Five deans: No collective bargaining

Staff Writers

The deans of SIU want to make their position on collective bargaining clear to their faculty. Of six deans contacted, five said they are opposed to collective bargaining and have sent letters to their faculty explaining their stance.

There are 11 deans of colleges that will be represented in collective bargaining.

Communications and Fine Arts Dean Keith R. Sanders said he won't support collective bargaining representation Nov. 16, because he doesn't feel it would make any difference.

Sanders sent a letter to University faculty and staff giving his reasons for opposing collective bargaining.

"I have been very quiet about my views, but several faculty members had asked me whether collective bargaining would help us," Sanders said.

In the letter, Sanders said his key reason for opposing collective bargaining is because it would have little or no impact on the amount of state dollars coming from Springfield.

"Factors influencing funding for higher education in general, or for SIU-C in particular, are many and complex," he said.

Sanders said union representation won't change the health of the national and state economy, the willingness of the governor and the Legislature to raise new revenues, the political ambitions and educational sensibilities of the governor and the Legislature or the willingness of all the levels of education to work together.

"The presence or absence of one or two new bargaining units at the Carbondale campus of SIU simply will not matter," Sanders added.

Both the Illinois Education Association and University Professionals have said the state has the money and the unions can bring that money to the University.

Although the five universities in the Board of Governors system received a 9.95 percent salary increase this year, Sanders said, "They fare no better than the other universities in the state."

"Its (Board of Governors) institutions are at 86.5 percent of the median salary paid at their peer universities," he explained.

Sanders also said collective bargaining would encourage the development of an adversarial attitude between faculty and administration that would destroy the environment many faculty members worked to create and maintain.

Thomas Gutteridge, dean of the College of Business and Administration, also opposes collective bargaining. In a

TCI cable assesses options

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

Although the city's cable contract doesn't expire until July 1, 1990, it is investigating other options to the current cable television system.

The Carbondale Cable Commission is in the process of evaluating information collected earlier this year in a subscriber survey and a series of public hearings.

The 42-item-multiple-choice survey was offered this spring by the commission to randomly selected cable subscribers.

It included open questions on what subscribers would like to see changed as well as specific questions concerning the quality of maintenance, programming and service.

The main reasons cited by subscribers for cable subscription were more channels and better reception.

However, poor programming and poor channel reception topped the list of complaints, followed by interrupted and repetitive programming and expensive service.

People also complained of slow repair service, problems with the installment process, frequent busy signals on Cablevision's business phone number and rude employees and South Illinois Avenue Monday night. The circus will perform at the SIU Arena tonight at 7:30 and Wednesday at 3:30 and 7:30 p.m.

Problems postpone parade of circus for several hours

By Wayne Wallace
Staff Writer

A parade welcoming the Ringling Brothers' Barnum and Bailey Circus to town was delayed until 1 a.m. today, a local deejay said.

The parade down South University Avenue was planned for 7:30 p.m. Monday but was postponed because of complications in Champaign, Steve Falat, program director for WTOA said.

Falat and WEBQ's Joanne Sayer were supposed to ride elephants in the parade.

The circus will perform two shows at the Arena today and one Wednesday.

About 200 people waited for the train at the old train station on Main Street and South Illinois Avenue as some circus members tried to answer the pervasive question, "When will the parade start?"

At first, it was delayed to 9:30, then to 11:30 and eventually 1 a.m.

Falat summed up the evening's atmosphere as exciting but disappointing.

Melissa Steeb, of Carbondale, said she is going to see the circus at the Arena and she is excited. She said her favorite part is the clowns.

At first it was delayed to 9:30, then to 11:30 and eventually to 1 a.m.

"I'd like to be in their shoes," Steeb said.

Kim Brines, a senior in elementary education, said "Yes (I'm excited). I haven't been to the circus since I was in grade school."

She said she likes the tigers because "they are so ferocious."

Melody Hesketh, 12, who is going to the circus on Wednesday, said she likes the trapeze acrobats.

Tammy Smith, a freshman in radiology technology, said she likes the elephants because of Dumbo and the high wire act.

Harold Clemens, a University student said he has never seen the circus but is looking forward to the elephants and the clowns.

Another student, Tom Townzen, said the closest he's ever come to seeing the circus was the Shriner's circus.

Laurie Knowlton, of Carbondale, said she sympathizes with circus people and said it "must be difficult not going to a home each night but going to a railroad car."

Palestine proclaims free state

ALGIERS, Algiers (UPI) — The Palestinian parliament-in-exile voted overwhelmingly Monday to proclaim an independent state in the Israeli-occupied territories and implicitly recognize the state of Israel.

PLO sources said a "declaration of independence" would be read shortly after midnight at the Palestine National Council meeting being held in the Club des Pins Conference Center on the Algerian coast.

At their plenary session, 253 delegates to the extraordinary meeting voted for the "political statement" that calls for the creation of the Palestinian state in the West Bank and Gaza Strip and endorses U.N. Resolution 242, which recognizes Israel's right to exist.

There were 46 votes against the statement and 10 abstentions.

The statement called for "the convening of an effective international conference under the auspices of the U.N. with the participation of all parties involved in the conflict, including the PLO, on an equal footing on the basis of (U.N.) Resolutions 242 and 338 and guaranteeing the legitimate national rights of the Palestinian people, above all, rights to self-determination."

"The Palestine National Council rejects terrorism of every kind, including state terrorism, and confirms U.N. Resolutions 27-159 and 49-6, and the Cairo agreement of 1985," all relating to anti-terrorist activities and the protection of civilians, the statement added.

