Bar manager charged for loud rock music

To ensure that all students get an equal educational opportunity, Illinois schools are required to periodically amend their enrollment boundaries, as the Illinois Board of Elementary School Construction is considering.

The board is considering a plan which will allow students to switch attending schools next year in compliance with an Illinois law that mandates a periodic review of school boundaries. The requirement is that the percentage of minority students not vary by more than 5 per cent from the district-wide minority student percentage.

Projections for the 1976-77 school year show an average minority percentage of 33.3 per cent.

Richard Fischer gives a bewildered shrug in front of Dan Fass, of which he is assistant manager. Fischer was arrested Thursday night and charged with disorderly conduct following a complaint lodged by Mayor Neal Eckert of loud music coming from the beer garden. (Staff photo by Daryl D. Littlefield)

"It was a complete surprise," Richard Fischer said of his arrest. "We're not trying to cause any trouble and are trying to work with the city, but the mayor doesn't seem to want to work with us. We want something definite regarding a noise level. We're getting hassled on a catch-all disorderly conduct ordinance."

Highway, a local band, is scheduled to play in the beer garden Saturday night, but Fischer said he does not know what Vogel's immediate plans are. A decibel reading was to be taken Saturday night by a private individual, Fischer said. "Highway" was being used because they are known as the "loudest band in the area."

"It doesn't seem fair that we might not be able to have "Highway" outside when SIU can have them outside of Woody Hall," Fischer said. "Highway" has contracts for playing behind Woody Hall Friday night. However, SIU is on state property and not subject to Carbondale ordinance.

"In my opinion, there's no way that an amplified band can play outside on Illinois Avenue," Eckert said. "I opened my window last night after I received the complaint, and I could hear the band all the way over on Glenview." Eckert lives on Glenview Drive, near Murdale Shopping Center.

Fischer said the band scheduled for Friday night would play inside.

Fischer was released on his own recognizance after his arrest and is scheduled to appear in court July 12.

"The purpose in desegregating schools is to at least explore the possibilities that each child has," said Fred Nunn, an education specialist in the Equal Educational Opportunity Division of the IOE in Springfield.

"Studies indicate that your better and more capable minority students are going away from those schools with large numbers of minority students," said Nunn.

Nunn stressed that he was in no way passing judgment on Carbondale Elementary School District 95. He was simply explaining the IOE's reasoning in the school's periodic school boundary changes.

He said there was nothing magical in 15 per cent limit. Nunn said the requirement was set in the late sixties by civic and educational leaders as a guideline for desegregation.

"The guideline is more flexible than some court orders that come down. It's a reasonable kind of request," said Nunn. He said the 15 per cent limit is not inflexible because the educational, economic and social feasibility of the district's desegregation plan must be considered.

"We would rather let the district comply with the guidelines and keep our nose out of it," Nunn said.

Donald Tindall, chairman of the District 95 school board, said next year's plan to shift 66 students to other schools is the greatest number of students moved in the four years he has been a member of the board.

Tindall said that when changes in the boundaries had to be made in the past, only about 30 students were involved. He said, however, that in the past some students were then have to be moved after the start of the school year.

"Our hope this time was to get the problems solved prior to the beginning of the school year," Tindall said.

Tindall said the board wants to comply with the law regarding school desegregation. "I think that's primarily our objective, to abide by the guidelines of the state mandate, by the Illinois Office of Education," Tindall said. (Continued on page 2)
Attacks board retains control of Eurna Hayes program funds

By Steve Hall
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

After a month and a half of debate over who should administer social services at the Eurna Hayes Center, the Attacks Community Service Board, a group run by city residents, Friday won out over city government administration of the programs.

The board signed two contracts with the city, one for $4,210 to administer the Universalized Social Services Program, and another for $285 to administer the Coordinated Youth Services Program.

"I think (the contracts) represents that the board is alive and there are two programs," said Eurna Hayes administrator Mary Baumann.

The resolution to return social services at the center, "creates a more healthy atmosphere," he said.

The Attacks Board has managed the center's social service programs since 1970, but 16 days prior to this year's contract expiration date, the city evaluated the programs and recommended city administration of the programs.

The main reason for the negative evaluation, was a lack of involvement by the Attacks Board. Prior to January 6, 1976, membership and directorship on the board was at least 71 percent, which is the legal number for a group to contract with the city. But the board dropped to less than 12 members.

Another old regulation, the two social programs were operated separately for the Northeast Side of Carbondale, but the new guidelines forced the programs to be administered as a citywide basis. Both programs are funded under the Housing and Urban Development Community Development Block Grant.

Another major reason for the negative recommendation was the use of social workers to do clerical tasks. According to Geneva Houghton, social service coordinator for the city, this was not really a misuse of the aides, but an overburden of paperwork required by the federal government.

At the next formal meeting of the City Council, scheduled for July 3, the council is expected to grant another contract to Attacks for counseling services around the Hayes Center. The contract is expected to be for $43,185.

Busing plan considered

Tindall said if the district falls too far out of compliance with IOE requirements, there is a possibility of losing state funds. "We are not willing to take that risk," Tindall said.

He said if the plan is adopted, the 66 students would have to be bused to other schools. He did say this would not be a one-way busing plan because both black and white children would be moved.

The board's proposal extends existing school boundaries rather than move children from isolated areas in the district.

In most cases the students children who have to move are opposed to the move and they will, in one way or another, express their disgust," said Tindall. "Their child gets used to a school and wants to stay there. It's even worse when a neighborhood gets broken up," said Tindall.

