Personal computers are coming to dorms

By Tom Mangani

Residence hall dwellers can expect personal computers to be installed within 30 days at Lents and Trueblood halls, according to Southern Illinois University Housing.

Rinella said the Trueblood computer lab will receive six personal computers with printers, while the Lents lab will get three PCs and printers.

Adding personal computers to the Lents and Trueblood computer labs will allow students to do word processing and other operations that terminals are serving as a University mainframe cannot perform.

There are 15 terminals in the computer lab installed in Lents last November and 30 terminals in the lab installed in Trueblood last September, part of a $100,000 plan to provide access to the University mainframe to students in the residence halls.

Rinella said plans call for doubling the number of terminals and installing more personal computers in each lab by the beginning of the fall semester.

Although the labs are in the residence areas, Rinella said they can be used by all students, but an identification number is needed to use the University mainframe. Students in computer science classes automatically receive a code number, but others can obtain a code from the Department of Computing Affairs.

The labs are open from 8 a.m. to midnight. Earlier plans to go to a 24-hour schedule were scrapped because "the demand just wasn't there," Rinella said.

Rinella said he expects terminals to decrease as more classes become more devoted to computer applications. The terminals can access two mainframe systems — UNIX and CMS — but Rinella said more undergraduates would not be able to use them if they were all installed in the residence hall computer labs.

Work is progressing toward installation of terminals in the Greek Row housing area. He said technical problems with telephone lines prevented use of modems to access the mainframe, which has been previously installed so coxial cable could be run to each building, connected in a network that would reach the Greek Row area.

"We hope to have the work done this summer," he said.

Affirmative action council forming to monitor issues

By David Sheets

The University administration wants to shake away some of the misinformation surrounding the concept of affirmative action.

To that end, a new presidential advisory committee will be created to examine affirmative action, identify affirmative action concerns and problems on campus, suggest solutions to those problems, and review existing affirmative action programs and policies.

The committee will also develop criteria for and assist in screening nominees for an annual affirmative action award, Bailly said.

Bailly said the committee will be composed of representatives from each of the six constituencies groups on campus plus four people appointed by the president. Bailly will serve as a non-voting member of the committee.

"We hope the committee will be in gear by the end of next month. It's to serve as a catalyst," Bailly said.

Addressing the issues of misinformation and inequity, the affirmative action panel will probably be the first item on the committee's agenda, Bailly said.

"Affirmative action is not just a matter of hiring women and minorities, it's a matter of having more women and minorities on campus," Bailly said.

In an earlier interview, Bailly defined affirmative action as "the voluntary implementation of the institution to federal and state regulations and executive orders dealing with equal employment opportunities."

"We're talking about bona fide quality hires for just minorities," he said recently.

"This is not hiring pressure or something."

"Since Bailly came on the job a year months ago, 286 "protected class hires," or women and minorities, have been hired by the University in administrative, academic and faculty positions.

Of those 286, 136 are females, 24 are African American, 26 are Hispanic and two are American Indian.

"The number of protected class hires is higher than the number of white male hires," which totals 106, Bailly said.

From the number of protected class hires between Aug. 1, 1985 and Feb. 10, 1986 is 11.5 percent more than the number of protected class hires between July 1, 1984 and Feb. 10, 1985.

"This tells you that there are still un-solved."

Tylenol maker takes capsules off market

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (UPI) — Johnson & Johnson announced Monday it will take Extra-Strength Tylenol capsules and all other over-the-counter medications in capsule form off the market to prevent further cyanide contamination.

"We feel the company can no longer guarantee the safety of capsules," Chairman James E. Burke said at a news conference at corporate headquarters.

He said the company will spend an estimated $150 million to produce a new capsule over-the-counter in place of the Tylenol capsules in the hands of consumers and hospitals.

Burke urged Tylenol users to return the capsules or tablet or capsule forms of the product, which he said are virtually tamper-proof.

Johnson & Johnson suspended manufacturing and sale of Tylenol capsules Feb. 10, after it learned that a capsule form off the market to prevent further cyanide contamination.

"We feel our way back from the Chicago tragedy in 1982 thanks to the fairness and good judgment of the American consumer," Burke said.

We will do it again this time.

"We will do it again this time.

Federal Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Frank Young said Sunday that a man on capsule forms of over-the-counter medicines would be charged in the Tylenol case.

The death of Diane Erisloth, 23, and the discovery of a second poisoned bottle inside a triple-sealed Tylenol box pulled from store shelves in Grenville, N.Y., near where the first was purchased.

14 U.S. airmen's remains sought by military team

BANGKOK, Thailand (UPI) — A U.S. military excavation team arrived Monday in the jungle foothills of southern Laos to search for the remains of 14 American airmen whose plane was shot down in 1972. The 11-man team arrived in the southern provincial capital of Savannakhet and was shuttled by two Laos helicopters to the crash site 60 miles to the east, a U.S. military spokesman said. The site of the crash was aimed at extracting badly the wreckage of an AC-130, codenamed "Spectre," which was shot down during a pre-dawn mission March 29, 1972, by a Soviet-built surface-to-air missile.

British offers to meet Argentine lawmakers

LONDON (UP) — British Monday offered to meet with visiting Argentine lawmakers in the highest level contact between the two nations since 1982 Falklands War. Theater to begin immediate investigation from the Argentinians. British and Argentina are still technically at war and the Foreign Office emphasized that ministerial talks with the four visitors would not constitute official contact with Argentine President Raúl Alfonsín's government.

