Campus Power Failure Is Laid To Flooding, Protective System

Water Line Break
Triggers Outage

An electrical system designed to protect electric motors blocked on the entire SIU campus Thursday.

The power failure, which occurred about 9:40 a.m. Thursday and lasted for 30 to 40 minutes, was apparently caused by a water line which flooded the basements of Trudy and Hull. The flooded basements of the two buildings were expected to take an electric power feeder serving the building according to George D. Shepherd, a power plant and utilities engineer.

The shorted feeder caused a low voltage power condition on the rest of campus, trip-out switches on other feeder cables opened because of the low voltage and cut off power all over campus.

The switches are used to protect electric motors from being burned out during low voltage situations when they would draw too much current, Shepherd said.

He said the power would have been back on sooner, but the problem had to be positively identified before the switches could be closed.

The whole campus was affected by the failure, but functions in many buildings continued. For example, Morrey Library checked book cards by hand. It was "business regardless," one library employee said. She added that there was a candle at the Xerox counter, but no one anywhere else in the building.

The flood is the second one to affect electrical equipment this term. Earlier a water pipe in the basement of the Communications Building caused flooding of the air-conditioning motors and a consequent failure of the cooling systems in the Communications Building.

The campus clock, which are reset by a master control, should be in proper working order. The control must be reset in the building where the simplex Automatic Time system which the University uses.

Two temporary appointments were made at Wednesday night's meeting of the Campus Senate. The appointments will serve until fall.

Bob Drinan, student body president, appointed Fred Zimmerman as National Student Association (NSA) coordinator. Zimmerman is a transfer student from the University of Illinois. He served last year on the University House Council.

Richard V. Gragg, former president of Theta Xi social fraternity and vice president of Interfraternity Council, was appointed acting Campus Judicial Board chairman. Gragg has served on the board for two years.

A student government spokesman said that it is expected that the full Senate will confirm Drinan's appointments in the fall.

The next campus Senate meeting is scheduled for 8 p.m. Monday in the University Center.

Students Less Embarrassed

Merchants Get Stuck With Bad Checks, But They Say Problem Has Not Increased

By Bob Reincke

Even have trouble cashing or writing a check in Carbondale.

If you have, you aren't alone. At one time or another almost every SIU student has faced this problem. And although some students may complain about the inconvenience, local merchants can hardly be blamed for denying this privilege to students.

The problem becomes especially acute for the merchant during the summer when it is difficult to contact the originalities of the "rubber" checks after they have gone home.

Through a small sample of local businesses, it was learned that they all had received checks that weren't backed by sufficient funds in the students' accounts. These merchants are quick to add, however, that most of the mistakes were due to tardy bookkeeping. They say the problem is no worse than in the past except that the problem that the most of more students there is more of a chance to receive bad checks.

A merchant of local men's clothing store said his business store received several bad checks near the end of spring term and has not yet received money to cover six of the purchases.

The owner of a similar store said he had only one check that was no good—a small amount, he added it has never been much of a problem and is no worse this year.

A women's clothing store had the same problem with its customers and has not yet been able to contact four of the students.

Another firm, which cashes many checks from students, said it received "quite a few" bad ones, although it did not know how many. It subsequently received most of the lost funds and added that the situation was no worse than in any other quarter.

He said his bank doesn't lose any money because of the bad checks and the only loss in the time it takes to contact students. He said he could see no difference in the number of bad checks his bank processes, but students seemed less embarrassed about them than in past years.

Most businesses attempt to contact the students personally when they receive a bad check. When this is impossible, however, the problem is never reported to the bank as a reason for such a check.

Grid Teams Have Need: Colleges!

Now that professional football has adopted a "one world" policy, as it has for a further improvement in its image?

Of course, the teams already have mini-skirted cheerleaders in non-contacting hands. But as we have said in the past, no stadium is complete with a "color guard." So why shouldn't each team establish a college? The cameras might be the two National League teams which have already received $10,000 of the $18,000,000 paid by the younger American League as the "cause." This is not only a demand which required unanimous consent, as for the others, there is TV income—and all the money saved by not having to offer bonuses for recruits.

Indeed the bonus money might be used to take care of students and teachers, naturally the payments would be called scholarships or other various grants rather than bonuses. Yet since the receipts are to be taxed—especially to the school that established itself as a foot- ball school—what are some of the uneducated scholars ought to say to the cheaper than players used to.

As educators, the coaches will have to be more independent support.

