Objections from C of C

City's Anti Poverty Program
Gains Overwhelming Support

By George M. Killenberg

Reaction to Carbondale's proposed anti-poverty program expressed at last night's hearing of the City Council was overwhelmingly favorable.

Although some individuals and organizations represented at the hearing had reservations about specific aspects of the program, the majority of those giving testimony praised the city's efforts to help the low income residents of Carbondale and offered their support of the project. Main objections to the program, which will be supported by state sales tax returns to the city, came from the Carbondale Chamber of Commerce.

Hans Fischer, a member of the Chamber's executive committee, told the Council that his organization approved of the intent of the program but felt that the scope was inadequate.

Elaborating on the Chamber's objection, Fischer said that the tax base of a city Carbondale's size was not sufficient to support an adequate poverty program.

Calling the project a duplication of administration of similar federal programs, Fischer said that federal, state and city agencies are equipped to carry on many of the important aspects of the program.

Fischer also said that the performance of the city youth corps, which is earmarked to receive nearly half of the $75,000 anti-poverty project money, did not justify such a large expenditure.

Fischer described the proposed project as just "nibbling at the symptoms rather than the cause. It is the Chamber's contention, said Fischer, that the unemployed in Carbondale must first be educated properly before they are qualified to assume any skilled job. Fischer said the Chamber recommends that job training programs offered by the Carbondale School District and by SIU be fully utilized.

Most of the other statements presented at the hearing were in praise of the program and commended the city for its effort to solve the problem.

Edward O'Day, chairman of the city's human relations commission, told the Council that the program would be a permanent committee.

Temper Flare at Protest

A group of 40 peace demonstrators operating in shifts obstructed passage Tuesday to the U.S. Marine Corps recruitment center and entered into heated discussion with students concerning the Vietnam War.

Capt. Jim Scouras, 1965 SIU graduate, and Capt. Larry Ogle explained that the demonstrators had not hindered them in talking to those students who are seeking advice about the Marine Corps.

"In fact," Capt. Ogle said, "there has been twice as many students interviewed today as there has been for any other first day since we began recruiting on campus."

The protesting demonstrators caused somewhat of a dilemma for University Center officials because of the blockings of blocked traffic. According to Jim Sheppard, assistant director of the University Center, University Center directors must provide the recruiters with a clear space and also keep traffic moving in the halls.

Stuart Sweetow, president of the SIPC, said his organization plans to speak out at the north entrance of the University Center throughout the day.

One of the picketers, Paul Arwood, junior majoring in sociology and a member of the Southern Illinois Peace Committee, said that although all of the demonstrators were opposed to the war, their individual reasons were not necessarily the same.

A small group of anti-war protestors shouted at John Lodge, a freshman majoring in Philosophy and SIPC member, to burn his draft card "if he was so opposed to the war." Lodge declined to do so.

Print Show to Be Featured

At Center in March

SIU students, faculty and area residents will have a chance to look and purchase original prints of world famous artists from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday, March 11, in the University Center.

From the Ferdinand Reno Galleri eties of Baltimore, the approximately 500 original etchings, lithographs and woodcuts are by such artists as Picasso, Chagall, Remoin and Goya.

Original prints are quite different from ordinary re-productions of paintings. Usually limited in number, original prints are impressions on fine paper taken from plates, woodblocks or lithograph stones prepared by the artist and handprinted by him or under his supervision.

Counsel Confused

To the Editor:

We would like to hear from his letter in the Jan. issue of the Egyptian that the University Legal Counsel is somewhat under the impression that the status of disciplinary review boards at SIU, neither the local chapter of the AUP nor the Egyptian article which reported its last meeting states that the AUP "get up to a committee to review disciplinary decisions of the Dean of Students." The SIU chapter is particularly interested in an administrative proposal which would establish a student-faculty review board (with the University Legal Counsel as the ex officio member) to hear appeals from the decisions of the Vice-President for Student and Area Services, and in some cases, to initiate reviews of decisions without an appeal.

This proposal represents an effort on the part of students, administration, university council, and faculty members to arrive at a university policy which would guarantee fair procedures in student disciplinary cases. The proposal is not yet been representated by Vice-President Ruffner or the Faculty Council which has approved it.

The SIU chapter of AUP is incapable of taking unilateral action which affects the University of Louisville. Even if it were inclined to do so, the chapter is not aware of the individual interests in matters which concern SIU. If you have questions concerning the university's policy and make recommendations and endorsements when such actions seem appropriate to the membership of AUP.

