Connections revealed in homicide of instructor

By STEVE McCAYNE AND RACHEL SWADA

SOUTHERN ILLINOIS DAILY EDITION

Carih Baldwin says he was told by Carbondale police Wednesday that he could return to the market where SIUC student producer Lloyd Yates was murdered. Baldwin, 28, an undecided SIUC freshman from Herrin, discussed his relationship with Yates and Frank Lynch, a friend from Carbondale, who replaced a section of blood-stained carpet that was removed from the trailer by authorities collecting evidence.

Baldwin met Lynch in 1995, a few days after Lynch confirmed he spoke with the Daily Egyptian Saturday from the Jackson County Jail. The two shared the same cell at the Roxana Mobile Home Park, 2305 S. Illinois Ave., since October 1996.

"He was a good guy," Baldwin said. "A quiet guy."

Baldwin also said Lynch had known Yates since Baldwin was introduced to him in 1996. He said the three would socialize on a regular basis.

"We were all friends," Baldwin said. "That's what's so hard. I didn't lose one friend."

Lynch allegedly murdered Yates, 52, the afternoon of Feb. 1, just described as a "fit of rage." Yates allegedly was beaten with a baseball bat and stabbed multiple times with a butcher knife. The body was then placed in a trunk of a 1984 Ford Tempo and Lynch was in the process of buying from the Good Samaritan House, 701 S. Martin St., where he worked as a house manager.

Yates was an associate professor in the Department of Technical and Resource Management. He was on disability leave from SIUC for chronic fatigue syndrome for two years prior to his death.

Council candidates debate SIUC Halloween, image

By TIM CHAMBERLAIN

Carbondale City Council and mayoral candidates on Saturday morning were the focus of a University forum on the first public forum Thursday night and amid allegations of frustrations with inconsistent city government.

The forum, sponsored by the College Democrats and the Graduate Student Government, allowed candidates to discuss issues such as the annual Halloween celebration and increased enrollment at SIUC.

Mayoral candidate Wayne Sapienski said he has found a recurring theme when speaking with Carbondale citizens and students, which is "transformation with politics as usual." Sapienski said he thought most people feel left out of city government.

Sapienski said the solution to this is "get out and vote."

Only about 10 students and citizens were in attendance, but the audience managed to keep the candidates busy with questions concerning SIUC.

Candidates voiced their beliefs that the city should take a stronger role in increasing enrollment at SIUC. The candidates who voiced that opinion unanimously agreed SIUC's image needs to change in order to improve.

Council candidates Joel Frisler thinks word-of-mouth might be the best strategy. The best way to recruit more students is to make the town already here, happy, Frisler said.

Council candidate George McDaniel said both the University and the city need to improve their image. He emphasized SIUC needs to focus on how considerate the University is with its citizens. The image of Halloween and its effects on the community was another topic of debate. Candidates were somewhat divided on how Carbondale should deal with this issue.

Some, like City Council candidate Brad Cole, think the current method of closing down the strip and the University for Halloween weekend is best.

"Though he acknowledges post-Halloween celebrations have brought in a lot of money, he thinks the resultant party destruction outweighed the benefits. "The situation with Halloween is a Catch 22 for businesses downtown and throughout the community," Cole said. "At this point, I think that this is the situation that is best for everyone."

Others consider a proposed Halloween festival a possibility. Council candidate Carl Flowers would like to see the organized Halloween he remembers.

"It's not students versus the city," Flowers said. "We need to try to resolve the issue collectively."

Though he believes Carbondale city government is on the right track, the Rev. B. B. Hallins, a council candidate, called for an end to hidden agendas and future meetings by individuals and by council.

Hallins was among the candidates with concerns on city issues, a sentiment shared by the other candidates as well.

"If do want a council, it needs to commit to working for the best interests of all people here in Carbondale," Hallins said.

Scholarship raffle brings in the crowd

NOTHING TO LOSE: Winner Chris Walker 'stunned' after hearing his name announced.

ANGIE ROYER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Chris Walker came down the bleachers with his shoes flung in a rush of excitement when announced as the winner of the Alumnae Association scholarship raffle drawing Saturday at the men's basketball game at the SIU Arena.

The SIU Alumnae Association raffled off a $2,000 tuition and fees scholarship to encourage more students to support the men and women's basketball teams.

Walker, a junior in business management from Anna, said he had no reason to believe he had won the drawing.

"I love basketball, my wife, and I were going to buy tickets, so I was kind of excited," Walker said.

"I was just surprised, to be honest with you," Walker said.

Walker's wife, also with him at the game, shared his excitement.

"I was just happy for him," said Walker's wife.

"He's one of the most hardworking people I've ever met," Walker's wife said.

The Alumnae Association has been selling tickets for the drawing at the SIU Arena since March.

DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Visitors to Africa, Japan or Thailand may seem impossible for some people, but starting Tuesday students and members of the Carbondale community will have a chance to travel to such places without leaving thousands of miles.

Mamoudou Coulombe, a doctoral student in geography from the Ivory Coast, is coordinating the celebration of International Festival '99 beginning Tuesday with the International Parade of Flags and ending Sunday with the International Cultural Show.

"I think we provide a very good opportunity for those who have not taken a trip out of the county yet to witness partially because we cannot fully represent what's going on in our countries, because we are students," Coulombe said.

"We try our best as we can to give a picture of the way the cultural aspect is in our countries, which is a dynamic thing," Coulombe said.

The International Parade of Flags allows students and faculty to see the more than 100 international countries from around the world in a single day.

Clinton seeks more support for AmeriCorps

President Clinton pushed Congress to expand his AmeriCorps program, insisting that young people need training and experience to demonstrate that they are not a "generation of cynics and slackers."

Clinton made his pitch at a rally at the University of Maryland, insisting that the program's volunteers could grow by 25 percent if his fiscal 2000 budget proposal is approved. In his budget, Clinton asked Congress to provide the program a $245 million, a $100 million more than the $142 million spent this fiscal year.

The additional money would grow AmeriCorps from about 53,000 volunteers serving in 1999 to 69,000 in 2000, Clinton said.

"The Parade of Flags is the beginning of the event," ISC member Keiko Reiko said. The parade begins Tuesday with the International Food Festival, and the Parade of Flags will then take place. "This will let people see the real culture of our different cultures," she said. "We want to give people the chance to ask questions to satisfy their curiosity and to clarify what they want." Kawamura said working as a co-director of the cultural show, he has a desire to learn more from other students. "We have beachwear modeling, too, and the Thais are doing their sword fighting. Most of the performances are very traditional, so they will bring across, their culture in the audience." Candidate Michael Neil was unable to attend.

Other candidates in attendance were Mayor Neil Billard and Nancy Pontel. The fourth candidate, John Biddick, did not attend because of a previous engagement, but he gave a speech in his place. Other City Council candidates at the forum were: Bud Czajkowski, Steven Haynes and Pat Kelly. "...the Functor were also sponsored by the League of Women Voters and is open to the public."

They will be killed to know all with their own performance," said Li, a sophomore in physics. "We have dancers, we have musical items, we have comedy, we have fun." For example, the Caribbean Student Association is giving a show to Bob Marley. "We have beachwear modeling, too, and the Thais are doing their sword fighting. POLICE DISCOVERED his body at 10:30 p.m. Feb. 6 after executing two search warrants obtained for the trailer and the car.

Because rain threatened to contaminate forensic evidence, the body remained in the trunk of the car at the scene until 2:30 a.m. seguinte to police.

Lynch was charged Feb. 8 with three counts of first-degree murder in relation to the killing, Baldwin, who claims he is a suspect in the investigation.

Samo's Attorney Mike Weiprecht, whose office determines whether individuals should be used as witnesses for the state, could not be reached for comment.

Baldwin said he left the morning of the murder to run errands, leaving Lynch alone in the trailer. He would not comment on the exact time he departed, but his press conference and the time he returned to the trailer or what he did for the remainder of that evening.

"I had an ankle. They called me. They know I didn't do it," Baldwin said.

What is clear to Baldwin is the murder was not a crime of passion.

They also said they were both seeing someone else at the time.

They all think this is a gay thing because we met in the trash and we were just friends.

I think they're seeing someone else, Baldwin said.

What is not clear is what specifically brought Yates to the trailer. Carbondale Police Sgt. Robert Ledbetter said he could not comment on any details regarding the case.

The majority of the man who walked into the police department late Saturday afternoon and told police of the murder in Carbondale is still being kept confidential.

Carbondale Police Lt. Calvin Stevens said he could not comment on why the man went to the police department instead of the Carbondale police and doubts that information will be made available while the investigation continues.

Carbondale police maintain there is a good reason for keeping the man's identity secret until he testifies, but they do not know what the reason is.

Carbondale police learned from other agencies that the unidentified man is not a suspect, according to Lt. Stevens.

He said he could not specifically comment on what agency provided that information.

"In situations such as this," he said, "it is not uncommon for police departments to reach out to as many other agencies as possible."

Baldwin said he did not say if he was the identified man.

Police said during a press conference early last week that they were unsure how Yates got to the trailer.

However, a neighbor said he saw Yat's vehicle, a brown and tan Ford Bronco, parked in Baldwin's driveway sometime after noon on the day of the murder.

Lt. Stevens confirmed that other witnesses have also placed the vehicle at the scene.

The Bronco was towed by Express Towing, Route 51 North, Carbondale, from the Herrin Police Department to the company's yard.

Lt. Stevens would not comment how the vehicle ended up in Herrin. As of press time, the vehicle had yet to be claimed.