The statement called for Israel to withdraw to 1967 borders and return East Jerusalem to the future Palestinian state. It called for the West Bank and Gaza Strip to be placed under U.N. supervision for a limited period "to achieve security and peace for all."

The council represents Palestinians scattered throughout the world.

Israeli minister Shamir agrees to new government

JERUSALEM (UPI) — Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir accepted the task of forming a new government Monday, promptly vowing to crush the Palestinian rebellion and rejecting any suggestion of peace talks with the PLO. He also sought to reassure American Jews that the Conservative and Reform movements will not be branded outlaws through legislation proposed by the two ultra-Orthodox religious parties as a price for their joining his coalition government.

Kabul government stages weekend offensive

KHYBER PASS, Pakistan (UPI) — The Soviet-backed Kabul government recaptured a 55-mile highway in eastern Afghanistan and a strategic town on the Pakistan border in a massive weekend air and ground offensive, Afghan rebels said Monday. Officials in Pakistan said a 14-year-old boy and three Pakistani paramilitary troopers were killed and six injured by stray missiles from the fighting across the border.

Rebels kill 27, wound 3 in Sri Lanka attack

COLOMBO, Sri Lanka (UPI) — Tamil rebels seeking to scuttle elections crucial to an Indian-backed peace plan ambushed a bus Monday in northeastern Sri Lanka, killing at least 27 members of the island's ethnic Sinhalese majority and wounding three. Sinhalese extremists, meanwhile, pressed a drive in the south to force the downfall of President Junius Jayewardene, blowing up an electricity pylon, erecting roadblocks and staging attacks that left at least two people dead and three injured, officials said.

Campaigns for open election in Pakistan end

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan (UPI) — Opposition leader Benazir Bhutto and members of a government-backed political alliance wound up their campaigns for Pakistan's first open elections in 11 years with massive rallies Monday in key cities. Troops in armored personnel carriers were deployed in the streets of the southern port of Karachi, Pakistan's largest city and the scene of widespread ethnic unrest in recent months, to prevent trouble during Wednesday's National Assembly polls.

Carriers ordered to start random drug tests

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Transportation Department imposed controversial new rules Monday that will subject 4 million workers in safety or security jobs to random drug testing starting in December 1989. The new regulations require transportation companies to test aviation, mass transit, railroad, commercial bus and trucking, pipeline and maritime workers. Companies also will be required to test before they hire a worker, at regular intervals after hiring, after accidents and when there is probable cause to suspect drug use.

Computer manhunt nabs narcotics fugitives

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Federal agents aided by a computer took just 10 weeks to arrest 218 narcotics fugitives, including a man serving — under an alias — on a Florida sheriff's drug abuse committee, the U.S. Marshals Service announced Monday. Marshals Service Director Stanley Morris, heralding the inter-agency pilot operation as one of the most successful fugitive sweeps in U.S. history, told a news conference that agents also seized more than $1.26 million in criminally obtained assets.

Authorities find 7th body, search for killer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (UPI) — The lavishly landscaped yard of a Victorian boarding house yielded a sixth and seventh body Monday as authorities searched for the white-haired, matronly manager who slipped away during the weekend. Dorothea Montalvo, 59, who served a prison sentence for forgery and for drugging and robbing people she met in bars, is suspected of killing residents for their Social Security, disability or welfare checks.

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. # Project provides gifts for underprivileged kids

By Beth Clavin
Entertainment Editor

As children, some people might have been disappointed by Christmas because their parents simply could not afford the gifts that go along with it.

"Share Your Blessings" is a way for people to keep other children from experiencing the same disappointment.

"Share Your Blessings" is a project that provides Christmas gifts to those children in Southern Illinois who will not have presents unless interested persons become involved.

The project asks interested individuals or groups to sponsor a child for Christmas. Sponsors will receive the names of children who have been identified by the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services as needing help this Christmas.

Sponsors receive only the first names and wish lists from the children they sponsor. All other information is kept confidential.

When becoming involved in the project, sponsors pledge to spend at least $50 on each child. After wrapping the gifts and tagging them, the sponsors deliver them to a designated pick-up point so DCFs workers can deliver them to the proper family in time for Christmas.

Ron Doerge, Lake of Egypt, said he began the program six years ago after he sponsored one family at Christmas. Since then the project has grown immensely, with 570 children from 257 families receiving gifts last year.

Doerge, with his wife, Ann, continues to head the project, which provides help for children in Williamson, Franklin, Jackson, Perry, Saline, White, Gallatin, Pope, Hardin, Massac and Johnson counties.

Doerge said although there are several similar projects in the area, this one is unique.

"We are able to buy the child things that they really want... and the things that mom and dad would buy if they were able to do so," he said. "We're a kind of circuit Santa Claus for the children."

"God has given all of us more than we can use, and this gives us a chance to share some of that," he said.

Doerge said many people who sign up for the project spend much more on the children than $50.

He said this is a positive aspect of the project, but he encourages sponsors to buy gifts for more children rather than spending extra money on a few. This will mean that more children will receive gifts, and children will not face the possible disappointment of receiving fewer gifts than the year before.

The sponsor receives the first name and a wish list from the child and all other information is kept confidential.

Doerge said he would like all interested parties to sign up for the project as soon as possible because of the amount of time required to complete it. To sign up, call one of the following phone numbers: Harrisburg area — 252-3278, Marion area — 964-1870 and Carbondale-Murphysboro area — 687-3805.

The project is made possible by the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services, area churches, Marion Kiwanis Club, Harrisburg Lions Club and the Murphysboro Kiwanis Club.

Women's committee responding to issues

IN RESPONSE to a recent study, 15 women explained why they left SIU-C for other Universities. The answers were not surprising.

