High fares blamed for Amtrak woes

By Phil Milano
Staff Writer

Amtrak ridership on the new "River Cities" route linking Carbondale to St. Louis has not been up to expectations since it began operation on April 29, and Ross Capon, executive director of the National Association of Railroad Passengers, attributes that to "outrageous" fares.

Capon said NARP representatives have told him that "people come to a station, discover the fare and then turn and walk away."

Fares on the River Cities route, which includes a stop in Centralia, are high because the Amtrak marketing leadership is conservative and "heavily oriented toward high fares," Capon said.

But Debbie Marciniak, spokeswoman for Amtrak, said the low ridership was caused by a lack of public awareness of the new line. She also said low attendance at the 1984 World's Fair in New Orleans was a factor. World's Fair attendance has been averaging 45,000 daily, while earlier projections estimated attendance would be 75,000 per day.

Capon also said a late March announcement of the new line meant a short lead time to organize tour groups for the fair.

A major reason for establishing the River Cities line was to provide transportation for 7.9 million people from St. Louis and connections farther west to the fair, which began May 11.

"We are expecting a profit from the line in the first year, but it's difficult to make a judgment based on the limited amount of information we have," she said. "It's much too early to tell."

Projected annual revenues from the line extension are expected to be $3.8 million.

Amtrak hoped the new extension would add about 140 passengers per day to the "Missouri Mule" route from Kansas City, Mo., to St. Louis, because it would link it to the "City of New Orleans" line, which runs from Chicago to New Orleans. However, only 40 additional passengers have used the line per day since it began service.

A trip from Carbondale to Kirkwood, Mo., (133 miles) on the line costs 19.6 cents per mile, or $26, Capon said. A comparable trip from Chicago to Kewanee (131 miles) costs 16.8 cents per mile, or $22. A trip from St. Louis to New Orleans (735 miles) on the line costs 14.6 cents per mile, or $107, while a trip from Chicago to Jackson, Miss., (742 miles) costs 14.2 cents per mile, or $135.

Marciniak said Capon's comparisons did not make sense, and that he was "comparing apples to oranges."

Up—and out Resort Air to add flights...

By Mike Majchrowitz
Staff Writer

Resort Air is adding to its flight schedule, filling the void at the Southern Illinois Airport left by the bankrupt Air Illinois.

Ron Tucker, regional manager for Resort Air, said his company will offer weekday arrivals and departures to and from Springfield as well as expand its St. Louis-Carbondale service to include 12 additional weekend flights. The new flights will begin July 1.

Resort Air, based in Lake of the Ozarks, Mo., will also start a small package delivery service between the airports it serves.

George Karnes, vice-chairman of the board of directors of the Southern Illinois Airport, said the new flights should improve the airport's fiscal outlook. "It makes things look a little better after the demise of Air Illinois," Karnes said.

"They're (Resort Air) coming close now, with this new schedule, to matching Air Illinois' flight schedule, but they're not quite there yet, and we certainly hope they will be," he said.

Karnes said the loss of Air Illinois crews, maintenance operations and other business hurt the airport. He pointed out that Resort Air is based in Missouri and doesn't provide the same amount of business for the airport that the Carbondale-based Air Illinois did.

Tucker said that his 14-month-old company would seek to base more of its operation at the airport in the near future. Currently one plane and two crew members remain over night at the airport. Beginning July 1, those figures will double.

Tucker said in the future his company may be able to completely replace Air Illinois service.

"I would say, down the road, when we're able to add more aircraft as we go along, we would probably be able to add that many flights," he said.

Tucker said plans for Carbondale-to-Chicago service are "on the drawing board" and could be seen as early as September. He said his company is planning a St. Louis-to-Paducah, Ky. route which could later include a Carbondale stop-over.

Resort Air is looking forward to the new Paducah service and not ruling out Carbondale, Tucker said.

"They're (company officials) very excited and elated about it. They feel it's going to be a good city for us and that there will be a need for a Carbondale to Paducah (flight)," he said.

The new Carbondale-to-Springfield flights will depart Carbondale 6:45 a.m. weekdays and arrive in Springfield 7:30 a.m. The flight will return from Springfield 7 p.m. and arrive in Carbondale at 7:45 p.m.

Shari Rhode, SIU Legal Counsel, was chosen on Wednesday to head the creditors committee at the first hearing of Air Illinois' bankruptcy petition.

Rhode was selected to head the five member committee at the hearing at the U.S. Courthouse and Federal Building in Benton.

The purpose of the first hearing was the election of the head of the committee and discussion of the functions, authority and responsibilities of the committee.

Air Illinois filed voluntarily for Chapter 11 bankruptcy May 16, exactly one month after it ceased passenger service from the Southern Illinois Airport. Officials said at the time that they were appealing for bankruptcy shelter because of lawsuits filed by the companies' creditors.

Air Illinois officials have estimated their losses from the voluntary grounding could be as high as $4 million.

The attorney for Air Illinois in the bankruptcy proceedings is Joel Kunin of East St. Louis. Presiding over the hearings is Judge James D. Trabue.

Air Illinois' financial difficulties began with the crash of a Hawker-Siddeley 748 aircraft near Pinckneyville that claimed the lives of all 10 people on board.

Air Illinois officials voluntarily grounded the airline while awaiting results of federal investigations of its operations. Shortly after the grounding, a Missouri based airline, Resort Air, began service out of Southern Illinois Airport.

Air Illinois halted passenger service April 17. Officials failed to sell the ailing air carrier to Air Midwest, of Wichita, Kan., and later to International Basic Resources, of Dover, Del.

Neither Air Illinois President Roger Street nor Vice President Alice Mitchell could be reached for comment on the hearing.

Age limit boost would hurt, owners say

By Jim Ludeman
Staff Writer

A proposal that would ban people under 21 from Carbondale bars has some of the bar owners in Carbondale concerned.

A spokeswoman for Gatsby's who asked not to be named said Gatsby's would experience a drop in entertainment business and revenues if the proposal passed. She said the city was "not justified in blaming the bars for underage drinking...it happens everywhere."

According to the spokeswoman, enforcement at Gatsby's has been adequate. The problem, she said, is that on busy nights, bartenders often assume that most patrons who appear to be 21 are of legal drinking age, and limit their ID checks to those who look underage.

She said she didn't think the proposal would stop underage drinking, because people will begin to drink somewhere other than in a bar.

Gatsby's has had few problems with policing, she said. However, Gatsby's ranked third in Carbondale in the number of underage drinking arrests during the last four years.

Mickey Howe, owner of Airwaves, blames bars on South Illinois Avenue for the proposal.

"Why penalize other bars because of the Strip? They're the ones with the majority of the violations." Howe said. "While Airwaves is not perfect, we do try."

Howe said that he feared he would lose business because he depends on revenue generated by the bar's entertainment. Many underage people go to Airwaves to listen to the bands and to dance, he said.

Even if the proposal doesn't pass, Howe said Airwaves will be "just as strict as before."

Coal company offers to repair beach

BENTON (AP) -- Old Ben Coal Co. has offered to pay for repairs to the Rend Lake North Marcur Branch Recreation Area, damaged by what federal officials believe was underground mining that caused the land to sink.

Jim Chady, vice president of Old Ben's Illinois division, said in a news release this week that the firm volunteered to pay the cost of replacing a bathroom and repairing the beach.

