Fire forces students out of Schneider

SARAH SCHNEIDER
Daily Egyptian

SIUC spokesman Rod Sievers said a fire was reported at 10:55 p.m. Thursday at Schneider Hall, one of the three Brush Towers residence halls.

Gary Heern, assistant fire chief for the Carbondale Fire Department, said someone threw an object on fire in a trash chute and it burned in the dumpster on the first floor.

Sievers said the sprinkler systems came on because of the smoke. He said after the fire was put out and the smoke was cleared, students were able to go back to their rooms after an hour and 20 minutes.

Heern said he is not sure what was on fire or if it was intentional.

Sarah Schneider can be reached at schneider@dailyegyptian.com or 536-3311 ext. 255.

New feed would reduce costs for SIUC farms

“If they have an ill effect, we pull them off or stop the research. We never put our cows in danger on research.”

BRANDON COLEMAN

Replacing cows' corn feed with glycerol could save the University Dairy Farms $40 to $50 a day from their corn feed expenses, says Chet Stuemke.

Stuemke, a manager at the University Farm's Dairy Center, said he thinks chemicals in glycerol, a byproduct of converting recycled canola oil into biodiesel and then glycerin, will help expand the surface area inside the dairy cows' intestines, allowing for better nutrient absorption.

He said less than a pound of glycerol can replace one pound of corn feed, but he does not plan on replacing all the current feed as part of his sustainability research program, which is set to begin in late summer or early fall. The goal is to eventually replace with glycerol up to 50 percent of the corn feed per day, Stuemke said.

“We're going to be processing at 100 gallons at a time, so we're only going to get 10 pounds of glycerin,” Stuemke said.

Stuemke said the program will use an automated biodiesel processor to convert canola oil into biodiesel fuel. Eventually the program plans to have two processors to convert oil campus-wide into biodiesel fuel, he said.

“You're looking at possibly reducing your grain input by 40 or 50 percent,” Stuemke said.

A program to convert used canola oil from the dining halls into biodiesel and glycerol was proposed in 2007, but it didn't have funding at the time, Stuemke said. The program received money in early January from the green fees. He said feeding glycerol to dairy cows would enable the university to recycle 80 to 95 percent of its canola oil.

Ryan Klopf, green fund committee chair, said the program's biodiesel could save the university $10,000 a year in fuel costs.

There are no studies that show introducing glycerol into dairy or beef cows' feed results in illness, said Amer AbuGhazaleh, associate professor in animal science, food and nutrition.

AbuGhazaleh said he plans to study the energy potential glycerol may have on dairy cows during the program. One to three pounds per day of glycerol would be put into the cows' feed, he said.

“I don't think it will be better than the corn, but I think it will be as good as the corn,” AbuGhazaleh said.

Restaurants soak up heat of Polar Bear business

LEAH STOVER
Daily Egyptian

The main attraction to Polar Bear might be the drink specials, but local bars aren't the only businesses that had an extreme increase in sales during the weekend.

Restaurants located near bars that participated in the all-day drinking event reaped benefits as their sales rose higher than expected. Many prepared ahead of time, extended their hours and ensured there were enough staff members and supplies to accommodate for the large number of customers.

Steve Payne, owner of Quatro's, said he thinks it would be impossible for local food businesses to not have a revenue increase during Polar Bear.

“It was like how Halloween used to be,” he said. “It's just a really positive thing that we can have that kind of influx of young kids, partying no doubt, and that we don't have too many cases of irresponsibility.”

Payne said he thinks non-structured events such as Polar Bear tend to receive a negative stigma because they connect to the “party image.” What many don't realize, he said, is these events tend to go over smoothly if the city is prepared. He said it's typical for events such as Polar Bear to get out of hand, but businesses are happy to increase revenue and support their target customers — students.

Andrew West, Jimmy John's marketing manager, said the store stayed open 24 hours for the event and reeled in more revenue than anticipated.

“We ordered a lot of extra product to be ready for how crazy we thought we were going to get,” West said. “Because we did over our projection, we actually had to bring in products from other stores so we could keep serving people.”

All Nemat, owner of the Subway restaurant on East Grand Avenue, said the business' sales nearly doubled Saturday.

“We usually have about 330 customers, but this weekend we had at least 620,” he said.

