IOC chief: Games growing too large

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — Olympic chief Juan Antonio Samaranch Monday said the growing numbers of newly independent states posed a threat in the battle against gigantism.

Samaranch, speaking at the opening of the 99th Session of the International Olympic Committee, referred to the "breath of freedom" stirring these emerging nations.

"It is not without significance that one of the first actions taken by newly independent states is to seek recognition of their National Olympic Committees," the IOC president said.

"The number of NOCs would be close to 200 by the time of the Atlanta Olympics in the year 1996.

Olympic history spans several millennium

BARCELONA, Spain (UPI) — They began in 776 B.C. in Olympia in Greece and spectators complained about the seating, prices and flies.

In one stretch the Olympics ran uninterrupted for a thousand years. The Romans finally did away with them in 393 A.D.

More than a millennium later, the Olympics are still around. Say what you want about them, they do have staying power.

These will be the 25th Summer Olympics since their rebirth, counting three canceled because of war. Prices may still be steep, but the flies are under control. Athens (1896) country was in flagrant contradiction with our Olympic Charter.

The IOC was the first to exclude South Africa, withholding first of all the invitations to participate from February 1964, then deciding on its exclusion at the Session in Amsterdam in 1970. One year ago, at the Session in Birmingham (England), it was the first to admit the country's new National Olympic Committee."

Samaranch said the IOC was determined not to allow the Games to grow too large.

"We consider that the total of 10,000 athletes should not be exceeded," he added. "The danger of gigantism at the Olympic Games can and must be avoided."

Such is the outcome of the historical development we have witnessed over these past few years, one which is set to continue. We cannot but welcome it.

"We welcome first of all the reintegration of very venerable national committees, those of the Baltic countries, Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, victims of the great conflicts of the century. And that of South Africa, whose athletes will join the Games here for the first time in over 30 years. The apartheid policy practiced in that

IAW Softball Complex gets revamping

By Norm Smyth
Sports Writer

The SIUC softball team will take refuge during games in new dugouts being built by J and L Robinson Construction Co.

Greg Lonergan, engineering architect for the Physical Plant estimated the cost of the dugouts at about $22,500.

The new dugouts at the IAW Softball Complex should be finished sometime next week.

The athletic department is paying for the dugouts, but the final cost was unavailable.

Construction on the dugouts started in the second week of June and is expected to be finished by the end of the month said Scott Miller, Physical Plant employee.

Some area residents have helped out in the construction by donating their services and material to the athletic department, said Jim Hart, athletic director at SIUC.

Carbondale Ready Mix donated concrete for the dugouts.

Kay Brechtelsbauer, SIUC softball coach, said the old dugouts were too small to hold a team, coaches and trainers.

"There was no privacy in the dugouts and on hot days we had to sit in the sun, because there was no shade," Brechtelsbauer said.

Brechtelsbauer approached the athletic department about the problems she faced with the old dugouts.

"The new dugouts will enhance our field and our visiting teams should appreciate the dugouts," Brechtelsbauer said.

The athletic department will have some renovations done to the stands, but they will not be replaced because of the high price of the dugouts, Hart said.

MVC hoops tourney remains in St. Louis

By Jay Reed
Sports Writer

"Arch Madness" will be in the air this spring in St. Louis as the Missouri Valley Conference men's basketball tournament returns to St. Louis for the third straight year.

The Diet Peps MVC tournament March 6, 7 and 8 at The Arena will feature the top eight MVC regular-season teams battling for a birth in the 1993 NCAA Tournament.

Ron English, Missouri Valley Conference assistant commissioner of communication, said the tournament landed in St. Louis because of the facilities and central location.

"St. Louis is a neutral location for our cities and it offers a level of comfort because there is so much at stake," English said. "A neutral site offers the Missouri Valley Conference a chance to send our best to the NCAA tournament."

Jim Hart, SIUC athletic director, said he is pleased that the Missouri Valley can continue its association with St. Louis for the tournament.

"We lobbied very hard for the site," Hart said. "It is a good place to have your best team play."

The conference tournament has brought in more than 60,000 fans and an estimated $4 million to the St. Louis economy in the two years it has been held in the river city.

The tournament was held at Kiel Auditorium in 1991 and moved to The Arena in 1992 because Kiel Auditorium is being renovated.

English said that corporate sponsorship is a key link in the success of the tournament.

"Sponsorship benefits both the MVC and its sponsors," English said. "Prior to moving it to a neutral site we had it on home courts which was disastrous for revenue if the home team lost in the first round."

Southwest Missouri State won last year's tournament by topping Tulsa 71-68 in the championship game.

The tournament is being sponsored in St. Louis by Civic Entrepreneurs Organization, a group of approximately 100 business leaders trying to bring major sporting and cultural events to St. Louis.

The MVC and CEO will sponsor the 1993 NCAA Midwest regional at The Arena March 25 and 27 with the Midwest Regional Champion advancing to the Final Four in New Orleans April 3 and 5.

Future golf champions nab honors

By John Bolger

Molly Hudgins fired an 89 in the Future Champions of Golf tournament in Cartersville Monday earning her a second place finish and maybe a chance to play in the Gateway PGA.

Hudgins was among 174 golfers battling for championships in six age categories at the junior golf tournament at the Crab Orchard Golf Course.

The future SIUC golfer entered the junior golf tournament in a effort to qualify for the PGA tournament in August in St. Charles, Mo.

Hudgins, who won last week at the Jackson County Country Club, said a few top finished will qualify her for the Gateway tournament.

Junior golfers from all around

Southern Illinois gathered Monday to participate in the Future Champions of Golf junior golf tournament.

Sarah Haas, tournament coordinator since its inception 18 years ago, said the competition is the longest running junior golf tournament in the area and one of the largest.

Golfers participate in six age categories: 5 to 7, 8 to 9, 10 to 11, 12 to 13, 14 to 15 and 16 to 18. The girls and the boys are separated in each division except the 5- to 7-year-old group.

"This tournament has been very good for junior golf in this area," Haas said. "Over the years we have seen some junior golfers go on to make golf their profession."

Candidates look for help, support

United Press International

A USA Today-CNN-Gallup Poll published Monday shows Bill Clinton's support doubling following the Democratic National Convention with the democratic presidential candidate leading President Bush in all regions of the country.

The nationwide survey of 755 registered voters conducted July 17 to 18, also showed supporters of Ross Perot getting behind the Democrat. The survey was conducted after the Democratic convention and Perot announced he was ending his quest for the White House.

The poll has a margin of error of 3 percentage points.

Overall, Clinton's support doubled from 28 percent July 6-8 to 56 percent, while Bush's support dropped to 34 percent from 48 percent.

Regionally, Clinton was ahead of Bush in the East, 64 percent to 28 percent; in the South, 54 percent to 34 percent; in the Midwest, 54 percent to 34 percent; and in the West, 53 percent to 40 percent.

Clinton's overall favorable rating was at 63 percent, while his unfavorable stood at 25 percent, while Bush's favorable rating stood at 40 percent, unfavorable, 53 percent.

Asked who they thought would win in November, 47 percent said Clinton and 37 percent said Bush, with 16 percent saying don't know. This was a reversal of voter thinking in March when 71 percent said Bush would win, only 22 percent Clinton and only 6 percent saying they did not know.

