Library storage subject of GSC letters

By Vicki Oigeaty
Staff Writer

State legislators will be the target of a letter writing campaign which aims to muster support for a plan that would allow the University to use money appropriated for the purchase of a library storage building for the construction of one instead.

The Graduate Student Council, which plans to conduct the campaign, wants to generate support for a change in the wording of an amendment, approved by Gov. James Thompson in August, that appropriated $1.6 million to the University for the purchase of a library storage facility.

The University had planned to use the money to purchase the Bracy Building, a grocery warehouse located in Marion. If the efforts of the GSC are successful, the amendment would allow the University to use the $1.6 million appropriation "for the purchase or construction of a library storage facility."

The GSC claims that the state would save more than a million dollars if the money was used to construct a library storage facility. A 10,000-square-foot building could be built on campus for about $500,000, according to Carl Kosierowski, chairman of the GSC Library Storage Alternatives Committee, which is organizing the letter-writing efforts.

"It's very timely for us to send letters to all state legislators to inform them of what's going on with this taxpayers' issue," Kosierowski said. "Given the financial situation of the state, we don't think it will be difficult at all to garner support for this issue."

The GSC appropriated $50 Wednesday to finance the campaign.

Packets containing a letter and several news stories that summarize what's going on not only from our viewpoint, but from the administration's, will be mailed to legislators Feb. 11, Kosierowski said.

He said the letters will also ask legislators to convince members of the Capital Development Board that the wording change is possible. The next step toward approval of the purchase lies with CDB consideration.

"For whatever reason the CDB has postponed consideration of the Bracy Building twice now," Kosierowski said. The CDB was scheduled to consider the purchase Oct. 14 and Jan. 13.

According to a letter from CDB Chairman Samuel Skinner addressed to the GSC, the University administration has

Paraphernalia law to take effect July 1

By Mary Pries
Staff Writer

Because state law will not make the sale of drug paraphernalia illegal until July 1, Plaza Records and other "head shops" continue to run radio commercials describing items they sell to fulfill any smoking needs.

Selling bongos, water pipes, miniature cocaine spoons and other drug equipment will be prohibited by Senate Bill 1305, which was signed by the governor on December 22, 1982. Because the law does not go into effect until July 1, the "head shops" have five months to clear out their stock.

Police Chief Ed Hogan said he thought the law had taken effect on Jan. 1. However, he said Carbondale police had made no arrests because he did not know of any places that were breaking the law.

"We participate with the Southern Illinois Enforcement Group. It is our responsibility to go into the 'head shops' and if they are in violation of this law we will have to make an arrest," Hogan said. "But because this law is brand new, we have to wait to see exactly what has been published as signed by the governor, and we haven't gotten that yet."

City Attorney George Kiriakos said he also had understood that the law went into effect Jan. 1. Concerning the reason that no one had taken any action to enforce it,

Kiriakos said, "We have nothing to do with the enforcement of it except through the state's attorney."

Kiriakos said a city ordinance requiring businesses that sell drug paraphernalia to be licensed and to keep a list of paraphernalia customers was not passed because the state law made the sale illegal. "The city could not make a law that wasn't consistent with that state law," he said.

When he was informed that the law would not take effect until July 1, Kiriakos said there would be no law against the sale of drug equipment until then.

"The issue wasn't brought up about the block of time between now and July 1 when the decision against passing the city ordinance was made," he said. "The city would have had some way to control and know who was buying it, but the state has gotten more serious."

After Hogan learned that the law would not be in effect until July 1, he said that nothing could be done until then.

"I guess what the law says to people selling drug paraphernalia is 'if you don't unload it, you are stuck with it,'" Hogan said. "What the people at Plaza Records and other 'head shops' are trying to do is unload it as quick as they can."

The manager at Plaza Records declined to comment.

VP nominee pulls out of GSC race

By Phillip Florini
Staff Writer

David Williams withdrew Sunday as a candidate for Graduate Student Council vice president to support Dan Venturi, who is seeking the same position in the upcoming GSC election.

Both candidates were nominated by the council last week for the election, to be held Wednesday.

Also nominated last week were Nicholas Rion for vice president, and Ann Greeley and Steve Katsinas for president. Venturi said he would support Greeley in the election.

"I think it's important that the council be more unified," Williams said. "I also think it is important that we bring experience into the office." Venturi is presently a member of the Graduate Council, and has a bachelor's degree from SIUC in accounting.

"If Dan and I were both running for vice president, we feel we would split the vote, divide our forces and consequently risk the chance of losing." Katsinas and Rion announced last week that they would be running mates in the election.

The GSC decided to postpone the election for the Executive Board and the representatives for the Graduate Council through passage of a resolution last Wednesday.

The resolution, initiated by Melissa James, allows the three positions for the Executive Board and the two for the Graduate Council to be seated after the new president and vice president have been elected.

Conference center might see life yet

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

The glimmer of hope for Carbondale's proposed downtown conference center has grown a little bit brighter.

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, which provided a $2.071 million grant for the land acquisition for the project, has agreed to wait until after the legality of the city's method of property acquisition has been settled before it decides what will happen to the federal money slated for the project. City Manager Carroll Fry, Jr. Washington, D.C. last week for meetings on the city's railroad relocation project, met with HUD officials and got a 60-day extension on the federal money.

The city originally planned to have the land cleared by now, but the project was delayed last June when Jackson County Circuit Judge Richard E. Richman ruled that the city's "quick-take" ordinance for acquiring the land was unconstitutional.

Although the Illinois Supreme Court heard an appeal of that ruling last week, it could be several weeks before it hands down a decision. City officials were concerned that the HUD money earmarked for the project might be jeopardized since several construction deadlines have been missed because of the legal dispute.

The "quick-take" ordinance, which allowed the city to acquire the land before its value was determined, was judged by Richman to be a misuse of eminent-domain powers. The city argued that the ordinance was within the legal limits of its home-rule powers.

With the assurance from HUD officials that they will wait for a ruling on the matter, the city could conceivably go ahead with the project if the court should rule in its favor.

However, the city would need to come up with a new project or find a new developer for the conference center. Stan Hoye, the original developer of the conference center, pulled out of the deal in November.

Throughout the legal dispute surrounding the "quick-take" ordinance, city administrators have stressed that the federal money was not for building the conference center project, but rather for clearing what the city felt was a blighted area of downtown property.

Crackdown on drunk drivers results in fewer traffic deaths

By Jennifer Phillips
Staff Writer

It is finally starting to happen.

Drunk driving arrests by state police are up. Automobile fatalities are down.

The federal government is becoming more aware of the drunk driving problem and, in turn, is helping the states, said Sgt. Roger Draves, District 13 operations officer, based in Du Quoin.

Statewide, 8,291 drivers were arrested in 1982 for driving under the influence violations, which include the use of alcohol and other drugs. Compared to the 4,884 arrests in 1981, that is a 70 percent increase, according to R.J. Miller, Illinois State Police Superintendent.

In District 13, DUI arrests increased by 18 percent from 1981 to 1982, according to Draves, and in Carbondale, police said they arrested 149 people in 1982 for DUI, up 57 percent from 95 arrests in 1981.

One example of the federal government's aid, Draves said, is the program Remove Alcohol Impaired Drivers which uses off-duty state troopers to enforce DUI violations.