Nemat said weekend sales tend to pick up around noon, but this weekend the restaurant was busy by 8:30 a.m. He said the restaurant didn't extend its hours, but it did prepare for the event by stocking up on extra supplies and making sure there was enough staff.

Although Jimmy John's prepared for the weekend for a while and thought it had enough staff members scheduled, West said he spent more than 24 consecutive hours working and several employees worked 16 to 18 hours to ensure there was enough help.

Early financial aid apps give bigger payouts

TERRANCE PEACOCK
Daily Egyptian

Terri Harfst says filing the Free Application for Federal Student Aid early puts students in a good position to receive more money.

Harfst, interim director of financial aid, said because February is Financial Aid Awareness Month, the Financial Aid Office will campaign to inform students on the importance of applying early for aid.

Students should apply by March 1 to be considered for as much institutional- and state-based aid as possible, she said.

"If money is available when we package you, we give it to you,"

Harfst said.

Jasmine Ducas, an undecided sophomore from Chicago, said it doesn't take her much time to complete the FAFSA.

"Me personally, I complete my FAFSA every year Jan. 1, it is done," Lucas said.

"Money is still available to students who don't apply by March 1," Harfst said.

She said 7,328 students were awarded financial aid for the 2010-2011 school year as of April, but 15,468 students were awarded financial aid as of two weeks ago for the same school year. This means more than 8,000 students filed their FAFSA and received packages after the Financial Aid Office stopped packaging money for the Monetary Award Program grant, Harfst said.

Aid is on a first-come, first-served basis, and even though money will still be available to students who apply late won't receive as much, she said.

Harfst, who is also the academic scholarship adviser on campus, said when two students are competing for one scholarship, the office will give the scholarship to the student who has filed a FAFSA, even if the student who didn't file the FAFSA needs the money more.

SIUC and said she has no problem filing the FAFSA.

"It is really easy for me," she said. "I am an athlete here, and we have our advisers at the athletic building who work at the Financial Aid Office, so they make sure everything is clear and done correctly."

Shubert, who is a track and field athlete, said she could get more aid, but because she is on a full athletic scholarship she does not need to apply for it.

Harfst said students should always file a FAFSA, even the students who don't think they will qualify for aid.

"It is important for everyone to complete a FAFSA, because you never know what is on the horizon," she said.

The Financial Aid Office will advocate in February for every student to file for aid as early as possible, no matter their circumstances, Harfst said.

The office will set up booths in the Student Center, Recreation Center and residence halls to encourage students who stay on campus to file and to show the importance of filing for aid, Harfst said.

"The earlier you apply, the better," she said.

Nelson Mandela, 92, home from S. African hospital

DONNA BRY
Associated Press

JOHANNESBURG — Former South African President Nelson Mandela was whisked home Friday from a hospital where the 92-year-old had been treated for a respiratory infection, with only a glimpse of his head covered by a surgical cap visible as he was wheeled into an ambulance.

That brief view could symbolize Mandela's increasing disengagement from public life. South Africans expressed joy Friday that he is recovering but there was also wistful realization that an icon is fading. Officials said Mandela now would be cared for in hospital-like conditions at home.

"Everyone was holding their hearts and saying not now," said Patricia Ramalla, who has lived across the street from Mandela for four years. "A person like Mr. Mandela — we still need him."

Mandela, who became South Africa's first black president after serving 27 years in prison for his fight against racist rule, largely retired from public life in 2004. He has made even fewer appearances in recent years while others like retired Archbishop Desmond Tutu have increasingly taken on the role of South Africa's national conscience.

Army Surgeon-General Vejayand Ramlakan said Friday that Mandela's condition was stable, and that he takes medication for a chronic, unnamed condition and needs help to walk. Officials said he was joking with his wife and nurses, and in good spirits.

"Despite all of this, his amazing positive attitude allows him to cope with the difficulties of old age with the greatest of grace," Ramlakan said.

Mandela himself, has pushed his fellow South Africans to think beyond him. At his insistence, his foundation switched from a logo featuring his face to one featuring his hands, reflecting his desire to shift the focus from himself.

