Board reverses stand; S. Barbecue to sell beer, wine

By Steve Lambert
Staff Writer

Southern Barbecue will go to sell beer and wine after all.

The Carbondale Liquor Control Commission Monday night reversed an earlier decision and unanimously approved the downtown restaurant's request for a Class B liquor license.

The original request was turned down by the commission in January after a majority of commissioners warned that the downtown area is already too congested with liquor establishments. Southern Barbecue is located at 220 S. Illinois Ave.

Helen Westberg, one of three commissioners who had opposed the license request 10 months ago, said after Monday's meeting that she reversed her vote because the commission had placed Ernest Fligor, owner of Southern Barbecue, in "too much of a competitive situation."

The Liquor Control Commission is made up of City Council members.

Fligor told the commission he wants to sell beer and wine to increase his dinner business. Southern Barbecue, which has been in operation since 1923, cannot compete fairly with bars and other food establishments which sell both food and liquor," he said.

"The city has allowed a saturation of new restaurants without consideration for the older establishments," Fligor said. "It would seem that being here for more than 50 years is more important than one more license."

He added that he has no intention of turning the restaurant into a bar.

The commission also unanimously approved a Class B license for Danver's Restaurant, 1010 E. Main St., despite criticisms by commissioners of the restaurant's promotion techniques.

Before the license was acted on by the commission, Danver's advertised in both the Daily Egyptian and Southern Illinoisan that draft beer would be featured at the restaurant.

"I feel that is an extremely presumptuous statement in an advertisement," commissioner Eldon Ray said at the meeting. "This should be taken very seriously."

Meanwhile, a request to build a package liquor store in the Lewis Park Mall, located on East Grand Avenue, was supported by four of the five commissioners.

Wilbur Pick of Carbondale approached the commission Monday night to see how commissioners would react to the possibility of such an establishment before he invests in the land and begins construction. Archie Jones was the only commissioner objecting to the proposal.

While the commission was granting two licenses and supporting the possibility of another several Carbondale residents voiced their opposition to the liquor business in the city.

The Rev. Les Pappas, pastor of the Murdale Baptist Church, warned that alcoholism is becoming an increasingly serious problem in Carbondale.

"I don't like to see the granting of any license—A, B, C, D, whatever," he told the commission. "I have no qualms with the persons here asking for licenses, but I do have a qualm with the product."

Velma Halstead, who manages a mobile home park near the Lewis Park Mall, added, "Tonight when you put your heads on your pillows, stop and study what it's going to mean: bringing these liquor licenses into Carbondale."

"I don't believe in it."

Tommy Glisson of Carbondale said that his wife would refuse to walk with her children down South Illinois Avenue after 6 p.m. on a Friday or Saturday.

He also expressed concern about the proposed Lewis Park Mall liquor store, saying, "I'm just concerned, since I'll have to live with it."

"Are you trying to move South Illinois Avenue to East Grand?"

F-Senate rejects ABA motion

By Pam Bailey
Staff Writer

A resolution protesting the power of the American Bar Association (ABA) to decide the fate of public universities was narrowly defeated in the Faculty Senate Tuesday.

The resolution, introduced by Joann Paine, associate professor of political science, was defeated 7 to 6, with 7 abstentions. It objected to:

"The power and authority of a professional association to withdraw accreditation when the state will not fund capital construction."

In his proposed budget, Gov. James Thompson omitted the $7.9 million SIU needs to build a new Law School building. The ABA has threatened to revoke SIU's provisional accreditation if a new Law School building is not built soon. Loss of accreditation would mean incoming law students would be ineligible to take the bar exam.

Frank Horton, vice president for academic affairs and research, cautioned that such a resolution could have a "very harmful impact on the Law School's programs right now."

He also noted that the ABA has been approved as the official accrediting agency for legal education by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

F-Senate refers fee split to committee

By Pam Bailey
Staff Writer

After an hour of often heated debate, the Faculty Senate reached an impasse Tuesday on whether to adopt a resolution calling for an equal distribution of student athletics fees between men's and women's athletics programs.

The resolution introduced by Joann Paine, associate professor in political science, consisted of two parts. The first part called for equal distribution of the fees without an increase in student fees. The second part said that per diem payments (reimbursements for expenses while on the road) to individual male and female athletes should be equal.

On a vote of 19-4, the resolution was referred to a standing committee. The committee was directed to collect additional data and report its findings to the senate in April.

Paine told the senate that of the $287,000 collected in student athletics fees, $266,000 goes to the women's program. Of that money, women athletes receive $34,000 for room and board on road trips, while the men get $31,000.

She added that 270 students participate in the 11 women's sports, while 280 men participate in the 11 men's sports.

"It is clear that the University has reached such a degree of discrimination that the Faculty Senate needs to make a stand," Paine said.

Gale Savers

While she agreed the University has made "minor improvements" in the past two years, she said the University is still in violation of Title IX, federal legislation which orders all public colleges and universities to correct sexual discrimination in athletics programs by July, 1978.

However, George Mace, vice

president for University relations, said that while he does not dispute Paine's figures, he believes the improvements SIU has made in the past two years have been substantial.

Mace said the women's athletics budget has increased by 200 percent since 1976, from $195,000 to $453,000. He also pointed out that SIU ranks in the top ten universities of the nation in regards to the total amount of money allocated to women's athletics.

Charlotte West, director of women's physical education, said that while this is true, the Department of Health, Education and Welfare (which is authorized to enforce Title IX) does not give out any gold stars to those institutions which are a little better than their neighbors.

Paine insists that equalization of the men's and women's athletics programs can and should be accomplished without increasing student fees.

"Our athletics fees are already high, particularly when we consider that tickets must be purchased by students before they can attend most sports events. I do not want to place an increased burden on the students," said Paine in the resolution.

However, Gale Savers, men's athletics director, warned that equalization without increasing fees would irreparably harm the quality of the men's athletics program.

"If you adopt this resolution, you will be telling me that you don't want a successful program for men," said Savers.

He explained that taking the $180,000 required by the resolution away from the men would mean all other sports other than football and basketball would have to be eliminated.

Mace has promised to provide the senate's committee with information regarding the University's plans for further improvements in the women's athletics program.

UMW, industry agree on new contract

WASHINGTON (AP)—Bargainers for the United Mine Workers and the coal industry agreed Tuesday on a new contract with terms finely-tuned to win the support of striking miners and thus settle the long standing coal strike without further government intervention.

Sources close to the contract talks said representatives of both the soft coal industry and the UMW compromised some earlier positions in agreeing on the latest version of a tentative three-year contract.

The UMW's bargaining council had approved an earlier contract proposal by a 25-13 margin, but the pact was rejected by the rank-and-file miners by a 2-1 margin. Prior to that, an industry offer was nixed by the bargaining council by a 12-6 vote.

Since last Friday, negotiations for the union and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association had been taking place at a Washington hotel, without the assistance of federal mediators.

The main bargaining talks recessed on Sunday while representatives of the two sides broke into smaller groups to work on individual issues. They remained in telephone contact on Monday and resumed the full-scale talks Tuesday.

Under the new proposal, sources said, miners would still be required for the first time to pay a portion of their health care costs, but the sum would be far less than was called for under the contract that was voted down a week ago. That rejection prompted President Carter to invoke the strike-stopping provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The sources also said the industry won its long fight for at least limited contract controls on wildcat strikes as well as some form of productivity incentives.

Gus Bode

Gus says the Faculty Senate had a shot at the athletics fee issue, but it double dribbled and fouled out.

Israelis launch attacks in Lebanon

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP)—Israeli ground, air and sea forces launched attacks early Wednesday against guerrilla forces in southern Lebanon, Palestinian sources reported.

They said Israeli jets bombed and strafed two guerrilla strongholds at Bint Jubayl and Maroun el Ras in the deep south, less than two miles from the Israeli frontier.

At the same time, Israeli armored vehicles were advancing from the Lebanese rightist-controlled town of Rumaysh apparently toward Bent Jubayl, the most strategic Palestinian position in the deep south, the official sources said.

Israeli naval gunboats were off the southern port cities of Tyre and Sidon but firing had not begun by 2 a.m. Beirut time—6 p.m. CST, the guerrillas said. The Israeli army called the attacks Lebanon for "a mopping-up operation" aimed at Palestinian terrorist bases along the Lebanese border.

The border crossing came three days after Palestinian terrorists attacked two buses on the Tel Aviv-Haifa road, killing 33 Israelis, and one day after Prime Minister Menachem Begin—responding to the attack—vowed to "cut off the arm of evil."

Israel's announcement said its forces did not intend to harm the population, the Lebanese army or Arab forces keeping the peace after the recent Lebanese civil war—"but only terrorists and their helpers."

It said, "The objective of the operation is not retaliation for the terrorist crime, for there can be no retaliation for the murder of innocent men, women and children, but to protect the State of Israel and its citizens from incursions of members of Fatah and the PLO who use Lebanese territory to attack citizens of Israel."

Rain, fog, flooding drenches Illinois

CHICAGO (AP)—Spring is only a week away, but winter still is having a fling in Illinois.

Rain, drizzle, fog, sleet and light snow made a bleak mixture over much of the state before easing off Tuesday under a cloud cover.

Colder air was expected to funnel into the state Tuesday night, dropping temperatures to 22 in the north to 32 in the south. Snow flurries are predicted in the north and central portions Wednesday.

More than one inch of rain fell in Southern Illinois before letting up. Some roads in central Illinois were flooded. By late Tuesday, however, state police reported the only route closed was U.S. 45 between Tuscola and Arcola.

Douglas County was alerted for continued flooding, especially near smaller streams and low-lying areas. Fog lingered in some sections.

The U.S. Weather Service said flood stage on the Wabash River should be reached at Mount Carmel early Friday morning. The lower Wabash is expected to rise steadily, cresting late next week.

The forecast is for the Wabash to crest at Mount Carmel on March 22 at 25 feet, 6 feet above flood stage.

A tornado touched down at Paducah, Ky., across the Ohio River from Metropolis, late Monday. There were no reports of injury or major damage.

In the Chicago area, portions of north suburban Skokie were without power for several hours Monday night.

Senators declare treaties position

WASHINGTON (AP)—Four previously undecided senators declared their positions on the Panama Canal treaties Tuesday as backstage maneuvering continued for the final few votes that will decide whether the Senate ratifies the pacts.

Declarations of position by Georgia's two senators and one each from Pennsylvania and Delaware gave each side two more votes—and reduced to a handful those said to be uncommitted.

Both Georgia Democrats, Sam Nunn and Herman Talmadge, had been expected to support the treaties. Sen. William Roth, R-Del., produced a mild surprise by lining up with the opposition. Sen. Richard Schweiker, R-Pa., had been expected to oppose the treaties.

Among those still undecided, only two or three evidently had vote-counters for both sides completely mystified—Sens. Jennings Randolph, D-W. Va., Edward Brooke, R-Mass., and Paul Hatfield, D-Mont.

An informal count by the Associated Press showed the opponents with 34 votes—the number they would need to block ratification when the first of the two treaties comes to a vote on Thursday. The same tally gave the proponents 64, three short of the total they would need if all members were present.

Sen. Paul Laxalt, R-Nev., chief strategist of the anti-treaty forces, called that estimate "very exciting," but said his own count was one or two votes short of the 34.

On the Senate floor, Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., declared that if the treaties lose, the administration has only itself to blame.