What Kind of World?

By Robert M. Hutchins

Los Angeles Times Syndicate

As a former dean of a law school and a lifelong member of the bar, I have been concerned over the growing complexity of the law and the legal problems it creates for the poor. The standard middle-class view of the way the legal system operates is the client discovers a problem and then finds a lawyer, who will try to solve it for him. This is not a picture of reality—except for the rich.

A man on welfare may know he has a problem. But he does not know whether it is a legal problem. If he did know, he would have no idea what to do about it. If he did know, and if he could understand it, he would not know how. If he strayed into a lawyer’s office, his chances of persuading this high-priced individual to take his case would be slim.

There are not enough lawyers to go around, In the sense that there are not enough to serve the poor if fees the poor can afford. The poor have always been excluded from conditions of urban life and bureaucratic administration make it unbearably true to them.

The Supreme Court, in celebrated recent recent decision, one of the state made counsel available to the indigent in most criminal proceedings. The states have narrowly followed suit.

For example, in a case decided by the Supreme Court, a Nebraska indigent prisoner in an Arizona state court, at a hearing in habeas corpus, was denied coun-not on the ground that the hearing was “ministerial” rather than “judicial.”

The distinction must have seemed rather revealing to the prisoner, who was about to be returned to Oklahoma, from which he had escaped after being convicted of murder.

What is of greatest interest in this case is not, however, what happened to the prisoner, but what happened to the good Samaritan who came to his aid. The good Samaritan was found guilty of violating the Arizona statute making the “illegal practice of law” a misdemeanor.

What is worse, the U.S. Supreme Court, in a peremptory, six-line, unsigned opinion, disregarding the state’s decision of fact Arizona Supreme Court upholding his conviction.

What the good Samaritan had done was to try to persuade the trial court to appoint counsel for a convicted prisoner from Oklahoma. When this request was denied on the technical ground I have mentioned, the good Samaritan decided he would have to represent the refugee himself. He did so and the state did not collect any fee.

In the trouble was that he was not as required by Arizona law, “an active member of the state bar in good standing.”

It was, he argued, tried and convicted of a misdemeanor.

Justice William O. Douglas, in a comprehensive dissenting opinion, puts the issue squarely: “Whether a state, under guise of criminal proceeding, can make legal a client and charlatans, can make criminals of those who, in good faith and for no personal profit, assist the indigent to assert their constitutional rights is a substantial question this court should answer.”

Mr. Justice Douglas goes on: “The 14th Amendment insures to the poor justice for the poor in both criminal and civil actions. But billions of dollars are spent by the indigent and ignorant—and often members of minority groups—these rights are meaningless. They are helpless to assert their rights under the law without assistance. They suffer discrimination in housing and employment, are victimized by shabby consumer sales practices, evicted from homes at the whim of the landlord, denied welfare payments and endure domestic strife without the help of the legal remedies of advice, information, maintenance or child custody decrees.

If true equal protection of the laws is to be realized, the indigent must be able to obtain assistance when he suffers a denial of his rights, today this goal is only a goal...There is a dearth of lawyers who are willing, voluntarily, to take unmotivated and unpopular cases.

He concludes: “(A) Lay by the only hope of achieving equal justice at this time. Since no one has a right to legal services, the poor who suffer from such inequity by the poor are excluded from asserting their rights to legal assistance in court, who have to appear themselves or who steps up to speak for them is not held to those representing their constitutional rights.

The courts, therefore, have the duty and the responsibility to give a better answer than the one they have so far.

Ticklish Study of Peace Feeler

By Arthur Hoppe

The State Department has been extremely busy lately carefully studying Hanois latest peace feelers.

As you know, Hanoi said if we should stop bombing North Vietnam, they’d negotiate with us. And a very complicated statement like that naturally took a good deal of careful study.

For an inside look at the vast and intricate machinery essential to this all-important work, we turn to the Peace Feelers Studies Laboratory, U.S. Department of State.

Here with us to explain the complex techniques employed in the Laboratory’s respected director, Dr. Homer T. Pettibone, D.D.S.

Dr. Pettibone: To begin at the beginning, our procedure calls for the Peace Feeler to approach the Vietnamese in his capacity as a lawyer, where she gets her first examination. Now what sort of questions do you ask, Miss Pennywhistle?

Miss Pennywhistle: Oh, you know, Doctor, quite standard. "Where did this come from?" "What should I do with it?