The USA Today-CNN-Gallup poll followed a Los Angeles Times Poll published Sunday, which showed Clinton was favored by 52 percent and Bush by 32 percent.

That poll was conducted Thursday and Friday of 1,067 registered voters, and has a margin of error of 4 percentage points.

The survey showed a large move in Clinton's direction by former Perot supporters, who made up 27 percent of the electorate.

Bush accusation: Clinton plagiarized ideas for change

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Bush fired a salvo Monday in the battle for the right to be known as the candidate of change, suggesting that Democratic presidential nominee Bill Clinton plagiarized George Bush when he offered the idea: "We've changed the world, now let's change America."

The president's swipe at the Arkansas governor came just one day after Republican and Democratic campaign aides struggled to define the two men as the candidate for change, hoping to win the bonanza of middle-class voters left adrift by the withdrawal of independent Ross Perot.

The president, speaking in the Rose Garden, laid claim to the right to be known as the candidate of change, telling a group of youths from the American Legion-sponsored Boys Nation that he came up with the idea of changing America and Bill Clinton stole his plan.

"I loved it when I'm told that my opponent, one of them" said at the Democratic National Convention, "Well, we've changed the world, now let's change America." Bush said.

COET research to increase jobs for Southern Illinois coal workers

By Lynelle Marquardt
General Assignment Writer

The College of Engineering and Technology is trying to bring jobs to Southern Illinois by doing research that could expand the market for coal, counteracting the cutbacks prompted by the Clean Air Act.

Joe Spivey, president of the Illinois Coal Association, said as a result of the Clean Air Act compliance standards, approximately 100 people in the coal mining industry have been laid off in Southern Illinois.

Rick Honaker, assistant professor of mining engineering, said the college is doing many coal mineral research projects to discover different uses for coal.

One of the projects focuses on coal refining. The refining separates the coal into three components. Kenneth Tempelmeyer, professor of mechanical engineering, is in charge of the project.

If this is possible, the coal could be used in more highly-valued areas, and the market would expand, he said.

These three components, or macerals, are called vitrinite, liptinite and inertinite.

Vitrinite is the material that comes from the woody substance of the plant. Coal is about 75 to 80 percent vitrinite. Two possible uses of vitrinite are automotive fuel and residential heating, Tempelmeyer said.

Liptinite is the resinous matter in coal. It constitutes 5 to 8 percent of the coal. Liptinite could possibly be used to make plastics, he said.

Inertinite is the matter left over from ancient forest fires, Tempelmeyer said. It makes up 1 to 2 percent of coal. It is a carbon product that could be used in correcting water pollution.

So far the researchers have been able to get high

Bush to sign legislation act for withdraw of credit check

By Chris Davies
General Assignment Writer

Legislation requiring credit checks of some students applying for federally-guaranteed student loans will be repealed if President Bush signs the Higher Education Act.

The credit check rule passed Congress in the fall of '91 but was never put into effect because of the legislation added to the Higher Education Act this year.

The Act was passed by Congress July 8, and Bush said he will sign it. The rule would have forced students over the age of 21 to undergo a credit check when applying for federally-guaranteed student loans and to pay $25 for each

UPROAR IN ITALY OVER MAFIA ASSASSINATION—Troops moved in to guard Sicily's Mafia-crammed jails and other government buildings and police reinforcements flew to the island Monday in response to a national outcry following the assassination of a leading anti-Mafia prosecutor. Some 200 soldiers stood guard around the outside walls of Palermo's fortress-like Ucciardone prison while 55 of the jail's most dangerous inmates—mostly Mafia bosses—were transferred.

NINE KILLED IN SOUTH AFRICAN VIOLENCE—Nine people were killed in politically motivated violence over the weekend, including three mourners shot dead by police at a funeral. Meanwhile, officials said Cyrus Vance, the special United Nations envoy to South Africa, was to arrive Tuesday on a 10-day mission aimed at restarting talks on creating a non-racial constitution. Vance was named by the U.N. to draw up measures to help bring an end to the violence.

CZECHOSLOVAKIAN LEADER STEPS DOWN—Vaclav Havel, the reluctant leader of the 1989 "velvet revolution" that bloodlessly overthrew communism, stepped down Monday as leader of Czechoslovakia in another step towards dissolution of the 74-year-old federation. Havel's abdication took effect at 6 p.m. and the presidential banner—a sign of the president's residence on Czechoslovak territory—was pulled down as the clock struck.

BAKER APPEARS TO STRIKE DEAL ON LOANS—U.S. Secretary of State James Baker appeared to have struck a deal Monday with Israelis and Palestinians allowing Washington to guarantee $10 billion in loans to Israel without compromising Arab demands for a halt in Jewish settlement. During a hectic day somewhat marred by violence, Baker met with Palestinian officials in the morning and with Israeli officials several times during the afternoon. See story page 7.

BAKER EXPECTED TO JOIN BUSH CAMPAIGN—President Bush has asked Secretary of State James Baker to take a leave of absence from the Cabinet to become one of his chief re-election strategists at the White House, aides said Monday. The aides, who requested anonymity, said they expect Baker to join the re-election campaign next month, perhaps shortly before the Republican National Convention begins Aug. 17 in Houston.

CLINTON OUTLINES HEALTH CARE PLAN—Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton brought his plan for national health care reform to Ohio's capital city Monday as part of a five-day, 1,000-mile bus tour from New York to St. Louis. A crowd estimated at between 8,000 and 10,000 jammed into the downtown Nationalwide Plaza to hear the Arkansas governor tell them that the country must develop a national health care plan. See story page 6.

TEST MODEL OF TRANSPORT PLANE CRASHES—A test model of the U.S. Marine Corps' V-22 Osprey transport aircraft crashed into the Potomac River Monday as it was about to land, the Pentagon said. It was the second such crash involving the controversial plane. There was no immediate word on the number of people aboard the aircraft or whether anyone had been killed or injured. The aircraft is estimated to cost $30 billion to build over the next decade.

Attorney claims ambiguous rules allowed Meister to sign records

By John McCadd
Police Writer

Defense Attorney Darrell Dunham said there was no specification of which documents former SIUC pollution control director John Meister was authorized to sign and those he was not.

Meister was indicted in November 1988 on two counts of theft by deception and 12 counts of forgery in connection with his alleged illegal dumping of waste in the Jackson County Landfill, and crude-oil-contaminated soil in his business partner's land.

The testimony Monday focused in part on assessment of Meister's "authority" to sign manifests, as the defense began presenting its case to the jury.

Dunham said it was a common practice for Allen Waste Management owner Everett Allen to allow Meister to sign his name and those of other employees to several documents similar to manifests, or waste disposition records.

"There were several occasions where John would call Mr. Allen on the phone and ask if he could sign EPA documents," Dunham said.

"Mr. Allen would say, 'well, you really shouldn't do this,' but he'd always (eventually) say, 'go ahead and sign.'"

Prosecution witnesses, including Allen, have testified that Meister did not have authority to sign manifests which he did on several occasions - a practice which prosecuting attorney Ellen Shanzle-Haskins said constitutes forgery done to fool the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in effort to dump wastes illegally.

The forgery debate stems from several manifests to which Meister signed the names "Steve Hess" and "J. Patterson," the names of landfill operators.

Dunham said this was part of a routine practice.

