7-20-1993

The Daily Egyptian, July 20, 1993

Daily Egyptian Staff

Follow this and additional works at: https://opensiuc.lib.siu.edu/de_July1993
Volume 78, Issue 78

Recommended Citation

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Daily Egyptian 1993 at OpenSIUC. It has been accepted for inclusion in July 1993 by an authorized administrator of OpenSIUC. For more information, please contact opensiuc@lib.siu.edu.
Clinton endorses limited plan despite reservations

By William Ragan
Special Assignment Writer

President Clinton told the Pentagon on Monday that he would allow homosexuals to serve in the military, but only if they serve in a "discretionary" manner. "Don't ask, don't tell," was the policy he outlined.

"This is not a question of whether we permit gay men and lesbians to serve in the military," he said. "The question is how we allow them to serve with pride and without discrimination." He added that his decision is in response to the military's "discretionary" policy on homosexuality.

Clinton's decision is a blow to conservative forces who have been calling for a complete ban on gay service in the military.

"We are not going to allow discrimination in any form," Clinton said. "We will ensure that gay military personnel are treated with the same respect as all other military personnel." He added that the military will have to develop a new policy to accommodate gay personnel.

Local lawmakers rallying support to bring Super-Max prison to area

By Bill Kugelberg
Politics Writer

Two downstate lawmakers have begun to rally support for the state's new 500 million Super-Max prison to be built in Southern Illinois. The state's 1994 budget includes funding for a new prison in Illinois which will house the most dangerous inmates in the system.

Illinois Rep. Harry von Tunis, D-Carbondale, and Illinois Sen. John Cullerton, D-Chicago, have planned two meetings for the 12 downstate counties to unite the 30th on the Super-Max idea. Phillips said he wants to make sure Southern Illinois is prepared to offer a plan when Springfield is ready to listen.

"I have already contacted many local officials and economic development commissions in the area to see what can be done," he said. "We want to make sure this is a win-win situation for everyone involved."
Soccer teams may be denied entrance into U.S.

Los Angeles Times

World Cup security officials have long identified some fans of England and the Netherlands as the most high profile threats to the peace during next summer’s World Cup.

But those teams, their long tradition of soccer success notwithstanding, are in danger of failing to qualify for the final. Indeed, the most pressing security threat may lie not in Europe, but in the Asian qualifying zone. There, both Iraq and Iran easily won their qualifying groups and are set to begin the final round of qualifying in the middle of October. They join Saudi Arabia, North Korea, South Korea and Japan in a group from which the top two teams qualify.

Last week, the U.S. State Department refused to allow Libyan athletes into the United States to compete in the World University Games at Buffalo, N.Y., citing Libya’s link to terrorism as reason to refuse visas to the delegation.

This raises the question of how the State Department might feel about allowing soccer teams from Iraq and Iran into the United States for the World Cup.

Both teams have a good chance to advance. Iraq won Group A with a 6-1-1 record, beating a strong Chinese team. Iran was tied with Syria at the top of Group B, but advanced because of a better goal differential. Iran outscored its opponents, 15-2.

Neither team has been considered a soccer powerhouse. Both countries entered World Cup qualifying for the first time in 1974. Iran qualified for its only World Cup final in 1978, when it was held in Argentina, and Iraq also qualified once, in 1986 at Mexico. Neither team made it out of the first round.

Speculation has been that one of the teams in the U.S. World Cup group—based in Los Angeles—would come from the Asian qualifying group. The thinking has run that North Korea, South Korea or Japan would draw a large fan base and guarantee sellouts in the early rounds, games that are

It’s a hit

Tim Wilson, Carbondale's second baseman for the American Legion Baseball teams, slams a double as Marion catcher Tony Edwards covers the plate. The teams squared off Sunday at the Abe Martin field near the Arena. Carbondale won the game by a score of 13-3 over Marion.

Ex-athlete overcomes ability doubts to be named SIUC sports director

By John Rezanka

Hart was also unsure when in 1966, he was a free agent from SIUC and wondered about his ability to earn a spot as a backup quarterback for the St. Louis Cardinals.

After his ability questioning, Hart ended up spending 18 seasons with the Cardinals and broke all of the team’s passing records.

Hart said the job security of being an athletic director, as

Red Sox remain 2 games back in American League East race

The Hartford Courant

BOSTON—Of the 48 Red Sox victories this season, none was more impressive, considered what they accomplished in defeating the Seattle Mariners, 7-5 Sunday at Fenway Park. Earned their first victory in 36 games this season when trailing going into the eighth inning. Scored three runs in the seventh and

Staff Photo by Shelley Meyers

Golfer swings to 2nd British Open title

Los Angeles Times

SANDWICH, England—It began as a game of Where’s Faldo? but soon turned into a shark hunt, except this time no one was going to catch Greg Norman.

Not with a net. Not with a club. As the ghosts of tournaments past stalked him down the hallowed, as iron man Nick Faldo pursued from one hole back, as the grip got tighter and the thrill drier, Norman drove his head into the Sunday wind and cut a triumphant swath on his way to winning the 122nd British Open title at Royal St. George’s.

Norman’s round of 64 was near to perfect game as can be played in major competition.

Bernhard Langer, Norman’s playing partner, called him “invincible.”

Langer began the day tied with Norman and attempted desperately to keep pace, but after he hit his tee shot out of bounds at 14, leading to a double bogey, Langer knew all was lost.

Norman was so stone-cold focused he didn’t even see Langer’s bad shot.

Norman claimed he did not glance to the leaderboard until the 17th hole.

“I knew I was ahead because there were not a lot of roars behind me,” Norman said.

Faldo, the Englishman, spun his wheels in pursuit, but there were too few cheers in the end. Norman, the Australian, had caught
CROATIAN OPEN BRIDGE DESPITE WAR THREAT — Croatian President Franjo Tudjman reopened a strategic bridge and airport Sunday to the distant rumbles of artillery and U.N. warnings that the moves could provoke another war. The pontoon bridge rejoining Croatia's loser with the Adriatic Sea coast is deemed so economically vital that the Zagreb leadership insisted on opening it despite the risk of sparking force retaliation by the heavily armed Serbs who surround the area.