He said he has received no formal reaction to the plan from the community.

The boundary changes would allow Brush, Lewis, Oppenheimer, Thomas and Winker schools.

Oppenheimer students will have the greatest decrease in minority enrollment at 4 percent. Doors 5.3 percent from last year. Winker students will have the largest percentage increase at 32.2 percent, up 5.9 percent from last year.

Professors submit aviation system

By Scott Singleton

Two professors from the SIU School of Engineering are awaiting word on whether their proposal for an advanced aviation system design has been accepted by the National Aerodynamics and Space Administration (NASA).

Thomas McCalla Jr., and Lee Graciano, associate professors in the Department of Electrical Science and Systems Engineering, have been invited to the conference. With the proposal, they will present their concept of a micro-processor driven system which would simplify local aviation equipment.

Professor McCalla, director of the electronic systems research center in Carbondale, Calif., explained that among the various conditions currently found in aviation equipment, the microprocessors would have a variety of applications. Pilots use about 500 avionical terms in the operation of planes, and the micro-processor may be able to interpret some 300 of them, said James G. Smith, chairman of the department, Smith went on to say, "If successful, the system could be a requirement in ten years.

According to McCalla, the micro-processors would greatly simplify the operations necessary to fly a plane, and make it safer for pilots to reach their destinations.

The controlling team is biddin on is part of a program recently launched by NASA to upgrade general aviation (electronic aviation equipment) in the next ten years and beyond.

McCalla, project director for the proposal, said he first became interested in the subject two years ago when he learned that NASA was interested in integrated avionics. After submitting an unsolicited proposal in the fall of 1974, McCalla was invited to a NASA conference on the subject, held November, 1975, at the NASA research center in Moffett Field, Calif.

"We were one of three schools invited to the conference, with the rest of the participants from major corporations in the field," he said.

At the conference, McCalla learned there may be two regional funds awarded instead of one. Representatives from the companies told NASA not to try to work on the same thing, simply to be a part of it. A system could make a profit, private industry would develop it.

NASA was urged to concentrate on establishing a frontiers, he explained. So there may be two regional awards, one for a conservative system, certain of being feasible, and the other, a more speculative nature.

McCalla, 42, has been involved in computer systems theory since 1956, and started working at the White Sands missile range in New Mexico.

Upcoming New Mexican in 1963, McCalla went to Case Western Reserve University in Cleveland, where he earned his Ph.D. He came to SIU in 1972, and headed his department's hybrid computation laboratory.

His interest in advanced aviation systems design came about as the result of being a specialist in computers and systems theory, and being a private pilot.

Housing inspection results in fewer gripes

By Robert Wren

Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

Fewer complaints have been received at the Housing and Urban Development (HUD) office since housing inspection day stepped up its operations over the past four years, according to Robert Weir, the Carbondale Code Enforcement Division chief.

Weir said that in the city's 1970s housing census, which ended April 1, only 66 complaints were signed against rental properties compared to 87 in 1975 and "well over" in 1976.

Housing inspections utilize a two-man team. They work door-to-door to neighborhoods, Weir said, and Carbondale residents for the most part have been "very cooperative." The Code Enforcement Division is responsible only for off-campus housing. In fiscal 1978, 1,138 housing units were inspected. They are classified as follows:

- 393 owner occupied single family units
- 34 single dwelling rental units
- 161 multi-family structures such as dorms
- 384 multi-family structures such as apartment buildings totaling 342 units

Weir said that often more than one visit to a home is involved, as residents sometimes aren't around when the inspectors first stop.

The Code Enforcement Division has 21 code inspectors and the single-family dwellings, 171 had code violations, the single dwelling rental units, 152 had violations and the multi-family structures, 22 had violations.

If the multi-family structures, or other violations found were not found out door to door, they would not have been found.

Weir pointed out that among single family structures, there are a larger percentage of violations found in owner occupied buildings than in rental.

If a building is found with code violations, it is not necessary to be a minor, such as faulty wiring. An example of a major violation would be a leaky roof or a collapsing floor.

Weir said inspection visits are usually appreciated by the residents because unnoticed and potentially dangerous conditions are found.

Northeast Side housing usually has a greater number of major violations than housing in other parts of the city. Weir offered, is focused on the Northeast Side because the conditions found there are more minor violations.

"But it's getting better," Weir said. He credits much of the improvement in the area to Housing and Urban Development (HUD) and the Community Development Block Grant (CDBG).

Weir said that in the past year, 36 homes were torn down in Carbondale, about half of them on the Northeast Side. In the past ten years, more than 400 structures have been torn down. The Northeast Side will be inspected this summer.

The housing situation has improved at least 200 per cent in the last four or five years," Weir said. "There's a housing problem in all cities, but we've come a long way."

Weir said that generally he cooperates with Carbondale landlords notified of violations on their property. A property owner has 48 hours to respond to a violation notice, he said, "It's really not worth their while to fight us."

Referring to struggles between student tenants and landlords, Weir said that often a complaint will be filed at the end of a school year, with both tenant and landlord registering complaints. "All we can do is see that there are no code violations in the building. We can't for example, do anything about a complaint of rent being too high.

Consumers need diet planning aid

By Diane Pintozzi
Daily Egyptian Student Staff Writer

It is no news to anyone who shops at the local grocery store that food and nutrition concerns are rapidly undergoing serious changes both economically and in the food industry.