Meister was allegedly allowed to sign the names of "bulldozer operators" at the site of disposal, as part of an "implied" authority.

Meister did sign the names of the operators on forms dated in conjunction to days when the two operators were on duty at the landfills, Dunham said.

The defense also presented Jackson County Treasurer Shirley Booker and Illinois State Police officer Craig Hansen as character witnesses on behalf of Meister.

However, both acknowledged during cross-examination that they had no knowledge of facts or transactions pertinent to the case.

Morris Library practices proactive approach to theft; zero reported this summer

By Vincent Boyd
Student Writer

Thieves beware, Morris Library has taken a bite out of crime.

New security measures taken by the staff of Morris Library have resulted in zero reported thefts for the summer semester, said Tom Kilpatrick, access services librarian.

Kilpatrick said the staff of the library has taken a proactive approach to deal with thefts.

"In the past, we always dealt with thefts as they occurred," Kilpatrick said. "Now we cut off the theft before it happens."

Theresa Nesler, statistical clerk of campus security, said there were 33 reports of theft for the fall and spring semesters.

Kilpatrick said a major reason thefts have been cut is because of new tactics employed by his staff.

"We began to post signs at the library entrance stating that a theft had recently occurred," he said. "The sign also warned the

"With the recession going on, everyone is strapped for cash. A book lying around is like money in the bank."

—Derrick McDaniels

students to watch their belongings."

Kilpatrick said the posted sign method has helped keep students cautious.

To help lessen the chance of a potential theft, library staffers have been told to be on the lookout for suspicious activity.

Kilpatrick said although the staff is doing a good job of preventing theft, students are ultimately responsible for keeping thefts from occurring.

"Students should take their belongings with them to the bathroom and copy machines," Kilpatrick said.

Derrick McDaniel, a junior in hotel restaurant management from Chicago, said many books are stolen for their resale value.

"With the recession going on, everyone is strapped for cash," McDaniel said. "A book lying around unattended is like money in the bank."

Nesler said stolen books are rarely recovered and the culprits are hardly ever caught.

"Of the 33 reports, there were no arrests or book recoveries," Nesler said.

Kilpatrick said the staff is constantly looking for new ideas to make security even better for the upcoming fall semester.

"We are open to any ideas that will help make Morris a theft-free library," Kilpatrick said.

Kilpatrick is currently studying a report from the American Librarian Association Conference, "Is Your Library an Accessory to Crime," which outlines security measures.

"We are going to see which measures best fit the needs of Morris and take it from there," Kilpatrick said.

Cut the middleman out of student loans

From The Daily Illini

Any plan that would help college students pay for school without costing the government or taxpayers more sounds too good to be true. An idea to streamline the nation's Pell Grant program would be just that, and it is long overdue.

The experimental program, which has passed both Houses, allows universities, instead of banks, to award Pell Grants. Twenty schools in Illinois are expected to participate in a test run for the proposal, and if the idea succeeds, it should be made permanent.

By establishing this program, the federal government could bankroll the recent plan to increase the maximum Pell payment and the base for eligible recipients. Government and educational leaders had said that the increases would be impossible without any additional funding.

Of course, this will get strong resistance from the banking industry, which collects as much as $1 billion annually from its go-between role in the Pell program. But Pell Grants were established to help students, and eliminating the role of banks will let the system fulfill its mission better.

Implementing this change has the support of student financial-aid offices statewide, and there is no doubt that students would rush to support it also. Overcoming the will of the banks might be difficult, but the benefits of the proposal are strong enough to mandate change.

As the economy continues to wilt, grants are even more important to disadvantaged students because the money does not go back to the government after graduation. By cutting out the middleman, the proposal would make it possible for more students to receive the help they desperately need.

Poll shows change in black voters' view

From the Saint Louis Post-Dispatch

Although there is an assumption that blacks and liberalism go hand in hand, a new poll shows that the political attitudes of blacks are becoming less predictable far harder to pin down. According to the poll, done by the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies and Home Box Office, blacks take some rather conservative views on a good number of social issues.

Fifty-eight percent favor limiting public aid benefits of single mothers who have additional children while on welfare. Another 73 percent favor mandatory sentences for drug dealers and 90 percent want the government to crack down on delinquent fathers to pay child support.

In addition, 88 percent favored kicking drug-dealing tenants out of public housing and 83 percent of those familiar with President Bush's school choice proposal see the plan as a way to help needy children gain better access to quality schools.

These poll results may be less an indictment of liberalism than a willingness to try new ideas amid frustration over the failure of public policies to address issues that have such a negative impact on black communities. At the same time, the poll showed that blacks overwhelmingly reject President Bush's claim that the Great Society is the root cause of urban problems. A mere 13 percent bought that argument, while 71 percent blamed a dozen years of "Reagan-Bush neglect" for the problems of America's cities. Moreover, 81 percent of the 750 African-Americans surveyed said they would make dramatic cuts in defense spending to make money available for cities.

And Clinton should take note that he may face difficulty if he chooses to pursue centrist policies at the expense of appearing to ignore the unique social concerns raised by Jesse Jackson. Only 42 percent favored Clinton for President. The results of this Poll should be read carefully by both political parties whose camps seem to work on the assumption that the conventional political wisdom of taking the black vote for granted or writing it off will still apply in '92, notwithstanding the warnings of Jackson and others.

Commentary

Convention delegates did not listen to Daley

"Considering that most of them Democratic delegates went to college and are so sensitive, how come they got such bad manners?" Slaty Grobnik asked.

How can you say that when this has been one of the most orderly conventions in history?

"Then you weren't lookin' when hizzoner, Mayor Daley, got to make his speech the other night."

Yes, as a matter of fact, I listened to every word. And I was highly impressed by the way he read each word in the proper order.

"Then you didn't notice that while he was up there, the delegates were wanderin' around, yappin' at each other, and they hardly paid him no attention."

That's just the way conventions are. They hear so many speeches that after a while they tune out.

"Nah, I don't think that's what it was. They didn't tune out for Jesse Jackson."

Ah, but Jesse is a powerful and eloquent orator.

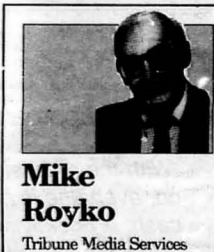

"Yeah, he is, even if I can't always figure out what he's saying. Like he says that it's terrible because our kids are playing in broken glass."

Well, don't you agree that is terrible?

"Yeah, out when he said that, I had two questions. One, why don't somebody sweep up the glass? That's what I'd do if my kids were playing in it. And, two, who the hell broke all that glass?"

That is a typical middle-class attitude. Jackson used the broken glass as a symbol of unjust social conditions, deprivation, lack of opportunity.

"Oh, Well, I still think Jackson looks healthy enough to sweep up some glass in a pinch. Anyway, they cheered like crazy when he said that.

Mike Royko
Tribune Media Services

But they don't make a peep when Daley says we got to get tough on criminals and have more cops and people get to be responsible for what their kids do. And I think I know why."

Obviously, because Jackson is a stirring orator and Daley isn't.

"No, I think it's because they don't like that kind of talk at a Democratic Convention. They can pretend that they're getting to be more — what do they call it, moderate? — but down deep they think every street mug is just a guy who needs a federal grant and a career counselor and he'll start writing great poetry and go around doing readings at college campuses. And they just yawned when Daley talked about drugs."