Carter plan aimed at slowing prices

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Carter administration will aim its anti-inflation program this year at slowing price increases, leaving until 1979 a major push to put the brakes on wage gains, it was learned Tuesday.

It has concluded there is virtually no chance of getting any cooperation from labor in restraining wage demands; unless there is progress on prices, an administration source said.

With many major wage negotiations scheduled for 1979, the success of the program will depend on what happens on the price side this year, one administration official conceded.

"The real test is what we get on the price side," he said. "If we don't get anything on the price side, we don't expect to get anything on the wage side either."

Implementation of the program, which was announced by President Carter in January, is behind schedule because of complications resulting from the long coal strike. But officials expect to begin meetings with leaders of major industries in about two weeks.

Although there may be exceptions, each industry will be asked to hold price increases this year to between 0.5 percent and 1 percent less than the average price increases of the previous two years.

Carter's anti-inflation program relies almost entirely on winning cooperation from both labor and business for gradually decelerating wage and price demands.

Wages have been increasing annually at about 8 percent a year.

Marines overrun Moluccan hold out

ASSEN, Netherlands (AP)—Dutch marines in a two-pronged assault Tuesday overran a building held for 28 hours by South Moluccan terrorists and freed 70 hostages at the moment the gunmen had threatened to start executing them.

"It was a very easy operation," said a government spokesman.

No one was killed in the 20-minute attack mounted by 60 anti-terrorist marine commandos, under fierce covering fire by sharpshooters on nearby rooftops.

But officials said a 40-year-old man died Monday when 13 other terrorists occupied the Drente provincial government complex in a wooded suburban park of this northern Dutch city.

Three hostages were slightly wounded Tuesday and another was badly wounded by the terrorists, who were arrested, a government spokesman said. An official said the gunmen carried "light arms."

"I think we were all very lucky, especially the hostages," said a policeman.

GSC endorses golf course proposal

By Ray Velek
Staff Writer

The proposed campus golf course has been endorsed by the Graduate Student Council (GSC).

Ned Frey, graduate in geology, introduced a motion at a recent GSC meeting "to encourage the administration of SIU and the Board of Trustees to seek and obtain the best possible contract for the construction of the Sahki National Golf Course." The motion passed 28-4.

Ray Huebschmann, GSC president, said he believed the GSC position was a fairer representation of student opinion than the position of anti-golf course groups such as Students for Students (SFS). SFS recently tried to organize a busload of students to oppose the golf course at the Board of Trustees meeting Monday in Edwardsville.

The trip was canceled because of a lack of funding and because of difficulties within the group.

"Students for Students is a small group of students who have been organized solely in opposition to the golf course," Huebschmann said.

The GSC executive board had considered making a motion endorsing the golf course for some time, but waited to see if it would come from the floor of the GSC, Huebschmann said.

The University has been negotiating with Richard J. Heath, a land developer from Evansville, Ind. who will build and pay for the golf course, estimated to cost between $800,000 and $1 million.

The GSC also passed a motion to encourage that soccer be added as SIU's twelfth sport. SIU needs to have a twelfth sport added to enter NCAA Division I-A status.

Asked why the GSC approved soccer instead of volleyball or water polo, GSC Vice President Ricardo Aquino-Caballero said, "It is the fastest growing sport in United States and it is the No. 1 sport in the world."

Caballero said soccer probably had the most potential for gaining revenue of the sports being considered.

"Very soon, in one or two years, soccer can easily begin charging admission fees and people would pay," Caballero said.

Because SIU is close to the St. Louis area, considered one of the strongest soccer areas in the United States, it would have an advantage in recruiting American players, Caballero said.

In other GSC action, a plan to evaluate the University administration on a yearly basis was discussed. The GSC is currently working with faculty in higher education on a suitable evaluation system.

Huebschmann said interviews with officials and evaluation forms would probably be used for the evaluation, if the administration cooperates.

Faculty members of the College of Business and Administration are scheduled to vote Wednesday on a resolution expressing "no confidence" in John R. Darling Jr., dean of the college.

Faculty members will meet at 4 p.m. in the General Classroom Building Room 18 to act on the resolution.

The meeting will be closed to the public.

The resolution charges Darling with a "general insensitivity to the rights and concerns of the faculty" and with failure "to unite the faculty in pursuit of common goals."

The result, according to the resolution, has been a "deterioration of the educational mission...and a decline in the morale of the faculty."

John Darling

According to the operating papers of the College of Business and Administration, a special meeting of the faculty can be called at the request of 10 percent of the voting faculty members.

There are 39 voting faculty members in the college.

Charles Hendersman, secretary of the college's faculty, said he could not disclose who had submitted the resolution. However, he said more than 10 percent of the faculty had requested the special meeting.

Darling became dean of the college in July 1976.

Darling is also chairman of SIU's Council of Deans, which is an advisory board to Frank Horton, vice president of academic affairs and research.

Darling could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

S-Senate to debate bill to submit hike on election ballot.

Do you favor a $1.95 hike in the student activity fee?

The Student Senate, in its meeting Wednesday at 7 p.m. in the Student Center Mississippi Room, will determine whether that question should be included on an upcoming referendum.

The bill calling for the vote in the election, scheduled April 26, says "students should best be able to determine whether an activity fee is warranted."

If the increase is approved by the Board of Trustees, the fee would be $7.20.

In other action, the senate will be asked to allocate $300 for the Student Government Activity Council's Spring Fest Committee and $240 for Southern Illinois Clayworks.

Women's transit to start after delay

By Jean Ness
Staff Writer

After more than a month delay, the women's transit program will begin making its nightly rounds Wednesday.

The transit service, designed to provide alternative transportation for women who travel alone, was scheduled to begin Feb. 1.

But, problems getting funds released and buying the proper insurance for the van rented from Vogler Motor Co., Inc., 301 N. Illinois Ave., delayed the program until now.

Transportation will be provided for women traveling alone or in pairs, Marie Kingsbury, coordinator of the program said Tuesday.

When possible, women will be transported to their homes, but Kingsbury stressed that the service's purpose is to provide transportation for women who fear rape, not to provide taxi service.

A 25-cent donation will be asked for women who use the service, Kingsbury said. The money will help fund the pilot program.

Designed as a three-month pilot program, the van transit program, has been reduced to a two-month basis because of the delays. In April, the women's transit service will be evaluated by the city and SIU, who each contributed $1,200 to the program.

Kingsbury, who originated the program, said that the refunding of the program after April will depend on what the city and SIU find in the service reports from the program.

The transit service will operate a van, which can accommodate 12 passengers including the driver.

Tom Busch, assistant vice president for student affairs, said the contract between the University and the Women's Center was signed Tuesday.

The wheelchair lift will be added to the van after all parties agree to the contract, Busch said, and that will probably be later this week.

Offering evening service, the van will run from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. on Friday and Saturday, and from 7 p.m. to 12 a.m. Sunday through Thursday—a total of 35 hours a week.

Kingsbury said the women's transit van will leave on each hour 1. on the Women's Center and make 10 stops:

—At 00:03 the van will stop at the Morris Library book drop parking lot.

—At 00:05, turnaround between Woody Hall and the Home Economics building.

—At 00:16, Thompson Point intersection on Lincoln Drive.

—At 00:20, Student Center circle drive.

—At 00:24, Park Street north of Grinnell Hall.

—At 00:25, southeast corner of Washington and Grand streets.

—At 00:36, City Hall parking lot south of the Fire Department.

—At 00:38, East Gate Shopping Center, near the phone booths.

—At 00:45, Memorial Hospital of Carbondale's north parking lot.

Production, development studied

Coal research major concern of SIU

This is the second of a two-part series.

By Ron Kachler
Staff Writer

Research into the production and development of coal has, in a relatively short time, become a major concern of SIU.

SIU in 1974 began the Coal Extraction and Utilization Research Center. Now under the direction of Lyle Sendlein, the center has established four specific areas of study as the main thrust of its research.

These four areas are coal mining, the reclamation of strip-mined land, the social-political effects of coal mining and the health and safety aspects of coal mining.

A primary concern of the center is the composition and utilization of Illinois coal.

The center operates as an interdisciplinary research facility within the University. Faculty members from several departments are involved in research concerning the utilization of high-sulfur Illinois coal.

One project is the study of the use of a coal-water-oil mixture as a fuel for industrial size boiler furnaces. The research involves converting gas burning boilers for the use of the coal fuel mixture.

"Most of the small boilers in use today were converted to burn natural gas," Sendlein said. "The purpose of our research is to eliminate gas consumption and increase the use of coal."

Lyle Sendlein

Sendlein said the process is being developed in conjunction with Adelphi University in New York and the researchers hope to establish a small plant to process the fuel and burn it at the Menard Penitentiary in Chester, Illinois.

Other projects involve research into the use of catalysts to effectively remove the sulfur content of coal during coal gasification, the use of high pressure water jets to cut and crush coal and an inquiry into air quality standards.

The pollution research is aimed at the Prevent Significant Deterioration (PSD) air quality amendment and how to apply it in Illinois. Sendlein said that the center is trying to enlist the cooperation of SIU's Medical School in studying acceptable levels of sulfur dioxide.

Sulfur dioxide is a gas given off from the combustion of high sulfur coal. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulations prohibit the burning of high sulfur coal without smokestack devices to remove the pollutant.

Sendlein said the coal center is primarily a research center, but is actively involved in those geology, mining technology and engineering courses which deal with coal.

"The University has a commitment to expand its mining and engineering program," Sendlein said.

Part of that commitment is the center's active quest for federal funds. SIU's coal center was the first research facility in the nation to apply for acceptance as one of 10 federally funded coal research centers.

The center would be one of 10 regional university coal research centers, a plan approved by President Carter and developed under the 1977 Surface Mining Control and Reclamation Act.

The center currently operates with state funds. Sendlein said government funding of the center is at least a year away. Government funding for the center could provide a budget of $600,000 to $1 million yearly, Sendlein said.

"The center provides a service function also," Sendlein said. "We provide the SIU faculty and Illinois industry with aid towards mining development and its relation to environmental problems."

Sendlein said the center is working actively with other coal research facilities in the state, the Carbondale Mining and Research Center.

Sendlein said the facility plans to work directly with private industry to research problems directly related to coal production.

Private industry has taken an interest in Illinois' high sulfur coal as a source of synthetic fuel. The Illinois Coal Gasification Group (ICGG), a group of five electrical utilities, has begun the planning and design of a demonstration size coal gasification plant about 30 miles northwest of Carbondale.

Bob Epy, an ICGG scientist, says the plant should be in operation and producing 18 million cubic feet of synthetic gas and 2,400 barrels of synthetic crude oil daily by 1985.

ICGG estimates the plant will use about 2,200 tons of Illinois coal daily to produce "cogas", a synthetic fuel which is the equivalent of natural gas.

Epy said the plant will be a demonstration facility and if the plant lives up to the group's expectations, it would serve as a model for commercial gasification plants which would produce the gas to supply electrical facilities with fuel.

"Illinois has the largest reserves of bituminous coal in the nation—65.7 billion tons. This is an amount of coal too great to be ignored, whatever its characteristics. With the cooperation of industry and research, future coal production in Illinois could be the most promising in the nation," Epy said.

Solar energy project lends information, assistance

By Lori Amend
Staff Writer

Energy—increased costs of fossil fuels and the coal miners' strike has made it a one word crisis question.

