in 1975 his proposal to speed up construction projects throughout the state in an effort to create more jobs and stimulate the state's economy.

The Walker proposal, delivered in a special message to the General Assembly Jan. 22, calls for issuing some $4 billion in bonds for the construction of highways, homes, schools, airports and parks during the next two years.

But Walker also urged the legislature to pass an array of measures he described as dealing with the rights of individuals and society.

His speech was interrupted both by applause and by boos and cat-calls.

Walker's request that the legislature pass a law requiring that anyone accused of a crime be brought to trial within 60 days was cheered.

His proposal to allow people to register to vote by mail was met with mixed boos and applause. When he urged the legislature to ratify the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, the cheers were drowned out by boos, hoots and jeers from a gallery packed with supporters of the Stop E.R.A. organizations.

Insurance official urges disaster aid

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—A state Insurance Department official has recommended that local governments work out plans in advance to protect disaster victims from price gouging by unscrupulous contractors.

David Taylor, deputy director of the department, made the recommendation in a report filed after he and another insurance official helped Decatur residents recover from a July 1974 railyard explosion.

The recommendations were made available recently.

Taylor advised that "local governments should include in their disaster plans provisions requiring area contractors to prepare estimates in a reasonable fashion."

"Prior agreements with contractors should be made to provide emergency repairs, estimating and appraisal services," Taylor wrote.

Taylor said Decatur residents complained they were being charged exorbitantly for repair estimates.

"The reports were that contractors were charging anywhere from $25 to $400 to make an estimate of damages," Taylor said in an interview. "The $400 report is pretty hard to believe, but we had no way to check it out."

Taylor said he believes it would be fair for a contractor to charge his normal hourly labor rate for an estimate. Many companies will waive the estimate charge if they are hired to make the repairs, he said.

Some repairs must be made at once to prevent further damage, Taylor said.

Communities should work out in advance plans to get windows repaired, dangerously sagging lumber removed and pipes sealed off, he said.

He also recommended that the department consider establishing an insurance industry committee to adjust losses. It could be made up of auditors from various firms who could be located at a single office where disaster victims could reach them by dialing a single number, Taylor said.

He said this would eliminate the confusion which arises at the time of a disaster for people who may not know how to reach their insurance agent.

He recommended that the department prepare for distribution numerous leaflets to disseminate to disaster victims which would reflect the steps an insured person should take after a loss.

$8.1 million subject of city's public hearing

By Mary Whidder
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

A public hearing on the proposed use of $8.1 million in federal funds will be held at Monday night's Carbondale City Council meeting.

The federal funds are available through a Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) block grant.

If the proposed use of the funds receives HUD's approval, Carbondale will receive the money over a three year period, Don Monty, assistant to the director of community development said.

Carbondale was scheduled to receive $2.9 million during the first year of the HUD program. However, Carroll J. Fry, city manager and director of community development, announced Thursday that Carbondale has been allotted an additional $15,000 in funding, which it will receive during the first year.

The additional $15,000 will be placed in a contingency fund, said Monty. The money will be used for programs developed throughout the year and to meet unexpected costs.

Carbondale will know if it has the grant by June 30, Monty said.

The Citizens Community Development Steering Committee has been working since last October on developing programs for use of the money. About 54 programs have been developed, Monty said.

Fry said 66 per cent of the programs are for housing and capitol improvement projects. About 34 per cent of the programs are for supportive social services, such as the womens center, health care and educational programs, Fry said.

Carbondale is receiving the fourth largest grant in Illinois, Fry said.

In other action, the council will consider the mayor's appointments to the planning commission and to the Board of Fire and Police Commissioners.

The council will meet at 7 p.m. in the cafeteria of the University City complex, 607 E. College St.

Student reports burglary loss

The theft of $175 worth of record albums and a set of $40 headphones was reported Friday to Carbondale police by Rich Grubbe, sophomore in journalism.

The burglary occurred at the Wall Street Quads, room 131, at about 4 p.m. Thursday, Grubbe said he was taking a shower at the time, and the door to the apartment was not locked.

"Two of my roommates were upstairs, and I was in the downstairs washroom taking a shower," Grubbe said.

Grubbe said the Carbondale police have no suspects as yet, but two car licenses were taken of cars seen in the area belonging to persons not living in the apartment complex.