MEXICAN NAVY SEIZES THIRD MIGRANT SHIP — The Mexican navy seized the last of three ships that had been detained off Mexico's Pacific coast with more than 650 Chinese illegal immigrants aboard and immediately deported the passengers. Mexican Interior Ministry spokesman Jorge Medina warned that the Chinese smuggling problem in the country appears to be getting worse. He said that another ship has been detected off the coast of Mexico and five others have appeared.

ROMANCE, SEX FLOURISH IN ISRAELI MUSIC — The mood of the country is reflected in the themes of Israeli lyrics and music. The favored topics for songs here are not the Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation known as the intifada, not the Arab-Israeli conflict or Israel's past wars, not the army or the peace process. What Israelis are writing about—and selling— is romance and sex. Many music professionals say the trend is to look for escape from the constant grind of war.

CHINESE MIGRANTS RETURNED HOME — The first photoneload of 145 illegal Chinese migrants repatriated from Mexico arrived in southern China Monday, more than three months after they left their homeland on rusty and squallid ships in an abortive attempt to enter the United States. Wei Kunbing, an official from the Foreign Affairs Office of Fujian province in southeastern China, where most of the illegal migrants are from, said in a telephone interview that a second photoneload carrying another 145 Chinese was expected to arrive Monday in the port city of Xiamen. He said he had no information about their condition.

JAPANESE PARTIES NEGOTIATE NEW LEADER — Japan's political parties Monday began negotiations to choose a new prime minister in the wake of Sunday's national elections as voters and politicians sought to adjust to an unfamiliar era of political realignment. After 38 straight years of control by the Liberal Democratic Party, voters opted for change in Sunday's election to fill the 511 seats in the lower house of the national Diet, or parliament.

ENVIRONMENT LAW BLAMED FOR WOOD PRICE — Since November, the cost of 1,000 board feet of lumber has gone from $270 to $506 and is now back down to about $300. What's going on with lumber prices? It depends on who's doing the explaining. The National Association of Home Builders lays much of the blame for the price swings at the feet of environmentalists. Harvests in the Pacific Northwest, a major source of lumber, have been cut drastically because large portions of some federal forests were declared off-limits to protect the northern spotted owl.

WARMING COULD TRIGGER COLD SPELLS — Imagine the polar front in the North Atlantic suddenly dipping down to Spain with absent of arctic expanding in behind to form a deep freeze. These images are conjured by unexpected evidence from ice samples recently dug out of ancient glaciers. It suggests that global warming could, ironically, cause sudden, potentially devastating cold spells.

—from: Daily Egyptian wire services

Newswrap

CROATIAN OPEN BRIDGE DESPITE WAR THREAT — Croatian President Franjo Tudjman reopened a strategic bridge and airport Sunday to the distant rumbles of artillery and U.N. warnings that the moves could provoke another war. The pontoon bridge rejoining Croatia's loser with the Adriatic Sea coast is deemed so economically vital that the Zagreb leadership insisted on opening it despite the risk of sparking force retaliation by the heavily armed Serbs who surround the area.

MEXICAN NAVY SEIZES THIRD MIGRANT SHIP — The Mexican navy seized the last of three ships that had been detained off Mexico's Pacific coast with more than 650 Chinese illegal immigrants aboard and immediately deported the passengers. Mexican Interior Ministry spokesman Jorge Medina warned that the Chinese smuggling problem in the country appears to be getting worse. He said that another ship has been detected off the coast of Mexico and five others have appeared.

ROMANCE, SEX FLOURISH IN ISRAELI MUSIC — The mood of the country is reflected in the themes of Israeli lyrics and music. The favored topics for songs here are not the Palestinian uprising against Israeli occupation known as the intifada, not the Arab-Israeli conflict or Israel's past wars, not the army or the peace process. What Israelis are writing about—and selling— is romance and sex. Many music professionals say the trend is to look for escape from the constant grind of war.

CHINESE MIGRANTS RETURNED HOME — The first photoneload of 145 illegal Chinese migrants repatriated from Mexico arrived in southern China Monday, more than three months after they left their homeland on rusty and squallid ships in an abortive attempt to enter the United States. Wei Kunbing, an official from the Foreign Affairs Office of Fujian province in southeastern China, where most of the illegal migrants are from, said in a telephone interview that a second photoneload carrying another 145 Chinese was expected to arrive Monday in the port city of Xiamen. He said he had no information about their condition.

JAPANESE PARTIES NEGOTIATE NEW LEADER — Japan's political parties Monday began negotiations to choose a new prime minister in the wake of Sunday's national elections as voters and politicians sought to adjust to an unfamiliar era of political realignment. After 38 straight years of control by the Liberal Democratic Party, voters opted for change in Sunday's election to fill the 511 seats in the lower house of the national Diet, or parliament.

ENVIRONMENT LAW BLAMED FOR WOOD PRICE — Since November, the cost of 1,000 board feet of lumber has gone from $270 to $506 and is now back down to about $300. What's going on with lumber prices? It depends on who's doing the explaining. The National Association of Home Builders lays much of the blame for the price swings at the feet of environmentalists. Harvests in the Pacific Northwest, a major source of lumber, have been cut drastically because large portions of some federal forests were declared off-limits to protect the northern spotted owl.

WARMING COULD TRIGGER COLD SPELLS — Imagine the polar front in the North Atlantic suddenly dipping down to Spain with absent of arctic expanding in behind to form a deep freeze. These images are conjured by unexpected evidence from ice samples recently dug out of ancient glaciers. It suggests that global warming could, ironically, cause sudden, potentially devastating cold spells.

—from: Daily Egyptian wire services

Accuracy Desk

If readers spot an error in a news article, they can contact the Daily Egyptian Accuracy Desk at 536-3311, extension 233 or 228.
Hearing date set for bar workers

By Erick J.B. Enriquez
Police Writer

A pretrial hearing Monday morning set the date for motions hearings for the six men charged with the death of SIUC student Jose Waigh.

All six men will appear for motion hearings Aug. 30. Waigh, a 24-year-old freshman from South Holland, died of asphyxiation following a confrontation with Checkers nightclub employees Feb. 5.

Each man is charged with two counts of involuntary manslaughter, aggravated battery in a public place, battery and reckless conduct.

Edmund C. Bart, 22, from Aurora; Steven Crawford, 21, a senior in construction technology from Tampico; Charles Hicks, 22, a senior in business from Jacksonville, Fla.; Jeffrey Judd, 23, a senior in civil engineering from Creal Springs; Martin Todd Lewis, 24; a senior in political science from Benton; and Richard Wojcik, 23, a junior in administration of justice, are charged with the counts.