Food products are becoming enriched or fortified and processed in such a manner that consumers are more difficult to digest. Less natural food products are seen in the supermarkets (cereals without preservatives, etc.; some of these natural food products provide roughage, which is essential to good digestion. It is inevitable that consumers will have to become even more knowledgeable about nutrition and food labeling to insure their families will have a balanced diet.

The FDA's Division of Consumer Studies examined the public's attitudes, beliefs and knowledge concerning nutrition, food labeling and other food issues, using U.S. adults who do at least half the food shopping for their households.

With all the new changes in the food industry, FDA wanted to determine if shoppers had changed shopping habits over the past year. Half of the questioned said they changed their habits said they were buying less or cheaper cuts of meat, bought fewer fruits and vegetables and 15 percent of shoppers watched for specials and used more coupons.

It looks as though consumers are smarter, more health-minded shoppers. But what about labeling? FDA said only half the shoppers questioned even bothered to read the list of ingredients on products they buy. Few understood what the dates on food products meant, i.e., does the date mean the product should be "sold by" or "used by" or both?

Nutrition labeling was also examined. Nutrition labeling was originally developed to help consumers select the best nutritional buys. The FDA found a correlation between the amount of formal education the respondents had and their ability to understand and interpret labeling well enough to use the information for food choices. Of the persons who understood the nutrition labels, the majority preferred nutrition information on the product to having recipes on the label, and 45 percent said they would pay at least an extra 10 cents on their food bill for nutrition labeling, while the remaining 36 percent said they would be willing to pay a little less than that for the nutrition information.

Persons questioned also were asked about food substitutes. Most of the respondents to be eating "light" for adequate nutrition, the four food types and natural and synthetic vitamins. It was apparent from the replies, that most of those questioned did not know much about vitamins A and D, iron and riboflavin. And few shoppers knew about all these food sources.

It is necessary that the FDA or the USDA Department initiate a mass education program about food and nutrition. A starting point could be beginning 25 producing pamphlets or commercials on nutrition.

The study showed people were as concerned about nutrition as they were about bargains or more so. It doesn't seem likely that food processors can be pressed by legislation to tell it to the consumer to plan a well-balanced diet and it is up to the government to help the consumer by providing that education.

Beware of sunrays

By Sue Greene
Student Writer

Summer has arrived again, and with hotter and longer days comes a mass of thinny clad people. From beaches, to rooftops, to street corners, the American public can be found "catching rays" often unaware of possible harmful consequences.

That warm, wonderful sunlight is the leading cause of skin cancer. Deliberate tanning, not only increases the chance of skin cancer development but also contributes to the aging appearance of skin, warns The National Cancer Institute. Sunlight's harmful effects begin early and may be severe by the time one reaches 15 years.

Still cosmetic and fashion industries urge consumers to acquire that "bronze look" with their "tanning lamps" and "oranges." Some are palm-fulls of cocoa butter, coconut oil, iodine, or olive oil. Others are sprays aimed at sunscreen for a later use before tanning.

Some standards, such as the American Sunburn Ethic, cannot be altered overnight, but the average consumer should be made aware and reminded of over exposure pitfalls.

Warnings, similar to those required by the FDA on cigarette packages, should be made mandatory on all suntan lotions, creams, sprays, and oils. Public service radio and television spots would remind people of sun hazards during the summer months.

Notices posted at all public pools and beaches would tell individuals to avoid excess sunlight. Implementing the above would educate the public about hidden dangers of golden suntan and help diminish the most common of cancer, skin cancer.

Eat, drink and be merry...for now

By Arthur Hoppe

It was a dark and stormy night. Mr. and Mrs. Fred Faust sat by the fire, staring glumly at the books in their laps.

"What about a piece of cheesecake?" said Faust suddenly.

"What about our diet?" replied Mrs. Faust.

"I know," said Faust. "But it would be easier if we could have a drink."

"It would only make us want a cigarette."

"Yeah," said Faust with a sigh. "Giving them up sure put the weight on. But I'd sell my soul right now for a piece of cheesecake."

"I would, too."

There was a crash of lightning. The door burst open. "Mephistopheles Catering Service," said a slender figure with a waxed moustache. "Who ordered the cheesecake?"

"Make him go away," said Mrs. Faust, shrinking back in her chair. "You know cheesecake is fattening."

"Not our cheesecake, Madame," said Mephistopheles. "Like all our delicious viands, it is unconditionally guaranteed to be not only non-fattening, but unfattening. The more you eat, the more pounds you lose."

"You're selling health foods!" asked Faust.

"The ultimate. They go with our health gin, which is good for your liver, and our health cigarettes, which do wonders for your heart and lungs. Not a cough in a carload."

"It must be expensive," said Mrs. Faust suspiciously.

Mephistopheles smiled. "I believe you mentioned the price just before I entered. But no payments as due for ten years."

"Where do I sign?" asked Faust eagerly.

"Maybe we should think it over," said Mrs. Faust cautiously.

Short shot

The one thing an alarm clock fails to rouse is our good disposition.

By Tom Bell

"And, this week only," said Mephistopheles, "we're throwing in permanent tans, slender waists without exercise, naturally curly hair that never falls out, fingernails that thrive on chewing, a permanent déploré and a free face lift while you sleep!"

The cheesecake was, indeed, delicious. The Fausts huddled in their house to smoke, drink and eat to their heart's content. At the end of two weeks they emerged twenty pounds lighter and looking ten years younger.