The main reason these women left was because of low salaries. Although male faculty are leaving SIU-C for the same reason, the University still cannot afford to lose female faculty when they already are outnumbered six to one by male faculty.

THE MORE important reasons women are leaving the University include, a hostile work environment, greater chances for advancement elsewhere, incidents of sexism and sexual harassment and lack of respect by male colleagues and students.

President John Guyon and University administrators have balked on responding to these problems until a women's task force committee carved the issues in stone.

IN A LONG overdue move, Guyon recently established the University Women's Professional Advancement Committee to deal with these problems. The committee is composed mainly of women.

The task force, headed by Uma Sekaran, professor and chairwoman in management, responded immediately to the problems. Sekaran expressed interest in reinstating an internship program canceled two years ago that allowed one or two women to be trained in the administration or president's office.

SEKARAN AND the committee also helped revise the University's sexual harassment policy, which was approved by the University. Other topics on the committee's agenda include salary equity, placing more women in administrative positions, recruiting more women faculty and creating a job bank from the surrounding area to help the spouses of prospective employees find jobs.

GUYON AND University administrators faced these same problems before the committee was appointed, but they refused to respond until the task force told them what they already knew.

By passing the buck to the committee, Guyon and University administrators did the best thing. In one month, the committee was able to do more for women than the University could in one year.

Opinions from elsewhere

San Francisco Examiner

George Bush will become the 41st president, and at this point his real challenge begins ... The vice president won a commanding victory, running on traditional themes and riding on good times ... Bush simply struck more chords that the people wanted to hear than did Gov. Michael Dukakis. As the tumult of the election fades away, answers must be produced for the questions left unanswered during the collision of Bush and Dukakis, which mainly was an exercise of shallow cliché and media posturing ... Now, while he still has the momentum of his victory, he should try to draw the public to a program of remedies and objectives ... if indeed we are to receive such a vision from George Bush.

Chicago Tribune

The American people finally have had their turn. And George Herbert Waker Bush, who has spent a fair amount of his lifetime preparing for the job and much of the last 10 years running for it, has been chosen. ... But the 64-year-old Republican standard-bearer brought it off, surviving his ill-deserved early portrait as a wimp to establish that he was plenty tough enough to win ... Part of the unfortunate price for his new image was an unsavory, negative campaign that ... projected the gentlemanly George Bush as a political hard case. George Bush must swiftly put the uglier moments of partisanship behind him. That should come naturally to him. Except for his brief run in recent weeks ... he's been a lifetime model of style and class.

The (Baltimore) Sun

For the first time in 16 years, the American people have elected a president who is a product of the federal establishment, a man who knows government, likes government, is part of government and is well-acquainted with governments around the world. The complaints heard from allied leaders about Jimmy Carter and the early Ronald Reagan, provincial governors both, do not apply to George Bush. If Bush brings a resume to office, he does not bring a mandate. He could face a collision with revenge-minded Democrats in Congress. Yet Mr. Bush deserves a honeymoon. He deserves a chance to show that the "kinder, gentler" nation he invokes really will materialize.

One sore loser hasn't saved last dance for 'Genghis' Bush

SO NOW he wants to be president of all the people; now he wants to bind up wounds, unite us and play kissy-face. Now that George Bush has won, he wants to let bygones be bygones.

Sorry Genghis, my dance card is full.

I am one of those people known as a sore loser. Oh, I don't mind losing an election — Lord knows, I've done it often enough — but when a candidate burns an "L" on my lawn, plays up to the Yahoo vote and tells egregious lies about my team, I am not going to rush to his embrace just because his appalling tactics proved successful. Thus I am unmoved when Mr. Bush calls me to his kinder, gentler America.

MIKE DUKAKIS doesn't feel that way, apparently. The morning after the election — his ear hanging by a thread and his nose pushed around to the side of his face by the mugging Bush had administered him — Dukakis said of his former opponent: "He will be our president. And we will work with him."

You always were a wimp, Mike. That's why you lost.

Personally, I am not going to work with President Bush. Why should I? I'm a liberal, someone way out of the mainstream. I believe in social justice, civil rights. I am even a card-carrying member of the ACLU (or would be if I paid my dues). Why would Mr. Bush want the support of such a degenerate anyway? I might be harboring a fugitive murderer-rapist in my attic, I might celebrate the Fourth of July by burning the flag. You never know with liberals.

No, Mr. President-elect, you're better off without me. I shall continue to stand at the side of the battle, making faces and rude noises.

I WOULD, however, offer this advice to those Democrats and liberals who intend to cooperate with the next president: "Don't let him raise taxes."

I know, we're going to need a tax increase sooner or later to save the country; it doesn't matter. You've had this game played on you before. Ronald Reagan was elected on a promise not to raise taxes, then he raised them and blamed the Democrats. Don't let Bush do the same thing!

If President Bush finds that he can't get along without new taxes, make him go to the American people and say: "Remember when I said I wouldn't ever raise taxes? Read me lips — I lied." If the country needs saving, let George take the fall. It's either that or reconciling yourselves to never again having a liberal in the White House.

In any case, an argument could be made for the fact that Mr. Bush has a clear mandate from the American people to run enormous budget deficits. Surely there was no indication that they were unhappy in the slightest with the huge deficits run up by the Reagan administration. And Mr. Bush's campaign promises to lower taxes and raise defense spending — a certain prescription for even higher deficits — brought no howls of outrage from voters. There you have it. The American people want a big deficit and Congress should help President Bush achieve it. We are a democracy, after all

IF YOU INFER from the foregoing that I am a trace bitter about the recent election, you are right. I felt that Mr. Bush ran a truly reprehensible campaign and I took it personally.