"It's the first time it has issued funds for state programs on drunk driving," he said.

The program, which was implemented statewide Nov. 1, concentrates on areas which have high rates of drunken driving arrests.

Draves said District 13, which serves 14 counties, is concentrating on the Perry-Jackson and Johnson-Williamson areas.

He said adjustments are presently being made in the program, which will run from April to August, to "make it more effective."

"The concept is excellent but all new programs have some bugs which need to be worked out," Draves said.

Automobile fatalities were also down in 1982, a fact which Draves said was amazing but promising. "That's the bottom line," he said. "If we bring down the fatalities, someone is doing something right."

Statewide, fatalities decreased by 11 percent from 1981 to 1982, while in District 13 the decrease was 12.5 percent, according to Melvin Kersten, IPS public information officer.

But a state law requiring blood tests on fatalities reveals even more about drunk driving statistics.

According to Miller, between 65 and 75 percent of driver fatalities in single vehicle crashes have blood alcohol concentrations of 0.1 or greater. Legal intoxication in Illinois is 0.1 percent, which means that one-tenth of 1 percent of a person's blood is alcohol.

According to Carbondale police, there was a 66 percent increase from 1981 to 1982 in the number of accidents involving driving while intoxicated violations.

News Roundup

Reagan faces struggle over budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan sent Congress advance copies of his $84.5 billion budget for 1984 on Sunday, and Democratic and Republican leaders agreed he faces a major struggle over proposed cuts in social programs, a $30 billion increase for defense and standby tax increases.

"There will be a bipartisan effort to protect" social programs from deeper cuts, declared Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee.

"I also think there will be a bipartisan effort to cut defense spending" below Reagan's recommended level, declared Rostenkowski, D-Ill.

Mideast skirmishes leave 4 dead

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Guerrillas ambushed and killed an Israeli soldier and wounded three more in southern Beirut Sunday, and Lebanese reports said the Israelis retaliated with machine guns and tank fire, killing two people.

A French priest also was killed by what police called Soviet-made Grad rockets in a Druze shelling attack on Christian east Beirut.

It was the first time the Lebanese capital was shelled since Israel invaded last summer and forced the evacuation of thousands of Palestine Liberation Organization guerrillas from Moslem west Beirut.

Nigeria tortures fleeing Ghanaians

LONDON (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of panicky Ghanaians, fleeing Nigeria by truck and foot to beat an eviction deadline for undocumented aliens, have been tortured and persecuted by Nigerian authorities, Accra radio said Sunday.

Many "denounced the atrocities meted out to them by the Nigerian government" as they fled the country before the deadline at midnight Monday, the Ghanaian state radio said in a broadcast monitored in London.

asked the CDB to analyze the Bracy Building and two alternatives — the Baptist Student Center and the Wal-Mart building in Carbondale.

The SIU Board of Trustees will review the library storage facility situation at its meeting, Feb. 10, Skinner stated, and the CDB will not act on the matter until it receives the recommendation of the trustees.

One problem, Kosierowski said, is that the Legislature considers capital development matters only in June. But he said the appropriation could still be changed in time.

The packets will be presented to the GSC at its next regular meeting, Feb. 9, Kosierowski said. He said graduate students from Illinois will be asked to write cover letters to legislators representing their own districts.

He said he hopes that students will ask relatives and friends to write legislators. "The secret to the whole issue so far has been spreading the word in person-to-person contact," he said.

"I really think we'll get this amendment. Things are just too tight for people in the state right now. The support will be there once people find out."

School board mails notices of open post

By John Schrag
Staff Writer

The search for a new Carbondale Elementary School District Superintendent is under way.

Notifications of the vacancy of that post should be in the mail sometime this week, according to Anita Lenzini, school board president.

Lenzini said notices are being sent to career placement centers at colleges and universities across the state, the job center at the Eurma C. Hayes Center, local newspapers and various educational agencies and associations.

Applications for the position must be in by March 11, Lenzini said, and will be reviewed individually by members of the school board.

She said the board, which accepted the resignation of Superintendent George Edwards earlier this month, hopes to make its final selection by July 1, when Edwards' resignation takes effect.

The job is being offered at a salary of $40,000, Lenzini said.

Lenzini said community input into the selection process is appreciated and any suggestions, recommendations or comments should be sent to the board in the form of a letter.

Edwards, who was hired as superintendent in 1976, was rehired as an administrative assistant for the 1983-84 school year. Lenzini said the terms of his new contract and salary have not been determined.

During his 7-year term as superintendent, Edwards oversaw changes in school boundary lines to achieve racial integration. He also supervised the closing of Lakeland School in 1981 and Springmore School in 1982 and administered the subsequent expansion of the remaining three schools. Last fall, however, Edwards was criticized by the Carbondale Education Association and the school board for his push to keep the size of staffs small.

At the time of his resignation, Edwards reportedly expressed satisfaction with his years as superintendent while stating that he had considered resigning for the past few years and especially after last year.

GSC fights to save clinical programs

By Phillip Florini
Staff Writer

The Graduate Student Council passed a resolution "adamantly opposing" intentions of the SIU-C Law School faculty to alter or abolish client-contact courses.

The issue is scheduled to be discussed at the next Law School faculty meeting.

The Law School's client-contact courses consist of programs for the elderly, prison legal counsel and the Externship Program, which allows students to work in local law offices.

These programs, according to the resolution, "provide the law student with valuable legal experience, provide valuable legal assistance to those in need and fulfill a goal of this institution of providing community service to Southern Illinois." Presently, there is no definite proposal to alter or abolish these programs.

"The student interest in these programs is very high," said

Leonard Math, who introduced the resolution at the GSC meeting last Wednesday night.

"We're afraid, and we don't want to see these programs abolished or severely altered because of the benefits to both the students and the community," said Math, a first-year law student.

The resolution states that, "the Student Bar Association and GSC recognize the valuable asset provided to the community, the Law School and the University at large through the clinics for the elderly, prisoner's legal aid and the Externship programs." These programs have been provided for the past seven years.

"We think it is important to the students that we have clinical programs," Math said. "The student interest is there to participate in these programs."

Math said that the courses provide law students with "hands-on experience in real-life situations." The courses are aimed at second- and third-year students. The Law School also offers simulation courses that teach law practicing skills with faculty supervision.

The Externship Program placement is done by the faculty, but the instruction is without faculty supervision.

The Prisoner's Legal Aid Program serves prisoners with legal advice, while the Elderly Program provides legal aid to the elderly.

"It involves assistance in writing wills for people who normally don't receive legal aid with a fee," Math said.

The resolution also states that "the law school faculty have been reluctant to seek and faithfully evaluate student opinions concerning the reduction, alteration or abolition of these programs."

But according to Donald W. Garner, associate dean of the Law School, the faculty "will actively solicit student comment" when the issue is discussed at the faculty meeting. "The faculty accepts the responsibility to turn out students with practical skills," Garner said. "The only thing now is to consider how those skills can be best taught."

Garner said the Law School should "provide alternatives to the very different type of people who come to this school." "For a small school, we're able to offer a wide variety of courses to students," he said.

"There is a constant challenge for the students to get the right mix."

Garner said that a law school should stress skills training, theory and traditional courses.

Student killed in car crash

The cause of an automobile accident which resulted in the death of one SIU-C student and the injury of another early Friday morning is still unknown, according to the Jackson County Sheriff's Department.