While a jury trial already has been set for Edmund C. Bart, the trial dates for the other five men have not been set. Both Crawford and Hicks have waived jury trials and neither has a bench trial. No bench or jury trial has been set for Wojcik, Judd or Lewis.

Wojcik, Judd, Lewis and Crawford all have filed motions to have their charges dismissed and will present their evidence at the next hearing.

Judd has filed a second motion to consolidate his trial with Wojcik's.

In March, a coroner's jury labeled Waigh's death accidental after almost five-areas-a-half hours of testimony, but a grand jury indicted the six a few days later.

Each man pled not guilty to all counts during a court appearance.

Aid to bail out uninsured flood victims

By Sean L. N. Hao
General Assignment Writer

President Bill Clinton's declaration of Jackson County as a federal disaster area should aid several of the area's Riverside communities caught without flood insurance.

According to the Federal Emergency Management Agency, Grand Tower, Gorham and Neenah are communities that have been left without flood insurance.

Bill Ripley, coordinator of the Illinois Emergency Agency in Jackson County, said the declaration opens the door to Federal Disaster Assistance to these communities.

"Bills for pumps, labor, etc., that are accumulating down there will be retained and handed over to FEMA," he said. "FEMA will decide at a later point whether to pay all or a portion of all bills."

Ripley said so far damage in Gorham and Neenah has been limited to farmlands and the basements of 'river side homes but, if there are major problems, other money may become available.

"They may become eligible for low-interest loans or possibly grant money," he said.

Tom Rediakas, coordinator of the Illinois Emergency Agency in Marion, said several Southern Illinois communities have been suspended from the Federal Flood Insurance Program.

"These communities are without flood insurance because they did not adhere to FHIP's construction and zoning regulations or have not submitted the proper paperwork," he said.

"Generally there are underlying factors that are either politically or economically related."

Roo Ford, Gorham's Mayor, said the town has been suspended from the program since 1980. "FEMA said we don't qualify for insurance coverage because, according to their 100-year flood estimates, our levee is 2 feet too short," he said.

Ford said he did not think the town was responsible for raising the levee.

"The Army Corps of Engineers built the levee; if the government says it needs to be raised, I think they should do it," he said.

Ford said town damage is minimal at this point but that crop damage because of seepage has caused many farmers to abandon much of their land.

"This is a farming community; we shouldn't be denied insurance because we live in the lowlands," he said.

See INSURANCE, page 5

Pencil it in!

Daily Egyptian
Back-to-Campus Issue

1993

For more information call:
Daily Egyptian 536-3311

Prepared by: John Parker

Staf 1 Photo by John Parker

Purchase of Baptist Center means changes for housing

By Candace Samolinski
Administration Writer

SIUC's purchase of the Baptist Student Center will bring a change in housing facilities and office space for both students and faculty.

SIUC Administrators and officials from the Illinois Baptist State Association officially closed the sale on July 1 for $1.25 million.

The SIU Board of Trustees had approved the sale of the Baptist Student Center in February.

The center will be split into two parts and will carry two names.

The University offices will operate in what will be called the Union.

NOBODY DOES IT BETTER

NobodigreachestheSouthern Illinois University student market better than the Daily Egyptian.

Though there may be several other Back-to-Campus Editions out there...The Daily Egyptian is the only one you need. Why duplicate your advertising message, when you can reach the market you want to reach with one media buy?

Go with the Daily Egyptian Reserve your space now!

Advertising Deadline:
Wednesday, July 21, 1993 2:00 p.m.

Circulation: 30,000 issues

Sections Available

Section A: The Campus
Information about registrars, financial aid, activities, organizations and services within the Southern Illinois area.

Section B: Entertainment
Upcoming performances, lectures, art exhibits, dining specials, and night life on and off campus.

Section C: Sports and Activities
Organized collegiate teams, club sports, and intramural activities.

For more information call:
Daily Egyptian 536-3311
Unity equals reality for planned college

SOMETIMES WHAT LOOKS IMPOSSIBLE is really possible when there is a strong vision guided by dedication and teamwork.

This was the case for the creation of the new College of Mass Communications and Media Arts. It was only last fall when SIUC chose to eliminate the College of Communications and Fine Arts to satisfy state and University demands for quality and productivity in a time of economic woe.

After five units of the college went to the College of Liberal Arts including speech communication, theater, humanities, mass communications and media arts, it looked as if the four remaining units would be left without a home.

But through the guidance of the Phoenix Committee and many other individuals and groups who fought to preserve the value and retain the importance of a separate entity, SIUC is continuing its excellence in the communications field.

BUT THIS RESOLUTION CAME not without a long-fight in which one of the biggest obstacles was trying to convince administration the importance of a new college and why it should not be absorbed into the College of Liberal Arts.

One group that acted as a tremendous channel of support and drafted the plan for a new college with a more unified focus on the study of communication was the Phoenix Committee. The committee was composed of faculty, staff and students from journalism, radio-television, broadcast services and cinema and photography.

William Elliott, chairman of the Phoenix Committee, said the vast amount of cohesion demonstrated was what made the new college a reality.

"This has been the first time I ever worked with a large group of people who put away parochial self-interests and worked for a larger good. Everybody gave up stuff, which was really hard, and almost everything was always done by consensus."

OTHER GROUPS WHO PULLED together for a new college of communications and continue to offer support were SIUC alumni, who rallied and wrote letters to the SIUC Board of Trustees and President John C. Guyon.

In addition, those within the units of the new college, students who signed petitions, the SIUC Board of Trustees and the Faculty Senate all contributed to make the new college possible.

Benjamin A. Shepherd, vice president for academic affairs and provost, deserves recognition for supporting the new college and realizing the importance of preparing students to move to a multimedia world.

The changes in technology are becoming interdisciplinary and advancing with revolutionary speed that will transform the workplace and how people entertain and interact. A new college of communications is needed to help students prepare to meet these changes.

IN A SENSE, THE TRIUMPH of the new college is really a triumph of the spirit or in this case, many dedicated spirits who believed strongly enough in the importance of communications as a focused unit.

