Council candidates discuss their goals

Budsllick

COOPERATION: Several candidates stress improving city-University relations.

JENNIFER CAMDEN
DE POLITICALS EDITOR

The six candidates in the April 1 Carbondale City Council election all want Carbondale to prosper in the future, but they have different plans for encouraging that growth.

Larry Briggs, Eden Thorne and incumbents Maggie Flanagan and Loyd Sumner are vying for two four-year seats on the council.

John Budsllick and incumbent John Yow are running for the two-year council term.

Each of the candidates was asked what they would want to accomplish as council members during the two or four years they would serve if elected.

Maggie Flanagan

Flanagan said in her next council term, she would like to work on the strategies for downtown development, city beautification and business growth that were laid out in her first term.

Flanagan suggests a feasibility study of SIUC's declining enrollment.

"I think if the University, the business community, the Chamber (of Commerce), all the aspects of what makes a town a town, should understand what it takes to bring people here," she said.

Flanagan would support lowering the bar-entry age under certain conditions.

Larry Briggs

Briggs, an associate professor of art and design, said the city should use more of the University's professionals, students and resources.

"I don't think we've even scratched the surface of what we could be doing in terms of being a university town," he said.

Briggs, once a member of the Carbondale Park District's advisory committee, wants the city's park services to be provided by the city instead of the park district, a separate taxing body.

He said though there is no easy way to curb violence, gangs and drugs, more policing and the proposed Carbondale teen center would help.

City Council Elections

Briggs believes the bar-entry age should be 19 and Carbondale can organize a successful Halloween celebration.

Loyd Sumner

Sumner, appointed last year to fill the remainder of resigned Councilman Richard Morris' term, said job training is key to the city's business recruitment.

"Not only are they (companies) looking for tax breaks and goodies from the city, they're also looking for a skilled, trained workforce," he said.

Sumner said the city could use SIUC and John A. Logan College in Carterville to provide some resources for a job training program that could be funded through grants and federal and local money.

Sumner said the Recreation Center and the Civic Center, 200 S. Illinois Ave., are among the places where community-wide youth activities could be coordinated.

He supports the 21-year-old bar-entry age.

Eden Thorne

Thorne said she wants to improve Carbondale's image by developing the economy and residential areas, and improve SIUC's image by working to increase its enrollment.

She said SIUC faculty and students could help the city plan its business development, especially those trained in such areas.

She said if the city's industrial park is to be marketable, the workforce must be ready to adapt to the new businesses there.

Thorne, who supports the 21-year-old bar-entry age, said she is not a single-issue candidate, and she hopes students will not be single-issue voters.

"I hope students don't come out and vote solely based on the 21-bar-age issue," she said.

John Yow

Yow wants the city's relationship with SIUC and the student body to expand, though he does not think it is as bad as some have alleged it is. He said if the partnership needs improvement, it should be addressed.

Yow said Carbondale needs more high-paying jobs, and the city's business development group may have to work harder to accomplish that.

"I want to see industries come to Carbondale where people can make decent wages," he said.

He said he supports the 21-year-old bar-entry age and would like to see fewer bars on South Illinois Avenue.

John Budsllick

Budsllick said the city should show it listens to students; for example, a city committee could review complaints about the city's rental housing.

He thinks the bar-entry age should be 19. "I think the bar-entry age is a key issue for students, but the bar-entry age is not the drinking age," he said.

Budsllick said some downtown Carbondale businesses are suffering, and the city should informally reserve the southern part of South Illinois Avenue for student-oriented establishments. He said other college towns have similar districts.

Money decides the future of international students

HIGH HOPES: One student perseveres despite the financial commitment-necessary to come to the United States.

DAVE ARMSTRONG
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Editor's Note: This is the second in a series of five stories looking at aspects of SIUC international student enrollment. The previous stories of the series can be viewed on the World Wide Web at www.dailyegyptian.com

The dream to pursue education in the United States is sometimes only cut short by a lack of funding, and funding cuts to federal programs could limit opportunities for potential students, an SIUC international student says.

For Lilliana Zerpa, a graduate student in linguistics from Venezuela and recipient of two grants, the effort to get such grants is worth the reward of coming to the United States for an education.

"It was really, really hard to get here," said Zerpa, the recipient of the Fulbright grant and a Latin American Scholars Program in American Universities (LASPAU).

"There were 60 people from my area applying for the opportunity to come here. We had to file tons of forms, diplomas, grades and legal papers. We had to have letters from our former teachers. Then they say they'll call you . . . sometime.

