Mayor: 'Why there?'

New Samaritan House location questioned

By Jackie Spinner
Staff Writer

The City Council wants Carbondale's only homeless agency to explain why it chose a house on North University Avenue as the location of a home for mentally disabled women.

The Good Samaritan House applied for funding for the shelter from the Emergency Shelter Grant program. Funds for the program come from the federal government through the Illinois Department of Commerce and Community Affairs.

The Good Samaritan House must receive support for the grant from a unit of city or county government for the application to be approved, according to federal regulations.

The council gave support for $23,351 in funds for the existing homeless shelter at 701 N. Marion St.

But the council would not support the application for $43,348 in funds for a proposed shelter at 306 N. University Ave. until Elsie Speck, shelter director, told the council why the shelter was located on "one of the busiest streets in Carbondale."

Mayor Neil Dillard told the council Tuesday night that "the location is questionable for handicapped women."

"The Marion (street) location is reasonable but the other is questionable. We don't want to support the other until we have an explanation," Dillard said.

Specs said the Good Samaritan House chose the location because "the price of the house was right to our

Student caught with AK-47

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

A University student will appear April 5 for a preliminary hearing in Jackson County Courthouse on charges of battery and unauthorized possession of an AK-47 assault rifle, according to University News Service.

Felts Hall resident assistant Eric Frazier said University Security police responded to a call by Antonio Campana, head resident of Felts Hall, who told police a rifle was spotted while Frazier was investigating a party in a dormitory room.

After searching rooms in Felts Hall, the University News Service said police arrested Michael True, 18, of Neely Hall, and charged him with unauthorized possession of an AK-47 assault rifle and battery for knocking down Campana. Police also allegedly discovered 108 rounds of ammunition and drug paraphernalia.

Frazier said he received an anonymous phone call Sunday night about an alleged party in room 318 of Felts Hall. While investigating, Frazier said he and Jerry Baird, another resident assistant, saw alcohol in the room and a rifle in a rifle case.

Frazier said he and Baird reported the incident to Campana, who returned to the room with them and found True sitting on an outside ledge of the window. Frazier said the rifle had been moved and was nowhere in sight.

After refusing to show Campana his student ID, Frazier said True ran down the hallway and knocked Campana to the ground.

After being notified by Campana, Frazier said police

Voluntary fee options require wary students

By Miguel Alba
Staff Writer

Students may soon have to examine their pursar bills more closely to avoid paying voluntary student fees depending on the outcome of a Board of Trustees Finance Committee decision.

In 1979, the board created a new channel of funding for student organizations by creating a voluntary waivable student fee.

The finance committee will clarify how these voluntary fees will be collected and answer questions raised by Chancellor Lawrence K. Pettit as to who has the right to develop and implement such a policy.

One student group, Students for Illinois Public Interest Research Group, will be anxiously awaiting the decision.

IPIRG has been trying to gain funding through voluntary student fees in order to establish itself at the University.

Cindy Schnaitmann, IPIRG organizer, said the group is counting on the clarification to say that voluntary student fees can be collected on a negative check off system.

Student Fee Classifications

■ Voluntary waivable student fees: Students decide whether they want to pay the fee or not.

■ Mandatory waivable student fees: Students must pay the fee, but they may receive refunds by filing out appropriate paperwork.

■ Negative check-off system: Student is charged if they do not mark the appropriate designated area on the bursar's bill.

■ Positive check-off system: Students mark the appropriate area to give money.

Under this system, the proposed $3 voluntary IPIRG

Engineer: 'Real effort' alive to follow track standards

By Richard Nunez
Staff Writer

An Illinois railroad engineer defended track inspectors and track maintenance crews in response to charges that railroad accidents involving toxic chemical spills were partly linked to inefficient repairs on track and road bed defects.

Bernie Morris, chief railroad engineer for the Illinois Department of Transportation, said a "real effort" is being made to meet federal standards on railroad track and road bed repairs.

Although a recent study reported the number of toxic chemical spills has risen in Illinois, Morris said the number of train derailments in Illinois has decreased.

The study, conducted by the Illinois Public Action Council, said 49 railroad accidents involving toxic chemical spills occurred in 1987, up four from 1986 and seven times greater than the national average.

Robert Creamer, executive director of IPAC, said the rise in accidents can be traced primarily to railroad track and road bed defects, mechanical defects and human error.

Of the total accidents in 1987, Creamer said 53 percent were caused by mechanical defects and defects in the track and road beds. Thirty-three percent were caused by human

Fire takes cat's life

Carbondale Township Firefighters battle a blaze at 347 Carbondale Mobile Home Park at about 11:30 p.m. Tuesday. Vincent Kirby, the owner of the trailer, was not home at the time. Firefighters were unable to rescue a cat caught in the blaze, but Kirby's other pet, a 7 and-a-half foot boa constrictor survived. Cause of the fire is not determined.

House discusses new minimum wage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Mindful of a presidential veto threat against any minimum wage bill that does not include a subminimum "training" wage, the House began debate Wednesday on a compromise that President Bush may find more acceptable.

Rush has proposed a minimum wage of $4.25 an hour, up 90 cents over three years from its current level of $3.35 — including a lower "training" wage for new employees. House Democrats support a bill for a minimum wage of $4.65 and containing no subminimum salary.

But a bipartisan measure was ready that could set the stage for later negotiations between the House and Senate, and Congress and the White House. The compromise could be more acceptable to Bush.

The bipartisan proposal set the wage level at $4.55 — speeding up its timing and setting a 60-day "training" wage at 85 percent of the minimum wage; the provision for lower wages would expire Jan. 1, 1993.

Votes on the various proposals were not expected until Thursday.

House Speaker Jim Wright, D-Texas, told reporters before the session that he expected the compromise plan to win approval.

Reacting to Bush's threat of a veto for any measure without the lower "training" wage, Wright said: "I don't want to speculate on that. I think the president ought to have a more open mind than that."

Wright termed $4.65 "a modest increase," noting the minimum wage has not been raised since 1981 and its buying power has been eroded by more than 30 percent.

Khomeini jeers decision to allow envoys to return

United Press International

Britain expelled nine Iranians on security grounds Wednesday as Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini ridiculed the 12-nation European Community for allowing its ambassadors to return to Tehran after withdrawing them over the Salman Rushdie affair. The EC withdrew its senior envoys from Tehran for consultations a month ago in solidarity with Britain's condemnation of a death threat issued against the British writer of the novel "The Satanic Verses" by Khomeini.

Palestinian guerrillas killed en route to Israel

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — Pro-Israel South Lebanon Army militiamen intercepted and killed three Palestinian guerrillas trying to slip into northern Israel Wednesday, foiling the fifth infiltration attempt in six weeks, security and SLA sources said. A spokesman quoted by the militia-run Voice of the South radio said an SLA patrol spotted the guerrillas en route to northern Israel late Wednesday afternoon near the village of Houla, 1 mile north of the Lebanon-Israel border.

Possible solution may end uprising problems

JERUSALEM (UPI) — A leaked intelligence analysis evaluated a possible role for the PLO in ending the Palestinian uprising in the occupied territories, but its conclusions were not formal recommendations to the government, Israeli officials said Wednesday. The disclosure came one day after Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir described as a "lie" news reports that his government had been advised by Israeli intelligence agencies that talks with the PLO were inevitable.

President's second thoughts bring on protest

TOKYO (UPI) — President Bush's second thoughts on an agreement to sell secret U.S. jet fighter technology to Japan has sparked nationalistic outcries on both sides of the Pacific, suggesting that the two countries may not be ready for such close military and economic cooperation. Bush said Tuesday he favors selling Japan the blueprints for the General Dynamics F-16 fighter as promised by the Reagan Administration but only if Tokyo accepts certain clarifications, most likely involving restrictions on using the technology for civilian aviation.

FDA issues new warnings for painkillers

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The government directed makers of prescription pain pills Tuesday to add new warnings advising doctors that such drugs may increase the risk for life-threatening gastrointestinal problems such as ulcers. The Food and Drug Administration announced it had ordered manufacturers to add a warning to labels for doctors citing studies that show up to 4 percent of people who receive continued therapy with pain-relieving drugs may develop serious gastrointestinal reactions.

Supreme Court shields FBI arrest records

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that FBI "rap sheets" containing arrest and conviction records on more than 24 million people cannot be released to the public under the Freedom of Information Act. The justices, in an unanimous opinion by Justice John Paul Stevens, reversed a lower court ruling that held that the data generally are subject to FOIA disclosure rules.

Ten-year-old sentenced for crack possession

HAUPPAUGE, N.Y. (UPI) — A 10-year-old boy convicted of possessing crack found underneath his bicycle seat was ordered Wednesday to spend the next 16 months at a Long Island children's shelter. Suffolk County Family Court Judge Donald Auperin rejected a request from Nicholas McCall's uncle and aunt, Robert and Carolyn Chambers, that they be assigned to care for the boy.

Judge to rule if a horse is a motor vehicle

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — A judge is to decide next week whether a horse is a motor vehicle and whether state police should have charged a man with driving a horse under the influence and operating the animal without lights. Ron Nestor, 34, of New Florence, has been charged with driving under the influence and not having lights on a motor vehicle last Dec. 11 when his horse was hit by a pickup truck, state police said.

