AT & T tops survey of 'corporate freeloaders'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — More than half of the nation's 250 leading corporations, worth more than $70 billion in profits and led by AT&T, paid no taxes or got refunds at least once between 1981 and 1985, a citizens group charged Thursday.

Releasing its third annual survey of America's "corporate freeloaders," Citizens for Tax Justice said, "Out of 250 corporations surveyed in this report, 130 ... were able to pay absolutely nothing in federal income taxes or receive outright tax rebates in at least one of the five years from 1981 through 1985."

And at the top of the list, the group said, was AT&T.

With reported profits of almost $25 billion between 1982 and 1985, the group charged that "AT&T paid not one penny in federal income taxes" while receiving $636 million in federal refunds. An AT&T spokesman, however, called the study "flawed" and said "with the exception of one very unusual year, AT&T has been a substantial federal income taxpayer," paying $750 million in taxes.

The survey, released as House and Senate negotiators began work on sweeping bills to overhaul the nation's tax code, said the 130 companies earned $72.9 billion in pre-tax domestic profits in the years they did not pay federal income taxes.

"But instead of paying $33.5 billion in income taxes, as the 46 percent statutory corporate rate purports to require, they received $6.1 billion in tax rebates — for a negative tax rate of minus 8.3 percent."

Citizens for Tax Justice, a private research and lobby group supporting tax reform, said the corporations avoided the taxes by either utilizing tax breaks "tailored specifically for them," or through accelerated depreciation and the investment tax credit.

The report said other companies with more than $50 million in net tax refunds from 1982 to 1985 were: DuPont, $179 million in refunds; Boeing, $121 million; General Dynamics, $91 million; Pepsico, $89 million; General Mills, $79 million; Transamerica Corp., $73 million; Texaco, $68 million; International Paper, $66 million, and Greyhound and IC Industries, $54 million each.

Admissions center to be complete by fall

By Catherine Edman
Staff Writer

The future home base of operations for the New Student Admissions Services should be finished by the beginning of the fall semester, says Terry Mathias, director of student recruitment.

The new Admissions Reception Center in the former Woody Hall Cafeteria will be the focal point of all new student recruitment efforts, Mathias said. It will give prospective students and their families a central location to start and finish when visiting SIU-C.

"It was designed to be as attractive as possible to people visiting SIU-C," he said.

Additional landscaping has been done around the building and one plant arrangement greets visitors with "welcome."

Designed by Physical Plant engineering services, it will include a reception area, a conference room, 12 staff offices, two work rooms and a room for audio-visual presentations. The video presentations are used to orient prospective students and their families with SIU-C, Mathias said.

Another advantage of the new area, he said, will be the offices for the staff. The additional room will give them enough area to counsel students in a confidential manner.

Currently, he said, 12 people work out of seven offices. When two people share an office and a family comes to visit the campus, only one employee talks to the family. The second person must find another place to work and is less productive, Mathias said.

Work on the new Admissions Reception Center began in the fall after the Woody Hall Cafeteria closed at the beginning of the semester. Final registration was conducted in the cafeteria in the past but will now be held in Ballroom B in the Student Center. The permanent registration area will still be Woody Hall Room A-6.

Auditor seeks to trim Foundation finances

By David Sheets
Staff Writer

The state auditor general wants to wrench $519,000 from the SIU Foundation's grasp with the help of an Internal Revenue Service ruling.

Robert Cronson, state auditor general, said that if the Foundation does not voluntarily release the money, "I will suggest to the Illinois Legislative Audit Commission that the money be withheld from the University's budget this year."

Cronson explained in a telephone interview from his Springfield office Thursday that the Foundation has at least $519,000 more than it needs to pay off state-issued bonds sold to SIU-C in 1966 for the construction of a dormitory on the University's Carterville campus.

Cronson said he had a letter describing an IRS ruling that exempts the state-issued bonds from federal taxation as long as the bonds are sold to a state agency.

Under this ruling, all money collected by the agency to pay back the bond debt must go into the state treasury, he said.

Cronson explained that the Foundation asked for a declaration of state agency status by the IRS prior to purchasing the bonds.

The University considers the Foundation a "not-for-profit organization" responsible for soliciting, receiving, holding and investing private gifts raised from alumni and other friends, businesses, corporations and foundations on behalf of SIU," according to a University News Service news release.

"If it was an agency of the state then, it is one now," Cronson said. "The money obviously belongs to the state. For them to say that the money does not belong to the state is simply ridiculous."

Foundation Treasurer James McDowell declined to comment on the matter and referred questions to Cynthia Miller, a Foundation secretary.

Miller said Foundation President Anne Carman "asked that all questions about the matter be directed to Jack Dyer," University Relations director.

She added that Carman was not in town Thursday to comment.

Dyer said that "whatever Cronson is talking about now, the Foundation hasn't seen yet," adding that "until the Foundation can see the findings the Foundation has nothing to say."

Dyer did say the matter of the $519,000 "has gone on for about a year."

The last time the Legislative Audit Commission addressed the matter was in January, Cronson said.

"I won't say the Foundation denied the charge," he said, "but they did question the need to return the money."

Cronson said that in the event the Foundation does not voluntarily comply with the IRS ruling and release the funds, he will suggest to the commission that the state comptroller withhold payments to the University totaling $519,000.

Cronson said he did not know when the matter would reappear before the commission.

Area taps to run dry on sewer repair days

By Toby Eckert
Staff Writer

Residents in several areas of Carbondale can expect to have their water cut off for 24 hours sometime during the next six weeks as a result of the city's plans to repair leaky sewers.

The project involves lining 3,000 feet of deteriorated city sewer lines with a flexible membrane that will cling to the walls of the sewer lines after hot water is run through the system.

The lining plan is part of a larger $995,526 city sewer rehabilitation project. Seventy percent of the project is being funded through Gov. James R. Thompson's Build Illinois program.