Ananda Marga, a service agency, has developed a one word answer—solar.

Because more people are considering alternate energy sources, the Ananda Marga Solar Project in Carbondale is providing information and technical assistance on weatherization and solar energy to Southern Illinois families. The project is part of the agency's Education, Relief and Welfare section.

The program, which began in October 1978, is funded under the Comprehensive Employment Training Act (CETA) Title VI Special Projects. Two staff positions were created by the initial $72,700 grant. Six more were added last week through an additional $52,500 CETA grant.

Chris Robertson, solar house designer, and Hugh Muldoon, community facilitator, coordinate the project.

Robertson, who has been collecting solar information for the past seven years, said that the first five months of the project's existence have been spent organizing and gathering information on already-developed low cost solar heating systems.

"The technology is already there. We can just take the best of other people's designs," Robertson said. He said most most houses could be fitted with solar equipment that would pay for itself in one to three years.

The project has already accumulated enough energy literature to start "a good, basic" reference center, including 18 to 20 books recommended by the National Center for Appropriate Technology (NCAT). Robertson said there are now plans to set up a lending library.

Tentatively called Shawnee Sunshine, the center would contain technical information for persons interested in building or designing their own solar system.

A $48,000 grant to set up the center has been requested from NCAT. This money would be used to purchase additional materials and cover the costs of operating expenses.

Robertson said the status of the grant should be known by May.

The solar project staff also provides consultation to persons building new homes. The staff will evaluate blueprints and estimate what percentage of heat could be provided by solar energy.

Persons planning to refit present structures for solar energy can also ask for technical advice, Robertson said.

Before a present home can be equipped for solar heating, it must be tightly sealed. To help families do this, Robertson said the staff will begin conducting energy audits next month.

The audits will suggest ways to weatherize buildings. Recommendations such as caulking windows will be made, along with estimates of cost and the amount of materials and time needed to complete the project.

These services are free to low-income families.

Besides these direct services, Robertson said they hope to develop a network of people interested in solar energy that would work together on projects.

Robertson said a monthly newsletter will be mailed to these people to keep them informed of new developments in the solar project and new technology.

"People can become more in charge of their own lives and less dependent on corporations," Robertson said.

"How-to" workshops are also being planned for these people. One of the workshops already held taught the participants how to build a solar collector.

The project has also applied for grants to conduct conferences on solar housing and solar greenhouses.

Besides solar energy, other forms of appropriate technology are being researched by the group. Composting toilets and waste disposal systems at two of the areas the group is interested in.

"Since this legislation was enacted three years ago, there has been a ten percent decrease in energy use there. The city eventually predicts a 50 percent decrease in energy consumption," Robertson said.

Funding for the solar project runs out in September, but Robertson said he anticipates continued funding.

Robertson said the project will expand its areas of concern as much as the community want it to.

"I see this program being around for a few more years," Robertson said.

Felon lawmaker wants to prove crime does pay

Get out the blue pencil, movie fans, because the Illinois General Assembly is considering a move that would make the moral of every 1930s gangster film obsolete.

If certain state officials have their way, a former member of the Illinois House who was twice convicted on charges of official corruption will soon begin receiving a pension for his service in state government.

The conclusion is obvious—according to the government of Illinois, crime does indeed pay—to the tune of $18,800 per year.

Robert Craig, 55, a former state representative from Danville who was kicked out of office last year after being twice convicted of bribery and fraud, has been ruled eligible for a state pension by Illinois Attorney General William Scott.

There is a law that prohibits anyone convicted of a felony while a member of the legislature from getting a pension. But Scott ruled in an opinion last month that this law doesn't apply to Craig since Craig took office in January, 1955, six months before the law took effect.

How absurd to allow a convicted felon to receive a pension on such a flimsy technicality.

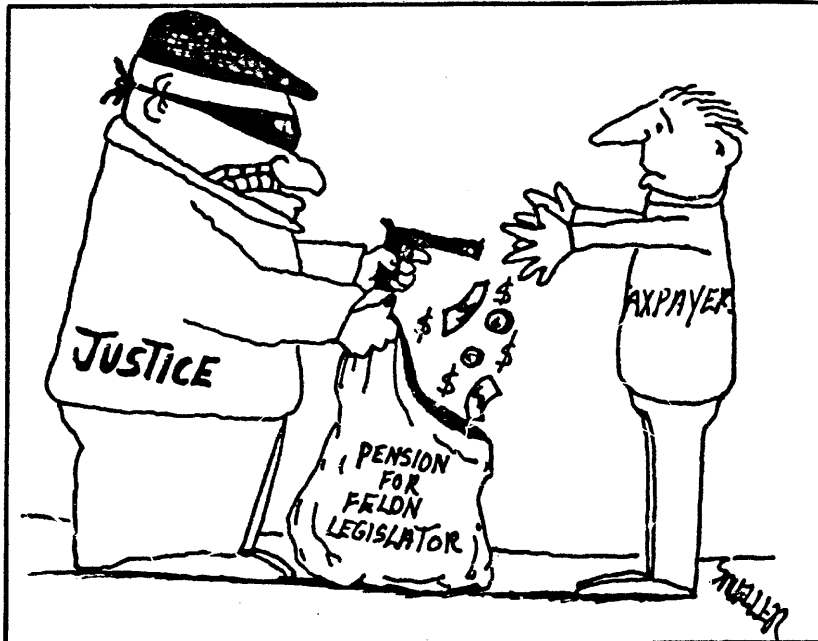

This ruling by Scott amounts to an ex post facto law in reverse. If a law doesn't apply to a legislator simply because he became a legislator before the law went into effect, then the same kind of logic can be used to support a citizen not obeying a law because he was born before the law was enacted!

Craig, convicted in federal court in 1976 of 14 counts of conspiracy, mail fraud and bribery, was a member of the state legislature when he was convicted. He was also a member of the legislature when the law prohibiting legislators from receiving pensions went into effect. There is no moral, ethical or legal reason (Scott's ruling notwithstanding) for taxpayers to be doubly victimized—first by Craig's crimes and then by supporting him for the rest of his life.

Craig himself has said he isn't surprised at Scott's opinion. "They thought they were messing with an old farm boy," Craig said last month.

The General Assembly's Retirement Board is scheduled to meet April 13 to make a final decision on whether "farm boy" Craig is to get his pension. Senate President Thomas Hynes, D-Chicago, says he thinks the "farm boy" will get his benefits.

The Illinois legislature should regain its senses, and put farm boy Craig out to pasture where he belongs—and let him buy his own bag of oats.

Wise up, media: Trivia not news

By Arthur Hoppe

As an ace newsmen, the question I am constantly asked at cocktail parties is, "Why don't newspapers print more important news?" I usually dismiss the subject by saying it's probably just another international conspiracy. But the truth of the matter is that I don't know.

Take the other day, "How's it going, Al?" I said to the driver as I boarded the 41 bus.

"Not bad," Al said. "But I'm a little worried about Russian intervention in the Ethiopia-Somalia conflict on the Horn of Africa this morning."

"Can't say as I blame you," I said, taking a seat. "Now that Ethiopian strongman Haile Mariam Mengistu openly boasts that Cuban troops are fighting in the front lines, it sure looks bad for the freedom-loving peoples of the Ogaden."

The fat lady next to me with the little dog on her lap stirred. "Well at least Premier Ian Smith has signed an interim agreement in Rhodesia with Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the Reverend Ndabaningi Sithole and Senator Jeremiah Chirau," she said jovially.

An old man across the aisle in a long black overcoat and tennis shoes snorted. "That's easy for you to say," he snapped. "But do you realize the dollar has fallen to a record low in relationship to other Western currencies, causing consternation and panic among our allies and imperiling the very fabric of the NATO alliance?"

"No, I didn't," said the fat lady contritely. "I guess I was just too darned worried that the Senate Banking Committee wouldn't confirm G. William Miller as head of the SEC because Hassan Safavi, a former Iranian official, said he told three Bell officials in 1967 that Air Force General Mohammed Khatemi had an interest in Air Taxi, a company that Bell paid $2.9 million when it won a lucrative contract from the Iranian Air Force. But I don't think Mr. Miller, who was head of Bell's parent company, Textron, knew anything about it."

"Boy, are you a Polyanna!" cried the old man. "Next you'll be saying you think the two-months of Belgrade Conference on East-West Cooperation, which ended today, was a success even though the Russians blocked any mention of human rights in the final statement."

"I will not," sobbed the fat lady, breaking into tears.

An angry young man with "Born to Lose" tattooed on his knuckles was on his feet, switchblade in hand. "Leave her alone!" he shouted at the old man. "Can't you see she's been driven to distraction over whether Congress will support the President's proposed revisions in the federal impact aid program in his new $6.9 billion education bill?"

At this point, the bus screeched to the curb and Al jumped out yelling for the police.

Being a coward, I buried my nose in my newspaper. What did I see? "Coed Chains Fiance to Bed as Love Slave—72 Hours of Sexual Abuse."

Really? Who cares? If the newspapers don't wise up and start devoting more space to the important stories that interest us readers, they're not going to last long.

Sadat can't afford another war with Israel

By James J. Kilpatrick

CAIRO—After 10 days in this benighted country, I have found a solution for the whole of the Mideast crisis. In the interests of world peace, I modestly pass it along.

In my scenario, Mr. Sadat, the president of Egypt, makes one more visit to Mr. Begin, the prime minister of Israel. After the usual over-the-top have been dispensed with, Mr. Sadat speaks himself, firmly but politely, as follows:

"Manny, my patience is exhausted. Either you give us a reasonable settlement, or—or, we surrender."

At that dreadful prospect, Mr. Begin trembles and turns pale. "But, but—" he says.

"I mean it," says Mr. Sadat. "Come to terms or you can take over my trade deficit. You can repair the broken windows in the Cairo Museum. You can clean my filthy streets. You can solve the transportation mess. You can have the poverty, the squalor, the massive illiteracy! All yours, Manny, including the stinking canes! Whaddya say?"

It is an offer Mr. Begin can't refuse. Back in 1973, the conquering Israelis demonstrated their sound good sense. The got within 45 miles of Cairo—just 30 minutes away by cab—and brought their tanks to a screeching halt. With one more push, they could have had the whole schmear. Prudence intervened. Judgment triumphed. The Israelis thought better of the prospect. They backed off, and the rest is history.

To visit Egypt, however briefly, is to gain some understanding of the desperate fix in which this Arab republic finds itself. If Egypt were a publicly traded corporation, it would be ripe for takeover. In terms of its gross national product, the trade deficit is pure disaster. Egypt's population is growing at an annual rate of 2.3 percent. This could produce 80 million human beings by the turn of the century, double the estimated 39 million who now struggle for survival.

If an honest balance sheet could be prepared, Egypt would wind up bankrupt. The International Institute of Strategic Studies has estimated that Egypt spends $4.8 billion a year to maintain 342,500 men under arms. These were the figures for 1975. The current expense is doubtless greater. If the money bought an effective army, navy and air force, perhaps the outlay could be defended, but Egypt's armaments are mostly hand-me-downs from the Russians. Spare parts are running out. Egypt couldn't lick six brigades of Cub Scouts.

To its credit, Egypt is trying valiantly to educate more than 6,000,000 school children. It is trying to move ahead with health services. It maintains 2,500 birth control centers in an effort to restrain the growth in population. But the social and economic problems outdistance the efforts at relief. Every day, by one knowledgeable estimate, a thousand peasants move into Cairo from the country. They add to the unbelievable misery of the old city, where populations densities approach 250,000 per square mile.