Dr. Pettibone: Well, that’s a good one. Do you suppose it’s a big Peace Feeler or a little Peace Feeler?

As you know, he’s studying the Vietnam War.

Dr. Pettibone: Now, here’s the first one. What is the Vietnamese work for bombing North Vietnam similar to the Urdu word, “Bhodisatva,” meaning Yorkshire ploughman, but completely different, which means the enemy is employing here so we will know what they want us to stop dropping on their heads.

Dr. Pettibone: Such procedures take time. But, generally, to design a suitable course of action for human events, the all-important work of the Peace Feelers Studies Laboratory is completed and a careful, comprehensive report is issued. Look, there’s one emerging from the Evaluation Section slot right now. When it’s done, Miss Whitehand, will you please read it for us.

Miss Whitehand: Certainey, Doctor. It says: We find the sword offered by General Cornwallis to be apparently authentic and recommend that General Washington accept it, subject to the following reservations...

Storm Over Teacher Salaries

So far, it is still distant thunder, a muted, far-off rumbling, with now and then a brief flash of lightning. With now and then a brief roar, the teacher strike will blow away.

The storm is building mostly for a teacher pay increase, with subsidiary demands for lighter classroom loads, teacher aides, and more free time for teachers.

The most insistent demands so far have been those made by teachers in Winston-Salem. The school system there was faced with the prospect of “sanctions” without a special tax election was called. After the tax was decisively defeated, sentiment began to build for a walkout. The teacher strike never came, but the sentiment is still there, which will be apparent once.

In Alamance County, a local chapter of the North Carolina Education Association called for a special referendum on the need for a teacher pay raise.

Assembly to deal with “dear” educational needs. It has been shown that the need for money has been shown to the Governor by other N.C. laws.

The N.C. law is concerned about salaries, but pupil expenditures by boards, and the lack of a State-supported kindergarten program. Here in Chapel Hill the Classroom Teachers Association is asking the School Board to increase salary supplements by $4 a year for each teacher, and our team to release teachers from some of their more wearisome clerical work as lunch duty.

There is not yet in North Carolina his the teacher military that has been seen in Florida, New York and other states. But it is building.

Mr. Rosser: a member of the Chapel Hill School Board, and active director of the Governor’s Study Commission on the U.S. Peace Feeler Studies Laboratory is a further, comprehensive report is issued. Look, there’s one emerging from the Evaluation Section slot right now. When it’s done, Miss Whitehand, will you please read it for us.

Miss Whitehand: Certainey, Doctor. It says: We find the sword offered by General Cornwallis to be apparently authentic and recommend that General Washington accept it, subject to the following reservations...

Public Schools, said recently that the situation is almost bound to get worse before it gets better. The teacher strike is being treated as a supplicant, Mr. Rosser said, and wants to be treated as a professional, and he wants to be paid a salary that recognizes his education and experience.

Mr. Rosser didn’t say much, but if North Carolina’s teacher wants to be treated as a professional, kind of treatment, or something close to it, we can look confidently for sanctions first and then, a little, too.

Communities all across the State have shown themselves mostly in one election after another, that the teacher’s demands are to be solved on the school district level. That leaves it up to the teacher.

Without a far surpass for a union, the 1969 Legislature is going to have a tough time. It can be seen that if you can trust the signs, the storm is coming and there is no way to stop it and it will blow away.

Prototype Britisher
Visiting Lecturer

At SIU is a professor who is the precursor of what Americans think of as a typical Britisher—crisp accent, hair a distinguished gray, mustache, pipe and all.

For one quarter each year he leaves his country home in Lisa, a small village in Hampshire near the south coast of England, to come to SIU. This is his fourth winter as a visiting professor of English, teaching aspiring young authors how to become better writers.

His name is Kenneth Hopkins. In his own country he is a noted literary historian and poet, a Fellow of the Royal Society of Literature, and the author or editor of more than 65 books, two of which have been published by the SIU Press.

For relaxation he writes detective stories and as a hobby makes wine from such unexotic raw materials as carrots and green beans, not to mention potatoes, flowers of all kinds, wild berries, rhubarb, apples, pears and tea.

He also happens to be a personal friend of England's new poet laureate, Cecil Day Lewis, who on Jan. 1 was named successor to the late John Masefield.

Hopkins' friendship with Day Lewis dates back about 15 years. During that time, Hopkins says that he and Day Lewis have met and talked many times, and the new royal poet on occasion has been a house guest of Hopkins and his wife Elizabeth.