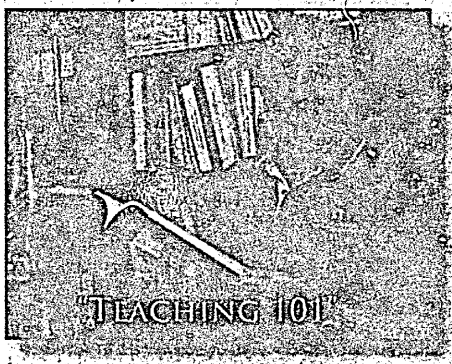

When he reached 91, his July 18 birthday was declared Mandela Day, and he urged people to observe it by painting schools, reading to the elderly and taking on other tasks to build their communities.

"It is in your hands to create a better world for all who live in it," Mandela said.

A dearth of updates since Mandela was admitted Wednesday afternoon had led to speculation and concern about his condition. Journalists camped outside the hospital and his Johannesburg home. Officials said Friday that Mandela's office has received more than 10,000 messages of support and well wishes, including from U.S. President Barack Obama.

'Quarter Life Crisis' a collage of comedy

Carbondale is the only place where a dude with a ponytail can be smarter than you.

— Kyle Scanlan
Creator, "Quarter Life Crisis
Comedy Variety Show"

BRENDAN SMITH
Daily Egyptian

In recognition of his 25th birthday, Carbondale stand-up comedian Kyle Scanlan orchestrated the "Quarter Life Crisis Comedy Variety Show," a hodgepodge of standup, improvisational sketches, interpretive dance and puppets Friday at the Sports Blast SkyBar.

The result was an entertaining glimpse into Carbondale's comic counterculture.

Cape Girardeau native Andrew Chandler delivered a viciously funny set centered on hilariously accurate social commentary. The comic's offbeat parallels between Chia Pets, abortion, MTV's "16 and Pregnant" and the pope, though moderately brash, got a big reaction from the audience.

Comedian Emeric Brown's narrative delivery was another standout of the night. His retelling of a handicap basketball game gone extremely wrong played out like a scene straight from "It's Always Sunny in Philadelphia."

Adam Worles performed one

Kyle Scanlan, an SIUC alumna from Newton, speaks to a crowd of roughly 40 people Friday at Sports Blast in Carbondale for the Improv Comedy group Community Floss. Scanlan said he has been a member of the group for three years. Community Floss is the longest-running improv comedy group in Carbondale and has been performing since 1993, he said. The group will perform next at 9 p.m. Feb. 7 at Gatsby's Battle of the Comics. LAUREN LEONE DAILY EGYPTIAN of the most unique puppet shows ever. Made entirely out of recycled materials, Worles' creations looked like mutated Muppets with jokes brimming between witty intelligentsia and screwball comedy. His cast, composed of a mad scientist, two sullen poets and a Satan-worshipping Elina, proved to be a crowd pleaser.

Improv group Community Floss delivered sidesplitting scenarios. The group's ability to create new situations on the spot and incorporate them in later skits was a highlight of their act. Floss takes the audience through a comedic journey; the further one goes, the funnier and more ridiculous the quest becomes.

and witty punch lines in the vein of Tenacious D. A retelling of an event that unfolded in the parking lot of a Def Leppard concert was comedic gold. The duo also went into a slight roast of Scanlan, the guest of honor, which won the audience over.

Scanlan gave insight into his experiences in comedy thus far, from failed open mics to being told, "make me laugh, clown." The comic gave a painfully funny reflection of his unique experiences with comedy in Carbondale, a place he says is unlike any other.

"Carbondale is the only place where a dude with a ponytail can be smarter than you," Scanlan said.

THEIR WORD

A call to protest ignites a call to arms

BARBARA EHRENREICH
McClatchy-Tribune

Why are Americans such wusses? Threaten the Greeks with job losses and benefit cuts and they tie up Athens, but take away Americans' jobs, 401(k)s, even their homes, and they pretty much roll over. Tell British students that their tuition is about to go up and they take to the streets; American students just amp up their doses of Prozac.

The question has been raised many times in the last few years by a variety of scholars and commentators — this one included — but when the eminent social scientist Frances Fox Piven brought it up at the end of December in an essay titled "Mobilizing the Jobless," all hell broke loose. An editor of Glenn Beck's website, theblaze.com, posted a piece sporting the specious headline "Frances Fox Piven Rings in the New Year by Calling for Violent Revolution," and, just two weeks before the Tucson shootings, the death threats started flying. Many of the most provocative comments have been removed from the site's comment section, but at one time they included such charming posts as "Bring it on bitch. We're armed to the teeth." Or: "We're all for violence and change, Francis. Where do your loved ones live?"