The glory of such an achievement cannot truly belong to one person but to a group of individuals who fought to make their visions come true. The result is a new college that allows SIUC to continue its heritage in the communications field and offers the University an opportunity to serve as a model for the state and the rest of the nation.

Dispute between Italy, U.N. has enormous ramifications

Dispute between Italy, U.N. has enormous ramifications

The upshot is that U.N. headquarters in New York has demanded the recall of the Italian commander, Gen. Bruno Loli, much to the shock and outrage of Italy.

It is now likely that Italian forces, 2,400 strong, will be kept away from the Aalid-controlled area of south Mogadishu and perhaps withdrawn from Somalia altogether.

The German government is already under political pressure to get its troops out of Somalia.

The German government is already under political pressure to get its troops out of Somalia.

The upshot is that U.N. headquarters in New York has demanded the recall of the Italian commander, Gen. Bruno Loli, much to the shock and outrage of Italy.

If the United Nations is to be effective as an instrument of peace enforcement in a world beset with ethnic conflict, it must have authority over the various national contingents wearing its blue berets.

But it must exercise this authority wisely if nation-states, ever jealous of their sovereignty, are to allow their troops to be placed in peril.

Unfortunately, in the bitter dispute that has erupted between Italy and the United Nations, both sides have acted badly.

The U.N. command has allowed what started out as a humanitarian mission to deteriorate into a brutal conflict with a Somali warlord, Mohammed Farah Aaidid, who is now actively calling for the killing of Americans in response to a U.N.-sanctioned U.S. attack on his headquarters that left 57 Somalis dead.

The commander of Italian forces in Mogadishu, whose government dislikes this change of mission, has deployed his troops according to orders from Rome, not from the United Nations.

P R E S S PHOTOGRAPHY

The glory of such an achievement cannot truly belong to one person but to a group of individuals who fought to make their visions come true. The result is a new college that allows SIUC to continue its heritage in the communications field and offers the University an opportunity to serve as a model for the state and the rest of the nation.
SAFETY, from page 1

Health officials claim concerns about pesticides are overrated

By Tracy Moss
General Assignment Writer

The flooding of Illinois farm lands has raised concerns about pesticide contamination, but health officials say sewage is the primary contamination.

James Buit, Regional Supervisor of the Illinois Department of Public Health, said the fish in the flood water are contaminated.

"People should not handle or eat the fish, because the fish could have the water-borne bacteria in it or on it," Buit said.

People should listen for boil orders and water reports from public water suppliers to maintain safe drinking conditions, Buit said.

"If there is a concern of contamination well water, the wells can be inspected by the county health department," he said.

Illinois had reported people who have flooded gardens should not eat the food in the crops to avoid getting sick.

Virginia Scott, administrator of the Joint Chiefs of Staff of Water, said it is best to prevent and educate people about the health hazards of flood water.

She said the Jackson County Health Department is administering tetanus shots for free.

DISASTER, from page 1

payments for temporary housing for up to 18 months for those whose homes are uninhabitable, grants to low-income families, low-interest loans for repair or replacement of homes or loans to cover food and personal loss but "wet and farm property losses," Edgar said he was glad the investigation into enlisted homosexuals' behavior, incidents like the military keeping tabs on license plate numbers at gay bars would probably fail to stop discrimination.

Defence Secretary Les Aspin and the Joint Chiefs of Staff are expected to appear Tuesday before Sen. Sam Nunn's Armed Services Committee and Wednesday before a House subcommittee.

Nunn has announced plans to introduce a bill Tuesday containing a tougher form of "don't ask, don't tell," giving commanders broader leeway than Clinton would allow in allowing investigation into enlisted homosexuals.

"It is possible that after a normal rain a higher concentration of pesticides has contaminated water sources than is now in the flood waters," she said.

These chemicals are designed to breakdown after a while, Muraro continued.

"A lot of farmers were unable to get in the fields and apply chemicals this year because it has been such a wet year," she said.

Muraro said most pesticides are set up with safety factors so that any health risks are due to long time exposure to the chemicals not a short time exposure.

"Several days of exposure to the chemicals is not going to cause long time effects as the water recedes," she said.

Muraro said she has received several calls from people who have heard reports that pesticide run off is causing dangerous possibilities to persons exposed to the flood water and she must say "there is no danger."

"There is contamination from raw sewage is the concern," she said.

Muraro said there may be chemical contamination has grown through the media.

"It just seems that the media has been feeding the media," she said.

Muraro said an example is some diesel that went into flood water in a small town, but was contained by a sandfilter in the small town.

"I received calls the next day from down the river and on the East Coast inquiring about an oil spill in that town," she said.

They said they had seen something on their wire," she continued.

MILITARY, from page 1

major reason he voted for Clinton, and the same reason he was upset by the Clinton.

"I'm a little disappointed," he said. "I expected more from Clinton. He is not the first candidate I followed. I thought that he'd do something for me personally.

"There's very little difference to the current policy," Schundler said. "It is just a House change."

Schundler said although the policy would not allow for White House has reacted quickly and positively toward the floodwater crisis gripping the Midwest.

"I commend the White House and the Federal Emergency Management Agency for their quick response to the pressing needs of Illinois residents who are suffering untold losses and hardships from this catastrophic flooding," Edgar said.

"We are still along way from winning this war with the raging floodwaters, but this announcement is welcome news for the people who already must begin to put their lives back in order."
Hocus Pocus lacks Disney's usual movie magic

Newday

Bette Midler looks more like a dressed-up lab rat than a witch in "Hocus Pocus," and that's about as friendly a portrayal he could have for this misfired Halloween spoof. Every time Midler turns toward the camera, those unmistakable black-lined eyelashes, shellacked upper incisors protruding from her pinch-nose lips, and her general demeanor suggest a(SQLException

But little giggles aren't what Walt Disney Pictures was hoping for when they cast an underwent witch in modern Salem, Mass., to be the summer's surprise family hit, this year's "Sister Act" or "Honey, I Shrank the Kids.

Midler was quoted recently by the New York Times as saying that the Sorcerer's sisters, who were hanged 300 years ago, have been brought back to life in Salem, Massachusetts, and have until dawn to act out their evil desires before the town is turned into a cal before trick-or-treaters. Midler said she was on her way to the set of movies, saying most of them are made by callow young men and that she doesn't want to be the "starving point of view" and that actors aren't being paid.