City land surveyor Brad Fleck said Thursday the city plans to line 400 feet of sewer a day and about six houses would be affected by the water cut-off at any one time.

The city plans to notify affected residents either by "knocking on doors" or mailing notices one day prior to cut off, he added. Work on the project is expected to begin Monday.

Areas affected by the project are: North University Avenue between Pecar and Sycamore streets; West Oak Street from Illinois Avenue to Poplar Street; Cherry Street between Illinois Avenue and Poplar Street; South Forest Street from Walnut Street to 106 S. Forest St.; the south side of West Main Street from Oakland Avenue to Forest Street; the north side of West Walnut Street from Oakland Avenue to Forest Street; South Poplar Street between College and Freeman streets; and Sunset Drive at the Little Crab Orchard and Creek Bridge.

Beautiful parks aid economics, director says

By Mary Wisniewski
Staff Writer

The Carbondale Park District has been making the city greener, and Director of Parks and Recreation George Whitehead says that what makes Carbondale beautiful helps economic growth, too.

"Ten years ago, this was an ugly town," Whitehead says. "If you wanted to show visitors some pretty landscaping, you'd have to take them to campus."

Whitehead said that since 1976 the Park District has added nine new parks, 200 new trees, and 14,000 new flowers.

"We're setting an example for the community and we're impressing visitors," he said.

"Today, people can drive down Main Street and like what they see."

George Whitehead, Carbondale Parks and Recreation director.

WHITEHEAD HAS a master's degree in recreation from SIU-C and has been with the Park District for 10 years. He won the Illinois Parks and Recreation President's Award in 1984.

Whitehead says that a park district fulfills five basic functions for the community.

Two of the functions, Whitehead said, are to preserve and improve the landscape. "We've added 140 acres of new park land," he said.

Bob Greene, superintendent of Park Operations and Planning, said Turley Park on Main Street is an example of how the park district has beautified existing property.

ANOTHER FUNCTION of a park district is to organize leisure activities such as softball or canoeing. But Whitehead said that even more important is providing a place for "self-initiated" leisure activities.

"If someone wants to take a walk, we provide the Greenway Bikeway," he said and added, "We try to make the space available."

Whitehead said that a park district is also responsible for setting local beautification standards. "Look at places like Prime Time and Best Inn and their individual attempts at landscaping. I believe our example helped," he said.

The Park District had a budget of 1.7 million dollars for fiscal year 1986, which ended June 30. Whitehead said that funds come from activity fees, donations and the Park District's autonomous taxing authority on local real estate.

WHITEHEAD SAID that the Park District budget "is on the smaller side" because Carbondale, which has a large portion of property owned by religious groups and the government, has fewer taxable industries.

Whitehead added, however, that the "service per dollar" in Carbondale is better than in other communities because the Park District coordinates many of its programs with other groups.

The Sunset Concert Series and the Annual Bluegrass Festival are examples of programs sponsored in part by the Park District.

Whitehead said that the Park District also trades services and facilities with Public School District 95, which includes Carbondale Community and Lincoln Junior high schools.

"WE GIVE THEM softball fields and they give us school space for our activities," he said.

Another way the Park District keeps down costs is by allowing local groups to organize activities, Whitehead said. For example parents who want to sponsor a soccer team will handle schedules and registration while the Park District provides the playing space.

Whitehead says that besides new trees and flowers, the nature of the Park District's services has also expanded.

The Park District began in 1940, but Whitehead said its functions then were limited to softball teams.

The Park District still holds ball games but has added such activities as yoga, life saving and the Special and Senior Olympics.

THE FIRST Special Olympics, for the handicapped, was held in April 1969. Whitehead said the event now attracts 550 to 600 contestants and more than 1,000 volunteers from the eight southernmost Illinois counties.

The Fifth Annual Bass Fishing Tournament to benefit the Special Olympics will be held at Cedar Lake in September, said Sally Erickson, recreation supervisor. She added that last year's event raised about $6,500.

In its second year is the Southern Illinois Senior Olympics. This year it is cosponsored by the SIU Emeritus College, the Egyptian Center on Aging and the Physical Education Department. Whitehead said the event attracted about 25 contestants this year.

ANOTHER MAJOR Park District accomplishment is the playground at Evergreen Park. Expanded from a few swingsets to giant tubes and jungle gyms, the facility is "the most comprehensive" in Southern Illinois, Whitehead said.

The Carbondale Park District has received many donations, probably the most outstanding being the Park District residence at Hickory Lodge, 1115 W. Sycamore. Donated along with $10,000 — by LaDean Martin Kirby in 1978, the lodge rests on 13 acres that also contain the community garden plots and the Park District greenhouse.

Although the Park District has made vast progress in the last years, Whitehead said it is looking to even bigger plans for the future.

ONE OF the biggest of these future projects is a 236-acre, $2.1 million golf course proposed for the northwest side of town.

Architect William Spear is now studying the project for "suitability" and cost, Whitehead said.

Whitehead said he believes the golf course will particularly attract businessmen. "There's not a golf course within 40 miles of here, and it's a businessman's game."

Whitehead said that if approved, the golf course could be ready for use by 1989.

All of the Park District activities, from the flowers to the Special Olympics to planning for a golf course, improve the community and attract new residents, Whitehead said.

"New faculty for the University and new businesses looking for a place to locate will come into Carbondale and see green and beauty wherever they look. How can it not convince them to stay?"

Charging service needs expansion

THE UNIVERSITY HAS TAKEN a step toward making life a little easier for students. Beginning this fall, students who are on scholarships or are receiving financial aid will no longer have to worry about having enough money readily available to pay for their textbooks. They will be able to charge books purchased at the University Bookstore directly to their bursar's statement.