I didn't mind its overall negativity — I rather like negative campaigns, saying bad things about an opponent has a certain air of sincerity about it — but several times it reached beyond that into dangerous and destructive demagoguery. The first instance was when the campaign used President Reagan to promote a rumor that Dukakis had undergone psychiatric treatment earlier in his life. The campaign denied that it had anything to do with the rumor but I discount that. You don't get a vicious story amplified by the White House without some ingenious plotting.

In any case, what the episode did was reinforce the notion that there is a stigma attached to seeking professional psychiatric help in times of great stress, an attitude that sets the cause of mental health back 40 years. And they used the office of the presidency to do it. That was low.

THEN THERE were the Willie Horton ads, featuring pictures of the black man who had committed a rape while on furlough from his prison term for murder. The Bush people said the ad had nothing to do with race but that's absurd. You simply can't show a black thing like that, night after night, without exciting racial stereotypes, in this case the black guy who wants to rape your sister.

It was dirty, rotten, segregationist campaigning — unforgivable.

And now, all of a sudden, Bush wants to be Mr. Nice Guy.

Sorry Mr. President-elect. With a courtship like yours, who needs a honeymoon? Let's get straight to the fighting.

Overall, of the 889 subscribers surveyed, 101 were "dissatisfied," 45 were "very dissatisfied," and 254 were "neither satisfied or dissatisfied."

Forty-three subscribers were "very satisfied" and 420 were "satisfied" with the service.

"It all boils down to a significant number of subscribers are unhappy with the current service. Ideally, everyone should be satisfied," said David Atkin, professor of radio and television.

"I would say 90 percent of subscribers have no problems," said the TCI employee who declined to be named for fear of being fired.

Although admittedly "underwhelmed" by public support, Dr. Charles Klasek, head of the commission and associate vice president of academic affairs, said that he thinks that the topic is of interest to Carbondale residents, particularly students.

"People are at the mercy of the marketplace. They (Carbondale Cablevision) charge a lot for minimal service and aren't willing to make concessions," he said at a recent cable commission meeting.

Carbondale Cablevision provides cable television services for the Carbondale area. The company is a subsidiary of Tele-Communications, Inc., the country's largest cable operator.

The Denver-based corporation controls nearly 20 percent of the cable marketplace.

TCI controls cable franchises servicing 6.6 million Americans with partial interests in franchises that serve an additional 3.7 million viewers.

Carbondale Cablevision offers a maximum of 35 channels within the city limits of Carbondale. The base rate is $16.54, with additional charges for the premium channels: HBO, Showtime, Cinemax and The Disney Channel.

For this fee, the company provides cable channels and the maintenance of the necessary equipment.

A company spokesperson said Carbondale Cablevision employs five technicians who respond to service calls five days a week as well as checking; one-third of the city for technological problems and faulty wiring weekly.

While TCI acknowledges that service interruptions and disconnections have occurred, the company blames interference by the local stations, ham and CB radios, "periods when the sun interferes" and weather problems rather than the cable service.

However, TCI contracts another corporation, Telecrafter, to handle all local advertising and installations, an area in which many have alleged the faulty service has occurred.

Installations are scheduled from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. and 1 to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

"Installation is simply a matter of scheduling. A student might miss a scheduled appointment because of classes or other things that might crop up during the day. Sometimes their (subscriber and installer) paths don't connect. We (TCI) have a vast system," the TCI employee said.

He said he sent the letter "because as a dean I thought they (faculty) should hear my perspective on collective bargaining and unions."

Gutteridge said SIU has a collegial process now, "I can look at the individual. With a union, I have to look at the contract and treat him as a unit."

"It is an adversarial process," he said.

Gutteridge said his letter points out two impacts unions are supposed to have. A union is supposed to have a positive impact on salaries. However, there is no positive correlation that the existence of unions in higher education increases salaries, Gutteridge said.

"Typically, unions exist in community college systems and at less elite colleges. You don't hear about collective bargaining at the University of Illinois. Most business school faculty believe in merit compensation," he said.

The second impact he said unions are supposed to have is to "check on arbitrary, capricious actions of the administration."

Donald Beggs, dean of the College of Education, also sent a letter to his faculty opposing collective bargaining. In the letter he said "We can work better under the current cooperative relationship."

Another opposing view comes from John Jackson, dean of the College of Liberal Arts. He said he sent a letter to his faculty because he believes it is "important for a dean to take a stance on the pluses and minuses of an issue of this magnitude."

He began his letter by saying he is a political scientist and he thinks labor unions are important, but he questioned whether or not a union would improve the University's "external relations."

He said the two unions, IEA and UP, didn't make any difference when it came to the proposed tax increase that failed.

Also, the University has very important "internal relations," Jackson said. He said the Faculty Senate, the Graduate Council and the College of Liberal Arts Council are important parts of the "internal relations."

"The Faculty Senate makes important policy recommendations and is listened to by the administration," Jackson said.

On Nov. 9 Richard Dutcher, dean of the College of Science, sent a letter to his faculty saying he was not in favor of collective bargaining.

He said he wrote the letter so the faculty and administrative staff would know his position.

Kenneth Peterson, dean of Library Affairs, also sent a letter on Nov. 9. "I did not state my position. I raised questions concerning salary, governance and management and whether collective bargaining would improve those situations. I pointed out what gains we have made in the past 10 years in salary."

The law and medical schools were excluded from the collective bargaining unit during the unit determination hearings, Peter C. Goplerud III, associate dean of the law school, said. The graduate school is not treated as an individual unit because their faculty is spread throughout the University, and they will be affected through their various faculty.

Jackie Spinner, Nora Bentley and Mark Barnett contributed to this story.