Students teach world culture to school children

Students discuss customs of their native countries

By Fernando Felli-Maggi
Staff Writer

About 6,000 Southern Illinois school children have benefited from a program that brings international culture into the classrooms of rural schools. Burghilde Gruber, a member of the International Network for Global Educational Activities in Rural Schools, said.

The program was created in 1986 by the Illinois Board of Education in cooperation with the University's International Programs and Services to make presentations in area schools about different subjects involving international subjects, Gruber said.

University students from various countries visit Southern Illinois schools and talk about their countries' culture, showing posters and calendars and answering the children's questions, Gruber said.

She said the program is aimed at students 8 to 12 years old, and it tries to introduce the children to an understanding of the people in the world.

Gruber said IN GEAR responds to schools' requests for international requests.

"Sometimes a school wants a student of a specific nationality for history, geography or foreign language classes, but usually they generalize," Gruber said.

She said the program has responded to 121 requests and sent more than 250 volunteers as north as Sparta and as south as Metropolis.

Aamir Chalisa, 24, working on a master of business administration, talks about his native pakistan to a group of 4th and 5th graders at McElvain School in Murphysboro.

Gruber said IN GEAR's major obstacles are time and distance.

"Because University students don't have much time and the program runs through the school year at times that are often inconvenient for the students, we can't respond to some demands," Gruber said.

She said most of the schools are far from Carbondale and many of the volunteers do not have a car. "We often depend on the schools for transportation, something that is not always available."

Gruber said International Programs and Services ran a similar program before the Illinois Board of Education proposed IN GEAR.

She said the previous program did not have as much response from schools because it was limited to the Carbondale area schools and didn't have state support.

Gruber said the speakers bureau now has been extended to other centers of the community besides schools.

Aamir Chalisa, a graduate student from Pakistan, has volunteered for the IN GEAR program for more than a year and has visited about 10 schools.

Chalisa said the program is a good way of teaching children about other cultures and get personal experience. "It's better than reading a book or watching a movie."

"It gives them (the children) an opportunity to see that foreigners are people like everybody," he said. "Hopefully, when they grow up this experience will help them to have a more open view of the world."

Chalisa said the program has given him a chance to learn about the American education system and many of the values of American schoolchildren.

"Younger children are always more communicative than 12 or 13 year olds," he said. "The older kids want to know about cars, television and even sex, it gets embarrassing."

Brandy Korey, 10, a 5th grader from McElvain School in Murphysboro, where three international students traveled early this month, said the experience had made her want to visit other countries and know other cultures.

Gruber said the program is getting an excellent response from schools across Southern Illinois and from the schoolchildren as well.

Jokes on computer an irresponsible act

IF THE ADMINISTRATION looks carefully at the student conduct code, they will see that the students who placed offensive jokes on the computer are not in direct violation of this code.

Section B of the Introduction states: Students shall be free to examine all questions of interest to them and to express opinions. They shall be guaranteed all constitutional rights including free inquiry, expression, and assembly.

Part II, Section B addresses the matter of social misconduct, which includes violence, property damage, deception, theft, and harassment, but does not include any category that would include the computer jokes.

THOUGH THE ACTION of the students was in poor taste and seems juvenile for someone attending a University, the students should not be punished for exercising their freedom of expression.

However, in order to maintain this freedom of expression it must be exercised responsibly and with consideration of others. The students who are responsible for the racial jokes used poor judgement and did not consider how others would react.

The printout containing racial jokes originating from the University's computer system was discovered by a Glendale Elementary Kindergarten student who found it in the "scrap box" at the school. The University donates used computer printouts to local elementary schools to be used as scrap paper.

A TASK FORCE was formed by the University to investigate and it was recently discovered that two SIU students were responsible.

If the University feels the need to sanction the students for their behavior, a written reprimand on the tastelessness of the action would probably be the most appropriate sanction as far as those outlined in the conduct code.

It would be ludicrous to impose sanctions such as probation or suspension in this case.

The matter of sanctions, if there are to be any, should be handled by the student life of the vice president for student affairs office with cooperation from computing affairs.

IF THE STUDENTS had shown better judgment in exercising their freedom of expression, the jokes would not have been distributed, and valuable time and money would not have been invested in a task force.

Opinions from elsewhere

One of the crucial differences between a banana republic and a country like the United States is that the latter tries to maintain a politically neutral civil service. Unfortunately, federal employee unions and their congressional allies are working to change that.

Rep. William Clay, D-Mo., has again introduced legislation to gut the 50-year-old Hatch Act, which prohibits federal workers from partisan activism such as running for office or donating money or volunteer services to candidates. Last year his bill was passed by the House of Representatives, but died in the Senate after President Reagan firmly declared he would veto it.

Reagan was right on the issue but wrong in his tactics: He should have pledged to veto the bill even before it emerged from committee. His delay allowed Clay to rush it through the House without hearings or amendments — and to get periously close to enacting it.

Dilution of the Hatch Act is more dangerous than ever because the federal government plays a larger role in our day-to-day lives. A college student applying for a tuition grant from the Department of Education, a taxpayer being audited by the Internal Revenue Service, a businessman facing an inspection by the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, a retiree trying to correct a Social Security underpayment — all want to be sure that government officials will not punish them for having the "wrong" political loyalties.

The best way to give them that certainty — and to protect lower-ranking officials from being dragged into politics by their superiors — is our tradition of keeping the civil service out of politics.

This tradition is far older than the Hatch Act. In 1801 President Thomas Jefferson proclaimed, "The right of any officer to give his vote at elections as a qualified citizen is not meant to be restrained, nor, however given, shall it have any effect to his prejudice; but it is expected that he will not attempt to influence the votes of others nor take any part in the business of electioneering, that being deemed inconsistent with the spirit of the Constitution and his duties to it."

To avoid repeating Reagan's mistake, President Bush should make it clear right now that he will use his veto power to block Clay's proposal.

Letters

Education and not intimidation needed to settle abortion issue

Many anti-abortionists seem to believe pro-choicers are ignorant, God-less murderers. They also do not appear to see the whole scope of the problem.

Chris Hamilton's letter of Feb. 23 was an obvious satire on these attitudes. I attempted to react. Mr. Rathunde's letter with the same satirical view in mind. I could not, however, see any humor in his letter, because, scary though it is, many 'pro-lifers' I've come in contact with have the very ideas Mr. Rathunde expressed as their beliefs.

Most people making decisions in our government are men and therefore lack the woman's perspective. These same men almost always view the pregnant woman as the "brazen hussies." Mr. Rathunde suggests, while condoning, or ignoring the part the man had in the pregnancy.

Mr. Rathunde attempts humor (I hope he doesn't actually believe this) when he says "...we engage in monogamous relationships—accepting some of our public ministers which is understandable and forgivable once they have repented..." I say he attempted humor because if you watch television you will see these ministers back on the air, 'guiding' millions of people. The same people who would most likely meach our President due to indiscretions are accepting these hypocritical men as their religious leaders.

What about this 'pro-life' idea anti-abortionists claim to believe in? Most of these people don't believe in 'the right to life', they believe in the right to exist.

But let's say the couple stays together. Is there any guarantee that the couple will be able to adequately support the family? Or that the child will grow up without mental or physical abuse due to the fact that he or she was unwanted?

How many children put up for adoption will spend the better part of their childhood in orphanages thinking their parents didn't want them or that no one wants them now? To say nothing of the pain a woman goes through when giving up her child. And what of the recent news stories about adoptive parents who have abused their new children and even, in cases, have beaten the child to death?

That brings us to Mr. Rathunde's mention of people who "engage in sexual pleasures outside of wedlock" while he "engages in monogamous relationships." Has he forgotten the possibility of a married couple who are not ready to have a child, mentally or financially?

The same people who are against abortion also don't want schools teaching children about birth control. Knowledge is obviously not being given at home. If it was, why all the teen pregnancies? Do anti-abortionists rely on scaring their kids with the wrath of God? If so, is this good parenting? Shouldn't a family relationship be based on trust rather than fear?

In the rare case of anti-abortionists allowing this education, most want to wait until late in high school to do so. I've got news for those people. I can remember knowing about sex (at least enough to 'do it') in the fifth grade, and I grew up in a relatively conservative area. By the time I got to high school, I could have easily gotten a girl pregnant if I had been ignorant. My parents were not 'religious' people, but they still suggested abstinence. I respected them enough to take their advice.

America, please do not outlaw abortion. Rather, let us unite in educating our children about the reality of sex and the responsibilities of having a child.

Hopefully through proper education, rather than intimidation, the abortion issue will settle itself. — Steven Thill, undergraduate, cinema and photography.

SPC should stick to its schedules

On Feb. 19, we planned to attend the SPC screening of "Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory" at the Student Center Video Lounge. It was advertised to be shown at 3:00, but after waiting for a half hour, we realized that none of the pinhead workers were going to show up to perform the difficult task of pressing "play" on a VCR!

In support of Darren Richardson's pledge to save the environment, I offer these thoughts:

If we, the human race, continue to pollute our bed, we will eventually suffocate in our own waste.

We can all make a contribution to the survival of this endangered planet by using only products deemed to be environmentally safe and by cutting down on wastage.

Conservation can begin with the individual. Once you make a commitment to preserving the earth's future, you will be pleasantly surprised at the impact that just one person

Two workers looked at their schedules and both said that they knew that it was supposed to play at 3:00, but would do nothing about it.