That's because everybody already agrees that drugs are a menace.

"Yeah, and everybody already agrees that kids shouldn't play in broken glass, but they went gaga over that. Besides, not everybody agrees with Daley about drugs. I don't."

You don't?

"Nah, I don't like all this talk about getting rid of crack and throwing the dealers in jail."

I am stunned. You approve of drug use?

"I didn't say I approve of it. I just think that it ought to be my choice if I wanna use crack."

Your choice?

"That's right. This is my body, right? I know it ain't much of a body anymore, but it's the only one I got, so I'm stuck with it. So why can't I do what I wanna do with my own body? If I want to stick a needle into the arm of my body and shoot in a little of that joy juice, that ought to be my business, not some politician's. Why should the mayor or some cops or anybody else tell me what I do with my body? That's a real invasion of my privacy and my dignity and all that other stuff."

Are you saying that drugs should be legal? Do you want this country to become a nation of drug users?

"No, I'm just saying that it ought to be my choice. If you don't want to shoot up with crack, that's your choice. If I want to shoot up or take a few puffs on some marijuana, that ought to be my choice."

Yes, but drugs are not legal.

"I know that, and it don't seem right that the busybody government makes something illegal that ought to be a personal decision. It's like the laws that say a saloon can't open until noon on Sunday. How come I got to wait until noon to go have a drink? What if I feel like a drink at 10 o'clock? Shouldn't that be my choice, huh?"

We were talking about drugs.
"No, we was talking about how rude those delegates were to Daley. But now that I think about it, maybe they were being polite."

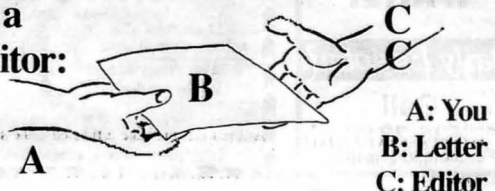

By ignoring him?

"Yeah, they could have booted him off the stage."

For being a law-and-order guy?

"No, for not being a pro-choice guy like me."

credit report. Sen. Paul Simon (D-Makanda), said the rule would have blocked thousands of students from qualifying for loans. "Most of the students subject to the credit check rule have low incomes and poor or inadequate credit histories," he said. "The added paperwork and high error rate in the credit check process would have slowed the loan application process for all students." Simon said he believes there is a better approach to remedy loan defaults by students.

"A better approach is more vigorous use of an existing law that allows guarantee agencies or the Education Department to garnish up to 10 percent of student's wages if he or she defaults on a loan," he said.

"To believe that we can save money by denying people the chance to go to college is the most shortsighted policy I can imagine," said Simon.

Robert Shireman, education advisor to Simon, said this is a major piece of legislation that will affect all of the major banking centers.

"This program was opposed by the major banks but will still go into effect after it is signed by President Bush this year," he said.

Craig Addison, First National Bank education loan officer, said the new program seems like it will breed default.

"We are supposed to run credit checks to stop those students who have a history of default from getting loans," he said.

The program is counter-productive, Addison said.

"If this goes into effect students who are deep in debt will be able to get loans and then drop out of school and keep the money to pay bills outside of school," he said.

Jesse Estrada, a senior in international trade, said the legislation is necessary.

"Students with low incomes and poor credit are going to need loans to finance college," he said. "How else will they be able to get out of that situation?"

"Education is an investment," he said. "With any investment there is always risk. But can we risk not educating students just because of low income or poor credit?"

Lynn Scott, SIUC graduate student, said the program is definitely positive for students.

"Credit checks are necessary because loan default means that in the end other people have to pay for the person who defaulted," she said. "But if Paul Simon can get the Education Department to garnish those students wages who default then I would agree with the program completely."

purity vitritine, 98 to 99 percent, Tempelmeyer said.

Tempelmeyer said it would be eight to 10 years before the research could be completed and implemented on a large scale.

The funding for this project is provided by the state.

"The total amount of effort that we have expended in two years is about $900,000, that takes us through the end of the year," Tempelmeyer said.

Honaker said the funding runs out in November. The faculty members involved are continuing on their own trying to get strong data. If they come up with some good results, the funding may be renewed, he said.

"We hope to be able to pick up additional funding in the future," Honaker said.

Tempelmeyer said the funding from the state will be discontinued this year and with the state economy, it is doubtful the funding will be renewed.

Previously, the industrial partners have been willing to fund the project as long as the state is funding it, Tempelmeyer said.

"If the state doesn't fund, it is highly likely that we will lose some of our industrial partners," he said.

The idea of dividing the coal into three separate components is a revolutionary concept that is not generally accepted, Honaker said.

"If you can get people to accept this, you can bring a lot of jobs to Illinois or any other coal producing state," he said.

The college also is working on a project to clump fine coal together so it can be transported without dust blowing everywhere.

It is very costly to dispose of the fine coal, and no places to dispose of it are available, Honaker said.

These fine particles are usually used for roads, cement and gravel, he said.

Bradley Paul, assistant professor of mining engineering, is researching ways to convert the fine particles into very strong pellets which would be easier to transport.

After the fine coal is made into pellets, it could be used in the coal cleaning process, such as the desulphurization or in the scrubbing process, Honaker said.

Spivey said this would be viable for some market areas.

Both of these research projects could help the coal industry, he said.

The Illinois Coal Association is part of all the coal research going on in the state, in both universities and other areas, he said.

Bearded bandit shoots two, kills self at Federal Building

CHICAGO (UPI) — The alleged "bearded bank robber" charged in a series of bank robberies grabbed a gun and opened fire on federal marshals as he was being escorted from federal court house Monday, killing one marshal and a security officer before turning the weapon on himself.

The shootings occurred on the parking ramp leading from the lower level of the Dirksen Federal Building in downtown Chicago, where Jeffrey Erickson was on trial. Initial reports said Erickson was pronounced dead at the scene.

A spokesman at Northwestern Memorial Hospital reported one federal marshal and a federal building security officer were pronounced dead on arrival at the emergency room.

The shootings reportedly occurred as Erickson was being escorted from the court building back to the Metropolitan Correctional Facility, where he was being held during his federal bank-robbery trial.

Erickson was charged in a series of suburban bank heists. He also was awaiting trial on state charges in the wounding of a police officer in the Chicago suburb of Palatine who stopped Erickson's car for a traffic violation.

Initial reports said Erickson somehow managed to obtain a weapon as he was being escorted out the lower parking level of the federal building after Monday's session of his trial.

Erickson reportedly opened fire on the marshals escorting him before he turned the weapon himself.

His wife, Jill — an alleged accomplice in the bank robberies — killed herself last Dec 16 after a 10-mile car chase that began in a suburban shopping center parking lot where the couple had been under observation by FBI agents.

Auditor criticizes agencies for expensive renovation

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — Illinois Auditor General Don Tempelman blasted three state agencies Monday for a controversial renovation of a Chicago mental hospital, a project that may cost twice as much and take twice as long to complete as expected.

The auditor general criticized the Capital Development Board, the Department of Mental Health and the Department of Central Management Services for their decision to lease the shuttered St. Anne's Hospital on Chicago's west side.

The state leased the former hospital in 1989 as a temporary replacement for the Illinois State Psychiatric Institute, which was closed for safety upgrades and renovations.