Saudi reportedly cut oil output last month

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia (UPI) — Saudi Arabia, OPEC's principal producer, slashed oil production sharply in January to less than 3.8 million barrels a day to keep from flooding the already glutted oil market, the Middle East Economic Survey said Monday. Most oil industry observers contend Saudi Arabia engineered the current oil price slide by selling surplus crude in a last-ditch gamble to force non-OPEC producers to cut production and prop up prices.

Hundreds evacuated in flooded wine country

NAPA, Calif. (UPI) — Rescue workers filled up school buses and small boats Monday in evacuating more than 400 people from threatened homes along the rain-swollen Napa River in Northern California's wine country. The water was as high as 12 feet above flood stage in some areas, the heaviest rainfall in three years. More evacuations were possible along other brimming rivers and creeks. About 300 people were brought to makeshift shelters in school classrooms and community centers in Napa, a city of 56,000 people.

Police receive clues to 'Pillow Case Rapist'

MIAMI (UPI) — Police said Monday they have received dozens of calls from tipsters responding to an artist's sketch based on the first eyewitness description of the "Pillow Case Rapist," charged with at least 44 rapes. The latest victim in the string of rapes over a five-year period described her attacker as a white male in his late 20s or early 30s with a trimmed mustache. Metro-Dade Police Spg. David Simmons said four of the callers identified the same man, a waiter at a restaurant.

Jury begins deliberations in Boston mob case

Boston (UPI) — A federal jury began deliberations Monday in the trial of five men accused of running Boston's organized crime syndicate of loansharking and gambling and supporting their enterprise through extortion and murder. The eight-man, four-woman panel met the case at 10:26 a.m. EST after receiving final instructions from the judge, District Court Judge David D. Nelson. Reputed Boston underworld boss Gennaro J. Angiulo, three brothers and an associate face racketeering charges ranging from loansharking to murder, including six gangland-style slayings.

U.S.-backed rebels kill four in truck ambush

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — U.S.-backed rebels ambushed a civilian truck in northern Nicaragua, killing four people, including a Swiss development worker, and wounding at least 11, the Defense Ministry said Monday. A spokesman said the rebels, known as Contras, attacked the truck late Sunday after it left the northern city of Chinandega in route to Somoto, about 30 miles northwest of Managua.

McLaughlin gets Dartmouth trustees' support

HANOVER, N.H. (UPI) — Dartmouth College's board of trustees Monday gave a strong vote of support to President David M. McLaughlin, under fire in recent weeks from faculty and anti-apartheid student protesters. On Tuesday, trustees rejected anti-apartheid student demands to remove McLaughlin and divest $63 million in college holdings linked to South Africa.

Career week events slated

In addition to learning how to land a job in business and what future employers expect, students who take part in workshops at the College of Business's Career Enhancement Week, which begins Tuesday, will get advice on how to deal with stress and child day care.

Joan Pohlmann, director of Career Enhancement Week and vice chairman of programing for the COBA Student Council, said workshops dealing with potential problems caused by careers in business were planned because of new efforts to prepare students for all aspects of life after graduation.

Pohlmann said that Career Enhancement Week activities are slated on the assumption that "not everything a student needs to know is taught in the classroom."

The goal of the week of events, which runs from Tuesday to Friday, is "to help students get a headstart on their career path," she said, adding that speakers from throughout the Midwest will let students know what they look for in graduates and help prepare them to deal with a career.

Career Enhancement Week activities are geared toward majors, but all students are welcome, Pohlmann said.

During the afternoon session Tuesday, which begins at 3 p.m., three seminars will be held in the Student Center. Lawrence Benghele, associate director of computing affairs, will discuss microcomputers in business.

Ballroom A, Marilyn DeTomaso, counselor at career planning and placement, and David Batenham, professor in management, will discuss resume writing in the Southern Illinois Room.

Career Enhancement Week is organized by the COBA Student Council and sponsored by seven student business groups. This is the fifth year it has been held.

Five honored as Advisers of the Year

Leon Forrest will give readings from his new book, "A Woman's Place," at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Auditorium.

His appearance is sponsored by the Black Affairs Council and the Black History Month observance.

"Leon Forrest represents the kind of speaker we are looking for," said Richard Peterson, director of the honors program. "He has a reputation as an outstanding communicator and educator as director of Afro-American studies at Northeastern University."

Peterson said organizers of Black History Month and the lecture series felt that Forrest was the best choice as the speaker who would fit the goals of both programs.

Forrest has been a member of the College of Business and the lecture series felt that Forrest was the best choice as the speaker who would fit the goals of both programs.

Learn about affirmative action

Last semester several letters were written to the editor of the Black Student Association condemning affirmative action. As members of the Black Student Association we condemn the open discussion of affirmative action and related issues. However, due to the misleading nature of the comments in one letter which seemed highly critical of affirmative action, we were compelled to respond.

One author, based on conversations with an unamed friend at some unknown school who alleged that he was forced to hire minorities over whites, implies that a national trend of discrimination against whites exists. The author's method of research seems very inap for someone in an institution of higher learning. Secondly, in a society which has been dominated by and which has given preferential treatment to the white males for centuries, it is naive at best to suggest that a national trend to discriminate against white males exists.

Thurday, there are numerous incidents recorded in the journals of law of this nation which point to the fact that minorities have been discriminated against in the recent past. Justice Brandeis in his 1915 Supreme Court Rainbow and demonstrate why lawmakers felt compelled to draft laws to protect the rights of minorities.