Egypt is starved for capital. Tourism offers potentially a nice return. Last year a million tourists came to Egypt; they spent an estimated $370 million, which meant more to the economy than earnings from the Suez Canal. The Ministry of Tourism hopes for 1.7 million visitors in 1980, with spending of $850 million. An additional 45,000 hotel rooms are in prospect, but when one watches the inefficient techniques of building construction, that goal has to be viewed with a skeptical eye.

The one thing Egypt cannot possibly afford is another war with Israel or with anyone else. Even the rich and friendly Saudis could not bankroll such folly. At some cost—indeed, at almost any cost—Egypt must come to terms, reduce its arms spending and cultivate the resources that might produce a better life for its people.

The dialogue in my scenario is written in jest, but this is graveyard humor. Mr. Sadat's declarations of "non-negotiable principles" amount to no more than a pitiful bluff. In the fateful game of Mideast poker, he is down to a busted flush. A good gambler would throw in the hand.

Bureaucracy rules in higher education

Editor's note: This is the first of a two-part series on bureaucracy in Illinois colleges and universities. A special Illinois House of Representatives committee plans to investigate possible bureaucratic waste and excesses in higher education. Part two of this series will focus on another area of the House committee's investigation—administrative salaries in higher education.

Government doesn't have a monopoly on bureaucratic waste.

Members of the Illinois House say that public higher education in the state also is being victimized by a monstrous, rapidly expanding bureaucracy. A special panel, the State Government Organization Committee, plans to investigate this bureaucracy for inefficiency and will suggest reorganization plans.

Scrutiny of the administrative structure of the state's 15 public four-year institutions, including SIU, and of the state's 39 community colleges could uncover unwanted bureaucratic excesses, according to the committee's co-chairman.

This special committee, chaired by Rep. Douglas Kane, D-Springfield, and Rep. James Houlihan, D-Chicago, is made up of five Democrats and four Republicans. It was created last year to study, on a continuing basis, the reorganization of state government. This group already has considered, among other things, Gov. Thompson's proposals to restructure the Department of Law Enforcement and a plan to merge the General Services and Finance departments into one agency.

If the state legislature intends to uncover waste and inefficiency in Illinois' higher education bureaucracy, it will have to wade through hundreds of statistics and voluminous amounts of data on the state's university system. And the legislature also will have to look beyond the raw stats when it interprets and analyzes this information. Obviously, large institutions will have larger administrations than smaller universities have. So comparing the number of administrators at SIU-C, for instance, to the number at Chicago State University is meaningless.

But comparing ratios like the number of administrators per student, and number of administrators per faculty for each university, provides a clear picture of educational bureaucracy.

Overall, the number of administrators in all state universities at the four-year level has declined—from 3,192 in 1976, to 3,050 in 1977, according to the Board of Higher Education (BHE). But this small decrease is more than offset by a dramatic increase in the number of administrators employed by state universities from nonappropriated funds (money other than State funds). In this category in 1976, state universities employed 961 administrators; in 1977 that figure rose to 1,485, an increase of about 56 percent. According to the BHE, sources for nonappropriated funds include student fees, housing fees from university-owned living centers and federal grants for research projects.

Based on fiscal year 1977 figures, SIU's School of Medicine ranks third-highest in the state in number of administrators per faculty members, with one administrator for every 2.1 faculty. First on this list is the University of Illinois at Urbana, with one administrator for every two faculty.

SIU-C ranks fifth in the state in this category, with one administrator for every 2.9 teachers. The state average is one administrator for every 2.8 faculty members.

However, SIU-Edwardsville ranks low compared to other state universities—one administrator for every 4.7 faculty. And SIU-E's School of Dental Medicine ranks lowest in the state with one administrator for every 16 teachers.

In the category of number of administrators per student, in fiscal 1976 SIU-C again ranks fifth in the state, with one administrator for every 67 students. Highest on this list is the U of I Medical Center with one administrator for every 18 students. The U of I at Urbana is second in the state with one administrator for every 36 students. The state average is one administrator for every 60 students.

The U of I Medical Center and the U of I at Urbana also rank highest in the state in number of faculty per students. The U of I Medical Center has 6.6 students for every faculty member. The state average is one faculty member for every 22.7 students.

SIU is seventh in the state in this area, with one faculty member for every 23.6 students.

So there is evidence of possible excess in the state's administration of public higher education. If Kane's special House committee looks through the BHE's various budget resource allocation plans, it can come up with many areas of fat that need to be trimmed.

Fans, not knitters, should attend games

I must side with Tom Casey in Friday's "60 Minutes" style editorial face-off with Linda Thompson regarding winning. Linda could make the proverbial tortoise feel guilty for beating the hare. Let's face it—we live in a competitive society. I wholeheartedly agree with Vince Lombardi, Roger Staubach, Ohio State's Woody Hayes, Alabama's Bear Bryant and the rest of the sporting world's "one-track minds."

Winning, if not everything, is by far the most important aspect of competition, fund-raising, and notoriety. This is easily evidenced by the number of Ray Dempsey quotes that can be found in Ohio State's or Alabama's editorial pages. Ohio State alone brought in $5.5 million in football revenue last year. I severely doubt this was due to Woody Hayes' demands to "get out there and learn some camaraderie, communication and partisanship."

Furthermore, Saluki fans at the Creighton game should be commended for their enthusiasm, not ridiculously compared to the violence in professional sports or corruption in government. We are far from attacking players with broken bottles, lead pipes, and knives.

If Miss Thompson wants to bring her knitting to SIU's games, that's fine. But I, along with many other Saluki fans, will do whatever we can to ensure that Saluki teams WIN.

Fan violence a reaction to violent sports

In response to Linda Thompson's March 10th editorial "Vince Lombardi was wrong," she said a lot of things that are true, but she didn't take her reasoning quite far enough. Football, hockey and boxing are violent, brutal sports with no socially redeeming value, and they should be banned. It's not surprising that some sports fans hurl debris into sports arenas. Their violence simply reflects the violence of the games themselves.

Basketball may not be an intrinsically violent sport, but it often works out that way. I find it hard to see why people think that it is so crucial for the Salukis to win—who cares? Basketball is only a game, and obsessive competitiveness is stupid. I personally couldn't care less if the Salukis never win, any more than I care if the Russians make it to Mars before we do.

Art award means 10 won't 'starve'

By Mary Field
Student Writer

A feeling of achievement permeated the second floor of the Allyn building Monday afternoon. The general feeling among a group of students there was one of happiness, along with quite a few sighs of relief. Cries of "Congratulations!" could be heard. People were hugging, kissing, shaking hands and above all enjoying the moment.

This group of students included several of those chosen to receive the Rickert-Ziebold Award. The ten were judged by the members of the faculty of the School of Art to have "attained truly outstanding levels of performance in their studio work," according to Robert L. Paulson, coordinator of the competition.

Those chosen were: James Vlodek for his work with ceramics; Leslie Green, drawing; Aimee Rankin, intermedia; Don Menke, general studio; Margaret Stenway, ceramics; Leslie Orenstein, ceramics; Kim Penton, drawing; Sherry Rasley, drawing; William Livesay, prints and drawing; and John Crnich, sculpture.

These ten were chosen from a field of 32 applicants. Paulson said that the competition was divided into two stages. Selections were based on 20 slides of each contestant's work and a final competition, a showing of the works of the applicants.

The ten winners of the annual Rickert-Ziebold Award will share equally in the $20,000 prize money. The award is made possible by a $250,000 bequest to SIU from a former Waterloo resident who wanted to help art students.

Marguerite L. Rickert died in 1971 in North Carolina. She left one-third of her estate to SIU, stipulating that the money be used each year to reward "accomplishments of outstanding undergraduate senior art students."

Once the prize is awarded, winners may use the money however they wish to further their artistic development.

When asked how they felt about winning the award, many of the students had the same answer.

Vlodek, who received the award because of his work in ceramics said, "I'm relieved—it's been three years of wondering what the outcome would be. I'm also very happy." Vlodek said that he had been following the award through the three years of its history here and he knew he would try for it.

The three women who received the award for drawing, Green, Rasley and Penton all felt about the same. The relief was evident on their faces. Green stated that she felt that she had graduated already.

Rasley said, "I felt pessimistic. I guess because I always under-judge my work. The fact that I won reinforces me about my work. It is a motivation to continue. I am so relieved it's over!"

Happiness. Shock. Relief above

all. The feeling is the same for all the students. To many, it's the culmination of a lot of long hard hours spent in the studio.

Most of the recipients of the award have already planned how they will pursue their careers. Two of the students, Livesay and Menke, would like to go to Europe. Others plan to look into graduate schools.

Curator: Tenure inhibits faculty

By Mike Ulreich
Staff Writer

"Publish or Perish" is a fact of life for most faculties and it is no less so for the School of Art, according to Evert Johnson, curator of the University Museums and Art Galleries.

Johnson said that unreasonable tenure requirements for art teachers may have caused the lack of interest and material for this year's faculty exhibit at Mitchell Gallery. The last day of the show is Wednesday.

Teaching, creating art and exhibiting it is comparable to other faculties' research, writing and publishing. With such demands on his time, the artist-teacher may find little time or energy to exhibit in a show which does not bring "publishing" credit. The Mitchell Gallery show does not bring this important recognition to the individual who decides to exhibit.

"Publishing" recognition comes with the teacher having his work exhibited. Johnson said tenure and promotion are based, to a considerable extent, on the teacher's yearly record of exhibitions, awards and public recognition received.

This year's faculty exhibit is smaller than usual, both in terms of the number of people who chose to show their work and also in terms of the scale of work.

"One is tempted to speculate," said Johnson, "about what some of these artists are exhibiting in other more prestigious exhibits that have greater value as far as the 'publish or perish' game is concerned."

Larry Bernstein, associate professor of art, has taught at SIU for 15 years and has exhibited three paintings in the Mitchell Gallery exhibit which reflect his philosophy that the artist's best material is his own environment.

Bernstein said that one of the difficulties for the Southern Illinois artist is the distance to important galleries and the lack of support for the art school from the administration.

"It's very difficult to keep contacts going," he said. "We have no relationship with very little and it's difficult to get my work in cities."

SHOPLIFTERS

ATLANTA (AP)—You are sentenced to write a research paper, make an apology, give two weeks of volunteer service. Rex Ruff, president of the Georgia Council of Juvenile Court Judges, doesn't think he is doing anything innovative with his sentencing in shoplifting cases.

And statistics suggest Judge Ruff's approach is working. In 1976, 212 cases of shoplifting came before his court, but as of Sept. 1, 1977, he had dealt with only 87.

Two of the judge's favorite topics for the paper are "Who Pays for the Cost of Shoplifting?" and "Devices and Means Used to Detect Shoplifters."

where they can be exhibited."

Bernstein blames much of the art teacher's distress on a lack of money and understanding from the administration. This has prevented both faculty and students from experiencing important artistic opportunities. He cites the lack of funding for trips to museums to study art exhibits, a situation which hurts the students from the Southern Illinois area. This limits their opportunity to come in contact with the fine art being shown in New York and Europe.

Bernstein is grateful to the university for its sabbatical policy. He plans to use his current sabbatical to re-establish interest in his paintings in the galleries of New York and Europe.