The Capital Development Board estimated the state would save $2.9 million if it moved the ISPI's patients rather than trying to renovate the building in stages.

At the time, the state estimated the St. Anne's lease would cost $7.4 million over 2 1/2 years, including $800,000 to renovate the former hospital for use as a mental health center.

However, state officials found they had to make millions of dollars of repairs to make St. Anne's comply with health and safety codes, renovations the state mistakenly thought the hospital's owner had to pay.

As of June 30, the ISPI renovation, the move and subsequent St. Anne's repairs are expected to cost at least $16 million over 4 1/2 years, the audit said.

"Inadequate project planning, management and coordination, and a lease that did not protect the state's interests, contributed to the cost overruns and time delays," the report said.

The audit report said the CDB did not consider relocation costs when it recommended vacating the psychiatric institute. It also contends CMS signed a vague lease for the St. Anne's property that forced the state to pay for asbestos abatement and numerous code improvements at the former hospital.

Clinton campaign trip totes health care plan

COLUMBUS, Ohio (UPI) — Democratic presidential candidate Bill Clinton brought his plan for national health care reform to Ohio's capital city Monday as part of a five-day, 1,000-mile bus tour from New York to St. Louis.

A crowd estimated at between 8,000 and 10,000 jammed into the downtown Nationwide Plaza to hear the Arkansas governor tell them that the country must develop a national health care plan.

"Every one of you has an interest in a solution to this health care crisis," said Clinton. "Whether you have health insurance or not; whether you work for an insurance company, or a small business or in a factory."

"Whatever you do, if this country does not control health care costs, and provide a basic package of health care to everyone, we cannot solve our other problems."

Clinton is being accompanied on the bus tour by his wife Hillary and by vice presidential nominee Albert Gore and his wife Tipper. They stopped in the central Ohio farming community of Utica Sunday night and were to visit Wilmington, Ohio, before heading for Louisville, Ky., later in the day.

"I want to bring manufacturing back in this country. But how can we do it when every American-made car has $700 in health care costs over and above our foreign competitors," said Clinton. "And the same is true in all manufacturing."

Clinton introduced Maria Costas, who he said was a former leader in the Ross Perot for president campaign. He described her story as "an example of the kind of cruel, crazy-quilt system of health care we've got in this country today."

"Maria Costas is a person who went to the campaign looking for change," said Clinton, explaining that she is a single mother of seven children, one of them seriously ill with big health care bills.

"In order to get any help from the government, she had to quit a $50,000 a year job supporting her seven children," said Clinton. "That's the system she's rebelling against. It's wrong and you and I have to change it."

"We're spending money on health care," said Clinton, "but we're spending it wrongly. We have a plan to cut out the waste in the American health care system and make the people healthier again."

Clinton said his plan would include:

—Requiring real reform in health insurance.

—Having a simple system of comprehensive care that is basic to the coverage of every American.

—Reducing government regulation of the health care industry by putting people into broad-based groups.

—Putting health clinics where the people are to make it possible for them to see doctors and nurses.

—Challenging the American people to take more responsibility for their own health.

Clinton noted that 30 percent of the average physician's expenses goes toward completing paperwork.

"The only way to get it down is the way every other nation has done it," added Clinton. "Not for the government to take over health care, but for the government to reduce the administrative costs and organize a financial system."

"You can't leave all these people out here alone. We've got to be in this together again. We've got to stop the idea, 'I'll take care of me, you take care of you, and we don't care what happens.' It's going to bankrupt us all."

Teacher arrested for pornography at Exeter Prep

EXETER, N.H. (UPI) — Administrators held an emergency meeting at the prestigious Phillips Exeter Academy Monday to discuss the arrest and firing of a faculty member charged with collecting hundreds of "extremely graphic" tapes and magazines of child pornography.

At least one former student at the school appears in one of the 800 tapes, but it was not immediately clear whether the scenes were pornographic, a school spokesman said.

Police raided Larry Bateman's apartment last Thursday and seized video cameras, VCRs, editing equipment, computers, several cases of blank tapes and written logs and records in addition to the finished tapes and magazines.

Most of the tapes were pornographic and investigators said it appeared from the evidence that Bateman allegedly had been making and collecting the tapes for about 10 years.

"A document seized by the police shows a former student is in a tape," said school spokesman David Johnson, adding police were still trying to determine whether the cassette was among the 650 considered pornographic.

School Principal Kendra O'Donnell sent a letter to all students, parents, alumni and faculty informing them of the case. She also set up a telephone "helpline" that worried parents and students may call "if any issues are raised as a result of Mr. Bateman's arrest," Johnson said.

Monday's closed-door meeting, attended by a dozen administrators and faculty members, was called to inform school personnel about the details of the case so they can "communicate as soon as possible, and directly and quickly, with the school family," Johnson said.

"And if anybody has any more information, that would certainly be welcome in this ongoing investigation," the spokesman said.

Bateman, appointed to the faculty 12 years ago, was charged with five counts of possessing child pornography.

Court team reveals evidence of excessive force by police

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A searing report released Monday on the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department revealed "disturbing evidence" of excessive force and a failure to discipline rogue officers but refused to pin the blame on the sheriff.

The report, prepared by retired Superior Court Judge James Kolts and a team of attorneys, concluded that while Sheriff Sherman Block has made attempts to reform the department, the LASD "has not reformed itself with adequate thoroughness and speed."

"There is disturbing evidence of excessive force and lax discipline in that department," Kolts told reporters at a news conference.

Cases highlighted in the report were culled from personnel files and court records. Attorney Merrick Bobb, who headed up much of the investigations, said most of the excessive force was used against minorities.

The report backs up similar findings released last month by Amnesty International, which reported on both the Sheriff's Department's and the Los Angeles Police Department's use of force.

The Kolts report also mirrors conclusions of the Christopher Commission Report released last year on the Police Department.

The Christopher Commission report — which Bobb also worked on — was borne of the controversial beating of black motorist Rodney King by four white officers. The report found evidence of racism and excessive use of force in the department, and held former Police Chief Daryl Gates responsible for abuses.

But Kolts and county Supervisor Ed Edelman on Monday sought to underplay Block's role in the findings in the Sheriff's Department, saying the sheriff had acted on his own to investigate abuses and had put into place reform within the past two years.

Block, who is serving his third term as sheriff over the 8,000 deputies in the department, was in Sacramento Monday and declined to comment on the report.

jurisdiction in 87 incorporated cities and several incorporated areas, and serves a population of approximately 9 million.

"As manager, as head of the department, I suppose (Block) has to accept some responsibility," Kolts said. "But this is something that's gone on for a number of years."

Nonetheless, Kolts said: "Our respect for the Los Angeles Sheriff's Department has been tempered by a sobering conclusion that large numbers of incidents of unnecessary force situations have occurred and are still occurring in Los Angeles County."

"The department has had too many officers who have resorted too quickly to violence and excessive force, and these officers have not been properly disciplined."

In addition to excessive use of force and lack of discipline, the Kolts study found deputies often intimidated citizens who attempt to file complaints about their treatment. Furthermore, Bobb said the District Attorney's Office has failed to aggressively prosecute most of the deputies in cases brought before the courts.

District Attorney Ira Reiner refused to comment on the findings.