Their friends were amazed. "How do you keep looking so fit?" they asked.

"Just will power," said Faust, would reply smugly, taking a second eclair before pouring himself another brandy and lighting a cigarette.

It was a dark and stormy night. "Just think," said a happy Faust to a happy Mrs. Faust over dinner, "it's been ten years since we subscribed to this catering service and they haven't billed us yet."

"Glad you mentioned it," said a grinning Mephistopheles, appearing in the doorway along with a flash of lightning. "The service is herewith canceled."

"But you can't," sobbed an aghast Mrs. Faust.

That, agreed Faust with a shudder, "be hell."

Senate amends budget, cuts reservoir funding

SPRINGFIELD (AP) — Backers of the controversial proposed Middie Fork reservoir project in eastern Illinois have lost another round in the Illinois Senate.

On a 27 to 16 vote, the full Senate Thursday voted down the state to the Division of Waterways before it would consider the proposed dam and reservoir necessary.

But the chief Senate advocate of the dam, Sen. Tom Morrissey, R-Hoopeful, said he will try to move the money restored if the measure fails and a conference committee in the closing days of the 1976 session.

"That's probably the best opportunity, " Morrissey said. "Sure I'm disappointed. We'll still be fighting the battle. Hopefully we'll win the war."

Danville officials and area legislators have been pushing hard for the project, which has been on the drawing board for several decades.

They say the reservoir is needed as a water supply and for flood control, although studies show the chief benefit would be as a recreation area.

Environmentalists have opposed the project, saying the scenic area should not be disturbed. Some legislators said the project, which could cost an estimated $25 million, should not be a state priority when money is short.

"This is just the beginning," said Davisville Senator John D. Rock. "If we take this step we are not going to go back." The price tag to this state is completely out of proportion.

For planning and acquisition of land has been approved in previous legislative sessions. Last December, Davisville voters approved a $5 million bond issue to pay for their share of the project.

Gov. Daniel Walker included the project in his state revenue budget request for the fiscal year beginning July 1. The House overturned its appropriations committee recommendations and left the project in the bill before sending it to the Senate.

California legislative passes resolution to petition Ford for Tokyo Rose pardon

SACRAMENTO (AP) — A Japanese-American woman convicted of spying for the late Tokyo Rose receives a "bicentennial pardon" from President Ford, the California Legislature said.

"This lady should not only not have been convicted of treason, but probably should have been awarded some kind of recognition," said one legislator.

The resolution urges President Ford to grant a full pardon to Iva Toguri D’Aquino of Chicago, who talked to American GIs by radio from Tokyo during World War II.

The Assembly adopted the resolution on a 43-vote and the Senate followed suit 22-4, in swift action that occurred while the National Japanese-American Congressional Caucus was in its construction in the state capital.

A Toguri was elected as an Assemblyman Floyd Mori, a Japanese-American, had ordered an investigation had exonerated her, the Press-Enterprise said.

The vigilance Democrat said of the legislation urged President Ford to "reaffirm her dignity because her "human dignity was stripped from her."

The resolution stated that during 1945 while Mrs. D’Aquino’s trial several witnesses testified that she was threatened and ordered to broadcast over Radio Tokyo by the Japanese military government.

The resolution, which carries no force of law, also said trial witnesses testified that Mrs. D’Aquino wasinnamoned an American during the war years in Japan."

On the Senate side, Nicholas Petris said America should "regret very seriously the action taken against this alleged Tokyo Rose that put a blight on the rest country."

"She was one of 14 women known as "Tokyo Rose," and the only one associated though she risked her life on many occasions," Petris said.

Vivid, simple lines in ‘Hard Times’

And I have to allow, with great shame, I keep thinking someone will come by sometime who will want to use the wood.”

“Welcome to Hard Times” by E. L. Doctorow

By Chris Maughn
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

I sat wide-eyed and there is a deep sense of pain after reading the concluding lines of E. L. Doctorow’s novel, “Welcome to Hard Times.”

In vivid, but simple, passages the narrator brings his audience through pain, physical, mental, repression, and hope. The characters are anyone we know and their misery is one we share even though we are in a different time and a different place.

A Review

The powerful story is told through the eyes of a fictional man named Blue, specifically selected mayor of Hard Times. Set in the old west, he relates the dreams of a handful of wanderers making a life out of burnt wood, sand, and sweat.

An impending doom surrounds the town. The inhabitants are grooving their way through an existence that will end as soon as the nearby ore mine begins production. They share this common knowledge and block out the inevitable future.

Doctorow explains their holding out in the passage but I try to dispose of your life to some purpose even though it appears to have none.

Doctorow continues with the plot. The various literary devices fall neatly into place. He injects brief philosophical passages leaving the reader, when he is through, thinking not so much of the story but of what Doctorow is saying.

It is quick reading. You pick up a clipping momentum and are not bogged down with lengthy descriptions or tangents that do not specifically relate to exactly what is happening in the novel.

There is an array of characters, but Doctorow introduces them very obviously. Put the book down. Pick it up the following day, and you have not lost the personality of anyone. You immediately remember who was saying what when they are at Hard Times.

For the sake of brevity, every word of the ledgers Mayas Blue has bothered to keep has a purpose. It is no plot gimmick, but a simple stream through, but missing any thought would remove the reader from completely experiencing the novel’s purpose.