John J. Simak, 20, junior in journalism, died at 3 p.m. Friday at Firmin Desloge Hospital in St. Louis after the car he was driving hit a wooden utility pole off of Chautauqua Road, less than a mile west of Tower Road, at 12:50 a.m., the sheriff's department said.

A passenger in the car, 20-year-old Mitchell J. Wegner, was treated at Carbondale Memorial Hospital for a knee injury and released, according to the sheriff's department.

Simak and Wegner, a junior in technical careers, resided at Wides Village on Route 2 in Murphysboro, a department spokesperson said.

According to Carbondale Memorial Hospital, Simak sustained a head injury and fractured his left ankle and right leg. A nursing supervisor at Firmin Desloge said Simak's injury was listed as multiple trauma.

Compromise chilled by Reagan budget

BRAVO FOR President Reagan calling for bi-partisanship and compromise in his state-of-the-union address to battle federal deficits and recession. Both parties must indeed work together to put the country back on track.

The proposed $848 billion budget for fiscal 1984 boosts spending $43.5 billion, which Reagan said is a freeze on domestic spending except for inflation's share.

What is frightening is that defense spending increases $30 billion despite a freeze on military salaries. The share for hardware is left intact while the deficit is projected to be $189 billion.

DEFENSE SPENDING comprises 7.8 percent of the gross national product, the biggest share since 1970 and the height of the Vietnam War despite $8 billion in cuts previously made in the defense budget.

Now we ask, are you willing to take some of your own medicine Mr. Reagan? Are you being fair and willing to compromise? Does your own party feel you are willing to compromise?

Sen. Paul Laxalt, chairman of the GOP national committee and close friend of Reagan, warned about deficits and advocated slowing military expansion. "We think basically the same way. My perspective is a lot broader because I talk to a lot more people."

REP. JRENT LOTT, R-Miss., berated the administration for insensitivity to women's issues and argued for cuts in the arms budget.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn. and Senate majority leader, "We've wrung a lot out of nondefense spending. Now we are going to have to take a look at the defense side." There "will be a donnybrook over the rate of growth in defense spending. We must find more savings."

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., chairman of Senate Budget Committee, recommended bringing the deficit under control. "If we don't take such steps, we're gambling that the United States can have a recovery with perpetual, predictable deficits in the 200-billion-dollar-a-year range."

"PERHAPS THE BREADTH and depth of displeasure within his own party will make Reagan rethink his unbudging budgetary plans. If he does not, the result could be an enervating stalemate with Congress and further deterioration of the economy."

Is Reagan fair... compromising or staying the course?

Compromise for Mr. Reagan seems to mean Democrats acting like Republicans and Republicans listening to the president. The president wouldn't have it any other way.

Letters

Where would you be today if...?

(This letter refers to a "Viewpoint" (DE, Jan. 24) commemorating the 10th anniversary of the U.S. Supreme Court's ruling that legalized abortion in the United States).

Jennifer Phillips: Do you realize that at one time you were a two-celled mass in your mother's womb the moment after conception? That at 16 days, you had begun to develop a nervous system unique to all other living organisms? That at six weeks you had eyes, with your heart, legs and arms being prominent? You were a human being in your mother's womb.

Many types of women do have abortions. Did you ever think that one day your mom might have had five children while your dad was unemployed? That your mom might have been a 15-year-old who thought that having sex would make her popular? Or that your mom might have been 40 and afraid to have another child? Or that your mom was 25 and just getting into the meat of her career? Good thing she wasn't any of the above, eh?

Which brings us to the matter of choice. The pro-choice people argue that women should have control over their bodies. You should use this wisely at the time prior to sexual intercourse — not when it's too late and you want to waste a human life. This is the real solution to the problem. — Greg Rakers, Junior, Biological Sciences and Michael Cashman, Sophomore, General Studies.

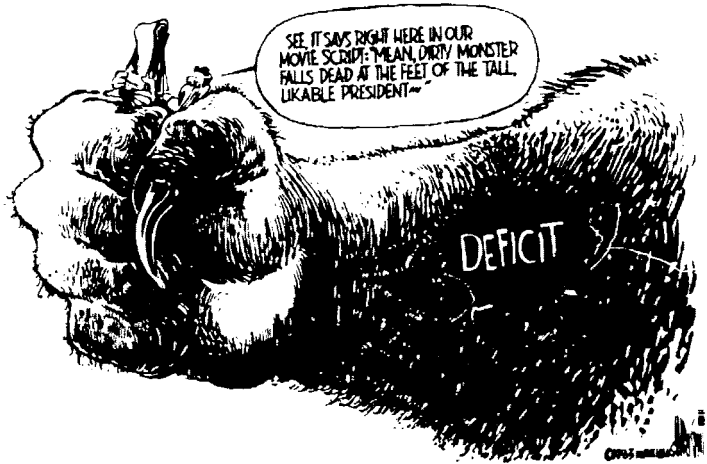

Quotable Quotes

"There is huge difference between making one woman a Justice and bringing justice to American women." — Sen. John Glenn, D-Ohio.

"Men aren't as proud of themselves when they see a woman doing the same thing they are. Men still don't know how to treat women." — Molly Martin, first woman maintenance electrician in the San Francisco Water Department.

"I am off to a sprinter's start in a marathon." — Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif. discussing his intended race for the presidency.

"I am ready to work as a worker." — Solidarity leader Lech Walesa trying to return to his old job as an electrician.

Leg-warmers; so what's next?

That's it. I've seen everything now. I try to have faith in our generation but it really gets hard sometimes.

Every once in a while I'll meet people our age who really seem to have it together upstairs — really bright and quick and witty — and I feel better about our future.

But just about the time I convince myself that our generation is made up of intelligent, rational, thinking people, some guy cuts the arms off a sweater, sells them to us for 15 bucks a crack and convinces us that we should wear them on our legs.

I'm talking about leg-warmers and I confess — I don't get it. Why all of a sudden do people need leg-warmers? Are there so many people out there with cold legs? If so, why don't they just wear warmer pants? And aren't their butts cold too? If leg-warmers are here to stay, can butt-warmers be much further behind?

I'm afraid that this is just the nature of our generation though. We who wear leg-warmers probably have five holes punched in our ears, dusty hula hoops in our basement, pet rocks on our night stands, mood rings and gold medallions in the jewelry box, and knickers, slit skirts and white three-piece suits in our dresser drawers. And what are we ever going to do with all those disco albums, anyway?

Since the DE doesn't have its own Jean Dixon to come up with 101 predictions for

Andrew Herrmann

Editorial Page Editor

1982, I've decided to do a little trend forecasting myself.

I think the logical successor to leg-warmers should be men's boxer shorts. Not to wear in the midsection though. Rather I can see a future where people will start wearing them on their heads like bandanas. I mean it. Men's boxer shorts on the head could be very big next year. They come in such wild and fascinating shapes and colors (polka dots and stripes and little boats and race cars to name a few), they are sure to be the in-thing in the downtown bars. Pick-up conversation can go from "What's your major? Where are you from? Do you live in the dorms?" to "Hey baby, that pair of underwear on your head makes my blood boil. Care to come to my place and check out my jockey shorts?" Well, maybe not.