The motive for the murder may not be known until the trial.

It is the only case in the state where authorities are consistently refusing to comment.

Baldwin claims he knows the motive for the murder.

I know why he did it. It just didn't make any sense," Baldwin said.

Lt. Stevens said he would not speak about Baldwin.

He said, "We have been in contact with this organization confirmed that they have spoken with a person named Chad Baldwin," Stevens said.

Daily Egyptian reporter Lt. Stevens Carbondale Police Business card. The card contains a hand-written note number. The Daily Egyptian used that number to contact Lt. Stevens on Saturday and Sunday.

"I have statements to make to people," Stevens said. "I can't stop them from telling the paper, but I can tell them I've never release them.

Baldwin said he was close with the victim. He characterized Yat as a personable man.

"He was a really good friend. A really good friend," he said. "I really wanted. Nervous, I didn't know what else to do."

Baldwin said that this also included loans.

I would call time and ask them for money, and he would give me $1,500, $2,500 a pop. Whatever I needed," Baldwin said.

"Baldwin said that money was received from Yat's account was always paid back, and there were times when Yat borrow money from Baldwin as well.

Baldwin said that administrators at SIUC have offered to help with resources and in finding him a new job to live, and the Daily Egyptian was unable to verify because of Baldwin's unwillingness to disclose who he is talking with at S.U.

"They're helping me out," he said. "They know I have a lot of stuff to do.

Baldwin, who said Saturday that an attorney had yet to be appointed to his case, is scheduled for a hearing Feb. 23 at the Jackson County courthouse.
Police investigate discovery of remains in classroom

LINCOLN, Neb. - University Police have launched an investigation to determine why American Indian remains were found in a classroom at the University of Nebraska.

Last April, the room was supposed to have been cleared of American Indian remains. But when anthropologists began to clear the room on Friday night, the bones of a woman, a man and a child were discovered.

Sgt. Bill Manning said the room was to be cleared of all human remains on Dec. 21 to prepare the room for use as a chemistry lab. But when anthropologists were preparing to clear the room on Friday, they discovered the remains of a woman, a man and a child.

They also found two original logbooks that had been missing prior to the clearing. The books detailed Indian finds at two Nebraska excavation sites.

"When the room was cleared in December, no remains were found in the place they were found Friday morning," Manning said.

From April until Friday, Karl Reinhardt, anthropology associate professor, has had one of two keys to the room. That key was lost when Manning and Reinhardt went to find out if the remains were actually in Room 109 in December. But Reinhardt believes the remains were planted there or if the remains were brought there to study after the December search.

The University Police will be staying in contact with the State Patrol throughout the investigation, he said.

Reinhardt, who has been accused by tribal representatives and activists of studying and storing the remains illegally in Room 109, would not comment Monday on those accusations.

"I can confirm bones were found in the room," Reinhardt said in a phone interview. "I don't know what to comment Monday on those accusations.

Under the Native American Graves Protection and Repatriation Act of 1990, remains must be returned and returned to its tribe when it requests.

Also, says Attorney LAGPPA, the remains cannot be studied without tribal permission. The Society, for American Anthropology has disputed that claim.

Reinhardt, who has been associated with the University before this discovery, had been accused of committing illegal acts and acting unprofessionally by the Department of Anthropology.

James Riding, in ACFPPA, consultant for the Pawnee Tribe of Oklahoma, said he thought the remains might have been planted by someone on the university's campus.

Riding said that though Reinhardt has been accused of committing illegal acts and acting unprofessionally, the university, or activists should not jump to conclusions that he's responsible for the remains found in Room 109.

"Would Reinhardt be the angry World Reabind that he says he is?" asked Riding, who is also a consultant for Anthropology of American Indian Studies at the University of Illinois in Urbana Champaign.

"I doubt it, But that isn't the point."

The Aces’ balanced scoring attack was led by forward Andi Speer and Tami Mannebo, who came off the bench with both scoring 12 points. Standout center Shayla McKinney was in foul trouble much of the game but managed to score 10 points.

"They were awfully aggressive, both offensively and defensively, and we didn’t respond very well."

— Jim Crews

Evansville coach Kathy Brentnall said, "I don’t think we earned the way that I would have liked to. I wish we would have shown more toughness down the stretch."

The Salukis, winners of 10 of their last 14, answered every threat the visitors made to get back in the game. A 16-0 run capped with consecutive three-pointers from Jenkins and sophomore guard Abel Schrader providing the final knock-out blow. The 6,222 fans in attendance, the largest crowd in four years at the arena, watched the Saluki home team extend the lead to 76-62 with nine minutes and 22 seconds remaining in the game.

There were no shades of the Salukis’ first matchup with Creighton University. In that game, SIUC had a 20-point lead at the half, before hanging on to win 76-70. The Salukis were determined to put the Aces (19-7, 11-4), who had their five-game winning streak snapped but remain first in the Valley standings.