If the dozens of Beck fans rhetorically brandishing their weapons at Piven were all CEOs, bankers, hedge fund operators and so forth — i.e. the kind of people who have the most to lose from mass protests by the unemployed — all this might make more sense. But somehow, and I may be naive about these things, it's hard to imagine a multimillionaire suggesting that "folks buy battle carbines with folding or collapsible stocks and 16-inch barrels so they can be more easily hidden under jackets and such. Also, buy in NATO-approved calibers (5.56/223, 7.62/308) so you can resupply ammo from the bodies of your enemies too." One of Piven's would-be assassins even admits to being out of work a condition he or she blames, oddly enough, on Piven herself, adding that "we should blow up (her) office and home."

So perhaps economically hard-pressed Americans aren't wusses after all. They may not have the courage or the know-how to organize a protest at the local unemployment office, which is the kind of action Piven urged in her December essay, but they stand ready to shoot the first 78-year-old social scientist who suggests that they do so.

There are all kinds of explanations for how Americans lost their grass-roots political mojo: iPods have been invoked, along with computer games and anti-depressants. And of course much of the credit goes to the so-called populist right of the Rush Limbaugh and Glenn Beck persuasion, which argues that the real enemy of the down-and-out is not the boss or the bank, but the "liberal elite" represented by people like Piven.

But at least part of the explanation is guns themselves — or, more specifically, the recent and uniquely American addiction to high-powered personal weaponry. Although ropes and bombs are also mentioned, most of the people threatening Piven on Beck's website referred lovingly to their guns, often by caliber and number of available rounds. As Joan Burbick, author of the 2006 book "Gun Show Nation: Gun Culture and American Democracy," has observed, "The act of buying a gun can mimic political action. It makes people feel as if they are engaging in politics of political protest." She quotes one gun enthusiast: "Whenever I get mad at the government, I go out and buy a gun." Jobless and overwhelmed by bills? Hunker down in the basement and polish your Glock.

Never mind that there are only a few ways you can use a gun to improve your economic situation: You can hock it, deploy it in an armed robbery, or shoot raccoons for dinner.

But there is one thing you can accomplish with guns and coarse threats about using them: You can make people think twice before disagreeing with you. When a congresswoman can be shot in a parking lot and a professor who falls short of Glenn Beck's standards of political correctness can be, however anonymously, targeted for execution, we have moved well beyond democracy to a tyranny of the heavily armed.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Soul food is about more than the menu

In response to Matthew Angeles' letter to the editor published Jan. 27:

Soul Food originated in the Era between 300 and 1619 C.E. when the first group of African-American slaves was brought to this country. In order to survive, they raised cattle, planted seeds and fished. Some of the first things they planted were black-eyed peas and okra. During that time, young girls learned to prepare traditional foods such as fufu, vegetables and pounded yams. They were also skillful at frying, roasting, grilling, and steaming their foods. Women often worked long days and would come home and prepare one-pot meals. In the 1960s, Black Americans' southern-style cooking was renamed "Soul Food" to honor black cooks who prepared food during the time of slavery. It was also a reminder that these cooks paved the way in the development of African-American cuisine. Soul food is about more than the menu; it's about bringing family together to enjoy comfort food and fellowship with one another. It is a celebration of my mother and my grandmother who worked hard to make sure that there was enough food to go around for everyone to enjoy. It's about celebrating those unsung heroes who aren't mentioned in any history book.

I am a proud staff member of Residence Hall Dining, and we try to recognize all cultural celebrations by offering the cuisine that's favorable to that culture. After all, we do food, that's why it's a dining hall, and our efforts have always been well-received by the students. The first time I put together a soul food meal I invited many African-American groups to come showcase other African-American experiences. The only people that showed up were white groups and the Black Togetherness Organization (thanks). So the next time you decide to demonize something that was given with good intent, get your facts straight. Another thing: chicken is not just a black thing. I don't think KFC stocks rise and fall because of black people.

