Senates differ over proposal

SARA BEAN
POLITICS EDITOR

The Graduate and Professional Student Council will present its 20-page landlord/tenant package proposal to the Carbondale City Council Tuesday evening, but some people say that it may be asking for too much.

In a recent report to the senate, Undergraduate Student Government President Kristie Ayres said she believes the proposal may be asking for too much at once and could jeopardize the support of the proposal.

"Sometimes asking for too drastic a change results in nothing," Ayres said in the report. "We [the executive staff] are more in favor of highlighting one or two problems that need to be immediately addressed and working our way forward from there."

The proposed ordinance covers several areas, including tenant responsibilities, landlord rights of access, landlord maintenance responsibilities, security deposits, tenant's legal remedies for code violations, subleases, landlord's legal remedies for tenant's violations, rental agreement guidelines and a revision of the city's fair housing policy.

Ayres sent an additional memo to the senate Friday clarifying her original statement, following a confrontation between Ayres and GPSC Law Scholl Representative Terry Dodds regarding her statement.

Ayres said she was "insulted" by Dodds' assertion that she did not support the proposal. She said that she supports the effort, but differs with the manner in which it should be implemented.

"Better living conditions and landlord ordinances in Carbondale are a necessity," Ayres said in her statement. "The question in the mind of the Executive branch is not the 'If' but the 'How.'"

Ayres suggested a joint committee of students, landlords and city officials to review the proposal and make suggestions to the council.

GPSC representative, Terry Dodds said he did not care to comment on Ayres' statement.

will present three portions of the landlord/tenant proposal that the USG Executive Staff believes are most "urgent" at the meeting.

Dodds said he hopes that students will realize how important this is and will turn out to the meeting in full force.

"When we make our proposal on Nov. 17, I expect to see city hall packed with students," Dodds said. "We need to put an end to some of the egregious abuses that have come to our attention in Carbondale."

Dodds said part of the proposal includes capping late fees and charges on rent and setting guidelines for entry into residences by landlords. He also said he studied housing codes in Mt. Prospect, Evanston, Urbana and Chicago to gather the information.

Dodds said he believes this could be one of the biggest issues that SIUC students face this year.

"Every student has a stake in this matter," Dodds said.

The Carbondale City Council will meet at 7 p.m. Tuesday in Room 108 of the Carbondale Civic Center, 200 S. Illinois Ave.

Members of the SIUC Symphony Orchestra immerse themselves in classical music during rehearsal Thursday at Shryock Auditorium. The orchestra will perform at 8 p.m. on Tuesday at Shryock Auditorium. Admission is $3 for general tickets and $2 for students, senior citizens and children. See story on page 5.

Low female attendance baffles administrators

JAY SCHWAB
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC administrators are struggling to understand the factors behind the continuing trend at the University of male students significantly outnumbering female students, and attempting to discover the best way to confront the matter.

Although enrollment figures provided by the Office of Admissions and Records show the gender gap at SIUC narrowing marginally during the 1990s, the issue remains troublesome to administrators.

From the time she arrived at SIUC this past July, Chancellor Jo Ann Argersinger has said increasing overall enrollment at SIUC will be a central focus of her regime.

"We really want this campus to have a very bright future, and part of having that bright future is having a better gender balance on campus," Argersinger said.

"You don't want to go on this way, because as the population of women graduating from high school continues to grow, and if our percentage stays the same or only marginally grows, it means by definition that we will always have an enrollment problem."

Despite a slightly rising percentage of female students at SIUC throughout the 1990s, figures from fall 1998 show an enrollment of 10,588 male students compared to only 9,265 female stucents. The fact that males enroll at SIUC in greater numbers than females annually becomes increasingly perplexing, considering there are a greater number of female than male high school graduates in Illinois.

Argersinger cited the University of Illinois as an example of the majority of universities that reflect the composition of the state's high schools by enrolling more females than males.

