Officials talk redistricting

By Tracy Moss
Administration Writer

University and state officials had a hearing in an empty auditorium Monday at Lesar Law Building about a political issue that could affect every person in the state of Illinois.

The issue was legislative redistricting, and members of the Illinois Redistricting Process Review Commission listened to ideas and recommendations of SIUC professors concerning changes in the redistricting process.

Jeffrey Ladd, chairman of the commission, said attention to the problem has dissolved rapidly since the last redrawing of the map in 1990.

Ladd began the hearing by saying the low attendance was not surprising.

"The lack of concern is not atypical of the state," he said.

John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts and a member of the review commission, said it is hard to sustain interest because redistricting concerns constitutional law and the public tends to be intimidated at the mention of constitutional law.

Bus plan moves along

By Katie Morrison
Administration Writer

Starting a transit service in Carbondale has not been an easy task, but after much research and surveying, the program has reached phase five in a six phase proposal.

In April 1988, 600 SIUC students were surveyed concerning the idea of a fee increase to start a transit service.

The students gave their support, but the University was unable to get state and federal funding needed for the program.

SIUC then began working with the city of Carbondale in order to get the funding.

"The University couldn't receive the funds because it's not a municipality," Dave Madlener, chairman of the Jackson County Transit District and the Saluki Mass Transit Advisory Board, said.

In 1989, a consultant was hired by the University and city to outline the feasibility of a transit service.

The final recommendations of the feasibility study are the basis for phase five.

An advisory board will meet today to discuss the results of the

Family sues Checkers bar owners, employees

By Joe Littrell
Police Writer

The family of an SIUC student who died last month is seeking more than $3.5 million in a lawsuit filed against the operators and six employees of a local nightclub.

Adelbert Waight, father of Jose Waight, filed the suit through his attorneys, the firm of Gilbert, Kimmel, Huffman, and Prosser, against Avanti Group Ltd., the owners and operators of Checkers nightclub, 760 E. Grand, and six of the bouncers at the bar.

Waight died of asphyxiation Feb. 5 following a confrontation with employees at the nightclub. A coroner's jury ruled that the death was accidental.

The four-count lawsuit alleges that Waight's death was the result of one or more possible actions by the nightclub's owners, including that they negligently:

- trained and selected bouncers and supervisory personnel,
- permitted the nightclub to become dangerously overcrowded,
- failed to employ a sufficient number of bouncers or supervisory personnel to maintain the adequate safety among the patrons.
- employed bouncers and supervisory personnel who were unqualified, immature and unable to safely manage and control the patrons,
- permitted bouncers and supervisory personnel to choke Waight depriving him of breath,
- permitted bouncers and personnel to use excessive and lethal force on Waight and
- failed to administer artificial respiration and other emergency medical care so that Waight asphyxiated.

The six bouncers named in the lawsuit — Martin Todd Lewis, Charles Hicks, Steven Crawford, Edmund Bart, Jeffrey Judd, Richard Wojick — were indicted March 8 on charges of involuntary manslaughter, aggravated battery, battery and reckless conduct.

The suit alleges that the bouncers "did violently, wantonly, and maliciously batter and strike" Waight and "intended to injure" and cause him "great bodily harm."

Three of the four counts request $15,000 in damages, the fourth count asking for $500,000 from each of the defendants.

An unrelated suit was filed against the Avanti Group Ltd. three days after the Waight lawsuit by Ahmed Abusharbin that alleged employees of the nightclub beat him about the head and face April 18, 1992, at about 1:45 a.m. The suit is asking for more than $15,000.

Don Prosser, one of Waight's attorneys, said Abusharbin's suit should have no effect on the family's suit.

Bar entry age discussion prompts groups to consider drinking options

By Katie Morrison
Special Assignment Writer

The issue of raising the bar entry age in Carbondale brings forward the questions of what alternatives students will have for weekend entertainment.

SIUC is working on campus activities that would allow students to socialize without being in the bars.

The Student Programming Council and the Recreation Center are discussing new events to add to already existing ones as an alternative to the bars.

"There's a possibility that we will have more music, guest speakers and maybe start a comedy series," Jason Beverlin, executive chairman of SPC, said.

SPC already sponsors movies on Friday and Saturday nights and the Coffee House on Thursdays. Comedians occasionally are part of the weekend programs as well.

The alternatives provided to students need to be creative, said Barb Fijolek, coordinator of alcohol and drug education at the Wellness Center.

"We can't rush in with a single solution," Fijolek said.

"There's a combination of

Devils go downtown to dunk Dawggs

By Kevin Bergquist

ROSEMONT — Duke's chances of a three-peat are over, but the three were very much alive in the Blue Devils' romp over the Salukis in the first round of the NCAA Tournament.

Duke connected on a Midwest Region record 14 3-pointers to run away and hide from the overmatched Salukis, 105-70. Duke's trey marksmanship enabled the Blue Devils to shoot 63 percent for the game.

"Our 3-point shooting was phenomenal," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "When you shoot 74, 75 percent from 3-point range, it's kind of crazy."

Crazy was what Bobby Hurley went from the outside. The All-American guard was unconscious from behind the 3-point stripe, knocking down 6 of 7 treys on the way to a game-high 25 points.

"Usually, if I connect on a few shots early on, I look for it a little more," Hurley said. "I get more confidence with every shot I make."

While Hurley and his Duke teammates were gaining confidence, the Salukis' bubble was burst early in the contest. Except for a brief 4-3 SIUC lead on a jump shot by Chris Lowery, the Salukis were never in the game. A 26-4 run put the game out of reach with 10 minutes to go in the first half.

"I think you always realize that this can happen in a game; we just hoped it wouldn't happen," SIUC head coach Rich Herrin said. "They have a very fine basketball team, even greater than we anticipated."

The Salukis battled in vain to get back in the contest, but Duke's experience and continued hot shooting delivered the knockout blow to SIUC's NCAA Tournament hopes.

"When we jumped out to a 15-18 point lead, we wanted to try and jump on them and put them away," Hurley said. "If you have a team down, you want to keep them down and not allow them the chance to get back in the game."

Despite the final margin, several Salukis showed that SIUC's cupboard will be far from bare next season. Sophomore guard Paul Lusk led the team with 11 points, while fellow sophomore Marcus Timmons

Seniors 'laid it on the line' for SIUC

By Kevin Bergquist

ROSEMONT — The SIUC men's basketball program may be taking the next step with its appearance in the NCAA Tournament, but two Salukis won't be around to help the team in its attempt to go to the next level.

Seniors Ashraf Amaya and Tyrone Bell played their last games in a Saluki uniform in Thursday night's loss to Duke, but their contributions to the program will not soon be forgotten by their coach.

"I am very disappointed these young men will not be with us," SIUC head coach Rich Herrin said.

"It has been a privilege to coach them. They laid it on the line."

Amaya checked out with 10 points and three rebounds against the Blue Devils.

"It leaves a bad taste in my mouth personally. I wanted to achieve so much more success," Amaya said. "I don't think we even showed the tip of the iceberg of how good our team is."

Amaya may have a chance to achieve that success if the National Basketball Association calls his number in June.

"Amaya is a very active player. There really isn't a part of the game he doesn't do fairly well," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said.

"I would consider him a real prospect for the next level."

Bell notched 9 points and a pair of steals in his final game for SIUC.

"We had a great year, and you can't let one negative overshadow the year we had," Bell said.

"Getting here and being the first team from SIU in 17 years; you can't take that away from us."