So our space is limited we cannot discuss these incidents at length. Instead we would like to commend Mr. Henderson for suggesting that people need to be educated regarding affirmative action and related issues such as discrimination. We have visited the University's affirmative action officer to attend a panel discussion on "Affirmative Action: The Real Issues." One of the speakers will be Thursday in the Student Center. We invite Mr. Henderson and those who share his perspectives, which seem to be in anti-affirmative action, to attend.

If you have an interest in affirmative action, please come and write your opinion or ask questions. In as much as we are all here to learn, it seems only fitting that we learn the facts about an issue which set up each mixed feeling.

Coffee, dating and women

I've cut the General Foods ad, "8 ways to get a man to ask you out again" (Bus. Feb. 13) and taped it to my mirror, right next to my picture of an (other anonymous) people Frankie Avalon. It's going to be back in the 1980s again and to have General Foods remind us girls how to get a man is like giving us instruction on intelligence. Listen to his jock stick. "Look smart and know something about nothing, giggle at all he says and do, primp that in it's a littleraphics. Have our inhibitions with shower, brush him with flattery, and flirt and tease.

Don't be one-sided

I've bought a poold skirt and 3-inch heels, and I'm going after letter sweater, regardless of who's wearing it. Guys have told me they've learned to drag and will cut their hair in a ducktail.

I raise my Suisse Mocha International Coffee cup to Gertie's General Foods for overlooking the last 30 years of educational degrees for women. I remember all your ad I first read it in a 1964 Photoplay magazine. It made as much sense then as it does now. — Laraine Wright, publications nior, Universitas Relations

The Feb. 14 article dealing with Colorado Democrats vs. the College Democrats of Republicans which lacked one very important point; that the 1964 election showed that there were more Republican voters living in the west side residence halls and that more Republican students voted at the east side residence halls. It should also be noted that in 1984 many students favored Ronald Reagan for President but Paul Simon, a Democrat, for U.S. Senator. This is a trend that should be seen in the elections to come because unless a party has top candidates throughout their ticket, most people will vote a split ticket. An example of this might be in the race for governor against Gov. Jimmy Carter, Thompson vs. Wright is Democratic challenger Adlai Stevenson. Most young voters will probably vote in favor of the governor while still voting for Congressman Ken Gray in his race. Both College Republicans and College Democrats face problems when they go out to register someone. You can't turn someone down because they favor Thompson or Gray and favor a straight ticket.

Democracy begins with group leaders, people we got involved unless you give them a good reason to work on a campaign. Most young people are taking the stand "What is it for?", meaning "Will the politician give me something if I help him win?" Unless you really can't treat a candidate and are willing to spend long hours working on a campaign, or if they offer something of value to you, don't get involved.

Doonesbury

The best type of campaigns to get involved with are probably state representative, state senate, county offices and congressional races. Remember we are the ones that have the most impact on you as a student. Remember first you have to know what the candidates stand for and what they are involved. If you feel the same way they do in regards to an issue, then you might want to remember you can't spend long hours working on a campaign, because your education comes first.

And instead of always working on someone's campaign why can you run for an office, because you have just as good a chance as winning as they do. To be a successful candidate you need money, the support of the voters and a group of volunteers. It doesn't matter whether you are a College Democrat or a College Republican, all that matters is that you are involved. Keep up the good work. — Mark A. Clevy, junior, Political Science

Editorial Policies

Signed articles, including letters, Viewpoints, and other commentaries, reflect the opinions of their authors and not necessarily the opinions of the Daily Egyptian Editorial Committee, whose members are the student editors in-chief, the editorial page editor, a news staff member, the faculty managing editor and a Journalism School professor. Letters to the editor may be submitted by mail or directly to the editorial page editor. Letters must be typewritten, double spaced, and will be limited to 500 words. Letters of less than 250 words will be given priority. All letters must identify themselves by class and major, faculty members by rank and department, non-students by position and department. Letters should contain the author's address and telephone number. Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

Go to Libya, anti-Americans

After reading letters written by Don Smith, I have found that he is a person of intellect. His letters did what he intended, struck emotional chords; but in the way he intended I feel inclined to disagree with the conclusions of his own views and opinions.

It is truly tragic Martin Luther King Jr.'s greatness was not realized when he was alive. It is also truly tragic that Mr. Smith does not realize what Dr. King means. Mr. Smith was all about. In Dr. King's dream, he saw a day when his children could be judged by the content of their character, not by the color of their skin.

Don Smith, your character is showing. Dr. King never meant for the old preceived to be by or use their color for excuses, because he was a man of great dignity. He was not a man of violence, but one of peace. Mr. Smith referred to the American government as having no respect for compassion for blacks, Arabs, Palestinians, Cubans, Indians and the Mexican people.

He also says that it is time for babies to rise up to put tyranny, oppression and racism to death. From what I understand, Mr. Smith is aiming his barbs at white people, rather than the American government, because the government is made of all colors and creeds. This country consists of every color, creed and nationality perceivable.

The only way racism can be abolished is not by stopping at each other or trying to revolt but by learning to live with each other. Racism cannot be overcome overnight, and to expect revolution is surely not the answer. We are a united people, and calling 30 percent of the American people to rise up against 90 percent of the American people is not wise and is exemplary of Don Smith's reasoning

Mr. Smith says that America overruns the word terrorists. We constantly meddle in other people's affairs. We are unique to the peoples of the Middle East, Africa and Central America. He is obviously anti-American. What I cannot seem to figure out is why Don Smith is here. He seeks something that this country offers that he cannot get. Perhaps Smith would be happier in Libya with Khadafi.