Being able to charge books will be a godsend. The beginning of the school year can put a heavy drain on students' bank accounts. Students have to pay for tuition, rent, damage deposits, food, electrical and phone hookups all at once. By the time the "essentials" are taken care of so that they can live, students may not have enough money left over to pay for things that can wait — like textbooks. It's easy to fall behind in classwork when you're too broke to afford books.

BUT THERE IS A NEED FOR this service for all students. Not everyone can afford to foot a $150 bill for books right off the bat. There shouldn't be a stipulation that allows only certain students — those on financial aid — to charge their books. This is something that every student should have the option of doing.

If students can already charge other costs, like parking tickets, library fines, and medicine through the Bursar's office, there should be no problem with books.

Financial aid carries with it a lot of bureaucratic red tape. If the new system can be made to work for financial aid students, there should be even less of a problem for students without aid. Without the usual Woody Shuffle associated with financial aid, there will be considerably less of a headache.

John Coriker, director of the Student Center, has said the program is being implemented on a trial basis. If the system works, the service should be expanded so that all students can take advantage of it.

Opinions from elsewhere

No better than killers

from The Washington Post

TEN YEARS AGO THE SUPREME Court handed down a series of decisions that enabled states to reinstitute the death penalty. For the preceding 10 years there had been no executions. In the decade following, there have been more than 60. First to die was Gary Gilmore, shot by a Utah firing squad in 1977. The latest are three men, two in Florida and one in Georgia.

When Gary Gilmore was executed it was only after protests, vigils, marches and profuse public soul-searching. While some Americans greeted the return of the penalty with enthusiasm bordering on the ghoulish, most at least were uneasy and questioning. Public demonstrations, heartfelt speeches and dramatic countdowns marked each execution for a few years.

Gradually, the fervor of the opposition was diminished, the horror somehow muted by repetition. A few men and women still struggle to sustain a public rage. They support the lawyers who press appeals until the last minute. They come with candles to sing and pray outside prison walls.

But now an execution hardly rates more than a mention in a news roundup. One week it's a convenience store killer in Texas, the next a mildly retarded murderer in Georgia. Who even remembers how many were executed last month?

Over 3,000 people have been sentenced to death in the last decade. The Supreme Court has clarified almost all the standards for imposing this penalty, and no sweeping new ruling that will save a whole class of the condemned is likely.

Convicted murderers who are sentenced to death are not sympathetic characters, though some are pathetic. It is not a special sympathy for them as individuals, or a failure of compassion for their victims, that inspires protest. It is a refusal to acquiesce in still more killing, a belief that society should not do what it condemns the individual for doing, and a determination to accord even a killer more justice than he gave his victim. The executions of the past 10 years demonstrate the country's shameful retreat from these principles.

SIU not second-rate at all

Hooray for professors Thomopoulos and Viswanathan. They have received a significant grant in support of their research and in so doing have upheld the principle of academic freedom for the University.

We often complain about the inadequacy of funding of SIU-C. If we look at our peers we find that we are about average in our support by the state of Illinois and above average in our tuition charges. One place that we can improve our financial situation is through the efforts of our faculty to obtain external support for their research where we are not doing as well as our peers.

For example, we often justifiably complain about our salary levels. If half of our faculty could obtain grants and contracts sufficient to offset half of their salaries, the University could improve salaries for the faculty by 25 percent.

They are also to be praised for their courage in accepting a grant which they knew might be controversial. In so doing, they made a statement that their academic freedom to follow their research wherever it might lead was not to be thwarted by vocal minorities trying to grind some political ax.

When the opposition resorts to outright lies or gross distortions in condemning their work, the researchers should know that they must be doing something right. Mr. Hugel and MAPP know that there is no credible evidence supporting a statement that 60 percent of faculties of chemistry and physics departments "from universities across the country" have pledged to refuse SDI grants.

If Mr. Hugel thinks that this is a second-rate university, then, if he is good enough, he ought to go to one he thinks is first-rate. Perhaps he and the rest of MAPP believe that a first-rate university is one which restricts the academic freedom of its faculty and students.

Professors Thomopoulos and Viswanathan have made their statement that SIU-C is a first-rate institution in more ways than one. They can afford to ignore voices of politics, emotionalism and irrationality. — Harold G. Richard, associate professor, Institutional Research.

SDI research opposed

If the scientists who designed Hitler's gas chambers had said, "Well, sure, our work will be used in concentration camps, but it will also be useful to the furnace industry," would that have made their work OK? Or if the engineers who built the fence around the camp said, "We're only doing the non-lethal part," would that have freed them from responsibility for what they were helping to build?

These are, essentially, the two arguments that professors Viswanathan and Thomopoulos use to justify their work on "Star Wars." During the Vietnam era, we heard some pretty imaginative justifications for war research. But few were more absurd than these feats of illogic by our new Star Warriors.

The truth is, the professors are helping to build Star Wars. At the same time, they are trying to tell us that they are somehow "less involved" than other people they're building it with. If they are ashamed of what they're doing, they should cut it out. If not, they shouldn't try to rationalize or whitewash it.

The work the two SIU professors are conducting is SDI research, the same as SDI research being conducted elsewhere. The resources and facilities of SIU-C are now being used to build SDI. Many people in the University community do not want their tax dollars used that way. Those of us who object should make our opposition clear. Such folly, left unopposed, has a way of increasing. — Matthew Meighan, Makanda.

Clean up day at the spillway

Well people, here is your chance to clean up the Kinkaid spillway.

The Student Environmental Center, Students for Pollution Control and The Wildlife Society are coordinating a cleanup of the spillway Saturday, July 19 at 1 p.m. We are asking everyone who is interested in helping to preserve the Kinkaid spillway for future generations to assist in the cleanup.

It is obvious from the feedback received that the vast majority of the student population agrees with us about the pollution rate at the lake. Remember, actions speak louder than words. — Bo Bottom and Glenn Stolar, instructors, Marketing, and Julie Wittler, junior, Nutrition.