Assistant professor of art Michael Onken has taught here for 10 years. He is exhibiting his collection of three paintings called "The Life of the Prophet Mohammed" in the faculty show.

Onken disagrees that New York or Europe should be the artist-teacher's center of interest. "My main interest is with my students here," he said. While agreeing that the art school needs more money to provide students with more art experiences, Onken said that tenure requirements had little effect on his work as a teacher and painter.

The yearly exhibit of faculty art serves as a checkpoint for assessing developments or change in direction, style or technique in the artist's work.

"The real value of this exhibit," said Johnson, "is the opportunity students have to see their teachers practicing art rather than teaching. The faculty exhibit may have considerable value for the art student and others because it presents concrete, comparative examples of the subtleties of art."

Wednesday is the last day to see the art work of the SIU faculty. The Mitchell Galleries' next exhibit will be "Selections from Private Collections," a showing of the outstanding art works privately owned in the Carbondale community and surrounding areas. The Mitchell Gallery is open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. and is located in the Home Economics Building.

Anna Olswanger portrays 'Medea' in last weekend's Center Stage production.

'Medea' is inadequate

By Carlos Charlie
Student Writer

It seems a shame that the usual high quality of the Center Stage productions should be scarred a bit by one inadequate play. But, alas, such is the case of Medea, a thesis production directed by Jan O'Connor, graduate student in theater.

"Medea," a Greek tragedy by Euripides, seemed to lack that certain quality that would have made it, at least, interesting. There was a superficiality about it that kept the audience from really getting involved in the "struggles" of princess Medea.

A Review

As if a glass wall separated the actors from the audience, there was no effort made to reach out, to involve the audience in what was happening onstage. There was no need for the audience to feel for the characters, so they didn't.

Those few characters that tried to add some reality to their parts, Jeffrey Hutchinson (the messenger) for example, seemed overacted because of the low-key personalities of the others.

Anna Olswanger's portrayal of Medea, for all its action and fluid movement, lacked vocal inflection. This may not seem important to anyone except the people who had to sit and listen to Medea moan, talk, lament, and scream in the same monotone. After a while it got irritating. After an even longer while, maddening.

What started out to be a portrayal of women's struggles, turned into a dull superficial look at how Greek drama should not be done. And one wonders what was wrong with the way Euripides wrote it. It has, after all, lasted 2000 years.

The so-called "universal" struggle for identity was not evident in the play. There was no reason to identify with Medea as a woman because Medea is not today's woman. Her methods of self-gratification are not, and never will be a part of our social system and therefore, Medea is not relevant. But let's go away from interpretations—they are, in the eyes of the beholder—and return to the more substantial aspects of the play.

Technically, the play was well done.

Double blessings on the various designers (lighting, stage, costume) for maintaining the Greek-ness of Medea. Everything worked well and was pleasing to the eye.

The music, by Timothy Bell, was intriguing. It managed to convey the atmosphere one would expect for a play such as this one. Although it was a bit avant-garde, it was a pleasurable listening experience.

Slave, 'Truth' to play at Arena

High energy funk comes to the Arena April 14 when Slave and Undisputed Truth appear together in a 9 p.m. concert.

Both groups, well known to funk jazz and disco fans, have quite a few hits to their credit including "You Plus Me Equals Love" by Undisputed Truth and "Slide" by Slave.

The Truth, which promises to offer flashy theatrics and lively funk disco, is produced by Norman Whitfield, former producer of Motown Records. Slave, which records on the Cotillion label, has a single "The Party Song" jumping up the charts now from their latest album "The Hardness of the World."

Tickets for the Focus-9 concert will go on sale after spring break. The concert is scheduled to coincide with Kappa Kappa Week.

George Burns to perform in DuQuoin

George Burns, one of this country's oldest established stars, has signed to appear at the 1978 DuQuoin State Fair.

Burns will headline the traditional Labor Day night show on Monday, Sept. 4, closing night of the 1978 Fair.

Burns will be making his second appearance at the Fair, having appeared earlier in 1962. A recent smash hit in movies like "Oh God" and "The Sunshine Boys," for which he won an Oscar for best supporting actor, Burns has a long and storied career in entertainment.

His career began in the vaudeville days when he was a stand-up comic and dancer and continued into the radio boom days of the 1930's and 1940's, when his radio show with wife Gracie Allen was one of the most popular on the airways.

Center's funding passes hurdle

By Jean Ness
Staff Writer

It looks like the green light for a $10,000 funding request for the Women's Center again this year.

Joyce Webb, president of the Women's Center, which provides counseling and service to women, asked the Carlisle City Council for the funding Monday night and got an encouraging response from the mayor.

"It looks like it's go," Mayor Neal Eckert told Webb after the council had discussed the funding request. The Council responded favorably to Webb's request with only one addition to the proposed contract.

Hans Fischer, council member, asked that a clause stipulating that any unused part of the $10,000 be returned to the city if not needed by the Women Center.

The contract will come before the City Council March 20 for formal approval.

"We've been working less than one year at gathering outside funds," Webb said Monday. Two applications were sent out for outside funds this year. One was turned down and the other is still being considered.

Last year, the Women's Center received a little more than $11,000 from the City Council.

The program was initially funded in 1972 with money from pledges and donations, Webb said. She estimated more than 5,000 women receive services from the Women's Center this year.

The funding pays for women's programs and services, the bulk of which are used by local and county women, Webb said.

The $10,000 from the city will help defray a $14,936 deficit incurred by the Women's Center this year.

Funding is also provided by the United Way, $6,000, and the Jackson County Mental Health 708 Board, $1,500. The center's original funding source, individuals in the community pledged $3,271 in donations for the coming year.

Services provided by the center include a legal counseling program, a women's transit service, which is a pilot program designed to reduce rapes, and a shelter program for women who need emergency housing.

Air cleared; court decides to free skunk

CHICAGO (AP)—Wishbone the skunk is soon going to be on his own, freely sniffing the posies and smelling up the woods, despite the objections of his former foster family.

Judge George J. Schaller of Circuit Court in a ruling made public Monday dismissed a suit that sought to have Wishbone remain at Lincoln Park Zoo rather than release him into his natural environment.

The zoo and the Chicago Park District had been named as defendants.

The suit was filed by the William G. Stanton family, in whose garage Wishbone was found Nov. 20.

Conflicting conservation laws forbade the Stantons from keeping the skunk or turning him loose or killing him.

During negotiations with various agencies, the Stantons moved the skunk into their home and kept him as a pet. Agreement finally was reached through Gov. James R. Thompson for Lincoln Park Zoo to take custody.

Stanton claimed in his suit that Wishbone would not be able to survive the cold weather because the animal had become domesticated over the past few months.

Joseph A. Power, attorney for the park district, said the suit was dismissed Friday because Illinois law clearly provides that the skunk belongs to the state.

Friends of library want donations of books, magazines

Attention spring cleaners: The Friends of Morris Library want your unwanted books and record albums for their annual spring sale, and they've set Saturday as collection day.

From 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. people can contribute books at the Blue Barracks, just east of the railroad tracks at Grand Avenue. All materials will be logged by library personnel and most will be sold at prices ranging from 10 cents to $2 at the sale, scheduled for April 14 and 15, according to Jane Lockrem, book sale coordinator.

Proceeds will fund special acquisitions for Morris Library and the publication of ICARBS—a compilation of scholarly manuscripts now in its fourth edition.

Both hard-cover and paperback books are needed, Lockrem said. "We're especially interested in getting cookbooks, music and art texts, biographies, children's and popular fiction books, but all kinds are acceptable," she said.

The group will also accept magazine series such as National Geographic, Popular Mechanics and automotive periodicals.

House votes no to mail cutback

WASHINGTON (AP)—A bill to prevent the Postal Service from halting Saturday mail deliveries has been approved by a landslide margin in the House.

The measure would require the Postal Service to give Congress advance notice of any plan to change the level or type of postal service. The House or the Senate could block any change by passing a resolution of disapproval within 60 days.

The bill, approved on a 371-6 vote, now goes to the Senate. The overwhelming vote indicates Congress would not go along with any cutback in service.

Under the legislation, the Postal Service would be required to give Congress advance notice of any plan to reduce mail delivery from the current six days a week, or to curtail the times of operation of post offices.

It also would require notice of any planned increase in the standard length of time it takes to deliver a letter.

The Postal Service has been considering the idea of ending Saturday deliveries for some time, but has never formally proposed the idea. It was recommended, however, by the Commission on Postal Service, an independent panel created by Congress.

The Postal Service estimates that elimination of Saturday service would save $400 million annually. Last year, the Postal Service lost $688 million, down from $1.2 billion in 1976.

Rep. James Hanley, D-N.Y., floor manager of the bill, said he was told by White House domestic adviser Stuart Eizenstat last week that President Carter has no objection to the legislation.

Postal Service spokesman Le: Eberhardt said, in a telephone interview, the administration has taken no position on the bill.

Hanley said that after the commission on postal service proposed elimination of Saturday service, "the outcry from the public and the Congress was immediate."

Residents go home after evacuation

DONGOLA (AP)—About 800 residents of this Southern Illinois town have returned to their homes and offices after workmen finished draining toxic vinyl chloride from a damaged railroad tanker car.

The evacuation began early Monday morning and lasted about six hours while a derailment cleanup contracting firm drained the vinyl chloride from an Illinois Central Gulf tanker to another container.

Dongola residents went to the homes of nearby relatives and friends or stayed in churches and public buildings, authorities said. Elderly residents of the Dorothy Henard Shelter Care Home were taken to nursing homes in neighboring towns, authorities said.

The tanker car was left over from the Feb. 22 derailment of an Illinois Central Gulf freight train. The mishap, the fourth derailment near Dongola in recent years, caused no serious injuries.

The state Emergency Services and Disaster Agency ordered the evacuation, which began around 7 a.m. and was expected to take up to eight hours or longer, authorities said. State police, sheriff's deputies and Dongola police, who themselves had to leave their building downtown, supervised the evacuation.

A spokesman for Illinois Central Gulf railroad said transfer of the chemical by the Hulcher Service of Virden, Ill., went smoothly.

"Naturally, the railroad prefers not to have bystanders or trespassers" during a derailment cleanup, although such freight transfers are "routine."

The dotted lines on this map show the sidewalks that would be affected by the proposed pathway system for bicycles. Not all campus walkways are shown in the map. Student suggestions are being sought before the proposal is considered for approval on Mar. 31.

Bicycle paths being considered by campus parking committee

By Steve Kropla
Staff Writer

A network of pathways designed to regulate pedestrian and bicycle traffic through central campus is now on the drawing boards—and could be on the sidewalks later this spring.

The preliminary plans for an integrated pathway system through old campus and around Thompson Woods have been drawn up by the Bicycle Safety subcommittee of the SIU Traffic and Parking Committee.

Under the plan, many existing sidewalks and paths would be divided into separate sections for pedestrians and bicycles. The half used for bicycles would have painted lanes to allow for two-way traffic.

Bev Shoopman, bicycle subcommittee chairperson, said the pathway network would be a cross-campus version of the integrated pedestrian-bicycle system that has been used for more than a year on the U.S. 51 overpass, with the addition of the divided bicycle lanes.

The system is also similar to that used at the University of Illinois, she said, but at this time there are no plans to erect chains dividing the pedestrian and bicycle lanes like those at the U of I's Champaign-Urbana campus.