The United States allows thousands of immigrants into this country on a yearly basis who seek freedom and a better way of life. I would venture to say that the line of immigrants to Libya is rather short. So why don't you defect, Don? You should have no trouble being accepted. You also say Khadafi is a freedom fighter for the Palestinian people. How many Palestinians were freed by the cold-blooded murder of innocent people, including an 11-year-old-girl, during the recent attacks on two European airports? This is hardly an act of fighting for freedom, but it is in accord of cowardice.

Jews also children of slaves

Mr. Smith: you twisted my comments and took them out of context. Sounds familiar! First of all, Mr. Smith is one of the responders to your letter who is not as well informed. I did not call you a racist because you support the liberation of oppressed people, not because you speak the "truth," and not because some you call Jewish parents are children of slaves, by your logic.

One thing that has become unhinging with your reasoning is that you simply fail to see that there is a tangle simple about any of these issues. Slavery, racism, and the Palestinian problem are interrelated, both issues have tangled through centuries and will continue to last centuries. When you say you simply make a statement, it's not as if your a hundred years ago hasn't made a similar statement, such as "Oppression is wrong." If the problems were so simple to solve they would have been solved back when my ancestors were slaves of the Egyptians.

As for me not being able to win this argument, you're right. But again what you fail to see is that you can't win either. It's not the number of people that have something to say—your argument against me—what the people have to say. You say you have to show your side, but I have truth on mine. Anything I have said in my previous letter or this one can be backed up by news reports, newspapers, films, and history books. What you fail to see is that an opinion can't be labelled as right or wrong. I realize that my opinion is neither right or wrong. Why can't you do the same?

It is ludicrous to think that a student such as yourself can put all of the world's and America's problems into one five hundred word essay and come up with solutions. As one of the children of the slaves, I say that you are out of your league. It's not as simple as you seem to think. Let the politicians and leaders of the world try to solve these problems. In the meantime, I respect your opinion, but don't get offended if not everyone agrees with it. Thank you—Adam S. Chill, junior, Psychology.

Booster wreckage believed to be found

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) - A deep-diving research submarine crept through swift, murky water Monday with seven members cataloging rocket debris on the ocean floor NASA believes is the wreckage of Challenger's right-side booster.

Navy divers looked for other wreckage in shallower water closer to shore as a matter of course. NASAox submarine called the "Nautilus" is scheduled to arrive off the Florida coast Tuesday to join a growing fleet of salvage and recovery ships searching for shuttle debris.

The four-man Johnson Sea Link 2, a small research submersible equipped with television cameras and sonar, was able to photograph the suspected remnants of the shuttle's right-hand booster rocket Sunday.

Small fragments were brought to the surface, but NASA spokesman Hugh Harris said the pieces had not been examined on shore and no large segments had been seen. The Sea Link is exploring an area where we believe we're finding debris from the right-hand solid rocket booster, Harris said. "There are no really large pieces that they're looking at can truly be called debris."

Photographs of the ocean-bottom wreckage were flown to the Marshall Space Flight Center in Huntsville, Ala., for positive identification based on prelaunch documentation pictures and any serial numbers that may be present. Harris said a positive identification would take "one or two days."

Recovering the remains of the rocket is crucial to NASA's search for clues to what caused the explosion of Challenger's external fuel tank 73 seconds after launch.

Marcos opposition grows

WASHINGTON (UPI) - Support grew in Congress Wednesday for a resolution calling for the Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos, including suspending military and economic aid to try to force him to resign the office critics charge he won through fraud and violence.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole said he would introduce such a resolution Tuesday for an expedited study of alternate sites for the strategic U.S. air and naval bases in the Philippines.

"With all the unrest there we should take care of ourselves," Dole said.

Sen. Carl Levin, D-Mich., said Marcos had attempted to "murder democracy" in the Philippines by stealing ballots and using thugs on the opposition, including attacks on ruin.

Levin, who returned Sunday from Mala, called on President Reagan to tell Marcos to step down "because he has no legitimacy to serve as president." Dole said.

Sen. Jim Saxen, D-Tenn., said he would support the suspension of all aid for the Philippines if Congress forced Marcos to hold honest elections.

Congress was returning after a week in which Reagan issued contradictory statements in which he seemed to be positioning the United States against Marcos' re-election, despite election abuses.

After ultimately said the election was marred by fraud and violence, largely caused by the United Nations, and

Meeting for scholars in Greece Scheduled

An organizational meeting will be held at 3:30 Wednesday in Quigley Lounge for the 1973 series of seminars on the ancient Greek experience, which will be conducted in Greece and the Greek islands May 15 to June 8. This year's interdisciplinary program titled "The Erotic, the Irrational and the Moral: Imitation of Human Excellence in Ancient Greek Civilizations." According to program director Robert A. Hahn, an assistant professor of philosophy, the seminars will "challenge the understanding of the way human excellence is achieved by balancing conflicting internal forces, such as the erotic and the moral, the intellectual and the rational."

Student tourists will travel, work at archaeological sites and attend lectures and discussions. They will also be free time for personal exploration.

Participants will examine various aspects of ancient Greek culture—architecture, religion, literature, law, political change, biology and environmental considerations, and the role of Greek theater.