I'm having a traditional soul food Sunday on Feb. 20 to honor Black History Month and I extend an invite to you. I assure you I'll have everything from ham hocks to vegetarian offerings, because the one thing you did get right is that soul food does not have to be unhealthy. I'm not a proponent of Black History Month. I do not need to be celebrated one month out of 12. Furthermore, I think it reiterates a past that needs to retreat to the history books. It does not motivate African-Americans to stand up, but gives them an excuse to sit down. And yes, I'm black and I'm proud!

EGYPT

Armed gangs free Muslim militants in prison breaks across Egypt; Americans urged to leave

CAIRO — Gangs of armed men attacked at least four jails across Egypt before dawn Sunday, helping to free hundreds of Muslim militants and thousands of other inmates as police vanished from the streets of Cairo and other cities.

The U.S. Embassy in Cairo told its citizens in Egypt to consider leaving the country as soon as possible, and said it had authorized the voluntary departure of dependents and non-emergency employees, a display of Washington's escalating concern about the stability of its closest Arab ally.

The army sent hundreds more troops and armored vehicles onto the streets of Cairo and other cities but appeared to be taking little action against gangs of young men with guns and large sticks who were smashing cars and robbing people.

At least one Nile-side shopping mall in Cairo was on fire after being looted the previous day.

The Arab world's most populous nation appeared to be swiftly moving closer to a point at which it either disintegrates into widespread chaos or the military expands its presence and control of the streets.

A broader and tougher military role could be welcomed by increasingly fearful Egyptians — but would run a risk of sparking to place the army on the side of the regime and antagonizing protesters.

IRAQ

Long-suffering Iraqis watch Egypt unrest with sense of irony, warn government to take notice

BAGHDAD — Iraqis who have long suffered from high unemployment, poverty and endemic corruption — the catalysts of unrest spreading in the Arab world — called on their own government to take notice.

Many watched footage of riots and looting on the streets of Egypt, the region's traditional powerhouse, with a sense of irony. The scenes brought back disturbing memories of similar mayhem in Iraq, but also feelings of admiration for an uprising that came from the streets rather than in the wake of a foreign invasion.

The demonstrations come as Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki grapples with complaints that he has failed to provide basic services and security as he begins a new four-year term with a fragile coalition.

Analysts and many Iraqis said people in the war-weary country were not likely to take to the streets en masse.

But U.S. officials have warned that poor services, such as electricity and water, pose one of the greatest threats to Iraq's shaky peace.

SUDAN

Officials say more than 99 percent of voters in Southern Sudan opted for secession JUHA — Southern Sudan's referendum commission said Sunday that more than 99 percent of voters in the south opted to secede from the country's north in a vote held earlier this month.

The announcement drew cheers from a crowd of thousands that gathered in Juba, the dusty capital of what may become the world's newest country.

The weeklong vote, held in early January and widely praised for being peaceful and for meeting international standards, was a condition of a 2005 peace agreement that ended a north-south civil war that lasted two decades and killed 2 million people.

The head of the commission's southern bureau, Justice Chan Reec Madut, said Sunday that voter turnout in the 10 states in the south was also 99 percent. He said only some 15,000 voters in the south chose to remain united with northern Sudan, while 3.7 million chose to separate.

In northern Sudan, 58 percent of voters chose secession, said Mohamed Ibrahim Khalil, chairman of the referendum commission. He said some 60 percent of eligible voters participated.

Southern Sudanese voters in eight foreign countries overwhelmingly supported secession, he said, with 99 percent support for secession among the 97 percent of voters who participated.

GERMANY

Head-on train crash in eastern Germany kills 10, injures 23

BERLIN — A head-on collision between a cargo and a passenger train killed 10 people and injured 23 others in eastern Germany, police said Sunday. Authorities believe the death toll could rise in one of the country's worst train accidents.

The trains crashed in heavy fog late Saturday on a single-track near the village of Hordorf, close to Saxony-Anhalt's state capital Magdeburg. It's about 125 miles (200 kilometers) southwest of Berlin, Germany's capital.

The crash was so strong that the passenger train was catapulted off the tracks onto a nearby field, Armin Friedrich, the police officer in charge of the rescue efforts, said at a news conference in Hordorf.

The front rows of the first passenger compartment were crushed and several seats were lying outside the train. The dark interiors of some of the bodies that had been removed could be seen on a white frosty ground next to the crash site. The noise of the collision was heard in Oschersleben village, more than four miles away.