"The idea is to form general expressways to help the flow of bicycle and pedestrian traffic," Shoopman said. "Our basic concern is safety."

Shoopman, a senior in psychology, is publicizing the plan at this time to seek feedback and suggestions before the Traffic and Parking Committee considers further approval on March 31.

In two locations where there are dual parallel pathways, one path would be designated solely for bicycle use and the other for pedestrian use only, Shoopman said.

Those locations are the east-west pathways south of Anthony Hall and the Home Economics Building.

Shoopman stressed that the pathway system is designed only to regulate bicycle traffic through the main campus area where there are no through streets.

In other areas, bicycle traffic would be expected to use streets forming the beltline around the University, she said.

One problem area in the plans at this point is several locations where the bicycle lanes would intersect with pedestrian walkways and other bicycle paths, Shoopman said.

Designated "dismount" zones are among the possibilities considered for improving safety at these locations, she added.

Besides using student input, Shoopman said she plans to consult with Dale Ritzel, of the SIU Safety Center, and Sgt. Jim Gearhardt of the Niles Police Department.

Gearhardt helped design the U of I pathways and those in suburbs around Chicago and Lansing, Mich., Shoopman said.

Shoopman said the cost of painting the pathways would be "minimal," with the money coming from University traffic and parking funds.

If approval is given on March 31, the system could be completed sometime in April, Shoopman said.

She urged those who have comments or suggestions concerning the pathway network to contact her no later than March 29 at the Student Government office, phone 4-1381.

Life-support system cut; 15-year-old boy dies

CHICAGO (AP)—Doctors, complying with parents' wishes, removed a machine Tuesday which was keeping a badly beaten 15-year-old boy alive.

The boy died 14 minutes later, forcing state prosecutors to decide whether to press murder charges against another youth accused in the beating.

Craig Sieck, 15, of Chicago, was kept alive since last week by the life-support system, which his parents pleaded for doctors to remove.

"He's dead, he's dead," sobbed Mrs. Wayne Sieck before doctors pulled the plug. "We've bought the casket. We've planned the funeral. Why don't they let him go?"

Doctors at Loyola Medical Center in west suburban Maywood decided to remove the machine after an encephalogram Tuesday morning "showed brain death," said Joann Lesniak, assistant director of public relations at the hospital.

She said the life-support system was removed at 10:16 a.m. and the youth was pronounced dead at 10:30 a.m.

His parents were not present at the hospital.

James M. Sticka, 17, of suburban Cicero, had been charged with aggravated battery in the beating which Sieck suffered last week.

Lawyers in the Cook County state's attorney's office conferred Tuesday to decide if a charge of murder should be placed against Sticka.

AP: Legislators misused state phones

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Personal calls to Massachusetts, Maryland, Iowa, and Missouri were among other calls uncovered during an Associated Press investigation of legislative phone bills for a three-month period. Examples:

Calls to Belmont, Melrose and Rockland, Mass. were listed on lines belonging to Sen. Prescott E. Bloom, R-Peoria, costing $7.14. Bloom said he made the personal call to Rockland but had "no idea" what the other calls were.

An AP call to one of the numbers, made in Bloom's presence, showed it belonged to a woman who once rented a house owned by Bloom. "I can't recall what numbers I called in June," Bloom explained. He then sent a check to the Senate to pay for the calls, explaining they were for "private business."

A 39-minute call to Des Moines, Iowa, is listed to a line of Sen. Terry L. Bruce, D-Ohio, costing $10.14. Bruce said he thought the call was made by his wife to friends in Des Moines, and that he would reimburse the state for it.

"I'm a little chagrined at the call to Des Moines, because I don't want my name in the paper," he said.

Lines of Rep. Ray A. Christensen, D-Morris, show five calls to Cambridge, Wis., one lasting 22 minutes, costing a total $17.52. Christensen said the calls were to his sister, and were a combination of personal and legislative matters.

"She gets the Madison paper and follows what goes on (in the Wisconsin Legislature) and I talk to her about that," he said.

Listed to lines of Rep. Monroe L. Flinn, D-Columbia, are eight calls to Las Vegas costing $12.59. Flinn said seven of the calls were to his wife when she was visiting there in late June, and the other call might have been made to place a hotel reservation for her there. He first said "I make no excuses for the calls," but in a later interview said he thought they were free under the state's WATS line system.

Lines of Rep. Roger A. Keats, R-Winnipeg, show two calls to Bethesda, Md., one lasting 71 minutes, which cost a total $26.52.

He said they were personal calls to a friend and that "I'm willing to pay for it."

Listed to lines of Rep. William J. Laurino, D-Chicago, are 15 calls to an Indianapolis phone number, all but one from his House floor phone, costing $36.30. Another 12 calls to the same number were listed to lines of four other legislators, costing $26.30. Laurino and the other legislators said they didn't know about the calls. An AP call to the number showed it was the Hyatt Regency Hotel.

Lines of Rep. Roger P. McAuliffe, R-Chicago, show 11 phone calls to a number in Eagle River, Wis. costing $31.93.

He said they were personal calls to his brother who has a cottage in Eagle River. "I never gave it a second thought," he said. "If it's illegal I'll be happy to pay for it."

Lines of Rep. Michael F. McClain, D-Quincy, show 11 calls to Melville, Mo. costing $11.30. McClain said it was the number of his in-laws, and that he called his wife and children there.

"I think calling your immediate family, or calling your mother or calling your in-laws is not an abuse," he said. "I mean legislators are people too."

Listed to lines of Rep. James P. McCourt, R-Evanston, were 32 calls to numbers in West Roxbury and Brookline, Mass. costing $96.86. McCourt said the calls were personal to his son, but that he had understood that under the state's WATS phone system they cost nothing. "I wouldn't be one bit upset to reimburse the state for these calls," he said.

Lines of Rep. Elroy C. Sandquist, R-Chicago, show two calls to Oceanside, Cal., one totaling 36 minutes and costing $12.92 and the other 41 minutes costing $13.94. Sandquist said they were personal calls to a friend and "those I would pay for."

Listed to lines of Sen. James C. Soper, R-Cicero, were 11 calls to numbers in Northport, Mich. costing $34.41. Another 10 calls to one of the Northport numbers were placed from a line listed to a Senate Republican staff member, costing $25.42. Soper said he has a farm in Northport; his wife stays there during the summer, and that he could have made the calls.

"You're talking about a couple of bucks that doesn't mean anything," he said.

Listed to lines of Rep. James Von Bockman, D-Pekin, were 11 calls to various numbers in Charleston, S.C., costing $29.12. Von Bockman said they were calls to his son.

Police to protect homes during break

If you're worried about your house or apartment being burglarized while you are vacationing during spring break, "Operation Housewatch" can ease your mind. The program, sponsored by the Carbondale police department is one of the main reasons so few burglaries were reported over the Christmas break, Lt. Wayne Booker, who heads the program, said.

Policemen check all the doors and windows of the residents who at least three times a day, Booker explained. The extra patrols in the residential areas also are a deterrent, he added.

The program is free and requires a person to fill out a form and mail or take it to the Carbondale police station, located at 610 E. College St.

44 die in prison uprising

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Inmates at Argentina's largest prison attacked guards and set fire to bedding and furniture Tuesday and police said 44 persons died and 30 were injured seriously before the riot was crushed.

It was among the worst prison riots on record, surpassing the death toll of 43 at New York's Attica prison in 1971.

Prison officials said the dead were asphyxiated as flames spread through a cellblock housing 161 men at the crowded Villa Devoto prison 10 miles northwest of the city center. But residents near the highway led prison said they heard gunfire and explosions during the uprising, which broke out at 6:20 a.m. (8:30 a.m. EST) and was reported under control at 9 a.m. (11 a.m. EST).

Police said guards were among the casualties, but did not say how many.

An official communique said the rioters attacked guards during a morning inspection and blocked the entrance to the cellblock with bedding when their attack failed. They set fire to the bedding, and flames spread through the cellblock before firemen could move in, it said.

Prison guards lobbed teargas grenades into the second floor of the cell block as army troops surrounded the prison to prevent escapes.

The independent news agency Noticias Argentinas said one guard was taken hostage early in the uprising and later killed.

The agency said two cars raced past the prison entrance shortly before the riot and fired at guards, but that report was unconfirmed by official sources.

After the riot ambulances escorted by police motorcycles took the injured to hospitals with burn centers.

The prison was built for 2,500 prisoners but reportedly houses more than 4,000, about 80 percent of them women. Local human rights groups claim 2,000 of the inmates are political prisoners jailed since the armed forces seized power two years ago and moved to eliminate left-wing guerrillas.

Prison officials said all prisoners in cellblock seven, where the riot erupted, were common criminals.

Accident suit wins $2 million

CHICAGO (AP)—The parents of an 8-year-old boy who has been in a semi-coma since a swimming pool accident in June 1976 were awarded $1,850,000 Tuesday in an out-of-court settlement.

Settlement of the suit filed on behalf of Rodney Starks was approved by Judge Irving R. Norman of Circuit Court. The parents, Margaret and Leslie Starks, had sought $3 million in damages.

Rodney and two friends reportedly climbed through an opening in a security fence surrounding the swimming pool in an apartment complex on the South Side. Rodney accidentally fell in, according to the suit, and nearly drowned.

Because of lack of oxygen when he was submerged, he has remained unconscious. The suit contends the charged negligence on the part of the pool owner.

Man survives one month in snowbound camper

MODESTO, Calif. (AP)—An 82-year-old man who survived nearly a month after his wife died in their snowbound motor home says he was determined to live long enough "to make sure that she was buried properly."

"I did everything I could to survive," said Laurence Shannon, whose 80-year-old wife, Emma, died three days after they became stuck on a back road in the high Sierra Nevada on Feb. 7.

The Shannons, from Grand Rapids, Mich., had been on their way from Southern California to visit their daughter here when they took a wrong turn. Their efforts to free the motor home failed.

The vehicle was spotted Friday in a remote section of Sequoia National Park by a man flying to a nearby Boy Scout camp. Shannon was soon rescued, and his wife's body was flown out by helicopter.

His daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George Spurr, picked him up in Visalia Friday night and brought him to their home.

"If my mother hadn't died, he would have tried to walk out of there," Mrs. Spurr said. "Even in death, my mother saved my father's life."

Close primary race predicted; four vie for treasurer's office

CHICAGO (AP)—The treasurer is not one of the most glamorous offices in the state but it is one of the hottest races in next Tuesday's primary election.

There is competition on the ticket for both parties and political observers rate both races close.

On the Republican side, James M. Skelton, Champaign County treasurer, is opposed by Sen. Bradley Glass of Northbrook in north suburban Chicago. While each candidate has tried to differentiate his views from the other on how to administer the office, the race has shaped up as one of downstate interests against Chicago area interests.

Officially, Gov. James R. Thompson has withheld his political blessing from either candidate, but Samuel Skinner, Thompson's close friend and Thompson's successor in the U.S. attorney's office in Chicago, is actively campaigning for Skelton.

On the Democratic side, Jerome A. Cosentino, a trustee of the Metropolitan Sanitary District, is opposed by Nina Shepherd of Winnetka, an elected trustee of the University of Illinois board. As in the Republican race, there are discussions about the manner in which the office should operate, but the contest has come to be viewed as a tiff between Democratic organization regulars and independents.