She may have been talking about this picture, which is actually the youth witches turned into a cat before their execution three centuries ago. After setting all this up, director Kenny Ortega ("Newsies") and writers Mick Garris and Terence Fincher couldn't come up with anything interesting to fill it out. The witches are tamed, they even sing and dance, but they don't really do anything.

And if Midler, Steve Martin and Parker and Najimy were making things work, they were mistaken. What this movie really needed was another Three Stooges.

Movie Review

nothing more than an idea "washed up on for 93 minutes. The director, the Sanderson sisters, who were hanged 300 years ago, have been brought back to life in Salem, Massachusetts, and have until dawn to act out their evil desires before the town is turned into a cal before trick-or-treaters. Midler said she was on her way to the set of movies, saying most of them are made by callow young men and that she doesn't want to be the "starving point of view" and that actors aren't being paid.

She may have been talking about this picture, which is actually the youth witches turned into a cat before their execution three centuries ago. After setting all this up, director Kenny Ortega ("Newsies") and writers Mick Garris and Terence Fincher couldn't come up with anything interesting to fill it out. The witches are tamed, they even sing and dance, but they don't really do anything.

And if Midler, Steve Martin and Parker and Najimy were making things work, they were mistaken. What this movie really needed was another Three Stooges.

PURCHASE, from page 3

Northwest Annex. The other half will continue to house the Baptist Student Center and campus administration.

David Grobe, SIUC director of facilities planning, said the new building, which is still being constructed inside the existing buildings, will include three sections.

"What is now Johnson Hall will be known as section A, or the student services section, located on the first floor. Section B and the dorm located to the north is section C, which will be the student residence hall." Grobe said the Baptist organization will keep section A for awhile but no definite plans have been made as to where they will go.

The Rehabilitation Institute will use the entire first floor of section B. Grobe said 99 second and third floors of section B will be used for one to two years by offices located on the second floor. The Communications Building will continue to undergo renovations being made.

The student center will continue its residence hall on the second and third floors of section C, but only for single students 21 and over.

SIUC is the Baptist Student Center of University housing-residence life, said the change in the typehousing offered reflects a change in the SIUC philosophy, "We think offering housing for graduate students or students 21 and over is a positive move."

Kirk said, "We made this decision because we are committed to changing and improving the campus. We are seeing a lot of older students at SIUC."

Kirk said 52 rooms will be available, but he is not sure how many will house students. The University bought the Baptist Student Center from the Baptist Student Association for $164,000.

"We are currently trying to decide if we will continue to operate this facility and how we should continue. We are also looking into options of not continuing," he said.

Shirley Baldridge, assistant to the supervisor of off-campus housing, said the center housed 180 residents in 90 rooms.

She said, "The rooms were based on double occupancy. We had 180 students and 4 students advisors," she said.

Aside from the residence hall rooms, most of the needs will be handled for off-campus housing arrangements. Grobe said James Tweddy, vice president for administration at SIUC, is still considering the best way to handle them.

One request comes from Fairday Mellado, director of the Youth Music Program sponsored by the SIUC School of Music.

Mellado said the lot, located at the southeast corner of Mill Street and Toren Avenue, for $188,000. The Association will build on a non-profit basis to house the SIUC School of Music.

"We are not in the business of operating a residence hall," Grobe said. "We have found there are ways to move to the Baptist Student Center, but we don't want to build facilities for them." Grobe said he is concerned about moving in the middle of the fall semester," she said. "We already have lots of problems with the winter weather and we have classes six days a week."

Mellado said he understands the problems that come with the Baptist Student Center, but he said, "We are currently looking for a space that would be appropriate to house the School of Music's offices," he said. "Mellado brought up the need for a space where the music would not interfere with other offices." The College of Education's Provost's office will remain on the first floor of section C. Grobe said no plans for the spaces occupied by the Baptist Association and the offices from the Baptist Student Center, which have been vacated.

"There will be a lot of changes in the next two years," he said. "We have not decided who will occupy the spaces freed up by the Baptist Association or the offices from the Communications Building."

INSURANCE, from page 3

Ford said several people have packed and left the town despite the leaver's passing of a recent important amendment.

"The river is about five feet below the levee, if the river overflows, or breaks its dike, the town would be devastated," he said.

Bob Anderson, at the Army Corps of Engineers, who is monitoring the levees in this area would not be cost-effective for the government.

"The levee districts must supply 25 percent of the cost of construction, leaving the state in this area would not be cost-effective for the government.

The Corps of Engineers is trying to find a way to hard to put a good price tag on farmland and property," he said.

Genric Jarret, supervisor for Fountaingvllle township, said Neuner has never participated in the NRP because of the height of the levees. They say the levees need to be higher in order to withstand a flood, so we cannot buy flood insurance, he said.

Lois L. Harson, Grand Tower's executive secretary, said the levee was suspended from the program in 1991 because the FEMA regulations were changed to include more levees in Illinois. We signed a resolution with the agency and the levees were returned to the program. It's a little bit hard to identify a good flood hazard area, she said. "Then we could not conform to the regulations because many houses would have to be built on stilts and trailers would have to be moved." Redickas said the door is still open to individual owners who were suspended because of violations.

"Hocus Pocus" lacks Disney's usual movie magic

Newday

Bette Midler looks more like a dressed-up lab rat than a witch in "Hocus Pocus," and that's about as friendly a portrayal he could have for this misfired Halloween spoof. Every time Midler turns toward the camera, those unmistakable black-lined eyelashes, shellacked upper incisors protruding from her pinch-nose lips, and her general demeanor suggest a

But little giggles aren't what Walt Disney Pictures was hoping for when they cast an underwent witch in modern Salem, Mass., to be the summer's surprise family hit, this year's "Sister Act" or "Honey, I Shrank the Kids.

Midler was quoted recently by the New York Times as saying that the Sanderson sisters, who were hanged 300 years ago, have been brought back to life in Salem, Massachusetts, and have until dawn to act out their evil desires before the town is turned into a cal before trick-or-treaters. Midler said she was on her way to the set of movies, saying most of them are made by callow young men and that she doesn't want to be the "starving point of view" and that actors aren't being paid.

She may have been talking about this picture, which is actually the youth witches turned into a cat before their execution three centuries ago. After setting all this up, director Kenny Ortega ("Newsies") and writers Mick Garris and Terence Fincher couldn't come up with anything interesting to fill it out. The witches are tamed, they even sing and dance, but they don't really do anything.