SIUC's Kelly Firth attempts to save the ball in the Missouri Valley Conference Tournament championship game March 13 in Springfield, Mo. The Salukis lost a heartbreaker to the Bears.

By Sanjay Seth

SPRINGFIELD, Mo.—Even a fourth consecutive conference tournament final with Southwest Missouri State University could not prevent a loss by the SIUC women's basketball team.

The inaugural Missouri Valley Conference Tournament ended in a close 54-53 victory for the Bears before 8,662 at the Hammons Center.

With seven seconds left in the game, freshman center LaTanya Davis laid up a right side tip to gain the final two points that sealed the victory for the Bears.

Saluki senior Anita Scott lunged a throw from half court that missed the board wide at the buzzer and SIUC's hopes to be the MVC champions sunk.

Disappointment was painted on the faces of the small, but persistent, group of Saluki fans, which included SIUC President John C. Guyon.

The dejected Saluki team and Coach Cindy Scott refused comment after the game and did not appear at the postgame press conference.

Mitch Parkinson, SIUC women's sports information director, said this was only the second time in her career that Scott had failed to grant an interview after a game.

"She is understandably upset and this loss was just too close," Parkinson said. "It is hard to accept that this is one game that really got away."

Scott, in her 16th year with the Salukis, also lost her father to cancer very recently, Parkinson said.

"Coach Scott was very emotional when I saw her just now," Parkinson said. "Everything just came down hard today."

SMSU coach Cheryl Burnett said her team had the utmost respect for Scott and the Salukis.

"They countered almost everything we wanted to do to them," Burnett said. "They are obviously a well-coached team and they were prepared for us."

"We adjusted play when we needed to and did a great job. A prime example was the very last time we scored," Burnett said. "When Tonya (Baucum) got the ball, four people were there. She made an inside turn and found LaTanya. Thank the Lord LaTanya made it."

The loss extinguished SIUC's chances for a post-season bid, as both the NCAA and the NIT left the Salukis off their guest list.

Saluki high jumper nets 3rd in nation

By Jeff McIntire

In addition to the basketball Salukis, SIUC was represented at another NCAA national championship competition over spring break.

Saluki high jumper Cameron Wright fared better, however, placing third in the nation with a jump of 7-3 at the NCAA Indoor Track and Field Championships in Indianapolis.

"When you're third in the nation in your particular event and you're only a sophomore, that's quite an achievement," SIUC coach Bill Conell said. "He should be applauded for his accomplishment."

The mark also earned Wright All-American status.

"I'm very proud of that," Wright said.

Wright said that the

Playboy model to promote sale of April edition

By Andy Graham
Entertainment Writer

Sales of the April edition of Playboy magazine featuring SIUC are increasing now that students are back from spring break, and a local model is expected to give the issue a boost with an autograph session today.

Along with students from nine other schools, Playboy magazine has featured students from SIUC in its annual April college issue.

The public will have the opportunity to get copies of the issue signed by Tamara Unverzagt, an SIUC student who modeled in the magazine, from noon to 2 p.m. today at Discount Den, 811 S. Illinois Ave.

"The issue is selling well, and I am sure that we will have have a lot of people come," said Dennis Haworth, manager of Discount Den.

The April issue of Playboy hit the stands while students were on break, though it still sold well. When students returned, stores began selling the issues quickly.

"We are sold out and just can't get enough," said Lee Blankenship, manager of 710 Bookstore, 710 S. Illinois Ave. "To my knowledge, this has never happened before."

Discount Den has had similar signings before at its 14 other stores for the past three years. Last week, the

Perot support recruited on campus

By Shawna Donovan
General Assignment Writer

United We Stand, America, a grassroots organization founded by Ross Perot, has hit Southern Illinois, even including what organizers claim is the first university chapter in the United States.

The organization's purpose is to make government be responsible to the needs of the American people.

About 20 anxious Jackson County supporters gathered Sunday to watch former presidential candidate Ross Perot's infomercial. They were asked to announce their support for a national referendum to reform the U.S. government.

Perot called upon the American people to stand up and be counted. "I urge the American people to stand up and take back their government," Perot said.

Jackson County coordinator Lawrence Aken of Murphysboro said he believes in what Perot has said.

"It is all about who has their hand in the cookie jar," Aken said. "We need to know who is spending the money and why. We want reform."

United We Stand was organized in November 1992 following the presidential election.

"We have a lot of people involved that are hard-line Republicans and Democrats," Aken said. "It is not a party but an organization to inform the American people that we need to get their country back."

Mark Motter, SIUC coordinator and junior in electrical engineering technology from Peoria, said the organization will change the United States for the better.

Alternatives to Clinton proposals discussed by activists

By Angela L. Hyland
Special Assignment Writer

Military budget cuts recommended by President Bill Clinton are a step in the right direction, but a lot more needs to be done, said local political activists working to gain support for an alternative plan.

The Southern Illinois Coalition for New Federal Budget Priorities will discuss an alternative to Clinton's budget proposal at 10 a.m. today at Eureka Hayes Center Community Room, 441 E. Willow St.

The Common Sense Budget, proposed by the Congressional Black Caucus and the Progressive Caucus, would cut $30 billion from the proposed $264 billion dollar military budget, said Amy Weber, Southern Illinois Peace Coalition member and moderator of today's news conference. This money could be redirected to other programs within local communities, she said.

"Money could go toward education, health care, housing, job training programs and the environment," Weber said.

The alternative budget looks at many of these areas, she said. Georgeann Hartzog, a member of the Southern Illinois Coalition for New Federal Budget

The proposed budget is an improvement over the old plan, but coalition members do not rate it very highly.

After looking at the proposed budget, local coalition members gave it a C-.

"The passing grade shows (the plan) does represent some of the changes people wanted when they elected Clinton," Weber said, "but even if the proposed budget goes through, it's still maintaining the military budget at Cold War levels."

Although Clinton's proposal would reduce the military budget by $30 billion dollars, it will take five years, not one year as proposed in the alternative plan, she said.

Money could go toward education, health care, housing, job training programs and the environment, Weber said.

The alternative budget looks at many of these areas, she said. Georgeann Hartzog, a member of the Southern Illinois Coalition for New Federal Budget Priorities, said changes in current health insurance policies could reduce considerably the amount of money taxpayers spend.

A single payer system, where individuals paid one central organization, could reduce insurance costs and make it available to everyone, Hartzog said.

Medicare currently operates under such a system, she said.

"By having one agency — for the employed, the unemployed, for welfare recipients — everyone would be provided for," Hartzog said. "An agency like Medicare would be able to hold costs down. It would insure places met certain standards."

One of the problems with current insurance companies is the high percentage of money that goes toward administration costs, she said.

With the current system, 10 to 15 percent goes toward administration costs. Medicaid has an overhead of only 2 to 3 percent, she said.

"We are looking to move young people. We are the first University chapter in the nation. We looking to be a model," Motter said. "I look at my son, and it is for him. It is for the future generations."

SIUC United We Stand has more than 100 members.

The ballots were passed out as the program began.

Perot went through each question and asked people to cast their vote.

"Do you believe that government should be able to do this?" Perot said. "You need to vote to have your voice heard."

The detached ballots from the TV Guide were collected and will travel to Kentucky and then to Dallas. The organization will tabulate them and send them to each congressman by district.

"We are very positive about the turnout," Motter said. "His speech was very positive, too."

Frank Sehnert, a Carbondale resident, said he hopes the organization will help change things.