Newly elected president of the Black Graduate Student Association, Vince Jackson, said he wants to confront the problems black students are having in the educational environment.

"My main goal is to increase the number of black graduate students coming in and those leaving with adequate credentials to get good employment and improve prospects for good employment," he said.

The third-year law student said he is trying to develop a mentor program for freshman graduate students in various departments including the School of Medicine and School of Law.

"The grad students would take the new graduate students under their wing and tell them how to make their stay in the program more viable," Jackson said.

Outdoor exercise in winter should be done with caution

If people enjoy exercising outdoors, there is no reason they should stop just because of cold weather.

As the seasons change and the temperatures begin to drop, people begin to refer to the chill factor, which is the measure of how cold the temperature feels to the body when the wind's effect on temperature is considered.

For example, a runner running at 10 mph into a 5 mph headwind creates the equivalent of a 15 mph headwind. If the actual temperature was 30 degrees F, the 15 mph headwind would create a chill factor of 10 degrees F.

Suggestions for exercising in cold weather are numerous.

It is best to wear several layers of clothing, rather than one bulky layer.

The layer of clothing next to the skin should consist of a material that will allow for the passage of heat and sweat.

To Your Health

When the temperature is above freezing, the outermost layer should be waterproof.

When the temperatures are low, it is important that the outermost layer be windproof.

Always wear something on the head. A considerable amount of the body's heat is lost through the head.

Mittens keep the hands warmer than gloves.

People can cover their noses and mouths if the air is distressful. Contrary to popular belief, breathing cold air is not harmful to pulmonary tissue.

Plan running and cycling routes, so that the least amount of time possible is spent moving directly into the wind.

Preventative measures and common sense are the best ways to reduce the risk of cold exposure injuries.

Cold injuries most often seen resulting from activity outdoors include frostnip, frostbite (superficial or deep) and chilblains. When cold exposure injury occurs, it is best to seek medical attention.

For details concerning this subject of any exercise or fitness related questions, please contact the Sports Medicine Office for Intra-mural+Recreational Sports at 536-5531.

To Your Health is produced in conjunction with the Wellness Center

A QUEST FOR EXCELLENCE

At SIUC, Mission Statements have come and gone, been filed and forgotten. For faculty, one goal, one quest has remained clear - a striving for excellence has been at the heart of our efforts in teaching, research, and service; personal excellence and institutional excellence. We believe in SIUC. We have invested our energy, our creativity, and our hearts in attempting to make this a better University. In the face of declining resources, lack of direction, and confusion over our institutional mission we have individually persevered; and in our own fields, many of us have achieved individual success. It is now time for us to unite and accomplish collectively what we have individually been unable to achieve—the actualization of the potential for excellence that lies latent within SIUC as an institution. Collective bargaining with SIUC-IEA/NEA can help us realize this goal.

Institutional excellence through increased funding, full faculty participation, and contractual accountability can be achieved at SIUC. Collective bargaining is a means, a tool to further that goal. The most compelling issue at stake on November 16th is whether or not we, as faculty, will have a real voice in the shaping of SIUC's mission in the future.

Join us in our quest for excellence. Vote SIUC-IEA/NEA tomorrow.

Since 1968 faculty at over 40% of all public institutions of higher education have voted in favor of collective bargaining. Not one public college or university has ever voted to abandon collective bargaining.

UP-THE PROFESSIONAL UNION

The IEA recently circulated a pamphlet entitled "Where Does the Money Go?" We are alarmed, not at the IEA's justifiable concern about faulty administrative priorities, but at what can only be construed as inept and ambiguous analysis with, it seems, gross inaccuracies in data.

For example, in comparing their figures with those in a similar report contained in the SIU Financial Self-Study for the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools, we found discrepancies of a magnitude to call into serious doubt the IEA document. The following shows the IEA figures (in millions) followed by the Self-Study figures in parentheses:

Category	FY1966	FY1967
Institutional Support	40 (29)	43 (24)
Instruction	112 (86)	118 (91)
Academic Support	25 (19)	28 (20)
Research	18 (21)	19 (21)
Student Services	20 (25)	20 (22)

There is no point in going into detail to criticize this report when it is impossible to verify how the report came up with its data and conclusions. If the administration is mispending its funds, a responsible union would address it in a report that can stand up under professional scrutiny.

We firmly believe that collective bargaining will force the administration to be more accountable. On that we have no disagreement with the IEA. But you can be sure that the University Professionals will analyze the budget professionally and competently. And it will be done by people who have an intimate knowledge of this campus and its budget.

Official sues firm over contest ads

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

Stemming from complaints by Illinois residents, Attorney General Neil Hartigan filed a consumer fraud suit Monday against a company advertising a sweepstakes.

According to a spokesperson at the Attorney General's Office, the suit accuses Watson & Hughley Company of using Alexandria, Va., of using "deceptive sweepstakes advertising to solicit charitable contributions from Illinois consumers."

Fifty-three complaints have come in from Chicago, Rock Island and Springfield, David Curry, spokesman for the attorney general, said. Three complaints came in to the office in March and further complaints have been received since Oct. 17, he said.

"More than 50 complaints have come in within the past two weeks and the number is growing by the day," Curry said. "People are asking, 'Is this legitimate? Can you recommend we do this?' And we can't."

Locally, however, no one has reported receiving the letters. "There have been no formal complaints filed at the Carbondale regional office of the Attorney General," Mike Bastien, administrative assistant at the Carbondale office, said.

Letters believed to originate from Watson & Hughley do not bear the company's name, but will have either the American Heart Disease Foundation, Cancer Fund of America, Center for Alternative Cancer Research, The Walker Cancer Research Institute, Pacific West Cancer Fund or the National Animal Protection Fund on the letter. Curry said the Attorney General's Office is investigating whether these charitable organizations are legitimate.