The big thing would be the perfection of the team's image, trapping it out in all the proper apparatuses of big time football, including a school.

Viet Nam Foe Must Be Assured Of U. S. Sincerity in Peace Offer

By Robert M. Hutchins

Anyone who looks at the official statements of the con­ tending parties in Viet Nam cannot be surprised that a war is going on.

The 14 points on which the governments are at issue are so slight that if they were made by private persons discussing a business ar­ rangement the stock market would be taking a deal for

The answer must be either that in spite of what they say they expect to gain by continuing the war or that they do not believe our gestures. Here is an important dis­ tinction among the nations concerned. China will undoubtedly gain from the continuation of the war. She will, in fact, be the only gainer.

Meanwhile, their people are not being killed, and their territory is not being invaded. Without any considerable effort on their part, the North Vietnamese war resources are being made more and more dependent on them. The his­ toric policy of China is thus being carried out at the ex­ pense of the North Vietnamese themselves and the people of Viet Nam.

That policy has been to per­ mit the Vietnamese in Southeast Asia to be independent of China on two conditions: They must not unite against China, and they must not fall under the control of foreigners.

This policy was not un­ acceptable to the nations of Southeast Asia. They have fought off all foreign domina­ tion, especially the one that was most threatening, that of the Chinese. The Vietnamese would like to be completely independent of China. The longer the war continues, the more dependent they must become.

The Vietnamese do not be­ lieve the American 14 points. The task of American statesmanship is to get itself believed. This will require reces­ sion of bombing, adoption of a defensive posture and spec­ ific, definite, visible steps toward the economic recon­ struction of Viet Nam.

Are Students Moral Bankrupts?
Faculty, Administrators Say No

By Leonard Boscarme
First of a Series

The college student and the "pill", the use of LSD and marijuana, campus free-love socieites, dirty record listeners, nude nights and student quarters are the favorite topics of lectures, debates, newspaper and magazine articles, and, most recently, a flood of books.

In short, it would appear that today's college student is morally bankrupt. But that's not to say the men and women who spend their lives working with college students daily.

To be sure, today's college students will go to sin-swilling, goldfish swallowing, fun-loving do-it-your-own-generation presentations as pleased by Jack Oakie and Sonny Tufts in the classic movie of the same name.

He has changed and a number of SIU faculty members and administrators believe they know why.

"When it comes to comparing generations, the pressure for a college degree is getting to the point where it means as much as a high school diploma did for previous generations," Ralph E. Prusok, associate dean of student affairs, said.

Pressure, coupled with the

Three to Participate
In Special Project

Three foreign students at SIU have been chosen as participants in a special summer project sponsored by the International Institute of Education.

The project is designed to train international youth leadership, according to Mr. Mary Wakeland, coordinator at the SIU International Student Center.

Salt Wadi-Ramahi, from Qatar, Arab Gulf, will participate in a training program at the University of California, Berkeley. Wadi-Ramahi, a graduate student in government and the foreign student senator in student government, Individual Aminarsala, from Kabul, Afghanistan, will receive training at Michigan State University in East Lansing. Aminarsala, an economics student, recently was elected foreign student senator for next school year. Daniel Akpan Edem from Nigeria will attend a seminar at Southern Methodist University in Dallas, Texas.

"Impersonality enters the picture because as classes become larger there is no means of individual identification for the student," Prusok said.

"As institutions of higher education become larger, they tend to take on characteristics of impersonality akin to large corporations. The employee, from what we read, sees the large corporation as a fair game for theft of inventory because it is impersonal. The college marked that a small minority of students are giving the definition of a bad name, but the typical SIU student has a definite workable moral code."

E. Claude Coleman, professor of English, said, "There are pressures on today's college student to know a good many more things than my generation had to know. I do think that today's college student is harder to fool."

"The SIU student body has the same moral standards as college students anywhere in the United States. They operate in the same way," Coleman said.

"Today's college student is going through a period of great disillusionment, and anyone who poses as the wise, the good, the almighty is quickly punctuated. They tend not to trust anyone over 30," Coleman said.

Irving W. Adams, assistant dean of student affairs, said, "A great deal of what we have is exaggerated or at least viewed in a context that is not clear. Of course, things are happening that indicate today's college student is not living up to standards we would like for them to meet."

"I don't feel we need to be tremendously alarmed about this. There are some of us who like to make more out of these things than are in the minority," Adams said.