Eckert's views are appreciated

Readers of the Daily Egyptian are fortunate indeed to have writers such as Toby Eckert, who wrote the July 16 Viewpoint regarding U.S. policies toward Nicaragua.

His piece was a pleasure to read — intelligent, historically and factually accurate, comprehensive and well-written. I was especially impressed with Eckert's ability to sustain his tone of mild-mannered impatience in the face of the emotional jingoism to which he was responding. — Robert Griffin, associate professor, English.

Congress negotiates tax reform

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House and Senate negotiators began efforts to craft a historic reform of the nation's twisted tax laws Thursday with promises to "settle some old scores" for American taxpayers and fix years of unfairness.

However, even as leaders of the 22-member conference committee showed a spirit of cooperation to fashion a "monument to American taxpayers," they also warned numerous tough decisions lie ahead as they try to reconcile the very different bills passed by the House and Senate.

In the first official act of the conference, the two leaders — Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore. — avoided a potential problem and agreed Rostenkowski, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, should hold the largely ceremonial title of conference committee chairman.

"The sum of our decisions will become a monument to American taxpayers who have suffered distortions and inequities under the present tax code," said Rostenkowski. "The final version will settle some old scores between working families whose taxes are withheld every payday and those who cleverly shelter high incomes from taxation."

He added that for most families who pay taxes, the eventual bill will be "long overdue compensation," while those who have avoided paying a fair share, it will be "long overdue retribution."

The opening of the conference coincided with release of a citizens report that found more than half of the nation's 250 leading corporations, led by AT&T, paid no taxes or got refunds at least once between 1981 and 1985.

"This is really a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity," said Packwood, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, adding, "We have finally said to ... companies that pay no taxes: They will pay taxes."

S. Africa ruling to be challenged

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — A labor lawyer said Thursday he would test a Supreme Court ruling that softened some state-of-emergency restrictions by setting a Monday deadline for gaining access to hundreds of clients held without charges.

A Supreme Court panel Wednesday rejected a union bid to overturn the state of emergency, imposed June 12 in a bid to quell escalating racial violence, but loosened some press and other restrictions.

The panel granted lawyers access previously denied to the estimated 4,000 people detained without trial nationwide since the emergency.

Peter Harris, a member of the legal team that challenged the emergency in the court, said Thursday his firm was demanding that the government grant access to movement clients.

"We have given the authorities a deadline of 10 a.m. Monday to confirm the time and place for visits."

Abortion group opposes Reagan's high court picks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The National Abortion Rights Action League opened a campaign Thursday against President Reagan's two nominees for the Supreme Court, arguing they want to erase a woman's right to abortion.

The group's executive director, Kate Michelman, said the writings and speeches of William Rehnquist and Antonin Scalia show they are committed to reversing the Supreme Court's decision legalizing abortion in 1973 and are insensitive to women's rights.

Last month, Reagan nominated Rehnquist, who has been an associate justice on the high court since 1972, to succeed retiring Warren Burger as chief justice. At the same time, he chose Antonin Scalia, a federal appeals court judge since 1982, to replace Rehnquist.

Like other federal judges, justices serve for life and must be approved by the Senate. The Senate Judiciary Committee has scheduled confirmation hearings next Tuesday for Rehnquist, 61, but civil rights groups have been working hard behind the scenes to win a delay of the hearings.

"Rehnquist and Scalia are committed to reversing Roe v. Wade (the court ruling that legalized abortion)," Michelman said. "For this reason, NARAL opposes their nominations."

Rehnquist wrote the Supreme Court dissent in the 1973 abortion case. Although Scalia, 50, has not had a chance to rule on the issue as a judge, his public statements indicate he would vote against a woman's right to reproductive choice, Michelman said.

The appointments of the two well-known conservatives will not immediately change the ideological lineup of the court. But civil rights groups fear that if Reagan has a chance to name another justice, the balance of the court will be shifted to the right well into the 21st century.

Congress says keep budget cuts

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Congress, in a "mirror test of will" to lower the federal deficit, Thursday easily voted to keep in place $11.7 billion in spending cuts made under the Gramm-Rudman balanced-budget law but invalidated by the Supreme Court.

The ratification, approved by the House 339-72, and the Senate on a voice vote, now goes to President Reagan who is also expected to approve and keep in place budget cuts made March 1 as the first step in the Gramm-Rudman law's plan to balance the federal books by 1991.

"This is the first important step in reaffirming a commitment that was made in the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings (balanced budget) bill," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas. "Our action today ... is important as an indication after the Supreme Court decision that we intend to live up to our commitment ... to balance the budget."

Without the ratification, many government agencies would get back their money and budget committee leaders estimated that as much as $20 billion could be added to the budget deficit next year.

The cuts were raised by a special joint House-Senate Budget committee on a voice vote — a meeting that took just 10 minutes. The special panel was set up under Gramm-Rudman law to act just in case the Supreme Court did negate the $11.7 billion cut.

Toxic, safe mushrooms are topic of botany prof's book

By Lysette Kappel
Student Writer

Mushroom hunting is serious business to many Southern Illinoisans, but even more so to Walter J. Sundberg, associate professor of botany.

In the past 21 years, Sundberg has hunted down more than 5,000 documented collections of mushrooms. In the 14 years Sundberg has been teaching at SIU-C, he has identified about 1,000 species of mushrooms and other fleshy fungi in Illinois.

Sundberg is working on his second book, which identifies and discusses various kinds of mushrooms. Sundberg said he feels the book will be important because people have a "lack of knowledge" about the identification of mushrooms they are hunting and eating.

Most of the mushrooms Sundberg has found are not poisonous — which doesn't necessarily mean they're edible, he explains — but some, fortunately a small number, are poisonous.

In the book Sundberg is currently working on, he discusses all the general classes of mushroom poisons and includes a number of the toxic mushroom species.