A short, exciting book is a relief to come upon. Maybe I’ve taken the novel far too seriously, but after glancing at bookcovers proclaiming “bicentennial themes, plot to ‘Jaws’ and other currently popular trends, Doctorow’s novel was a good change of pace.

For those wanting action, it’s there. For those who dwell a bit on what they read, it’s also there. The novel is complete, superb of the Theatre Department. Ramco Cecilia, voice instructor, from the School of Music; Mary Lavin, pianist, and John Carver, technical director.

“All students were selected on the basis of their past performances,” Brewster said, “and our aim is to give them intensive training in musical theater.”

The workshop includes 12 students, all from Illinois.

Murphysboro to have an ‘Old Fashioned 4th’

By Michael P. Mullen
Entertainment Editor

June 28 through July 4 has been designated Murphysboro Bicentennial Week. The Murphysboro Bicentennial Commission will be sponsoring activities to coincide with the national bicentennial festivities.

On July 1 at about 9:30 p.m., the George Rogers Clark Trekkers are scheduled to arrive in Murphysboro. Residents of Jackson County are invited to meet Col. Clark and his Long Knives at the east edge of town and join in the march to the Jackson County Court House for a joint salute to the city using Revolutionary War weapons. The George Rogers Trekk was the only Revolutionary War reenactment to take place in Illinois.

On July 1 and 4, the commission will hold an “Old Fashioned Fourth of July Celebration” at Lake Murphysboro State Park. All activities will be held at the Clear View Picnic area from 10 a.m. until dusk. Participation on July 3 will include a traditional “Blanket Shoot” sponsored by the Jackson County Anti-Horse and Mule Thief Association. Events in the shoot include a chalk shot, buffalo shot, ground hog shot, cracker shot and knife and tomahawk throwing competition.

Those attending will be able to shoot the muzzle loading rifles for a fee.

All proceeds from the competition are donated to the Murphysboro Bicentennial Commission.

Also on July 3, hot air balloon rides will be offered from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. The balloons, which stands seven stories high, will rise to 200 feet.

The balloon will be tethered to the ground, on-shore in Murphysboro and operated by Chris Cuker of Ava.

The Southern Illinois Audubon Society will be giving guided nature hikes in the morning and afternoon on July 3.

Mike Morrison of Carbondale can be contacted at 687-2109 for the exact times.

For music: the Jackson County Anti-Horse and Mule Thief Association and the additional of children’s events in the afternoon.

Children’s games include a frog-jumping contest, turtle races and the trickles from the St. Louis Cardinals. There is an Old Fashioned Fourth of July celebration.

Officer says half of cadet class cheated on exam

WEST POINT, N.Y. (AP)—An expert government witness in the cheating case against the U.S. Military Academy has testified before a board of officers that half of the Class of 1977 cheated on graded electrical engineering homework.

"It's more than the double the number of cadets accused in what may be West Point's worst scandal in its 147-year history," according to sources present at the board's proceedings at West Point.

The board heard testimony from defense lawyers who questioned the home study records of three officers who were asked by a defense lawyer how to handle instances of cheating he found.

Capt. Bruce Sweeney, an instructor in the electrical engineering department, replied that the number was 300, "conservatively," based on his analysis of "well over 700" papers. The papers carried the weight of a quiz.

When asked for his "reasonable estimate" of the number who cheated, Sweeney's reply was 400.

Of the roughly 400 members of next year's graduating class, 181 have taken their cases to officers boards, which, in effect, are appellate bodies. Besides the 181, four cadets have resigned.

Previous officer boards have returned verdicts against 11 of 13 cadets whose cases have been heard since the scandal erupted last April. That is an unusually high proportion of guilty verdicts in such cases.

"The board before which Sweeney appeared is hearing seven cases."

His testimony buttressed defense efforts to show cheating is widespread at West Point and that the accused cadets are merely scapegoats.

Conviction of a violation of the honor code—which states that "a cadet will not lie, cheat, or steal, nor tolerate those who do"—means mandatory separation from West Point.

Churches alarmed by IRS proposal

By George W. Cornell
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK (AP)—American churches are fighting a proposed new tax regulation that would distinguish between church activities the government considers basic to religion, and those regarded outside that realm.

"Unconstitutional," the church spokesman said.

The proposed new Internal Revenue Service regulations would classify such church institutions as hospitals, schools and orphanages as not integral to religious function—a view the churches reject.

"The consequences of these proposals are frightening," says the Rev. Dr. Wayne Dehoney of Louisville, Ky., former president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

He adds it would mean "turning the clock back to the pre-Revolutionary era when local magistrates were permitted to define 'proper church activities'."

Spokesman of various denominations, Protestant and Roman Catholic, appeared at recent IRS hearings to oppose the proposed regulations, which IRS commissioners later are either to implement, modify or abandon.

The regulations would affect so-called "integrated auxiliaries" of the churches, specifically missions, societies, religious classes and youth and adult organizations of members.

But other affiliated operations—hospitals, parochial schools, colleges, nursing homes—would have to file "informational returns" to tax time assets and other financial data, although continuing to be exempt from tax payments.

"The proposed regulations strike at the heart and the body of the churches," says Eugene Kraeicky of Washington, D.C., general counsel of the U.S. Catholic Conference.

He adds that fixing separate classifications and financial "reporting obligations for various church institutions would "deny the identity and mandate the mission" of churches, and put the government in the business of defining what is religious and what is not.

He notes that St. Paul explicitly cites healing and teaching—hospitals and schools—as among the church's ministries, but that the proposed rules would "carve up" the churches, amputating from them their educational and welfare ministries.