"The funny thing about the burglary is that the thief passed up an expensive tape recorder, and stole two frying chickens off the kitchen table," Grubbe said.

SIU researcher probes epilepsy

By Jim Ridings
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Epilepsy Foundation of America has awarded Ronald Browning, assistant professor in the SIU School of Medicine and Department of Physiology, a grant to continue work in neuropharmacology.

The grant allows continuation of Browning's work in studying the role of serotonin, a chemical produced by specialized neurons in the brain in epileptic seizure susceptibility. Partial research has suggested serotonin has important functions in modulating seizure activity. Further evidence may provide answers in the search for improved epilepsy therapy, Browning said.

"We don't know for sure if these neurons are important in epileptic seizures," Browning said, "but there is some evidence to that possibility, and we are testing. We think these neurons are needed and that persons afflicted with epilepsy may be deficient in serotonin."

Browning added that although this is not the only chemical involved, it can influence seizures.

"Even if this proves not to be involved in the disease process of epilepsy," he said, "it may have some anti-convulsant properties, and pharmacological manipulations to increase the amount of serotonin may be ways to treat the disease."

Browning added that the project will provide more information on serotonin's function in the brain. "There are suggestions that serotonin is involved in other neuronal functions besides epilepsy," he said.

The grant, which totals $9,123, begins Saturday and runs for one year. Browning has two graduate assistants working on the project with him.

Soybean fish and chips?

WASHINGTON (AP)—Far from having a limitless resource in the sea, the world is nearing the limit of its fishery possibilities, says Dr. Robert M. White, chief of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. To provide enough fish now and to insure conservation for the future, he asserts, there must be cooperation on the state, federal and international levels.

SIU Law School expected to receive full accreditation

Full accreditation for SIU's Law School is expected, Dean Hiram Lesar says, but it won't be official until next fall when a team of inspectors from the American Bar Association (ABA) makes its final evaluation.

Faculty and students are expecting a second visit from the ABA in March.

The ABA will send two or three inspectors. The panel looks at curriculum, the library, and talks to students and faculty members. A supplementary report on the history of the school, class schedule, faculty biographies, etc., is being prepared by Norma M. Brown, administrative assistant to the dean.

Last year, the first for the law school, SIU received provisional accreditation. This guarantees the classes of '76 and '77 the opportunity to take the bar exam.

Graduates from schools not accredited by the ABA are not eligible to take the bar exam.

One requirement for accreditation not yet met is a 60,000 volume library, SIU is very close to this goal, Lesar said. He sees no problems in receiving full accreditation next year.

Last year's inspectors came from Indiana University and Oklahoma University.

"The inspection takes three days. I've served on panels myself," he added.

Lesar said SIU will also seek accreditation from the Association of American Law Schools. This will be applied for after graduation of SIU's third law class, in 1978.

After full accreditation is reached, re-inspection takes place every seven years.

Can we afford health?

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP)—Spiraling government and private expenditures for health care coverage, treatment and materials were at the $80 billion level in 1972, Arthur D. Little Inc., reports, adding that the figure is likely to double by the end of the decade.

The research firm, headquartered here, believes the strain being placed on health care resources is leading to more stringent evaluation of programs and to increased emphasis on balancing limited resources with needs.

Jackson County Board uses grant money for jobs

By Pat Corcoran
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The Jackson County Board of Supervisors established eight new jobs in the county to use money from a new federal grant.

The board decided at its Thursday afternoon meeting to give money for two of the jobs to the City of Carbondale and money for two jobs to the city of Murphysboro from the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) funds made available to the county.

Part of the provisions of the grant require two persons to be hired from both the Carbondale and Murphysboro areas. The board agreed to protest the part of the $113,000 CETA appropriation that gives money for two jobs to the state hospital in Anna and one to the Menard State Penitentiary.

The council voted to hire two microfilm operators to be used jointly by the County Clerk and Circuit Clerk to photograph records. Others hired with the county money will include a radio operator for the sheriff and an administrative assistant for the board.

Approval was given for Sheriff Don White to apply for an Illinois Law Enforcement Commission (ILEC) grant to the board. Sheriff White said that if the money is received it will be used for the purchase of new uniforms, crime scene kits and 35 mm cameras.

Under the grant's provisions, the county must match grant money with three and three-fourths percent of the funds.