Aside from their mutual interest in serious literature, both are devotees of the detective story. Hopkins relates that Day Lewis writes such books under the pen name of Nicholas Blake. Hopkins' eight mystery novels, however, have been published under his own name.

Commenting on Day Lewis' appointment, the London Times noted that now the poet would have to go to the library and look up Hopkins' book, "The Poets Laureate," which contains biographies and selected works of all English poets laureate since the first, John Dryden, in the mid-seventeenth century.

"The Poets Laureate," one of Hopkins' two books which were published by the SIU Press. It was issued as a paperback reprint in 1966. The work was published originally in 1954 in England. Hopkins says that he intends to revise it for a new edition to include a chapter on his friend Hopkins' other book published by the SIU Press was an original edition of his own "Collected Poems: 1955-1965," which was released in 1965. The book contains several poems on Carbondale and the University.

About his fondness for writing detective stories, Hopkins says that he did it at first "just to make a little money," but now he writes them for pleasure.

As for his wine making, he confides with a look of obvious satisfaction: "The tea wine isn't anything at all like tea."

Japanese Demonstrate Against U.S. Carrier

WASHINGTON (AP) - Left-wing students and workers by the thousands converged on this southern Japanese port city today, Tuesday, to make massive demonstrations against the visit of the nuclear-powered U.S. aircraft carrier Enterprise. Reinforced police made preparations for a bloody riot.

The Enterprise and the nuclear-powered frigate Truxton, bound for Vietnam duty, made their way toward Sasebo but the time of their arrival was uncertain. Informed sources said the Enterprise would visit Japan even though it may be delayed a day or two.

A Japanese government spokesman, however, said there was a chance the 70,000-ton carrier might postpone the visit. Other sources said the ship, originally expected Thursday, might arrive Friday or Saturday due to delay caused by rough seas in the western Pacific.

Massashi Inahashi, chairman of the Socialist party's executive committee, said the Enterprise was delaying her arrival "because she is afraid of the demonstrations opposing her visit."

The vessels would be the first nuclear-powered surface ships to visit Japan, although nuclear-powered submarines have made many visits. The Socialists, Communists, left-wing students and the radical Zengakuren who oppose Japan's policies toward the Vietnam war, contend the visit will link Japan to the Vietnam war.

Many of them also oppose the use of nuclear energy for war.

Supreme Court Rules On Maritime Industry

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court Tuesday handed down a series of decisions on waterfront activities.

The court said the government has the power to search foreign ships and vessels on the high seas if they are used for illegal purposes.

The court's decisions come in the case of a 6-1 ruling in favor of the government.

In another ruling, the Tennessee Valley Authority won a major victory over a private power supplier in a light over limitations set by Congress in 1959 on extension of TVA services.

The court also ruled that Congress has the power to make regulations controlling the use of atomic energy.

The government said it would appeal the case.

Wilson Outlines Tough Economic Plan

LONDON (AP) - Prime Minister Harold Wilson declared Tuesday Britain will withdraw its entire military force east of Suez by the end of 1975, scrap a $1-billion-dollar order to buy American-made bombers and cut social service spending to drive down national solvency.

Wilson outlined his program before a Senate House of Commons, saying he hoped to save $730 million in the 1968-69 fiscal year and $960 million in subsequent years.

"Our purpose," Wilson said, "is to make to deal with the work."

Wilson's program outlines a broad package of social and economic policies designed to bring a rapid reduction in the nation's balance of payments deficit.

In the costly social welfare program, Wilson announced an end to free prescriptions for people over 65, children under 15 and expectant or nursing mothers.

Although the prescription with charge, will amount to only 30 cents, some Laborites shouted, "Resign!"

When Wilson announced this and other welfare measures, such as the ending next September of free milk in state secondary schools, the decision to pull out of the Far East - save for a tiny garrison at Hong Kong - and from the Persian Gulf, leaves the United States as the lone major Western power in the smoldering region east of Suez.

U.S. senators talked of increased U.S. military responsibility that must be shoulder ed in the area. And U.S. officials also were unhappy about Britain's decision to cancel a $1.02-billion order for F111 swing-wing bombers made by General Dynamics Corp. The plane was scheduled to carry Britain's H-bombs in the 1970s.

"We regret the British government's announcement regarding its forces in South east Asia and the Persian Gulf and the F111 contract, " said Carl Bartch, State Department press officer.