And if Midler, Steve Martin and Parker and Najimy were making things work, they were mistaken. What this movie really needed was another Three Stooges.
Fox cartoons will not lose violent edge

The Baltimore Sun

HOLLYWOOD—Don't look for parental advisories or cutbacks in violence on kids' TV shows from Fox this fall.

Margaret Loesch, president of children's programming for Fox, fails to see a need. "Frankly, in no-work cartoons, I see nothing that needs that kind of advisory," she says.

"I think that some of the heat-up discussion about violence may not be dealing with the real issues," which she identifies as guns and criminal activity.

Her stance is likely to become the industry's official position, since Fox is far and away the No. 1 network for children in the United States. As Fox goes, so are the rest of the networks expected to go on the issue of cartoon violence and parental warnings. And that means the networks are digging in their heels against any serious reform in children's programming.

In fact, Fox will be bringing considerably more violence to kids' TV in coming months.

Two programs specifically mentioned Wednesday by Loesch were "Spider Man" (an animated show based on the Marvel Comics superhero) and the "Mighty Morphin Power Rangers" (a live-action, science-fiction series). The highlight role for "Mighty Morphin" featured wall-to-wall kung-fu kicks, laser blasts and explosions.

"Mighty Morphin" is scheduled to join Fox's weekday schedule this fall, while "Spider Man" is expected next spring.

Loesch defended cartoon violence by saying there's no compelling evidence that it's harmful to children.

"I've been in this business 23 years. And it's like this wave of interest in cartoon violence has come up," she says.

"In all the years I've been in TV, I've talked to many child psychologists and educators, and there's very little agreement among all these experts about what the impact (of seeing violent acts involving animated characters) is on little children."

In fact, the overwhelming majority of studies—both from mass media scholars and psychologists—do show a causal connection between watching TV violence and acting violently—especially in the case of young children.

The kids' TV reform movement has had some effect on the Fox schedule, though. This fall, Fox will add "Where on Earth Is Carmen Sandiego?"—a cartoon version of the computer game that is also being done as a live-action series on public television.

Loesch says the show was added as a result of the Federal Communication Commission's revised interpretation of the Children's Television Act of 1990, which stipulated that some children's program must be educational.

That revised interpretation largely came about through research and lobbying of the Center for Media Studies in Washington, Jeff Chester and Kathryn Montgomery, co-directors of the center, discovered and made public the fact that TV stations around the country were skirting the act by listing reruns of "The Jetsons" and "Leave It to Beaver" as educational programs. So Congress called the broadcasters on the carpet.

Loesch also says that Fox had been in discussion with Steven Spielberg in hopes of bringing an animated "Jurassic Park" to kids TV. However, Spielberg has decided against doing a cartoon version of the box-office hit with Fox or anyone else.
Flood of '93 continues Des Moines destruction

Newsday

DES MOINES, Iowa—Lawrence Kurschinski, a U.S. Postal Service registered mail clerk, worked four hours of overtime Monday evening.

He went home, ate dinner and then headed to a local convenience store near the National Guard tank truck sent in to relieve this flood-ravaged city.

"I'm working overtime because I know the water's coming," and he never came back," Pat Kurschinski, his wife of 42 years, said Wednesday. "He had a heart attack and they called me from the hospital. He was basically dead on arrival."

Kurschinski, 61, is not a victim of what local residents are calling "The Flood of '93."

He was, however, carrying two one-ton jugs and two cases of canned water when he was stricken. The story of Lawrence Kurschinski's last hours, and the ongoing story of his family's struggle to get through a wake and funeral, and return to some semblance of normality, are symbolic of the struggle of Des Moines.

Jim Hamerlinck

Most area homes are not under water — less than 10 percent of the area where the crest of the flood waters have been everlast, or had serious flooding.

But almost all of the city's water system collapsed when the Raccoon River jumped a levee and consumed the municipal water filtration system.

The city was left without drinking water, washing water or even water in flush toilets.

"We're all here with no plumbing, smellily because we haven't showered, but we'll get through," Kurschinski's son, Doug, 31, a Chicago business executive, said.

Doug, his mother and four sisters sat in the nest-as-a-pin living room Wednesday morning planning the funeral and remembrance.

"It's funny because my mom lost her in the last big flood to hit Des Moines," said daughter Andrea. "She's been in a cruise ship packages for a travel agency.

"It was in 1934, Pat chined in the time, she and the kids got tory on or and passed away. So I've been on my kids and the kids when the kids are careful now.

Since then, Des Moines suffered several floods, especially in low-lying areas near the Raccoon and Des Moines rivers that fork just past the gable-protected dome of the state Capitol in the center of town.

But the Kurschinskis' four-bedroom house is four miles from the river.

The Kurschinski learned before dawn Sunday that the water plant had shut down.

Son-in-law Frank Ruggio, a city firefighter, was at work when word came in and he called his wife, Andrea, 28, who called her parents.

They were still getting water out of the tap, so we just started filling everything up, the bathtub, kestle, everything," Andrea said.

"And I started boiling everything."

Shortly before noon, Lisa, Frank and Andrea joined thousands of volunteers filling bags with sand while "grandma and grandpa," the three children.

"Lisa showed, I held the bag open and my husband, the big, macho, tied the bags shut," Andrea Ruggio laughed, poking Frank in the side.

She also works at the travel company. "We worked for about five hours."

Throughout the city, volunteers turned out Sunday, filling countless thousands of sandbags to repair broken levees and make others tighter.

Evacuations started that afternoon and approximately 30,000 people were told to evacuate.

Next went to live with friends and relatives, others went to shelters.

Pat rainwater to bubble of the grandchildren.

Her husband entertained the third, Alex, 5, who was suffering from chicken pox that he contracted before the flooding started.

"We had to keep her (Alexis) in because I was afraid of the open spaces," Pat said. Like most Sundays, Lawrence watched baseball.

"I was a lifelong New York Yankee fan," Doug said. "Last year I was able to fulfill his lifelong dream and took him to New York and we went to Yankee Stadium."

It was an afternoon game against the White Sox. He wore a Yankee shirt, he was like a little kid."

DEADLINE, from page 1

their property uses," Booker said. "We're going through a time and a time if they are affected by the flood.