We would like to suggest to the workers of the SPC that they pay more attention to scheduling in the future, thank you! — Richard Palmer, junior in English and William Tauber, junior in aviation.

Morris said he could not speculate why the number of accidents involving toxic spills has risen, but reported the number of derailments has decreased from 247 in 1985 to 213 in 1986.

Morris said in 1987, the year the IPAC study was done, 72 derailments occurred on mainline tracks — tracks outside the railroad yards. The number was up 14 from 1986 and was the highest rate in the four-year period cited by Morris.

But according to Morris, 51 derailments occurred on mainline tracks in 1988, down 21 from the previous year and the lowest rate in the four-year period.

Morris, who is in charge of inspecting tracks in Illinois, said inspectors and those in charge of maintaining the tracks are doing their jobs as "efficiently as possible."

"If they weren't doing their jobs, it would be up to us to put them to task," Morris said.

Morris said railroad tracks are in a "constant state of flux," and explained that defects can appear overnight, especially in unfavorable weather conditions.

"A track can pass inspection one day and the next day it can be found faulty because of rain," Morris said.

Morris said if a defect is found in the tracks, inspectors notify the railroad company in charge of the track and give them a certain amount of time to fix the track.

If the defect is not serious, Morris said officials may temporarily lower speeds as much as 10 mph through the defective track area. If the defect is serious, immediate repairs will be made.

If the defect is found serious because of neglect or if a company does not respond to a notification, a written violation is sent to the Federal Railroad Administration for fines or prosecution, Morris said.

Morris said it is uncommon for a written violation to be filed.

fee will be charged to every student who does not mark the appropriate designated area on their Bursar's Bill, Schnaitmann said.

This method of collection differs from the familiar positive check off system which is a donation system. Students would mark the appropriate area if they desired to give money to the organization.

Trudy Hale, Graduate and Professional Student Council president, worked for IPIRG in the past and currently supports it.

"IPIRG cannot run on a donation system," she said. "Why should IPIRG go around with a tin cup collecting charity when there's strong student support for it?"

Schnaitmann agreed, saying it would be difficult to work on any projects under a positive check off system because most of the group's time would be used to generate money.

IPIRG supporters collected about 10,000 signatures in support of the group in 1987. Resolutions in favor of IPIRG have already been handed out by the Undergraduate Student Government and the GPSC.

In the past, SIU-E President Earl Lazero helped develop a policy that was later used to fund an IPIRG there between 1980-83. The group folded because of low student financial support and internal problems. The policy is still in effect at SIU-E, but has not been used by any student group since IPIRG.

However, some senators do not support the negative check off system.

A favorable decision also will open the doors to other groups who would be able to collect funds for their organizations.

The SIU-C campus does not have a policy concerning the collection of voluntary waivable fees, but President John Guyon is awaiting a clarification by the Board of Trustees before taking any action.

Voluntary waivable fees are different from mandatory waivable fees. Mandatory waivable fees are initially paid, but can be refunded at a later date by filling out the proper paper work. Voluntary waivable fees are not initially paid.

The $2.25 student to student grant program fee, which provides money to needy students and the $30.50 student insurance medical fee, insurance that covers students in accidents occurring off campus, are examples of mandatory refundable fees pocketbooks."

Women housed in the shelter would be "mentally disabled not necessarily physically handicapped," Speck said, adding that the shelter would be accessible to the handicapped.

Speck explained that University Avenue location was good because of its close proximity to Memorial Hospital of Carbondale as well as the central part of the city.

"We don't have public transportation to get around if we locate out in the country," she said.

Dillard could not be reached for further comment but councilmen showed support for the shelter.

Councilman John Yow said, "I don't want to do anything to jeopardize the Good Samaritan House's chance for funds but the mayor pointed out the excessive vehicular traffic at that location."

Yow said the council should give its support after Speck explains the location March 28.

Councilman John Mills agreed that the council show its support for the funding application only after Speck provides further explanation.

Councilman Keith Tuxhorn said he was surprised at the mayor's strong opposition to the location.

"I don't have a problem with the location," Tuxhorn said. "Elsie Speck is not going to make a rash decision."

The facility has a large screened porch and back yard with the possibility for vegetable and flower gardens.

Councilman Richard Morris could not be reached for comment.

toward the rifle in room 31, where it had been moved. Police also found three 30-round magazines, 18 rounds of live ammunition and drug paraphernalia.

The University News Service said police later arrested True and charged him with battery and unauthorized possession of a weapon. Police said True did not own an Illinois Firearms Identtification card.

The News Service said True was released on a $100 cash bond.

According to News Service, police said True told police he did not own the rifle and was holding it for a friend, who is with the Navy stationed in San Diego, Calif.

In a telephone interview Wednesday, True denied any involvement in the incident

BAS issue rests with President

By Jeanne Bickler
Staff Writer

University President John C. Guyon claimed responsibility for the Black American Studies program, but said he does not favor an African American cultural center at last night's Undergraduate Student Government meeting.

"Who is responsible for the fate of the BAS program at this University?" Franz Mullings, African American Studies Association coordinator, asked Guyon.

"I am responsible for everything that goes on around here," Guyon said. "If you are going to find fault, find fault with me."

Guyon called his negative opinion of the cultural center a "value judgement." He said he prefers the day to day interaction of all ethnic groups.

Guyon called his negative opinion of the cultural center a "value judgment."

He said no money had been allocated for the cultural center in the 1989-90 school year.

"There is no place for me to go and learn about myself," Dewinski Patrick said. "Guyon said we can learn about ourselves in the BAS program. How can we learn in a program that is being dismantled?"

Guyon said he was sorry the students had not received the faculty they deserved. "I promise you we will correct that," he said.

Similarities in religious beliefs taught

Religious studies defined, learning goals established

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

Pointing out similarities in different religious beliefs is part of the teachings in the University's Department of Religious Studies, Dale Bengston, department chairman, said.

Bengston, who as the first lecturer in the Wesley Foundation's Eureka Lecture Series, gave a talk entitled "The Place of Religious Studies in a State University," Wednesday.

"In the religious studies department, we don't just teach the Bible — we try to enhance it by making it more conclusive," Bengston said.

He identified the four major goals of the department as teaching pluralism, showing commonalities, using an interdisciplinary approach and being objective in its teaching.

Pluralism is the willingness to accept diversity of religion and beliefs, Bengston said. Unless people are able to tolerate other ideas, a world state will never be achieved, he said.

Religious studies also attempts to point out commonalities between the traditions of various religions, he said. Often, traditions and prominent figures are not as different as they may appear. "I can find commonalities between Christ, Buddha, Moses, Santa Claus and Superman," he said.

Bengston said he tries to take an interdisciplinary approach to explaining phenomena. A different level of meaning can be found if an anthropological, archaeological or historical point of view is used.

Bengston said he urges his students to be objective and to remove personal biases when examining a different culture. He told a story about a student who went from saying "That's not true," about other religions to "Yes, but in my opinion..."

Religious studies are supposed to point out that there are no "right" or "wrong" religions, he said.

"I just want students to expand their perspectives to realize that others have something to say."

Bengston said that many people aren't sure what a religious studies program is supposed to do, or why the department is on a state university campus. He said the prominence in the news of Rev. Jerry Falwell, the Ayatollah Khomeini, and holy wars in the Middle East and in Ireland show how important religion is in today's world.

"Even on the simplest level, religion has a tremendous influence on people's lives," he said.

The contestants for the Mr. Irresistible Pageant rehearse their stage order at the student center. The show will be held at 7:30 tonight in Shryock Auditorium.

Young men to show talent, bodies in annual contest

By Nora Bentley
Staff Writer

Eleven men will strut their stuff at the third annual Mr. Irresistible Pageant 7:30 tonight at Shryock Auditorium.

The contestants were nominated by SIU-C women on and off campus and will be judged by local female business owners and SIU employees. The contest is sponsored by the SIU-C chapter of the American Marketing Association, WCIL-FM, Mr. Tuxedo, Rompers, Holiday Inn and Meis, Phil Walsh, AMA vice president of sales, said.

"I'm just going to have fun. I'm not going to worry about it too much," Aron Downing, a freshman in cinema and photography, said. Downing is representing Baldwin Hall.

Ivory Henderson, a junior in speech communication and winner of the small group category of the Theta Xi Variety Show, said that he's a little nervous, but that "It's all in fun and it will be something to remember." He is representing the Alpha Phi Alpha fraternity.

Vic Delgado, representing Neely Hall, said, "I've been on stage before, but I've never had to wear a swimsuit. It seems like it's going to be fun, though, and I'm looking forward to it."

Walsh said the contest is divided into five categories.

Contestants include Downing, Delgado, Henderson, Bill Budzilek, representing Mae Smith; Darren Fetter, representing off-campus; Yogi Henderson, also representing Mae Smith; Bill Langley, representing Alpha Gamma Delta sorority; Andy Hancock, representing Sigma Kappa sorority; John Pappas, representing off-campus; Todd Nobbe, representing Bowyer Hall; and Tony Rametta, also representing off-campus.

The winner will receive $100, a trophy and will be escorted to a reception at Rompers by a Blue Star Limo. First and second runners-up will receive trophies.

A reception will be held at Rompers after the contest. For those who don't attend the pageant there will be a $2 cover.