The cause of the crash was under investigation, with experts looking at all possibilities, including technical failure and human error. Nearly 200 police and rescue workers were sent to the crash site. About 50 people were on the passenger train when the accident happened, police said.

Most of the injured were so severely hurt that doctors fear the death toll could rise, he added.

VENEZUELA

Venezuelan official says fire at military arms depot sets off explosions, about 40 injured

CARACAS — A fire set off a series of explosions at a military arms depot in the city of Maracay on Sunday, injuring about 40 people and leading authorities to evacuate the area, an official said.

Residents were being evacuated from areas within six kilometers (about four miles) surrounding the arms depot, Alcagua State Gov. Rafael Isea told state television. He said about 40 people were reported injured in the explosions.

The cause of the fire was unclear. Information Minister Andres Ibanez went on state television calling for calm and saying that authorities were tending to the situation.

Isea said smaller explosions were continuing Sunday morning and that firefighters would wait until they had subsided to approach those areas.

THE UNIVERSITY AND LOCAL ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT: TOWN-GOWN RELATIONS IN THE 21st CENTURY

Eugene Trani

February 1
 7 p.m.
 SIUC Student Center Ballrooms

Gene Trani is nationally recognized for his expertise in "town and gown" relations through his leadership as president of Virginia Commonwealth University for nearly two decades, retiring in 2009. Dr. Trani's insights are shared in his book, "The Indispensable University," and his lecture will focus on the role universities and communities share in fostering economic and social development. Among his career highlights, he was a faculty member in the SIUC department of history from 1968-1975 and played an active role in Paul Simon's first Congressional race.

This event will also be video-streamed live on the institute's website.

Don't think it will be better than the corn, but I think it will be as good as the corn.

— Amer AbuGhazaleh associate professor in animal science, food and nutrition.

Stuemke said if the cows showed any sign of illness, the program would stop.

"If they have an ill effect, we pull them off or stop the research," he said. "We never put our cows in danger on research."

The Dairy Center currently feeds $80 to $100 in corn per day to dairy cows. If half the corn feed could be replaced by glycerol, it would cost 2 to 3 cents to feed the cows instead of 9 cents per pound for corn, Stuemke said.

"We're going to try to get enough glycerin together so that we can do a feeding trial," he said. "We know it's safe to feed (glycerin), we just don't know at what rate we can feed it and maximize the effectiveness."

Laura Ahrey, spokeswoman for the Food and Drug Administration, said in an e-mail the FDA recognizes glycerol as a safe ingredient for animal feed.

The 40 to 60 cows in the farm's herd eat 250 to 300 pounds of ground corn feed a day, Stuemke said. He said he plans to stockpile the glycerin at the start of the program and borrow glycerol from other universities' biodiesel refineries for their studies.

Stuemke said he will manage the program, but students from the SIU Dairy Club will operate tasks to create the biodiesel and glycerol.

We usually have about 330 customers, but this weekend we had at least 620.

— Ali Nemat local Subway owner

Because Polar Bear is based on partying, West said he was surprised that business was smoother throughout the weekend than on an average Saturday. He said there were no fights and the atmosphere seemed to be a safe one.

West said the local food service industry is positively impacted by the event and think of it as a good thing.

"We're actually kind of surprised that the school doesn't embrace it more," he said. "It's a really big deal to the businesses on the Strip. The crowd is huge, and you make a lot more money; it's great for the economy."