International Enrollment No. 2 of 5

"When they call, you have two days to go somewhere else and be ready for two exams and an interview with LASPAU committee members and U.S. Embassy people. About six months later, they might call you back. It's terrible until then."

But getting selected to study in the United States is only one part of the process that international students endure.

Once selected, students are provided with a list of institutions that suit their fields of study, and one SIUC Admissions and Records officer says the tuition of SIUC itself may deter international students from the University.

Graduate students face tuition increase

ADJUSTMENT: Increase would place tuition in line with other universities, actual cost of education.

MARC CHASE
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC graduate students could receive an annual tuition increase of 6.5 percent for the next five years if the Graduate Council passes a set of recommendations, recently drafted by a University committee.

The recommendations, still in their planning stages, were compiled by the SIUC Graduate School Tuition Waiver Committee. The committee, composed of representatives from various graduate departments and student organizations, will present the recommendations to the Graduate Council for discussion in April.

The recommendations are a response to an Illinois Board of Higher Education request for state universities to analyze and compile a report on the financing of graduate education.

SIUC graduate student tuition levels are equal to SIUC undergraduate levels.

John McKillip, Graduate School associate dean and member of the committee, said because the overall cost of educating graduate students is higher than undergraduate costs, graduate students should pay more.

"They don't get the same education, so they should pay different levels," McKillip said. "This only seems natural."

The cost for educating an average SIUC graduate student enrolled in at least 12 credit hours for the 1997-1998 academic year is $11,822, the committee's draft document states. However, the tuition for graduate students only is $2,160.

The committee also reports that SIUC's graduate tuition only covers 18.3 percent of the total cost of graduate education.

SIUC groups to join for rally

FLOOD RELIEF: Student groups begin disaster fund collection for victims.

TRAVIS DE NEAL
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Flood victims could benefit from a cooperative fund-raising drive between Undergraduate Student Government and the American Red Cross taking place this week.

"We are asking students for any change they may have, which will go to help flood victims," Kristie Ayres, USG non-traditional student advocate, said. "It is very important that students help out."

High waters in Gallatin, Hardin, Pope, Massac, Pulaski and Alexander counties ruined houses and household items more than two weeks ago. Flooding also has occurred in western Kentucky.

Two weeks ago, Gov. Jim Edgar declared the six Illinois counties state disaster areas.

Student volunteers began placing change canisters at campus locations and at local businesses Monday.

Beth Parker, executive director of the Jackson County chapter of the American Red Cross, said money donated will go into the Red Cross's disaster relief fund.

"The relief fund deals very uniformly with disaster victims," she said. "We use it to write, for families who qualify, orders to purchase the things they need."

Food, clothing, shelter, beds and bedding are some of the basics provided to families affected by natural disasters.

On Friday, volunteers from USG, SIUC Army ROTC and the SIUC Public Relations Student Society of America will have a fund-raising rally from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Student Center. At the rally, students can win prizes donated by more than 30 local businesses.

"Our goal is to raise $5,000, which I think we can easily do," Ayres said. "We have already had $825 donated by area businesses."

Lee Blankenship, manager of 710 Bookstore, 710 S. Illinois Ave., donated bookstore T-shirts for the rally because he likes seeing students taking action.

"Basically, I like to see students be proactive," Blankenship said. "They asked me if they could put canisters in the store and if we would donate any prizes, and I did."

Ayres said by supporting flood victims, SIUC students also could change some people's perception of the University.

"This is also important to us because people have a bad image of SIU," she said. "I personally would like to help change that."

Former SIUC charged with drug possession

A former SIUC student who had been banned from all University property and events was arrested Saturday night on Douglas Drive, SIUC Police say.

Gregg Mrotzek, 25, of Carbondale, was arrested for criminal trespass. He was banned from University property on March 13 after it was determined by Student Judicial Affairs that he harassed his former girlfriend.

Mrotzek also was charged with possession of drug paraphernalia after police said they discovered a cannabis pipe in his car.

Mrotzek was released after posting $100 bond.

He was previously arrested and charged with criminal trespass on state-supported property and obstructing a peace officer on Aug. 25.

Mrotzek is a former graduate student in engineering.

 Filthy lake harmful to health,
 environment, campus image

THE NATURAL BEAUTY OF CAMPUS LAKE should be a priority when it comes to groundskeeping. On Saturday a group of student volunteers collected 12 bags of garbage found in and around the lake.

The garbage — from beer bottles to bait cans — not only can destroy the environment but also can trash this beautiful campus.

But the University has placed cleaning up the lake on the bottom of the cleaning priority list. Instead, other areas that are not as visible to visitors are being cleaned more frequently.