Chady said engineers from Old Ben and the Army Corps of Engineers had discussed the damage, caused by subsidence - sinking of the land - following longwall mining. Chady said more meetings would be conducted to work out details of the company's offer.

The amount of money that would be paid under the proposal has not been determined.

In another mining development, a new proposal would require coal companies to have a special use permit before they could begin longwall mining within the city of Benton's zoning area. Longwall mining is a form of underground mining in which a coal seam is removed in one operation by cutting the coal along one continuous face, or wall, of the mine. These walls are often several yards long.

City Attorney Gerald Owens is preparing the proposal, which also would apply to land one and one-half miles surrounding the town.

"This way there would be a public hearing on the mining before it begins," Owens said. "The areas which would be affected would have notice."

BAR: Owners say law would hurt

"It would serve them (the Strip) right to lose all that business, but it's gonna hurt me. We've done a good job policing ourselves, and we're gonna pay," he said.

James Kelly, owner and manager of Pinch Penny Pub, said the proposal would not have a great effect on his business. However, Kelly said the proposal was another hardship to enforce on bar management, and this reflects a "repeated attitude on the part of the (Carbondale) liquor board."

Kelly said he was more opposed to the proposal on principle than on the possible lost revenue to Pinch Penny Pub.

Kelly questioned the ability of the police department to enforce the proposal if it becomes law.

"A lot of people bring their kids to my pub. What are the cops going to do, arrest a nine-year old kid?"

Paulette Curkin, owner of Mainstreet East, said the proposal wouldn't effect her business, because Mainstreet East catered to an older, gay crowd. She said the proposal would present a problem for younger gays, because they would no longer have anywhere to go.

"You can't not allow underage people to socialize, and everything in this town is geared towards alcohol, so where are people going to go?" she said.

Channel One owner Dennis Immen said the proposal would create a big problem in Carbondale. Underage students would then have nothing to do, he said.

Immen suggested the City consider other alternatives, such as raising the fines for underage drinking.

FARES: Ridership less than hoped

"You can't compare prices for rail trips in different areas. You need to look at other modes of transportation and prices offered in the same area to see how they affect pricing," she said.

Another factor is that people may not want to travel to one area as much as another one, so prices vary accordingly, Marciniak said.

Marciniak said there was no contingency plan if use levels didn't rise to expectations, but "something would be worked out if the line didn't work."

Amtrak is looking at ways to improve rider numbers on the new line, including an increase in advertising this summer, usually a peak season for travel in which heavy advertising is not needed.

The cost for capital improvements needed to establish the line was $229,000, Marciniak said. About 50 percent of that amount came from the federal government.

Defense fund bill clears Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) -- A $291 billion spending plan for the Pentagon -- 6.9 percent higher after inflation than its current budget -- cleared the Senate before dawn Thursday and immediately headed toward a conference committee for compromising with House-passed legislation.

The Senate approved the bill 82-6 after voting to urge European allies to increase defense spending, but refusing to threaten a withdrawal of U.S. troops from the continent if they fail to do so.

State Senate OKs lottery tax

SPRINGFIELD (AP) -- The Illinois Senate on Thursday approved a proposed 25 percent tax on lottery tickets to help pay for public education, despite complaints that it would reduce the take of the popular state-sanctioned gambling.

Governor Thompson said later that the measure would be "destructive" to the lottery and to the services it helps finance, and vowed to veto it if it reaches his desk.

Approved on a 43-14 roll call, the measure goes back to the House for its agreement.

Plan could reduce health bills

SPRINGFIELD (AP) -- A compromise plan aimed at controlling growth in hospital bills by trying to stimulate competition in the health-care industry was announced Thursday by Governor Thompson.

The agreement, to be incorporated in legislation pending in the Illinois House, capped negotiations over the past year and a half between lawmakers pressing for lower medical costs and a resistant medical profession.

The bill originally would have imposed strict limits on hospital revenues, but that approach was cut out by the Senate last month after intense lobbying by the Illinois Hospital Association.

GPSC wants chemical spraying policy

By David Liss
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council on Wednesday passed a resolution calling for a policy governing the use of herbicides and insecticides on the SIU-C campus.

"We decided that we should come up with some sort of resolution that addressed the question of what is the University's policy for applying these types of chemicals and what will it be in the future, and will it be a responsible policy," said Tony Chavez, GPSC executive board member.

The resolution calls for the policy to be open for input from all campus constituency groups, and to be monitored by the currently deactivated Campus Natural Areas Committee. The resolution was created as a result of concerns arising from the recent spraying of Thompson Woods with the herbicide Roundup.

THE GPSC, under former president Ann Greeley, had submitted a memo to the CNAC stating that the council "is against any use of herbicides this spring until more information can be provided regarding who will complete the spraying, who will supervise the spraying and how will possible health-related complaints be dealt with."

The memo also recommended postponement of spraying until the fall semester so that more information could be gathered.

"The Campus Natural Areas Committee chose not to respond to GPSC concerns which they had solicited," said Chavez, voicing one of the main concerns dealt with in the resolution.

"One thing we pointed out," said Gerald Coorts, a member of the former committee, "was that the herbicide could be applied only by licensed experts." Experts know the safety measures required, he said.

ANOTHER CONCERN was the weather conditions on June 8 and 9, when the Roundup was applied, said Stolar.

"I was out at Cedar Lake at the time protecting my belongings because they were blowing away," he said, referring to high winds.

Stolar said they were also concerned that no prior public notification was given.

"We suggested the herbicide could be used, but only at the appropriate time," said Coorts. The decision as to the appropriate time and the necessary safeguards was left to the expert in charge of spraying, he said.

A meeting will be arranged between Stolar and President Albert Somit to further discuss the issue, said Stolar.

IN OTHER business, the council discussed the planned Arena locker room renovations and decided that not enough information was available for a resolution to be passed. However, some questions concerning the issue were answered.

The physical plant estimate for the locker room renovation is $100,000, said Stolar. The Athletics Department will pay $50,000, and University fallout money from last year will cover the other $50,000. The GPSC wanted to know if the athletics money would come from a recent fee increase.

Jean Paratore, assistant to the vice president for student affairs, said the $50,000 for athletics will come from carry-over money. Carry-over money is money that is left over from previous years that is unbudgeted, she said.

The GPSC was also concerned about University compliance with Title IX regulations that would require that if a locker room were renovated for men's athletics, the old locker room would also have to be renovated and given to women's athletics.

Drowned man recovered from lake Thursday

By Mike Majchrowitz
Staff Writer

The body of a Cedar Lake drowning victim was recovered early Thursday morning. The man has been identified as David L. Miller, 31, of Herrin.

Four Cedar Lake employees discovered the body Thursday at 7:27 a.m. floating approximately where the man had been last seen alive. The body was floating east of the Pomona boat launch on the lake's south side.

Jackson County Coroner George Ragsdale was called in at 8:30 a.m. and ordered the body taken to St. Joseph Hospital in Murphysboro, where it was later identified as Miller. Ragsdale said he will order a corner's inquest within the next two weeks.

Miller had been missing since Monday afternoon when he was stopped by a Carbondale police officer and a Cedar Lake patrol officer for a routine safety check.

Minutes later, the officers found Miller's boat on U.S. Forest Service shoreline, east of the Pomona boat launch.