Sundberg said the deadly species of mushrooms are toxic to everyone who eats them. Other mushrooms which are less toxic may cause short-lived symptoms of poisoning lasting three to 12 hours, he said.

Some mushrooms that are not deadly can cause severe illness, said Sundberg. A person who has eaten a toxic mushroom may experience such side effects as vomiting, diarrhea and a stomachache to name a few, added Sundberg.

Symptoms caused by a non-lethal mushroom may appear

anytime from 15 minutes to 24 hours after consumption, Sundberg said. As for those that are most deadly, their symptoms do not appear until 12 to 24 hours later, much too late for easy removal of the food prior to near-complete digestion, he explained.

One type of toxic mushroom Sundberg discusses in his book is called Coprinus atramentarius, commonly referred to as the "inky cap." This mushroom is edible, except when alcohol has been consumed before, during or after the mushroom has been eaten.

Then it becomes very toxic, although under natural conditions, the symptoms induced by the mushroom will disappear within four to 12 hours. This light brown, bell-shaped mushroom will eventually dissolve into a black fluid, Sundberg said.

Sundberg also identifies other poisonous mushrooms in his book, some of which can be found in any wooded area in Southern Illinois. "I have spotted deadly poisonous mushrooms right under a set of swings in Giant City," Sundberg said.

Some poisonous mushrooms can be extremely dangerous and can lead to death if ingested and left untreated. Poisonous mushrooms cause many of the same side effects as less toxic mushrooms.

Symptoms will not occur until six to 24 hours after the mushroom has been eaten, said Sundberg.

"The problem with poisonous mushrooms is that many times people do not associate eating the mushroom with being sick and thus do not seek medical treatment, said Tim Began, graduate student in botany, who works in Sundberg's laboratory. The consumption of poisonous mushrooms is often treatable if caught in time, he added.

'Ook Muk' sizzles in parka at Hump Day Cafe concert

By Mary Wisniewski
Staff Writer

Emerging at high noon Wednesday with a heavy green parka and a pair of skis, Brian Elmore — Ook Muk the Alaskan — climbed to a concrete stage near the Student Center's South Patio.

"I've come out to jam for you and I don't care if its 102," the Alaskan chanted before launching into a program of reggae, folk, blues and banter as the second performer in student programming Council's "Hump Day Cafe."

Sheryl Orlove of SPC originated the idea for the event. She said the cafe will be held every other Wednesday, or "hump day," and will feature student performers.

Orlove said that playing a "Hump Day" requires no audition. "We provide everything," Orlove said, "All sound and promotions. We're just looking for student talent."

The first Hump Day act was the Carbondale band Slipping Manners on July 2. Orlove said the Cafe will continue into fall semester as long as weather permits.

Considering the temperature Wednesday, Ook Muk gave a brave performance. In contrast to his far-north theme, Elmore played solo electric guitar on a stage hot enough to fry pancakes.

Also curious to his Eskimo moniker was Elmore's choice of mostly reggae and West Caribbean music. This was an unfortunate choice, since reggae's complicated cross rhythms are impossible to produce in a solo performance. Even a loyal group of hand-clappers would have helped.

Ook Muk did manage some amusing vocal horns and seemed to please the crowd of about 25 that gathered on the patio. Playing Bob Dylan and Joni Mitchell songs along with some originals, Ook Muk displayed a nice, versatile voice that was unfortunately muffled by a poor sound mix. Elmore said he calls himself "the Alaskan" because he is one-eighth American Indian. "I feel a real affinity for Alaska and I want to get back to my roots." In response to the weather Ook Muk said only, "We Alaskans can stand all temperature extremes."

The next Hump Day Cafe is scheduled for July 30. The performer is yet undetermined, but Orlove said SPC is open to suggestions.

'The Prince' shows people in well-mixed perspective

By Maureen Cavanagh
Entertainment Editor

The Theater Department's production of the "The Prince" will not be a historical documentation of the Renaissance and Niccolò Machiavelli.

Billed as a "dark comedy" by writer and director Gary Graves, "The Prince" will focus on the negative and destructive, though often funny, elements of human nature.

"The Prince," Graves' thesis project, will be presented Monday at 8:15 p.m. and July 29 at 8:15 p.m. in the Laboratory Theater in the Communications Building. Admission is $1.

BY GRAVES' own assessment, "The Prince" is "utterly outrageous and thoroughly entertaining."

Graves, a graduate of San Francisco State University, is a second-year student in the master of fine arts playwriting program.

As an actor he has appeared as Bob in "How the Other Half Loves" for Summer Playhouse '85, and this season as George in "Chapter Two."

Last semester, Graves played the role of Lee in "True West" and wrote and directed the Lab Theater production of "Lockdown."

GRAVES submitted a film script titled "Heart of Egypt" in a screenwriting competition in Los Angeles. The script, which focuses on the Herrin Massacre is one of 11 pieces nominated to receive the Nissan Focus 1986 award.

Set in Renaissance Italy in the early 16th Century, "The Prince" explores the genesis of Machiavelli's classic book by the same name. The infamous "handbook" is considered to be a "how to" formula for effective tyranny.

Machiavelli, who lived from 1469 to 1527, was an Italian philosopher and statesman. Through diplomacy, he became acquainted with power politics, meeting such leaders as Cesare Borgia, son of Pope Alexander VI.

IN "THE PRINCE," Machiavelli will be played by John Gerdes.

Borgia will be depicted by Sergei Ponomarev, theater acting and directing professor. Ponomarev has quite a notorious name to live up to as Borgia, an intelligent, cruel, treacherous and opportunistic man, who is believed to be the prototype of Machiavelli's "The Prince."

Leonardo Da Vinci, not exactly portrayed as a choirboy either, will be played by Christian Moe, head of the playwriting program. Cardinal Rovere, who later becomes Pope Julius II, will be played by David Nava. Lucrezia Borgia will be played by Danna Pavlica.