Church spokesmen also maintained the regulations would violate constitutional prohibitions against government "establishing" of religion by allowing a government agency arbitrarily to judge what is a church and to determine its legitimate ministry.

Interview suggestions for teacher applicants

Why should I hire you? Why are you interested in teaching? What would you do if...

There were among the most difficult questions for education students to answer when being interviewed for teaching jobs last year, according to a questionnaire taken by Harvey S. Ideas, director of the Career Planning and Placement Center (CPPC) at SIU, and Vincent Avallone, assistant director of Placement and Career Advising, the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse.

The mail and telephone survey was taken of 100 teachers degree candidates, at SIU, and the University of Wisconsin-La Crosse, who had been interviewed and agreed teaching contracts for the 1976-77 school year. They told of their interviewing experiences and gave recommendations to future teachers about what to do or not to do being interviewed. They also told what questions were commonly asked and most difficult to answer.

Many people responding to the survey said it was difficult to know if the candidate would fit into their situation. He asked questions such as "Why are you interviewing for this system?"; and he wanted short, clear answers.

A number of the questions involved the candidate's commitment to education. Such questions as "Why are you in the field?" and "Why will you make a good teacher?" were frequently asked. A typical question regarding professional qualifications was, "What is your philosophy of education?"

A common concern was that recruiters also were interested in the personal and interpersonal qualifications of the applicant. They asked questions about the candidate's view of himself. "What can you offer your community and school outside the classroom?", and about his view of himself with others. "What kind of relationship would you like to have with your fellow teachers?"

Survey answers indicated that questions were questioned closely about their future plans. Questions in teaching marriage and children were frequently asked of women.

Responses to the questionnaire included advice to seniors preparing for interviews. They suggested the student know himself, know his profession, have questions ready, and be honest.

Above all, be prepared for anything.

Further information on education careers and jobs may be obtained from CPPC, Woody Hall, 3A.

Man accused of hitting cafe owner

Jerome Solomon, Route 2, Murphysboro, was arrested and charged with battery Thursday night at Cowone's Restaurant, 323 S. Illinois Ave.

Solomon allegedly hit Robert Cowone during an argument, police said. Solomon was released on bond.

Mark Gibbs, a SIU senior in physical education for men, was arrested Thursday for a warrant charging him with a felony theft after he was allegedly found to have items in his possession which had been stolen from the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Store, 1275 E. Main St.

The stolen items included a Citizens Band (CB) radio and CB accessories. Carbondale and SIU detectives made the arrest. Gibbs was taken to the Jackson County Jail in Murphysboro.

Charles Busch, of 606 W. Freeman St., reported his house was broken into Wednesday night. Items taken were a television and a ring. Estimated loss was $750.

‘Patchwork on parade’ will feature quilting art, glimpses of our past

By Karen L. Book

Student Writer

"Quilting is almost 100 per cent a woman’s art form—an under-appreciated activity," said Susan Koleski, coordinator of Patchwork on Parade, a quilt exhibit on display from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 3rd July, at Carbondale University Mall.

The six-day exhibit will offer a unique glimpse of Illinois and American history through the stories behind the quilts and the exhibit’s participants.

The first day of the exhibit will be highlighted by a quilt, "show and share." Quilters’ Newsletter—a national quilting magazine, will be taking pictures of Southern Illinois quilts for publication in the magazine. The first 100 people who sign up to bring a quilt will receive a free quilting book.

Koleski, who is writing a book on quilts of Southern Illinois, is eager to find and visit women who have quilts and to take pictures.

Verdict awaited in mercenaries trial

LAUNDA, Angola (AP)—Black Africa’s first great courtroom drama of the year—Legion of the White Mercenaries—will come to a close Monday when a people’s revolutionary court decision on the case of those accused white mercenaries should face a firing squad.

There is no appeal against the action of the court, which could also order lengthy prison terms and even expulsion of the three Americans and 18 Britons captured in the civil war. Any death sentence must be confirmed by Angola President Agostinho Neto.

A death verdict could only be a nightmare for Dr. Neto, a gymnast trained to save life and a poet centered with humanity. But above all he is an African leader whose message on mercenaries is eagerly awaited by the Third World as a warning on the liberation struggles in Rhodesia and South Africa.

He must also weigh his own political future in a country still divided by bitter memories of the war and lingering sporadic fighting, where the nine-day trial was broadcast over local radio and TV and demonstraters in the streets threw rocks at police and army (“A death verdict could only be a nightmare for Dr. Neto, a gymnast trained to save life and a poet centered with humanity. In other action, the council is expected to receive notice from the Illinois Commerce Commission on electric and gas rate increases of 11 and 11 per cent respectively for retail users of Central Illinois Public Service Company utilities.

The ICC is holding hearings at the request of CIP-IR’s rate increase which would result in a monthly increase of $1.50 for electricity and $0.08 for gas for the average users. The commission notified affected municipalities allowing each to comment on the proposals.

CIPS was granted a $176 million electric and gas rate increase on March 24 of about 30 per cent which it requested. The rate change was asked for was based on a $22 million increase in revenues and a $2 million increase in its service costs.

The council will also discuss, but take no action on a proposed contract with the Federated Human Relations, the Illinois Human Services, the Illinois Community Service Board’s custom quilting business, the proposed site plan for the building of parking lots at Memorial Hospital.