Letters originating from the company will be recognizable by a "cash disbursement box," Hartigan said.

"The letter indicates that if your name appears in the 'cash disbursement box,' you are guaranteed to receive a prize check and you have a one-in-three chance to win an additional $1,000," Hartigan said. "To qualify, you're instructed to return the 'official cash claim voucher' with a $7 charitable donation or a voided blank check."

According to Hartigan, the small print in the letter says that total prize money equals $5,000. The print is "so small you can hardly read it," he said.

2 Herrin residents dead after accident

By Mark Barnett
Staff Writer

Two Herrin residents died from injuries they received in a two vehicle accident on Giant City Road at 9:25 p.m. Saturday.

Kurtis L. Bush, 25, of Herrin was pronounced dead at the scene by Jackson County Coroner Don Ragsdale and Susan McVicker, 46, of Herrin died at Memorial Hospital in Carbondale at 1:40 p.m. Sunday. Jackson County Sheriff's Department officials said, McVicker received multiple injuries in the accident, including massive head injuries, Ragsdale said.

Five people were involved in the two vehicle accident that occurred north of Pleasant Hill Road, police said.

"The investigation indicates the Bush vehicle skidded into the northbound lane where it was struck by the McVicker vehicle," Brent Mosel, Jackson County Sheriff's deputy, said. Mosel said the accident occurred on a gradual curve in the road, but the pavement was wet after a rain storm.

No cause of the accident has been determined, police said. Mosel noted the curve had no significant history of accidents. "It's not a bad curve. It's a gradual curve. We haven't had a lot of accidents at the curve," he said. Mosel also said the area was not lighted.

Bush's vehicle was hit by a car driven by Jerry McVicker, 46, of Watseka, police said. Passengers in the car were McVicker's wife, Alberta McVicker, 45, of Watseka; James L. McVicker, 46, of Herrin and his wife, Susan.

Jerry McVicker was flown to Barnes Hospital, St. Louis, Mo., police said. A hospital spokesperson said McVicker received cuts to the left hand and facial fractures, and he is in satisfactory condition.

Alberta McVicker was treated and released from Memorial Hospital and James McVicker is in the intensive care unit in guarded condition, a hospital spokesperson said.

A graveside service will be at 11 a.m. today at Hillcrest Cemetery in Carterville.

Hunters' festival planned

The second annual Union County Hunt Festival, which will be held from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Nov. 18 and 19 at the Anna City Park, will feature all types of demonstrations and shows for the Southern Illinois hunter.

Events include a black powder demonstration by a Civil War era paramilitary group, an "old-fashioned hog kill," and a gun show.

Wood carving and blacksmithing demonstrations will be held, as well as shows by the M&M Exotic Animals of Metropolis and the Southern Illinois Hunting Retrieval Club.

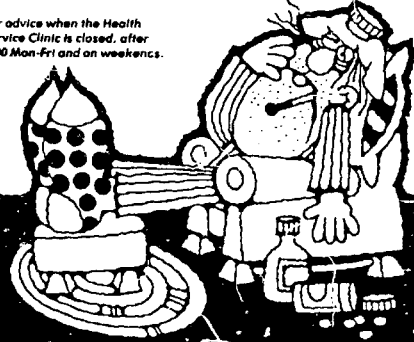

The SIU-C Forestry Club will give demonstrations on log rolling, bolt throwing, speed chopping and speed sawing.

The Police Radar Game: Here's how to play.

When you're out there on the highway, you're under Smokey's jurisdiction. Be assured he will be watching you - and taking radar. But if you know how to play his game, you can win.

KNOWLEDGE AS YOUR BEST DEFENSE

"How to win the Police Radar Game" can help you on the highway by showing you, complete with pictures, diagrams, and easy to understand language, exactly how all police radar works: Stationary radar, moving radar, the deadly "instant on" radar -- and Smokey's new baby, KA Band photo radar. But in addition to that, it gives other valuable information you need to really improve your chances at Smokey's game -- anywhere. You've got to know that he's out there doing his best to catch you at your worst -- so you may as well be as informed as possible.

MORE THAN ONE ANSWER

Relying solely on your radar detector to avoid tickets is by far not your only option. It is one tool out of many shown in this manual aimed at helping you low: your risk considerably. You'll learn the technique of "aggressive driving" -- not simply driving fast. You'll see some of Smokey's favorite types of radar equipment, as well as his least known speed traps.

RADAR CAN BE WRONG TOO

You'll see over ten ways that radar can produce erroneous readings. The latest technologies, including radar jammers and CHIPS detectors, will also be discussed.

LOW COLLEGE TOWN PRICE!

SAVE $7 OFF regular price of $15 by ordering now. Over 40 info and picture packed pages! If you're really serious about avoiding radar, then this manual is definitely for you. Send $8 (postage & tax included) to: peaked during the 1987 season when as a senior on the road at Western Kentucky, she sank the winning basket to propel the Saluki women to an upset of then 11th-ranked Western Kentucky 64-63.

Jenkins, a standout point guard during her years at the University, said however that her most memorable moment came when the Salukis beat Drake to clinch the Gateway title in front of a packed Davies Gym.

"We got over the hump that day," Jenkins said. "Not only by winning the title, but we moved to the Arena the following season."

"That can only help us accommodate more fans. It shows the program is on the move and it should help increase interest."

Jenkins left her mark on the school record books by finishing No. 2 on the all-time assist list with 360, and No. 9 on the all-time list in steals with 103.

Jenkins, who is pursuing a master's degree in sports management, said she tries to relate to players the success she has had in academics and athletics.