Shepherd, 45, headed a bipartisan task force to get more women in state government and her entry into the race after the regular party failed to slate any women for statewide office brings a bit of the feminist movement to the campaign. She enjoys the support of the Independent Voters of Illinois as well as that of other liberal-independent groups.

The duty of the treasurer is to deposit the state's money, hundreds of millions of dollars, in the most satisfactory form of accounts. It is usually a low-profile office with visibility only around election time, but recent tradition has catapulted its incumbents to more glamorous positions.

William J. Scott, now attorney general, Adlai Stevenson III, U.S. senator, and Alan J. Dixon, now secretary of state, won the office in recent years, but part of their late, political ascendancy could be attributed to the fact that the election for treasurer had been held in non-presidential and non-gubernatorial election years. In those off-year elections, the treasurer's race was usually the one which topped the statewide ticket, affording greater visibility. That changes this year, when in accordance with the 1970 Constitution, Illinois begins electing its governor in non-presidential election years.

So if the candidates are running for something better in the future, they aren't saying.

"You have to get on the board first before you use it as a springboard to something else," Skelton said. "I'm only interested in the treasurer's post and I feel my experience as Champaign County treasurer makes me qualified for it."

Glass, 47, is a lawyer and eight-year veteran of the state Senate who says he will keep procedures the way they are in the treasurer's office if he is elected.

The only issue of policy in the election is whether the treasurer should invest money at the highest rate of interest or sacrifice a fraction of a percentage point and put the money in banks and institutions around the state which make socially useful loans.

"If all you wanted to do was maximize revenue, you'd deposit it all in Chicago and New York banks, because they'd offer the highest interest rates," Glass said.

He has said he will retain Donald R. Smith, 51, a 12-year employee of the treasurer's office, who was appointed to replace Dixon a year ago in a political deal. He was given the top job for the interim in exchange for his promise not to run in this election. He is generally credited in Springfield with running the office for the four previous treasurers.

Skelton, 38, Champaign County treasurer for the past eight years, and county chairman for the past four, has appointed Skinner as head of a panel to study ways to increase state revenues from the investment of tax dollars. He also has advocated a job performance audit of existing financial programs to be completed by the auditor general. He has also called for a series of public hearings to be followed by legislative suggestions for possible new investment procedures.

Skelton said the current community-service formula has remained "untested and unaudited for its effectiveness" since its inception in 1970.

"We cannot find the solution to our dilemma by spinning the wheel of fortune," Skelton said. "We must instead get about the task of developing an in-depth study of Illinois investment alternatives based upon concrete facts, not eyewitness."

Shepherd also wants a study to determine the best investment policies of the state.

Skelton is banking on strong downstate support.

Tax hike predicted for road repair

URBANA (AP)—A state tax increase or additional federal funds may be needed to make rural roads and bridges in Illinois safe, a professor at the University of Illinois says.

Norman Walzer, a visiting professor from Western Illinois University, said the money now budgeted by the state will not cover the rising cost of replacing dangerous bridges and deteriorated roads.

He based his conclusions on interviews with road commissioners in 10 Illinois counties.

Walzer, an economics professor, said the Illinois Department of Transportation reported that 60 percent of the roads in Western Illinois had barely adequate, poor or very poor surfaces during the early 1970s.

Only one-third of the bridges have been rated in Western Illinois, but of these less than half are above minimum tolerable limits," he said.

Walzer said many bridges are so weak that children must get off school buses before the buses can cross them.

To make current road repair money go further, he suggested the cooperative use of large machinery owned by county and township highway districts, and tighter control over use of roads by heavy vehicles.

However, he said it may take additional taxes.

Social skills training sessions offered to shy male volunteers

By Nick Dennis
Business Writer

Men—do you sometimes feel uptight around women? If you're looking for a quick, free way to help reduce these anxieties, Bernie Jensen believes he may be able to assist you.

Jensen, a graduate student in clinical psychology, is looking for male volunteers to participate in what he calls "social skills training sessions" which will begin the first week in April. The sessions are being offered as part of his master's thesis research project.

He said the training is designed to help shy men feel more comfortable around women.

"I think this program can help them to decrease their anxiety and increase their social skills," Jensen explained.

He said he will use a method known as covert modeling in the training sessions to teach social skills to men. The covert method utilizes a tape recording of a dramatized social meeting between a man and a woman.

Jensen said that each subject is asked to imagine and describe the situation he heard on the tape. Jensen believes that through this technique shy men can learn the social skills necessary to relate to women.

He said that the goal of his research project is to find how effective the covert modeling technique is in reducing anxiety and improving social skills in males.

Jensen is being assisted in his research by Stephen Haynes, assistant professor in psychology. Haynes has worked in the area of social skills training.

Jensen said that the covert method "is an appropriate technique to use on guys who experience heterosexual anxiety."

He explained that the covert method has been shown to be effective at several other universities. The two main schools working in the area of social anxiety are Purdue University and the University of Oregon, Jensen noted.

This is the first time that the covert method has been offered in connection with social skills training at SIU, according to Jensen.

"I can't make any guarantees on the magnitude of change in different individuals," Jensen emphasized. "I just want to at least get them on the road to solving their problems."

Jensen said he has heard from about 20 people thus far that are willing to participate. He wants to have 30 or 40 participants.

Jensen emphasized the fact that participants don't necessarily have to be students. He also stressed that he doesn't want the project to be confused with the "how to pick up girls" programs that are often advertised in men's magazines.

"I see what I'm doing as having a scientific basis," he said. "I'm not getting money for it."

Jensen said he plans to conduct two training sessions per week for the first two weeks of April. He said one group of men would probably attend sessions on Mondays and Wednesdays while another group would receive training on Tuesdays and Thursdays.

The training sessions will take place in the psychology department in the Life Science II Building, he said.

The only real obligation for participants, Jensen said, is to fill out some questionnaires before and after each session, to assist him in making conclusions.

Sayers to have decision about which sport to add

Athletics Director Gale Sayers wants the Saluki football team to compete with the big boys in Division I. But before that goal can be accomplished, Sayers has to make an addition to the athletics program. Soon the Kansas Comet may be seen cheering for the Salukis at a water polo match—or maybe at a soccer game—or even a volleyball match.

For years, college football heavyweights talked about obtaining more power for themselves. Schools such as Southern Cal, Ohio State and Oklahoma did not want SIU. Drake and Wichita State sharing in their television revenue. All that talk reached the action stage in January when Division I football was split into two classes—Divisions I-A and I-AA.

In an effort to squeeze out the little guys, the following guidelines were set up for admittance to Division I-A football status: (1) a school must sponsor at least eight intercollegiate sports, (2) the school must have a football stadium capacity of 30,000 and draw and average of 17,000 fans per game in at least one of the last four years, (3) a school must average 17,000 fans per game in each of the last four years if its football stadium does not seat 30,000, and (4) a school must play 60 percent of its schedule against Division I-A foes.

Those guidelines spelled death for SIU and the rest of the Missouri Valley, with the exception of Wichita State. But the Ivy League schools saved the day for those who still dream of the day when SIU will be playing football on New Year's Day.

The Ivy League schools proposed, and the NCAA passed, a stipulation that would enable an institution to qualify for Division I-A status if it sponsored at least 12 varsity sports.

All athletics directors in positions similar to the situation at SIU then took out their calculators and began adding up their teams. Sayers' calculator read 11, and that's why sports such as water polo, soccer and volleyball have become a part of the conversation during coffee breaks at the Arena.

All schools have three years to comply with the Division I-A guidelines, so it is not really necessary to start recruiting athletes immediately. But Sayers does not want to wait too long. "I'd like to get the groundwork laid by next spring so we can field a team by the 1979-80 season," Sayers says.

Supporters of all three sports, under consideration have visions of wearing a Saluki uniform. There is already a water polo team, but it competes on a club level. Sayers has on his desk a petition with 2,000 signatures from persons requesting that soccer be added. Volleyball fanatics ask, "What about us?"

Logic and finances indicate that water polo has a good chance of winning the "12th Sport Sweepstakes." The athletes are here. The coach, Bob Steele, is here. There would be no additional scholarship expenditures because the NCAA allows only 11 scholarships to be used for swimming and water polo.

However, Sayers is not yet ready to start working on the water polo schedule.

"Water polo would be the logical choice," he admits. "We might have to add another coach, but it would be cheaper than the other sports. However, it would not necessarily be the best way to go. Should the 12th sport be a revenue-producing sport or a spectator sport? We want input from everyone before we make our decision."

Two thousand signatures on a petition is a lot of input. Soccer is a rapidly-growing sport that might catch on at SIU. Thoughts of a fierce soccer rivalry between the Salukis and the Cougars of SIU-E are inviting. But soccer costs money, which Sayers is well aware of.

"I am concerned about a soccer program because of what it might cost and because of the established

In the Bleachers

By Bud Vandersnick
Sports Editor

programs already in the area (SIU-E and St. Louis)," Sayers says. "If we decide to give scholarships the first year (the NCAA allows 11), can we afford it? If we don't give scholarships we can't compete on a top level with walk-ons."

The support for soccer does not stop with the 2,000 names on the petition. SIU-E Coach Bob Guelker wants to be included among those who would like to see the sport become the 12th sport at SIU.

Guelker had built a strong reputation for himself in soccer at St. Louis when he went to SIU-E 11 years ago to head the intramural program. After fielding a club team in soccer, the university administration decided to make it a varsity sport with Guelker as the coach.

The reputation Guelker established for himself at St. Louis helped him immensely when he began recruiting at SIU-E, and he has built a powerhouse at Edwardsville (the Cougars finished third in the nation last fall).

There is no question in Guelker's mind that SIU could build a strong soccer program. He has seen it happen before.

"If SIU decides to go with soccer, they'll give it a big enough budget to do a good job," Guelker predicts. "If they treat it as fair as they do the other sports, it will succeed. They should be able to attract a good coach and he'll be able to attract good players."

"It is a good spectator sport and if some nominal fee is charged, it could also be a revenue-producing sport. It would cost money in the way of financial aid and coaches' salaries, but as a spectator sport it would enrich the program."

There is obvious bias in Guelker's words, but he believes in his sport. He also believes that there is more than enough soccer talent in the St. Louis area alone to ensure a competitive team at SIU.

"If SIU were to add soccer, it would make my job more difficult because they would be trying to attract the same players we are," he says. "but I think competition is healthy. I would applaud any action that would help the sport."

Volleyball would also have to be built from scratch, and when that happens the financial requirements of the sport attract immediate attention. The NCAA allows just five scholarships for a volleyball program. Sayers may also run into a scheduling problem if he chooses to add volleyball since few schools in the Midwest field varsity teams.

Other factors will also enter into the picture before Sayers chooses the 12th sport. Since so many Valley schools have to add at least one more sport in order to qualify for I-A status in football, the Valley may consider starting a conference schedule in one of the sports SIU is considering. At the present time, that proposal is still in the infant stage.

Sayers will have to sift through all the facts and figures before he decides which sport will save his Division I-A football program. He says he will listen to everybody. But when it comes down to the bottom line, Dollar Green may have the loudest voice in the matter.

Ruggers tie ISU

The SIU Rugby team battled rival Illinois State to a muddy 6-6 tie Saturday afternoon at the pitch south of the Arena in its first home game of the spring.

Illinois State took the early game lead but Mike Steele scored a try on a 40-yard breakaway to make the score 6-4. Mike Dailey then added a two-point conversion to secure the tie for the SIU ruggers.