OK, how about green teeth for style? No longer will those white pearly nuggets be necessary to be "in." Not everyone can have perfect, straight white teeth but green, slimy teeth are within everyone's grasp. All you have to do is stop brushing them for a month or so and before you know it, your teeth will have that fashionable, dull, gooky, green glimmer to 'em.

And green teeth will go well with the next fad I see down the road — eating dirt. The good thing about eating dirt, like green teeth, is that it won't cost anything.

Those boring Sunday afternoons can be made enjoyable. Just get a couple of your friends together, walk out to President Sonit's house and eat his lawn. Of course you'll always have that smart-ass who won't be satisfied with eating Carbondale dirt. "Hey, like man, I don't get into eating no domestic dirt. It's got to be either primo Columbian dirt or nothin'."

If you more interested in a clean fad, then consider marathon study sessions. Endless hours of continuous study with no breaks. The longer you go the more "in" you would be. Being cool would mean having red eyes with dark circles around them and mindlessly spouting chemical equations. Pasty skin would be "in." Einstein would replace Mick Jagger as the new messiah.

A few fads off the top of my head — laminated rodent earrings and pendants wearing clown noses, the Jackie Gleason look, not drinking, liking your parents, dancing on your hands, behaving in Reaganomics, speaking English in the Student Center (attention international students)...take your pick.

Anything has got to be better than — ick — leg-warmers.

No express lane for this line lover

By Mary Hogan Student Writer

I LOVE WAITING in lines. Just four short years ago, if someone had told me that I'd ever make such a ludicrous statement, I'd have thought they were nuts. But I've changed.

Every aspect of college centers around standing in line before being able to do anything. There are lines to get admitted, lines to get an appointment to register for classes, lines to pay fees and if you live in the dorms, there are lines to get into your room at the beginning of the year, not to mention daily cafeteria lines.

Lines, lines and more lines.

But I know how to deal with lines. I've even grown to like waiting.

No, I haven't lost my marbles. I've just learned to take a more rational approach to waiting in all those lines. Now, instead of standing there tapping my foot and sighing, I watch everyone else do it, and I think to myself how patient I've become during my stay at SIUC.

SOMETIMES I EVEN test my patience by standing in lines I don't need to. I just stand in the line for about an hour, or until I get close to the front, and then I just walk away. Waiting in line helps to develop character. It's in the same league with starvation and other forms of deprivation. Supposedly these types of activities help to strengthen a person and create a more desirable personality.

I wonder: if it's true. If it is, then I'm in good shape, because in these past four years I have yet to scream, cry, have a nervous breakdown or punch anyone out while waiting in line. I'm proud of my record.

I'll be done with college at the end of this semester. What will I do with all my spare time? Boy, I hope there are lines out there in the "real" world.

I can't wait until the next time I get to wait in line.

Business help center to open

By Patrick Williams
Staff Writer

Businesses in the area will have access to a new business service center at John A. Logan College beginning Feb. 1.

The center will operate under a six month, $15,000 grant from the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs, said Becky Borgsmiller, coordinator for services to industry at Logan. "Improving productivity" will be the main function of the center, Borgsmiller said. The center will provide training for employees, advise and consult businesses in the Logan College district. Carbondale is part of that district. The college is already a service fraternity, invite all interested students to an informal rush at 7 p.m. Monday in Quigley Lounge.

THE SALLUKI Saddle Club and SIU Equestrian Team will meet at 6 p.m. Monday in the Thebes Room of the Student Center. providing many of these services to local companies, according to Borgsmiller. "The center will enable us to market those services at one place," she said. A 17-member advisory committee will be formed that will direct businesses that are seeking help to the proper department in the school.

The committee will not be actively involved in recruiting businesses into Southern Illinois. "If there were businesses coming in, and they needed help with training, we would provide that service," Borgsmiller said.

Although the state grant ends July 31, Borgsmiller hopes the center will continue to operate, possibly by seeking other funding.

No pre-registration is necessary.

Cows break out

SIUC Security had a turn from the usual early Thursday morning when an unidentified motorist reported that some cows were looting about near Chautauqua Road. A few officers were sent to the scene at 1:10 a.m., said Sgt. Robert Drake, who rounded up the 17 culprits, later identified as property of SIUC's Dairy Center on Route 4.

Different philosophy behind new bar

By Mary Pries
Staff Writer

A typical SIU-C freshman once asked his friends to take him to the good bars in Carbondale.

This freshman wasn't so typical though because after he went to several bars on the strip, he became disgusted with the "lack of good entertainment," and decided to open his own club.

Mickey Howe of Chicago has changed what used to be the Washington Street Underground located in the basement of ABC Liquor into Airwaves, a club that's different from the average bar in Carbondale.

"I'm looking for the older crowd and by that I mean 19 and up," Howe said. "At a lot of the bars on the strip there are kids 18 and under. I don't want them because the only thing they are out for is to get as much booze as five dollars will buy them and to trash things up. I want the crowd that likes to listen to better bands, dance, and have a great time."

Because Howe wants to offer a different type of entertainment, he plans to avoid hiring bands that regularly play on the strip unless they are a big name.

Phil-N-The-Blank from Chicago and The Avon Ladies from St. Louis are already scheduled to play at the bar.

Howe said he had a little trouble getting the bands to come to Carbondale, but it wasn't anything that couldn't be worked out.

Although the bar used to be a gay bar, Howe said he is not catering specifically to that crowd.

"If they can come here and blend with society, then that's alright, but for a bar to be a 'gay bar,' the management has to let it happen," he said.

Howe believes that many people and students in Carbondale are looking for a unique type of bar and he is not worried about Airwaves being a success.

"I am going to handle the business end of it," he said. "I learned all about business from running my own truck line, but I don't know all about bars. So I have hired Jeff Harrison to manage the bar — he has two years of experience working in bars," he said. "Jeff will be my phone line to what the people drink and how they act in bars."

Howe added that because he will have to spend a lot of time working with his new business, he has taken a semester off school, but may return in the summer. "It was a business major, so I have always wanted my own business. Now I have it, and it's my baby."

Wild times at Airwaves' opening night

Entertainment Editor's Note: What follows is a first-person report on the opening night of the newest nightclub in town, Airwaves.

By Jeff Wilkinson
Staff Writer

About 11 p.m., last Thursday, the crowd was lined up outside of the door. Old black men sat about a block away staring at the crowd and joking among themselves.

The line was long, about a 20-minute wait to get in and people shuffled nervously in the gray stairway leading down to Airwaves, the new bar opening that night on N. Washington Street underneath ABC Liquors.

"We are definitely not a gay bar," emphasised Mickey Howe, the 21-year-old owner of the club. He stressed he didn't have anything against gays, but was afraid that a reputation would alienate some people that would normally patronize the club.

"I think it's pretty generic," says Mary Byrne as she kneels in her seat watching the people spill in and out. "I thought people would be, you know, wierder. It's really diluted with normal people, but I realize it's the first night. I want to see it in a week."

The newness of the bar is apparent. It smells of fresh paint and new paneling. Above all, everything is clean — quite an accomplishment for a Carbondale "basement bar."

One customer, sweat soaking through his shirt and his smile riding the crest of an alcohol wave, shouts above the clamour. "A couple of red lightbulbs and a little broken glass and this place would be great."