Tickets are $3 in advance or $4 at the door. They can be purchased at the AMA business office on the third floor of the Student Center, the Student Center ticket window or Mr. Tuxedo located at 1400 W. Main.

Research center gets new director

University News Service

John S. Mead began March 13 as the new director of SIU-C's coal research center.

Mead is replacing acting director Charles B. Muchmore, who is returning to teaching and research in the University's mechanical engineering and energy processes department.

Mead left his position as director of the state office of Coal Development and Marketing in Springfield to accept a position at SIU.

Mead is the first permanent director the center has had since James H. Swisher was reassigned to teaching two years ago.

The coal research center reports directly to SIU's Graduate School. John H. Yopp, dean of the Graduate School, said, "He brings with him a knowledge of federal and state political scenes and an understanding of the coal industry and its needs. He is very well known and highly regarded by state and federal agencies concerned with energy issues."

Mead was picked unanimously by the search committee to fill the position.

"My background combines knowledge of legal issues, especially environmental air quality requirements and general political issues related to coal, oil and gas, and I am familiar with the center and its programs," Mead said.

Mead served as manager at the Illinois Energy Resource Commission's coal division from 1985 to 1986 when he was appointed director. He worked as a staff director there from 1982 to 1985. Before that he was an attorney for the agency.

Mead earned his bachelor's degree in political science at Indiana University (1976) and graduated in May 1979 from the University of Illinois with a degree in law.

Staff writer Jeanne Bickler contributed to this report.

Winning art entries set for display

University News Service

Winning entries in SIU-C's annual student art competition for the $20,000 Rickert-Ziebold Trust Award will be exhibited March 24 through April 30 at the University Museum.

The exhibit will open with a public reception and awards presentation at 8 p.m. Friday.

The largest and most prestigious prize offered to undergraduate art and design students at SIU-C, and one of the richest undergraduate competitions in the country, the Rickert-Ziebold Trust Award has been given annually since 1975.

A trust fund established by the late Marguerite L. Rickert underwrites the award.

This year's honored artists are Frank J. Brown of Carbondale, ceramics; Brian C. Lawrenz of Palatine, product design; Carole J. McNaughton of Evansville, Ind., glass; Martha I. Summers of Urbana, ceramics and glass; and Scott A. Swanson of Naperville, metalsmithing.

Old Baptist Hall to hold 2 student piano recitals

Yoke-Kam Tai and Sun-Sun Ho, two piano students in the School of Music, will give a joint senior piano recital at 8 tonight in the Old Baptist Foundation Recital Hall. Admission is free.

Tai will perform "Two Sonatas in D Minor" by Domenico Scarlatti, "Nocturne in B Major, Opus 32, No. 1" by Frederic Chopin and "Spanish Dance" by Enrique Granados.

Ho will play "Rondo in D Major, K. 485" by Wolfgang Mozart, "Prelude in B Minor, Opus 32, No. 10" by Sergei Rachmaninoff and "Three Preludes" by George Gershwin.

Tai and Ho will team on a piano duet for the concert's finale, "Nicholas Rubenstein's 24 Capricellos."

Rambo-crazed youth kills family

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (UPI) — A teenager dressed in Army fatigues and calling himself Rambo shot and killed his parents and a younger brother Wednesday after an argument over school attendance, police said.

Poughkeepsie Police Chief Stanley Stull said the accused killer, Brian Britton, 16, was wearing military fatigues when he surrendered to police at a neighbor's house. The shootings occurred at about 6 a.m. in the family home.

Investigators found pictures of Rambo displayed on the bedroom wall of the teenager, and discovered copies of Soldier of Fortune magazine and smoke grenades in his bedroom. They did not say where they found the shotgun used to kill the victims.

Still said Britton had a "fixation" with the movie character and told interrogating detectives to refer to him as "Rambo."

Britton was ordered held without bail at the Dutchess County Jail on second-degree murder charges in the deaths of his parents, Dennis, 44, and Marlene, 42, and his brother, Jason, 8.

Britton's sister, Sherry, 17, was in fair condition at Vassar Brothers Hospital after undergoing surgery for shotgun wounds.

"We've had homicides before, but I've never seen an entire family destroyed in a few moments time. It's very tragic," said Chief of Detectives

Capt. Charles Mittelstaedt.

The boy's parents were found dead at the scene with gunshot wounds to their heads, police said. Jason Britton died at the hospital.

Mittelstaedt said Britton initially gave police a made-up story of how the shootings took place.

"He had fabricated an entire scenario of what took place. He said that his father was shooting the entire family and he escaped by jumping out a rear window," Mittelstaedt said. "Then he went on to tell us the family had received threatening phone calls and tried to wipe them out. Of course, we were able to disprove that."

Candidate race starts for employee council

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

Candidates planning to run for a seat on the Civil Service Employees Council must submit a statement of candidacy by April 12.

Jacqueline Goepfert, co-chairwoman of the council's election committee, said the terms of nine council members will expire this spring. There is no limit to the number of candidates for the election, Goepfert said.

Each candidate must submit a biographic sketch of themselves, including the division in which they work, how long they have worked at SIUC, why they are interested in being on the council and other information that would allow voters know more about the candidates than their names, Goepfert said.

Council members were required to submit the biographic information for the first time for last year's election so new employees would have more information than just a name on which to base their vote.

The divisions represented by the council are academic affairs, financial affairs, campus services, student affairs, the Office of the President, intercollegiate athletics, the School of Medicine, University News Service and external affairs.

Of the nine council members' terms to end this year, four are from academic affairs, one is from financial affairs, two are from campus services and two are from student affairs.

Representation on the council is determined by population, Goepfert said. Each division is entitled to one representative for every 100 employees, she said. There are 22 members representing 1,800 civil service employees.

Ballots will be mailed to civil service employees on May 2 and must be returned by May 10. Election results will be released May 12.

Ballots should be mailed to Donna Barbare at the School of Medicine in Carbondale. Barbare is co-chairwoman of the election committee.

School of medicine entrance test faces revision that would cut time

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

Students applying to medical schools in 1991 will face a revised Medical College Admission Test, according to the Association of American Medical Colleges.

In the March 22 issue of the Chronicle of Higher Education, Robert G. Petersdorf, president of the association, said the MCAT will be "streamlined," and emphasize verbal skills, critical thinking and problem-solving.

"The changes are designed to reflect our belief that a firm, scientific base of knowledge is only one requisite for a physician," Petersdorf said.

This is the first revision made to the test since 1977, Karen Mitchell, director of the MCAT program, said.

Roger E. Robinson, assistant dean of students at the Carbondale campus for the School of Medicine, described the current test as "rigorous and grueling." The exam takes almost seven hours to complete. "By the end of the day, scores tend to go down," Robinson said.

"It shouldn't be a test of exhaustion. It should be a test of cognitive ability," he said.

Robinson said the test has six sections — biology, chemistry, physics, science problems, reading and problems in quantitative analysis. The test consists of 305 questions.

"Generally, there is a lowering in scores for the last two sections," Robinson said. Tests scores in the reading and quantitative analysis sections are lower because they are given toward the end of the day, he said.

The new version of the test, however, will be divided into four sections — biological sciences, physical sciences, verbal reasoning and a writing sample, consisting of two essays. The test will have 221 questions and will take about five and three-quarters hours to complete, Mitchell said.

"The changes are positive," said Gerry Schermerhorn, assistant dean of students-admissions for the School of Medicine at Springfield. "The new sections on the test would appear to measure the verbal skills better."

Schermerhorn said the admissions committee has long felt a need for students with a broader background in the liberal arts.

In keeping with a broad liberal arts background, the essay section was added "to illicit good writing" from students, Mitchell said. Students will be asked to explain two quotations, she said.

The MCAT is only part of the admission process at SIU's School of Medicine, Schermerhorn said.

An admissions committee, consisting of faculty, students and administrators, selects students on the basis of undergraduate grade point average, letters of recommendation, work experience, personal interviews with the applicants and the applicant's involvement in extracurricular activities, she said.

Low scores on the MCAT do not mean the student will be denied admission while "high scores do not mean a shoe in," Schermerhorn said.

Each section of the test is given 15 points as a maximum score. The committee gives added weight to scores in the sections of science problems and reading or science problems and quantitative analysis if the applicant speaks English as a second language, Schermerhorn said.

Rug showcase opens at University Museum

Work by 20 downstate rag-rug weavers will go on display April 2 at the University Museum.

"Bits and Pieces: The Southern Illinois Tradition in Rag Rugs" showcases a range of techniques, styles and materials.

Capstone to a research grant from the Illinois Arts Council, the exhibit documents both the rugs and the artisans who create them.

SIU-C researchers began tracing the history of the region's rag rugs last year, according to Bonnie J. Krause, senior research specialist in the Office of Research and Development.

Combining the state's lower 20 counties, they turned up 50 weavers actively involved in this traditional folk craft.

"We found them by word of mouth," Krause said. "There's a community of weavers. They may not see each other, but they know of each other and they each have an opinion of who is the expert in a certain area."

Krause chose 20 weavers from this list, trying for a broad representation of location, styles, techniques and backgrounds.

Then, equipped with tape recorder and camera, Cindy Huston, a graduate student in anthropology, set out to record the weavers and their work.

In basements and community halls, surrounded by the tools of their craft, the weavers reminisced.

They talked of looms and legends handed down from generations of weaving potlucks held like quilting bees and of old-time weavers long since gone. They told of when and how they'd learned their craft, the kind of tools they use and the ways they thread their looms.

These memories, stored on cassettes and accompanied by photographs of looms, weavers and rugs, will go into the special collections division of Morris Library.

The 25 rugs in the museum exhibit will become part of that collection after the show ends.

"What we want is that 100 years from now, someone will have a good picture of what the craft was like," Krause said.

The research project's emphasis on the weavers behind the loom has carried through to the exhibit. The display also features color and black-and-white photographs of the artisans at work.

'An Evening of New Plays' to present three one-acts produced by students

New talent takes center stage March 30 through April 2 when the Playwrights Workshop presents three original one-act plays written and produced entirely by students in the Department of Theater.

"An Evening of New Plays" will be staged for four consecutive nights at the Laboratory Theater in the Communications Building.

Tickets are available at the McLeod Theater box office for

The nightly playbill consists of "Fear Itself," written by Gretchen Smith of New York City; "Thirty," by Fred Norberg of Iowa City; and "Mel 'n' Cha'lie," written by Lynne Guido of Murphysboro.

Directed by John M. Weagly, "Fear Itself" takes a deceptively light look at life choices as a young woman wins her dream date with daytime television's sexiest educator.

Cast members are Stephanie Chase, Heather Currie, Kevin Easterwood and Amy Spies.

Bon Jovi scheduled to rock SIU-C Arena again

With a severe history of selling out shows, Bon Jovi, notorious for breaking attendance records across the country, will bring hard rock back to Southern Illinois at 8 p.m. April 8 as they take the stage of the SIU Arena.

Their 1986 hit album "Slippery When Wet" set sales records never matched, before or since: five million sold in just five months...in the U.S. alone.

The band's most recent skyrocketing hit is "New Jersey". The album has been hailed as their most personal compilation of tunes, the expression of their collective attitude.

It's just six years since these talented guys came together to form the world famous band.

Singer-songwriter Jon Bon Jovi recorded his first hit "Runaway" one summer night in 1982. Unexpectedly, it became a radio hit in several cities such as Detroit, Tampa,

New York and Denver, and caused quite a commotion about this yet unsigned solo artist.

Jon was then in the position to hand pick his band for what was supposed to be a short club tour. Needless to say, the short tour turned into a long and rewarding career move.

The SIU Arena welcomes music fans from across the tri-state area to join Bon Jovi, and special guest Skid Row for an evening they won't soon forget.

Tickets, $17 reserved, are on sale at all Arena outlets. For concert information, phone the SIU Arena 24-hour hotline at 453-5341.

Student plays game show on television; wins new car

By Marc Blumer
Staff Writer

While many of her classmates were spending spring break enjoying themselves on the beaches of Florida and Texas, SIU-C student Patty Murphy was hard at work — winning a car on a television game show.

Murphy, a sophomore in public relations, was chosen as a contestant for "The Price is Right" during a trip to California with two of her classmates.

In the format of the show, the four contestants are asked to guess or "bid" on the price of the product. The contestant who bids closest to the price without over-estimating the cost wins the item and is given a chance to win additional prizes by playing various pricing games, which use commercial products and their retail prices.

By bidding closest to the price of a set of Foxbat golf clubs, Murphy advanced and won a 1989 Subaru Jetty, with an estimated cost of $9,500.

Murphy, who was the last contestant called, said, "Being selected to be in the audience (from which the contestants are chosen) is an all-day thing. We were given a number and asked to come back later in the afternoon when each of us were interviewed."

"I didn't realize they had called my name until my friend started screaming because they used my proper name. When they brought out the golf clubs, I turned to my friends for help because I had no idea how much they cost. They told me to guess $1,000, which turned out to be the closest bid."

Murphy, of West Frankfort, was then brought out on stage to play "The Piggybank Game" where she was given a chance to win the car.

In the game, the contestant is asked to guess numbers between zero and nine, which were part of three different prices; the car, a baker's rack and cash. Whichever combination is completed first is the prize the contestant wins. In six guesses, Murphy completed the price of the car.

In the contest to appear in the "Showcase Showdown" at the end of the show, Murphy failed to advance. Each contestant gets two spins of the wheel to get as close to $1 as possible without going over. Another contestant advanced with a better spin than the sixty cents Murphy won.

Murphy, who lives in Kellogg hall, said she would have to pay between $500 and $600 dollars in taxes for her winnings, but said she is going to sell the golf clubs to pay them.

CarleCare contracts expire soon— won't be renewed

Several physicians in Southern Illinois have elected not to renew their contracts with the Health Maintenance Organization, CarleCare. The current contracts expire March 31, 1989.

The following physicians will not provide services through CarleCare beginning April 1, 1989: E. Fasnacht, B. McElheny, R. Jones, D. Blaise and P. Bennett.

Employees affected by this change will receive letters from CarleCare offering them the option of switching to another CarleCare physician.

As an alternative, employees may change from CarleCare to the State Quality Care Plan through Equicor.

The deadline for the change is March 31. Employees who wish to switch to Equicor should visit Personnel Services, 805 S. Elizabeth, between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Artist shows way to display flag exhibit creator

DEERFIELD (UPI) — A north suburban Chicago artist says he's putting a new spin on the controversy over the U.S. flag exhibit at the School of the Art Institute.

Gary Mann, an art teacher at a northwest suburban high school, said Wednesday he will put together a display that includes a life-size drawing of Scott Tyler, the Art Institute student who designed the controversial exhibit "What is the proper way to display the U.S. flag?" which featured a

"I have deep respect for those who fought so hard to keep our freedom alive. I'm not doing this to be cute. This is very serious."

—Gary Mann

U.S. flag spread on the floor where observers could step on it.

Tyler's work inspired a month of demonstrations by veterans groups and others outside the Art Institute. The exhibit in which it was featured ran from Feb. 17 to March 18 and prompted a condemnation from the Illinois House and a Chicago City Council ordinance making it a crime to desecrate or mutilate any flag.

Mann's work will be titled

"How to display 'Dead' Scott Tyler," and will have the drawing of Tyler on the floor with a flag hung on a wall beside it. A notebook will be on a stand beneath the flag, inviting visitor comments.

"This is very important," Mann said. "I want to offer another view of the flag. I am not a veteran, but I have deep respect for those who fought so hard to keep our freedom alive. I'm not doing this to be cute. This is very serious."

Lloyd Hood, commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 2377 in Glendale Heights, said helping to find a home for Mann's would give me a lot of satisfaction."

"We could show Tyler the same respect he showed the American flag," Hood said.

Robert Jones, spokesman for the Illinois Veterans of Foreign Wars, called Mann's work "poetic justice" and Vietnam veteran William McConnel said he would be glad to walk on the drawing of Tyler.

Voluntary fee resolution not considered by USG

By Miguel Aiba
Staff Writer

After heavy lobbying by Illinois Public Interest Research Group supporters, the Undergraduate Student Government senate voted not to consider a resolution that would threaten possible funding for the organization Wednesday night.

The senate resolution would have recommended that the Board of Trustees Finance Committee not support a negative check off system of collecting voluntary student fees.

The Finance Committee will clarify how voluntary fees are to be collected in its April meeting, in addition to other business.

IPIRG supporters are hoping the definition will allow voluntary fees to be collected on a negative check off system.

Under a negative check off system students will be charged a proposed $3 IPIRG voluntary fee unless they mark a box, or other designated area, on their bursar bill.

This differs from a positive check off system whereby students must mark the appropriate area to give the money. This is the traditional way of collecting a donation.

"In good conscious, I cannot support a fee that is deceptive to the student body," Chuck Hagerman, USG senator and writer of the resolution, said. "I don't think this way of collecting fees is fair."

"If for some reason you don't check that box, you'll pay for it," Hagerman said. "Getting your money back is something else."

Hagerman said he is not against IPIRG, he is against the fee collection structure. "If they have as much support as they say they do," he asked. "Why won't they (IPIRG) accept a donation system instead?"

Cindy Schnaitmann, IPIRG organizer, said the future of the organization under a negative check off system would depend on how well it responded to student needs.

Schnaitmann, who has been trying to establish an IPIRG at the University for several years, said the organization should be funded by student fees because of the size and nature of the business it conducts.

Writer's workshop planned

The McKendree Writer's Association will hold its 35th Annual Spring Conference April 28 and 29 in Pearson's Hall at McKendree College in Lebanon.

Participants may submit manuscripts of fiction or poetry for discussion at the workshop. No more than five pages of poetry or 10 pages of fiction may be sent by April 15 to: Workshop, McKendree Writer's Association, P.O. Box 1522, Belleville, Ill. 62222.

For details and a conference brochure, contact Elaine Lintzenich at 277-4165 or Mary Ellen Bertram at 397-5388.

Saluki Athletics, he is particularly looking for input from student-athletes concerning the issue. Having a student-athlete on the IAAC would facilitate that need.

In a second possibility, it appears that Odette is likely to resign her position on the IAAC. Hall said that if that happens, he would be willing to appoint a student-athlete to the vacancy.

"When we advertised for these positions in the fall, I don't remember there being a rush of student-athletes to fill them," Hall said. "But if at least one student-athlete is willing to serve, or SAAB has someone that could do a good job, I would be really pleased to appoint them."

USG appointees to a campus board must meet three qualifications: maintain a 2.0 grade point average, be enrolled in 6 credit hours of classes, and be in good disciplinary standing. Appointees must then be certified by the USG Senate before assuming their position.

In other SAAB business: Some SAAB members asked Black why the December IAAC meeting, when gymnastics and field hockey were cut, could not have been held in private to save the players involved from embarrassment. "I understand that it was painful for the people there, and it would have been better if it had been in private. It was a circus with all the media and two or three television cameras. But according to the Illinois Open Meetings Act, the business had to be conducted in the open, which was done."

SAAB president Marcus Mulholland proposed that the May 1987 Strategic Planning Committee Report be reviewed so that the board could present a formal statement to University president John C. Guyon.

A proposal to the SAAB constitution that would close meetings only to guests invited by a student-athlete representative was tabled for the April 4 meeting. If enacted, the amendment would effectively bar press coverage of SAAB's activities.

freshman from Keokuk, Iowa. "He has good and bad days," Hartzog said. "If he stays out on the fairway it will solve a lot of problems."

Rounding out the roster are walk-on freshmen Sean English and Sean Leckrone, sophomore David Lewis, freshmen Greg Papke and Mark Scholberg and junior Mark Unruh, a transfer from Missouri.

"LaCrone and English's high school credentials were not that outstanding, but they have just flat out been playing tough for me," Hartzog said. "Papke appears to have real potential and hits extremely well, but has trouble scoring. If he is willing, I would like to talk redshirt with him."

"Unruh was a highly successful high school golfer, but he broke a wrist over a year ago and is coming back slowly. He has skills."

Hartzog said the players will be working on qualifying for the five-man playing roster.

"Monday and Tuesday we qualify, except for the top three kids which are exempt," Hartzog said. "The others play for the four and five spots. We appear solid with six guys."

Hartzog said an inability to practice outside due to the bad weather has set back things.

"It hurts every day you can't get out," Hartzog said.

Pete Rose calls press conference but refuses comment on charges

PLANT CITY, Fla. (UPI)

— Cincinnati Reds Manager Pete Rose, target of a baseball investigation into his gambling habits, said Wednesday the increased media attention makes him feel "like a fresh piece of meat" but refused to comment on the probe.

More than 50 members of the media descended upon the Reds' spring training home for an exhibition game against St. Louis, dogging Rose before Cincinnati's 7-6 loss in 11 innings.

After the game, Rose sat with arms folded in the Reds' dugout and warned approaching reporters that the first non-baseball question would trigger his departure to the batting cage.

"Me and my shadows. ... I feel like a fresh piece of meat," said baseball's all-time hit leader.

The baseball commissioner's office announced in New York Monday that Rose is under investigation for "serious allegations." Rose, 47, admitted to betting on horses and dogs, but Sports Illustrated, in its issue dated March 27, published a story saying the commissioner's office has information Rose may have bet on baseball games homered earlier in the day, led off the seventh with a single and a stolen base. Shields scored to tie the game when Dave Wrona, who already had two doubles to his credit, singled to right field.

After winning pitcher Mike Lightside (2-2) held the Salukis scoreless in the top of the eighth, Pattillo opened the Indians' eighth with his third double of the game.

Sean Bergman (1-2), who finished with nine base-on-balls, intentionally walked the next two batters to load the bases. On Bergman's first pitch to No. 5 batter John Green, the ball skittered off senior catcher John Hostet-lier's mitt and rolled to the fence, allowing Pattillo to score from third.

In the first game, Arkansas State fought back from SIU-C's 5-3 advantage, which was helped by Saluki Brad Hollenkamp's three-run home run in the first inning.

However, Arkansas State's Greg White had a two-run blast of his own in the fifth to tie at 5-4. Then Kevin Tate pounded out an RBI triple and later scored for the final margin.

The Salukis outthit the Indians 8-to-7, led by Kurt Endebrock's 3-of-4 performance and Damico's 2 RBIs.

Jeff McElrath (1-2) struck out seven and walked six for the victory. Sophomore righthander Dale Meyer (0-2) allowed six walks.

Advice To The Drug Worn

Dear Dr. Buzz: What happens when you smoke pot, meaning, what does it do to your body?

Besides for turning your teeth green or brown, (no kidding!), marijuana smoke contains 7 times the amount of tars and resins that tobacco does and other irritants like hydrocarbons that are cancer causing chemicals. U.S. Surgeon General Koop states that all of us could probably live longer if we did 2 simple things; to always wear seatbelts when driving and to not smoke anything. Over 421 different compounds have been identified in marijuana. Studies on its long-term effects on both the mind and body are underway. So far the results show that pot is not the harmless drug it once was thought to be. THC, one of the most active ingredients in pot, lowers your body's ability to fight off infections, even common colds. Pot also lowers the levels of testosterone, (the male sex hormone) and delays puberty in adolescent males. There is some evidence to suggest that it may cause problems in women's menstrual cycle. Short-term memory, reaction time and visual tracking are all adversely affected. In fact, most higher functioning tasks of the brain are dulled by marijuana in the body. Marijuana also speeds up the heart rate, sometimes as much as 50%, enough to freak out some novice users. Since THC is fat soluble, meaning that it collects in the fat tissues of the body, primarily the brain, sex glands, kidneys, and liver, it stays in the body a long time before it is completely gone.

If you have a question about alcohol or drugs, send it to Dr. Buzz at the Wellness Center or call 536-4441. Look for your answer in Dr. Buzz's column.

Donewald speaks out on firing from Illinois State

NORMAL (UPI) An emotional Bob Donewald said Wednesday he was in "total shock" when the Illinois State University athletic director told him he would not be offered a new contract as the school's basketball coach.

Donewald, who was fired by Athletic Director Ron Wellman, broke his silence for the first time at a news conference on the ISU campus.

"When I was informed by Athletic Director Ron Wellman that I had to resign or be fired I was in total shock," he said close to tears. "I'd never been told in writing or verbally that my work was not up to expectations.

"Prior to March 13, I had never been warned in any way that my job as head men's basketball coach at ISU would be terminated."

Donewald produced recent evaluations from Wellman, saying the coach was doing an "acceptable" to "exceptional" job.

The 45-year-old Donewald, the Redbird coach since 1978, led the team to the NCAA tournaments from 1983-85, the NIT tourney in 1980, 1987 and 1988 and won the Missouri Valley Conference title in 1984, finishing second in 1983 and 1985. But Illinois State finished 13-17 this season, including a 6-8 conference mark. It was Donewald's worst finish.

On Wednesday, Donewald pointed to the team's recent successes on the court and in the classroom.

"Our program has been able to retain academic and recruiting integrity as further evidence that we have never been put on probation for any such violations," he said. "At all times while I have been involved as the head basketball coach, I have attempted to operate the program as a class act."

Martin O'Connor, Donewald's attorney, said last week the coach has a letter from former ISU president Lloyd Watkins that ensured the coach annual contracts through 1991 if the program did not run afoul of NCAA guidelines.

O'Connor said he and university officials will be meeting in an attempt to win back Donewald's job or reach a compromise.

During the news conference, Donewald refused to comment on negotiations with the school but said he would still take his old job back.

"I love this community," he said. "I think all of you know how many times I've had an opportunity to leave this community. I love it. My family loves it. I love it so much I've sent two of my children to this university."

Oklahoma star driven by memories of Len Bias

By Wendell Barnhouse
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

They hang there in his mental art gallery, two images of heartache and agony. If a memory can be worn out by review, these thoughts are tattered and frayed.

Stacey King, Oklahoma's All-America center and player of the year candidate, can recall the pictures in an instant.

One is of a dead friend. When King was being recruited by Maryland in the spring of 1985, he met Len Bias, the Terrapins' star. King was impressed by Maryland and befriended by Bias. Their families met, and their mothers became friends. Until King made his decision to attend Oklahoma, Bias called to chat and recruit.

In June 1986, a handful of hours after being selected by the Boston Celtic in the first round of the National Basketball Association draft, Bias was found dead of a suspected drug overdose.

"He was the main person who stood out (during recruiting)," King said of Bias. "He was a star, an All-

American, but he didn't have the big head. He told me what to expect. He was like a father, a brother. He'd call me before my high school games, ask me about my games, and we'd talk about other things.

"Then it happened. It was like someone took an organ out of you. It's bad when you feel that way about someone and then suddenly, they die."

King has not forgotten his departed friend. A poster of Bias in action hangs on the wall in King's dorm room.

The other picture is of last year's NCAA championship game. This is more of a collage: a fast-paced first half, a monster game by Kansas' Danny Manning; Manning scoring against King on a driving, circus-move layup; Manning hitting the winning free throws.

Before this season started, King supplemented his mental picture by viewing a photograph that hangs in the Oklahoma basketball office. It shows King sitting with his head down after the championship game loss.

New Michigan coach enjoys success in NCAA tournament

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — One week ago the interim Michigan basketball coach was "Steve Who." Two games later he's establishing his own identity, Steve Fisher.

"It's an accident and opportunity," Fisher said of his move into the limelight. "Timing is so crucial in everything you do."

Fisher has both the fewest wins of any coach to appear in the NCAA tournament (two) and the highest winning percentage (.24).