Horoscopes

By Nancy Black and Stephanie Clement

Today's Birthday — As you complete a project that's been with you for a while, you may feel sad. Take strength in new ideas. You don't need to look back. Surround yourself by those who truly love and appreciate you. Together, you'll create an even more wonderful new future.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — Today is a 7 — With a little help from your friends, you resolve any financial challenges. They know they can count on you, and your positive attitude keeps it moving.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — Today is a 9 — Keep your schedule well organized, so that you can provide accurate info to others as well as improving workflow. Everyone appreciates the ease that this allows.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) — Today is a 7 — A little give and take goes a long way toward establishing and maintaining balance and unexpected creativity on the team. Give them what they need.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) — Today is an 8 — You're in the leadership flow, directing and lighting the way. Give in to it, and allow others to contribute. Appreciate them. This empowers you both.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — Today is an 8 — Travel inspires your creativity. Let yourself fantasize about how great it could be, and imagine incredible results. Then write down any intentions for greater clarity.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Today is a 6 — Prepare yourself early for something special. Your hard work has paid off, and it all comes together today. Allow extra time to support others.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Today is a 6 — Step back and take an overall view of the visible options to discover more you haven't seen. Consider how best to allocate resources. Something exciting develops.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — Today is a 9 — You've been taking care of business, and have the results to show it. Keep up the momentum, and give in to some celebration. You deserve it!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Today is a 8 — Your friends or siblings have been insightful and ideas for your work. Brainstorming opens up new possibilities. Invent and play together for practical results.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Today is a 7 — Old habits seem set in glue for someone who wants to maintain control. This works out fine for you. Just let it all be, and focus on your priorities.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Today is an 8 — Move the puzzle pieces around to see something that was invisibly staring you in the face. It all makes sense! This opens up entirely new play options.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) — Today is a 6 — Imagine new possibilities for practical business matters and other interests. Let yourself play with these ideas, noting details. Set the stage for action.

"We played on courts that were completely different from what we're used to," Dien said. "The courts were fast, so it was hard to adjust."

Even with the team's loss to Louisville, Nothwehr said she is proud of sophomore Anastacia Simons and freshman Korey Love for their performances.

"At the beginning of their doubles match they looked like they were getting destroyed, but then they seemed to get it together and came up with a plan," Nothwehr said.

Simons and Love went on to beat Louisville in the No. 2 doubles flight, coming back to win 8-7 after being down 2-5. However, the Salukis lost the No. 1 doubles flight match and didn't have any players for the No. 3 flight, which gave Louisville the overall doubles point for the event.

Love said Louisville is a good team and played strong against her and Simons.

"That's the only match we won against them, and that's the only match Louisville has lost all season," Love said.

Dien said she tried hard, but she could have done better.

"There were some points I played well, and some parts I got carried away with, too," she said. "All in all, I did OK."

Nothwehr said she looks to improve on this meet's faults.

"Louisville seemed much more solid than they did last year, so we just played a great team," she said. "I think we'll be ready to go by the time we get some more training in."

Both the men's and women's tennis teams will play their next match Saturday against Morehead State in Morehead, Ky.

"Coach does a great job working with the whole team," Schirmer said. "She has had a lot of All-Americans while she's been coaching and getting a contract extension is just evidence of what a great job she's been doing."

While the rest of the team competed in Kentucky, Schirmer traveled with cross country coach Matt Sparks to Indiana University to compete in a 5k run, where he barely missed breaking the school record but managed to place third with a time of 13 minutes, 53 seconds.

The Salukis began the meet Friday by dominating the weight throw events and earning four top-five finishes.

The meet began Friday with senior thrower Gwen Berry delivering another record-breaking performance in the weight throw. Berry set a new women's weight throw record for the Rod McCravy Memorial with a mark of 22.05 meters, which beat the record set by Jenny Dahlgren of Georgia in 2007.

Berry was joined in the top six by senior thrower Jeneva McCall, who took third with a mark of 21.44 meters. Freshman thrower Erin Adkinson finished fourth at 19.43 meters and senior thrower Olga Chura finished sixth with a mark of 18.80 meters.

After each meet, McCall said she tries to assess her performance and focus on her weakest event to make necessary improvements.

"I want to be consistent all around, so I must make sure that I have top-five finishes in all my events," McCall said.

On the men's side, junior thrower JC Lambert picked up his fourth weight throw victory with a distance of 20.15 meters.

In the triple jump, junior jumper Malaiyah Love took home another top-five finish for STU, coming in third with a mark of 12.49 meters. For the men, junior jumpers Maxim Bakana and Vincent Johnson finished sixth and seventh in the men's triple jump.

The Salukis returned Saturday to capture nine more top-10 finishes.

Both McCall and Berry finished in the top eight in the women's shot put. McCall finished second with a mark of 16.49 meters, while Berry finished eighth with a mark of 14.86 meters.

In other field events, Bakana took seventh in the men's long jump with a mark of 6.94 meters and Johnson barely missed finishing in the top 10 with a mark of 6.22 meters, landing in 11th place.

On the track, sophomore distance runner Zach Dahlfen set a new personal record in the mile run with a time of 4:06.19, a time in fourth place.