His sweat-soaked shirt is evidence that he has been working-out on the dance floor, a square of red shag carpeting in the back of the bar. The carpet breaks a few falls as some overzealous punks start sporadically slam-dancing to the hot, new music coming from the the sound system.

The back room is dark and intimate with a few tables on one side and a small stage in front. People stand around, dance or sit on the floor. It has the feeling of a keg party at a friend's house.

In direct contrast, the front room is well-lit and crowded. A pleasant mix of punks, jocks and sightseers jam the two aisles of booths. The sound system in the back room doesn't quite make it into the front so conversation dominates.

"I wish they had something on the walls," one customer says to another in a back booth. "It's so plain!"

"I don't know," answers her friend. "They just opened after all, you can't expect them to have everything set so soon."

Indeed everything is not set. Airwaves is only serving beer because of the late date the bar received it's liquor license.

"We didn't want to buy $1800 worth of liquor and then not get a liquor license," explains the waitress. "But we'll have it soon."

One disgruntled partier dressed in black leather complete with earrings and bandana sits on the floor near the stage and sips his beer. "I don't know," he says with a shrug of his shoulders. "Seems to me we've got two punk facades in Carbondale now. We'll just have to wait and see."

Readings capture crowds' imagination

By Alan Cockrell
Staff Writer

A Review

"Oral Interpretation of Literature." A high-sounding title, to be sure, and one that smacks of academia. Some might translate it to mean "reading aloud." Yet it has been said that if you don't know the difference between the two, you'll never be an oral interpreter.

Two of SIU-C's English instructors have shown that they not only know the difference, but can use their voices to transfer their own written works onto the hard-to-reach plane of the spoken presentation.

Carol J. Pierman and Philip Graham were the featured speakers at the first of a series of readings sponsored this semester by the English Department. Each reading is structured to include a poet and a fiction writer.

The reading started with an already-capacity crowd in the Quigley lounge, which was soon filled to overflowing. The huge fireplace at the front of the room and the plush sofas scattered throughout gave the impression of a nineteenth-century drawing room, filled with eager listeners ready to catch the words of their favorite local writers.

Pierman began the reading with some of her older poetry. Poetry, she said, that reflected the rural prairie background common to many Illinois residents. The only difference, she said, was that hers was in Ohio.

The images in the first few poems were very much those of nature — the sky, the wind, even horses around Central Park. Rather than being a lamentation about these things, the poems seemed to be celebrating a love of such.

Pierman went on to a series of prose poems inspired by Arctic exploration, explaining her concept of Antarctica as "if there were ever a war in such a place, it would have to be the last place left on Earth." She finished with a few of her newer works, culminating with a delightful piece based on a childhood memory of seeing Harry Truman on his whistle-stop campaign.

Graham read two stories, but the one which most captured the interest and imagination of the audience was titled "The Deserted House." Written while Graham was living in a tribal village in Africa, the story portrays the doings of some admittedly "exaggerated" relatives seen through the eyes of a young boy.

The characters portrayed are delightful, as good or better as any Dickens ever dreamed of. From the visiting grandfather who counts everything in every room in the house, to the father who moves all the furniture every night, they are well-drawn caricatures who seem to be people we met just the other day.

While Pierman has an excellent reading voice and seems to time every word precisely, Graham reads with an evident reverence for our language. It is obvious that he respects the use he is able to make of English. The listener soon begins to share his enthusiasm and feel that they too, have a part in what is being read.

Unique works offered for sale

By Cynthia Rector
Staff Writer

A new fill-in-the-blank postcard poem written by David Breeden is versatile enough to communicate disgust to a administrator or win-over a mate with irate words.

The poem, published by Grassroots, SIU-C's literary magazine, might be too casual a format for serious transactions, but it's good for some laughs. Ted Morrissey, one of the eight editors of Grassroots, said that before he saw Breeden's creation, he was confused about what a blank verse poem was.

If accepted, fall submissions to the magazine were published either in the Grassroots or as part of its broadside and postcard series. Sales of which began last week. Two postcards and two broadsides are being sold outside the English office in Faner Hall. Postcards are $2.50 while broadsides are $7.50.

Breeden's "Do-It-Yourself Poem," has been the largest selling of the four works earning $40 for the group in two afternoons of sales at the Student Center. Breeden, a graduate student in English and an editor for Grassroots, says he wrote and submitted the poem specifically as a postcard, and attributes its success to the personal touch the sender can have. An ink drawing of a pen and the printing was done by Sandra Huss, also a graduate student in English.

A more serious postcard poem, written by Mark Hinchey, junior in radio-television, is an analogy for a relationship using the image of two trees. A pen and ink sketch of the swaying trees was drawn by Vince Cook, a graphic arts major.

Both broadside posters exhibit a poem and complimentary graphics yet their contrast in appearance as much as the postcards do. "Caught," a poem by journalism graduate student, Lynn Folse, interweaves water and fishing images with longings and experiences within a relationship. Surrounding the poem is a pen-and-ink sketch by Vince Cook, which captures the fluid feel the words evoke. The broadside looks stormy and rather elegant.

The other broadside resembles a square of loud bathroom or kitchen wallpaper with dozens of chopped-up lizards as the back-drop. "Sing Around the Night" is not a wallflower poem, however, it is complex with startling precision of image and emotion. Matthew Kirksey, senior in creative writing, composed the work, reminiscent of Roethke in its metaphysical bent, which brings humans back to their roots, "as lizards crawling on sandstone."

Proceeds from the sale will also return to their roots...Grassroots.

Professor sees likenesses in budget cuts and chopping trees

By Duane Schombert
Staff Writer

Paul Yambert, professor of forestry.

For Paul Yambert, professor in forestry, the recent budget problems at SIU-C are analogous to trees.

Yambert believes trees contribute to a healthy environment. Whenever there is a cut, ecological damage is done. Whenever there is a cut in education beyond its threshold point, damage on society takes place.

Yambert cited a lack of strong leadership as a reason for budget cutbacks.

"They've probably cut a little deeper than is wise. I think we no longer have quite as much wisdom and insight at the leadership level as we once had," he said.

Born and reared in Tennessee, Yambert was attracted to SIU-C for several reasons.

"When I came to here, we had a dynamic president, the late Delyte Morris. I was certainly influenced, not only by him, but also by what he accomplished and what he hoped to accomplish. I was impressed with his charisma," Yambert said.

"This University had potential for great growth in terms of improvement. I was never interested in working in a university like Harvard because it seems like students go there already knowing quite a bit and already having enough connections for later job security," he said.

Yambert was also attracted to SIU-C because of the Touch of Nature Environmental Center.

"Several programs I worked on with handicapped students represent what the University ought to be. At Touch of Nature you can use these outdoor resources in terms of expertise in different fields and yet directly provide a public service which is much needed," Yambert said.

Yambert attempts to discover ways to change things which will make it easier for the world to support people.

Yambert and his wife tried to go back to what is ecological with regards to the earth's resources and see how much is out there, he said. His home utilizes solar heating and some of the water they use is rain water.

"Our lifestyle needs considerable improvement but I think it's going in the direction that we all should go if we're going to share the earth's resources equitably."

Yambert prefers to live in a rural area because he enjoys trees and animals. He has no desire to be in a university which is located in a large metropolitan area.