"Perot's program was excellent," Sehnert said. "We have to get things back. We have an obligation to educate ourselves about the facts and issues. We need to know what is going on. We have to be informed."

Lance Chasen, Carbondale city coordinator and sophomore in psychology from Chicago, said Perot has done a great service to America.

"He has awakened some people. You see politicians holding town hall meetings now and they really want to know what people feel," Chasen said. "We just need to be aware."

Finally: Edgar gives universities a break

STATE INSTITUTIONS HAVE BEEN getting bad news the past couple years. This year they got some good news, but the General Assembly must decide if it will become a reality.

The state's colleges and universities received the same budgets for 1991-92 and 1992-93 as they did in 1990-91.

They requested about 3 percent in increases for operations and grants and capital improvements each year, and those requests were echoed by the Illinois Board of Higher Education. But the state was weak financially and had to freeze or decrease funding for virtually all its programs.

So higher education suffered with the rest of the state, not even getting money to cover the rate of inflation. Universities cut costs and reallocated where they could. They had to sacrifice some programs to keep others flourishing.

FINALLY, THE SUFFERING may be waning. In his State of the State address, Gov. Jim Edgar said Illinois had turned the corner financially. He said he would recommend increases for some programs for the first time in his term.

And he made education a priority. Edgar recommended earlier this month that education and child welfare programs receive a more than $300 million funding hike. He called for a $37 million, or 2.3 percent, increase for higher education.

Although that figure is less than the $72 million, or 3.8 percent, increase recommended by IBHE, it is a much needed boost after three years at the same plateau.

It also was an encouraging sign from Edgar, who campaigned to be the "education" governor, that education was one of the top three priorities in his proposed budget. It showed the governor's dedication to invest in the future of Illinois by bolstering the education of its future leaders.

GOV. EDGAR HAS TAKEN the first step in three years to help universities strengthen their existing programs and possibly create new ones. The next move will be made by the General Assembly, which will create a budget bill.

The Legislature typically will take some of the available money from the governor's priority programs and will fund other programs it thinks are important.

But the need is great for education, and the General Assembly must realize that. It too must invest in the future of the state.

The ball is in the legislators' court; the legislators should return it to the governor unchanged.

Quotable Quotes

Yeltsin's ruling better than a coup

The Washington Post

"The saving feature of Boris Yeltsin's otherwise dangerous imposition of 'special rule' is that he is not applying force but is in fact urging the army to stay neutral and on the sidelines while an early national vote is organized to give the people their due say.

So while he is doing something terribly risky, it is not a coup. It is, rather, a desperate expedient, which he was forced by the resistance of a parliament that was created in the Soviet era out of — considerably but not completely — Soviet-era political elements.

By contrast, Yeltsin owes his own far greater legitimacy to popular election. He now has called an even grander popular election on a post-Communist constitution and on a new system of presidential rule as well.

Sunday the parliament started organizing a process for Yeltsin's early impeachment. Certainly it is scary to see two opposing lines of power coming into ever-tenser confrontation. But again the saving feature of the parliament's response is that it too remains in the political realm.

Russians know very well the meaning of tanks in the street. Tanks were in the street in August 1991; Yeltsin bravely faced them down. It helps to remember that at his side at that moment of truth was Ruslan Khasbulatov, the parliamentary leader who is now his principal antagonist.

If the two still agree the army cannot be allowed to become the arbiter of political struggle, Russia could escape the crisis relatively unscathed.

Letters to the Editor

Labeling people by religion misleading

I saw on television the March 4 arrest of a suspected Arab terrorist for the bombing of the World Trade Center.

I am an African-American Muslim living here in the United States. I am appalled at the use of the words 'Islamic' and 'Muslim' every time Arab groups are accused or convicted of terrorist acts. The man (suspect in custody) is an Arab American who happens to be a Muslim.

There are at least one billion Muslims in the world today (Arabs happen to represent only one-fifth of the Muslim population) and the Holy Qur'an prohibits us from hating individuals with whom we are not at war.

The people who work at the World Trade Center are innocent people.

The press and others must become cognizant of the words they use.

Inappropriate words and titles can mislead people. The descendants of slaves do not label their ancestors' oppressors as Christians. Nor do the native Americans. Instead they use their ethnic labels, such as Portuguese, English, etc. No one labeled the participants of the Civil War and World Wars I and II as Christian fundamentals.

Any Muslims who use Islamic terms for their organizations should adhere to their holy criterion and should not commit wrongful acts that would implicate us all. I truly sympathize with all victims of terrorism and hope that the culprits are brought to justice.

There are a vast majority of sincere Muslim Americans, Indonesians, Arabs, Africans, etc. Let's not tarnish their character by giving inappropriate titles to people who commit acts of terrorism.

Besides we think in terms of our culture, ethnicity, and environment. All Muslims should speak out against injustice, no matter who commits these crimes against humanity. If anyone is offended by this letter, I hope that God will forgive me. — Isma'lii Abdul-Hakim, senior, linguistics

Community should be more selfless

"The homosexual is by nature predatory and therefore deserves no place in society, let alone the military." For close to a week and a half, these words stood unchallenged.

This is a strong indication that the SIUC community may be one of the most apathetic in the state.

The purpose for my writing is not simply to condemn the feeble speculations and accusations of Brad F. Camis, but also to awaken the SIUC to its cruel indifference towards the problems of others and the danger this attitude presents.

In the days since Mr. Camis' letter was printed, I have seen only one response. That alone is enough evidence to condemn this campus as one where, if you are the minority, you can expect to be persecuted without hope of anyone caring enough to help.

For example, the opening sentence of Mr. Camis' letter, which is quoted above, indicates something very significant.

Mr. Camis has conveniently defined homosexuality for us. Do we consider this the highly rationalized definition of an authority, or are we as a community too lazy and selfish to challenge Mr. Camis' presumed definition?

To many of you, this may not seem like a big deal. However when we as a community let this sort of thing go unchallenged, it is an indication that we have accepted it.

It is us saying OK to the Brad Camises, Wayne Helmers and Brad Striegels. We as a community have an ethical obligation to either challenge these attitudes now, or live with them later.

I know Brad Camis doesn't speak for rac. Does he speak for you? — Jay Andrew Fossier, senior, public relations

Kindness, honesty of worker, patron encouraging signs

On March 2 I was the very fortunate recipient of the kindness of two people who did not even know me.

After having lunch with a friend at Marketplace cafeteria in the Student Center, I walked away leaving my purse under the table. I realized my amazing carelessness a few minutes later and returned to the cafeteria to discover, not surprisingly, that my purse was no longer under the table.

A woman at the next table got my attention and told me she had given it to a cafeteria employee. I thanked her and was then approached by a smiling cafeteria worker, purse in hand.

I failed to get either woman's name, but want them to know how much I appreciate their honesty and helpfulness, and to let Marketplace know that their patrons and staff are the best! — Clare Mitchell, lecturer, recreation

TV station vows for movie rights for Waco story

The Washington Post

WACO, Texas—It is a mother's story, really, a mother who believes her son is misunderstood by the rest of the world. Or maybe it's about a lawyer, the Harvard graduate who joins a cult.

It could also be a family story—the mother and daughter who become the cult leader's "wives," the father who never loses faith.

And it is certainly the story of a law enforcement agency that saw four of its agents killed in the line of duty.

Most of all, it is the story of David Koresh, "the Sinfid Messiah," as the Waco Tribune-Herald called him before Koresh and the Branch Davidians became the latest peltative to network television's craving for real-life drama.