THE CLASSROOMS AND HOUSING AREAS are important to keep clean, but so is the lake.

The lake — like many spots on campus — helps recruit students. It offers bountiful opportunities for educational and recreational use. In some respects, the lake is a classroom.

Some teachers guide students through forestry lessons around the lake while educating students on proper treatment of the environment.

Also, some students live around the lake in housing areas such as Greek Row or Thompson Point and have to witness the garbage around the lake.

LITTERING THE LAKE IS DISGRACEFUL and irresponsible. If students cared about the lake and the beauty of this campus, which is where many students live, then it would be a cleaner place to study, learn and relax. By not cleaning up after ourselves, we become the victims of our own laziness.

The garbage collected Saturday is a wake-up call for both the University and students.

The garbage that some people leave can interfere with the wildlife — fish, turtles and deer — that depend on the fragile lake ecosystem.

The water could become too contaminated and unhealthy for both animals and humans. If the pollution continues, the area may lose its wildlife — not just the students.

STUDENTS NEED TO LEARN TO CLEAN UP after themselves whether they are on or off campus. Both the University and the students can join together to keep Campus Lake free from garbage and waste.

There are enough trash cans along the lake walkway in which students can place litter, and we have no excuse not to pick it up.

Having a lake area is a privilege at SIUC, not a right. No one should take it for granted.

DE should not be allowed to cover offensive 'church'

During Black History month, the Daily Egyptian ran a front page story Feb. 17, "Superior above all" about a gang on campus that is seeking to recruit members. They call themselves "The World Church of the Creator."

Although it preaches a non-violent rhetoric, the Ku Klux Klan by any other name is still the Ku Klux Klan. The same blind emotionalism that leads neighborhood thugs into forming into organizations is the same blind emotionalism that has led this gang to form on campus.

The paper promoted their story in a manner that was an affront to the many people who made sacrifices to plan the month for thousands of others on campus.

The editors were very purposeful in their actions, and they gave thought to their consequences.

They chose, however, to ignore students' sensitivities for the sake of this gang's history.

By publishing their commandments, their Website address and two of their contact hotline numbers, the DE's coverage actually provided the gang with help in its recruitment efforts.

This, and their continued coverage of the leader demonstrates to me that someone on the editorial board shares his racist sentiments.

In what seemed to be an attempt to disguise this ulterior motive, the editors tried to hide behind a story of "educating the students, being fair, objective, balanced..."

Despite problems posed by street gangs, no major newspaper publishes the by-laws, Websites or contact hotlines of the Gangster Disciples or the Aryan Brotherhood.

Nor do they allow the gangs' leaders to use their space as a forum to promote their warped ideas in guest columns or by selling them advertisement space.

Yet, the DE's editors allow it.

If any one of the aforementioned gangs' leaders enrolled at SIUC, began to recruit members from the student body or to pass out their gang's literature on campus, there would be a campus uproar.

The police would be called in to take immediate action. The DE would be among the first to call for an end to this "threat to higher education." Yet, this gang's leader and its members continue to do business as usual and go so far as to use the paper to promote its own ethnic intimidating ideas.

The rhetoric of hatred espoused by this gang is in direct contradiction to the purposes of the University.

One graduate student already has stated in the paper that he was in fear of his life for speaking out against these hoodlums.

This type of atmosphere can easily escalate into physical aggression. I am not going to continue to ignore this evil and wait until the verbal aggression plays itself out as it did during the days of slavery or the civil rights era.

As a tuition-paying student I deserve better than that.

I deserve a learning environment that is free from ethnic intimidation and one that allows me to maximize my educational opportunities.

Since publishing the article, the DE has continued as if nothing has occurred, and they were not accountable for offending thousands of people throughout the University community.

No apologies, no corrections. Just business as usual — the same insensitive attitude as the gang's.

The newspaper should not ignore the efforts and sensitivities of hard-working students in order to impose on others their privately held Klan sympathies.

The DE's present actions are helping to lower the high standards of a good school and that I once was proud to attend.

By allowing the gang to continue to operate, the school is lowering its own standards.

What are the younger or new students to think and feel? What father and mother would entrust their son's or daughter's futures to a school that allows racial unrest and tension to exist?

Whatever school policy or regulation that allows this gang to exist, to practice ethnic intimidation and to actively recruit other members should be changed. Whatever school policy or regulation that allows the school newspaper or its editors to offend thousands of students on campus by actively promoting the activities of a bunch of hoodlums in white sheets, or shirts, also should be changed and the editors should be fired.

It is unfair to those of us who are working hard to learn how to make ourselves, our school, our community and our world a safer and a better place to live.

I am writing a letter to the chancellor about this gang's presence and the newspaper's compliance in its activities. I encourage other students to do the same.

Letters for which verification of authorship cannot be made will not be published.

USG bureaucracy causing delays in group's funding

Dear Editor:
The Daily Egyptian's March 20 editorial about Undergraduate Student Government's conduct this year really hit home.

I am the president of a student organization that has been trying since last fall to get accepted.
That's right, since last fall — six months.

We did everything necessary — all the necessary paperwork was handed in before the October deadline, March almost is gone, and still no decision.

After calls from our adviser and me last fall, USG's first response was a message saying a representative from our group had to attend that night's meeting.

This was impossible on such short notice.

The senator (I won't name names) apologized for his late request and said instead I would be contacted later. Thus began the wait. Fall and winter breaks came and went.

More phone calls, more waiting. Finally the full senate considered our group on Feb. 6. The introductory pro-speech for our group basically said we were the same as the Sophists (a non-partisan political discussion student organization). I'm no expert, but this does not seem to be a pro-speech.

Without asking for a representative from our group to come defend ourselves, the senate voted. We just fell short of the two-thirds votes needed.

An angry call from our adviser resulted in a second chance to speak on our behalf at a committee meeting.

The Campus Progressives is a non-partisan, independent group interested in promoting democracy.

We seek students willing to tackle the issues that have led to the general apathy present both at SIUC and nationwide.

The Sophists debate issues pro-con style.

Our goal is promoting an interactive role between the people and the government in a true democratic fashion.

I personally admire the effort of citizens who helped save the Amtrak Service between Carbondale and Chicago.

Citizens got together, petitioned, sent letters to government and accomplished something positive through democratic means — this is what the Campus Progressives want to encourage.

We understandably are infuriated at the time it has taken.

We hope USG finally accepts us so we can finally get started and help involve students in their democracy and reduce the cancerous apathy that exists today in the United States.

Multi-Culture Multi-Color

STORY BY LA'KEISHA R. GRAY PHOTOS BY CURTIS K. BIASI

Event helps minorities choose SIUC for its Diversity

WELCOME: David A. New Meyer, chairperson of aviation management and flight, explains some of the requirements to Wabu Susberry, a high school senior from Houston.

Wabu Susberry traveled from the Lone Star State to SIUC Saturday to get an up-close glimpse of the diversity the University has to offer.

While attending the fifth annual Multi-Color Day, Susberry, a high school senior from Houston, was one of more than 350 students who got a chance to meet with representatives from their chosen major, preview student organizations and encounter the wide variety of the student body.

What Susberry experienced eased some of his fears about college.

"It'd be kind of sad if it was uniform, but SIU seems to have a large minority population, and the different services seem to be sensitive to your needs as a minority," he said.

Brenda Major, the coordinator of multi-cultural enrollment for New Student Admissions, said the Multi-Color Day was established five years ago to encourage minority students who have applied to SIUC to visit the campus and learn about the particular academic programs that interest them.

Major believes this aspect is a strong and important goal of SIUC.

"This day is very important," she said. "SIU has a history of being a culturally diverse campus. This program celebrates a variety of cultures that exist among the student body. We're providing a comfortable environment for them."

Because they wanted to help add a personal touch to the students' exposure to the day, about 30 SIUC students shared their insight and their time as "buddies" for the program. There was at least one "buddy" representing each ethnic background.

The buddies were required to register students in the Multi-Color Day program, give tours of the campus and help with the application process.

Demetres Jones, a junior in speech communications from Waukegan, said his dream is to become a college recruiter. During his day as a team captain for the buddies, he was able to do something positive for the University.

"It's good because it gives the University a chance to show the other side," he said. "As far as different cultures coming together, I think it shows that one institution can be diverse."

As part of the day, there was a variety of arts and crafts displayed by different Registered Student Organizations and information booths representing campus programs focusing on minorities.

Kelly Spencer, a senior in biological sciences from East St. Louis and a member of Sigma Gamma Rho Sorority Inc., said her organization and others were driven by one main motivation.

"A lot of the organizations participate in Multi-Color Day to let new students know that there is a group on campus, and individuals who represent them and will enter to their needs," she said. "In all ways, academically and socially."

The event attracted more than prospective and current students. Alumni also visited the campus to spread a sense of familiarity.

Audria Humphrey, a pre-kindergarten teacher at Lincoln Elementary School in Carbondale and an SIUC alumna, sold her hand-stitched gifts for personal reasons.

"I just think it's important to know the wide variety of dolls, and there just aren't enough African-American dolls," she said. "And when I was a student here, we didn't have the personal feeling with the University that students feel now. I want to help add a personal touch with my dolls."

By way of entertainment, the day climaxed and ended with a Multicultural fest. During the show, prizes were awarded to audience members, and students performed skits, modeled sophisticated fashions and gave motivational speeches.

As the Hispanic Student Council performed its cultural dance, the women twirled their red skirts, and the group threw a flair of Hispanic culture at the audience.

Cheers went up and an air of camaraderie and appreciation swept over the crowd in response to SIUC's effort to welcome students of color.

To Major, this event proves to be key in recruiting new students.

"The proof is many of the students who've visited as prospective college students are now enrolled at SIUC and are now acting as buddies to new, prospective students," she said.

Multi-Color Day helped Susberry confirm his decision in the college he will attend.

"This day shows that this school cares about enrolling minorities and increasing the minority population," he said. "From what I learned, yes, I've enjoyed myself, and I've made my choice. I'm going to SIU."

Transfer student enrollment down, recruitment top priority

INTENSE EFFORT:

University officials developing plans to woo transfer students.

WILLIAM HATFIELD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

The number of new freshmen planning to attend SIUC in the fall has increased from the March 1996 admissions, but admissions for transfer students remain low compared to last year.

A report of on-campus admissions states the number of new freshmen admitted to SIUC has increased from the middle of last March to 6,788 this year, an increase of 977 from last year's 5,801.

The report also stated that the number of transfer students admitted to the University is down from March 1996 by 104, from 1,855 last year to 1,751 this year.

John Jackson, vice chancellor for Academic Affairs and provost, said recruiting transfer students is a University priority.

"The University is still concerned that transfer students are down by some compared to last spring," Jackson said. "We are working on what we can do with community colleges."

Stephen Foster, interim director for Admissions and Records, said it is difficult to know why the decrease occurred, but counselors are continuing to recruit transfer students from community colleges.

He said competition with community colleges offering the same classes also could be contributing to the decrease.

Admissions and Records also is scheduling a preview of SIUC at community colleges.

Foster said the event would allow prospective students the opportunity to talk to representatives of the Financial Aid Office, University Housing or academic areas.

Although there is a decrease in admitted transfer students, Foster said the increase of new student admissions may have occurred because of the large-scale recruiting and retention effort.

"The increase could be attributed to the very intensive effort to recruit those types students," Foster said. "I think it is more difficult to recruit transfer students because they already have two years behind them."

He said many University colleges also have representatives that are recruiting transfer students by going to community colleges to talk to prospective students.

Robert Simpson, College of Education coordinator of recruitment and retention, said the college is developing a two-year transfer plan to ease the transfer process for students wanting to transfer to SIUC to obtain an education degree.

"Really we are doing the same thing every other college is doing," Simpson said. "We are visiting colleges and contacting students by telephone."

Foster said that the community colleges have increased recruiting efforts in each SIU college.

"We need to show the value-added benefit of coming to the University," Foster said. "Increased competition by other schools is making us work harder to obtain our part of the mix."

Kelvin Booker, an international admissions officer at SIUC, said an international student interested in SIUC is required to show $19,120 in a bank account before his or her application is processed. This is to ensure the student will be able to afford projected costs of living at SIUC.

However, larger universities such as the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana requires an international student to show $20,606, a motivating factor Booker said spurs international students to leave SIUC early or transfer in favor of more prestigious universities.

"There are many institutions out there with lower or comparable tuitions," Booker said. "Sometimes, we get a lot of applications that are processed, but those students never even show up. The bottom line is money, and this is a business. International students pay twice as much (as in-state tuition)."

Despite the expenses and hardships of coming to the United States, Zerpa said it is the best opportunity for her to succeed and fulfill a life-long dream of following in her father's footsteps.

"It is important to me to follow in his steps," Zerpa said. "A diploma from America is more valuable than a diploma from Venezuela. There are more resources here. I also wanted my husband and son to learn English, so they came with me."

However, cases like Zerpa's may become more rare in the near future. According to a March NAFSA Association of International Educators document, the Fulbright Program, which sponsors many international students' education in the United States with a $94 million budget, will be subject to another $500,000 cut in 1998, mirroring cuts to the program in 1997.

Carla Coppi, SIUC associate director of International Students and Scholars, said lowering funding may result in many potential students from the South Pacific taking options presented to them by community colleges or universities in New Zealand and Australia. Coppi said students are attracted to these alternatives because of lower tuitions and closer locations.

"Cutting funding to these programs will make it a lot harder for some international students to afford an education here," Coppi said. "Already, LASPAU has coupled with private groups to keep itself alive. These types of grants are very important."

NAFSA documents show that continued funding decreases will result in fewer grantee benefits, a loss of staff positions in foreign countries and even a loss of U.S. Information Agency posts in other countries.

Although agencies such as LASPAU and the Fulbright Program sponsor about 140 international students at SIUC, Zerpa believes this number may decrease if funding to these programs continues to be cut.

"It is a pity and a shame," Zerpa said. "They will not be able to give as many grants. We do not represent ourselves here, we represent our countries. This means that cutting these grants doesn't hurt us, it hurts our countries."

In Wednesday's continuation of this series, the story will explore immigration issues.

which is the smallest percentage out of the five largest universities in the state. Illinois State University's graduate tuition covers 26.1 percent, and the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana's tuition covers 32.9 percent of overall graduate education costs.

The committee's recommendations were presented last week to the Graduate and Professional Student Council, which represents graduate students on University issues.

Ed Ford, who represented GPSC on the committee, said there is a strong case for increasing graduate students' tuition at a rate higher than undergraduate tuition.

"It makes more sense," Ford said. "Graduate student education costs

 Under a current SIUC tuition plan, tuition rates for both graduate and undergraduate students will be increased by 3.5 percent annually for the next four years, as compared to the committee's proposed 6.5 percent increase for graduate tuition.

GPSC President Mark Terry said it is his understanding that the revenue created by the tuition increase would go back into educational costs of graduate programs.

"The money is earmarked for programs where graduate students reside," he said. "This is something so that people will know the money is going back into the programs and is not going to pave roads."

GPSC officials said the group probably will vote on whether or not to endorse the recommendations at its April 3 meeting.

Council and the SIU Board of Trustees, graduate students could pay $2,300 in tuition by 1999.

Ford said though the committee recommends a tuition hike, it also defends the use of graduate assistantships and tuition waivers to make graduate education more affordable.

Under the committee's plan, departments offering graduate assistantships also would have to provide tuition waivers for their graduate assistants.

Half-time assistants would be guaranteed waivers for 15 credit hours, and quarter-time assistants would get waivers for nine hours.

The recommendations are scheduled to be discussed by the Graduate Council in April and voted on in May. The plan then will be given to the SIUC administration and the Board of Trustees for approval.

The final report to be submitted to the IBHE is due in August.

Yankees shuffle players around

POSITION PUZZLE:
Defending World Series champs mix roster in final days of pre-season.

Yes, even the world champions are struggling with roster spots as spring training draws to a close this week, and the buzzword for the New York Yankees is versatility.

The more positions you can play, the better your chance of landing one of the 25 jobs available for opening day. And while Duncan has been assured that he will be the club's starting second baseman, Kelly's future could very well depend on whether he can expand his defensive repertoire. He began Sunday by playing center field with the organization's minor leaguers. The Yankees want this experiment to succeed.

Duncan, who played left field Saturday, has made five errors in 14 games at second base. He had just two in 21 games during spring training last year when he inherited the job from the injured Tony Fernandez, then hit .340 in his first season with the Yankees.

Last month, before the position players reported to Legends Field, Manager Joe Torre named Duncan his starter over Kelly, declaring there would be no competition. That statement, combined with the presence of backup infielder Luis Sojo, made Kelly seem expendable.

But now, as Duncan struggles, Torre frequently drops Kelly's name into conversation. The manager believes Duncan was at his most effective last season when he was given a few days off, and without Andy Fox and Matt Howard around, Torre would prefer that Kelly spell him.

"I think Kelly has got to help him out over there," Torre said after the Yankees lost to the Pirates, 5-3, yesterday at Legends Field.

"Even last year, we made sure that we rested Duncan a time or two during the course of a week or so. You're going to need both of them."

"Duncan was more productive last year when we did rest him. Once he became the second baseman, we stopped (moving him around). I don't want to get away from that in the event that we do move an outfielder. You're going to need a swing guy in case you need to do some things late in a game or whatever."

After naming Wade Boggs his third baseman Saturday, Torre was expected to announce the starting left fielder Sunday.

But the manager declined to do that, saying he will wait until next weekend while the Yankees are in Atlanta for a two-game series to christen the Braves' new home, Turner Field.

Why the intrigue? Torre still is concerned about the health of Darryl Strawberry and Mark Whiten, and Tim Lincecum is on the trading block.

Strawberry remains the favorite despite a sore right knee, and Whiten, whom Torre often mentions, is playing with a strained rib-cage muscle. Raines, the only one who is truly healthy, is having a standout spring training—but also is the most likely to be traded.

He went 1-for-3 with a double Sunday and is hitting .429 (18 for 42) in 14 games. Raines also is the highest paid of the three, making $1.8 million this season with $800,000 deferred until next year, but that salary should not hinder a swap.

won five of its last six games.

"Jones did a great job while he was here, and that kind of gets us ready to play against them," Schley said. "Illinois is the biggest school in the state, and they've built a great program in the Big Ten.

"We can look at their program and see where we want to be. That gets us up and ready to go when we play them."

Freshman pitcher Jim Pecoraro said SIUC can expect a battle each time it plays Illinois.

"You want to put teams like Illinois on the schedule," Pecoraro said. "It's always a good experience to play teams that have had success at this level."

While the matchup may look like a mismatch in Illinois' favor, SIUC has had a fair amount of success against Illinois since Jones left SIUC for Champaign in 1991. The Salukis are 4-3 against the Fighting Illini but have won four out of the last five games of the series since 1992.

SIUC is coming off of a series split with Illinois in 1996. The Salukis trailed Illinois by seven runs after the first inning at home before rallying to capture a 12-8 win.

The Fighting Illini returned the favor in Champaign by capturing the second game of the series 11-0.

Performing well against the Fighting Illini the past few seasons has benefited the team's national status.

"On the national level, you can really help your rating if you can beat a team like that," Callahan said. "Last season, we and Illinoi were two of the highest-rated teams in the Midwest, so we were able to get some recognition by playing well against them."

The Salukis are coming off of a doubleheader sweep of McKendree College Sunday afternoon. But Callahan did not see the kind of results he expected.

"I saw some things that I didn't particularly care for," Callahan said. "But it was a good tune-up because it gave us a chance to play instead of sitting all weekend."

The two wins improved the Salukis' record to 7-14 overall, but Pecoraro said the Salukis will have to play better to compete with Illinois.

"We didn't play well," Pecoraro said. "We got two wins that we needed, but we didn't execute like we should have. We need to keep battling hard to turn this thing around now."

all of us were not satisfied."

Up next for the Salukis is the Missouri Valley Conference portion of their spring schedule. The team has played tough competition throughout the non-conference part of the season, which should help the Salukis, England said.

"We played tough teams over break," he said. "We're hoping that's going to give us some confidence heading into this weekend."

SIUC will play the three top teams in the conference beginning this Friday when the Salukis travel to Illinois State University to battle the Redbirds, Wichita State University and Drake University.

DeGuzman said the team is looking forward to its first conference matches of the season.

"If we can play to our potential, we can beat anyone in the conference this season."

Van Slyke out with injury

Veteran outfielder Andy Van Slyke, who was attempting a comeback with the St. Louis Cardinals after retiring in 1995, has suffered a leg injury and might not be ready for opening day.

The 36-year-old is hitting .545 in spring training and may have wrapped up a backup outfield spot before the injury occurred Sunday. Van Slyke believed the injury could be a torn left calf muscle.

Van Slyke is a non-roster player, so the Cardinals could release him or place him on the minor-league disabled list.

The two-time All-Star and four-time Gold Glove winner has hit .274 with 164 homers in his career. Van Slyke played in three playoff series with the Pittsburgh Pirates from 1990-92 and led the Pirates with 100 RBIs in 1988.

Jackson packs up and retires

Green Bay Packers tight end Keith Jackson announced his retirement at a news conference Monday afternoon. The nine-year veteran said his "journey has come to an end" after picking up his first Super Bowl ring with the Packers.

"I felt I didn't have the explosion, and even though I could still catch the ball, I didn't feel I could break a tackle and be the same Keith Jackson," he said. "I always said if I got to a point where I couldn't go out and dominate the game at my position the way I've been doing it for years, then I would hang it up."

The 31-year-old Jackson caught 40 passes for 505 yards and a team-leading 10 touchdowns for the Packers in 1996. Green Bay went 13-3 and capped off the season with the franchise's first Super Bowl title in 29 years.

The four-time Pro Bowler caught 441 passes for 5,283 yards and 49 touchdowns in over 120 games for the Eagles, Dolphins and Packers.

Penders looks at Rutgers job

Texas basketball coach Tom Penders says he will meet with Rutgers University officials today to discuss the school's vacant coaching position.

Penders, who has guided Texas to eight NCAA Tournament appearances in his nine years at Austin, is believed to be the leading candidate to replace Bob Wenzel at Rutgers.