"I personally prefer a rural atmosphere with occasional trips to metropolitan centers rather than having to reverse the situation and drive down here everytime I want to breathe fresh air," Yambert said.

Yambert and his wife brought up five children, all of them are SIU-C graduates. But none of his children decided "to follow in my footsteps as far as professions are concerned," he said. "We have a lawyer, a doctor, an anthropologist and a Midas muffler man."

Yambert enjoys the opportunity for interdisciplinary exchange with members from various academic departments.

Some of my closest colleagues are in departments across campus," he said. "I find it encouraging that a person can work with people in physiology, design, botany, or education. You aren't restricted to stereotypes within an particular discipline."

Yambert is presently working on a joint project with Ronna Dillon, associate professor in guidance and educational psychology in the College of Education. The project deals with environmental interpretation and the levels of readiness with regard to knowledge and attitude on the part of the learner. Yambert explained.

"If we can assess a person's environmental knowledge and

YOUR FUTURE

Whether you go to college no longer has to be based on how much money you can earn during the summer.

Air Force ROTC offers a four, five or two-year scholarship to pay you $100 a month and all tuition, textbook and lab and incidental fees. With money problems reduced, the decision to go to college is your own.

The Air Force needs dedicated officers in a variety of different skills, and one of these skills is bound to fit into your picture. After production and commissioning, you'll find challenging work along with the chance to grow through experience.

Find out about the Air Force ROTC scholarship program today. It's a great way to help yourself through those tough college years and a great way to get ready for an exciting future, as a commissioned officer in the United States Air Force.

attitudes, we can then custom-tailor an interpretive program that will be much more effective in changing social behaviors so they'll have less unfavorable impact on the environment," Yambert said.

Yambert believes in teamwork, especially in regard to making SIU-C a good institution.

"The faculty at a school has to be some sort of team," he said. "As such, different members specialize in doing different things. Some are better at teaching, some are better at research, and some are better at serving as mentors for students at either the graduate or undergraduate level."

Yambert is interested in being a generalist. He gains knowledge through reading and studying in a variety of fields because "I become a better instructor if I can relate to examples in a variety of fields and do some synthesizing of information."

Yambert displays a sincere concern for student's education and welfare and does not recall ever experiencing animosity toward or from a student.

"Even the ones who have failed a course that I taught have felt that I tried to be fair and help them develop," he said.

As an instructor, Yambert tries to be generous with his time. He enjoys taking optional field trips with students, and he believes the daily interaction between students and an instructor is one of the most gratifying and important aspects of teaching.

At a recent forestry conference, Yambert encountered a man he taught 25 years ago. Both remembered one another.

"The student could still remember specific lines from my lectures, which is gratifying. There's a certain amount of ego satisfaction in seeing young people, some brighter and some not-so-bright, all moving toward success and making a contribution," he said.

"I don't necessarily get tears in my eyes," he added, "but I find it very satisfying to see somebody leave a university with scientific information and some philosophy that they did not have when they began college."

Admissions office offers open house

SIU-C admissions officials will hold an open house on Feb. 5 which will offer tours, information and meetings for people interested in fall 1983 enrollment.

The open house, which is sponsored by the SIU-C Office of Admissions and Records, is geared to prospective transfer students and veterans, but will also welcome high school students and their parents.

Debbie Perry, program director, said prospective students are concerned about housing, costs, financial assistance, majors and specializations. The open house is meant to answer these questions.

The open house allows prospective students "to make more concrete plans and to make their transition easier," Perry said.

According to Perry, about 200 prospective students are expected to attend. The day will begin with check-in at 8 a.m. in the International Lounge at the Student Center.

Students may then attend open discussions on admission procedures, advisement, registration, etc. There will be campus and housing tours and guided visits to some of the different academic departments.

Sophomore wins acclaim for article

By Belinda Edmondson Staff Writer

Rachel Jones, sophomore in radio and television, apparently attracted more attention than she expected with an article on black English in Newsweek magazine.

Jones, from Cairo, said she has been "fielding calls from all over the country" since the article was published Dec. 27.

For that reason, she said, she is declining requests for interviews. More attention to her views about black English would not be "conducive to peace of mind," she said.

She also declined a request for reprinting the article in the Daily Egyptian, which supplied the photograph of her that appeared with the article.

However, Jones spoke recently to a seventh-grade class at Carbondale Junior High about her experiences growing up in Cairo and reactions of her friends there to the way she talked.

She was quoted as telling the seventh-graders that her main reason for writing the Newsweek article was "to tell young people education is the most important thing you could ever have."

In the article, Jones addresses the issue of black English and its place as a socially binding force among a people "stripped of culture and heritage." She reflects on whether it also acts as a constricting force in the black struggle for upward mobility.

Jones states that "studies have proven that the use of ethnic dialects decreases power in the marketplace."

Even so, Jones wrote that many blacks find standard English "not only unfamiliar" but "socially unacceptable." She said that when people say a black person "talks white" they mean that he talks articulately and knowledgeably, and she found this implication "really frightening."

Response to the article in a following issue of Newsweek indicated a generally favorable reaction.

Women's team places fourth at Normal

By George Pappas Staff writer

The women's indoor track team casually walked away with a fourth place finish at the six-team Illinois State Invitational Friday, breaking four school records in the process. Coach Claudia Blackman said she was very pleased by the performance of the Saluki squad.

Illinois State won the meet with 172 points, well ahead of Western Illinois, 124, and Eastern Illinois with 98. SIU-C had 42 points to finish in front of Bradley, 24, and SIU-E, 3.

The 42 points the Salukis scored was the highest point total ever scored by SIU-C at an indoor meet. Blackman feels this is quite an accomplishment for the mostly freshman squad.

Freshman Rhonda McCausland broke the school shot put record by four inches as she put the shot 40-4. She took second place in the meet.

Denise Blackman, a freshman from the West Indies, took first place in the 300-meter dash with a school record of 39.1 seconds. Blackman could have had a chance of a better time but she was put in a slower heat. Also in a slower heat and still managing third place was junior Debra Davis. She was timed at 41.7 seconds in the same event.

The other two records broken were by the relay teams. The 4 by 400-meter relay had a time of 4:06.4, and the 4 by 200-meter ran 1:47.1 as they took third and second place respectively.

A surprising fifth place finish in the long jump was done by freshman Julie Leeper. Her jump was measured at 5-4. Another fifth place finisher was Ann Levine with a time of 7.9 seconds in the 60-meter dash.

Coach Blackman said she was very happy with the outcome of the meet. She said she knows now where her team is ranked in the conference and can look forward to every meet knowing what her team has to do to win.

"We tested our freshmen and they came out very strong," Blackman said.

The Salukis travel to Charleston Saturday to face EIU, Purdue and Ohio State. Blackman feels Purdue and Ohio State will be very tough to beat, but it should be a different story for EIU.

"Even though Eastern beat us Friday," Blackman said, "We're going to give them a run for their money Saturday."

Tracksters come out on top against Big Eight powerhouse

By Ken Perkins
Staff Writer

They may be calling the men's track and field team's 71-60 win over Nebraska an upset back in the corn fields of Lincoln, but here in the Southern Illinois region, they're calling it from a different perspective. Thanks to high jumper Stephen Wray and distance ace Mike Keane.