An extensive ground search

Monday only turned up Miller's hat floating on the lake. Five divers and seven boats from the Jackson County and the Carbondale emergency service and disaster agencies combed the lake from Monday evening to Wednesday night with no trace of Miller.

Minors will still drink despite city's bar ban

PROPOSING THE most drastic means to solve a problem when alternatives are available seems like a funny way to run a police department and city.

Police Chief Ed Hogan suggests a liquor code change that would ban underage drinkers from Carbondale bars. Hogan and Pat McMeen, assistant city attorney, say other measures aimed at cutting back the number of underage drinkers have not been effective.

Maybe city officials can't see the forest for the trees. If fining bar owners hasn't worked and imposing stiffer fines on underage drinkers hasn't worked, isn't it a bit optimistic to think that banning underage drinkers from the bars is going to cause them to stop drinking in Carbondale?

IF AN 18, 19 or 20-year-old wants a drink, he or she is going to have one. If not on the Strip, then at someone's house or a bar outside of city limits.

Isn't this proposal after all a drastic way to achieve what other policies have failed to do, mostly because they weren't vigorously administered?

If the city wanted to cut back on underage drinking, the three bars where 75 percent of all underage drinking arrests have occurred would not still have a liquor license. This is an inexcusable example of the city's failure to control licensing of bars that violate city ordinances.

RATHER THAN taking stronger measures against establishments that have been proven to violate city ordinances, Hogan proposes barring all underage students from the bars. This logic perpetuates the myth that the only reason to go to a bar is to drink.

This discounts the idea that some students go to bars to see watch large-screen TV, to play pool or video games, or to socialize.

THE PRIMARY effect of the proposed ordinance amendment will be to drive students off the Strip, which most students can walk to and from, to bars outside the city, where most will probably drive after drinking.

House parties will also become more popular. Ordinance amendments to make hosts responsible for underage drinking at their parties are implausible. At a party of 60 or more people, with guests constantly coming and going, how is a host supposed to have knowledge of the ages of those drinking?

Booting underage students from bars may be the simplest solution, but considering its effects, it seems to cause more serious problems than it alleviates.

Letters Legislator warns against remapping

Dear Editor,
Unparalleled legislation regarding judicial reapportionment has been passed by the Illinois Senate and is now being acted upon by the House of Representatives. The judicial remap proposed is clearly political, potentially unconstitutional and looks to be a purposeful attempt to pack the Illinois Supreme Court.

The judicial branch of government has traditionally been relatively non-political. To now make it Illinois court system a pawn of political concerns is a violation of citizen intent for the judicial system.

Judicial districts have not been remapped since 1964 and circuits have remained substantially unchanged for nearly 100 years. Only under rare circumstances has Illinois undertaken the serious step of judicial redistricting. No such circumstance exists now.

One party clearly dominates the legislative branch of government. One would hope it is not their intent to use their "once in a lifetime" opportunity to gain control of the judicial branch, too. However, one of their former state representatives, now turned appellate judge, is one of the chief proponents of this plan.

It is not too late to stop this attempt. Neither party should use its temporary power to gerrymander judicial districts, and seize control of the judiciary for its own permanent partisan advantage. Alarmed voters should contact their state representatives and the Governor, urgently. — Judy Koehler, State Representative, 45th District

Thief rips off treasured bull horns

You may have seen us on the road. We drive a brown Blazer that once had bull horns on the top. We don't have the bull horns anymore. On Sunday, June 10, someone literally ripped the horns off our truck.

It would be easy for us to make the drive to Kentucky, where we understand the same type of horn is sold, but it wouldn't be the same. Those horns have shared two years of our life.

They went through the snow in the mountains and the heat of the desert with us. They crossed the Continental Divide with us just a little over two months ago when we decided to return to the home of our youth. It's rather sad to think that all our good memories of Illinois will now be tainted by this thoughtless episode.

We just wanted to let the people of Southern Illinois know that should one of their friends suddenly be sporting a set of bull horns, chances are you are associating with thieves, and it might be wise to choose your friends more carefully.

To that one particular young man we wish you luck. We hope your conscience will allow you to enjoy those horns as much as we did. They will certainly give you distinction. Sincerely, — Mr. and Mrs. R. Snider, Carterville

Viewpoint

What happens after a bill becomes law

Editor's note: The following was written by Joan Parker and Jack Van Der Slik of the Illinois Legislative Studies Center at Sangamon State University.

WE RECOMMEND an article by Charlie Wheeler in the June Illinois Issues magazine. Wheeler offers a humorous version of the standard civics book explanation of "How a Bill Becomes a Law." He details a variety of legislative and parliamentary devices which illustrate the notion that lawmaking sometimes occurs differently from the way it's taught in school.

While agreeing with Wheeler that the legislative process is more complicated than the books describe it, we would take his thesis one step further: the textbooks also don't always make clear what happens to a bill after it becomes a law.

Who is supposed to make sure that the new law is put into effect the way that lawmakers intended? The answer is nobody in particular. In fact, those who wanted the bill in the first place better pay attention to the administrative phase. We will illustrate this point by looking at a new voter registration law.

SENATE PRESIDENT Philip Rock and House Speaker Michael Madigan sponsored and worked for passage of SB 1301 last year. It was signed into law by Gov. Thompson in early January. The legislation was backed by Project Vote, a nonpartisan coalition of labor, civic, church and social service organizations, which are concerned about the almost 2 million Illinoisians of voting age who are unregistered.

Among other things, the new law provided for greatly expanded voter registration opportunities. Election officials would be required to deputize, upon request, a whole range of people to become volunteer voter registrars.

These include the following, or their designees: high school principals, college and university presidents, librarians, labor union officials, and here's the tricky one it, officials of bonafide statewide civic organizations. Upon the bill's passage, the proponents believed that their work was done and that they had opened up the voter registration system. But it was not to be.

THE GOVERNOR, in his amendatory veto, had left it to the State Board of Elections to define the civic groups.

The board held two public hearings to listen to public comment. Its first draft rule defining civic organizations was more restrictive than proponents of the original bill had envisioned. Since then it has been broadened and the final version will be voted on by the state board at its June 18th meeting. That is none too soon, however, because the new law is scheduled to take effect July 1st.

MOST OF the county clerks and boards of elections commissioners, while not exactly enamored of the new law, have resigned themselves to the training and coordination of the new deputies called for in the new law. A few rightly see it as an opportunity to increase the number of previously unregistered voters by using volunteer workers instead of paid staff.

They have been working with the State Board to develop a set of guidelines to be used by election officials in implementing the new law. These guidelines are also expected to be handed down by the board at almost the zero hour, June 18th.

But Chicago election officials, among others, have vigorously opposed this bill since its inception. They are still attempting to influence the board's ruling on the definition of civic organizations and the implementation guidelines.

THEY HAVE suggested restrictive interpretations of the law which thwart its intent, such as having deputy registrars operate out of a fixed operation throughout the jurisdiction, such as door-to-door registration. We hope that the State Board of Elections will ignore these negative pressures, as it is poised to make its administrative pronouncements.

But that's not all. We are beginning to hear some additional obstructive rumblings from other election officials around the state. For example, the Champaign County clerk, after using scores of deputy registrars for many years, has recently revoked their authority, apparently without cause. He claims that the upcoming July 1st law has influenced his decision—even though the new law is supposed to open up, not restrict, the voter registration system.

KEEN POLITICAL observers indicate that, given the anticipated behavior of some election officials after July 1, interpretation of the new law will probably be challenged in court. Members of Project Vote will probably take part in such litigation if that is the only way to get the intent of the law implemented.

And so, Mr. Wheeler, the legislative path winds its way out of the Illinois General Assembly, through the brambles of the administrative agency and ends up at the courtroom door. It is another lesson for our civics students about the complexity of Illinois politics.

Adult high school graduates praised for hard work, effort

By Ed Foley
Staff Writer

It may have taken a long time and some hard work, but it was well worth the effort.

That seemed to be the attitude of most of those honored at the second annual Recognition Ceremony for Achievement in Adult Education. About 120 graduates, relatives and well-wishers gathered at Carbondale High School-East Campus' Learning Center Friday to congratulate those who had the drive to complete their high school education.

The gathering included graduates of three programs: Carbondale Community High School Adult Education, SIU-C's Evaluation and Developmental Center and Murphysboro Adult Education.

As Brockman Schumacher, acting director of the EDC and a speaker at the ceremony, said, "these people are not dummies." Most of those being honored were interrupted in their high school careers for one reason or another and had to go back to school at night, several times a week, in order to increase their employment prospects, finish what they had started or just get educated.

SIU-C PRESIDENT Albert Somit, the evening's keynote speaker, pointed out that "learning is a lifelong process, a pleasant one and a necessary one" as he invited graduates to continue their educations at one of the area colleges. "You have many opportunities to go ahead, and, I think, with every chance of success."

For the newly graduated students, who ranged in age from 18 to 65 (the two students at the top and bottom of the scale happened to be grandson and grandmother), it was the culmination of months of hard work and sacrifice, on the part of both students and families.

"Anybody that tells you it's not hard work is lying," said Diana Bramlett of Murphysboro. Beginning in October, she went twice a week to the Murphysboro program, and, she laughed, "I didn't miss a day." Her husband Dale took up most of the slack around the house when she was in class.

"I did a lot of cooking, bathing and babysitting, but I'm very proud of her, and so are the kids," he said.

LYNN WOLFF, who taught basic reading and writing to some of the graduates of the SIU-C program, had nothing but praise for her students. "They're very motivated," she said. "The level of support they have for each other is really something. I enjoy teaching them very much."

Lorraine Puttmann is another student who now has her diploma, after a layoff of 52 years.

"Last time I was in school was 1932," she said. "A lot has changed since then, but I slipped right back into it." Mrs. Puttmann said that after her husband died and she realized that she needed something to do, the idea of going back for her high school diploma sounded interesting. "My grandson was going back to get his, and I figured, why, if he can do it, then I can too."

Despite the fact that Franklin Roosevelt had yet to see the inside of the Oval Office when she last went to school, she says she got along great with her somewhat younger fellow students.

"I made lots of friends," she laughed. "We were all students together, and we all supported each other." Mrs. Puttmann apparently is taking President Somit's advice to heart, because she plans to continue her education at SIU-C. "I'm not sure what I'll major in, but that's not too important right now," Mrs. Puttmann's advice to those who may not have had the chance to finish high school: "Go back. Get all you can."

Study says laws would cut fireworks injuries

CHICAGO (AP) -- If injuries from fireworks are to be reduced, legislation controlling their use rather than educating Fourth of July revelers seems to be the answer, a new study suggests.

The study, focusing on the Seattle, Wash., area, showed the majority of injuries during last year's July 4 holiday came from legal fireworks. It also found the number of injuries doubled after a state law was changed, allowing more dangerous varieties to be sold.

The study, in Friday's Journal of the American Medical Association, concluded that firecrackers and aerial devices, such as rockets or Roman candles, pack the most punch as far as injuries.

The Consumer Products Safety Commission reported 8,277 fireworks-related injuries nationwide in 1983. Of those, more than 90 percent were treated and released without hospitalization.

Using the study's average charge of $562 for medical care for each injured person, the total cost of fireworks-related injuries nationwide could surpass $4.6 million.

Lynne McFarland, one of the study's authors, said public education doesn't seem to help in curtailing burns, cuts and other injuries resulting from fireworks accidents.

She noted when Washington changed its laws in 1982, legalizing firecrackers and some devices that shoot in the air, "they had a fair amount of public awareness."

But during the July 4 holiday after that, the study said, there were 88 injuries -- up from 39 a year earlier.

The study said firecrackers and aerial devices cause the most trouble and noted that, "Legislation, on either a federal or state level, to decrease the availability of these two devices may result in a decrease in the number of fireworks-related injuries."

A year after Washington liberalized its laws, the researchers said, "a large fireworks safety educational campaign was undertaken, and the number of injuries did not decrease but increased slightly."

Ms. McFarland also said the "majority of injuries were due to the misuse of fireworks and not malfunctioning devices.... People use fireworks as toys. They're not toys, they're small weapons."

The study looked at 146 people injured by fireworks who sought emergency care during the July 4 holiday in 1983.

20 years later, Red Squad is on trial

By Sharon Cohen
Of the Associated Press

CHICAGO (AP) - Nearly 20 years ago, a Puerto Rican community group marched on City Hall seeking more power and an end to police brutality. Months later, a secret police memo carried this message: Destroy the organization and its leaders.

These were the turbulent 1960s - protest marches, riots and political upheaval. Often those activities were countered by what amounted to police sabotage missions against law-abiding community groups as well as organizations committed to violence.

One law-abiding group, the Spanish Action Committee of Chicago, is about to relive that era in federal court when it faced the city Thursday in preliminary hearings in a $5 million lawsuit alleging violation of constitutional rights.

IT IS the first trial arising out of a decade of legal wrangling, complaints and lawsuits directed at the Red Squad, a former Police Department intelligence unit assigned to combat subversives.

Members of the Red Squad - which was abolished in 1975 - kept secret dossiers on scores of religious leaders, politicians, critics of the late Mayor Richard J. Daley and on mainstream organizations such as the PTA and the League of Women Voters.

According to a grand jury report, the Red Squad engaged in burglary, vandalism, illegal eavesdropping - and some of its members once urged a group to commit violence in an attempt to discredit it.

The Spanish Action Committee claims in its suit that the Red Squad infiltrated the group, then conducted a smear campaign to portray some members as tools of Communists - tactics that ultimately destroyed the group.

"THE ORGANIZATION was ruined," said Richard Gutman, the group's attorney. "Most of the people quit. People wouldn't work with them. To publicly name a group as Communists is the equivalent of destroying them in our society."

The city declined comment on the case. "I think it's a case that should be tried and go before the jury," said Peter Fitzpatrick, an attorney representing the city and three current or former police officers named in the suit. "I think we have a good defense."

Although a 1981 consent decree with the city prohibits police from disrupting political groups and gathering information unless there is reasonable suspicion of wrongdoing, Gutman says this suit seeks a ruling to show what was done in the past was unconstitutional.

THE SPANISH Action Committee was formed after riots in the city's Puerto Rican community in 1966. The group - which had opposed the violence - marched on City Hall with a list of demands, including an end to excessive police force.

The Red Squad then made plans to "destroy" the Spanish Action Committee of Chicago.

Heat-stroke possibility rises as hot temperatures linger on

By Carys Edwards
Staff Writer

Summer's arrived, and with Southern Illinois' hot and humid days, the body must learn to adjust to the heat, in extreme situations, however, the body can't cope and it overheats, resulting in heatstroke, heat exhaustion or heat cramps. In some cases, even death.

About 5,000 people suffer from heatstroke each year and about half of those die, said Dr. William Hunter, associate professor at SIU's School of Medicine.

Children, the elderly and those who exercise heavily in the heat are the groups most likely to be affected by the heat, he said.

"But, of course, no one's immune to over-heating," Hunter said, and it can occur in "any situation where your body's defense simply cannot keep it cool."

Heatstroke is the most severe problem in high temperatures. Hunter said. If occurs when the body's normal temperature-controlling mechanisms have overloaded and shut down.

Hunter said some early symptoms are a hot, flushed skin and a "racing heart," or the person may act like they have chills. Other symptoms include confusion, lack of concentration, acting or "feeling funny," aimless wandering and delirium.

There are three other types of heat injuries, Hunter said. Two types of heat exhaustion include dehydration and salt loss. These result in an imbalance of the internal body fluids, he said. Symptoms include confusion and loss of consciousness, and conditions could lead to heatstroke.

Heat cramps, which well-trained athletes often develop, can also occur, Hunter said.

When these conditions develop, a person should move to a cooler environment. The skin should be flushed with cold water or cool air. If the person is conscious, water - not alcohol - should be drunk, Hunter said. Alcohol dehydrates the body.

The skin should be covered with light colored clothing with good ventilation to prevent heat rash and sunburn. Heat rash - red bumps on the skin - occurs in humid conditions when sweat cannot evaporate, and can be treated with powder from a pharmacist.

People should be alert for symptoms of heat stress, Hunter said. A person may feel drowsy in the heat, lie down in an over-heated car and it "could be lethal," he said. The main thing is to look for and avoid potentially dangerous situations, Hunter said.

'Hackers' steal computer entry code

LOS ANGELES (AP) - Computer "hackers" stole a code used for entering the computer system of TRW Information Services, whose files contain credit and other personal information on about 90 million Americans, a spokeswoman said Thursday.

"We found out about that (stolen) code a couple weeks ago, and the code is no longer valid," said Geri Schanz of TRW's Information Services Division in Orange, a suburb of Los Angeles.

An informant tipped TRW, the largest credit bureau in the country, about the problem, she said.

Ms. Schanz said it was believed the hackers were trying to get into the TRW system to pull legitimate credit reports and use "someone's good credit history" to apply for credit cards - "basically, trying to commit credit fraud."

The code was posted by hackers on an "electronic bulletin board," making it available to any home computer user using the same network, Ms. Schanz said.

The TRW files contain individuals' credit and work histories, delinquencies and bankruptcies, Social Security numbers and family members' names, Ms. Schanz said.

Students help tumor-stricken boy

BELLEVILLE (AP) - People enrolling in language classes that began this week at a Belleville school are doing more than learning to speak French or Spanish. They're also helping pay the expenses of a tumor-stricken Central American boy who needs surgery in St. Louis.

A group of about 20 Illinois residents has raised about $1,000 of the needed $10,000 for the child, 6-year-old Dale Peters of Belize, formerly called British Honduras.

The boy needs a large tumor removed from his lower spine, and facilities for the surgery do not exist in Belize, which borders Mexico and Guatemala on the Caribbean coast.

To help raise money, Spanish and French classes were organized at Belleville's Whiteside School, which donated use of a classroom.

Language teachers Linda Maties of O'Fallon and Janet McNutt of Lebanon have contributed their time.

Student fees for the one and one-half-hour daily sessions will go into the fund. Organizers of the language-class project hope it will raise about $400.

"The children are really enjoying" the classes, said project chairman Barbara Santiago of Belleville.

Dead boy's organs give life to others

GURNEE (AP) - The story of Terry Brennan's death is "a legacy in life," a miracle of medicine that gave four people another chance and two more a new opportunity to see.

The 15-year-old Gurnee youth was killed Sunday as he rode his bicycle to the first day of a summer job. But even as his body was interred Wednesday, Terry's heart continued beating inside Belvidere ironworker LeRoy Blackburn, 51, who was reported in fair condition in a University of Chicago hospital.

And his liver was functioning in a 49-year-old Connecticut woman; his kidneys went to a 10-year-old boy and a 54-year-old man, both from Peoria; and his corneas were implanted in a 33-year-old man and 80-year-old woman.

In the limousine following the service, the youngster's father, John Brennan, reminded Terry's mother they had named their son after a college football star of the late 1940s who went on to coach at Notre Dame.

"Now," he said, "Terry is a star in his own right." More than 100 people attended the funeral Mass at St. Patrick's Catholic Church in Gurnee, and the outpouring of strangers impressed Brennan.

"I got a call this morning from a Barrington man whose son died five years ago," Brennan said. "Nobody told him about organ transplants. He said he wished that his son could have done what Terry did."

Local Boy Scouts set up tables and some 50 neighbors brought cold cuts, cakes and flowers.

'Hollow' to open Playhouse

Summer Playhouse 84 has opened its season with "The Hollow," a murder mystery by Agatha Christie.

The play is staged on a British estate near London, where Sir Henry and Lady Angkatel plan to spend a relaxing weekend with their family. Unfortunately, their plans are shattered when they discover that a murderer is in their midst.

Inspector Calhoun of Scotland

Yard is called in to discover "whodunnit," but his job isn't made any easier by the fact that everyone had a motive for the crime.

Director Cal MacLean brings the play a more theatrical approach with his use of a unique puzzle-design setting instead of a standard box set.

"The Hollow," which begins at 8 p.m. every night, runs through Sunday in McLeod Theater.

New Horizons course registration to end

Registration ends at 5 p.m. Friday for the SPC New Horizons mini-courses offered during the summer session.

A variety of dance classes will be offered including beginning ballet, jazz, break dancing, aerobic dancing and beginning and advanced tap dancing. A weekend aerobics class is also planned.

Registration is in the SPC office on the third floor of the Student Center.

Salem woman gives party for bypass surgery patients

SALEM (AP) — A Southern Illinois woman, Waunetta Holden, expects about 150 people to attend a party she is giving Sunday for anyone who has undergone heart bypass surgery.

The party is set for 2:30 p.m. at the Salem Moose Lodge — just four days after the 10th anniversary of the host's own bypass surgery.

Mrs. Holden said in an interview Wednesday she had not expected the response to her party to be so good.

"But I think it's great," she said. "I'm not really excited about it now, but I will be Sunday. I feel real good about it. I had no idea that there would be this many people, but I'm glad that they are coming."

News accounts of her party plans prompted people from throughout the country to write Mrs. Holden.

"I had a beautiful letter from a Catholic sister in New York," she said. "I've had letters from Oregon, Louisiana, Michigan and several different locations in Illinois. I also received a telephone call from Denver, Colo."

A Chicago-area woman even sent Mrs. Holden a T-shirt with a big heart in the center and with the words, "Bless Your Mended Heart" on it.

A co-owner of Barr Drilling in Salem, Mrs. Holden suffered a heart attack in August 1973 at age 46. She underwent triple bypass surgery June 20, 1974.

Hacky-sack craze sweeps nation

By Morgan Falkner
Staff Writer

If while walking across campus you've ever wondered what people were doing standing in a circle flailing wildly and kicking at a little dark object — relax. All of that muss and fuss is over a game that is quickly capturing the attention of people all over the country.

Hacky-sack is the official name of the game, but it really isn't a game in the sense that it involves a winner or loser. Rather, it is a test of coordination, timing and team work.

The Hacky-sack, manufactured in the United States by Wham-O, is a round leather ball filled with beads. It is a little larger than a golf ball in size, and when properly broken in, done by conveniently running over the sack in a car or hurling it against a wall, resembles a tiny bean-bag chair.

The only rule to Hacky-sack is simply to keep it aloft without the use of hands — something like a soccer drill. The Hacky-sack comes with a brief explanation of what it is, plus a few diagrams illustrating some of the most used kicks.

Hacky-sack can be played alone or with a group. Any number can play, and the only object in playing is to keep it airborne as long as possible, thereby scoring "hacks."

A hack is achieved once every member of the group has made some contact with the sack before it falls to the ground. If a hack is achieved, and the entire group makes contact again without letting the sack fall, then a double hack is made. The scoring continues in this manner, with the object being to score as many hacks as possible.

Robert "Duff" Hutton has been kicking hacks for three years and is a hard core Hacky-sack enthusiast. He describes the activity as "exhilarating."

"It improves neuro-muscular coordination," Hutton explained, and because he doesn't have to use his hands he can drink and smoke while playing.

Hacky-sack is generally regarded by those who play it as a leisure activity, but since its growth in popularity Hacky-sack competitions have begun to appear. One such competition was held at Springfest '84 on the Old Main Mall.

Dan Roddick, a Wham-O Inc. spokesman, said that Wham-O has pulled out all the stops in promoting the product, acquired in October of 1983 from Kennecorp Sports Inc.

Reagan record sales halted after lawsuit is filed

CHICAGO (AP) — A federal judge has ordered the mayor of President Reagan's hometown and a local publishing company to temporarily halt the sale of Bible readings recorded by the president 30 years ago.

The action, ordered Wednesday, followed the filing of a lawsuit by RCA, which contends it has the rights to the readings being marketed under the title. "President Reagan Reads Stories from the Old Testament."

U.S. District Judge Marvin E. Aspen ordered J.E.D. Productions Inc., and Nickelodeon, a Dixon record store, to stop distribution until Monday, when a hearing is scheduled.

Mayor James Dixon, an officer with J.E.D., said he'll comply with the order.

"We just heard about it and we stopped a planned shipment of 800 records."

Spanish-American War veteran celebrates 100th

GALVA (AP) — Sam Mendel, national commander of the two dozen living Spanish-American War veterans, still can belt out a baritone tune and bang out a weekly newspaper column, but is "too old to get excited about anything anymore."

"Which is too bad," he says. So most of the rest of this west-central Illinois town's 3,000 residents, who revere Mendel as a local folk-hero, will get excited for him on Saturday, his 100th birthday.

They'll be turning out for a 25-unit parade and huge bash at the high school football stadium. Also scheduled to attend are Mendel's children — a daughter, Fern, about 75, from California, and a son, Robert, 59, a professional photographer in Chicago.

The program includes reading a congratulatory letter from the White House and a resolution honoring Mendel from the Illinois House.

"I never thought much about it, turning 100. I just go day by day," Mendel said recently at the Galva Senior Citizens Center, where he often visits with friends and shares in song.

Mendel still lives in the home he and his wife, Selma, who died in January, bought in 1953 when he retired and the two moved to Galva from Chicago. A close friend cares for Mendel in the home.

Born June 23, 1884 in Fort Worth, Texas, to vaudeville performers, Mendel played semipro baseball in Texas after his Army stint. He then worked as a preacher and a logger in the Pacific Northwest before joining a singing troupe that took him to Chicago in 1919, where he was an electrical supply store manager and worked in sales.

Mendel is one of 24 U.S. survivors of the 1898 Spanish-American War, the Veterans Administration said Thursday.

Ten win Jefferson Awards

WASHINGTON (AP) — Astronaut Sally Ride, FBI Director William Webster and eight private citizens honored for their "spirit of volunteerism" were honored for service to the American people Thursday.

Each of the 10 received the Jefferson Award of the American Institute for Public Service at ceremonies at the Supreme Court building.

Ms. Ride, an astrophysicist who as a crew member of the Challenger space shuttle in 1983 became the first American woman to fly in space, was honored as the person under 35 who provided the greatest public service.

"You are really honoring the thousands of women and men who have made the visions of America's space program reality," Ms. Ride said in her acceptance speech.

Webster, who has headed the FBI since 1978, was cited in the category of elected or appointed official for his leadership in rebuilding the image and professionalism of the bureau.

Life no song-and-dance routine for Summer Playhouse actress

By Margaret Callcott
Staff Writer

The alarm rings at 7:15 a.m. Forty-five minutes later, it is already hot in Furr Auditorium, where the 23 members of Summer Playhouse '84 are starting their day in dance class.

"...And lift, down, breath, down, and up, six seven eight...bend your leg to the back, two three four, leg down feet together, seven eight..."

Thus begins a day in the life of Chris Banholzer, an SIU-C graduate student in theater and an important part in the school's summer theater productions for the past three years.

Banholzer has been gracing McLeod's stage since the Midwest Auditions three years ago, when she was hired to work in Summer Playhouse 82. In her third summer at SIU-C, Banholzer is likely to make a fine impression on area theater buffs with her appearances in all four summer playhouse productions.

Though gifted with a striking personality of her own, many people are likely to remember Chris for portraying someone else, such as Mama Rose in SIU's 1982 production of "Gypsy" or Nancy in their 1983 production of "Oliver."

After the 8 a.m. dance class, comes a 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. rehearsal for the first musical. Chorus and dance calls comprise the entire afternoon, followed by rehearsal for the first straight play (non-musical) - which opens three weeks after summer rehearsals begin - runs from 7 p.m. until at least 11 p.m., Banholzer said.

AFTER THE first play runs, there isn't any time for a wild cast party. Rehearsals for the first musical will move to the evening slot while rehearsals for the second straight play move to the morning slot. By the time the first musical opens, rehearsals for the second straight play and blocking for the last musical are underway.

In short, nobody gets a break. And if they did, they would use it to memorize their lines.

"It's hard at first because you only have three weeks to get ready for the first show, while you're also rehearsing intensely for the second show," Banholzer said.

"Both directors want all of you and they just can't have it," she said. "You have to separate yourself as a performer if you're in the first two shows and give each director your best."

With roles in all four shows, and major roles in all but one of those, Banholzer has a lot of performing to separate.

"IT GETS frustrating," she said. "You're going to have fun somewhere, but it's hard because it all moves so quickly - you have to create your characters virtually on the first reading."

But the acting company isn't complaining, because they spend all their time acting. SIU-C has an attractive summer theater program because the acting company doesn't have to take care of their own publicity and technical work. Banholzer said.

"You get paid to act and that's what you do," she said.

Of course, it's also important to do as much work and get as much experience as possible.

"They choose people who can sing, act and dance," said Bryant. "You can't just sing and expect to make the company. You have to be versatile."

The attraction to SIU's summer playhouse extends beyond those who want to act, the idea being that everyone related to theater should have experience in producing quality entertainment.

Besides the acting company, a set designer, a technical director and an ensemble of "techies", who put together the stage sets, are hired for the summer. SIU-C students usually fill the "techie", stage managing and publicity positions.

Along with their pay, three to six hours of college credit is available to the summer actors and theater crew. However, that isn't what draws most people to SIU-C's summer playhouse.

"IT'S DEDICATION to the theater that brings people here," said Bryant. "Unless you really enjoyed it, it would be hell to be stuck here for two months. One thing's for sure - you can't do anything else."

For Banholzer and the other performers in this year's summer company, the summer will continue to mean long rehearsals, lots of lines and little sleep. However, the experience gained will be worth the time. "It's not a professional production, but it's as good as a professional production," Banholzer said of the summer playhouse.

After three summers and two years of acting at SIU, Banholzer has only an unfinished thesis to keep her from moving on in the acting world.

"MY FUTURE is a big question mark," Banholzer said, though she is hoping to establish herself as an actress somewhere else - she has certainly done so at SIU-C.

"Chris always brings an enormous sense of humor into her work, even in very serious roles and that's extremely important," said Judith Lyons, director of "Annie".

"She's incredibly intuitive about other times and places and single-minded in her dedication to her work and her ability to concentrate," Lyons said. "It's that intuitive leap into the world of a character that makes her so good."

Little Grassy Fish Hatchery helps make angling a better bet

By E. J. Rotert
Staff Writer

To many anglers, Little Grassy Lake may be just another Southern Illinois lake to dip the 'ol fishin' line in from time to time, but to those anglers, if anyone, it should be much more.

Downstream from the lake sets Little Grassy Fish Hatchery. Thanks to the hatchery, many Illinois anglers have had great fishing sprees on private ponds and public or state-owned lakes, reservoirs, streams and rivers.

All to the tune of 45 million fish per year.

According to Alan Brandenburg, fish hatchery manager, that figure includes totals for 4-inch channel catfish, newly hatched walleye and 2- to 5-inch fingerlings of redear, bluegill, and largemouth bass raised at the hatchery.

"This year we probably stocked out 42 million walleye," said Brandenburg.

The hatchery, Brandenburg said, originally began operation in 1959. The hatchery then consisted of only one building and 10 ponds. In 1962 a new shop was added along with eight additional ponds.

Brandenburg said that it stayed that way until 1972, when the state re-evaluated its fish needs. He said they realized then the present hatcheries couldn't keep pace with the state's demands on amount and species of fish needed. After that, he said, the Department of Conservation began plans for renovating Little Grassy Fish Hatchery. The renovation of Little Grassy Lake began in 1979 and by 1981 was producing fish again, he said.

Brandenburg said renovation of the hatchery was funded through sales of Illinois fishing licenses. Today, he said, sale of the licenses still funds the operation of the facility while wages for employees are paid by the state.

Brandenburg said that fish-raising is handled one of two ways - either by intensive or extensive cultures. Intensive culture involves high water exchange through rearing units for environmental control. This gives the hatchery the ability to raise larger numbers of fish per unit, feed prepared diets and predict production. In extensive culture fish are raised in earthen ponds that simulate nature but control the number of fish per pond and the food organisms made available.

SUMMER '84 WORKSHOPS

CAMPERS: They have to love it

MY FIRST week as coach went relatively smooth. Most of the kids were nice. They did everything you told them. The group of kids during the second week of camp were another story.

My biggest responsibility as coach was to make sure the kids on my floor of the dorm were in bed by 10 p.m. What looked like a simple task on paper was a nightmare in reality. The kids were incredibly hyperactive, as if they had consumed too much presweetened cereal. These kids turned into gremlins late at night. One smeared toothpaste all over the bathroom and another played his music at unbelievable decibals. It was enough to drive Mister Rogers out of his own neighborhood.

Finally, one night, I foolishly skipped the 10 p.m. uprising and went to a friends' house for some peace and quiet. When I returned in an hour, much to my surprise, all was quiet on the Western front. Unfortunately, it was the quiet before the storm.

THE NEXT morning, I learned during breakfast that one of the kids had accidentally locked himself out of his room, then preceded to take matters into his own hands by smashing through the door with a two-by-four. It was the low point of my short but illustrious coaching career.

Thankfully, shortly after the two-by-four incident, the camp ended. But the memories linger. I remember having to fill out evaluations on each player I was coaching. I thought it incredibly stupid and unfair to the kids to have to do that. How can you evaluate a kid's arm when he hasn't even reached maturity? Then I realized it wasn't the coach's idea to evaluate the kids, it was the parents. They wanted a baseball report card on their kids. Never mind if little Jimmy didn't enjoy himself at the camp, their kid was going to be a ball player, whether he liked it our not.

Parents should stop trying to force baseball on their kids and let them find out whether they like the game. My advice to parents is this: Buy your kid a glove and lay it on his bed. Then, in a few weeks, see if it's been used. If it looks dirty and scuffed, your kid may be acquiring a love for the game. He might even be a candidate for a baseball camp. But if the glove looks like it did when you bought it, your kid probably isn't taking to the game. If that's the case, don't send him to a baseball camp. Save your money and give the kid a few quarters for Space Invaders. Everyone will be a lot happier in the end.

13 swimmers challenging for berth in Olympics

By David Wilhelm
Sports Editor

Thirteen Saluki swimmers will be attempting to meet tough Olympic qualifications Monday in Indianapolis. All will be representing the Saluki Swim Club.

Barry Hahn and Larry Wooley, both members of last year's team, and former Saluki Roger VonJouanne will head the list of male hopefuls.

Hahn, the SIU-C record-holder in the 200 free, qualified for the trials with a time of 1:37.9, meeting the requirement of 1:38.8. Wooley will compete in the 200 breast after qualifying with a 2:03.4 last season.

Saluki swimming Coach Bob Steele said, "VonJouanne has the best chance" at qualifying in the 200 fly. VonJouanne's time of 2:01.2 easily met the requirement of 2:04.4. VonJouanne will also swim the 200 IM.

Requirements to make the Olympic team are much harder than it was to get to the trials. Steele said that just the top two finishers out of 24 swimmers make the team. However, a third or fourth-place finish in the 100 and 200 free will be good enough for making an Olympic relay team, but not the event itself.

Steele said that while VonJouanne has the best shot at making the team "if he drops a second or a second and a half," he's not counting out Hahn and Wooley, although he admits they are longshots.

"Every year unexpected people make it," Steele said. "There's always a longshot nobody has heard about who goes wild and makes the team. They've (Hahn and Wooley) trained hard. We'll have to see what they can do."

Women's swimming coach Tim Hill will send nine squad members to the trials along with Dave Sims, another member of the Saluki Swim Club. Hill said Sims has the best shot of qualifying.

He will swim the 200-, 400- and 1,500-meter frees. Hill said a top eight finish by the women is a goal they are shooting for.

Heading the list of women will be Amanda Martin and Janie Cooz't. Martin will compete in the 100 and 200 breast and Cooz't in the 400 and 800 free. Hill said Cooz't has the best chance of placing in the top two while Martin could also be a strong finisher.

Others trying for spots are Stacy Westfall, Pam Ratcliffe, Martha Jahn, Wendy Irick, Roxanne Carlton, Iris VonJouanne and Lori Rea.

Sayre final Saluki track hope at L.A.

By Mike Frey
Staff Writer

Former SIU-C decathlete John Sayre was one of 55 athletes who began their bids for a spot on the United States Olympic team at the U.S. Track and Field trials in Los Angeles Thursday.