"Sure there are draft-card burners, but at least they are not as numerous as we have been. More important is that I feel real enthusiasm in the student body that the problems that are vital are being taken and addressed."

student may feel somewhat similar regarding cheating on exams.

As for college drinking, Prusok said, "I don't think drinking today is any more of a problem. It's the same old matter of the national consumption of alcohol being out-of-accord with the laws governing its use."

"The element of risk gives undergrad drinking an element of excitement it might not have otherwise," Dean Prusok said.

A number of ministers associated with campus religious foundations and organizations who were interviewed indicated that they felt no great alarm for the college student's moral outlook.

"Rather than words of caution, they had words of praise and admiration."

One pastor said, "I know a lot of young people today who are as fine as any ever made. I know a lot of young people today who are getting involved in the Peace Corps, etc., and that's a good sign."

Another minister said, "I see a lot of things on this campus today that I don't approve of. I saw a lot of things that I didn't approve of when I was going to college. I don't think the devil has got any by the tail and is pulling it downward."

Nature Offers Good Designs In Space Use

The School of Technology is working with the National Aeronautics and Space Administration to investigate the possibilities of applying some of the built-in mechanisms of plants and animals to structures needed in space missions.

One possible development, for example, is a non-parachute drag mechanism for making air drops, similar to that on a dandelion or milkweed seed. Another is use of a thin metal tension member to support an antenna wire, much as a spider uses a coiled leaf to keep his web out.

Still other prospects under investigation in the SIU laboratory use of principles gained from study of soap bubbles in developing inflatable or self-supporting surface tension structures.

"Man is pretty primitive in his design efforts," explained Julian H. Lauchter, dean of the SIU School of Technology and principal investigator in the NASA project.

"He uses a 4,000-pound automobile to transport 180 pounds. He builds a cardboard house and brings electricity to power his gadgets when there is fantastic energy in the earth beneath his feet and in the sunlight outside.

"If we can rightly interpret some of nature's designs, which are quite advanced and complex, we may be able to better take care of man's needs for food, clothing, shelter, communication, and transportation - whether he's still on earth or exploring outer space."

St. Louis Cardinals Sign Battle, Hart

The St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League have signed two former Illini stars to contracts.

They are Jim Hart and Jim Battle, who signed as free agents. They will report to the Cards' training camp July 9. Hart and Battle will join two other former Salukis, Sam Silas and Marion Rushing, on the Cardinal roster.

Hart, a 190-pound senior, holds all but one passing record at Southern. Battle, a 1963 graduate who played end in college, has played guard for the pros. Battle played the 1963 season with the Minnesota Vikings of the NFL and later played football in Canada.

Army Physical Is Revealing: Shows Student Has a Pulse

(Leal Werth, a Daily Egyptian staff writer, recently had the dubious distinction of being called upon to submit to a physical examination for the draft. Here is his first person account)

By Laurel Werth

"Hurry up and wait!" is more fact than fiction when it comes time for the United States Army to call on all men for their draft physicals. From the moment the chartered bus pulled away from the Selective Service office in Murphysboro at 6 a.m. until we returned that night, it was one of those days.

The first mistake of the day was boarding the bus. The second was when the bus missed the turn-off to go to St. Louis. After deliberating about a mile, we missed it. The third mistake of the day, I found, was getting off the bus.

We were told to be back at the bus promptly at 4:15 p.m. and 6:15 p.m., and we were. We were given directions as to how to reach the testing center from the bus stop. As the time was drawing near, we were told to go up the flight of stairs and turn left.

For a while it appeared that the only requirement to pass an Army physical was that the body still be warm after all those steps. The Army, it seems, already knew a great deal about our physical condition.

On the second floor of the building we had to sit in a large room that looked as if it had been built to receive the survivors of a shipwreck. The atmosphere matched the decor.

One by one, our names were called and we left to have our brains quizzed.

The mental aptitude test was more fun than watching the sergeant fall down the flight of steps we had just come.

Picture matching and word comparison comprised the test. This phase of the game lasted approximately an hour and a half. It was now 5:30 p.m.

From there we were taken into another room where we had our weight taken and our height recorded. Chest x-rays were next on the agenda.

As I was waiting in line, I looked at the sheet I was carrying for recording the doctors findings. I scanned the page and came across a section that said, "pulse 72, after running, 172, two minutes after running, 78." This was fine and I was glad it was normal, until I realized that I hadn't been checked for this at all.