"Time budgeting is something I have always been good at I guess," Jenkins said. "I also like to set priorities and goals. Once one is complete, then I go on to another."

And like Scott, Jenkins said she also despises those who don't work up to their capabilities, whether on or off the court.

"I never had a lot of natural talent," Jenkins said. "I hate to see players with a lot of talent not work hard enough."

Jenkins said that appreciating the game of basketball has never been a problem for her. She said she loves the game and is very happy with the progress women's basketball has made at SIU-C under Scott.

"Yes I would like to coach someday," Jenkins said. "Either at the high school level or in a Division III college basketball program. I don't think I'd good enough to coach at a Division I school."

Coach Scott vehemently disagreed.

"I think she is and will be very capable of coaching at this level," Scott said.

Wichita State favored to repeat as Valley champ

Eddie Fogler

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

It would seem the biggest critic of the 1988-89 Wichita State Shockers is their own head coach. Everyone else is convinced.

"On paper, I understand why people went with Wichita State — I vote for us too on paper," third-year coach Eddie Fogler said. "On paper we are the favorite, I know that. But on paper doesn't win it."

What the Shockers do have on paper, and consequently on the court, are the services of four returning starters from a team that appeared in the NCAA tournament for the second straight season.

Preseason Missouri Valley Conference Player of the Year Sasha Radunovich will lead the way with help from twin forwards Dwight and Dwayne Praylow and guard Joe Griffen.

"That is the main thing about this season is we can keep going," Radunovich said in reference to last year's 20-10 record. "Everyone is talking about pressure, but I don't really feel that much on me or on the team."

Radunovich, a 6-foot-10 senior, averaged 14.1 points and 7.2 rebounds per contest last season in helping the Shockers to a second place finish in the Valley behind Bradley.

Fogler said the nucleus is there to have a good season, but the victories are by no means definite.

"Drake (beat the Shockers once) last year, and Sam Roark didn't figure in the picture," Fogler said. "Then he is first team all-MVC and leads the league in rebounding. Who's the next Sam Roark?"

"There's pressure in intercollegiate athletics regardless of where you are picked. The pressure I put on myself is to have to team play up to its potential."

"If we're the best team in the league we'll finish first, and if not, we'll finish where we belong," Fogler said. "We have seven kids back who played in a lot of jail games in the NCAA last year, and that experience has to help us."

Fogler said the experience of playing in the NCAA tournament for the past two seasons is invaluable.

"Even in a loss, you can't replace the experience of participating in the NCAA tournament. Five of our returning players have played in the tournament, and I know they've been disappointed by the results. It's something that can only make them better."

Aussies reunited at game

The Sunday exhibition between the men's basketball team and the Victoria All-Stars produced an unexpected reunion for an SIU-C student and a member of the visiting team.

Penny Walsh, an exchange student from Australia studying journalism, said seeing her first cousin Peter Walsh, a center for the Victoria All-Stars, was a big surprise.

Penny Walsh had gone to the game, won by the Salukis 75-68, not knowing her cousin would be there, she said.

"I went down to speak with him at halftime," Walsh said. "It was really incredible. He said: 'Well, hi cuz,' and we talked about home. He said he's met a lot of Australians during the team's tour."

Gateway volleyball pairings announced

The pairings for the Gateway Conference women's volleyball tournament championship were announced Monday.

The tournament will be held Friday and Saturday at the 20,000-seat Horton Field House in Normal on the Illinois State campus. The Salukis, who qualified as the fourth seed for the third straight season, plays top-seeded Illinois State at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Faculty Appreciation Week continues

Faculty-staff Appreciation Week continues until Sunday at the Recreation Center. Members of the SIU-C faculty and staff can use the facility without charge. For more information, contact 536-5531.

Duke favored by UPI coaches' poll

NEW YORK (UPI) — Duke, which has approached college basketball's summit two of the last three years, Monday became the No. 1 preseason choice of United Press International's Board of Coaches.

Duke, a Final Four participant in 1986 and '88, collected half the 42 first-place votes and 545 of a possible 630 points for a comfortable margin over runner-up Michigan.

Grad assistant plays key role for Cindy Scott

By Robert Baxter
Staff Writer

Marialice Jenkins feels having played basketball under Coach Cindy Scott in the SIU-C women's basketball program has helped her to succeed in her new position as graduate assistant for the women's team.

Jenkins was graduated from SIU-C in 1987 and her ability to inspire players on the sidelines before, during and after the game has become part of her daily job responsibilities.

"I think it helps a lot having played in the program myself," said Jenkins, who is entering her second year as grad assistant. "I think if I do contribute to the coaching staff, that's what I relate to the most (past game experience). I am able to loosen players up and at the same time give them tips that work within the overall game plan (of SIU-C)."

Jenkins said her playing time at SIU-C has given her insight into the way the game of basketball is played here — an insight she might not otherwise have been able to provide coming from another school.

"I think sometimes I can give the players things which are easier to digest than what the coach may give them."

Jenkins said she is limited as to what she can do during the game because NCAA rules allow only the head coach to stand up and move around. But before the game or even before the season, Jenkins said she is always hard at work.

"I do a lot of work in pre-season conditioning,"

Jenkins said. "I also help in mailing letters to recruits and help them adjust to the game at the college level. I also put my two cents worth in when it comes to offensive scoring."

Jenkins was a model student-athlete. During her academic career she finished her undergraduate degree at SIU-C with a 3.75 grade point average in recreation, having earned a perfect 4.0 on two occasions.

Swim coach likes showing despite loss

By John Wailby
Staff Writer

The swimming and diving teams' losses to top-ranked Nebraska may be what a young team needs when starting a new season — a chance to get its feet wet, if you will.