To many members of the House, Wilson's program marked the day that Britain became Little England. That was the broad interpretation they gave to Wilson's key passages spelling out his government's reasons for a bandoning Britain's world role.

We intend to make to the alliances of which we are members a contribution related to our economic capability - while recognizing that our security is fundamentally in Europe and must be based on the North Atlantic Alliance NATO," Wilson said.

Reactions were varied. One member of Wilson's Cabinet, Lord Longford, quit as lord privy seal and leader of the House of Lords in protest against a deal in education reforms.

Left-wing Laborites were glad to see the end of Britain's posture as a world military power. But they criticized the destruction of such old Socialist gods as free medicines for all and free milk for older school children.

U.S. Attache Murdered

GUATEMALA (AP) - The U.S. naval attaches and an American Army colonel were murdered individually while they were riding in a car near Guatemalan air force headquarters Tuesday. Two other Americans were wounded.

Earlier in the day a former Guatemalan congressman and his bodyguard were also blasted to pieces.

The naval attaché was identified as John Weber, commander of the U.S. military advisory group in Guatemala. The naval attaché was identified as Ernest Monroe.

In the earlier killings, a woman named Silva Fallas, 40, a lawyer and congressman during the term of President Jacobo Arbenz, was moved down as he left his house.

State of Union Delivered Tonight

WASHINGTON (AP) - Advance interest in President Johnson's election year State of the Union address is centering on what he may say about prospects for peace in Vietnam.

With war costs acting as a damper on big new domestic spending proposals, a key question is whether Johnson will deal directly with a recent indication from Hanoi that a bombing halt over North Vietnam would lead to some kind of talks.

It seemed almost certain Johnson would feel compelled to take this new situation of common appearance before Congress and, via television and radio, before the voters at 8 p.m. CST Wednesday.

Congress, which reconvened Monday, meanwhile is making sure of the address to a joint session.

Traditionally, the annual address is a summary of administration legislative program proposals plus a broad review of the plans and hopes of the executive branch in areas foreign and domestic.

Johnson will talk, at least in general terms, about some new ideas for domestic legislation. There will be new anticrime proposals, for example, and additional suggestions for consumer protection laws. The administration sees potential November votes on some areas.

The chief executive also will renew his plea for early passage of a 10 per cent income tax surcharge. But he won't, at this point, spell out specific administration proposals will be sent to Congress over a period of several weeks, starting soon after Johnson's appearance there.

Individual special messages detailing new administration proposals will be sent to Congress within a couple of weeks.

The financial pinch of the war and the mood of Congresses to any major increase in social welfare outlays in the new budget, going to Congress with a few changes.

Individual special messages detailing new administration proposals will be sent to the House over a period of several weeks, starting soon after Johnson's appearance there. However, the White House is expected to hold back for several months on advancing any major new plans for dealing with theills of the cities, pending a March report from Johnson's Advisory Commission on Civil Disorders.

The White House was trying ing to keep a tight lid on the whole range of Johnson's State of the Union text, still undergoing revision. It was particularly careful to avoid dropping clues involving pas ses dealing with Vietnam.

The plane was scheduled to carry Britain's H-bombs in the 1970s.

Dick Gregory Speech

Whites Still Rate Executive Suite

By Inez Rencher

Peace, freedom and social problems in America were topics of the address held the attention of a capacity crowd that gathered Monday night to hear Negro comedian, author and civil rights activist Dick Gregory.

With a kind of biting humor that incurred both bursts of laughter and moments of silence, Gregory attacked several ill's of the American social system.

"We're going to have to stop lying about these problems of this country," Gregory told the audience of a near pro-pensioner number of Negroes and whites in the women's gymnasium.

Regarding the present civil rights movement, he said, "I hope it bugs America as much as her civil wrongs have bugged me."

He said that he is committed to civil nonviolence but is tired of Martin Luther King asking Negroes to be nonviolent without asking the whites to stop police brutality.

"Somewhere down the line this country had better wake up and realize nonviolence is a favor, not an obligation," he also warned. "We're just about to take the fall back."

Gregory charged that America is a racist country and contended that Black Power is not new.

"It's been Black Power," he explained, "that kept them (politicians) in office in the large urban cities. We (civil rights activists) are not going to hold you by the hand and explain to you (whites) what you're doing wrong."

He added for emphasis, "We ain't gonna explain nothing to you no more."