To discuss North Murdural project

By Steve Hahn

Daily Egyptian Student Writer

The City Council in an informal meeting Monday, is expected to approve a list of required requirements which must be met by a Carbondale land developer before the council will approve renaming for the North Murdural Redevelopment Project.

Scott Ratter, an assistant to the city manager who assisted the request, said he did not know what specific alterations would be made on the city’s request. He did not have an admission charge.

At the 2nd Bandoneon Planning Commission hearing on the proposed project, a request for rezone a portion of Little Crab Orchard Creek, from an agricultural to a business designation. Parrish plans to construct a 150,000 square feet shopping center on the site.

"The City Council asked Parrish to file an environmental impact statement before they would approve the planning commission’s request for the rezoning. Ratter said Friday, the impact statement has not been completed.

Opposition to the Murdural project developed when the Carbondale chapter of the League of Women Voters objected because of its proximity to the South Fork of Crab Orchard Creek. They contend Parrish’s plans would cause water runoff and flood down-stream residential areas to the creek. Bill Boyd, a Carbondale city engineer, said the project would not flood homes.

Gay Peoples Union president resigns post

By Mary Gardner
Daily Egyptian Staff Writer

The president of the Gay People's Union (GPU) has resigned because of the way she termed lack of interest in the organization. "In a way, I'm leaving in disgust," she said.

"If there was more interest, I could get cooperation," said Ann Smith (not her real name). "As it is, I do things they have to be done," she continued. She said she does not like the responsibility of knowing if she does not do something it does not get done.

Smith said she did not want her name published because her parents still know she is gay, and she does not want them to find out that she is gay. She is a senior at Southern Illinois University who might read The Daily Egyptian.

However, she said, all the people she associates with at work and in radio and television (her major) know she is gay.

"There is a lot of dissatisfaction within the organization," she said. "Quite a few people have complained that they do not do anything for the community or politically."

Jackson took over the position of Faculty Senate president six weeks ago, after being elected during spring semester.

The 35-year-old professor talked about himself and his role as Faculty Senate president during an interview Friday morning at his office in Farner Hall.

Jackson earned a B.A. degree in English from Arkansas State University at Arkadelphia, Ark. and received his master's degree in theatre at Baylor University in Waco, Tex.

A secretary came into the office with a can of soda pop for Jackson. She quickly left, and he took a sip from the can and continued talking.

Jackson attended Baylor on the Southwest Scholarship. Jackson attended Baylor on the southwest Scholarship. Jackson was chairman of Senate. He said he served on committees with folders, books and schedules. A bulletin board was covered with campaign buttons and bumper stickers, including a McGeorge-Eagleton sticker and a reminder that Shakespeare was a gay writer. Jackson is a former student at Ball State.

"My only teaching job has been here at SIU," Jackson said. ...
Southern athlete gains Olympic try

Southern's first woman athlete was named to the U.S. Olympic squad recently, but she won't be in Montreal next month when the traditional torch reaches the city.

Elynn Boyd in Olympic games will be in Toronto August 4-11. They are for the women's track and field athletes and the competition is as fierce as the other Olympics.

Boyd, a junior in therapeutic recreation at SIU, will be competing in the 60-yard dash. Last winter she was at an earlier national track meet in Farmingdale, N.Y. She owns the national record at 60 yards with a 15.7 second timing.

At the national games Boyd had a better time, 16.1, in the qualifying heats, but during the finals, her time was only 17.1 because of a soft, soggy track.

Besides the 60-yard dash, Boyd may also compete in the 400 yard dash and the women's relay. The final selections haven't been announced yet, so those events are still up in the air.

During the nationals she almost won the slalom race, but was disqualified for a false start. The slalom race is an obstacle course.

"I was going up the ramp and started to fall off, and I said, 'Oh, hell,' and against the theory said 'help instead,' so the spotters grabbed my chair," Boyd explained. "Boyd arrived at this high point in her sports career by the result of many years of hard work.

"I've had a lot of defects. I've used a wheelchair for most of her life. Baseball surfaced in 1977 in her home city of Baltimore, Boyd got interested in sports.

"I keep getting over it and since then she has played basketball and ran track ever since with a great deal of success. In basketball, after her start with the Baltimore Ravens, Boyd, as a member of the All-Star/South Women's basketball team, was named an All-American. That year the female slalomists finished second in the National Invitational Tournament for wheelchair slalom teams. Boyd, was recently notified she has been selected to play basketball for the U.S. women's team in Toronto.

"Boyd admitted at first her family was afraid she would hurt herself, but they didn't try to talk her out of athletics. This won't be Boyd's first trip. In 1974, she competed in an international yet track meet in Stoke Mandeville, England. She collected two gold medals and one silver.

"In tough international competition is, Boyd has set stiff practice schedules for herself. She's run in the 15 to 20 miles a day, at least four days a week, plus the pushing around campus is good exercise, too," Boyd said. "I sprint home from work every day, but the road has to be well represented on it. It's hard to sprint on a brick road.

CINCINNATI (AP) — George Foster, fa-er emerging as Cincinnati's top Triple Crown contender since Frank Robinson, worried that he was washed up in baseball three years ago. Then a funny thing happened on the way back to the big leagues.

He found the will to survive through karate, hypnosis and the Bible. The lead 27-year-old slugger leads the National League in runs batted in with 40 and is threatening teammate Johnny Bench's club RBI record of 148. He also ranks second in the league with a .342 batting average and is third in home runs with 15.