Though Nebraska outscored the Salukis significantly in both the men's and women's competitions, Rick Walker, assistant swimming coach, said the scores didn't tell the whole story.

"The score really didn't indicate how close the meet was," Walker said. "It's hard to explain it without sounding like were making excuses, but any other day we may have done better. Nebraska was just prepared."

The women's team lost 76 to 39 and the men's team was defeated 70 to 45.

"It's kind of a frustrating meet, we felt our kids swam fairly good according to what stage they are at," Walker said.

A bright spot for the men's team was Eric Bradac, who won two freestyle events. Bradac won the 500-meter in 4:34.64 and the 1,000-meter in 9:31.71.

In the 500 freestyle, Bradac beat Nebraska's Peter Williams, who formerly held the world record in the 500-meter freestyle. Bradac beat Williams by only six-tenths of a second.

Another first-place finisher for the Salukis was Alex Yokochi, who won the 200-meter breaststroke in 2:04.61. Behind Yokochi was Nebraska's Sean Frampton who finished with a time of 2:05.94.

Women's swimmer Deirdre Lein pulled out two individual wins to add to the Saluki effort. Lein won the 500-meter freestyle in 5:13.49 and the 1,000-meter freestyle in 10:36.42.

Walker cited freshman Nancy Schmidkofer's swim in the 100-meter freestyle.

"It was a very good swim for her, she's showing well as a freshman," Walker said.

Schmidkofer won the event with a time of 54.06. Behind her was another Saluki, Melissa Steinbach, followed by Nebraska's Kathy Barragan.

Walker said the coaches were still pleased with the performances of Laine Owen and Michelle Albrecht and said a lot of good things are expected out of the diving program.

Bill Meade's theories not necessarily shared

By Megan Hauck

One went for experience. The other got the short end of the stick.

Such was the case between Illinois State gymnastics coach Kim Montgriff and SIU-C coach Bill Meade this weekend at the Southwest Airlines-Huskie Mixed Pairs Invitational in Dekalb.

Montgriff wanted her gymnasts to gain experience from the meet. Meade was looking for a good finish for his gymnasts. Montgriff got her experience, and Meade got a headache.

"Normally you put the best people up," Meade said. "I sent the best people I had. She evidently didn't. That's just plain stupidity on her part."

Brent Reed and Scott Belanger, two veterans of the Salukis' gymnastics team, competed with freshman Bonnie Higgins and sophomore Karen Giroux.

"We picked those who I felt needed the experience, which is too bad for the Southern guys," Montgriff said. "We also didn't pick a safe event, and most people did."

Giroux and Higgins competed on the uneven bars and the balance beam instead of floor exercises. Most of the other women gymnasts chose to compete on floor exercises, an easier event for most gymnasts, Montgriff said.

Reed competed on the high bars and parallel bars, and Belanger competed on floor exercises and high bars.

Reed, a senior, said he expected to compete with Jill Hollenbeck, a veteran Illinois State gymnast he competed with last year. During last year's competition, Reed and Hollenbeck advanced to the semifinals where Hollenbeck suffered a back injury that forced the team to forfeit.

"Last year, (Montgriff) said she'd pair us up again for the meet this year, and she didn't," Reed said.

Montgriff said she did not compete Hollenbeck because the gymnast's back injury had surfaced at the time of the meet.

"Jill is injured. She's somewhat healthy, but she's not 100 percent," Montgriff said. "To have her compete when she's not 100 percent is just asking for trouble."

The Illinois State gymnasts both fell twice, losing a half point each fall. Montgriff said the meet was early for her gymnasts, whose first regular season meet is scheduled for Jan. 21.

"Maybe we have a different philosophy about the meet," Montgriff said. "We use it for experience and for fun."

Reed and Belanger, a junior, averaged 9.3 each, while Giroux and Higgins averaged 8.1 each.

A pair from Houston Baptist, Dawn Mulholland, sister of SIU-C gymnast Marcus Mulholland, and Alfonso Rodriguez, an Olympic competitor, captured first with 75.95 overall. Karli Urban and Paul Linne of Arizona State placed second with 74.85.

Seniors reflecting as end draws near

By David Gallanetti
Staff Writer

For the football team's seniors, Northern Iowa won't be the only thing on their minds this week. Most of them are also dealing with ending a career.

Among the Salukis leaving after this season are split end Joe Cook, noseguard Brad Crouse, offensive linemen Pete Jansons and Rob Mason, cornerback Earnest Mangham, halfback Paul Patterson and linebacker Henry Peer.

"It is weird how goals change from week to week," Mason said. "This has become the most important week of the year."

"I played my worst game of the year at Youngstown, so I'm looking for a bit of redemption for myself. I want to play the best game of my career on Saturday, it is really important to me."

Cook said he will miss playing football, but he will give it his all until the last play of Saturday's game.

"I think I have come to grips with it, but that is what society is all about," Cook said.

"Maybe it just hasn't hit yet. It is hard to accept that it may be my last game."

Pete Jansons

Jansons said he has mixed emotions about hanging up the pads for the last time.

"I'm kind of happy I'm getting it done," Jansons said. "My body feels like its been through a severe car wreck. It won't be bad to kick back in a La-z-boy with a cooler and just watch the game."

"This is probably the last game of my life, and right now it might not seem like a hell of a deal, but I see the seniors from 1984 come back and can tell by the look in their eyes they want to be out there playing."

Mason said there has been no real conscious effort by the seniors to band together, but the Northern Illinois game featured a uniting of the whole team.

"At the Northern Illinois game the whole team banded together. The seniors may try and take charge this week."