The Association for Los Angeles Deputy Sheriffs denounced Kolts' report, saying it failed to consider many recommendations that are already established policies of the Department. The association contended recommendations by Kolts are "too costly."

"The report goes on to outline administrative and patrol practices to establish a staff-intensive 'champagne and caviar department,'" the association said in a written statement. "Unfortunately, Los Angeles County has a 'beer and peanuts' budget that precludes such costly changes in departmental procedures."

The county Board of Supervisors requested Kolts to do the study last December after they questioned LASD's growing costs in court settlements.

Controversial plane crashes in Potomac River, kills seven

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A test model of a controversial military aircraft that takes off like a helicopter and flies like a conventional plane crashed Monday in the Potomac River near Quantico, Va., apparently killing all seven people aboard, the Marine Corps said.

The crash of the tilt-rotor V-22 Osprey, a test model of the experimental aircraft, occurred as it was making the critical transition from horizontal to helicopter flight in preparation for a landing at the Marine base at Quantico, Marine spokesman Capt. Steve Manuel said.

A group of about 30 to 50 people at the sprawling base witnessed the crash, according to Marine Maj. Barry N. Moore, who said authorities fear that all seven people died.

"You know, we thought we saw a flash, or bright light, just before it lost power," Moore said.

The aircraft immediately sank in 27 feet of water, about a half-mile off the Virginia shore. The victims were civilians and military personnel, but Moore had no breakdown.

Officials were withholding the identities of the victims pending notification of next of kin.

Rescue teams were looking for the victims at 9 p.m. EDT when they discontinued their search due to darkness. The search was to resume early Tuesday.

Civilian rescue teams from Dumfries, Va., and Charles County, Md., as well as a Marine team from the base and a unit from the Patuxent River Naval Air Station in Maryland conducted the search. The waters of the Potomac are in Maryland.

Manuel said the crash occurred as the aircraft was arriving at Quantico from Eglin Air Force Base in Florida for further test flights.

The Marines want 500 of the V-22s to replace their aging fleet of CH46 Seahawk helicopters. The new aircraft would permit the Marines to reinforce amphibious landings rapidly by plucking up to 24 battle-loaded troops off assault ship decks and deploying them ashore within minutes.

The V-22 Osprey has become an issue in the 1992 presidential election. It has also been the subject of a long-running argument between Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, who says it is too expensive to produce, and powerful forces in Congress, who want the V-22 to be built. Production of the aircraft would cost an estimated $50 billion over the next decade.

Just weeks ago, Cheney, who had been refusing to spend the money which Congress has appropriated for the V-22, proposed a compromise. In a letter to Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine, Cheney said he would spend $1.5 billion to continue development of the aircraft in the current fiscal year.

Soul-switching kiss tries husband's love

By Ronn Byrd
Entertainment Writer

Movie Review

"Prelude To A Kiss" explores the strangest of honeymoon nightmares. A young bride suddenly exchanges bodies with a 60-year-old man on the day of the wedding.

Alec Baldwin and Meg Ryan play Peter and Rita, a young couple that meet and fall in love in Chicago. Rita is a wild and free spirit, a bartender and struggling artist. Baldwin's character makes his living publishing medical journals.

How these two meet and eventually fall in love is excellently portrayed, probably the most realistically done in film. Baldwin, who first played the part on the Broadway run of "Prelude," does a wonderful job of portraying the shy and nervous character of Peter. Ryan, who plays a character with such strange eccentricities as Rita's (she never sleeps, never wants to have children, worries about the state of the world, drinks non-stop) has no problem bringing her to life.

Peter meeting Rita's parents is definitely a high point in the film. If Rita is strange, her parents are doubly so. Her mother out-drinks her daughter and her father has an obsession with bulldog tattoos.

The movie definitely takes a strange turn when Baldwin and Ryan decide to get married. After the vows are said and the reception begins, Ryan meets Sydney Walker, an old man who has stopped by the wedding. He offers to kiss the bride, and that's when the soul-switching somehow takes place.

It would be easy to dismiss as the same old body switching routine, along with the horrible likes of "18 Again" and "Like Father Like Son." But instead what followed was an interesting character study that takes a hard look at life and how well people really know one another.

Baldwin discovers almost instantly that something has changed with his new bride. All her bizarre characteristics have completely vanished. Ryan does a fantastic job of turning her character around. She prefers to hang around older folks, worries constantly about how much cholesterol she's taking in, refuses to drink and actually talks like the old man.

Baldwin begins to be more and more troubled, until a very touching scene when he confronts Rita/Sydney with the fact that she is not who she says.

Academy Award winner Kathy Bates plays the part of Sydney's daughter and is unfortunately underused here. When Baldwin finally meets up with Rita in the old man's body, Bates gives an emotional account of the fact that Sydney has lung cancer and has less than a year to live.

Baldwin is faced with a dilemma. He loves Rita, but as he tells her in her man form, "I'm not equipped to deal with this. I'm not attracted to you!"

What is touching is to see Peter and Rita attempt to maintain their relationship. Not only is there the age difference, but Peter is thought to be a homosexual, putting additional strains on them. The implied message of the film is that love overcomes all, as Peter eventually does.

Sydney delivers an energetic performance as Rita, copying her mannerisms and weirdness with comic results. Yes, it's still funny to hear a grandfather say something is "bitchin'."

"Prelude To A Kiss" delivers light-hearted comedy, tender moments and a heartfelt exploration of how we can love, regardless of how we look.

Baker strikes deal: $10 billion in loans to aid Palestine, Israel refugee influx JERUSALEM (UPI) — U.S. Secretary of State James Baker appeared to have struck a deal Monday with Israelis and Palestinians allowing Washington to guarantee $10 billion in loans to Israel without compromising Arab demands for a halt in Jewish settlement.

During a hectic day somewhat marred by violence, Baker met with Palestinian officials in the morning and with Israeli officials several times during the afternoon.

After each meeting the veteran Texas dealmaker seemed closer to pulling another one out of his hat.

In the morning, a senior Israeli official speaking under conditions of anonymity told reporters that Israel needs the loan guarantees so it can borrow money to support the overwhelming influx of immigrants from the former Soviet Union.

This represented a marked change in the former Israeli government's policy, which was to spend the money on settlements in the occupied territories. Arabs — most clearly the Palestinians who watched helplessly as Jewish settlers gobbled up their promised land — demanded that Jerusalem freeze settlements as a condition to progress in the Middle East peace talks.

"We are introducing to the Israeli people a new order of priorities," the official said.

Palestinian spokeswoman Hanan Ashrawi said after participating in a meeting with Baker that Palestinians might be willing to relent on the issue of loan guarantees providing the United States received a firm commitment from Israel that the money would not be used to build settlements in the West Bank or Gaza Strip.

"If the United States ensures that its funds are not used in settlement activity, and if it has the ability to monitor and if it has availability of records which it never had before with Israel (Washington) would at least preserve its own credibility and integrity," Ashrawi said.

Baker carried that theme following an afternoon meeting with Israeli Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin when he said the Bush administration would be "strongly supportive" of

"Bush and the U.S. attach a very high priority to the absorption of immigrants to Israel."

—James Baker

Israel's efforts to accommodate immigrants from the former Soviet Union.