The lead Aces spoke of was the 17-point, 47-30, Saluki-built in the first half. Still, the Salukis were determined to put the Aces (19-7, 11-4), who had their five-game winning streak snapped but remain first in the Valley standings.

"We were a little nervous after the half, but we had made some good adjustments."

Sophomore Maria Niebrugge quietly led the Salukis with 15 points and five rebounds. Sophomore guard Courtney Smith added seven points.

"I felt if we would have just gotten to the free-throw line and made them, we would have won," Evansville coach Kathy Brentnall said.

"We’re not a functional unit up front and down to pressure," Beck said about the diminished number of bodies in practices because of injuries. "The more games the better. I think playing these games is as good as anything for preparing us for the stretch run."

"Every game we’ve had those spells that we go to the locker room and turn on," Weber said. "I just try to use some threats, and we didn’t say anything about a lead."

The Salukis were so far ahead that an eight-minute, scoring drought wouldn’t have made a difference. The Salukis only allowed the Aces to pull within 16 points, 76-60, at 2:13 mark. The Salukis shot 55 percent from the field, out of nine for the game, hit 17 of 28 from the perimeter, and forced 14 turnovers. The Aces hit 44 percent from the field, shot 11 of 35 from the perimeter, and turned the ball over 23 times.

Monsters of the MVC

"The Salukis haven't appeared on ESPN since the glory days, but it was certainly a 'happy action fun-time' for the men Saturday night.

All 13 Salukis saw action in an 80-65 doubling of the Missouri Valley Conference basketball league at the SIU Arena.

"That's a good team," SIUIC junior forward Derrick Tillmon said. "They're the No. 1 Evansville.

Salukis 80

Tillmon scored 10 points, grabbed nine rebounds, dished out five assists and blocked three shots in one of the best-inspires games of his collegiate career. His performance was one of many in this statement game for the Salukis (16-9, 9-3), who still sit in fourth place in the MVC.

SIUC dominated the Purple Aces from start to finish, shooting 55 percent from the floor (.12 of 31 from three-point range) and limited the MVC to just 44 percent. SIUC senior guard Monte Jenkins, who scored a game-high 24 points, turned in yet another sparkling defensive performance. He held Evansville standout forward Wilson to just nine points.

Swimmers win title again

WINNERS: Both swimming and diving teams maintain crown, break 11 MVC records

Mike Broberg Daily Egyptian

"You almost don't know where to start a story that featured two Saluki swimming and diving teams capturing the conference crowns and 11 individual conference championship records."

You could start at the men's team's convincing 172-81 victory over closest competitor Southeast Missouri State University to capture its fifth consecutive Missouri Valley Conference crown.

Then there's the women's team, which proved that youth does not mean inexperience in their 940-50-50-53 victory and set a record in the MVC.

Hernion Louis captured three individual titles (100 and 200-yard freestyle, 200-meter individual medley) while also earning MVC Swimmer of the Year accolades.

Louis, a senior, helped the team of freshman Matt Mann, junior Luke Wheatley, senior Aron Weidman and junior Jason Wallest on another a conference mark in the 400-yard relay medley.

Senior Lane Weeks, who competed in his last meet in Calhoun, set a league mark in the 500-yard freestyle. Weeks also collected the 1,600-yard freestyle.

"This was a very big meet for him," Walker said. "I'm glad he's such a team player, I know this will be in his heart forever."

The win means the study is ecstatic for the Saluki. Freshman Chris Bige Froggatt also set a Valley mark in the 50-yard freestyle and set a pool record in the 200-yard medley relay.

The Saluki led SMU/6-0-67 seven two of the top three finishes, Walker said his coaching staff did an excellent job in preparation for the meet.

"We expected them to be strong, and that didn't surprise us," Walker said. "They did surprise us, though, they wouldn't have been doing our job."

On the women's side, freshman Brooke Radzinski broke the conference record in the 100 and 200-yard backstroke.

"It's been spectacular," said Radzinski. "I feel that all the training has paid off. It's unbelievable."

But before his job was to do well, he did great at the conference meet. "I felt the job was to keep swimming and not worry about getting it," Radzinski said. "I didn't have as much time to worry about it, so I could focus on the race.

Also picking the Salukis were sophomore Beth Ann Erickson, who captured the 100- and 200-yard breast and, and freshman Courtney Miller, who won the 500-yard individual medley.

In diving, freshman Kristin Kaylor held off two uprisers from Illinois State in victory in the one and three-meter springboard events. Kaylor was also named the Women's Diver of the Year.

"It was really exciting," Kaylor said. "When you win individual events, you're so happy, when you win a whole team, it's something special. It brings you closer together. We've been through this experience once in their life."