Gregory commended the courage of Dr. Martin Luther King and Malcolm X. He noted that "Pap" Brown of the Student NonViolent Coordinating Committee for speaking out against the social system.

You can't say they lied, Stokely told the truth and that's what's making people mad.

Gregory emphasized that although many people charge that outspoken attitudes of Negroes and Black Power movement are only hurting the cause, "we ain't about to be handed the war, we ain't about to be handed ourselves until America behaves herself."

Gregory also attacked the war in Vietnam, President Lyndon B. Johnson, the poverty programs, civil rights legislation and what he termed education failings.

Opposed to the war, he said if he were elected president, he would "bring all the boys home from Vietnam and send LBJ."

Gregory has seriously declared himself an independent write-in candidate for president in 1968 and read for his audience the slogan of his campaign button: "Write in Dick Gregory, President for Peace in U.S."

If elected president, he said, the first thing he would do is paint the White House black.

He added with the same type of reflective humor displayed throughout his speech, that as president he would destroy the poverty programs.

"It's not poverty that's making us (Negroes) burn these towns down," he explained, "We're tired of these insults."

Gregory told Negro members of the audience not to be ashamed of welfare assistance and the charges by whites of high child illegitimacy rates and shiftlessness of Negroes in the ghettos.

"If you're ashamed of relief, call it foreign aid," he said, alluding to America's extensive spending in foreign countries abroad. He added that the ghetto situations have been perpetuated by "stinky, trampy democracy."

He criticized meaningless civil rights legislation and the execution of democracy in this country.

Potato Movie Stated Thursday

Probe will present "One Potato Two Potato" at 8 p.m. Thursday in Morris Library Auditorium.

"One Potato, Two Potato shows the repercussions involved when an individual, in exercising his freedom to love and marry the person of his choice, is confronted by prejudices of the society in which he lives."

Admission is free with the presentation of a student I.D. card.

SIU Ranks 94th

SIU ranks 94th among 2,050 schools receiving federal funds for higher education.

"We don't need nothing but that Constitution implemented right," Gregory emphasized. "If democracy is as great as we say it is," he added, "then why in the world are we trying to stam down people's throats?"

He said the day must come when democracy is made to work right."

He charged, "We got dirty 'niggers' because these trashy whites dirtied our system."

Foremost among his criticisms was the information printed in the American history books and the neglect of Negro history. He said that when they wrote in the Declaration of Independence that there is a duty to destroy government which infringes upon personal rights "they forgot to put 'white only' on the tax.""

Among Gregory's summary statements was "America is insane" and plagued with "moral pollution."

Gregory, a former SIU student, arrived in Carbondale at 8 p.m., Monday and addressed an SIU news conference at the Student Christian Foundation before speaking at 9 p.m. He said at the news conference that he was committed to the civil rights movement.

"I won't go back to entertainment until it's over," he said.

"I'm literally broke," he announced in connection of allegations of his bankruptcy.

IC, Mayor Believe Trains Will Be Dropped

By George M. Killenberg

The Illinois Central Railroad, in all likelihood, will receive permission to drop its six Carbondale to St. Louis passenger trains, according to several sources close to the situation.

Both Carbondale Mayor David Keene and IC district superintendent Harry Koonce feel the Carbondale-St. Louis run will be eventually dropped, despite an 11-hour delay ordered by the Interstate Commerce Commission ordering the IC to continue service until an investigation can be conducted.

Until the ICC's order last week, the Illinois Central had planned to discontinue service on Jan. 20. Now the railroad will have to wait for at least four months before halting the St. Louis trains.

According to Keene and Koonce, the ICC's investigation will be merely a formality and will have little effect on the agency's final ruling on the IC's discontinuance request.

"These trains are gone," Keene said, "regardless of what the ICC says." Koonce was just as certain. "I'm sure we'll receive the ICC's permission to drop the trains," he said.

In addition, however, the Carbondale Citizen's Advisory Committee, a volunteer group of concerned citizens appointed by the mayor, to provide advice on city problems took steps to make sure the ICC's investigation is not merely a "formality."

Role of On-Campus Newspapers

By Greg Stannar

The inexperienced operation of the three on-campus living area newspapers at SIU may bring to mind either the rubberstamp journalism of high school days or such last vestiges of ideal seekers as Harry Golden's Carolina Mas­sage.