Director of New Student Admissions Tom McGinnis, who has been at SIUC for 30 years, is not prepared to label the phenomenon a "problem."

"It's definitely a concern, but is it a problem?" McGinnis asked.

He said before solutions can be suggested to making gender enrollment more equitable, the causes of the disparity need to be more thoroughly understood.

McGinnis speculated that the sizable off-campus military program SIUC participates in, as well as other University programs, such as a focus on engineering and technical careers, may be part of the reason for low female enrollment.

But McGinnis said the high priority Argersinger plans to allocate towards female recruitment and retention issues at the University could

Corrections

In Friday's article, "Professor to release new book," A.J. Morey's non-fiction work was incorrectly identified as a novel.

In Thursday's Daily Egyptian, the article should have read, "Uniformed veterans placed a wreath of red, white and blue ribbons and carnations at the base of the flag." "Mesmerizing Performance" stated the incorrect day for the performance. Nate McVicker, America's Funniest Hypnotist, will perform at 9 p.m.; Wednesday at Coo Coo's, 10240 Samuel Rd. in Carterville.

Leonids to streak November sky

PAUL TECHO
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A potentially spectacular meteor shower is expected to light up the Southern Illinois skies early Tuesday morning.

The annual Leonids meteor shower, which is expected to appear sometime between 2 a.m. and dawn Tuesday, is named because it appears near the constellation Leo.

Don Bless, president of the Astronomical Association of Southern Illinois, said the meteor shower is caused by debris left by Comet Tempel-Tuttle.

"(The meteor shower) is really small rocks and sand grain left behind on the path of the comet, and the Earth then passes through the path," he said.

Thomas Masden, a professor in physics, said what the public sees is actually the grains of sand hitting the atmosphere.

"The grain of sand shoots through the atmosphere," he said. "As it hits the atmosphere, the air gets heated, and we see the glowing which is due to friction. Then it burns up and slowly turns into dust and recondenses into the earth's upper atmosphere and falls back into earth."

The Leonid meteor shower reaches a maximum level of intensity about every 33 years, at which time one can see a meteor storm instead of a meteor shower. A meteor shower has 20 to 100 meteors per hour of watching, while a meteor storm contains 1,000 meteors per hour.

Bless said that during the last meteor storm in 1966, 150,000 meteors per hour could be seen for about 20 minutes. That averages out to about 40 meteors every second.

"This time the meteor storm will hit over in Asia," he said, "but I estimate that we will see a good 100 per hour. And next year should be a bit better — we should be a bit more in front of the comet."

Masden said the shower will be more visible in Asia because the region will be having its sunrise when the earth's rotation hits the peak of the densest, part of the path of the comet. Bless said that for best viewing, one should find an open area where there are no street lights and look east about half-way up in the sky after midnight.

"You can look higher and higher up as night goes on, and at 5 a.m. look straight overhead," he said. "The maximum activity should be between 5 a.m. and 6 a.m. early Tuesday morning, and there should be some action early Wednesday morning."

Bless said there is no moon in the sky Tuesday morning, and if one looks east of where the meteors seem to be coming from, one can see Mars, which will look like a big red star.

"The Leonid is my favorite meteor shower because of its speed," Bless said. "It's spooky how it just shoots out and tears across the sky. The meteor shower is a nice thing to see, especially if you haven't seen too many shooting stars."

SIUC students arrested for beating another student

Two SIUC students were arrested Friday evening after they battered another student in the 600 block of West Mill Street, Carbondale Police said.

At around 7 p.m. James Devon Robinson, 19, of Marion and Bradley Jerome Whitaker, 18, of Mounds reportedly entered a 19-year-old man's room and beat him with sticks after an argument about an unpaid bill. The victim also received burns during the incident from an iron he was using before the two came to his room. Robinson and Whitaker were charged with aggravated battery and incarcerated at Jackson County Jail.