Both are the result of Bill Frieder deciding March 15 to take the Arizona State job and Michigan athletic director Bo Schembechler's decision to elevate assistant coach Fisher for the NCAA tournament.

An incident that mildly irks Fisher demonstrates his position. Michigan didn't bother sending its own pep band to Atlanta for the first two NCAA tournament games. Instead it hired a local college band and outfitted it with Michigan hats.

At one point in the second game someone in the band held up a sign that read, "Fake Band. Then another that said, 'Fake Coach.' But that isn't so, there's nothing phony about Fisher."

"I'm usually the guy in the locker room looking at films,"

Fisher said during an interview. "Just doing what I'm doing now is the biggest change. I'm doing my best not to let it be a distraction."

Michigan has defeated, with some difficulty, both Xavier and South Alabama to earn an NCAA Regional game Thursday against North Carolina.

"Most people, had we not won either of our first two games, would probably have blamed Bill Frieder," Fisher said. "The fact the kids have seen me in the setting of coach will help."

Michigan's winning both games under Fisher has increased his chances of succeeding Frieder from maybe .05 up to at least 50 percent. And the increased visibility has made it almost certain Fisher will be a head coach for somebody next season.

"I have not, and people probably won't believe me, I have not put pressure on myself to win games for personal reasons," Fisher said. "I directed all my efforts at getting our kids ready for the games."

Fisher had considerable input with Frieder, both in planning practices and in-game strategy.

"I'm no longer the one who makes the suggestions," Fisher said. "I make the decisions. I had a lot of input, but he made the decisions. He listened to a lot of things I said and sometimes he took my advice. But sometimes he listened and did what he wanted anyway."

Fisher has quickly become accepted as the boss by his players. That showed in the second game when Michigan drastically cut its fouls in the second half, yet became more aggressive in coming from behind to beat South Alabama.

Fisher has displayed during games the same relative demeanor as a head coach he did as an assistant — aware of what's going on but very low-key about it.

If you had to choose a coach he resembles in court-side manner you'd pick Len Wilkens.

Wilkens is not a screamer or arm-waver. What he does, and Fisher too, is get close to the officials when they get near the bench and try to reason with them. He yells across the court, but to make sure his point is heard and not to berate.

"Maybe I should be more vociferous," Fisher said, "I probably should be. But there's a time and place to get really emphatic. There are times you want to get a technical."

Donewald produced recent evaluations from Wellman, saying the coach was doing an "acceptable" to "exceptional" job.

The 45-year-old Donewald, the Redbird coach since 1978, led the team to the NCAA tournaments from 1983-85, the NIT tourney in 1980, 1987 and 1988 and won the Missouri Valley Conference title in 1984, finishing second in 1983 and 1985. But Illinois State finished 13-17 this season, including a 6-8 conference mark. It was Donewald's worst finish.

On Wednesday, Donewald pointed to the team's recent successes on the court and in the classroom.

"Our program has been able to retain academic and recruiting integrity as further evidence that we have never been put on probation for any such violations," he said. "At all times while I have been involved as the head basketball coach, I have attempted to operate the program as a class act."

Martin O'Connor, Donewald's attorney, said last week the coach has a letter from former ISU president Lloyd Watkins that ensured the coach annual contracts through 1991 if the program did not run afoul of NCAA guidelines.

O'Connor said he and university officials will be meeting in an attempt to win back Donewald's job or reach a compromise.

During the news conference, Donewald refused to comment on negotiations with the school but said he would still take his old job back.

"I love this community," he said. "I think all of you know how many times I've had an opportunity to leave this community. I love it. My family loves it. I love it so much I've sent two of my children to this university."

Oklahoma star driven by memories of Len Bias

By Wendell Barnhouse
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

They hang there in his mental art gallery, two images of heartache and agony. If a memory can be worn out by review, these thoughts are tattered and frayed.

Stacey King, Oklahoma's All-America center and player of the year candidate, can recall the pictures in an instant.

One is of a dead friend. When King was being recruited by Maryland in the spring of 1985, he met Len Bias, the Terrapins' star. King was impressed by Maryland and befriended by Bias. Their families met, and their mothers became friends. Until King made his decision to attend Oklahoma, Bias called to chat and recruit.

In June 1986, a handful of hours after being selected by the Boston Celtics in the first round of the National Basketball Association draft, Bias was found dead of a suspected overdose.

"He was the main person who stood out (during recruiting)," King said of Bias. "He was a star, an All-

American, but he didn't have the big head. He told me what to expect. He was like a father, a brother. He'd call me before my high school games, ask me about my games, and we'd talk about other things.

"Then it happened. It was like someone took an organ out of you. It's bad when you feel that way about someone and then suddenly, they die."

King has not forgotten his departed friend. A poster of Bias in action hangs on the wall in King's dorm room.

The other picture is of last year's NCAA championship game. This is more of a collage: a fast-paced first half; a monster game by Kansas' Danny Manning; Manning scoring against King on a driving, circus-move layup; Manning hitting the winning free throws.

Before this season started, King supplemented his mental picture by viewing a photograph that hangs in the Oklahoma basketball office. It shows King sitting with his head down after the championship game loss.

New Michigan coach enjoys success in NCAA tournament

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — One week ago the interim Michigan basketball coach was 'Steve Who.' Two games later he's establishing his own identity, Steve Fisher.

"It's an accident and opportunity," Fisher said of his move into the limelight. "Timing is so crucial in everything you do."

Fisher has both the fewest wins of any coach to appear in the NCAA tournament (two) and the highest winning percentage (2-0).

Both are the result of Bill Frieder deciding March 15 to take the Arizona State job and Michigan athletic director Bo Schembechler's decision to elevate assistant coach Fisher for the NCAA tournament.

An incident that mildly irks Fisher demonstrates his position. Michigan didn't bother sending its own pep band to Atlanta for the first two NCAA tournament games. Instead it hired a local college band and outfitted it with Michigan hats.

At one point in the second game someone in the band held up a sign that read, 'Fake Band.' Then another that said, 'Fake Coach.' But that isn't so, there's nothing phony about Fisher.

"I'm usually the guy in the locker room looking at films,"

Fisher said during an interview. "Just doing what I'm doing now is the biggest change. I'm doing my best not to let it be a distraction."

Michigan has defeated, with some difficulty, both Xavier and South Alabama to earn an NCAA Regional game Thursday against North Carolina.

"Most people, had we not won either of our first two games, would probably have blamed Bill Frieder," Fisher said. "The fact the kids have seen me in the setting of coach will help."

Michigan's winning both games under Fisher has increased his chances of succeeding Frieder from maybe .05 up to at least 50 percent. And the increased visibility has made it almost certain Fisher will be a head coach for somebody next season.

"I have not, and people probably won't believe me, I have not put pressure on myself to win games for personal reasons," Fisher said. "I directed all my efforts at getting our kids ready for the games."

Fisher had considerable input with Frieder, both in planning practices and in-game strategy.

"I'm no longer the one who makes the suggestions," Fisher said. "I make the decisions. I had a lot of input, but he made the decisions. He listened to a lot of things I said and sometimes he took my advice. But sometimes he listened and did what he wanted anyway."

Fisher has quickly become accepted as the boss by his players. That showed in the second game when Michigan drastically cut its fouls in the second half, yet became more aggressive in coming from behind to beat South Alabama.

Fisher has displayed during games the same relative demeanor as a head coach he did as an assistant — aware of what's going on but very low-key about it.

If you had to choose a coach he resembles in court-side manner you'd pick Len Wilkens.

Wilkens is not a screamer or arm-waver. What he does, and Fisher too, is get close to the officials when they get near the bench and try to reason with them. He yells across the court, but to make sure his point is heard and not to berate.

"Maybe I should be more vociferous," Fisher said. "I probably should be. But there's a time and place to get really emphatic. There are times you want to get a technical."

Assistant coach sees flaws in recruiting theories

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

If college basketball had a national recruiting coordinator, and Saluki assistant coach Bobby McCullum held the position, you can bet he'd make a few changes.

"When you recruit a junior college player the immediate perception is they are not good students," McCullum said. "When you recruit a transfer from (a four-year school) they are a head case, or on drugs and cause problems."

"There is a bad picture painted, and I think it is unfair. It is held by the media and people in the university that are just ignorant to college athletics. It is just that simple."

McCullum said not all recruits are placed in a bad light, adding that the institution they attend plays a big part.

"If a kid transfers from UNLV, Texas-El Paso or Oklahoma, or say those programs take a transfer, then they're publically criticized," McCullum said. "It is OK for the ACC (Atlantic Coast Conference) to take a transfer. It is OK for a kid to transfer from Indiana to another institution."

"If a kid transfers from Indiana, the perception is they couldn't get along with (head coach Bob) Knight. Because a kid leaves UTEP or Oklahoma does not make him a bad kid. It is OK for certain schools to take transfers and not for others because of the image schools have."

Assistant coaches have to investigate the background of transfers coming to their school, McCullum said.

"You just can't go out and accept a transfer without checking the institution where he came from," McCullum said. "You don't know how damaged the goods are."

McCullum said former assistant coach Scott Howard handled the transferring of Jerry Jones from UTEP to SIU-C, and he did not know what steps Howard took to check Jones' past history.

Jones was named in a published report by a New York newspaper that said he and two other UTEP players received money while attending the school. Jones has denied a "such allegations."