All doubts I had about the U.S. Army in the past were confirmed. As though I was told I was failing the last mile.

The rest of the "physical" was routine, for the Army that is. A quick blood sample was taken, blood pressure was taken and eyes and ears were scanned hurriedly. After everything was finished, we were supposed to be told to go to the Red Cross reception room which was designated station four.

But the Army struck again. The first time through the line we were not told this, I happened to be in the group.

Since we did not have to be back to the bus until 7:15 and it was now midnight, another 111 student and myself decided to go up town. We hit some of the hot spots such as Famous Barry and several others whose names escape me and decided to get back to the bus early. It was now 3:30 p.m.

But here's the rub, since everybody had finished early the bus driver decided to leave early. Three of us were left behind.

Of the three, one had money to take the train back to Carbondale. The rest of us had $5 between the two of us.

The best thing to do, we figured, was to take a city bus to St. Louis and hitch hike. We got off on Missouri Avenue, that apparently noon picks up hitch-hikers on Missouri Avenue in East St. Louis, go after waiting for half an hour, we saw a bus station up the street.

We explained our situation to the ticket seller and asked if we could cash a counter check. Naturally the answer was no.

It must have been out of pity or some one up there decided we had been punished enough because the ticket agent decided to be a good samaritan and pay our way back if we were sure to send him $10 for the tickets.

We agreed happily.

The bus pulled into Carbondale at 8 p.m. surprisingly we were overjoyed to be back in town.

As we stepped off the bus, we suddenly remembered our cars were still in Murphysboro where we had left them that morning, but that's another story.

P.S. The Army decided that Mr. Werth had too much hair and they couldn't use him. He celebrated the news by eating a large bowl of mashed potatoes with gravy, topped off with a triple strawberry sundae.

Medecin, Aeronautics, Nursing Are Students’ Career Goals

By Pam Cleaton

The sky is falling! The sky is falling! But never fear, the younger generation will be there to hold it up.

Just to make sure that things keep going, some people want to make sure the next generation is properly trained. They want to be teach or Fletcher, and one will settle for nothing less than being an administrator.

These are some examples from a sampling of answers the American Council on Education’s Office of Research got back when they asked college freshmen (fall 1965) from 61 universities to give their career choices.

The very idea of these students making careers in business, business, business should give the business world a job or two. The only hope for them may be that they can counter past 15.

There may be a job for them in finance, management, or even as a manufacturer, bodega salmons or car salesmen.

The American Medical Association doesn’t have any problems now compared to the ones in store for it 10 years hence when specialists in medicine, medecin, nursing and dentistry graduate and become physician, dentist, therapist, orthotist and psychiatrist.

There was one who just wanted to help—as an anesthesiologist.

Still other students want to aid man by getting him places faster. They thought that as pilot, aeronautics, aeronautical, stewardes, or maybe as a collection of technician, technician, technician, engineering, engineering, engineering, engineering they would be useful.

Politics didn’t get left out. In a few years we will have liberal, liberal, political and even an appraiser to help run the country.

The housing shortage attracted four new recruits, an architect, an architect, an architect, and an architect (who will no doubt design very small houses).

Mobilization Readiness' Cuts Reserve Training

WASHINGTON (AP)—Most of the units in a 150,000-man first line Army Reserve force will reduce their training, starting in July, after undergoing about eight months of intensified drills to get them ready for possible emergency deployment.

The Army announced Thursday that units in the National Guard Reserve force will be able to cut back from "2 drills a year" to 5. These units, which had trained at a rate of 4 drills a year until last November, were boosted to "72 drills under secretory of defense Robert S. McNamara's" drive to get them in condition for possible deployment.

The goal for the readiness program, with June 30 and Maj. Gen. William R. Wilson, chief of the National Guard Bureau, claimed recently that the "mobilization readiness" objective already has been reached.

The objective called for this "electrocuted reserve force" to reach a point where it could move to a mobilization station and to start advanced unit training with only seven days' notice, then to take eight weeks of brigade and division training.

For Inmates' Trial

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—A jury of 11 men and one woman was selected Thursday after seven weeks of screening to hear the Circuit Court murder trial of four Menard prison inmates. They are accused in the slaying of three guards during a prison riot Nov. 23.

"Take good care of this jury," Judge Crell Douglas told the court hall, noting that 994 prospective jurors had been dismissed in the selection process.