The Salukis will return home Friday and Saturday for the STU Invitational at the Recreation Center.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Second-half troubles doom Salukis against Aces

JUSTIN KABBES
Daily Egyptian

Had SIU's men's basketball team won Saturday's matchup at Evansville, it could have tied for sixth place in the Missouri Valley Conference. Instead, the Purple Aces solidified that spot with a 66-49 victory and built a two-game lead over the Salukis.

The Salukis (10-12, 4-7 MVC) blew a halftime lead for the second consecutive game when they fell to Evansville (12-9, 6-5 MVC) Saturday at Roberts Stadium.

SIU has now lost five of its last six games. Four of those losses have been by 10 points or more and three have been to teams the Salukis already beat this season; SIU's only win in the past six games was against Evansville Jan. 18 at the SIU Arena.

The Salukis committed a season-high 31 fouls, forcing coach Chris Lowery to use more players from the bench. Every player saw the court, and only four players got fewer than 13 minutes of playing time. Overall, the bench played 92 minutes of game time.

Sophomore center Gene Teague and junior forward Mamadou Seck, two of only three Salukis to average more than 10 points per game, played just 13 and 15 minutes respectively and combined for only four points. Both had four fouls and missed playing time because of foul trouble.

Senior guard Jack Crowder was also called for a foul after he elbowed Purple Aces forward Kenny Harris in the face.

"We just mentally shut down," Lowery said in a postgame radio interview with Mike Reis. "Mentally, our kids are not tough."

the field in the first half and barely more than 26 percent for the game, going 12-46.

Evansville wasn't much better in the first half, shooting 26.1 percent, but the Aces made up for it by dropping 12 of 26 from the field to shoot better than 46 percent in the second half.

The Salukis also shot significantly worse from the free-throw line: In the second half, SIU went 8-10 in the first half but only 12-19 in the second. Evansville stepped up its game, draining 21 of 26 free throws.

Colt Ryan, Evansville's leading scorer, was held to only six points when the Aces played in Carbondale, but he busted out of his low-scoring slump by dropping 23 points, including four 3-pointers. Ryan averaged only 6.3 points per game in three games before Saturday. His scoring average before the slump was 16.1 points per game.

"There wasn't anything that we ran special," Evansville coach Marty Simmons said in a postgame radio interview. "I just thought we had a better rhythm and patience with our offense."

Ryan led the Purple Aces on a 9-0 run with a 3-pointer midway through the second half. The Salukis did not score again until senior forward Carlton Fay hit a pair of free throws with 6:29 left in the game.

"Once the game got going, it got their offense into it," Fay said in a postgame radio interview. "We were soft. We didn't really play hard the rest of the game."

Fay led the Salukis with 18 points but was just 4-12 from the field and scored eight points off free throws.

The Salukis' next game is against Drake at 7:05 p.m. Wednesday at the SIU Arena.

After the Rod McCravy Memorial meet Friday and Saturday in Lexington, Ky., the Salukis came home with several top finishes and coach Connie Price-Smith came home with a new contract.

Smith received an offer Friday from SIU for a three-year contract extension. This is the first time in the 10 years Smith has been working with SIU that she has been offered a three-year contract.

Smith said she works hard to keep the athletes motivated throughout the season.

"You can go any place, but you have to stay motivated. SIU is not a real small school, but it's not a big school by any means," Smith said. "You don't always need the glitz and the glam of the big schools to be successful. A lot of hard work and determination goes a long way."

Senior distance runner Jeff Schirmer said he was excited to hear about Smith's contract extension.

Women's team looks to improve after Louisville loss

TREY BRAUNNECKER

Although the SIU women's tennis team lost 7-0 Friday against Louisville in a match at Murray State, coach Andra Notzwehr said the team has potential to be successful this season.

Notzwehr said the team was shorthanded coming into the event and Louisville is one of the best teams SIU will see.

"We did alright," she said. "I would say that Louisville is one of the top two teams on our schedule this year, so we knew they were going to be tough."

With junior Vzhaka Sheoran out with an illness, the team had only five members playing against Louisville instead of six.

Due to the lack of players, the team had to forfeit one singles match and a doubles match.

"It's a little unlucky for us that we didn't have all of our players," Notzwehr said. "Having only five players we gave up one point, but that's the way it goes."

Sophomore Jennifer Dien said the team played hard, but she thought it was not prepared for the courts' surfaces.