Program staff members, besides Hahn, are Mark L. Johnson, associate professor of philosophy and assistant director of the seminars; Michael Deering, assistant professor of psychology at the American College of Greece in Athens; David Maples, a research fellow of the Swedish Archeological Institute in Athens; and Gregory Gaines, research fellow in cuneiform epigraphy at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver.

Three visiting lecturers and four specialist guest lecturers will assist them.

Participants may sign up for four to six hours of graduate or undergraduate credit in philosophy or general studies.

Cost is $1,995 for the complete program. $1,482 for two weeks, May 15-30; or $1,280 for two weeks, May 25-June 8. The price includes all transportation on mainland Greece and to and from Greek islands as well as local transportation, insurance, continental breakfasts and dinners. Additional costs will include tuition ($149 for four credits), air transportation to Greece and back to the United States, and lunches and incidents.

Religious groups oppose teacher's case

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Religious groups often at odds with each other Monday sided with a religious school that refused to hire a teacher it believes should remain home with her children and has taken its case to the Supreme Court.

In separate statements, the American Jewish Committee, the U.S. Catholic Conference and Americans United for Separation of Church and State, said they filed friend of the court briefs with the court on behalf of Dayton Christian Schools, Inc., a consortium of fundamentalist schools in the area.

At issue is a clash between religious beliefs and anti-discrimination laws. In 1979, Linda Hackinson, a teacher at the Dayton Christian Schools, complained to the Ohio Civil Rights Commission because the school's principal refused to agree to rehe her the year following the birth of her child. She was told that she would not be retained because the school's religious tenets included the belief that mothers should stay home and take care of their young children.

When Hackinson sought the advice of an attorney, she was permanently fired for violating the biblical "will of command" by seeking the advice of a secular authority.

Hackinson's complaint to the right commission concluded there was probable cause to believe the school had violated anti-discrimination laws.

In its brief to the high court, the American Jewish Congress said that if the appellate court's ruling was not upheld, "what Dayton Christian Schools would be required to do by Ohio law is hire a teacher and, since it holds its teachers up as models of Christian living, hold her up as a model of a proper example of Christian living when she is openly violating the school's tenets."
Photography entries are being accepted for the seventh annual Photoscenso Show. Special thanks to the student Photogenics, the show is a juried exhibition of all forms of photography. The proceeds from the show will go to the students of the Academy of Southern Illinois—professional students as well as hobbyists—are encouraged to enter, says show coordinator Karl Dunkstein, graduate student in photography.

Entries should be mailed or submitted in person to the Department of Cinema and Photography by 4:30 p.m. Feb. 27. En tries may submit up to five pieces, which must be matted, framed, and the mat to be a maximum of 14 inches by 14 inches. Each piece should have the entrant name, address and telephone number on the back, with the same information being listed on the case in which the photos are submitted. Entry fee is $5. Judging will be held Feb. 25. There will be a $25 award for best of show, $5 for second, and $10 for third. Entries selected for exhibition will be displayed in Art Alley on the second floor of the Student Center.

Jury for the show will be Sven Strembeck, associate professor of photography at Washington University in St. Louis. Strembeck has exhibited his work at numerous shows throughout the United States, Dunkstein said.

Sport show set for this weekend

By Wm. Bryan DeVasher

Entertainment Editor

Seminar on sports ranging from camping and scuba diving to fishing, sailboarding, skiing and other sports will highlight this year's Spring Sport and Recreation Show. The show will be held Friday through Sunday at the Arena.

Ron Reeder, host of the "Illinois Outdoors" television show, and Bob Pingel, a writer for Bass Master magazine, will speak at two seminars about fishing techniques. Reeder, called "the master of the flippin' technique," has over 30 years of fishing experience and will explain various fishing techniques during the fishing seminars.

Other guest speakers at the show include Wayne Hughes, president of the Academy of Scuba Training, Inc.; Gary Schaub, co-owner of Shawnee Trails, a Cardonale backpacking store; Rick Swets, inventor of "The Scooter," a new aid for catching fish; and Steve Wunderle, a book and magazine writer and photographer; whose photographs have appeared in over 35 magazine covers. Wunderle will also present two seminars on new fishing techniques.

The show will also feature exhibits of the latest in recreation services and merchandise. Recreational vehicles such as camplers, boats and motorcycles, as well as recreational equipment like camping gear, fishing accessories and golf equipment will be displayed.

As an added bonus, $500 will be given away to one spectator Friday. Hourly cash prizes will also be awarded throughout the show for all three days.

The show will be open Friday from 4-9 p.m., Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m. and Sunday from 12-5 p.m. Admission for the show is $2.50 for adults and $1.25 for children 12 and under.

Soviet ship captain refused help while sinking

WELLINGTON, New Zealand (UPI) — A sinking Soviet cruise liner refused help for two hours before New Zealand authorities ordered rescue vessels to move in and save the 737 people aboard, officials said Monday.

The Soviet luxury liner Mikhail Lermontov slammed into rocks and sank Sunday, a windy, rainy day off New Zealand's South Island. One crewman was missing and 16 people were injured. The search for the crewman was called off Monday.

"We are all lucky people," said 65-year-old passenger Stan Smith from Sydney, Australia. "Another half an hour and it would have been too late."

One woman broke her leg and others were treated for shock and cuts. The search for the missing Soviet crewman was called off after several hours.

Capt. Bill Perritt, marine manager of the New Zealand shipping line that operates the tanker Tarrihiko—which rescued many of the passengers—said the Soviet ship's pilot issued a mayday call at 6:30 p.m. Monday. Perritt said three times the tanker responded with offers to help, but the Soviet captain declined and downgraded the mayday call, apparently hoping to beach the vessel before it sank.