SAIGON (AP)—South Viet Nam's troops have resumed heavy action in the northern 1st corps area, broadening the campaign that they shared elsewhere with Americans and other allies through the politically tumultuous spring.

Field dispatches disclosed Thursday that 5,000 men of the 1st Vietnamese Division, only recently won over from the Buddhist-led anti-government rebellion at Hue, started in a three-day battle that virtually annihilated one North Vietnamese battalion and severely maimed another 20 miles from North Viet Nam's frontier.

U.S. advisers said the division, with supporting marine and armored cavalry units, killed 319 of the Communists and captured 96 in the biggest all-Vietnamese operation of the year.

The action swirled unheralded in South Viet Nam's northernmost province, Quang Tri, while U.S. airborne troops on coastal highlands staged a drive against close-in battalions, largely from North Viet Nam, now estimated to total 2,500 men.

In this fourth day of their sweep, called Operation Nathan Hale, the Americans said the toll of enemy killed rose to 321.

Both American and Vietnamese losses in these engagements, 280 miles apart, were officially described as light, but war and politics mingled in other developments.

The U.S. Command announced 79 Americans were killed, 567 wounded and 8 missing or captured last week, with 142 killed, 741 wounded and one missing the week of June 5-11. The official roll of U.S. combat dead since the start of American military involvement in 1961 rose to 3,883.

Apparently reflecting more vigorous military operations with death of political crisis, South Viet Nam's combat deaths rose to 175 in the previous week. Overall, fatalities on both sides declined. The allied total was 274, against 359 the previous week; the Communist's 928 against 1,240.

A ranger battalion raid on the Buddhist Institute finally cowed a staff of politically minded monks who had helped to keep South Viet Nam in turmoil since mid-March. But militant Thich Tri Quang was in the 16th day of his protest against "grave and illegal" conditions in a Saigon hospital. Moderate Thich Tam Chau, who conferred with Quang Wednesday, wrote a letter to premier Nguyen Cao Ky demanding the release of monks, nuns and Buddhist followers who are in government custody.

Among those seized in the raid on the institute was a youth, 19, hunted since last Saturday as the slayer of a policeman who was shot dead with his own gun. Plainclothes police said the youth was a Buddhist agent who had been钥匙 to Nga Van Bay.

Three Chinnok helicopters, twin-rotor types originally designed as heavy cargo carriers, flew to join the U.S. 1st Infantry Division as gunships.

Stewardsesses Found Beaten; One Fatally

SEATTLE (AP)—Two flighting United Air Lines stewardsesses from Portland, Ore., were beaten unconscious in their apartment early Wednesday night and had to be taken to the hospital.

Police said both had been clubbed repeatedly on the head. Joyce Bowe, 25, who found the two lying in the bedroom of the basement apartment on Seattle's Queen Anne Hill, said she had been with her roommates Wednesday night but had left to spend the night at a friend's house.

When she returned, the front door was unlocked and a light was on.

A spokesman for the airline said Miss Trumbull and Miss Wick graduated May 11 from the line's stewardess school in Seattle and had been flying a little more than a month.

Lynda Bird's Date Comes Under Attack

WASHINGTON (AP)—The draft status of actor George Hamilton, who has been dating Lynda Bird Johnson, was brought into hearings on the operations of the Selective Service today by Rep. Alvin E. O'Konski, R-Wis.

Without mentioning Hamilton by name, O'Konski noted that he had read in newspapers about "a movie actor in California with a $30,000 home and a $30,000 Rolls Royce," an income of $100,000 who got a deferment because he has "to support his mother who went through four husbands."

"That system nauseates me," O'Konski said, comparing the case with poor youths with large families who had been drafted in this district.

O'Konski said no one has been drafted in six months from a family with more than $5,000 income in his district.

"If the draft continues in its present form," he said, "I'm afraid we won't have the poor with us very long."

Hamilton was classified 3-A by his New York City draft board several years ago on grounds of his family's income, O'Konski said.

Lt. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director who was on the witness stand during O'Konski's remarks, said that does not mean he could say in reply to O'Konski, "He is indicting America," the general said of O'Konski.

House Bill to Aid Medical Technicians

WASHINGTON (AP) - The House passed Thursday, 395 to 0, a bill to authorize a three-year, $155 million program to train 3,000 medical technologists, therapists and other health personnel.

Half of the money would go for construction grants and the rest for student loans.

The Republicans said the bill is especially necessary because some of the medicare law going into effect July 1.