The Dallas Morning News reported that Rutgers is prepared to pay Penders a base salary of about $700,000. Penders' total package at Texas is about $460,000, plus bonuses. But Texas Athletic Director DeLoss Dodds is working on renegotiating the deal.

Rutgers Athletic Director Fred Gruninger has confirmed he will speak with Penders but declined further comment. Penders told the newspaper he spoke to Gruninger late Saturday, and they agreed to set up an interview.

Penders has compiled a record of 194-93 in nine seasons at Texas. The Longhorns advanced to the 1997 NCAA Tournament Sweet 16 before losing to Louisville, 78-63, in the East Region semifinals Friday at the Carrier Dome in Syracuse, N.Y.

Rutgers fired Wenzel after completing an 11-16 record in 1996-97 season, including a 5-13 mark in the Big East.

Wenzel compiled a 128-135 record in nine years at Rutgers. He guided the Scarlet Knights to NCAA Tournament appearances in 1989 and 1991, when they lost in the first round. However, since joining the Big East, Rutgers is 20-34 overall and 11-25 in the conference.

SLUGGER: Saluki baseball infielder Matt Dettman, a junior from Rockford, practices his batting at Abe Martin Field Monday afternoon in preparation for the University of Illinois. SIUC takes on U of I this afternoon at Abe Martin Field. Game time is at 2 p.m.

A familiar coach once again will step between the lines at Abe Martin Field when the SIUC baseball team takes on the University of Illinois today.

Richard "Itchy" Jones, who coached SIUC for 21 years and is the Salukis' all-time winningest coach with 738 victories, will bring his Fighting Illini squad (9-10; to Carbondale for a non-conference battle with SIUC at 2 p.m.

Saluki coach Dan Callahan, who coached under Jones from 1985-88 as an SIUC assistant, said he enjoys the opportunity to go against his former boss.

"I look back now and realize how much I learned coaching under him," Callahan said.

"I had a decent background coming in from the high school level, but when I got there I realized how little I knew about the game. It was a great honor to learn under a man who had that kind of success."

While Callahan appreciated the opportunity to learn under Jones, the two do not necessarily follow the same philosophy on the field.

"I think you have to adapt to your personnel to be successful," Callahan said. "This year, we don't have a lot of team speed, so we have had to rely on our power hitting."

"I can't say that I have patterned my approach and philosophy to what his was. But I did learn a lot from him that I use each season."

Jones' success not only is evident to former Saluki coaches such as Callahan, but also to some of the SIUC players.

Sophomore center fielder Joe Schley said the Salukis look forward each year to the opportunity to play Illinois, which has Tennis squad finishes up non-conference schedule with a win and a loss.

BRAD WEBER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC freshman Randy DeGuzman is gaining more confidence as he continues to learn the NCAA rules of tennis.

DeGuzman who is from Metro Manila, Philippines, said tennis in the United States differs from his homeland, but he is beginning to learn how to adapt.

"In recent weeks, I've gotten the grasp of the NCAA rules," he said. "In Asia I played on a different level, so it is difficult to adapt to a new form of tennis here at the college level."

DeGuzman, along with the rest of his Saluki teammates, are beginning to find their rhythm as the men's tennis team went 1-1 in Murray, Ky.,

Saturday. The Salukis are now 3-5 on the season.

Junior Mick Smyth highlighted the morning matches against Murray State University, defeating his opponent in three straight matches. SIUC went on to beat Murray State 4-3.

In the afternoon matches, the Salukis were overpowered by a strong University of Memphis team, losing 7-0.

Coach Brad Iftner said he was expecting close matches but did not expect the performance from his team he saw against Murray State.

"I was happy with the way the team battled back after being down 3-0," he said. "It showed that we could win the close matches."

However, the performance against Memphis was something Iftner would like to forget.

"Against Memphis we looked flat," he said. "In practice we're going to step up our conditioning because we looked very tired losing to Memphis."

Junior Brian Etzkin said the team had a difficult time coming back with a strong performance against Memphis.

"After the first match, it was difficult for us to regroup," he said. "I think mentally we didn't work as hard to refocus our goal, which was to win."

DeGuzman said the team was still tired from its recent spring break trip, where the team played five matches in seven days.

"We had to drive for more than 14 hours on the way back from Florida," he said. "When you play everyday and sit in a car that long, you're going to feel tired like we did at the start of the day Saturday."

Freshman Juan Carlos England thinks the team's performance against Memphis Saturday could have been much better than it was. "As a team we didn't perform well Saturday," he said. "We could have won a few matches against Memphis;