The pair led an array of Saluki first-places Saturday at the Bob Devaney Sports Center — grabbing 10-of-15 events — and placing no lower than second in four others. The 600-yard dash was the only event the Salukis didn't score a first or second. Junior Javell Heggs was nipped by Jon Jones 1:12.00 to 1:12.13.

Before the meet, Coach Lew Hartzog said it would take outstanding performances from his crew "all down the line," in order to beat the Big Eight power, and looking from the showings, the Salukis did just that.

Keane continued his assault on distance competition, winning the mile and two mile runs. The junior from Orlando Park circled the mile in 4:09.75 and conquered the two-mile in 9:04.08.

Wray, a junior from Nassau, The Bahamas, leaped 7-4 to break his own SIU-C record of 7-3, set just two weeks ago in Canada. Wray is mighty hot, and will be counted upon at the Illinois Intercollegiate Friday in Champaign.

Hartzog's praise for freshmen Mike Elliott is growing. The spunky middle distance runner from Belvidere high school won the 890-yard dash in 1:53.74. Tom Ross, the all-purpose runner, won the 1000-yard run in 2:13.83 and Tony Adams stayed undefeated by capturing the 440-yard dash in 49.28.

Mike Franks was timed at 30.75 in the 300-yard dash, good enough for a first place and season best. He teamed up with Parry Duncan, Heggs and Adams to win the mile relay in 3:14.36, the best effort of the season. Jumping captain Kevin Baker, who qualified for the NCAA Indoor Championships, won the long jump with a 23-11 leap and David Featherston won the shot put with a 51-11.

The Salukis also had impressive second place finishes: Pole vaulter Andy Geiger vaulted 16-6. Franks was clocked at 6:39 in the 80-yard dash. Gary Munson finished with a 2:14.50 in the 1000, Duncan slipped to 7:59 in the 60-yard high hurdles, and Terry Taylor leaped 23-9 in the long jump.

Competition will be keen in the Illinois Intercollegiate. Both Illinois and Illinois State had successful recruiting campaigns and will seek to unseat the Salukis as defending champions. The two-day meet will begin Friday at the University of Illinois Army.

Reloading Hurricane host out-gunned Salukis

By Dan Devine
Staff Writer

Tulsa sent five starters to graduation last year, and two players to the National Basketball Association, prompting coach Nolan Richardson to hit the recruiting trail. He must have liked what he got because before the season the third-year coach went around saying, "This isn't a rebuilding year, it's a reloading year."

Maybe so, but except for a win over North Carolina, the Golden Hurricane hasn't been gunning down its opposition. Tulsa will be trying to improve a disappointing 8-7 record when they play host to SIU-C Monday night. The team has needed to win two games in a row to improve their conference record to 3-4, and are in the unfamiliar role of conference also-rans. But that probably won't last for long.

"They have their good players back," said SIU-C basketball coach Allen Van Winkle, who lumps Tulsa with Wichita State and Illinois State as the MVC's elite trio.

Van Winkle was alluding to the injuries that helped quiet the Hurricane recently. After starting 5-1, Tulsa got killed on the road and fell to 6-7. At one time or another, four players have been injured, including Bruce Vanley and Mike Smith, who just returned to action this week.

Smith is the team's playmaker, Vanley its center and top rebounder. Forward Ricky Ross provides scoring punch, with a 17.4 average, and Steve Ballard and Herb Johnson are solid scorers and rebounders.

WHY A CREDIT UNION?

Your paycheck is not your only benefit as a student employee of SIU. You are eligible for membership in SIU Employees Credit Union.

A credit union is a nonprofit financial organization. Members put their savings and loans through the credit union as a financial service. The credit union is a financial institution. It makes an effort to help you with your financial needs.

Because credit unions are member-owned, credit unions pay a higher interest rate on savings. In addition, SIU Employees Credit Union offers an attractive package of financial services custom-tailored to meet members' needs.

CUSTOM CHECKING

Custom checking is a feature of the past at banks and savings & loans in the area. Not at the credit union. The credit union offers a truly cost free checking system. It offers a monthly balance or monthly service charge, and no charge for clearing checks.

Secondly, student members with an average daily balance of only $25.00 will earn 5 1/2% annual interest from the date of deposit to the date of withdrawal. Interest is paid monthly.

Many student members report receiving money from their savings accounts to their interest-bearing checking account to earn interest on all of their money — including that which will be spent on living expenses.

The credit union's checking account earns daily interest on all of the money filtered through the account. Even if the funds stay in the account for two days, two months, or two years.

The credit union has one of the lowest minimum balance requirements in the area and pays without question the highest rate of interest.

Members also receive monthly statements on both plans showing all account activity.

COSTS NOTHING TO JOIN

Membership in the credit union costs you nothing now or later. Simply maintain $25 in a Share (savings) account. Since you are a part owner, this represents one share in the credit union. If you should ever decide to terminate your membership, your $25 will be refunded in full. In the meantime it will earn higher than-bank interest.

ONCE A MEMBER ALWAYS A MEMBER

SIU Employees Credit Union subscribes to the philosophy "Once a member, always a member." You will retain your credit union membership for life, even if you are no longer employed by SIU. Membership is a lifelong benefit available to you now.

Shocker bookends crunch smaller, outmanned Salukis

By Dan Devine
Staff Writer

Last year Wichita State had Antoine Carr and Cliff Livingston on the same front line. They called them the bookend forwards.

This year Livingston is in the National Basketball Association, after the Detroit Pistons made him a first round draft choice. But in Wichita they still say the same things about their front line. Xavier McDaniel has made people forget about Livingston.

"This is what we call Chapter Two of the bookends," said Carr. "I think this version is better than the first one."

It was Saturday, as Carr and McDaniel squeezed the life out of an overmatched SIU-C basketball team. The Shockers broke a close game open in the second half and cruised to a 100-78 victory, before only 3,986 fans.

Carr knocked in a long right side jump shot early to establish his range, and then went on to drill 29 points on 13 of 22 shooting. McDaniel stayed inside, and hit 10 of 11 shots for 21 points. He also grabbed 15 rebounds.

Saluki basketball coach Allen Van Winkle saw his worst fears realized in the second half, when the Shockers widened a 42-34 halftime edge into a 76-57 bulge with more than seven minutes left.

Trailing by six with a minute to go in the first half, Van Winkle had spread his offense and directed his team to play for the last shot, a strategy that backfired when Benny Smith turned the ball over and Aubrey Sherrod sank two free throws to end the half.

It was the fifth loss in a row for the Salukis, who are now 5-11 overall and 1-6 in the Missouri Valley Conference. Wichita State stayed a game behind league-leading Illinois State. The Shockers are 14-2 overall, and 6-1 in Valley play.

"Wichita State is a very talented team and they deserve to be where they're at," said Van Winkle. "It's because they have so many good players. We were trading our 15 and 16 footers for their seven and eight foot shots off the block, and you can't get away with that for long."

In the second half, the Salukis didn't. Wichita State roared away, hitting 23 of 30 shots, to shoot 63 percent from the floor. SIU-C weighed in with a characteristic 45 percent evening.

Since the Shockers weren't missing any shots, they didn't give SIU-C any opportunity to get re-bounced. Wichita State outbounded SIU-C by a 49 to 23 margin.

Darnall Jones scored a season-high 23 points to lead SIU-C. Johnny Fayne hit some late three-pointers to give him 14 points, and Ken Byrd made six of 12 shots to score 15.