"This comes to about $37.50 county money for each $1,000 grant money," Cleveland Mathews, chairman of the board's Law Enforcement and Judicial Committee, said.

In other action, the board voted to purchase a 3,000 gallon tank to hold lead-free gasoline for the highway department. Bill Munson, county highway superintendent, said the tank was necessary because the new cars ordered for the sheriff's office use lead-free gasoline. The sheriff's department presently purchases gasoline through the highway department.

The board voted to allow Metropolitan Enforcement Group (MEG) to also purchase gasoline through the highway department. MEG is an intercounty drug law enforcement group.

The board gave its approval for the County Treasurer to attach liens to the property titles of delinquent taxpayers.

Approval was given to the State's Attorney's office to hire two part-time law clerks and a part-time investigator for traffic tickets. Howard Hood, state's attorney, noted money left over after his full-time investigator resigned would pay the salaries of the workers.

New Audit executive causes legislative row

By William C. Wertz
Associated Press Writer

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP)—The Illinois Legislative Audit Commission chose a new executive director Friday. Republican members said the choice had been dictated by Senate President Cecil A. Partee, D-Chicago.

The 12-member commission, divided equally between Republicans and Democratic members of the House and Senate, picked John Day, 27, of Rochester to replace Dick Viar, who retired.

Day has been on Partee's staff since 1970. He will make $23,000 in his new post.

"This is the most bitter thing I've ever been asked to swallow," said Rep. Phillip W. Collins, R-Calumet City, a commission member.

"This isn't the will of the majority. This is the will one man, the president of the Senate, and it's a downright crime."

The commission had been deadlocked since December over selection of an executive director.

Most of the Republicans on the group had backed Lansing Johansen, a certified public accountant on the staff of Comptroller George Lindberg, also a Republican.

The commission is responsible for reviewing the audits of state departments and agencies performed by the state Auditor General.

Sen. Terrel Clarke, R-Western Springs, the commission chairman, said he agreed to back Day at Friday's meeting after a private conference in Partee's office with Rep. Robert McPartlin and Sen. Fred J. Smith, both Chicago Democrats aligned closely with Partee and Mayor Richard J. Daley.

Clarke said that while he was "distressed by the political factors which have come into play," he gave in because he wanted to end the deadlock.

"We have a tremendous backlog on this commission," Clarke said. Collins was joined only by Rep. Leo LaFluer, R-Bloomington, in voting against Day, although other GOP members also said they disliked Partee's interference in the selection.

"I deeply resent that we are being forced to bow to the will of one man who put pressure on his colleagues. It is wrong for the leadership to impose its will on the commission," Collins said.

Sen. Sam M. Vadalabene, D-Edwardsville, insisted he had not been pressured by Partee.

The vote for Day was 9 to 2, with Sen. Richard M. Daley, D-Chicago, absent.

Police seek burglars in music thefts

Carbondale police reported two burglaries in which burglars stole over $1,500 worth of stereo equipment and record albums from SIU students.

Sometime between 8:30 p.m. Wednesday and 11 a.m. Thursday 150 record albums valued at $600 were stolen from Kathryn L. Anderson's room in Wilson Hall.

David A. Gillott and Peter Burns, 413 W. Monroe St., were robbed of an AM-FM tuner, a turntable and 80 record albums. The tuner and turntable were valued at $850. Police reports said the burglary took place between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Thursday.

Beg your pardon

It was incorrectly reported in Wednesday's paper that 11 countries will be represented when the International Student Festival opens Tuesday.

Ricardo Capallero, chairman of the International Student Council, explained there will be 11 associations represented which includes students from 50 to 60 countries.

Capallero said he will give the opening address 8 p.m. Thursday in Shryock Auditorium. His talk will come before SIU President Warren W. Brandt's keynote speech and the SIU brass and percussion ensemble concert.

Carbondale Briefs

The Unitarian Fellowship, 301 W. Elm, will sponsor a guest address by David Christensen, professor in the Department of Geography, at 10:30 a.m. Sunday. His address will be "Lifeboat Ethics and World Hunger."

Open house planned for Technology

An open house will be held in the Technology Buildings on Fri., Feb. 21 and Sat., Feb. 22, to celebrate National Engineering Week.