"It's a no-brainer," said one producer, feeling no need to explain the made-for-TV movie possibilities of a tale that seems to combine every element of tabloid fantasies except for the return of Elvis.

There are at least as many ways to tell the story as Koresh had wives—19, by one count—and as there are men and women holed up in Ranch Apocalypse—99. But it is hard to have reality in reality programs, unless some of the real people involved allow their stories to be told. And so while the standoff between Koresh's followers and federal authorities enters its fourth week without resolution, a second siege of Waco has gone on behind the scenes.

Part covert operation, part country auction, this fight for "rights" is described as a "feeding frenzy" by some who have participated in it. It's the latest turn in an extraordinary few months for reality programming that began with high ratings for no fewer than three movies about "Long Island Lolita." Amy Fisher and has continued with bidding wars for the rights to the stories of stranded motorists in Nevada, lost skiers in Colorado and survivors of the bombing of New York's World Trade Center.

"These things tend to go in waves," said Perry Simon, executive vice president at NBC, which has announced plans for movies on Waco, the World Trade Center bombing and Hurricane Andrew.

approaches needed, and we need to offer creative alternatives."

The Recreation Center is considering new programs as well. "We may make adjustments in hours that the Rec is open," Mike Dunn, director of office of intramural-recreational sports, said. "Each department is working on ideas as alternatives."

Councilman John Mills made the initial proposal to raise bar entry age and said the private sector, not the city, could provide alternatives.

"The city and University don't have the funds," Mills said. "The private sector needs to step forward, but it won't because the market is not there."

"The fact is, people are not going to take big chances financially," he said.

City Manager Jeff Doherty said the city is not planning any alternatives.

"We are encouraging students to look to the campus," Doherty said. "There are lots of activities in and around the Student Center."

Fijolek said on a college campus where 90 percent of the student population drinks, the alternatives need to be realistic.

The public hearing on this issue is Thursday with the Liquor Advisory Board.

The board was asked to look into bar reforms following the death of an SIUC student at a local nightclub.

study. "Phase five is a draft of the final plan," Madlener said. "The meeting is an opportunity to make last minute suggestions before the final phase."

The other steps of the feasibility study included a survey of residents and non-residents of Carbondale, followed up by an assessment of the information gathered, Madlener said.

"We looked at two things for this study," feasibility consultant John Priede said. "First there was an attitude and needs survey to see how students and non-students felt about the possibility of a transit service. Then we looked to other universities with transit programs, focusing on ridership and transportation characteristics."

Alternative plans were developed based on the survey and from these alternatives, one was picked.

The results of the study recommend that there are eight routes and 13 buses.

There also will be late night shuttles on Friday and Saturday nights.

He also said the public does not make a direct connection between the work of this commission and reworking of districts in 1990 such as the 22nd Congressional District, which was shattered into three districts in 1990.

The district was split following the 1990 census, which showed that population growth shifted in the United States.

As a result, Illinois lost two seats in the U.S. House of Representatives, and the seats were given to other faster growing states.

The redrawing of district lines was a drawn-out process because political parties did not want to give up the seats.

A low level of interest in the hearings is good and bad, Jackson said. It is bad because the citizens are not involved enough, but good because it allows the commission to devise a plan not too tangled up in partisan complications.

Although citizen attendance was nonexistent, Jackson said the meeting was the best the commission has had so far.

"Very creative and innovative ideas were provided," Jackson said.

In reaction to public dismay over the redistricting process, Secretary of State George Ryan appointed the 29 member bipartisan commission to review the redistricting process.

The commission will have six public hearings across the state gathering citizen recommendations on how to improve the process.

The commission will eventually propose a constitutional amendment this summer and have another series of hearings to generate public feedback on the amendment.

David Kenney, an SIUC political

"The night shuttles will run basically in the central area of town," Madlener said. "They will center around the Strip, on-campus housing and nearby housing."

The final phase, phase six, is the actual implementation of the transit service. Phase six depends on the students.

On April 21, students will vote on a referendum for a $20 increase per semester of student fees.

This increase gives the students unlimited access to the buses at any time, Madlener said.

"We need a big turnout in the student election, and the election needs to be clean," Madlener said.

Students are not the only ones who will have access to the service. Non-student riders, however, will have to pay 50 cents a ride.

"The bottom line is it will cost $1.28 million to run the program," Madlener said. "We'll ask the feds for 50 percent, and student fees will cover the rest."

Estimated revenue from non-students is $60,000 with about 121,000 riders throughout the year, Madlener said.

science professor, presented his assessment of the current process and provided recommendations for change.

"The process has failed to get the job done; it has failed over and over again," he said.

"We are settling a great question of public policy with a lottery," Kenney said. "It is a very, very bad way to achieve public policy."

Kenney said the general assembly cannot do the job because legislators have too much self-interest involved.

He said party leaders cannot be party leaders unless they have the majority so they try to influence the drawing of the districts in order to maximize power.

"The assembly cannot accomplish the task in a fair and objectionable way," he said.

Kenney proposed giving the redistricting responsibility to a constitutional officer such as the secretary of state, because such a person would have no degree of self-interest and responsibility for the process would rest on one person.

"Responsibility for the process now is highly diffused," he said.

Kenney also recommended the establishment of a commission to deal with redistricting such as a commission comprised of law school deans from the state universities.

William A. Schoeder, an SIUC professor of law, recommended a process involving two commissions, one representing the House and the other the Senate.

The commission will hold four more hearings in Chicago, Bloomington, Edwardsville, and Rock Island.

Law students meet professionals, learn about changing technology

By Shawna Donovan
General Assignment Writer

SIU School of Law students had the chance to mingle with practicing lawyers and judges in an informal setting to learn about changing technology.

The Southern Illinois Inn of Court met March 9 to discuss changes in legal technology.

Twenty law students and practicing lawyers conversed with 25 masters, or judges and senior lawyers who have been practicing more than five years, during a presentation and dinner.

School of Law Dean Harry Haynsworth said it is a good opportunity for students to socialize with working lawyers.

"It is a chance for students to mix with professionals," Haynsworth said.

"I think it is important for professionals to get the chance to get in touch with students," he continued.

The American Inn of Court was founded by Chief Justice Burger in 1978.

It was an opportunity for legal professionals to get involved with law students and each other on an informal basis.

Burger was intrigued with the idea, which originated in England where judges and lawyers came together to associate in a natural, social setting during the 13th and 14th centuries.

Today, more than 180 Inn of Courts have been established in the United States.

Out of those 180, 85 are associated with law schools as part of an educational program.

Josh Rosen, a third-year law student from Evanston, said he enjoyed the meeting.

"It was a good time," Rosen said. "It was an opportunity for me to make contacts."

Haynsworth said the meetings are important.

"Professionals have the chance to hear law students air their problems and give feedback to them," Haynsworth said.

"In this day and age, ethics and other issues are of importance. Professionals and students get feedback from each other," he continued.

Pat Murphy, a lawyer with Winters, Brewster, Murphy, Crosby and Patchett of Marion, said he enjoys getting together.

"It is a good opportunity for all of us in the legal profession," Murphy said.

"We get to share ideas with each other," he added.

This is the first year for Southern Illinois Inn of Court. Judges and lawyers from all over the area participate.

Program to explain cultural dating differences

By Candace Samolinski/
International Writer

A Japanese student attending SIUC said she noticed significant differences between American dating styles and those in her home country.

"In America, relationships are formed much faster than they are in Japan," said Yae Takigawa, a junior in university studies. "Japan is changing and taking on more American values, but public displays of affection are still very uncommon."