Western states may hold combined primary

Officials from eight Western and Rocky Mountain states, concerned that the presidential nominating derby tends to leave them in the dust every four years, will huddle in Salt Lake City this week to discuss joining forces for a combined Western Primary in early March 2000. Party chairs and other notables from Arizona, Utah, Nevada, Idaho, Wyoming, Colorado, Montana and New Mexico will hash out plans for a regional primary, hoping to draw the time and attention of White House hopefuls (and media hordes) who might otherwise sprint from the California and New England primaries on March 7 to the Southern "Super Tuesday" contests.

pave the way to improved gender balance at SIUC in the future, provided it becomes a campus-wide effort. Director of Admissions and Records Walker Allen is among the members of the SIUC community at a loss for a logical explanation regarding females being underrepresented on the SIUC campus.

"I wish I had the answers," Allen said. "It's one of those things that's hard to put your finger on. We'd certainly like to have more female students to see that imbalance corrected."

Allen insists that the situation does not exist because of a lack of effort.

"The chancellor and the faculty work very hard in the recruitment of students," Allen said. "We don't do anything different for women than we do for men."

But Professor of Sociology Kathryn Ward said she has witnessed some factors since her arrival at the University in 1982 that may help make some sense out of gender gap. Like McGinnis, Ward said the emphasis on technical and aviation programs at SIUC — programs that traditionally have drawn a high proportion of males — have led to a campus less likely to attract female students.

But Argersinger pointed out that U of I also is known for traditionally male programs such as engineering and agriculture, yet females comprise the majority of students there.

Ward also suggested that the University's image in some circles as a "party school" acts as a deterrent to prospective female students. She added that the documented correlation between alcohol use and sexual assault is an aspect that may scare off the parents of female high school students familiar with the reputation of SIUC students for alcohol use.

Furthermore, Ward indicated that signs near the Brightway Path discouraging people from walking in certain areas after dark send a negative message about campus safety.

Ward suggested SIUC should be more vocal in letting it be known that the University now provides an excellent atmosphere for minorities of all types, including women, to pursue their educations.

"We need to get the word out that SIUC provides a wonderful, hospitable academic environment for everyone," Ward said, "because we're missing out on a lot of talent."

Ward said she believes that although progress has been made toward SIUC becoming a female-friendly campus, the University and community "has a lot more it can do," including ensuring that programs such as Women's Services and the Rape Action Committee are better funded.

Meanwhile, Argersinger said the future of female enrollment at SIUC is bright and that the University will take steps to address the inequity.

"There are some things we can do to make sure that women students want to come here," Argersinger said, "such as have the more successful and distinguished women alumni talk about their experiences here."

"We need to make sure that our crime stats are out there and accurate so that young women can come here and feel comfortable, I haven't heard any reasons why women should not be here, and I think that's the message we need to get out."

The chancellor also said forming a stronger system of feeder high schools that consistently send students to SIUC, doing more out-of-state recruitment and making a more concerted effort to get high school students to visit the University will be instrumental in drawing more women to SIUC.

"Once we get more students to visit the campus, they'll be ours," Argersinger said with a smile. "There is no doubt in my mind they'll become SIU students."

HARMONIOUS: Concert to showcase improvements of symphony since acquiring new director of orchestras.

CHRIS KENNEDY
ENTERTAINMENT REPORTER

Edward Benyas, director of orchestras at SIUC, will lead the SIUC Symphony Orchestra in works by Gershwin, Mozart and Brahms — showcasing the improvement of the symphony since Benyas was acquired. "Brahms is the hardest piece we've done in five years," Benyas said.

The SIUC Symphony Orchestra will perform for community members and students alike at 8 p.m. on Tuesday at Shryock Auditorium. Admission is $3 for general tickets and $2 for students, senior citizens and children.

The symphony mainly consists of students, but community musicians and some faculty members also participate. Benyas said playing in the symphony is a very important part of the students' education.

"It's the only opportunity for them to perform major works," