No 'Finals.' But Oh Those Last Exams!

By Alice Cartright

"Say, didn't I read some-where that SIU had tossed out the finals system? Boy, are you guys ever lucky!"

Although this seems to be the general opinion of students from other schools, Southern's students have again felt the need for more coffee and benzedrine tablets and much, much less sleep.
With the weather adding to atmosphere with warmth and sunshine, students for some reason seem to be for some reason seem to be shunning the outdors, pre-ferring their books to the first outbreaks of spring.

According to the administration, the new finals system of going to classes everyday during the final week will do awav with last-minute cramming.

Then, of course, if the instructor thinks that there is still a chance of his students cramming, he can always inform his students that they will have an hourly on Thursalwavs day and their final on Friday. This adds a nice touch at the end of a course, sometimes ending the students too.

Then too there is always the instructor who likes to wait until the last week and then until the last week and then inform his students that they will have three assignments due, a quiz, an hourly and a final. That way no one has time to cram. Of course if a student is lucky, he has a heart attack the first day of the week.

Perhaps if the finals system has really been tossed out, someone should inform the professors or is it that they've just gone temporarily absent-

The Salukis were greeted by more than 300 cheering students, townspeople and officials at la.m. Saturday when they arrived at the airport after winning second place in the NCAA College Division Basketball Tournament Friday.

The well-wishers, along with the AFROTC pep band, gathered in the chilly pre-ewn hours to welcome the quad after its heartbreaking loss to powerful Evansville

Two city fire trucks; SIU, city and state police cars led the way in the parade, sirens blaring.

I asked her why and how became interested. "A people interested me in the sport. It is a lot of fun.
You can say that this is my answer to physical fitness, she commented.

Then I made a tragic mistake. I asked her to show me some of the techniques. I began to worry when she readily agreed.

I got hit with an o-soto-ari, to name one. Needless to say, it is quite embarrasto be looking up at a ing female. I was tossed smiling female. I around like a student trying to preregister. Her yell, called a kiai, must have settled the Arena another inch.

We then discussed her feelwe then accused her feet-ing toward the sport. Miss Deterding replied, "I think more girls should take up judo. You never know when it may come in handy."

At this time a thought crossed my mind. What would happen if all the coeds knew judo? SIU would not need as many security officers. Many goodnight to their dates. Finally, SIU would have a campus of yelling females. The Judo Club has several coeds who practice the skills every day. All of them enjoy the sport because of its physi-cal fitness characteristics. Judo is fast becoming a pop-ular sport on the collegiate level.

As I hobbled away, I wondered why I did not mind my own business. If you see Polly Deterding walking your way, cross the street.

Next Registration Not Until April 5

Students who did not advance register or those who will have registrations cancelled not meeting the Friday deadline for paying tuition and who do not have appointments for central registration, will have to wait until April 5 to register for spring quarter. Students who did not advance register, but who obtained permission of their deans before March 10 to late register, will start register-ing March 31 at central registration.

This procedure is a change from previous quarters and in an effort to prevent the lastminute rush on the registra-tion facilities by those who do not advance register.

Tells Congress: 'Time for Action'

WASHINGTON President Johnson told Con-gress and the nation Monday night that the time for waiting is gone and the time for action has come to assure every American the right to vote. regardless of race or

The chief executive said that on this there can be no argument.

"Every American citizen must have an equal fight to ote," he said. "There is no reason which can excuse the denial of that right. There is no dury which weight exercises." no duty which weighs more heavily on us than the duty to insure that right."

The President spoke in the House chamber to a joint session of Congress in person, and by radio and television to the nation.

He was spelling out the case for a new voting rights bill expected to go to Capitol Hill later in the week-a bill with provisions for use of federal officials to register Negro voters, if need be.

The harsh fact, Johnson said, is that in many places in this country men and women are kept from voting because they are Negroes.

He said that every device at human ingenuity can devise has been used to deny this right and to erect barriers.

"For the fact is," he said, "that the only way to pass these barriers is to show a white skin."

"Experience shown that the existing pro-cess of law cannot overcome systematic and ingenious dis-crimination. No law we now have on the books can insure the right to vote when local officials are determined to deny it.

"In such a case our duty is clear."

The presidential appearance at the joint session in itself underscored the importance Johnson attaches to this duty. Usually appearances of a chief executive at a joint session are to deliver the annual State of the Union message or to speak in a time of around the corner, students are beginning to look beyond the mountains of material they need to study for their finals and into ways to forget col-lege for nine days.

Many bleary-eyed students will undoubtedly follow the advice of Raymond M. Bruegadvice of Raymond M. Brueg-geman, a senior majoring in psychology from Edwards-ville, and use their time to "catch up on some free un-troubled sleep,"

Others will prefer the idea of Kathleen B. Shea, a fresh-man majoring in government

Of course SILI students, like of migrating to the warmer climates for a few days of fun and relaxation.

The dream is finally com-ing true for Willson C. Marsh, a junior majoring in physical geography. "I've been waiting to go to Florida and soak up for three sunshine years now, and it looks like I'm finally going to make it,"

A good reason for heading south was given by Phyllis A. Rist, a senior majoring in art from Cincinnati, Ohio, who plans to go to Fort Lauderdale, Miami, Nassau and the Bahama Islands over the break. Her reason: "Mainly because Carbondale doesn't offer palm trees and sand — or night life." Thomas R. Klosinski, a graduate student in marketing from Chicago is going Florida because there is something he has got to try this year.

"I want to dive into the surf, grab a shark by its dorsal fin and ride it through the waves," he said, "I saw Paul Anka do it in a rock 'n'roll movie and I know I car do anything he can do."

While Florida may seem like a dream-haven to most students, there are a few who can't go there even if they wanted to. One such person is Gayle E. Murphy, a junior majoring in sociology from Miami. What does she plan to do while everyone else is flocking to her native climate?

"I'm certainly not going home, I'll tell you that," she exclaimed. "Don't you think a person would get tired of palm trees, warm weather, beaches and bikinis and those stupid little sports cars? I'm sick of it all and I'm going somewh∈re that offers a little peace and quiet-Nassau. Gee, I can see it now: palm trees, warm weather, white sandy beaches,

If she really wants to get away from it, Edward F. Roach, a sophomore from Beckemeyer has a solution for her:

"I'm going to Alaska

I hope to get a job skinning seals or counting fish. The Chamber of Commerce in Juneau informed me that the seal season will be well on its way. season will be well on its way by the time I arrive and that there will be opportunities of many kinds if I get there ahead

To many students spring denotes something a little homier than skinning seals in Alaska. "I'm going straight home," said Fred Y. Waits, a student in engineering technology from Frankfort, Ky. His springtime answer for not going anywhere: "I want to see my girl."

Of course, you don't necessarily have to go bome to pursue these ends, as was pointed out by Marilyn R. Skoglund of St. Louis. "I'm going to Colorado to the Air Force Academy to clear up the whole scandal in one easy lesson," she said. Hinting at ulterior motives, she added that "I also plan to neck a lot and have a few kick."

For those who enjoy the rugged outdoor life Janet E. Trapp of Springfield has come up with an answer. "I'm going to imitate the world's communion with nature by camping out at Giant City. We're go-ing to last as long as we canone night at least, hopefully two or three. We've each decided to take a superfluous item along. I'm taking a record album and another girl is taking an electric mixer.

But most unfortunate students will echo the sentiments of Robert C. Herr. "I guess my break will be kind of dead," bemoaned the Collinsville student majoring in mortuary

Disclosure vs. Subsidy In Campaign Finances

By Robert M. Hutchins

Gov. Edmund G. Brown of California, Justice Stanley Mosk of the California Sup-reme Court and Sen. Albert Gore of Tennessee Joined other experts and the staff of the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in a three-day disc money in politics. discussion of

This conference came im-This conference came immediately after the Center's convocation in New York on the requirements of peace. The two meetings were alike in one respect: The problems with which they dealt appeared important—and insoluble.

Nobody would claim that the influence of money in politics is as significant an issue as peace, but it is even harder to discuss, because people do not agree on the goal. At least, not agree on the goal. At least, when you are talking about peace, you don't advocate war —not if you are honest. Everybody will join in the general proposition that it would be fine if politics were rational. Voters should make up their minds on the basis of adequate information and discussion, Legislatures should reach their conclusions. should reach their conclusions in the same way. The amount of money that is behind a candidate or a policy should have nothing to do with the decision.

Unfortunately, popular edu-cation about candidates and issues in a democratic system takes money. The first thing a candidate has to do is to become known. If he is chalbecome known. If he is chal-lenging an incumbent senator in a big state, he must be prepared to spend a million doilars in the primary alone. The election campaign will cost at least as much.

The money has to come from somewhere. As everybody who has ever raised money will testify, it has to come from large contributors, Small contributions are pleasant; they show that the common people applaud your enterprise. But Copyri they do not pay the bills. Times

The large contributor may be a man without an ulterior purpose, eager to help his country by backing good candidates and programs. Who is to say that he should not display his patriotism by financing them? On the other hand, the large contributor may be a menace to society. He knows that his contribution buys him something denied to others, and that is access to the public officials he supports. No politician is going to decline to see and listen to a man who has invested thousands of dollars in putting him where he is.

So the meeting at the center divided. Some of the participants thought that full disclosure during campaigns was the only answer, and that it was enough. If the voters knew that the candidate was drawing large support from oil com-panies, or savings and loan associations, or labor unions, they could decide what weight should be given this fact when comparing him opponent.

At the opposite extreme were those who yearned for federal subsidization of all elections and the prohibition of campaign contributions of any wind. In between were those who placed their hopes on the establishment of national parties that would replace the parties that would replace the present loose aggregation of state parties and that would be the sole channel through which private or public funds might be distributed.

On one subject all the participants agreed, it would be splendid if the Federal Compunications.

The time has come for a federal law that not only guarantees the right of citizens to vote, but provides the means by which they can take a case to court and obtain equal protection of the laws if the right to vote is denied or even interfered with. Thanks to the 15th amendment, the national purpose to guarantee the right to vote is clear. What is needed is a simple, plain, unmistakable act of Congress that applies to both primaries and general elections at the state and federal

Right to Vote Nothing New

There is nothing new about the idea of a right to vote law. At least 25 years ago one far-sighted member of the American bar, Arthur J. Freund of St. Louis, drafted his first version of a bill to that end. Mr. Freund, who is both high-minded and persistent and therefore highly esteemed by many-if not all-in the legal profession, interested Sen. Wayne Morris [D., Ore.] in his proposal. The late Sen. James Preston Kem [R., Mo.] was another with whom he developed the idea.

But over the years since Rossevelt's New Deal, the opponents of general use of the ballot box in the south have been powerful enough to see that nothing happened in Congress. Can it be that they are going to get away with it again—after Selma?

Here is one cause that the Douglas' and Cases, the Javitses and the Clarks, the Coop-ers and the Harts, the McCarthys and the Aikens ought to get together on forthwith. So should the Dirksens and the Mansfields, the Kuchels and the Longs. How can they or the rest of us—call the United States a reprentative democracy when millions of our citizens are not allowed to vote?

Sure enough, finally a Government car comes driving up our dirt road. "I'm going to get pink ones," says Maude, happy as a puppy dog.

"You bring our money?" says I. "First you got to sign here," he says. And when we do, he hands us a check for $42.93. "What's that for?" says I. "Your shanty," says he. "It's been condemned and "Well, it ain't much," I have to admit. "But are you going to tear it down."

"Well, it ain't much," I have to admit. "But are you going to put up something for us in its place?"

"You bet," says he, rubbing his hands. "On this very spot we are building you a modernly-engineered clover-leaf to provide you with ingress and egress to the new eight-lane See-Appalachia-First Freeway which is going through your kitchen."

"A freeway?" says I.
"Right," he says. "You are a lucky man, Mr. Joad. For this modern freeway will open up your backward land to reconstitute the same than reation and development and will provide you with efficient. modern transportation.

"But where," says Maude sadly, "will I hang my curtains?"

Well, after the Government fellow left, I cheered Maude up. "And look how handy it'll be to have an eight-lane freeway right to our door," I says. "If'n we can ever afford a car."

"I guess you're right, Jud." she says with a sigh. "But, to tell the truth, if I had my druthers, I'd druther they built built us a sidewalk instead."