More than two hours after the mayday call, authorities in Wellington told the tanker and about 20 other rescue boats to go in—with or without Soviet permission.

"The ship hit with a bang and immediately started to list," a passenger said. "The list just got worse. For two and a half hours the captain kept saying, 'Don't panic, don't panic.'"

Passenger John Munsey, a former British navy officer, praised the ship's crew during the emergency, saying, "Passengers remained calm throughout" because the crew helped prevent panic. Munsey said he and his wife were drinking wine when the ship smashed into the rocks.

"They even announced that dinner would be a little late. We never did get it," he said.

The ocean liner was on a cruise through the Marlborough Sounds when it smashed into rocks between Taumast Bay and the Cook Strait. It is 21 miles northeast of Wellington.

The strait is notorious for sudden weather changes. Mists swirl around the many islands, making navigation difficult, and high winds can whip up huge waves that often cause cancellation of ferries between the islands.

In 1982, the inter-island ferry Wahine struck rocks in a storm near the entrance to Wellington Harbor, killing 51 people.

Air traffic coop program open

Applications are being accepted from students interested in the air traffic control cooperative education program in the Advanced Technical Studies Division of the School of Technical Careers. The application deadline is Feb. 25. The eligibility requirements are sophomore or junior standing by August 1986, full-time enrollment in the aviation baccalaureate degree program, a minimum GPA of 2.0 and U.S. citizenship. Children of Federal Aviation Administration employees are not eligible.

Applicants should send a typed letter expressing their interest, along with copies of up-to-date transcripts and latest grade reports to Jerry L. Bowman, School of Technical Careers.

Purdue downs men netters

By Martin Folan
Staff Writer

Fabiano Ramos, No. 6 singles player for the Salukis, helped keep Purdue from shutting out the Salukis men's tennis team Saturday at the Egyptian Sports Center by winning his singles match, 6-7, 7-6 and 6-3, and by teaming up with No. 3 singles Juan Martinez to beat the Boilermakers in two sets, 6-4 and 6-4.

As predicted by Saluki coach Dick LeFevere, the team is off to a slow start, losing its first match 7-2.

"We're playing the toughest part of the season right off the bat," said LeFevere.

Except for Purdue, the first nine teams on this season's schedule defeated the Salukis last season.

Saluki Per Wadmark met Purdue's Kevin Gregory in a rematch of last year's first singles competition, won by Wadmark, 67, 7-6, 63. This year, however, despite Wadmark's control of the match, Gregory won, 6-1, 6-3.

"This year he took control from the net, whereas last year he played from the baseline," Gregory said.

Gregory took advantage of Wadmark's set play in the first set by scoring on several passing shots while Wadmark faltered on overhead smashes.

Wadmark almost fully controlled the second set, capitalizing on mental mistakes to win on a combination of passing shots, deep lobs, baseline rallies and Gregory's errors.

Service points and aces credited by Gregory and unforced errors made by Wadmark accounted for Gregory's third set victory and a 2-1 match win.

"He played much better in the third set. He woke me up with a couple of aces," Wadmark said.

Comparing last year's match with Saturday's, Gregory said he thought the results were contrary to the way the matches were played.

"Last year I felt like I should've won. This year I felt he should've won," Gregory said. "Mentally last year I played a much better match."

Wadmark believes he played fairly well Saturday, but felt he wasn't mentally prepared so early in the season and, like the rest of the Saluki team, needs more practice.

Saluki Chris Visconti won the opening set, 7-5, against Jim Gray at No. 2 singles, but lost the next two sets, 2-6, 6-4.

Andrew Hocker from Purdue nipped Saluki Jairo Aldana at No. 3 singles, 6-4, 7-6, with a 14-12 tiebreaker.

Visconti and Aldana lost to Hocker and Jim Schumacher at No. 2 doubles 14 and 6-3.

Schumacher dropped his first set at No. 4 singles against Saluki Lars Nilsson, 4-6, before winning the next two sets, 7-5 and 6-1

Closing out the singles pairings, Purdue's Tom Reilly beat Saluki Juan Martinez at No. 5 singles, 6-3 and 6-4.

Saturday's best played doubles match paired up the Salikis' Swedish team of Wadmark and Nilsson against Purdue's top two netters, Gregory and Gray.

Gregory and Gray lost the first set, 5-7, but won the next 6-4, before it was decided that the final set would be played as a tiebreaker, which they won, 7-2.
Men swimmers dominate again

By Sandra Todd Staff Writer

In another of a series of returns, the Saluki men swimmers and divers dominated in impressive fashion with two points, performance and pride at the 18th annual Invitational.

The Salukis won 19 of 20 events at the Recreation Center, punched in two-out-of-12 victories in 12 and swept three events. One-time-three style events, which earned two points to 1133 point victory. Western Illinois tallied 130 for second overall followed by EF's 83. Southwest Missouri State and Western Kentucky were not able to attend because of poor traveling conditions.

In their final home-meet appearances, seniors Cory Brinkman, Anders Grilhammar, Joakim Stenlund and Johann Frigo all left favorable impressions on the team and the cheering section as they accounted for a good chunk of SIU's overwhelming win.

Co-captain Brinkman chanced his way to a first-place in the 50-yard freestyle with a 24.92, a second in the 100 free (53.35), a third in the 500 freestyle (4:29.74), and third in the 200 freestyle (1:47.09). Grilhammar, also a co-captain, won the 200 free (1:58.79), took third in the 500 free (4:27.47) and placed a third in the 1000 freestyle (10:28.17).