"I know who people have to be starting to pack their belongings just as a precaution," she said.

"We have already caused the Mississippi River to flood in northern and central Illinois."

The river is expected to crest in Southern Illinois this week.

Ron St. John, Governor, may say any help is needed.

Ford said any help would be grandly received.

"The situation does not look too promising down here and the river is rising up," Ford said.

"We expect to get some flooding and it is nice for the county to number residents who are in need at this time."

Bill Ripley, Jackson County Emergency Management coordinator, said the request is a good idea.

"I think it is a good incentive for people who need it," Ripley said. "Please have been taking precautions such as sandbagging in Goshen and Grand Tower and not packing, but"

"People should not worry because the levees are secure," David Conrad, chairman of the Jackson County Board, said.

"We have a lot of groups helping it deal with this potential problem," Conrad said.

"The Department of Conservation, the forest service and many other groups are pitching in," he said.

"It is a great gesture to people, who need it," he said.

Illinois has been federally mandated as a disaster area.

The mandate enables Illinois to grasp federal flood benefits.

The state was declared a disaster area by Gov. Jim Edgar two weeks ago.

 classifiers="Daily Egyptian 536-331"}

PRISON, from page 1

twelve counties about this matter," Phelps said. "It is our intention that the governor of Southern Illinois is not taught unprecedented to offer a comprehensive plan to be presented in the Sur-Maximum prison.

Howard said the Department of Corrections had finished deciding what criteria will have to be met in order for a town to be eligible to be the home of the new prison.

Said Howard, "the representatives said they are conducting the meetings in hopes of unifying the downtown area and making it known in Springfield that Southern Illinois means the new prison.

Woodard said he has already done some advance planning to protect the people and property located in the area.

"This is a great opportunity for us as a work to show that we are unified in seeking the Sur-Maximum prison," Woodard said.

"I have long been in contact with the people in the Sur-Maximum prison and regard to the status of this facility, and I am confident that our joint effort will bring about positive results for this region.

"During the state's budget negotiations, Phelps and Woodard worked to increase the number of cigarettes that this state's revenue come from state's purpose to give the Sur-Maximum facility a reality," Woodard said.

"If the governor and the sitting committee, will realize that as well.

"The representatives hope the differences of area officials can be put aside so Southern Illinois can plan and make a case for the Sur-Maximum prison," Phelps said the region needs to impress upon Springfield that Southern Illinois really wants the prison.

"Working together we will be able to come up with the necessary criteria for prisoners," Phelps said. "The highlights of such a plan should prioritize the importance of housing the Sur-Maximum prison, Phelps said.

"One meeting will take place Thursday, July 22, at 7 p.m. at Southeastern Illinois College in Harrisburg for the local officials of Saline, Hardin, Pope, Franklin, Gallatin, White, Johnson and Wabash counties.

"The other meeting will take place Friday, July 23, at 7 p.m. at Southeastern Illinois College in Harrisburg for the local officials of Saline, Hardin, Pope, Franklin, Gallatin, White, Johnson and Wabash counties.

CLASIFIED DISPLAY ADVERTISING

Open Rate $7.60 per column inch, per day
Minimum Ad Size: 1 column inch
Space Reservation Deadline: 2pm, 2 days prior to publication
Requirements: All 1 column classified display advertisements are required to have a 2 point header. Other borders are acceptable on larger column widths.

CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING RATES

based on consecutive running days)

Minimum Ad Size: 1 day
1 day $1.00 per line per column inch
3 lines, 30 characters
5 lines, 60 characters
10 lines, 120 characters

Copy Deadline: 12 Noon, 1 day prior to publication

Space Reservation Deadline: 2pm, 2 days prior to publication

Requirements: Smaller ads are designed to be used by individuals or organizations for personal advertising—birthdays, anniversaries, congratulations, etc. and not for commercial use or to announce events.

SMILE ADVERTISING RATES

$3.10 per inch

50% off parts or labor

(coupon required)

"A/C check & charge $16.95 per freon."

"Oil Filter & Lube (most cars) $17.95."

"Complete Foreign & Domestic Repair"

536-3311

536-3311
Motorcycles

Bicycles

MENS 27 x 12 speed bike. Steel frame. New tires, everything in good condition. $75. Ask for Bob at 457-7734.

Mobile Homes

8x14 REDMAN, recently built, 2 bdrms, all electric, flush toilet, double sink, gard. door, patio. Nice location. $13,000 or best offer. Ask Sam at 457-4393.

Furniture

USED FURNITURE HAMAIDAN, bed, dresser, desk, more $100 for 3 pieces. Quality Good Used Furniture. 457-0524.

Computers

PC AND A/KContos SERVICE 549-6881. We do Home Computer Repair. We pay CASH for used/used parts. Ask Albert at 549-6881.

A/C Service & Repair

A/C Parts & Service.

Fast Repair

Air Makes & Models TV’s, VCR’s, Stereos.

BEST PRICES on O.E.M. Parts.

A-1 TV

520-4717.
HART, from page 12

compared to a restaurant owner, appealed to him and he went after the job wholeheartedly but kept his doubts to himself. “There was a bit of a revolving door for athletic directors at the time,” Hart said. “The University was looking for someone who was willing to make difficult decisions and stay, not someone who would use the job as steppingstone.”

But Hart said his nationally recognized name was the deciding factor in allowing him to choose the new athletic director. Hart said he has never regretted becoming athletic director, having to make difficult decisions in his career and finding ways to deal with axes he said he would not choose to chop athletic department budgets.

All of Hart’s decisions as athletic director were to eliminate men’s gymnastics and wrestling teams because of budget constraints. Hart described his decision as a no-win situation. Since the cut of the programs, dwindling budgets and weak attendance have been annual aspects of the job.

“Ten years is a lot longer than I imagined to some degree,” Hart said. “Big as challenging as it is, Hart’s accomplishments during his five-year career at SIUC include gathering virtually all athletic department staff together at Lingle Hall, which restructured splitting a men’s locker room into a facility for male and female athletes, effectively doubling the equity in sport participation rates and starting the SIU Foundation, which distributes scholarships and operational budgets.

But SIUC has also increased fund-raising revenue, improving SIUC’s all-sport performance in the Missouri Valley Conference and increasing athletic opportunities for students.