Because there is a need for a background check, it should not influence the way a coach looks at a recruit based on the institution the transfer is coming from, McCullum said.

"If a kid contacted me from UNLV I would be no more apprehensive than one from North Carolina State or Tennessee," McCullum said. "I think it would be unfair to that kid to judge him and make him guilty by association."

Claims that transfers from four-year schools and junior colleges are troublemakers is a generalization that does not take all situations into consideration, McCullum said.

"I would venture to say 40 to 50 percent of the kids at junior colleges hadn't reached their full potential at the end of high school," McCullum said.

"They were late bloomers or got passed over. Maybe the school over recruited or made a mistake in evaluating a player."

McCullum said the examination process is the same for a high school and JUCO, simply because both types of players have finished their eligibility at their respective institution and are ready to move on.

A former coach at South Alabama, McCullum said he was involved in the transfer of several players from four year schools.

"For a kid to transfer from one institution to another, he has to be eligible academically at the one he is transferring from before he can be eligible for a scholarship at the one he is transferring to," McCullum said. "That is the first thing."

McCullum said the next step is to contact the athletic director and head coach of the program where the transfer is attending and clear permission to speak with that player.

"You do that to show you didn't initiate the contact, and to inform them you are interested," McCullum said.

The final step in signing is the release of the transfer from his scholarship, which has to be done before the new school can offer him their own scholarship, McCullum said.

"It is no more difficult than applying for a job," McCullum said. "You take a person's references and contact previous employers and with an athlete you contact the previous school and find out what high school he attended."

Hart says academics of athletes can be boosted with work

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

Athletics director Jim Hart said it will be business as usual concerning student-athletes and their academics, despite talk at Tuesday's Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee meeting that some players were not doing well.

"They have to learn to live in the real world," Hart said. "We can't lead them around by the hand forever. We hope they take the discipline they learn on the court and bring it into the classroom."

Hart said he will generally stay out of the academics portion of the athletics department, leaving that for the academic advisors.

"I'll leave that to the experts," Hart said. "I will ask for an update every once in a while, which they do give me anyway. We'll point things out to the athlete themselves and the coach."

"Maybe in an encouraging way a word from an administrator can help, but there will certainly not be any brow beating."

At Tuesday's IAAC meeting, member Patricia Medlin brought up the fact that the community had been discussing the possible loss of two basketball starters to poor grades.

Hart said if the "chit-chat," as Medlin referred to it, became true, it would be a hurdle the department would have to jump and then go on.

"You don't cry about it, but just move on," Hart said.

Hart said any problems with academics on the basketball team will have no effect on contract talks with head coach Rich Herrin, who has a two-year continuing contract at SIU-C. This is the review year under the contract terms.

"Rich doesn't go to school," Hart said.

Student-athletes push for representative to IAAC

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

George Black, president of the Intercollegiate Athletics Advisory Committee, wholeheartedly endorsed the proposition that a student-athlete be appointed to serve on the IAAC.

"I would encourage you to get a member on the committee," Black told the Student Athlete Advisory Board during Tuesday's regular meeting at the Davies Gymnasium lounge.

"No one knows the (athletics) program more than someone inside," Black said. "You can give a unique perspective on the problems."

The IAAC, an arm of Undergraduate Student Government, meets once a month and currently has 19 members. Officially, the IAAC holds no decision-making power. As a matter of record, though, its recommendations have been influential in the policy and operation of Saluki Athletics.

"The IAAC would benefit from having the athletes' direct experience," Black said.

Black did point out that the already-large membership of IAAC might serve as an obstacle to adding another member.

"You would have to convince USG," Black said. "In the past they have been skeptical of the athletes' attitude, that they might not represent an objective viewpoint."

USG viewpoints at IAAC meetings have been missing of late, though. Of the three USG representatives, only Kelly

Paris has attended meetings. A review of roll calls since September shows that Paris has made five of the seven meetings, while Odette Christie and Kris Fabian have yet to attend once.

"Two of the three members are not showing," Black said. "That's a waste of two votes. One of those two unused spots could be allocated to the athletes. But that's a matter entirely up to USG."

Bill Hall, president of USG, said at first glance the creation of a new position for a student-athlete representative had strong possibilities.

"My initial reaction is that it's a good idea," said Hall in an interview Tuesday. "I have no objection to that proposal as long as the students themselves make the selection."

Hall added that because of the ongoing grassroots movement among the academic community to eliminate football from the roster of sports offered by

Golf teams swing into spring season

Hartzog happy about chances despite youth

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

With five freshmen and three sophomores on his 10-player roster, one might think men's golf coach Lew Hartzog wasn't looking forward to a successful season.

One would think wrong, thinking like that.

"These kids can do what they think they can do," Hartzog said. "I think they are beginning to realize they are good. The difference between a good team and a great team is when they decide to play golf."

But despite a characteristically optimistic attitude, Hartzog does not deny that there is a substantial amount of fresh blood on the course.

"We are so young it is pathetic," Hartzog said.

Junior Mike Cowen and sophomores Britt Pavelonis and Mark Bellas are the people Hartzog said he is looking to get the ball rolling this spring.

"I am really looking forward to an outstanding year out of those three," Hartzog said. "Cowen is playing horribly right now. He is a great kid and should be our leader instead of the fifth or sixth spot he has been playing. I'm not real worried because he is too good a golfer."

"Pavelonis has been very solid so far and Bellas is playing extremely well. Bellas has been long, and when you hear people 'ohhh' and 'ahhh' that is not good."

Hartzog is also looking for results from freshman Dirk Klapprott, a highly touted

Women hope experience can lead to 2nd straight league title

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

The women's golf team is out to break an odd jinx.

Crowned Gateway Conference champions in 1984, 1986 and 1988, coach Diane Daugherty is hoping 1989 is the odd year out for the Salukis.

"I'm real encouraged," Daugherty said. "We did not have a successful fall season. Julie (Shumaker) had a devastating fall and it really hurt us. We have started the spring high like last year. We had an outstanding spring last year."

Daugherty will be counting on juniors Shumaker, the defending conference champion, and Lisa Merritt in their quest for the conference title.

Shumaker suffered swing problems in the fall, and her scoring average jumped from 81.1 to 86.4. Daugherty thinks Shumaker will come back strong.

"It is a tough kind of situation when you lose your confidence, and she completely lost all her confidence," Daugherty said. "She felt her weakness was not hitting far enough, and something just went haywire and she started to shank the ball. She got to the point where she just wanted (the season) to be over."

"She hasn't touched a club in a while, and I think that is the best for her. She has to put it behind her. Everyone gets into slumps."

Shumaker will return to campus this weekend, after having her tonsils out over spring break.

Merritt returns with an 81.2

average, including three rounds in the 70s. She shot a career-low 76 on the Illinois State golf course in Normal, the site of this year's Gateway tournament.

Daugherty has high hopes for freshman Anne Childress, but the Indiana native may have suffered a broken wrist.

Coach Diane Daugherty is counting on juniors Julie Shumaker and Lisa Merritt for low scoring.

She will see a doctor this afternoon.

"Last fall she had trouble with her right wrist and was treated for tendonitis," Daugherty said. "It disappeared, but on the second day of the Florida trip, she complained about it hurting. A doctor looked at it and told her it was tendonitis, but it may be a fracture."

The Salukis picked up an early season plus on their Florida trip, as they defeated early Gateway favorites Illinois State and Wichita State in a tournament.

"Us beating them was a real shot in the arm, especially without Julie," Daugherty said. "Those are our two rivals and the only other two with any hope of winning the conference."

Rounding out the roster are senior Peggy Ellsworth, junior Lisa Johnson and freshmen Gina Giaccone and Debbie Minter.

"We are working hard in the weight room right now," Daugherty said.

Baseball team loses twin bill as Jones suffers worst start

By Troy Taylor
Staff Writer

After rallying to tie in the seventh inning, the baseball Salukis let the second game of its doubleheader at Arkansas State slip away in extra innings 9-6 when the Indians' John Pattillo scored on a bases-loaded passed ball in the eighth.

Coupled with Arkansas State's 7-5 victory in the first game, the Salukis saw their record drop to 4-9. It is the worst start ever for 20-year Coach Itchy Jones, and the slowest beginning since Abe Martin's 1962 team won only four of its first 13 games.

The Salukis play at Southeast Missouri (CS) at 2:30 p.m. today in Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Arkansas State (3-11) jumped to a 5-1 lead, but Rick Damico hit a three-run home run in the top of the third to bring the Salukis within one.

Damico, a junior outfielder who throws right but bats from the left side, also had two doubles and 4 RBIs.

Akansas State scored in the third, both teams added two runs in the fifth, and SIUC added run in the sixth to trail 8-7.

Rozelle steps down from NFL

PALM DESERT, Calif. (UPI) — Pete Rozelle, who guided the NFL from an uncertain enterprise to a multimillion-dollar industry, Wednesday resigned as commissioner after holding the job 30 years.

He made the surprise announcement at the NFL owners' meeting and said he will remain commissioner until the league finds a successor. It was not immediately clear who would replace Rozelle, often considered the most powerful official in American sports.

Rozelle, 63, said he made the decision last October, saying he wanted to spend more time with his family.

Rozelle became commissioner in 1960, shortly before the NFL entered its golden age of television that culminated with its latest multimillion-dollar contract with the networks.