The open house will feature exhibits, demonstrations of equipment, and guided tours of the laboratories. Displays will include the supersonic wind tunnel, a Wankel engine, and a gas absorption unit.

The open house, which is being held by the School of Engineering and Technology, will be from noon to 5 p.m. on Friday and from 8 to noon on Saturday.

Bifocal or single vision contact lenses can be fitted now with the aid of a computer. Bifocal lens has no segment or line to distort the vision and looks like a single vision lens.

With the use of a PhotoElectric Keratometer called PEK Mark III a photograph of the eye is made. The photo, along with the prescription is sent to the Visual Data Center in Chicago where they are put into a computer. The computer calculates the structure, size, tear layer and the RX required.

The advantage of the lens is usually more comfort and longer initial wearing time.

SIU, Centenary win streaks on line

By Ron Sutton
Daily Egyptian Sports Editor

SHREVEPORT, La.—It's not an enviable position.

Traveling several hundred miles to meet a red-hot ballclub on their homecourt is bad news, even if you're riding a six-game win streak yourself.

That's how Saturday night's game here shapes up, though, as the Salukis place their impressive 16-5 mark and six-game win skein on the line against the Centenary Gentlemen. The Gentlemen have won 10 straight games in boosting their record to an even more impressive 21-3.

Thursday night, they felled their latest victim. While the Salukis were dumping St. Louis, the Gents were holding on for a 78-74 win over Indiana State in a game plagued even more so by fouls than the SIU game.

The first man to foul out was Centenary center, 7-1 junior Robert Parrish—and that's why the game was close.

"They're an average team without Parrish," Indiana State Coach Gordon Stauffer remarked. But with him, they're something else.

It's basically the same team that won at SIU last year, 67-65, in a game Mike Glenn missed. This season, they're that much tougher.

"They've beaten Virginia Commonwealth, North Texas State, the University of Pacific and Southern Mississippi," Saluki coach Paul Lambert said of a not-too-polished schedule.

"Parrish is much more aggressive this year, and he's much heavier—probably 15 pounds. They're a better team than last year, because they didn't lose anybody, and they're all a year older."

Were it not that the Dogs are fighting for a post-season tournament bid, the game simply would be a drawing card for the individual matchup—Parrish vs. Meriweather.

Parrish, however, is the reason Centenary isn't—and can't—look for a tournament bid. The Shreveport native, who has been called the second best center in the country by some experts, was brought to the school by violating academic standards three years ago. The Gents, as a result, suffered a four-year suspension from post-season tournaments.

Pro scouts figure to stream to the Gold Dome to compare the two, regardless.

"I'm sure that when you have people with the reputations of Joe and Parrish, the other guys might get up a little more for the game too," Lambert said. "I feel we have to challenge Parrish just like I'm sure they feel they have to challenge us."

Parrish is not all the Gents have to offer, though. Leon Johnson, a 6-5 forward who scored 23 points Thursday night—tying Parrish for the high—also will present some problems.

"He's probably one of the best forwards we'll face all year," said Lambert, who has seen two Centenary game films, besides sending assistant coach George Lubelt to one game. "He may not have the range Lewis McKinney has for St. Louis, but he's better inside."

The Gents' other forward, 6-6 Sam Waugh, is used primarily for board strength, a team strong point. At guard are Nate Bland and Barry McLeod, both 6-2, whose jobs are simply to get the ball to either Parrish or Johnson.

On the bench are Al Barnes, who works the boards for 13 caroms against Indiana State, and Rick Houston, a much-used guard.

"Officiating may be a very deciding factor," Lambert remarked. Two Missouri Valley officials will work Saturday night's game.

While the Gents have been rolling, the Salukis have jelling toward a peak, also. Perry Hines, who showed the most marked improvement on the team during the home stand, apparently is fit and ready to go at one guard position. Mike Glenn, who ranked third nationally in field goal percentage prior to the St. Louis game, will be his running mate.

Meriweather, at center, brings the fifth best shooting mark into the game. Last year, he sparked against Parrish netting 33 points to the latter's 10. Parrish, however, bottled up the inside very effectively against the rest of the team.

Corky Abrams and Tim Ricci will man the forward posts, as usual. Abrams is the third Saluki shooting over 600, contributing to a team mark which ranks sixth nationally.

Defense, though, could be the name of the game.