Red Stand Unchanged Despite Gaullist Charm

MOSCOW (AP) - As French President Charles de Gaulle left Moscow for sightseeing, there was no sign that his sweeping phrases about a new alliance with the Soviet Union had changed Kremlin thinking.

For all the friendly sentiments expressed in the last three days, France and the Soviet Union remained apart on a number of political problems.

De Gaulle and the top Communist Party secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev were able to agree in the Kremlin talks that they dislike U.S. policy in Viet Nam and the American role in Europe.

Neither leader has so much as hinted that De Gaulle offers a new way out of the Vietnamean problem.

De Gaulle has dramatized by his visit the widely felt desire for improved relations in Europe, for ending what he called the sterile division between East and West.

The Russians, who once denounced De Gaulle as a Fascist, are happy to honor him now as the man who is weakening the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

They are, however sticking to their insistence on a Kremlin version of European security. It means keeping West Germany weak more than anything else.

Soviet leaders have reason to worry that the French military withdrawal from NATO might have the effect of making West Germany stronger.

Without France, Germany looks larger in NATO councils as the main partner of the United States and Britain.

De Gaulle urged the Russians to talk directly with West Germany in an effort to solve the related problems of security and German reunification. But the Russians want Bonn to talk to East Germany, which it refuses to do.

Kremlin leaders, in turn, urged on De Gaulle the idea of a European conference to discuss security. It was unclear whether their April model of Europeans-only conference or their last week's model for all interested parties—presumably included the United States—was displayed for the French president.

His reaction, anyway, was that a conference comes late, when the difficulties have been worked out bilaterally.

Police in Control Of Florida Riots

POMPANO BEACH, Fla. (AP)—The streets of Pompano Beach's Negro district returned to normal Thursday, and Negro and white leaders said they believed the violence that rocked the city was over.

The leaders set out to open lines of communications between the races, analyze the trouble and try to prevent a recurrence.

Liquor stores and bars, closed Wednesday as bands of Negroes roamed, were reopened for business.

An occasional patrol car replaced the platoons of riot police that for two days tried to keep order.

The only place still boarded up was the Rice Super Market. There the white owner, Arthur Marks, was alleged to have slapped a 10-year-old Negro boy Tuesday morning, which touched off the trouble. It took 100 members of the riot squads from three police departments to maintain order Wednesday night despite a truck worked out by the Negro leaders and the police.

The Negro leaders decided to keep rioters off the streets if officials would reduce the massive police force patrolling the main street. Police agreed and began pulling out squad cars.

For a while the streets were quiet. Then Negro bands began forming and by 9 p.m. they were reaching a fever pitch, hurling bottles at every passing car.

Then the riot squad pulled on helmets, drew carbines and, with a four-dog K9 corps, marched 10 blocks up and down Hammondville Road. The Negroes bolted into the darkness of the surrounding neighborhood, and the main street was virtually deserted within an hour.
FOOT TROUBLE—Oscar Moore, who has been plagued by foot trouble, is given little chance of pulling off an upset in the six-mile run in the national AAU meet in New York.

Carr, Moore Will Participate In National AAU Track Meet

Track coach Lew Hartzog will send two of his runners to compete in the national Amateur Athletic Union this weekend in New York. Veteran Gary Carr will compete in the 440 yard event, and Moore will take part in the six mile run. Carr, a senior from Mount Vernon, Ind., has improved rapidly during the latter part of the season. He ran a career best time of 46.9 as a junior last year.

Moore, the ex-Marine from White Plains, N. Y., will be in a star-studded field of distance men. His chances of finishing high in the event have been increased because of a painful goot blister.

The foot forced Moore out of the three-mile run in the NCAA finals.

The biggest threat in six-mile event should be Gerry Lindgren of Washington State, a former holder of the world record which now held by Australia’s Ron Clarke, Canada’s Billy Mills will also be a top contender. “Oscar should really have at least a month’s rest for his foot,” Hartzog said. “As it is, I doubt if he can do much at New York.”

The two finishers in each event will qualify for both the U.S.-Polish meet and the U.S.-Russian meet, both in July.

“John is hoping to come around fast enough to try out for the British Empire team,” Hartzog said. Vernon, a sloop, figures to come on strong in the next two years.

Another import who will have two years of eligibility left is Ross MacKenzie, a Canadian who specializes in the dashes and relay mile.

MacKenzie will be attempting to make his country’s team to compete in the British Empire Games.