CHARLES W. WEST, athletic director at SIUC, said when Hart was named athletic director after he hoped for the position.

“West was the interim athletic director and a candidate for the AD position Hart eventually received. He had 14 years of experience as an administrator at SIUC and, including coaching experience, had been an AD for university for 11 years. Looking back on the position changes, would he hope that he has no hard feelings and believes Hart has been good for SIUC’s athletic program. “He is an excellent candidate and I was fully aware of his experience. In addition to his experience, Hart’s national recognition is a valuable public relations tool and one of his biggest assets is being an ambassador for the athletic department and the University. “He is a good person to get the community and the alumni behind him,” West said.

She also said Hart has adapted to the administrative challenges of the AD position quickly and effectively.

“He is a quick learner,” West said. “He came in without any administrative experience at all, but he has been very quick to learn about the profession.”

“Knowing the profession as well as I do and knowing who could be a University athletic director, very happy he was picked,” she said. “Working with him in our department, he is very friendly, warm and accepting of different points of view. I am, now for the first time, the experience behind him, that other institutions will recruit him. But, I think he is ready to take that next step.”

Jim Herrin, SIUC’s men’s basketball coach, agreed and is committed to SIUC and the success of its athletic program.

“I think he was the right choice for his department or his job, but he is interested in what is going on and he knew he was on the right track on program,” Herrin said. “He comes here early and often.”

Herrin said Hart’s lack of funds is not the reason he never concerned him because Hart was an athlete.

“I’m one of those guys who doesn’t think you have to study to get better,” Herrin said. “He handled personnel as a quarterback and he is good at handling personnel as athletic director.”

Hart donated a great deal of time, effort and money to charities during his career in the NFL and as SIU athletic director.

His won the Byron “Whizzer” White award as the NFL’s best humanitarian for the Jim “Picker” award for most civic-minded athlete in 1980. He has been chosen inducted in the Special Olympics program and plays in a variety of charity golf events and the University.

“He is a good person to get the community and the alumni behind him,” West said.

Another recreational activity, flying a small airplane, comes home as well. Hart said he loves the thrill of flying because every take off and every landing is a little different and it takes a tremendous amount of concentration.

Flying an F-4 Phantom fighter jet was one of the highlights of his lifetime, he said.

But, since becoming athletic director, Hart is finding time to keep his flying skills honed, so he has grounded himself. Hart says flying is a hobby, not a career. He was out of the bunker or 18 to 180 tournament, he was forced to take ground

In 1993, Hart and Jim Herrin were listed in the 1993 1993 Tactical Medicine with an accident, 140 foot chip shot to victory.

As much as they remember Bernard’s moment with British Open victory in 1986—he only major before Sunday—they remember the 1993 British Open and how things back to reality. He was 140 feet from the pin at Royal St. George’s, he was perched on tee at 18, one of the course’s toughest par 4’s. Only par would make him feel safe. It was the third hole at the British Open. His second shot, a 4 iron, landed 18 feet from the pin.

As Normal took his victory and the 18th fairway, the crowd was largely disappointed as Normal walked the to the middle of the fairway. His second shot, a 4 iron, landed 14 feet from the pin. As Normal took his victory and the 18th fairway, the crowd was largely disappointed as Normal walked the to the middle of the fairway. His second shot, a 4 iron, landed 18 feet from the pin.

That’s the greatest gold I’ve seen in my life,” he told Normal. And Faldo was defeated.

CUP, from page 12

usually sparsely attended.

In addition, no Asian team is considered a threat to prevent the U.S. men advancing to the second round.

But the specter of Iraq or Iran, or both, advancing to the World Cup finals hasn’t counted on.

FIFA, soccer’s world governing body, is watching the developments with interest.

In Iraq, the national team’s success is viewed as a way to heal wounds after the war against Saudi Arabia Oct. 24 in Qatar.

Success could mean a match against the evil U.S. team.

If the Iraqi team can put together some good wins, that makes them no different than many of the strong teams in the nations.

But also the case in many nations, soccer is often the focal point for violence and political tension. According to reports, nine people were killed and 120 wounded during the celebrations in Baghdad after the Beat China in World Cup qualifying.

Iran, an old enemy of the United States, is also not a State Department favorite. Last week Egyptian authorities dismissed they had learned the World Trade Center Bombing and said it was part planned by Iranian intelligence agents.

The world little on the diplomatic horizon that would indicate either Iran or Iraq might become more involved in the world order before next June. What would become of the World Cup in 1994, the Super Bowl, that would never be allowed to express their World Cup? That would never be allowed to express their World Cup? That would never be allowed to express their World Cup?

What might happen if they did? FIFA has not file a letter from the United States demanding full cooperation in allowing athletes from all World Cup finals nations

“We have assurance that our government will extend all courtesy to the countries,” said World Cup spokesman John Griffin.

But the United States has never awarded the bid in 1989.

The entire episode underscores a growing international sport: Sports and politics are only becoming more involved in the world order when it’s political.

NORMAN, from page 12

Faldo with a birdie on the first hole and took the lead for good when Faldo bogeyed the fourth. The middle rounds were nip-and-tuck, but Norman moved to nine shots above par on the par-3, 6th after he dropped a 7-iron shot from four inches from the cup and tapped it in for birdie.

Today, I did not miss-hit a ball,” Norman said later. “I hit every shot on the green and I really felt I was in control of myself.”

He wasn’t the only one, either. Faldo and McIlroy, on the 17th green, when he missed a 14-foot putt that hit back of the cup and bounded out. Norman has to swallow a body.

When he asked the lead to him, that he had moved to nine shots, the players who whopped it up.

They were all schooled in Norman’s tournament tap, on his curb of back, on. How he leaves the bunker or 18 to beat Norman & the 1986 PGA Championships. On how Larry Mize had stolen the 1987 Masters with an eagle, 140-foot chip shot to victory.

As much as they remember Bernard’s moment with British Open victory in 1986—he only major before Sunday—they remember the 1993 British Open and how things back to reality. He was 140 feet from the pin at Royal St. George’s, he was perched on tee at 18, one of the course’s toughest par 4’s. Only par would make him feel safe. It was the third hole at the British Open. His second shot, a 4 iron, landed 18 feet from the pin.

That’s the greatest gold I’ve seen in my life,” he told Normal. And Faldo was defeated.