Charles Nance missed his second straight game with a thigh injury, and centers Karl Morris and Pie Walker had bigger people to guard, so Byrd, at 6-4, and Jones, at 6-5, had to try and stay with the 6-9 Carr.

With Wichita State bringing its full firepower around, SIU-C had no chance. When Carr wasn't hitting medium range jump shots, McDaniel was scoring garbage points inside and James Gibbs was opening up the court from outside. Gibbs made all five of his shots and had 15 points.

"I don't think we were flowing real well in the first half," said Wichita State coach Gene Smithson, who thought his team's second half transition game sparked the rout. And Shocker pressure on the Saluki guards helped mess up the SIU-C offensive system.

Van Winkle wasn't very happy with the officiating during the game. The SIU-C bench was slapped with a technical after the coach complained for several minutes when the officials gave SIU-C only one free throw after James Gibbs committed a dead ball foul, which is an automatic technical. In a similar instance against Drake this year, official awarded two shots after a dead ball foul.

"I'm not sure why we're seeing this kind of officiating," said Van Winkle. "I thought it was awful, both ways. It's really too bad."

Men gymnasts still unbeaten after years best performance

By JoAnn Marciszewski
Sports Editor

Before Sunday's meet against Houston Baptist and Illinois-Chicago, men's gymnastics coach Bill Meade had predicted scores near 275 and a close contest. The scores didn't quite get there, but SIU-C did make the meet close in the process of picking up two victories. The Salukis scored 273.30 to top Houston Baptist's 271 and Illinois-Chicago's 257.05.

"I guess they just wanted to keep it exciting," Meade said. "We came a little close to giving it away."

In between the mistakes, however, there were several good routines to give the Salukis their best mark of the season.

Leading the way was Brian Babcock, who won the all-around with 57.30 and took individual honors on the pommel horse with 9.75 and parallel bars with 9.45.

Babcock's parallel bars score was met with loud disagreement from the crowd that thought it should be higher, but three-tenths were deducted because he didn't hold a handstand in his routine for the required two seconds.

Tom Slomski won the rings with 9.55, and John Levy's 9.7 on high bar was top in that event. Brendan Price tied with Huskie John Sweeney for first on the vault with 9.6.

Houston Baptist came to the meet as one of the top teams in the country, but scored well below the 275-plus mark it has attained this season.

According to Huskie coach Hutch Dvorak, several major breaks caused problems, but the major reason for the team's 271 total was the absence of all-arounder Gerald Martin in two events.

"That caused us at least three points," Dvorak said.

Martin, whose high scores Sunday were 9.55s in floor exercise and the vault, needs about a week of rest before an injury to his hand recovers well enough so he can compete in all six events again, Dvorak said.

Gymnasts sweep 3 on weekend

By Sherry Chisenhall
Staff Writer

Despite a serious lack of depth in the all-around lineup, the women gymnasts chalked up three wins over the weekend, downing Memphis State, Texas Women's University, and the University of Illinois at Chicago.

The team notched the first two victories Saturday in a triangular meet at Memphis. SIU-C claimed first with a 167.05 mark to Memphis State's 163.3 and TWU's 135.3.

The Salukis returned to the Arena Sunday to dispose of Illinois-Chicago 169.1 to 163.3.

One of coach Herb Vogel's main concerns going into the weekend was regaining some depth lost in all-around. Maggi Nidiffer is sidelined indefinitely with a dislocated elbow, and Lori Steele, another promising freshman, did not travel to Tennessee Saturday.

"Our objective for the weekend was to win a couple of meets, which we did," Vogel said. "We had some people competing for us that haven't been competing in meets this year, and they did a good job for the amount of time they had for preparation."

"Still, we had to carry some low scores," he said. "This puts extra pressure on the top three girls, Pam (Turner), Jackie (Ahr) and Gina (Hey). They know they need better performances and higher marks to carry the lower scores in the lineup."

Gina Hey, one of the Salukis' top freshman prospects coming into the season, is progressing well according to Vogel. He said Hey has been competing with a stress fracture and will probably not vault for a while, but has been doing well in floor exercise, adding difficulty in her routine.

Hey placed fourth in all-around Sunday with a 34.15 mark, behind teammates Ahr (34.35) and Turner (34.9). Illinois-Chicago's Lori Zabel took first with 35.55 points. Freshman Margaret Callcott was called upon to fill Nidiffer's slot in the rotation and proved herself capable. Vogel said Callcott turned in her best vaulting score at Memphis and her best bar routine Sunday, an encouraging sign that she's improving.

"What we need to have in the next few weeks is some balancing," Vogel said. "We need strong, consistent performances from the top people and steady improvement from the weaker girls."

"We need to have Lori Steele improve a little more," Vogel said. "We also need to have Maggi (Nidiffer) come back, and improve. This is going to take some time. Right now we're not quite deep enough."

Vogel said his team is performing about a month behind where it ought to be.

"I'm not worried yet," he said. "We've still got a month to tie things down. I won't be concerned unless we're still performing at this level in mid-February."

Riggins leads Redskins over Miami

By Bruce Lewitt
AP Sports Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — John Riggins thundered through Miami's defense for a record 166 yards and scored the winning touchdown on a breakaway 43-yard run in the fourth quarter as the Washington Redskins beat the Dolphins 27-17 in Super Bowl XVII Sunday.

From the start of the playoffs the so-called Super Bowl Tournament that climaxed a turbulent, strike-shortened season. Riggins had demanded the Redskins give him the ball.

They did, and he was unstoppable with it. In three playoff games he rolled up 444 yards, and he capped that Sunday with a Super Bowl record 38 carries and the Most Valuable Player award.

The Dolphins knew he would get the ball play after play, yet they were almost powerless to stop him. And finally, down three points and on fourth-and-one at the Miami 43-yard line, the Redskins gave him the ball again and he gave them the game, their first Super Bowl triumph.

Riggins took the handoff, cut to his left and straight-armed McNeal's tackle. The Miami cornerback grabbed at Riggins' jersey chest-high, slid down the churning legs of the 235-pound fullback and was left sprawled in his wake. Riggins ran down the left sideline, giving the Redskins a 20-17 lead scoring the winning TD with 10:01 remaining.

Washington put the game out of reach with 1:55 left when Joe Theismann tossed a six-yard touchdown pass to Charlie Brown.

Before Riggins' run, it appeared the hero of the game would be a most unlikely and overlooked one, Fulton Walker, the Dolphins' kick-return specialist. He burst through Washington's special team for a record 98-yard touchdown, the only kickoff ever returned all the way in a Super Bowl, giving the Dolphins a 17-10 halftime lead. He also sprinkled 42 yards with another kickoff to set up Uwe von Schamann's 20-yard field goal.

When Miami, down by three points following Riggins' touchdown, failed to move the ball out of the shadow of its end zone and punted, Theismann applied the coup de grace.

The ebullient Washington quarterback, who had passed four yards to playoff hero Alvin Garrett in the second period, drove the Redskins 41 yards in a time-consuming 13-play drive that chewed 6:54 off the clock, the most ever eaten up in a Super Bowl touchdown march. It ended when Brown, so instrumental in the Redskins' return to glory this year, caught the scoring pass in the right corner of the end zone.