Sayre is the only Saluki athlete who still has a chance to qualify for the U.S. Olympic squad. SIU-C sprinter Michael Franks was eliminated from contention in the semifinals of the 400-meter dash competition on Tuesday.

Sayre is recovering from a back injury suffered during the Texas relays in early April. Sayre captured second in the decathlon during the NCAA finals earlier this month while still battling the injury, but is expected to be in top form as he goes into the Olympic trials.

Events that took place Thursday were the 100-meter dash, long jump, shot put, high jump and 400-meter dash. Sayre is ranked eighth among American athletes in the decathlon.

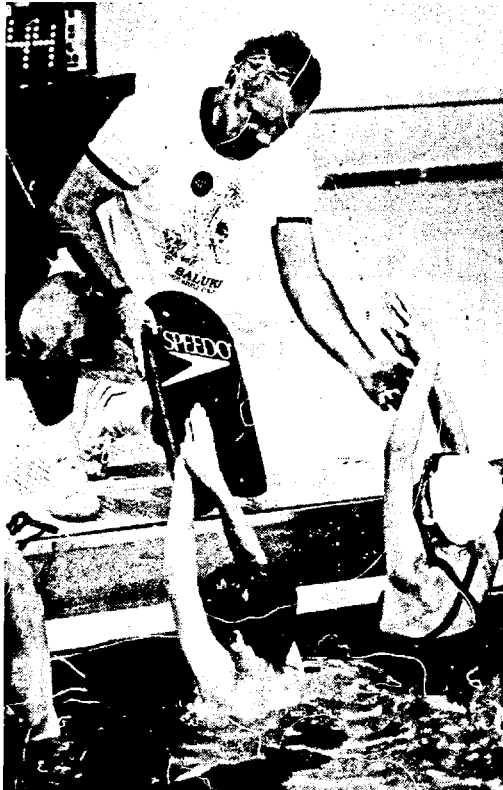

Sayre's strongest events are the pole vault and the javelin, which will be held Friday along with the 110-meter hurdles, discus and 1,500-meter run. The top three placers in the decathlon will earn a spot on the Olympic team.

Results from Thursday's events were unavailable at press time.

Another former Saluki athlete, long jumper Stephen Wray, qualified for the Olympic team in his native country of the Bahamas. Wray leaped 7.4 to qualify for the Bahamian squad.

Elvis Forde, a sprinter on the 1984 Saluki team, will try to make the Barbados Olympic team next weekend. The Barbados track trials will be held at Kentucky State University in Frankfort, Ky.

Former SIU-C runners Edison Wedderburn and Chris Bunyan failed to qualify for the British Olympic team. Wedderburn ran a lifetime best of 8:37 in the 3,000 steeplechase.

Swimming Coach Bob Steele gives a helping hand at camp.

Swim camp attracts many

By David Wilhelm
Sports Editor

A swimming camp is not just for those unable to swim. According to SIU-C swimming coach Bob Steele, there is much more to it than that.

Steele along with 20 other staff members, including SIU-C women's swimming coach Tim Hill, have been instructing young swimmers between the ages of 7 and 17 for the last three weeks at the 10th annual Saluki swim camp at the Recreation Center.

"One of my responsibilities (as swimming coach) is to further the development of swimmers in Southern Illinois and the rest of Illinois," Steele said. "The thing we want to do is teach kids techniques and drills to make them successful."

Another responsibility the camp has, Steele said, is to "increase the swimmers' training capacities above what they know how to do. We want to teach them to do more."

Steele said training is very important in becoming a good swimmer, but complete swimmer analysis is equally important. The camp uses a number of methods in an effort to improve each swimmer, one being video-taping the four basic strokes: back, breast, fly and free.

"The swimmers are video-taped above and below water,"

Steele said. "The kids can actually see what they're doing wrong."

Steele said the SIU-C camp is one of the best in the country, if not the best.

"Nobody in the country has a camp like we have," Steele said. "Kids are analyzed, video-taped and analyzed again. We also have skill drills to help their strokes and all phases of their turns. It's the most complete swimming camp."

"We try to teach them as much as we can," he said. "The kids are overwhelmed with what they're learning."

Steele and he and his staff have seen nearly 200 swimmers come to the three one-week camps. Surprisingly, Steele said there are very few from Southern Illinois. Most come from the Springfield and the Chicago area, but Steele said they've come from many places, including Texas, Michigan and Wisconsin.

Steele said it is important to keep the swimmers from getting burnt out after too many hours in the pool. Therefore, the swimmers are required to spend time in other recreational activities, such as frisbee golf, miniature golf and canoeing. According to Steele, it's all part of the program.

All the swimmers, naturally, have weaknesses. Most of the younger swimmers have strength problems.

Baseball campers either love it or hate it

SOME ADVICE to SIU-C students who one day may become parents: Don't send little Jimmy to a baseball camp if he doesn't have a genuine love and appreciation for the game. Believe me, I've been a player and coach at two baseball camps and they are no place for a youngster unless he eats, sleeps and breathes baseball.

Baseball camps are intended to teach kids fundamentals and techniques. Love for the game, however, cannot be taught. It has to be acquired.

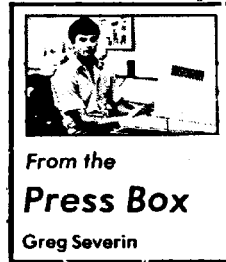

Last week, I walked to Abe Martin Field and watched some of the boys at SIU-C's baseball camp, which is headed by Coach Itchy Jones. The scrawny youngsters were heaving baseballs across the diamond like they were hand grenades, straining on every throw. The sight of that caused me to look back to when I was a scrawny baseball camper.

THE CAMP was called Bob Brasher's Show-Me Baseball

School, located in the heart of Missouri's Ozarks. I had seen an advertisement for the camp in the The Sporting News during the spring and had pestered my father all summer to let me go. Finally, realizing my persistence, he agreed to let me go. The reason I chose Show-me was because of their slick brochure and the number of former big-league stars they said would be coaching there.

After weeks of anticipation, I arrived in camp with glove and bat in hand. Shortly thereafter, I came to the realization that not all the kids were as fanatical about baseball as I was. Many were downright apathetic.

In particular, I remember one rich kid who seemed to spend more time at the camp's souvenir shop than he did on the field. Every morning after breakfast, he would come back to the dorm with a new bat and every night he would return from the field with the bat broken. By the end of the camp, he had enough kindling to build a bonfire.

AS FAR as all the former big-leaguers coaching at the camp, only one coached full time. The rest made cameo appearances, then left in their limousines. The only former big-leaguer who spent time with us was former New York Yankee's infielder Jerry Lumpe. Lumpe never imparted any big-league wisdom on us. He mostly talked about how great it was to room with Tony Kubek on the road. Heck, I hate to listen to Kubek talk for more than 10 minutes on the Game of the Week, much less have to room with him.

It wasn't just the ungrateful kids and coaches that bothered me. It was the way the camp was operated. It seemed every drill and game was run by the clock. The camp was too regimented and somehow the baseball didn't seem quite as fun.

Six years later, I returned to the camp scene as a coach at SIU-C's camp. While the faces had changed, the kids' attitudes toward the game hadn't. Only half the kids truly loved the game. The other half hated it. Being an experienced camper, it wasn't difficult for me to spot the kids who disliked the game. They were the kids who moped around the field all day. But as soon as they got back to the dorm, they sprinted to the recreation room to play Space Invaders.