Demonstrators Seek Reduction In Alabama Congressional Voice

WASHINGTON (AP) - Uniformed police carried 11 sitin demonstrators out of the Capitol Monday as the building was being secured for Presi-dent Johnson's appearance before Congress.
The demonstrators had come to the Capitol in the early afternoon, declaring they would stay in the building until Congress reduced the size of the Alabama delegation.

The demonstrators made a mand Monday on House demand Monday on House Speaker John W. McCormack for a cut-back in Alabania's Congressional delegation.

McCormack, who had shaken hands and greeted them af-fably, replied to the threat, voiced by David Smith, a Negro: you are demanding and making this issue an ultimatum and I cannot accept this from you or anyone else.

The Massachusettes Democrat told the group - about equally divided between Negroes and whites - that they were talking to a friend of civil rights legislation.

And he cautioned them against "taking the law into your own hands" and urged them to leave the building "in a gentlement to leave the building to be a gentlement to the state of the state "in a gentlemanly and lady-like manner."

With this advice, McCormack left the group and went to his office. He had met them in the alcove of a corridor, near an entrance to the House chamber.

The dozen or so demonstrators stayed where they were. They sat on the floor. One lay out full length.

By contrast, a detailed statistical study of registration in several counties in Ala-bama's soil-rich black belt disclosed that two out of three prospective white voters whose applications were pro-cessed by the board of registrars at Selma were accepted in the same two months.

The survey was put into the record at a federal court hearing which will determine whether Negroes demanding equal voting rights will be allowed to march from Selma to Montgomery 50 miles away, to dramatize their pro-

Since the right-to-vote drive, led by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., began in January, the government survey showed 207 Negroes were interviewed by the Dallas County Registra-tion Board in the two-month period which ended Feb. 28. Of these, 48 were registered to vote; the remaining 159 were turned down.

At the same time, 56 white applicants were approved and only 29 were rejected.

The government survey did not give up an up-to-date total the number of white and Negro voters in Dallas County.

Unofficial estimates show 9,500 whites and 600 Negroes registered.

Meanwhile, in Selma, police took down barricades at the site of a street vigil and appeared. A short time later, about 500 persons led by ministers, priests and nuns from across the nation began a march on the county court-house for a memorial service for the Rev. 'Best Team We've Played'

'Everybody' Told Aces They Couldn't Beat SIU 3 Times

"This is the greatest," a joyous Herb Williams kept repeating amid a near hys-terical Evansville College dressing room. Outside in the hallway an attendant had just asked everyone to take it easy.

"Let's give the teams 5 minutes," he announced to the crowd already packed at the bottom of the steps. In-side the little, already stuffy dressing room there was hardly any walking space. The place was packed.

The scene was Memorial Stadium Friday night, as the Evansville College victory party moved backstage after the formal celebrations on the victory Stadium hardwood had been completed.

The Purple Aces had just

The Purple Aces nad Just won the NCAA college division championship for the second year in a row, although they were pished to the limits by SIU before achieving their 32 92 outline wigner. 85-82 overtime victory.

Down the hallway from the happy scene SIU players with glassy stares on their faces slumped over chairs. They seemed to be still dazed from the third heartbreaking set-back dealt them by the Aces. Then all at once the attendands let the the crowd by and the hallway and the Aces' dressing room was filled with a sea of humanity. "Great game." "Congratula-tions." rang out as the red army invaded.

Ron Johnson, Sam Watkins, Herb Williams and several re serves were the only Aces visible as the mass of red blended in with rising voices. Then the greatest Ace of them all, Jerry Sloan, fought his way through the door amid outstretched hands.

"This had to be the greatest," the 6-5 one-man basket-ball destruction crew said. 'We did beat them three times in a row when everybody said it couldn't be done." The "Fabulous Fox" was replying to skeptics who he later admitted had been telling him for days you can't beat SIU three times. Sloan and the Aces had beaten SIU for the third time though, and the big guy had bowed out of col-lege ball in spectacular fashion.

He scored 25 points and grabbed the same number of rebounds.

"Its been great just being out on the floor and hearing the people roar," the big one continued.

The people Sloan was re-ferring to may have played a big part in the Ace's vic-tory. When Evansville started to rally late in the game from an 8-point deficit, the red-shirted army roared their approval. It definitely meant a lot to the Aces, Sloan said. "We couldn't help hearing it."