I've given the Triple Crown some thought and realized what people thought," said Foster, whose insertion in the lineup batting average . and is third in home runs . have to emphasize the positive over the shortchange," Foster said.

"I'm not thinking stats. That would stifle me," said Foster, who appeared consigned to an obscure role until his talents surfaced.

Foster feels his off-season pursuit of karate has helped him maintain consistency and control.

"It helped my body control, coordination and reaction," he said, "and, frankly, it's just plain self defense," said the 6-foot-1, 196-pound native of Hawthorne, Calif.

"Batting is you against the pitcher. It's up to him to get you out and it's up to him to counter your thinking," said Foster, who is on a 12-game hitting streak. His 16-game streak last year was the longest of the season for the Reds. He finished with a 300 batting average. 38 RBIs and 23 homers.

He is Cincinnati's first Triple Crown candidate since Robinson challenged in 1961 by hitting 322 with 27 home runs and 124 RBIs. He followed it with a .342 mark in 1962 and added 39 homers and 136 RBIs.

Foster was acquired by the Reds in 1971 San Francisco in a swap that sent infielder Frank Duffy and pitcher Vern Geisheft to the Giants. But after batting only 200 in 59 games with Cincinnati in 1972, he was sent to the minor leagues.

"The low point of my life was being traded," Foster said. "I guess a guy shares figures that whatever abilities you had wasn't good enough to help them. But I decided at that time to make a better disguise. I can adjust better now to adversity," Foster said.

"The demotion really helped straighten me out. I realized I had to give it my all because it might be my last shot," said Foster, who is batting over .300 in his last 26 games, with 38 RBIs during the stretch.

A visit to a hypnotist put the rest into perspective. "The hypnotist brought out the total picture. He stressed that you have to perpetually work positively on a negative," Foster said. "A lot of guys shortchange themselves.

Baseball salutes great moments

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball saluted Don Larsen, Hank Aaron and Joe DiMaggio Thursday as authors of three of the game's most memorable moments.

New York Yankees and baseball official Larsen, Oct. 8, 1956, perfect game for the New York Yankees against the Brooklyn Dodgers in the World Series, voted the most memorable World Series-All Star Game moment.

Aaron's 715th homer, which broke Babe Ruth's all-time record on April 8, 1974, was voted the Most Memorable National League Moment and DiMaggio's 56-game hitting streak in 1941 won American League Memorable Moment honors.

Commissioner Bowie Kuhn, taking time out from the game's continuing legal problems, announced the winners at a mid-afternoon press conference.

Winners of two other categories—the Major League Baseball Player of the Year and over-all most memorable moment—will be announced this week before the All-Star game in Philadelphia next month.

The winning player's perfect game and DiMaggio's unmatchsed hitting streak were announced during a press conference performance, the only no-hitter in World Series history, led all the events with 32 votes, a wide margin over Bill Mazeroski's home run which won the 1960 World Series for Pittsburgh and received 332 votes.

Since most of her competitors use customized wheelchairs, the Squid is popular among female wheelchair athletes and is using Boyd a new chair for the Olympics.

"The chairs are different for track. We've got them made because they are customized with such things as cantled wheels," Boyd explained.

Customized chair or not, she has a determined look on her face.

Rich De Angelis, coach of the Squid said Boyd's chances of winning a gold medal are good because she's worked so hard and does the best she can. Said Boyd, "I'm excited about breaking that national record."

De Angelis went on to explain that the national records had been held and all the times were off, except for the competitors from California. He said the reason the records were off was the hot, muggy conditions of the meet.

Boyd thinks her best shot for a gold medal in the women's relay team, if she gets selected. As for the 60-yard dash, she is concerned about a competitor from Austria. She was defeated by the Austrian in England by one-half a second. Boyd said, "I'm afraid the Austrian woman has done since.

After track, there are still other sports for Boyd to conquer in the future. She's contemplating parachuting.

"I'd like to parachute some day. I know a disabled guy who's parachuted and done some pretty cool things," Boyd said.

Whatever she decides to do, whether it's parachuting or something else, SIU's 27-year-old student will be well represented in the Olympics this year by Ellyn Boyd.

Cars gain spotlight

"Good evening ladies and gentlemen, and welcome to another Saturday night of racing at the Williamson County Speedway," explains Whitlow's wife Margaret. "It's exciting when you see someone put on a good show."

"You have only to run the McAndrew Stadium a mile a day, at least four days a week, plus the pushing around campus is good exercise, too," Boyd said. "I sprint home from work every day, but the road has to be well represented on it. It's hard to sprint on a brick road.

Two bomber drivers share the lead in point standings as of last Saturday, which at seasons' end will award the leader a trophy and extra cash.

So while other people spend their Saturday nights at ballgames or parties, this crowd gets it's pleasure by viewing highly competitive auto racing around a half mile dirt oval track for prizes, money, and seasonal points.

Bombers, or street cars, have replaced the outdated modified coupes (antiques) of earlier seasons, and the late model class has improved this year.

The reason for the change is simple. "It just seems like a challenge," Foster said.

The other class of auto racing at the Speedway is late model type, led in the point standings by Terry Walston over several other drivers by just a few points.

As Mrs. Whitlow states, "racing's future is in late models."

Two people to remember this April 11th is Dr. Marion, who run and promote the Speedway located across from the Williamson County Airport. Both feel the crowns will pick up even more so with the new racing format.

In addition, rain has forced racing to be postponed three times already this season, which at seasons' end will award the leader a trophy and extra cash.