A 15-30.50 was fast enough to place him a hair behind Brinkman in the NCAA times list.

Frigo took two seconds in the backstroke events, turning in times of 1:56.35 for the 200 and a 1:52.55 for the 100. Stenlund was fourth in the 50 free with a 21.92 and contributed his sprinting talent to a few point-scoring relays.

Always a standout in the distance events, Erwin Kritz put his efforts toward two of the meet's three sweeps.

In the 1650, Kritz outdistanced teammates Brinkman and Grilhammar by winning with the fastest mile time recorded this year in the NCAA, 15:21.81. The 400 individual medley provided Kritz with another outlet for a win, as he finished over 17 seconds ahead of his competitors with a 3:36.66. Finally in the 500 free, Kritz was second with a 2:45.35.

Saluki Gerhard Van Der Walt was a quadrupleswim event winner by topping the field in each of the following events: 200 IM (2:04.03), 100 butterfly (49.74), 100 free (47.40) and the 200 fly, (1:58.37).

Additional individual event winners were Scott Roberts, 200 back (1:51.82) and 100 back (53.10) - Alex Yokochi, 200 breaststroke (2:01.71) and 100 breaststroke (1:58.37) - Tom Hakerson, 50 free (21.36).

In diving, Chat Lucozo won both boards scoring a 487.720 on the one meter and 544.575 on the three meter.
inches of qualifying for the nationals in the shot put with a personal best of 26 feet. He hopes to qualify in the shot put on Friday in a dual meet at Purdue.

While Saluki men's track coach Bill Collins has been upset about the lack of effort demonstrated by some of his individuals this season, he said he's never had any problems with Koon.

"Smith is very professional about his training and his events," Collins said. "He's a very fierce competitor, he's very intense and he wants the team to do well. It bothers him when he sees some of his teammates not being as dedicated and as intense as he is.

Cornell thinks Smith can qualify for the nationals in the shot put. "He's only a foot away right now and there's no reason why he shouldn't qualify," Cornell said. "It's just a matter of him getting into one. Since the Purdue meet only has one throwing event, the shot put, maybe he'll make a go of it there because I know he wants to go out with a bang.

Smith is eligible only for the indoor season since he has already used up his four years of eligibility during outdoors. As Fremd points out, if Smith had qualified for the NCAA indoor meet, he would have been eligible for the NCAA shot put championship, which allows an athlete an extra year of eligibility if he competes in less than 20 percent of the meets.

Smith, a three-year starter on the varsity football team at Edison High School in Lake Station, Ind., didn't go out for the track team until his junior year in high school.

Smith's best throws in the 12-pound shot put were 45 feet during his junior year and 53 feet in his senior year. Even though he was the conference champion in the shot put as a senior, Smith said he didn't receive any college scholarship offers.

"I wasn't real strong and I just got into the sport," Smith said. "I had a little success in high school but not to the point where I could really go to college with it."

After graduating from high school in June of 1986, Smith took a year off to work and enrolled at SIUC in the fall of 1987.

Smith didn't make much of an impact until his third year at SIUC. He qualified for the nationals in the hammer throw as an Springfield years indoors, and junior year outdoors, during the 1984 season.

In the Missouri Valley Conference indoor meet, Smith finished second in the 35-pound weight throw and in the MVC outdoor meet, he finished second in the hammer.

The 3-foot-11, 260-pound Smith qualified for the nationals in the hammer earlier in the '84 season with a 196.5 effort in a meet at the University of Illinois. But at the NCAA outdoor championships, he only turned in the 177 feet range and failed to qualify for the finals.

According to Smith, he showed his most improvement during the 1985 season. He finished third in the MVC indoor meet in both the 35-pound weight throw (56-5) and the shot put (56-2) earlier in the '85 season. Smith again qualified for the nationals in the hammer for the second consecutive year with a school record 203-3 in the Dogwood Relays at Knoxville, Tenn.

But for the second consecutive year, Smith had a disappointing performance at the nationals. He had a throw in the 210 feet range and failed to qualify for the finals.

Smith credits an extensive weightlifting program as one of the main reasons for his first season success. When Smith came to SIUC, he weighed 220 pounds and could bench press 320 pounds. Four and a half years later, he has bulked up to 260 pounds and can now bench press 470.

In addition to being an outstanding athlete, Smith is also an excellent student. Smith has a 3.3 grade point average.

Smith said he is thinking about pursuing a master's degree in history and landing a graduate assistant position for a men's track program at a Division I school.

Between spending approximately 10-24 hours per week in practice and in the weight room and attending school full-time, Smith admits that he doesn't have much time for a social life during the track season.

"But we try to keep away from going out in the middle of the day," Smith said. "This is a year we've been hurting because it tends to hurt your performance if you go out and get real trashed," he said.
Smith walks-on; now All-American hopeful

By Steve Koulos
Staff Writer

Saluki men's track performer Tom Smith is a true rags to riches story.

Smith came to SIU-C in the fall of 1981 as a walk-on, but might go out as an All-American. That's not bad for someone who didn't seriously take up the sport until his junior year in high school.

Since coming to SIU-C, Smith has been a two-time national qualifier in the hammer throw in the 1984 and 1985 seasons and added to his list of accomplishments 10 days ago by qualifying for the nationals in the 35-pound weight throw.