These differences and others have given incentive to have the Women's Health Series organized by Diane Wissinger, foreign student advisor for International Programs and Services, and Joyce Combes, coordinator of special populations program for the Wellness Center.

The series will include workshops on health issues concerning international women. The workshops will focus on relationships, legal issues and women's health.

"One of the reasons we decided to have these workshops was because we realized cultural differences were present in these areas," Wissinger said. "Quite often body language, gestures and even eye contact can mean different things in different cultures. It is easy for these women to find themselves in a situation of misunderstanding."

The workshop on relationships will be from 3 p.m. until 5 p.m. today in the Student Center Missouri/Kaskaskia Room.

The discussion will include dating, courtship and marriage relationships. Special attention will be given to the understanding of cross-cultural attitudes from an American perspective.

"We had a dating seminar a year ago and found that dating in the United States is much more casual than in other countries," Wissinger said.

"If the relationship involves two people from separate cultures it is easy for one person to view where they stand very differently from the other."

Angie Taylor, who studied in Japan last semester, said she began dating someone while she was there.

"I found there to be no casual dating in Nakajo," she said. "There was no holding hands in public either."

"Sometimes it was hard to tell who was actually dating and who were just friends," she said.

Kimio Ando, a senior in chemistry, also is from Japan. She said, as in the United States, dating in Japan begins in junior high or high school.

"Most people begin dating in high school, but they become friends before they start dating," Ando said.

"Sexual relations begin much sooner here in the U.S."

Differences in relationships can be seen not only between the United States and Japan, but also in other countries.

Minfang Hsu, a junior in visual design, from Taiwan said she noticed people in her country are more conservative than Americans.

"We establish friendships first, then we start dating," Hsu said. "Chinese people are more traditional in this respect. It is OK to hold hands in the big city, but not in the countryside. Marriage also occurs much faster in American culture."

The way in which international women are approached by American men also is a different from that of other cultures.

"One big difference I noticed was when I lived in the dorms," Takigawa said.

"An American guy lived next door to me and he asked me my name, major and if I had a boyfriend."

"I told him I did not, and after that he would knock on my door and ask me to come to his room or go out with him," she said.

"Most girls in Japan always answer 'no' if a guy asks them if they are dating anyone. Now I know I will have to be more direct and answer 'yes' when a guy I don't want to be involved with asks me."

Takigawa said she has learned the word "available" means something different to Americans when they use it in terms of people.

"This word 'available' is very interesting to me," she said. "It means that a person is free to date when someone uses it to describe a person. That is something I never knew before."

The workshop dealing with legal issues will discuss the legal aspects of women's rights to protection them from sexual assault, harassment and violence within relationships.

This workshop will from 3 p.m. until 5 p.m. Thursday at the same location.

"Very often international women are not aware of their rights," Wissinger said.

"In some countries women have no rights protecting them against violence and harassment."

She said it was women's ignorance of the types of protection available to them that prompted this workshop.

The third workshop on women's health will be at the same time in the Student Center Thebes Room.

Issues will include birth control, stress management, sexually transmitted diseases and services available through the SIUC Health Service.

Anyone interested in more information may contact Diane Wissinger at 453-5774 or Joyce Combes at 453-7535.

store had a similar signing at Ball State, another one of the universities featured in the magazine.

"Discount Den has had several signings; it usually creates quite a bit of interest," said Paul Barlet, a representative of the Discount Den Corporation. "We don't really have to do anything but provide a table for the girls to sit at."

Twenty-four girls from 10 schools around the United States are featured in a pictorial section titled "Student Bodies." The front page of the section is a picture of students at a party on 505 Beverage.

Unverzagt, a junior in nursing from Riverton, was chosen from more than 200 students to represent SIUC in the issue.

Unverzagt said she does not know what to expect today when she promotes the issue by signing magazines at Discount Den.

"I just hope that people show up," Unverzagt said. "I have this nightmare where I am just sitting there saying, 'Hey you, do you want to buy one?'"

SIUC was not chosen to be in Playboy because of its party school reputation. SIUC was chosen randomly to represent a cross-section of schools around the country, Playboy special projects publicist Karen Bordstrom said.

"Due to rising tuition costs, more students working part time and the job market the way that it is, we found that students have no time to party anymore," she said. "There are no true party schools anymore. We just did a cross-section of schools."

Many companies rely on feedback for job evaluation

The Washington Post

Sooner or later it was bound to happen.

In the touchy-feely world of Total Quality Management, high-performance workplaces and customer satisfaction, it was only a matter of time before someone came up with the idea of "360-degree feedback."

The new approach to job-performance reviews is fast becoming the newest fad in employment training and job evaluations.

A new survey by Wyatt Co., a nationwide consulting firm, shows that 26 percent of the companies interviewed are now using some form of the new evaluation approach, and interest in it is growing at other firms.

"It's growing fast; we're getting a tremendous amount of interest in it," said Wyatt consultant Edward Bancroft in the company's Chicago office.

Just what is 360-degree feedback?

It is simple. Instead of getting evaluated on your job performance by your boss, you're now going to be judged by everybody: your boss, your co-workers, your subordinates and even your customers.

You'll be hit from all 360 degrees.

In the past, said Bancroft, performance reviews were "a matter almost entirely between a worker and his or her direct supervisor."

But that approach did not tell the full story of someone's performance on the job, and Wyatt surveys show an increasing number of companies becoming dissatisfied with the old approach.

So now, as companies become more customer-driven, Bancroft said, the broader approach to job evaluations "supports the customer focus of total quality management."

He said the broader evaluation systems help management determine "the core values" and "quality principles" of their company.

The Wyatt survey of 897 U.S. companies showed that in addition to the 26 percent that use customer evaluations, 15 percent include evaluation from peers and 12 percent obtain subordinate feedback in evaluating employees.

Perhaps a more important sign for the future is a finding from the survey that nearly a third of the companies were unhappy with the traditional job-evaluation process.

When Bancroft talks about customers, however, he said he means both the traditional customer outside the company who receives either goods or services from the firm and the company's own employees.

"If you really mean that you care about your customers, you consider employees as customers," he said.

Increase in student insurance fee topic of GPSC debate, future vote

By Erick J.B. Enriquez
General Assignment Writer

Members of the Graduate and Professional Student Council will decide whether they agree with a proposed student insurance premium increase when they vote at their next meeting Wednesday.

Skyrocketing claim costs are cited as the reason a $20 medical insurance fee is being proposed for students next fall.

"We are sensitive to the needs of our students," said Judy Jo Borgsmiller, secretary to the director of student health services. "It's important to have the support of the student body on the issue of this insurance fee increase. We want to continue to provide quality insurance coverage for students at a reasonable rate."

At the last meeting on March 10, members expressed concern that a possible increase in student insurance premiums for off-campus medical care is too steep.

Terence Buck, director of Student Health Services, informed the council at its meeting about the necessity of the fee increase.

"I've got no investment in maintaining this existing program,"

Buck said, "It's not mine, it's yours. My job is to steer the ship and get the best possible arrangement we can."

Buck negotiated with Acordia Insurance Inc. to bring the increase down from 76 percent to 34 percent. He said because Acordia predicts there will be more claims in 1993 based on the past two years, the increase will be by $20.

According to William Hall, vice president for administrative affairs, council members are concerned about the insurance premium hike.

"It's pretty obvious from tonight that many members of the council view this as a very significant hike in our health care fee," Hall said. "I think most of the council wants to see specifically what the need is, where the money is going to go, and what the specific costs are before we could approve such a fee increase."

In other business, nominations for the presidential and vice-presidential positions also were made.

■ president — Susan Hall, current president of GPSC

■ vice-president for administrative affairs — William Hall, and Rich Schell, second year law student from Polo.

■ vice-president for graduate school affairs — Carl Mowery, a doctoral student in English from Murray, Kentucky; William Hall; and Pat Diggle, a masters student in vocational education from Carbondale.

An election commission to supervise this semester's election also was nominated.

■ Dara Lawyer, a masters student in community development from Carbondale and commission officer last year.

■ Kitty Bonde, a masters student in anthropology from Carbondale

■ Mark Roemeling, a masters student in educational administration and higher education from Carbondale

The commission's duties include running the election and preparing a list of eligible voters. Only members of GPSC are eligible to vote in this election, which will take place April 15.

Wednesday's agenda includes: nominations of graduate council representatives, and a resolution placing a referendum on the student trustee election ballot regarding mass transit.

The meeting will be at 7 p.m. in Ballroom C of the Student Center.

Panel addresses ways to support battered spouses

By Shewna Donovan
General Assignment Writer

An organizer for a domestic violence seminar called the presentation on how to defend battered spouses a success.

Jeanette Nyden, Women's Law Forum president and third-year law student from Ingleside, said the seminar with Chicago-based lawyer Andrea Lyons helped teach the audience of 65 a lot about domestic violence cases.

"I was overwhelmed with the attendance," Nyden said. "It went over very well, and I was glad those people who attended got something out of it."

Lyons, who defends battered spouses at the Illinois Bureau of the Capital Resource Center, along with a six-member panel, described the psychological, social and legal aspects of domestic violence March 6 at the Lesar Law Building.

Panelists included Bobby Bennet, an activist from Affordable Budget Coalition; Chuck Grace, Jackson County state's attorney; Maria Barnwell, Land of Lincoln Legal Assistance; Tracy Corben and Julie Classen, Women's Center in Carbondale; and Rosemary Simaons, SIUC Counseling Center.

The panelists addressed different aspects of domestic violence.

Grace discussed domestic violence from the prosecutor's point of view.

"The most important thing was educating about people about the problem. It is a tremendous problem in the area as well as the country," Grace said.

"People do not know or understand about it unless they are directly involved with it. I think the seminar help open eyes of the community."

Those attending included area lawyers, students, faculty and public.

Nyden said some medical professionals also attended.

"Nurses came to recognize the signs of a battered spouse," Nyden said. "A lot of interested people came to find out about the psychological and legal aspects of battered spouses."

DAWGbytes

Teaching the old Dawg new tricks

Computer data security and you

After introducing the Dawg Bytes column to SIUC readers last fall, Information Technology decided a more user-friendly layout would make reading easier.

Senior design majors Stacy Snook and Andrés Salinas took charge of redesigning the column and spent two months putting the old Dawg Bytes through its paces. Although Associate Professor Ann Saunders supervised them, she says she gave the students a long leash.

"I asked Stacy and Andrés to work on this project because they showed a lot of imagination and creativity in class," says Saunders, who is Dawg Bytes' art director. "I've provided some constructive criticism, but they have demonstrated a great deal of responsibility in creating this piece. It's worked out very well."

Snook and Salinas will take turns designing the issues. Snook says she learned much during the 25 hours she spent on the premiere issue. "It was exciting to finally be able to plug stories into the design we had been working on for so long," she says.

Salinas, who designed this issue, agrees. "I loved working on it. It was an honor." -Db

Computer data security Experts say accidents or human error account for 50 to 60 percent of all data loss. This means you can avoid it more than half of the time. Just follow these rules:

1. Keep your password to yourself. Don't loan it to anyone or write it down and post it near your terminal.

Change your password every 30 days or so—more often if you work with sensitive data such as personnel information. The University community isn't exempt from the temptation to alter, copy, steal or destroy data. Even someone without evil intent may erase important data accidentally in the process of doing something else.

2. Classify information based on the level of security it requires, and allow access only by authorized users. Assign a list of authorized user IDs, and update it often.

3. Never walk away from your terminal without logging off and/or locking it. Many people think they can leave the room for just a moment without worrying about their data. However, if you don't log off or lock your machine, you leave the door wide open for someone to blunder (or plunder) through your files. It doesn't take much time to cause a lot of damage.

4. Protect your diskettes by labeling and storing them securely, under lock and key if necessary. Make backup copies regularly, and store them at a separate location.

Many people leave diskettes lying around their offices where anyone can pick them up (or throw them away if they look like trash). Data stored on diskettes also can be erased accidentally if placed near magnets or devices that emit electromagnetic pulses such as phones or computer terminals. And spilled drinks, food, cigarettes, staples, folds or paper clips can cause irreparable damage.

5. Know and obey software copyright laws and licensing restrictions. Don't make, use or have unauthorized or illegal duplicates—they could cause you or the University big trouble.

Increasingly, software vendors are suing companies where employees have illegally copied their products. In addition to breaking the law, when you duplicate software you may unwittingly pass on a virus by copying from an infected diskette. -Db

"Human error accounts for 50 to 60 percent of all data loss"

Security JARGON*

Password: Your primary tool for protecting computer data. When choosing one for your local network, make it five characters or longer (the bigger it is, the harder it is to crack). Stay away from obvious words such as family names. A nonsense password is best.

Userid: Used in combination with your password, this gives you access to campus computing resources. Those created and assigned by Information Technology are meaningless jumbles of numbers and letters, but now you can make your own using four to eight numbers and/or letters (but nothing offensive!).

Infected Diskette: One that carries a virus—a program that destroys data and / or software with or without the knowledge of the user. You can protect your hard drive and diskette by getting a free copy of virus protection software from the computer learning centers.

Editorial Design & Illustration Direction

Back it up, or you may lose it!

People often learn the value of backing up data the hard way. A hard disk or power failure, accidental erasure, fire or other disaster can strike without warning and wipe out information on your machine's hard drive. If you don't have a backup in a safe place, that data and the effort you put into collecting it goes down the drain.

PCs connected by local area networks (LANs) may be especially vulnerable to data loss. Many LAN administrators don't back up their network data on hard disk space because most of it is on individual PCs and not shared by the network.

Information Technology urges you to develop a backing-up habit. Depending on the importance of the information and how often it is revised, you may need to do this weekly or even daily.

You can back up data in several ways. The most common is to create a copy of the information in your hard drive on a floppy diskette. If you do this, remember that loose diskettes not filed in a secure place are easily lost or damaged.

Large files aren't easily backed up on diskettes because of the volume of data. In this case, you can buy an external tape backup system that attaches to your PC and offers a quick method of backing up large amounts of data. These products often allow for selective or complete backup of files from your hard disk or diskettes. Prices vary according to the type selected.

Two firms offering backup products for IBM and IBM-compatible PCs are:

Mountain Network Solutions, 860 Pueblo Road, Scotts Valley, CA 95066; (800) 458-0300, and

Fifth Generation Systems, 10049 N. Reiger Road, Baton Rouge, LA 70809-4562; (800) 873-4884.

For more information, call the Computing Information Center at 453-5155. -Db

Who's who at the CLC's

Q: Who are the folks with badges at the computer learning centers? (CLC'S)

A: They're graduate and undergraduate student employees who help three full-time information Technology staffers run the centers. They've been an integral part of the staff since 1989, when they replaced full-time civil service employees.

Q: What do the students do?

A: They handle daily operational tasks in the labs so full-timers can address long-range planning and other projects. Graduate students supervise shifts of undergraduate lab technicians, who maintain security and safety by monitoring centers for theft or vandalism and responding to fire alarms and other trouble. Lab techs also find viruses or lost files, fix damaged disks, print documents and check out materials.

In addition, engineering students serve on the Computer Aided Design Team, which draws up floor plans for Information Technology. The Local Area Network (LAN) Team features computer science students who handle the technical aspects of operating the centers. -Db

Information U.P.D.A.T.E

People with new vanity userids will find their output sorted at binning locations by the last two digits of their Social Security numbers, not by the last two digits of their ID as with the old userid.

Computer Users connected to the SIUnetwork and who use the campus wide information system (CWIS) can now directly access a CWIS subsystem. Previously, if a user wished to view a subsystem like SIUC's job vacancies they had to view the "STAFF" submenu first. Now you can get to the job vacancy submenu option by typing "JOBS" at the command line. Also, you can bypass menus with CWIS' INDEX option. This is like an alphabetized main menu from which you can get to all CWIS options.

Folks with off-campus PCs and modems can use a new, dial-up service to link up to the campus area network, which includes the mainframe, local PC networks in campus offices and INTERNET, an international computer network. Current services connect only to the mainframe. The new dial-up number is 453-8940 (or 453-8930 for people on campus with data units from Telephone Service). Get a free copy of the software you'll need—Maryland TCP/IP or Mac TCP/IP—as well as instructions and a keyboard map from the Computing Information Center, 453-5155.

Council restructuring to improve tourism trade

Festival, special events workshop planned for organizers of activities

By Sanjay Seth
City Writer

A festival and special events workshop for volunteers who organize and conduct special events such as festivals, fairs, homecomings and special holidays is planned for April 3 at Rend Lake College.

Debbie Moore, director of the Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau, said there will be several sessions especially interesting to local residents because some speakers are from St. Charles and Carbondale.

Speakers at the workshop will include Terry Mathias, University Relations project director at SIUC, who will speak on "Media and Marketing."

Diane Dorsey, coordinator of the Lights Fantastic Parade in Carbondale, will speak on "Planning a Parade."

Dorsey, who has had three years of experience with the lights parade, said the workshop was a good idea that she fully supported.

"The feeling is that Southern Illinois needs to work together as it will service best as a unit," Dorsey said. "We need to share the experiences and attempt to coordinate our activities."

Moore said a featured keynote speaker many people are familiar with in Carbondale is Doris Whitten.

Whitten, a noted motivational speaker, will open the workshop with a talk on motivation.

By Sanjay Seth
City Writer

The Southern Illinois Tourism Council is broadening its leadership structure and membership base in an attempt to enhance the development of tourism.

The number of the board of directors recently has increased from 16 to 26 to allow for more diverse representation from Southern Illinois counties and the tourism industry.

Debbie Moore, director of the Carbondale Convention and Tourism Bureau, said the council has been ineffective because of its structure.

"There is a serious need to broaden and restructure for the sake of Southern Illinois," Moore said.

"I believe by broadening membership, they can improve services provided to Southern Illinois," she said. "We will all come out winners."

Moore said she supports the structural change because reorganizing the council will improve its ability to develop the tourism industry in Southern Illinois.

"I think the council should focus on counties in Illinois that are not covered by their local tourism and convention bureaus," Moore said. "There are currently 14 counties that depend solely on regional tourism bureaus."

These include Monroe County, Perry County and others dispersed across the east side of the state.

Eight earthquakes shake up residents of Maryland town

The Washington Post

There's nothing like an earthquake to turn the best-laid plans of a quiet suburb upside down.

Since March 10, eight minor earthquakes have shaken Columbia, Md., to its meticulously planned core. Hundreds of startled callers have jammed emergency switchboards. No one was hurt and damage was negligible, but life hasn't been the same for Maryland's Howard County.

More than the actual strikes themselves, what has many of Columbia's 75,000 residents on edge is an unfamiliarity with what's causing the tremors. Geological maps show no active faults in all of Maryland; seismologists had paid scant attention to the state.

Experts now theorize that a fault may have developed in a fragile 100-mile band of rock running between Montgomery County, Maryland, and Lancaster, Pa.

Since 1758, only 25 earthquakes had been recorded in Maryland before the most recent episodes. This month, scientists have detected eight minor earthquakes in and around Columbia.

SIUC film festival winners chosen

University News Service

Judges in the 15th Annual Big Muddy Film Festival at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale chose four first-place winners from a record-breaking field of 273 entries in the competition held March 3-7.

"This year's festival was a big success," said Amy Brakenman, co-director of the event. "In addition to the record number of entries for the competition, overall attendance topped 1,100. It was a true comeback for a great SIUC tradition."

Each festival winner received a $300 cash prize. The judges — visiting independent filmmakers — also presented three second-place prizes of $200 each and seven $100 jurors' commendation awards.

Certificates went to seven honorable mentions and to projects recognized for cinematography and color design.

The first place winners were:

■ "Slip Stream (three movements)" (1992), by Dane Thompson, a 1992 graduate of SIUC's cinema and photography department of Readstown, Wis., a personal reminiscence-turned-landscape meditation;

■ "Passin' It On" (1992), by John Valdez and Peter Miller of

New York, N.Y., a documentary exploring the post-civil-rights movement era and the conviction and subsequent release of Black Panther party member Dhoruba Bin Wahad;

■ "Ape" (1992), by Julie Zammarchi of Boston, Mass., a surrealist film depicting a couple's nightly ritual;

■ "Milk of Amnesia" (1992), by Jeffery Noyes Scher of New York, N.Y., an animated montage taking viewers through the labyrinth of memory.

The following films received certificates:

■ "On the Threshold of Liberty" (1991), by Heidi Tikka of Chicago, Ill.;

■ "Travelog Four: Coming from the Wrong Side" (1992), by Sara Diamond of Banff, Canada;

■ "Fireflies" (1992), by Gayle Gardner of Costa Mesa, Cal.;

■ "Belinda" (1992), by Appalshop Films/Anne Lewis Johnson of Whitesburg, Ky.;

■ "Shirtless Soul" (1992), by Kyle Bergerson of Seattle, Wash.;

■ "I'll Talk" (1992), by Lock Phillips of Brooklyn, N.Y.

Hindu radicals want power

The Washington Post

BOMBAY—It had been a long, tense night filled with street talk of bombs and religious violence.

Alyque Padamsee, this city's pre-eminent theater director and a national peace activist, had just returned home from his local staging of an Ariel Dorfman play.

The powerful play, "Death and the Maiden," is about a society's attempt to reconcile in the aftermath of violent dictatorship.

Padamsee fears that in India, such a dictatorship is not past but future, and that it will be imposed by the country's rising Hindu radicals.

At his theater, he dedicated the play to victims of Bombay's recent terrorist bomb blasts and thanked his jittery audience for venturing out "in these difficult times."

SIUC baseball goes 7-2 on spring trip, now 10-6

By Dan Leahy
Sports Writer

The SIUC baseball team went south for spring break, but their record went north thanks to a 7-2 record over the break. The successful road swing began puts the Salukis overall record at 10-6 for the season.

The Dawgs began the trip by showing no mercy to Mercy College, beating it 4-3 and 8-3. Mike Van Gilder (2-2) got the win in the first game, with Nate Sheppard (1-0) picking up his first victory in the second.

The Salukis used their biggest offensive explosion of the season to swamp Columbia, 17-5. SIUC hitters struck for 23 hits against Columbia pitchers and made a winner of Mike McArdle (1-1).

The winning ways continued against Rutgers University, as SIUC got another solid performance from Mike Blang. Blang raised his record to 3-1 by allowing just one run on six hits.

The Saluki win streak reached five after a tough 4-3 victory over Maine. Jason Smith provided some late heroics with a two-run double in the ninth inning to give SIUC the lead. Nate Sheppard notched his second win of the season to lift his record to 2-0.

Rutgers got even with SIUC by handing the Salukis an 11-8 loss, stopping the Saluki winning streak.

Three Saluki errors did not help the cause of SIUC pitchers, as Nate Sheppard (2-1) absorbed the defeat.

The nationally ranked Miami Hurricanes took advantage of four SIUC errors to win 6-2, handing Mike Van Gilder (2-3) his third defeat in five decisions.

The Dawgs responded to the two-game losing streak by winning their final two games of the trip in style. Mike McArdle (2-1) and David Parrow combined to shut out Columbia, and SIUC hitters did their part in an 11-0 win.

Mike Blang went the distance against Iowa, striking out nine while allowing five hits and no runs to boost his record to 4-1.

Jason Smith was the offensive star for the trip, as he hit two homers and batted around .480 to raise his average to .415. Smith was rewarded for his efforts by being named MVC player of the week in the first week the award was given.

Blang continued to shine on the mound by going 2-0 on the trip and allowing only one earned-run in his 17 innings of work. Blang leads the team in victories with four, innings pitched with 39 and an earned-run average of 1.85.

SIUC head coach Sam Rigglesman said he was glad to see the team improve in all phases of the game. Rigglesman said he was especially glad to see the team hit at a .347 clip over the break.

Rigglesman also noted the performances of Smith and Blang, and said he thinks they can continue to perform at the level they are at right now.

"Jason is playing with tremendous confidence right now, and is giving us the boost we need from the lead-off position," Rigglesman said.

"Mike Blang has been very consistent in all five of his starts, and I think he will continue to pitch well," Rigglesman said.

The Salukis head to Louisville, Ky., to play the Louisville Cardinals on Wednesday before returning home for a four-game homestand beginning on Thursday against Austin Peay.

Saluki softball finishes third at invite to up record to 6-3

By Karyn Viverito
Sports Writer

The SIUC softball team started off its season on a promising note, finishing its spring break road trip at 6-3.

After dropping a double-header to South Florida on March 16, the Salukis came back to win their next six games at the Florida State Invitational before losing to the host school, 1-0, to finish third at the invite.

Saluki head coach Kay Brechtelsbauer said she was pleased with the break results.

"Even at South Florida, we lost, but we played strong and tried to make a comeback at them," she said. "I think we had a little first-game jitters against a team that had already played a few games in their season."

As for the rest of the trip, the Salukis' success leaves a lot of hope for the season ahead, Brechtelsbauer said.

"We consistently improved from game to game and everyone contributed something when needed to help us win," she said.

In the Salukis' semifinal game with nationally ranked Florida State, the Seminoles allowed only two Saluki hits to their seven. However, Saluki hurler Angie Mick held No. 4 FSU scoreless the last five innings, including pitching out of a jam with a runner on 3rd in the third inning.

The loss to FSU was Mick's only loss of the invite, as she posted a 0.67 ERA for the weekend.

The Salukis finished third out of 24 teams at the invite, with FSU moving on to win the title. Before losing to the Seminoles the Salukis defeated Nicholls St., Miami (Ohio), Princeton, Samford, Rutgers and Furman.

Four of those six games were decided by one run, which is good experience for the team, Brechtelsbauer said.

"When you have to come from behind or hold on to win the ballgame, those are tough situations," she said. "We have gotten some good practice in winning one-run ballgames."

Representing the Salukis on the invitational's all-tournament team were senior center-fielder Colleen Holloway and freshman Christine Knotts.

Holloway hit .318 for the invite, racking up 5 runs, 7 RBIs, and a whopping 4 home runs to go along with two stolen bases and a game-winning hit against Nicholls St.

Knotts hit .278 for the invite with 3 runs, 5 RBIs and a home run.

"In the first couple of games I could see some nervousness, but now they are playing with the poise of upperclassmen," she said. "It is difficult to tell who's a freshman and who's not."

Out of the 16-member squad, only seven players are upperclassmen, while the rest of the team includes four sophomores and five freshmen.

"Everyone has a great deal of respect and support for each other, and that is a big plus in a team sport," she said. "I am extremely pleased with how they have handled themselves, and I am seeing contribution from more than just one or two people."

Weather keeping Gooden from pitching

Newsway

PORT ST. LUCIE, Fla.—For reasons of weather, not injury, Dwight Gooden didn't pitch Sunday. He hasn't pitched since March 11. With 14 days remaining in spring training, he has pitched only six innings. And Gooden is the opening day pitcher for the New York Mets.

Sunday, after the game against the Cleveland Indians was canceled because of rain, Jeff Torborg set up a schedule that would have Gooden ready for the April 5 game against the Colorado Rockies at Shea Stadium. Gooden is to pitch Monday in relief of Bret Saberhagen, then start Friday on three days rest. That would have him making his final spring-training start March 31 and afford him four days rest before opening day.

"We think we have enough time to get him ready," Torborg said Sunday night. "I've been leaning toward Dwight; it's an honor I think he deserves."

Gooden says he has sufficient time to prepare for what would be his seventh opening day start. He recalled 1990, the year of the lockout and the shortened spring training, noting that he was able to start the first regular-season game without any physical problems. The Pittsburgh Pirates provided problems, however, burying Gooden in a 12-3 defeat. It was his first loss in an opening day game and gave him a losing record in a season for the first time in his career.

Torborg hinted that if his starting pitcher weren't ready for opening day, it would affect his thinking about carrying an 11th pitcher.

Continued wet weather caused the cancellation of Sunday's game and might prompt the rescheduling of exhibition games for alternate and drier sites. The game was canceled because the field was saturated from seven days of intermittent showers and no sustained sunline. The forecast is for rain through Thursday.

Mets general manager Al Harazin has become concerned. "We'll see what it's like (Monday)," he said Sunday. "If we can't play again, we'll have to see what else we can do."

The Mets are scheduled to play home games against the Montreal Expos Monday and the Houston Astros Tuesday. Harazin said the club might be forced to move Tuesday's game to the Astros' stadium in Kissimmee, Fla.

DUKE, from page 20

grabbed a game-high 11 rebounds. Freshman forward Chris Carr may have been the most impressive, throwing down several monster jams, including a tomahawk job at the first-half horn for two of his 8 points. Carr also corralled 10 rebounds, eight of which came in the second half.

"He is going to be a tremendous basketball player, and he played tremendously in the second half," Herrin said. "That is what you are going to see of him in the future." Although his team was blown out by 35 points in his final collegiate game, Amaya said he feels the Salukis will be able to hold their own against top-notch competition in the future.

"I feel we can compete on a higher level," Amaya said. "I think it is just a matter of us gaining confidence and realizing we are capable of doing it and believing in ourselves."

atmosphere at the competition was very competitive and high pressured.

"There was a lot of pressure; it was a great atmosphere," he said. "I had a lot of fun there, and I also learned a lot."

Wright said he had good form going over the bar, but the different running surface in Indianapolis slowed him on his approach.

Wright said he should become an All-American in the outdoor high jump as well.

"I have a chance at winning outdoors if I keep my goals in the right perspective," he said.