Exactly what role these papers should be agreed upon even by the editors. Roy Kuyck, editor of the Southern Acres Link, pub­lished twice monthly, said, "We hesitate to answer if we are status quo, but we are gather facts.

This is in contrast to the Thompson Point Pointer which is planning to ask parents their reactions to women's hours. The Pointer is opposed to dourmors.

An editor for the University Park Prism said that before deadline for the Thanksgiving issue he had to get someone quickly to write a story about the holiday "because there was only one thing in about it—and it was in opposition to vegetarianism.

These three papers have at least one common rule of thumb as stated by Miss Reichman, "When it's done in good taste I don't think we have a problem."

One view of what should be presented within the bounds of good taste is described by the president of University Park's student government, Terry Peters.

"Naturally, the role is to inform, but as far as over and above this regular function, I would say it was to stimulate," said Peters.

Peters, a self-described "libertarian," said, "Censorship should play a small role in the area paper. I'd say the only form of censorship that is legitimate is to prevent the individual from per­tract the community from ideas or expressions of ideas that might shock some of them. I don't think it has a role in advertising current stands of morality," said Peters. Joseph Serra, dean of University Park, generally agreed with Peters' principle of presenting a high school gossip campus. You should present some sound."

However, Serra emphasized the need for a balance between news and editorial.

"The only censorship that the school should put on what the student publishes is a final censorship, anything that is distasteful or false is brought to our attention in the form of 'don't let it happen again.'" three papers agree that censorship is really just posture.

"We have 100 per cent lee­s," said Anderson, "on what we want within the boundaries of taste and law," said Anderson, "on what we want within the boundaries of taste and law.

Whatever the particular philosophy of each paper, "This is the best opportunity that a student has of presenting his views without interference from the admin­istration and the best opportunity an editor has to find out what these views are," said Anderson, "This is the best opportunity that a student has of presenting his views without interference from the administration and the best opportunity an editor has to find out what these views are," said Anderson. "This is the best opportunity that a student has of presenting his views without interference from the administration and the best opportunity an editor has to find out what these views are," said Anderson.

Microbiology Grad Schedule Seminar

The next Microbiology grad seminar will present a graduate seminar on "Non-Patho­gen's of the railroad unions and the Chamber has re­mained silent on the matter. SIU officials also said they had little on the IC question. According to vice-president John S. Rendleman, the university has received no official request on the subject and does not plan, at the present, to be repre­sented at the ICC's hearings.

Rendleman also said that the local newspapers have not had any sten­dent reaction to the IC move.

Blast System, Routes Explained

Snow Ordinance Considered

By Patricia Harvey

An ordinance relating to the control of ice and snow accumulations in Carbondale is in the making stage, according to B.J. Schwegman, director of public works. The ordinance is similar to the one used in St. Louis. The St. Louis ordinance requires motorists to use snow tires on their vehicles during winter months. A few main streets are designated as snow routes, and anyone who stalls traffic on such a route is fined if snow tires or chains are not on the car, Schwegman said.

Although Carbondale does not have a city ordinance for removal of snow and ice, a program under the direction of Harold Hill of the department of public works, division of streets, has been in effect to eliminate snow problems on major streets. Carbondale has two dump trucks and two salt spreaders for light snows and a motor grader and a loader to remove the heavier accumulations. The city does not have a snow plow, although it is under consideration, Schwegman said.

“Last year a total of $1,500 was spent on snow and ice control, and this year we have spent approximately $3,000 and spread approximately 165 tons of salt and calcium chloride,” Schwegman said. Schwegman says that as traffic volume increases, a snow and ice ordinance will be necessary.

Handball Courts Need Work; Ceiling Would Be Cheap

The handball courts need a half ceiling, contends Ken Roll, an SIU graduate assistant for the wrestling team. Roll said the hall goes through the net which now covers the courts. This makes it impossible to play the ceiling shots.

The half ceiling, which would extend from the front wall, would be inexpensive. The ceiling could be either wood or fiber glass.

Roll stated there is interest in handball on the campus. Since handball is a good conditioner which can be played later in life, both faculty members and students participate.

Above all, he said handball is fun to play and it relieves tension.

There has been increased interest in handball in the United States, largely due to the National Handball Association and the Y.M.C.A., Roll stated.

He said he would like to see indoor handball courts in the Arena when the final phases of the Arena are completed.

Westbrook Leads Freshmen Cagers; Statistics Show Reason for 2-3 Mark

Through the first five games, Roger Westbrook continues to lead the Saluki freshmen in scoring.