Despite losing the 35-pound weight in practice for the previous two weeks, Smith met the NCAA qualifying mark of 62.5 with a personal best of 64.25 in his final attempt at the Domino's Pizza Illini Classic. Smith finished second in the event behind American record-holder Jud Logan of the New York Athletic Club.

"When you're in the presence of someone like Jud Logan, you don't have to throw bad," Smith said. "You want to throw good because you would like to get his respect. He's a decent guy and before a few of my last throws he was giving me some tips on what to do. It seemed to help me going into the last attempt."

Smith said in order to win the event next month in the NCAA indoor championships at Oklahoma City, he needs to throw between 71 and 75 feet.

According to Smith, defending NCAA hammer champion Tore Gustafsson of Washington State is the favorite to win the 35-pound weight throw.

"I haven't seen his results but I would imagine he is the odds-on favorite to win the event," Smith said.

Also at the Illini Classic, Smith came within one foot. 75

Cager's family inspires play

By Anita J. Stoner
Staff Writer

When the women's basketball Salukis go on the road, they should send a Lear jet to Fordville, Ky., to bring along the Marialice Jenkins family.

Raised in a family with a unique closeness, the junior point guard's relatives often miss when the game is too far away or the weather is bad.

The family often brings friends, wearing maroon and proudly giving their vocal support to Jenkins and her teammates.

Jenkins' college career keeps her in the hometown limelight because her mother Nancy informs those who are interested while at work in Fordville's pharmacy.

Raised in a competitive atmosphere, Jenkins credits her family for every accomplishment she ever had or will have.

"The tightness really helps in a lot of situations," she said. "The competitive level around our house was really high, whether we were playing board games, basketball or tiddlywinks."

Jenkins' father, Pat Jenkins Sr., coached the Fordville High School boys team for a while, so Jenkins and her older brother grew up shooting hoops at the gym and on their backyard court.

In sixth grade, Jenkins tried out for the girl's high school team and became a starter for the rest of her scholastic career. Jenkins was such an adept passer, she ran a free style offense for her high school team, which has helped her to rate third in assists in the Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference and sixth in Saluki career assists.

When the Saluki coaches recruited Jenkins, "They kept saying, 'We need a point guard to run our plays,' and I kept saying to Coach Scott, 'We don't run plays.'" Jenkins said.

Fordville high school coach Darline Ashby, now a good friend, attends Saluki games when possible, recalled those days.

"In practice we practiced plays, and if we ran one in the game we'd say, 'Hey, great!' We were a good team without plays because Marialice could pass really well in high school -- she could get the ball to you no matter where you were," Ashby said.

"Shoot more!" has been the only reprimand Jenkins receives from her coaches.

Saluki Coach Cindy Scott calls Jenkins "a coaches dream at point guard," further describing her as "very unselfish."

"At times she's too unselfish -- she should be shooting more. She doesn't get the credit she deserves," Scott said.

Her hobbies include just about any sport, so Jenkins decided to major in recreation even though her 3.73 grade point average could lead her to just about anything.

Jenkins said she would really like to get a foot in the door at the college level to coach basketball, starting as a graduate assistant if that's what it takes.

In the off-season, Jenkins works on two-on-one skills by playing her younger brothers John Mark and Matthew, who despite the rivalry are her most vocal fans.

Ask Jenkins if basketball occupies so much of her life, that she lives, breathes, sleeps and eats it and she'll reply, "Give me a fork."

"But someday she'll temporarily retire from the court to raise a family just like her mom did."

"While I grew up, Mom was home with us kids. It may sound selfish, but when I get married and have kids, I would be comfortable staying at home because that's the way I was raised," Jenkins said.

Recruit to try skill on diamond grid

By Ron Wernick
Staff Writer

With a little cooperation, both the football and baseball Salukis have landed a hot recruit.

Darren Hursey, a quarterback from Urbana High School, signed with Ray Dorr's gridiron gridiron last Thursday, but may eventually make his mark as a hard-throwing left-handed pitcher with the Saluki baseball team.

He signed with SICU because he wanted to play in both sports.

It's not the first time Dorr will be taking a risk with a double-sport athlete. Freshman Anthony Vaughan, who played at tailback last season, is also getting his chance as a pitcher. Vaughan was one of the top St. Louis baseball prospects his senior year in high school.

"Ray's never interfered with Vaughan," Saluki baseball coach Richard "Ithy" Jones said. "It's nice that baseball and football can get along in such a manner."

Jones said it is too early to tell which sport Hursey will be the best at.

"But people in the area up there think his future lies in baseball," Jones said.

And for obvious reasons. In 57 innings pitched last season, he struck out an incredible 59 batters. Good control is also an asset, as Hursey walked just 33 batters.

In the regional semi-finals, he pitched a no-hitter, fanning 21 batters while walking just two.

Urbana baseball coach Gary Ring estimates Hursey's fastball at 95 mph, and says he has "an awfully good, strong arm" with a "good curve ball that needs some improvement."

"Darren is a very coachable player with a good personality and he's got a good personality," Ring said. "I'm sure he'll be a big plus for the SICU program."

The 6-1, 200-pound Hursey, with some help from his strong wing, also performed well in football as option-dropback quarterback in 1985.

Hursey received offers from Washington, Stanford, Missouri, Kentucky and Illinois.

Women's basketball results to be a day late

Because of an early decision on Monday due to the holiday, results from the Saluki women's basketball game on Monday night with the Bradley Braves will not appear until the Wednesday issue of the Daily Egyptian.