But the turning point of the me may have been Sam But the turning point of the game may have been Sam Watkins' quick basket to start the overtime, according to the consensus of the Aces and their veeran coach Arad Mc-

Cutchan.
"I think that was really the big break," the Louisvillebred Warkins said. "That meant a lot." The other Aces agreed.

The generally quiet one of the Aces was more reserved than the others, but that wasn't very reserved.

"I can't think of anything greater than this," he said.
And from McCutchan: "That Southern is tough, I don't know how we got them. There's no doubt about it, they're the best team we've played."

Four players, two each from Southern and Evansville, placed on the five-man alltournament team for the NCAA College Division finals.

Jerry Sloan and Larry Humes from the champion Purple Aces and Southern's Walt Frazier and George Mc-Neil were joined by fourth-place St. Michael's Richie Tarrant to complete the team Sloan, who bowed out of college competition after Evansville to its straight national anship, earned his leading second second straight national championship, earned his berth by scoring 69 points and grabbing a fantastic 76 rebounds in the three-game tourney. #### SIU Mile Relay Team Fails To Place in Detroit Meet finish in the 1,000-yard run kept SIU's indoor track squad from being shutout in the first annual National Collegiate Athletic Association indoor track championship in Detroit over the weekend.

Cornell's third, good for three points, put Southern in an 11-way tie for 25th place in the big meet. Forty-six teams in all scored points, as the best collegiates in the nation competed before a sell-out crowd of 9,553 in Cobor Hall

SIU's highly respected mile relay team failed to place. Morgan State of Baltimore set an American collegiate mark with a 3:15.6 effort. The time broke the record for an 11-lap board track set by Villanova in 1957 with a 3.16.

Villanova was second, Kentucky State third, Oklahoma State fourth and Kansas fifth in the mile relay.

Missouri's Big-Eight champions won the team title with 14 points, followed by Okla-homa State with 12, Villanova 11, Michigan State and Maryland 10 and Southern California 8 1/2.

Cornell, a two-time NCAA outdoor runner-up, finished behind Missouri veteran Robin Lingle and George Cer-mann of Seton Hall, as Lingle blazed off a 2:09.9.

Cornel! qualified for Saturday's meet by winning the 1,000-yard run at the Central Collegiate Championships with a fast 2:09.6. The senior from Chelmsford, England, however couldn't match the time Saturday.

Tied with Southern with three points each were four Big-Ten schools, Illinois, Michigan, Purdue and Wiscon-Illinois, sin, and Utah State, Washing-ton, Holy Cross, Ohio Uni-versity, Western Michigan and Providence.

One other U.S. mark was eclipsed in the meet, as Theron Lewis of Southern University won the 440-yard dash

5 Saluki Swimmers Will Compete In NCAA Meet; 3 Fail to Qualify

SIU swimming Coach Ralph Casey last week was reminis-cing about this year's season. The 49-year-old veteran, who has seen enough swimmers come and go to make most people's heads swim, wasn't exactly satisfied.

exactly satisfied.

Although the crew-cut veteran looked back and found a 7-2 record etched in the record book along side four new varsity records and three freshmen marks, he still felt some things had not been accomplished that could have heer been.

One of the things he had anticipated but which hadn't quite materialized was an quite materialized was an assault on the school 100-yard breaststroke record promising Gerald Pearson. Great things were expected of the sophomore from Rock-ford this year. He had set a new freshmen record of 2:19.6 in the event a year ago. Pearson had trouble matching his first-year time.

Early in February he finally began to come around as he blazed off a 2:18.2 on a Sat-urday afternoon against Iowa State after having gone 2:19.4
against powerful Indiana just

1. Now that graduation's getting close, have you given any thought to the kind of work you'd like to do?

I want to work for The Good of Mankind.

3. Is it required?

It helps. And I'll certainly need a pair of sandals.

4. What do you expect to earn?

All I ask is the satisfaction of knowing I'm helping to Build a Better World.

5. I'll be doing much the same the coong much the same thing. I've also lined up a job that affects society in a positive way. And if i do good, I'll move up, and my decisions will be even more important in the scheme of things.

Bet where's your beard? What about sandals

6. You don't need them in Equitable's development grogram. All you need is an appetite for challenge and responsibility, and the desire to do the best possible job. The pay is tops, too