"We just had a full discussion with our colleagues about the reordering of national priorities that the new government is undertaking, about the reaffirmation and revitalization of the economy of Israel, about the importance of providing assistance to absorb immigrants to Israel — something the United States is strongly supportive of in principle," Baker said.

"And I hope and believe that I've made it clear to the prime minister and his colleagues that President Bush and this administration in the United States attach a very high priority to the absorption of immigrants to Israel."

Then in the evening, as the Bush administration has done in similar circumstances, a senior member of the delegation briefed reporters on the condition that a name is not used.

The official, who cautioned that "nothing had been finalized," said the priorities of the Rabin government were so different from those of the Shamir government that it appeared the President Bush could, without fear of jeopardizing the sensitive peace talks, recommend to the U.S. Congress that it approve the loan guarantees.

"We had to know our assistance was not going to promote activities which we felt were not helpful and more importantly were activities we did not favor," the official said.

"So you've got an entirely different context in which to address this issue because you've got an Israeli government that for its own purposes and for its own reasons has established a very different set of priorities."

The only blemishes on the day came when a hard-line right-wing Israeli attempted to disrupt Ashrawi's news conference by forcing his way in with a machine gun. No shots were fired and authorities quickly spirited the man away.

And police bomb squads closed off streets around the hotel in which Baker was staying when a suspicious black valise was abandoned near the main entrance. The bag was cautiously opened by personnel wearing heavy bomb suits that proved to contain nothing more than clothing and books.

Movies battle it out for first while Batman ratings drop

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Special-effects sequel "Honey, I Blew up the Kid" posted a narrow victory over "A League of Their Own" in its opening weekend with $11 million at 2,311 screens during the Friday-through-Sunday weekend, according to industry sources Sunday.

The Disney release, starring Rick Moranis as a wacky scientist with a 60-foot baby boy, had been expected to dominate the weekend, but "League" was a strong second with $9.5 million at 2,084 screens in its third weekend.

The original "Honey, I Shrunk the Kids" was a sleeper hit in the summer of 1989, topping the $100 million benchmark. The sequel will probably perform well for several weeks and reach above $50 million.

Columbia's "A League of Their Own" has now topped $54 million in 19 days, and should eventually reach $100 million. The film, starring Geena Davis and Madonna as the stars of a women's baseball team during World War II, has attracted strong viewership among adult audiences.

Two other movies opened during the weekend with poor results. Disney's "A Stranger Among Us," starring Melanie Griffith as a detective investigating a murder in the New York Hasidic community, took in a mild $2.8 million at 679 screens.

20th Century-Fox's comedy-drama "Man Trouble" debuted with a meager $2 million at 1,007 screens, despite the star power of Jack Nicholson and Ellen Barkin.

"Stranger" was ninth and "Man Trouble" was 12th in the weekend box office tally.

Paramount's Eddie Murphy comedy "Boomerang" kept up a decent performance in third place with $6.7 million at 2,010 screens and has now taken more than $47 million in its first three weeks.

The second weekend of TriStar's futuristic action film "Universal Soldier" lost nearly half of its audience from its opening and pulled in $5.5 million at 1,761 screens. That gave it a 10-day total of $20 million.

Disney's nun comedy "Sister Act" was close in fifth with $5.1 million at 1,941 screens to push its nine-week total to nearly $98 million. The comedy has turned out to be the sleeper hit of the summer and should wind up with close to $120 million.

Fox's third weekend of thriller "Unlawful Entry" and Warner Bros.' fifth weekend of "Batman Returns" were tied for sixth at about $4.2 million at 1,438 and 2,052 screens, respectively. That gave "Unlawful Entry" a gross of more than $37 million, while the bat sequel topped $145 million, the highest total of any movie this year.

"Batman Returns" has been losing big chunks of its audience since it opened with a record-setting $47 million in its first four days.

NOTICE FROM THE FINANCIAL AID OFFICE ALL UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS MUST COMPLY WITH THE FOLLOWING SATISFACTORY PROGRESS POLICY IN ORDER TO RECEIVE FINANCIAL ASSISTANCE.

SATISFACTORY PROGRESS POLICY FOR UNDERGRADUATE STUDENTS AT SOUTHERN ILLINOIS UNIVERSITY AT CARBONDALE

The Federal Government, the States, and Southern Illinois University at Carbondale have invested large sums of money in order to provide financially needy students the opportunity to obtain a post-secondary education. Financial aid recipients are responsible for using the funds provided in an acceptable manner. Therefore, a student who wishes to benefit from the receipt of financial aid funds must maintain "satisfactory progress" as defined in this policy.

AUTHORITY

The Higher Education Act of 1965 as amended and the final regulations set forth by the Department of Education in 34 CFR 668 require that institutions of higher education establish reasonable standards of "satisfactory progress". A student who does not meet these standards is not eligible to receive federally funded financial aid. Southern Illinois University at Carbondale shall make these standards applicable to all state and institutional aid programs for the purpose of maintaining a consistent and reasonable financial aid policy.

SATISFACTORY PROGRESS STANDARDS

Southern Illinois University at Carbondale requires that a student be making "satisfactory progress" toward a degree if he or she wishes to receive financial aid funds. A student is making "satisfactory progress" toward a degree if successfully meeting two basic academic standards. First, a student must complete a reasonable number of credit hours toward a degree each academic year. Second, a student must maintain a scholastic standing, derived from grades, that allows for continued enrollment at the University under current academic guidelines. The following parameters will be used to define these two basic academic standards:

1) Maximum time to graduate: A full-time, eligible student is expected to complete a degree in six academic years (12 semesters). A half-time, eligible student is expected to complete a degree in twelve academic years (24 semesters). In order to be sure that a student is progressing toward that goal, each student's progress will be measured annually after Spring Semester to determine the progress made for the last academic year of attendance. Each term of at least half-time attendance shall be included in the annual review whether or not the student received financial aid for the term. The following chart will serve as a model to determine if each student is meeting this requirement of "satisfactory progress".

MODEL FOR FULL-TIME ATTENDANCE

SIUC Academic Terms Completed	SIUC Cumulative Hours Passed
3	24
4	32
5	42
6	52
7	62
8	72
9	84
10	96
11	108
12	120

2) Grades: A student must remain in compliance with the University's policy concerning scholastic standing, grades, and grade point average as defined under the topic "Grading, Scholastic Regulations, and Credit" in the current Undergraduate Catalog Bulletin. A student who is on Scholastic Suspension is not maintaining "satisfactory progress". A student who is scholastically suspended may be readmitted under Scholastic Probation status by the appropriate academic dean and remain eligible for financial aid. Each student's scholastic standing will be monitored after each semester or term of attendance.

A student who does not meet both of the standards set forth above and who cannot show "mitigating circumstances" is not maintaining "satisfactory progress" toward a degree and is no longer eligible to receive financial aid funds. (See Appeals)

Nothing in this policy shall be construed as a reduction of external requirements by other federal, state, public, or private agencies when they award or control financial aid. Examples of such agencies are: Veterans Administration, Vocational Rehabilitation, and the NCAA.

DEFINITIONS

Credit hours completed shall be defined as the total number of academic credit hours for which a student receives any grade other than a failing grade. Incompletes, withdrawals, audits, and remedial courses which do not count toward a degree shall not be considered as credit hours completed. Credit hours received for repeated courses shall be counted only once.