ROVERE's mistress will be played by Carrie Foxx. Kim Curlee and Brett Ferrari play captains, gravediggers and doctors, who serve as the comic vehicles in the play.

Graves says he has always been intrigued by the "Machiavellian" era, which is prior to the Reformation, and has read about it and researched it. He says he became interested in writing creatively about it after visiting Italy three years ago. He says his product deviates from history and plays on the anecdotes, tragic flaws, destiny and behavior of the figures the time produced.

THE PROGRAM "Guiding Light" could only hope to have as much soap in it as "The Prince," Graves says he zeros in on hypocrisy and betrayal, which promote cynicism and the conviction that greed and lust rule men's lives, not divine justice.

WHERE THE FACT leaves off and the fiction begins is difficult to say in historical drama, says Graves, adding that he hopes the "The Prince" transforms the character from "wax figures in museums" into modern personas.

Former Saluki likes Canadian football

Experience in two leagues helps Johnson off to best start ever

By Peter Rechenberg
Staff Writer

"It's like the difference between night and day," says former SIU-C quarterback Rick Johnson when he describes the difference between this season and last season as the quarterback of the Calgary Stampeders in the Canadian Football League.

Last season the Stampeders finished in last place in the CFL's five-team Western Division with a 3-13 record and Johnson said "it was the worst team I have ever been on."

While the Stampeders have only a 1-2 record this season and are in a three-way tie for third place, Johnson thinks they have a great chance of turning their season around.

"We've got a lot of talent on this club and I think we can still turn it around," he said. "I'm off to the best start of my career."

Johnson earned the No. 1 quarterback job this season and has posted impressive statistics through the first three games. He has 65 completions in 107 attempts for 823 yards and six touchdowns, and has thrown only three interceptions.

Johnson says the biggest adjustment in the Canadian Football League is the rule changes and the different dimensions of the playing field.

"The field is wider and the end zones are longer here," he said. "The linebackers aren't as big up here as they are in the states, but they're much quicker because of the wider field."

"I'm still learning some of the rules. I just learned recently that you can't call 'timeout' unless there's less than three minutes left in the half," he said.

The 6-foot-2, 200-pound Johnson calls the CFL a quarterback league because they only get three downs to make a first down.

"We average 40 to 45 passes a game," he said.

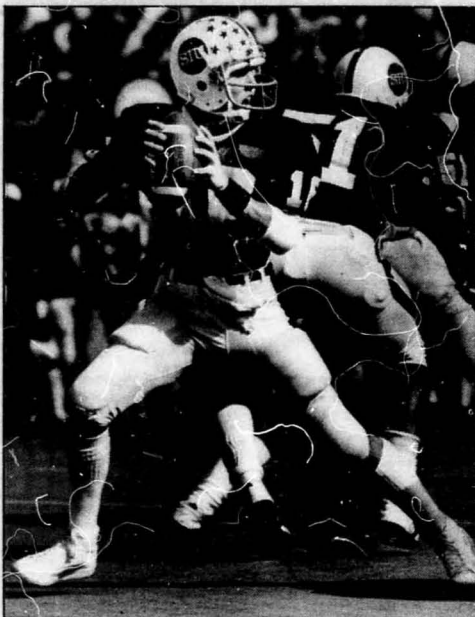

Johnson says he likes the CFL, but he wants to return to the National Football League someday.

"I want to return to the NFL like Warren Moon and Dieter Brock did, as a starter," Johnson said. "I don't want to come back to the NFL to sit on the bench."

After completing his career at SIU-C, Johnson served as Doug Williams' backup for two years in the United States Football League. He played for the Outlaws, who were based in Tulsa, Okla., in 1984 and in Tempe, Ariz., in 1985.

Johnson said he liked playing in the USFL but he didn't like playing behind Williams.

"Doug Williams is a streak player," he said. "When he was hot you would sit back in awe of him, but there were other times when I thought I should play instead of him."

Johnson says the talent between the USFL and the CFL is very close.

"I wouldn't say the USFL is any better," he said. "The talent and caliber of play is almost the same."

Johnson said he remembers the 1983 Division I-AA Championship season as a

Blue sparks the Giants to 6-4 win

CHICAGO (UPI) — Vida Blue and Randy Kutcher hit solo homers and Jose Uribe drove in a pair of runs Thursday to lead the San Francisco Giants to a 6-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

Blue, 7-4, limited the Cubs to two hits over the first five innings before turning things over to the bullpen. Frank Williams pitched two innings and Jeff Robinson and Scott Garrelts each hurled an inning. Blue's homer was his first in seven years and came off losing pitcher Ed Lynch, 1-1.

Uribe's RBI single in the fourth snapped a 1-1 tie and he drove in another run on a groundout in the sixth.

The Giants knocked out Lynch in the sixth. Chris Brown led off by reaching base on center fielder Jerry Mumphrey's error and scored on Harry Spilman's single to center. Bob Brenly followed with a single to center, sending Spilman to third. Uribe hit into a force play, scoring Spilman and knocking out Lynch.

San Francisco added an insurance run in the seventh. Jeffrey Leonard walked with two outs, went to third on Chili Davis' single and scored on Brown's RBI single to center.

In the fifth, Kutcher led off with his seventh home run of the year on the first pitch.

San Francisco took a 2-1 lead in the fourth. Chili Davis led off with a single to right and Brown walked. Brown was picked off by catcher Jody Davis, but Chili Davis took third as Spilman grounded out. After Brenly walked, Uribe came through with an RBI single to right, scoring Davis.

Blue's homer with one out in the third — his first since July 9, 1979 and the fourth of his career — came on a 2-1 pitch.

Maryland cage player stages drug cover-up

UPPER MARLBORO, Md. (UPI) — A University of Maryland basketball player last season switched a urine sample with another player during random testing designed to detect the presence of illegal drugs, it was reported Thursday.

Prince George's County State's Attorney Arthur Marshall said investigators have been told that one player who did not use drugs allowed another player to substitute his urine sample to hide drug use during the random drug testing, according to the Washington Post.

The testing was conducted throughout the season by the school's health center and athletic department, which has already stated that the procedures need to be revamped to avoid abuse.

Marshall did not identify the players involved in the scheme.

Marshall is leading the county grand jury probe into the June 19 death of Maryland basketball star Len Bias and drug use by other members of the Terrapins team. Bias, 22, died of "cocaine intoxication" two days after the Boston Celtics made him the second choice overall in the NBA draft.

In addition, the Post quoted sources saying investigators have been told that Maryland coach Charles "Lefty" Driesell was informed twice last season that one Maryland player "had a drug problem." The Post quoted unnamed sources saying that player was not Bias.

Marshall said the grand jury probe, which reopens Monday, will focus on whether the cocaine that killed Bias was supplied by Brian Tribble, a former Maryland student and junior varsity basketball player. Tribble was present in the College Park dormitory room when Bias collapsed.

Buddy Goldammer

Intramural sports keeps director moving on fast-paced schedule

By M. J. Starshak
Staff Writer

Twenty five-year-old Harold "Buddy" Goldammer has moved up the ladder a bit faster than he anticipated, but he said that's fine with him. A fast pace seems to be the core of Goldammer's job as coordinator of intramural sports.

Although he was an intramural official and supervisor at the University of Arkansas, his alma mater, Goldammer says he was "not good enough" to play any sports in college.

Goldammer was born in Rochester, N.Y., but has been a native of Jefferson City, Mo., since 1975. He earned a bachelor's degree in secondary education in 1983 from Arkansas and a year later received his master's degree in education with a specialization in recreational management.

While working as a graduate assistant in the intramural sports department at Arkansas, Goldammer got the idea of pursuing a career in the intramural field. Although the administrative position keeps him behind a desk much of the time, Goldammer does play softball in area summer leagues.

"I'd go crazy if I didn't do that," he said.

Goldammer will start his third year at SIU-C in the fall. He began as an assistant coordinator to Bill McMinin in August of 1984.

"My ultimate goal is to eventually be the director of an entire campus recreation program," Goldammer said.

Although he would probably have to go to another school to be in charge of a campus recreation program, Goldammer said he has no immediate plans to leave SIU-C.

Goldammer estimated that over 6,000 students participated in intramural sports in the past year. He noted that a common goal among the intramural sports staff is to increase participation and to provide programs as trends dictate. Goldammer said that he would like even more people to participate in intramurals.

"I don't think I'll ever be satisfied," he said. "I'm proud of the numbers we have. We have shown an increase over the years and I'm optimistic that it'll keep on increasing."

Goldammer's job includes administrative duties such as scheduling games, keeping track of the budget, hiring and training officials and supervisors, and putting out publicity. But he also spends a lot of his time out on the playing fields evaluating and helping officials.

"If I see someone miss a call, I'll bring it to their attention," he said. "On the other hand, I'm out there to give them a pat on the back, too. Officiating is a tough job. As soon as you put those striped shirts on, you don't have too many friends."

Goldammer added that he has other reasons for being out on the playing fields.

"I go out there because I enjoy watching the games, too. I also want to let the participants know that I care about the program. By being out there on the field, I feel that shows it," he said.

Goldammer said of all the fields of recreation, including city park districts, corporate recreation programs and campus recreation, he prefers the positive atmosphere on the campus.

"My student workers and participants are here because they want to be. They're not here because they have to work. They're in school because they want to be in school. They're really a pleasure to be around," he said.

According to Goldammer, the intramural sports program is an extension of the learning experience at SIU-C as well as being a stress-relieving technique.

"SIU is a very good school that offers a lot of non-academic opportunities. Intramural sports, as SIU shows, has a commitment to the total education of the student," Goldammer said.

Intramural sports teaches students social skills, sportsmanship, physical fitness, and leadership abilities, according to Goldammer. Through participation, students are also able to become disciplined to abiding by rules and regulations.

"I like to think that, true, a student will get into trouble, but by disciplining them, they are learning something about the way to handle situations," he said.

Many of the discipline problems come from freshmen that have a lower maturity level and do not know the rules of intramural sports, Goldammer said.

Aside from the learning aspect of sports, Goldammer said intramurals provides the opportunity to relieve stress from studying. Goldammer said that he is a firm believer that a physically fit person is mentally healthy as well.

"I found that when I was a student, I'd pull an all-nighter and get to the point where I was pulling my hair out. I'd take off at midnight and go out and jog a couple of miles. When I'd get back I'd feel really refreshed," he said.

Goldammer estimated that there will be 61 sports offered in the 1986-87 school year. From time to time, intramural sports offers a new sport to bring in the non-traditional intramural participant. Examples of these sports include a sailing regatta, a hacky sack tournament and putt-putt golf.

Since spring, Goldammer's main project has been to get lights installed for the playing fields in front of Brush Towers. The main obstacle is funds, Goldammer said. The acquisition of lights would greatly improve the quality of the intramurals program, according to Goldammer.

Competitions could be scheduled for weeknights as opposed to weekends, when students find other things to do, he said. Would there be any problem with dorm residents?

"I talked to Sam Rinella, the director of housing, and I asked him if he would have any objections. He said that if we were to keep them on until one o'clock in the morning, that would be a problem, but as long as they're off by 10 o'clock, there would be no problem," Goldammer said.

Other departments on campus might want to take advantage of the area, Goldammer added. The Student Programming Council or another university department may want to hold a function on the field.

With new sports, increased participation and lights on the playing fields, Goldammer hopes to achieve his long-term goal of providing the highest quality programs and services that he is capable of providing.

unique year. He also said the offense was upset when the Salukis' defense received all the media attention in Charleston, S.C., before the Salukis' 43-7 victory over Western Carolina in the 1-AA title game.