Westbrook, a 6'-10" guard from Centralia, the same city that produced Dick Garrett, is averaging 17.8 points per game to lead his nearest competitor on the team by five points.

Westbrook is shooting only 39.5 per cent but has been consistent from game to game. In the five games the frosh have played, Westbrook has scored 19, 17, 14, 18 and 31 for a total of 89 points. He is also hitting on 25 of 38 from the charity stripe for a 65.8 mark.

The three men on the frosh scoring list are all bundled within .2 points. Mike Hessick is averaging 12.4, B.J. Trickey averaging 12.2, and Terry Buhs is hitting 12.0 points per game.

Hessick is shooting 49 per cent from the field, a miserable 40 per cent from the line. He is also the frosh's leading rebounder, averaging 9.6 (including a high of 18 against Paducah Junior College). Hessick is a 6'-10" center from New Athens.

Trickey is Westbrook's running mate at guard and has hit on 26 of 53 shots for 47 per cent from the field and 50 per cent from the line. A six-footer from Cedar Rapids, Iowa, he hit for his season high of 16 against Washington University and Mineral Area J.C. He is also second on the rebounding list with an average of 6.8 per game.

Buhs is a 6'-3" forward from Bunker Hill. He is shooting 26 of 60 from the floor and 64 per cent from the charity stripe. He also hit his season high against Mineral Area.

Rounding the scoring out for the Saluki starting lineup is Tom McBride, a 6'-4" forward from Hooperton. McBride is hitting 10.4 points per game and has a shooting percentage of .472. He has also hit 59 per cent from the field.

McBride hit his season high of 27 points against the St. Louis University frosh. This is also the top mark by a freshman this season.

The yearling starting lineup is averaging 65 points per game. The entire team is averaging 78.4 during the 2-3 season thus far. The shooting percentage for the starting five is 45 per cent, which is in line with the team percentage of .446. As a team, the frosh are hitting 57.8 from the line.

Rich Beazil is hitting 55 per cent of his shots and is averaging 6.8 per game while seeing limited action. The 6'-11" guard from Table Grove also has chipped in with four rebounds per game.

Gene Cross, a 6'-4" forward from St. Louis' Summer High School, which produced George McNeil, is averaging 4.4 points per game and 3.4 rebounds while also seeing limited action.

Tournament at El Paso, Texas, Butchko was leading all scorers with a 13.3 average as the Maroons have tailed off to a 7.3 for the first 11 games.

Butchko gained recognition in the 61-49 loss to Iowa State early in the season when the Iowa mentor praised his overall play and expressed a wish that a ball player like the Saluki center would play for the Hawkeyes.

In his freshman season Butchko scored an average of 20.4 points a game while maintaining a rebound average of 11.1. He also shot a respectable .500 from the field while speeding a 60% percentage on the charity stripe.

This year he currently ranks fourth in team scoring with 88 points coming on 36 of 86 from the field and 16 of 22 from the line.

He has hauled down an average of only 4.5 rebounds per game but with jumping jack Chuck Benson, Willie Griffin and Dickie Garrett, this can be justified.

With all his overall improvements in the past few games and two years of eligibility ahead of him, Saluki fans will probably adopt the pride of Crete, Ill.

Saluki Center Bruce Butchko Puts Crete, Ill., in Campus Spotlight

Crete, Ill., has never produced much in the area of basketball talent over the years, but Saluki fans hope to change all that while playing for Coach Jack Hartman's cagers.

Bruce Butchko, the Saluki 6'-7" center, has taken great strides this year in putting not only Crete, but himself as well as the campus spotlight. For coming off a fine freshman year in which he broke many of ex-Saluki Walt Frazier's scoring marks, Butchko has broken into the varsity starting lineup at the pivot position.

In his varsity debut he took the fancy of the partisan fans by scoring 22 points against Sam Houston State in a 70-54 victory. While his point totals may have dropped off somewhat he continues to be a key man in the Saluki offense.

Going into the Sun Bowl Tournament at El Paso, Texas, Butchko was leading all scorers with a 13.3 average as the Maroons have tailed off to a 7.3 for the first 11 games.

His freshman season Butchko scored an average of 20.4 points a game while maintaining a rebound average of 11.1. He also shot a respectable .500 from the field while speeding a 60% percentage on the charity stripe.

This year he currently ranks fourth in team scoring with 88 points coming on 36 of 86 from the field and 16 of 22 from the line.