Eligible students shall be defined as those students who are admitted to the University in a degree-seeking classification. All other students are not eligible for financial aid.

Full-time attendance for undergraduates shall be defined as enrollment in twelve (12) hours or more per semester.

Half-time attendance for undergraduates shall be defined as enrollment in six (6) or more hours, but less than twelve (12) hours per semester.

Undergraduate shall be defined as a student who is a freshman, sophomore, junior, senior or a senior with a bachelor's degree seeking a second bachelor's.

NOTIFICATION OF TERMINATION

It shall be the responsibility of the Financial Aid Office to publish this policy and to notify by letter any student who is no longer eligible to receive financial aid funds. Said notice shall be addressed to the student's most current permanent address on file with the University. IT SHALL BE THE RESPONSIBILITY OF THE STUDENT TO INFORM THE UNIVERSITY OF A CORRECT PERMANENT ADDRESS AT ALL TIMES.

REINSTATEMENT

Students will have their eligibility to receive financial aid reinstated when they have reached the level of satisfactory progress required of them by this policy. They may achieve this status by the completion of incomplete grades, correction of incorrect grades, and by earning sufficiently more than the required number of completed hours for a term or terms of attendance without the benefit of financial aid.

APPEALS

Any student who cannot meet the grade requirement, or the cumulative credit hours completion requirement shall have an opportunity to appeal in writing to explain "mitigating circumstances". The appeal should be sent to the Financial Aid Office within 15 days of the notice of termination. The Financial Aid Office will review the "mitigating circumstances" documented in the appeal and provide a written decision within 20 days after receipt of the appeal.

Faldo nabs Open title; hailed as premier golfer

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (UPI) — It might not have been the procession to victory that had been widely predicted going into the final round, but Nick Faldo's success in the $1.83 million British Open confirmed his status as the world's best and arguably the greatest British golfer of all time.

Prior to Sunday's win at the Muirfield links course, Faldo had only tasted success twice since the beginning of 1991 — and both times it was at the Irish Open. But if players are judged by their ability to perform when it really counts, the 35-year-old Briton is now in a class of his own.

He has competed in 20 successive majors since the 1987 British Open, winning three Opens and back-to-back Masters titles in 1989 and 1990. He also lost an 18-hole playoff to Curtis Strange in the 1988 U.S. Open at Brookline and he has finished in the top 10 no less than 15 times in a total of 41 major appearances.

The victory at Muirfield made Faldo the first Briton since Henry Cotton in 1948 to win three Opens, and the ultimate target for him must be the outright record of six, set by the immortal Harry Vardon at the turn of the century. Vardon was part of the triumvirate of great British golfers of his time — along with J.H. Taylor and James Braid — whose efforts Faldo is now threatening to surpass.

Cotton was the dominant star of the 1930s and 1940s and Tony Jacklin rose to fame as the first ever British winner of the U.S. Open in 1970, but Faldo has now outstripped both of them in elite competition against ever-improving fields.

NASCAR driver in stable condition after flipping car in Pocono 500

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — NASCAR driver Davey Allison was upgraded to stable condition Monday after undergoing surgery to repair injuries suffered in an accident during which his car flipped several times.

Allison needed surgery to repair his broken right wrist, which also was dislocated and sustained ligament damage. Sunday's accident also left him with a broken right collarbone and two broken bones in his right forearm.

The accident took place on the 149th lap of Sunday's Miller Genuine Draft 500 at Pocono International Raceway, while Allison was running fourth behind Darrell Waltrip. The bump occurred after Allison's car slid in front of Waltrip as they came out of Turn 2.

Waltrip clipped Allison's black Ford from behind on a straightaway on lap 150. Allison's car, which was traveling 155 mph, veered off the track and flipped 11 times across the infield grass. The car was demolished.

"There was nothing I could do," said Waltrip, who went on to win the race. "We were both going for the same spot. I did not conceive of him trying to cut in front of me again. We touched very lightly."

James Connolly wins the triple jump after partying the night before. He is the first modern Olympic champion. Spiridon Louis, a Greek peasant, wins the marathon. His triumph is the pinnacle of an Olympics many thought would never come to pass. Paris (1900)

Greece, claiming its heritage has been plundered, is outraged over the Olympics going to Paris, the home of de Coubertin. The Games are held in conjunction with an exposition and are dreadfully managed. No one is quite sure who is in authority and everyone is blamed for the mess. Six of the 1,066 athletes are women. The Americans dominate, led by Alvin Kraenzlein's four gold medals. Every mark set at Athens four years ago is broken. St. Louis (1904)

Chicago is the intended host, but the Games are turned over to St. Louis so they can be held as part of its Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

Blaise from Murphysboro, has been to the tournament for the past few years and said it is run very professionally and is well organized.

"Tournaments like this help Brian get his jitters out before he goes on to play competitively in high school," Blaise said.

"He gets to meet a lot of kids his age and really enjoys the competition."

Brian Blaise will be attending Murphysboro High School in the fall and is planning to play for the golf team.

Few European nations are willing to make the costly trip. The large and dubious program of events is spread over months. Professionals compete with amateurs. The first-place finisher in the marathon hitches half the race in a truck. Some competitions feature sidishow aboriginal franks. These Olympics are even more mangled than the one in Paris. Londo i (1908)

Rome withdraws as host for financial reasons, bringing an organized but contentious Olympics to London. Nationalism arrives in full force, with disputes between Russia and Finland, England and Ireland. Dorando Pietri of Italy collapses repeatedly near the marathon finish and is carried across the line by officials. The Italian is named the winner but Americans challenge the result. The protest is upheld and John Hayes, a Bloomingdale's clerk in New York, is awarded the gold medal.

Sports Briefs

SOCCER TOURNAMENT will be held July 25 and 26 at the Grand Ave. Playfields. A roster is available at the Recreation Center Information Desk and it must be brought to the mandatory captains' meeting July 17 at 5:30 p.m. in the Alumni Lounge. Call 453-1273 for details.

EQUIPMENT TRAINING is available at the Recreation Center. Lessons are Monday through Friday from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Registration is required at the Recreation Center Information Desk by 9 a.m. on Friday prior to the lesson. Call 536-2531 for details.

BRIEF'S POLICY — This deadline for Sports Briefs is noon two days before publication. The brief should be typewritten, and must include time, date, place and sponsor of the event — and the name and number of the person submitting the item. Briefs should be delivered or mailed to the Daily Egyptian Sports Desk, Communications Building, Room 1247. A brief will be published once and only as space allows.

Chioccioli wins 15th stage of Tour de France

ST. ETIENNE, France (UPI) — Tour de France rookie Franco Chioccioli of Italy was the surprise winner of Monday's 15th stage, taking the 121-mile trip from Bourg d'Oisans to St. Etienne.

Chioccioli, 32, broke away from the main pack as it climbed the 3,960-foot Col de la Croix-de-Chaubouret on the outskirts of St. Etienne and held on to win in a time of 4:43:52.

"I knew this could be a good stage for me because there was a climb near the finish," Chioccioli said. "The only problem was that the climb seemed more like 22 kilometers (13 miles) than 12 kilometers (7 miles). I went too early and when I saw there was still 10 kilometers (6 miles) to go to the top, I was worried. But I got a good lead and I was able to hang on."