"The defense was outstanding, there's no question about that," Johnson said. "Terry Taylor, Granville Butler, Fabray Collins and Sterling Haywood made the defense great, but it's still a team sport. With the defense getting all the attention, it lit a spark under our butts and we showed what we could do."

Of the 441 faculty who responded to a similar survey sent in December 1985, 55.5 percent indicated they would vote for non-representation by a union, 62.4 percent said AP staff should be in a separate unit from faculty and 41 percent said department chairs should be considered administration rather than faculty.

"Still, there are a number of questions," Wakefield said Wednesday. "We provided the demographics and psychographics of the audience. The people indicated should provide the answers to these questions."

Seventy-nine questions are listed as needing to be answered. They include: advantages and disadvantages to unionization, effects of bargaining on the individual AP staff member and why a union is thought to be needed.

The survey results also list, in rank order, the groups APs would like to receive the answers from: the AP Staff Council, University Administration, Illinois Education Association, Illinois Federation of Teachers, American Association of University Professors, Faculty Senate and Graduate Council.

"We hope faculty and APs will receive the information to make an informed decision about collective bargaining," Wakefield said. An election is going to depend on when the questions are answered and by whom, she said.

"If the questions aren't answered, then an election is going to have a low voter turnout," she said.

IEA and IFT are seeking to represent SIU-C faculty and APs, should collective bargaining be instituted at SIU. IUP is seeking to represent only faculty at SIU-E and the Dental School in Alton.

Currently, the case for bargaining at SIU is in the final stages before the Illinois Educational Labor Relations Board. A decision is expected from hearing officer Ira Epstein late this summer and a union-determination election is expected in early 1987.

The University administration contends that collective bargaining, if instituted, be done on a systemwide basis — SIU-C, SIU-E and Dental School staff members in one bargaining unit.

It also says department chairs should be excluded from the unit because they spend most of their time performing managerial duties.

The Illinois Educational Labor Relations Act, passed in 1983, excluded employees who hold managerial or supervisory positions from bargaining units.

IEA seeks to represent APs and faculty in separate bargaining units and in separate campus units. It also seeks to include department chairs in a bargaining unit.

IFT seeks to represent faculty and APs in the same unit, but on a separate campus basis. It also says department chairs should be included in a bargaining unit.

Dave Vitoff, an IEA representative, said Wednesday the results of the survey "clearly reaffirm IEA's position. APs in Carbondale need a separate unit to address their unique concerns and the survey appears to be an indication that they desire this," he said.

But John Pohlmann, president of University

Professionals of SIU, which is affiliated with IFT, said the AP survey was answered by a large number of people who will not be included in a bargaining unit.

"The survey sample simply is invalid," he said, "because it takes into account 20 percent to 30 percent of the people who will not be included in a unit, such as top management who oppose collective bargaining."

Pohlmann said about 325 APs will be included in a bargaining unit.

He also said the survey results will be looked at "in the grossest terms and not in specifics," he said. "They (Wakefield and Busch) have put top management in with academic advisers and that is not the way a vote is going to be conducted."

"The survey does more harm than good," Pohlmann said.

Washington agreed to return to the bargaining table "without preconditions on the whole subject of nuclear test bans" and said U.S. negotiators would focus on making "verification improvements to the unratified treaties of the 1970s."

In Washington, the White House later announced separate agreements that the United States and Soviet Union would meet next week to discuss President Reagan's decision to scrap the unratified Salt II treaty and their teams of experts would confer about Reagan-Gorbachev summit as agreed to during the November summit in Geneva but hinted the two men must have something to agree upon before it could be arranged.

"We have interest in a constructive summit, but not an empty summit," he said.

Shevardnadze also said his talks with Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe were "good and productive." Howe travels to Washington Thursday to brief Secretary of State George Shultz on his talks with Shevardnadze.

area as much as the convention center itself if it wants to attract conventions and conferences, he said.

"We have to look at all of that, the whole package," Goldman said. "It's not simply the availability of the rooms. You have to draw people to fill these rooms. My concern is that the focus may well be on brick and mortar. But what about the drawing power?"

According to Goldman's study, "The Economic Impact of Southern Illinois University at Carbondale Upon Nine Counties in the Southern Illinois Region," SIU-C is responsible for attracting approximately $3,969,663 worth of conference business to the region.

The study also says that of the estimated 18,000 people who attended meetings in Carbondale in 1984 — the last year for which figures were available — about 59.6 percent attended meetings directly related to the University.

Corker said although the city convention center does have the potential to bring groups into contact with the University that otherwise may not have been drawn to the area, the end result may be a loss of substantial revenue from conference space rentals at the Student Center.

Corker said the large political gatherings, formal affairs and group conferences that have traditionally been drawn to the Student Center may be drawn to the city's convention center because of the availability of alcohol and overnight accommodations there. If this is the case, he said, the Student Center may have to cut its operating hours to make up for the loss of revenue.

press secretary Edward Djerejian said the United States and Soviet Union would focus on the 1970s treaties during their discussions at an undisclosed future date. While he did not rule out talks on the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty, he made it clear the United States is unwilling to stop testing until there are deep cuts in the superpower of offensive nuclear arsenals and verification agreements.

British officials said since the new test ban talks were a bilateral arrangement between the United States and the Soviet Union, Britain will not participate.

Shevardnadze's visit, the first to Britain in 10 years by a Soviet foreign minister, and the Soviet Embassy news conference appeared to be part of a stepped-up offensive by the Kremlin to put pressure on the United States in arms control negotiations.

A key element of the campaign has been Gorbachev's unilateral moratorium on nuclear testing. But Washington has stood firm on the verification issue.

Shevardnadze, who refrained from attacking the United States, said Moscow was proceeding with preparations for a second