Later in the afternoon the B-team scored a 14-0 victory over State's B-team on the strength of tries by Scott Wruck, Pat Cummins and Keith "Sparkle" Wikox.

Divers qualify for NCAAs

By George Csolak
Staff Writer

Rick Theobald, Bill Cashmore and Gary Mastey, alias Jule's Jumpers or vice-versa, competed in the Regional Qualifying meet for divers at Texas Christian University in Fort Worth last weekend, and all three qualified for NCAA competition. Theobald qualified on both 1- and 3-meter boards. He took second in 1-meter competition and seventh in 3-meter diving. He was just four points behind the 1-meter champion.

Cashmore had the flu, but dove anyway and qualified in 3-meter competition with his fifth-place finish. He didn't make the cut in 1-meter diving, though, as he took seventh.

Mastey qualified in the 1-meter board as he finished No. 3 behind Theobald. He placed ninth on 3-meter boards, though.

The top five finishers in 1-meter competition qualified for the NCAA meet to be held at Long Beach, Calif., March 23-25. The top seven 3-meter divers also qualified for the meet.

Two Saluki swimmers also made NCAA cuts at the Indiana Invitational last weekend in Bloomington.

Pat Looby qualified for the 50 freestyle as he went 20.7, and Dean Ehrenheim swam the 100 backstroke in 52.7 to make the standard in that event.

The Salukis have now qualified in 17 individual events and three relays for the NCAA meet.

Barrett unhappy with group opposed to golf course

By George Csolak
Staff Writer

Jim Barrett is happy about the plans for an 18-hole golf course near the University. But the golf coach is unhappy about the petition that has been sent around opposing the building of the 250-acre course. And the student group opposing it.

Janet Stoneburner, the Student for Students (SFS) organizer, and her student group which is opposed to the course, "gave reasons that held no truth to not build the facility."

"I don't believe that she truly represents the student body," he said. "Her petition covered just a minority of the student body."

The petition was signed by around 1,000 students during one week, according to Barrett. "And if a petition were passed around by one person to find out who was in favor of the facility, I'm confident that the same number would probably sign."

"It's a shame that the students as a whole weren't given an opportunity to express their opinions toward the facility, but if they were, I think the majority of them wouldn't care," the business manager of Saluki athletics explained.

The proposed course will be built by land developer Richard J. Heath of Evansville, Ind., who will use private funds for its construction in exchange for a 40-year lease on the land. The course will cost between $800,000 and $1 million.

Under the proposed agreement with Heath, the University will assume ownership of the golf course when the lease expires.

"I think that there is a need for a facility such as what Mr. Heath has proposed building," Barrett said. "It won't be as cheap as a University-owned golf course, but it will be very competitive with the public courses in the area."

"It will be a facility that will benefit many students like the Recreation Building has done," he continued. "It will give students an opportunity to find a new sport."

Barrett doesn't feel that the real issue should have anything to do with the clubhouses/condominiums that are included with the proposal.

"They will be built on private land—the University will have nothing to do with them."

Barrett was upset about the list of 10 reasons not to build Saluki National which the student group sent to the members of the Board of Trustees.

"There are more important things that the group might investigate," he said. "If Stoneburner really is representing the student interest."

Barrett cited the traffic argument. The group said that "large numbers of the general public will induce greater traffic and parking problems which plague the university at this present date. The noise, air, and land pollution will increase in this area also."

Barrett said that there is no traffic problem now.

"There is so much fallacy in their arguments, Stoneburner stated that she couldn't get any information or facts to back up her reasons for not building the course," he said, "so if she can't back it up, then why say anything at all?"

The course will not interfere with the animal life in the area, the coach said, because the forestry department has said that the land is nothing but waste anyway.

"And it was set aside for the purpose of building a golf course, anyway."

Barrett sees many advantages of having a golf course on campus.

"It would be easy for students to get there and play for one thing. If they were to build it five miles from campus, students without some form of transportation wouldn't be able to get there," he said.

And it would be profitable, he said.

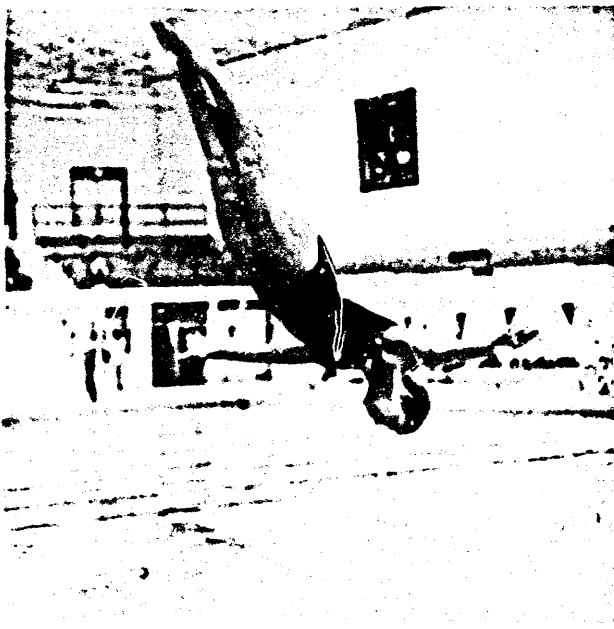

"Other schools have built courses and have been surprised at how they have worked out. Like Western Illinois University—they had a 9-hole course built a while back and it has been so profitable that they are building another one."

"And the University of Illinois has two 18-hole courses now. I'm sure Heath has too much invested in this facility not to care. He'll have to depend on student play to keep this thing going. And I know that if his facility isn't the best in the area, he wouldn't think of building it," Barrett added.

And, he continued, the University will have everything to gain and nothing to lose.

"If Heath doesn't make it go, everything will revert back to the University, so the students and everyone else involved will have nothing to lose."

"This facility is long overdue. It would be silly to slap Heath in the face," Barrett said.

Ray, Stallings spark Kahoks to Class AA tournament spot

By J.W. Campbell
Staff Writer

The game at the Arena Tuesday was billed as a Class AA super-sectional contest, but it looked more like a basketball clinic conducted by the Kahoks of Collinsville, as they defeated Olney 79-58.

In common basketball vernacular—it was show time at the Arena. Collinsville exhibited a little of everything: blind passes, slam dunks, half court shots at the buzzer that went and blocked shots.

The Kahoks came out blazing in the first quarter. Steve Ray, Collinsville 6-4 forward, scored the game's first six points in the first 1:10 of the contest before Olney Coach Ron Herrin called for a timeout. Whatever Herrin said to his team it failed to have a stabilizing effect on his team. Collinsville led 27-11 at the end of the first quarter.

In the second period Olney played Collinsville even and the Kahoks led at halftime 47-31.

Ray hit nine of 10 shots from the field in the first half and sank both of his free throw attempts for a total of 20 first half points. Ray was game high scorer with 26 points.

As a team the Kahoks hit 26 of 27 shots from the field in the first half for a 97 percent accuracy mark. Olney was 15 of 31 from the field in the first half for a shooting average of 48 percent.

The Tigers were led in scoring by Tony Jennings, who score 23 points while hitting on 11 of 19 shots from the field and one of one from the freethrow line.

Although his team seemed to be in command of the game from the start, Collinsville Coach Vergil Fletcher was not overly complimentary of his ballclub.

"We've got a good ball team," Fletcher said. "But I think we could have played with a little more enthusiasm. Of course, I'll admit that it is hard to do when you're leading by 20 points—but I think we could have played with a little more intensity."

Fletcher said that just going by the record it wasn't surprising that Ray shot as well as he did in the game.

"If you look at the record you'll notice that Ray has been shooting over 60 percent from the field the entire year," Fletcher said. "But his performance tonight is surprising in one respect. He's been in bed all day—he's had a sore throat and a fever. We gave him some penicillin this morning and the fever finally broke."

Collinsville will face New Trier West at 12:15 p.m. Friday at the Assembly Hall in Champaign in quarterfinal action of the state tournament. Collinsville is now 26-2 on the year.

SIU seeks replacements for vacated outfield spots

By Bud Vandersnick
Sports Editor

Last year the Saluki outfield helped carry the team a long way—all the way to Omaha and the College World Series. If the Salukis are to make a return visit this year, however, some new chauteurs must be found.

Two of last year's outfield mainstays—George Vukovich and Jim Reeves—are now gone, but not forgotten. Vukovich, who was an All-America selection, hit a team-leading 352 before signing a professional contract with the Philadelphia Phillies. Reeves batted .291 and his efforts were rewarded with a contract offer from the St. Louis Cardinals.

Vukovich's and Reeves' heroics are remembered well, but memories do not win games. Coach Itchy Jones is confident, though, that this year's outfield will be receiving rave reviews from the "Hill Gang" fanatics.

"Our defense should be strong," Jones predicts. "Whoever hits will play a lot. All our outfield candidates have some speed. I may do some platooning in the outfield, especially early in the year to give our young kids some playing experience."

Saluki fans will see at least one recognizable face in the outfield when the defending Valley champs open their home season March 27 against Missouri in a doubleheader at 1:30 p.m. Junior Chuck Curry played both right field and first base last season, and the left-handed swinger will be stationed in either right or left field this season. The 20-year-old Curry hit .303 last season, with three home runs and 31 RBIs and he also had a stretch in which he handled 202 consecutive chances without an error.

Jones' battle plan this season includes a double dose of Stieb, which he thinks the fans will find to their liking. Steve Stieb returns to handle the catching duties, and the family affair is made complete by the emergence of Dave Stieb on the outfield scene, where he will replace Vukovich in center field.

The younger Stieb is a transfer from San Jose (Calif.) Community College, where he led the team in hitting, hits, RBIs and triples. Jones is anxious to discover if Stieb can do the same for the Salukis.

"He has a strong arm and he can play either center or right field," Jones says. "He needs to be more selective at the plate instead of just going wildly after the pitch. I think it is important for him to get off to a good start."

The 6-0, 180-pound Stieb, who bats and throws right-handed, is as concerned as his coach is about getting off to a good start but he says that may be difficult because of the poor winter weather conditions in Southern Illinois.

"I'm usually a quick starter, but I really have no idea how I'll start this year because we haven't been able to face any game situations yet," Stieb says. "Coming from California, I'm not used to the weather. The Florida trip (which starts Friday against Miami) will be important because I'll be able to get some idea of where I stand."

The eight-man Florida trip will also give Jones an opportunity to evaluate those who are going to fill the third outfield spot. J. Hage, Kevin Hodge, Brian Jim Adduci and Scott Wachter are all vying for that elusive position, and Jones says that all will get a chance to prove themselves.

Hanson has the most experience among the hopefuls. The senior from Arlington Heights hit .350 in 23 games last season, mostly from the designated hitter slot. House, who is also a split end on the football team, saw action in 26 games last season and Hage, a former football player, did not play baseball last season.

Adduci, who bats and throws left-handed, enters his rookie season with impressive credentials. The 6-3, 190-pounder was a three-year letterman at Brother Rice High School in Oak Lawn and he led his team to the state title in 1976. He set school records for home runs, total bases and RBIs and he was a draft choice of the Phillies in last summer's free agent draft.

Wachter led Chaffee High School to the Missouri state title in 1975 and 1977, setting a state record with two home runs and five RBIs in the 1977 title game. He was a three-time all-state selection.