"They started out in a man-to-man, then went to a zone last year," Lambert recalled. "Joe had a good night but Mike of course, didn't play."

"We'll go man-to-man, although we may have to change our defense some," he added. "We'll vary our pressure some, but we have to be a little more conservative on the road."

Game time is 8 p.m. The game will be carried on WJPF, WIDB and WSIU radio.

Salukis roped by Cowboys; wrestlers lose again, 29-6

By Dave Wiczorek
Daily Egyptian Sports Writer

They had visions of an upset but the Cowboys from Oklahoma State roped the Salukis grapplers before they drifted off with a victory.

Oklahoma State seemed to tease SIU as coach Linn Long's wrestlers won the first two matches in a dual meet Thursday in Stillwater, Okla. The Cowboys won however, 29-6.

Against two of the top wrestling teams in the country, Saluki Joe Goldsmith has now recorded a draw and a victory. Wednesday he wrestled to a draw against Oklahoma but shutout his 118 opponent from Oklahoma State 6-0.

Freshman Dennis Lewis has had his share of trouble lately but rose to the occasion Thursday in defeating Bill Brock, 5-3, in a close match at 126.

This was a good start for SIU against the country's number two team but it was all down hill beginning at the 134 weight class.

Saluki Dale Eggert gave it his best effort but was saddled with a loss when he fell short at the buzzer, losing to Cowboy Roger Roberts, 9-7. Eggert was on the verge of a near fall at the end of the match but the buzzer canceled his chances. Two points for the near fall would have given Eggert a draw for the match.

Power and strength beat SIU's Clyde Ruffin at 142. Ruffin faced Steve Barrett, 17-1-1, and was beaten 13-4.

Oklahoma State's Steve Randall, a second place finisher in the NCAA last year at 142, never gave Fred Hoef much of a scoring opportunity and defeated his 150-pound opponent 11-1.

According to Mark Bradley of SIU Sports Information, who was with the team, the match at 158 between Jim Horvath and Cowboy Jon Jackson "was the turning point of the match."

Horvath was leading the match 3-2 with 35 seconds remaining in the third period but Jackson slipped away and scored a take-down at the buzzer. A win by Horvath would have tied the team score at 9-9. Jackson, last year, finish sixth in the NCAA at 167.

The remaining four matches were not even that close to get excited about. In the 167 weight class, SIU's Jay Friedrich was soundly defeated by David McQuaig, 8-2.

There was one surprise of the meet, coming in the 177 weight class. Salukis Mark Wiesen was not favored against Ron Ray, 15-1-1, but Ray socked it to him, 20-7. Ray set an Oklahoma State record for takedowns in one match with nine. He finished sixth in the nation last season at 158. Wiesen has now lost two in a row after winning 10 straight matches.

At 190, Harold Young proved to be too much for Saluki Tim Swoboda, beating the freshman, 10-4.

And for the second night in a row, Ken Karwowski didn't make it pass the first period, this time getting pinned by the huge 6-foot-five, 300-pound Cowboy Jimmy Jackson with 1:17 gone in the first period.

SIU brings home a record of 13-6-1 and will host the Sycamores from Indiana State Wednesday night in the arena.

Orienteering meet planned

The 1975 United States Orienteering Championships will be hosted Feb. 21-23 by the Southern Illinois Orienteering Club of SIU with the Continuing Education Department.

The meet is fully sanctioned by the United States Orienteering Federation, which will hold its annual convention on the SIU campus.

One day of practice and two days of competition will be held in the Shawnee Hills south of Bald Knob Cross, but the exact location has not been announced.

Four classes—men, women, junior men, and junior women will compete for the nationals while other categories will run less difficult courses for enthusiasts and novices.

According to Ken Ackerman, orienteering instructor, the meet is open to anyone interested in orienteering. "We want to emphasize that there are no qualification standards required to enter the national championships," said Ackerman. "Classes will differ in degrees of difficulty for those experienced and those new to orienteering."

Night activities include a clinic Friday for those with little or no experience at the Student Center headquarters, a social following the convention on Saturday and an awards banquet after the final day of competition Sunday.

Late entries still are being accepted. In addition to the $5 fee, late entries require a $3 penalty fee. $1 extra will be charged to non-organization members.

Any interested persons should contact Carole Ann Vogt at Continuing Education in Woody Hall.
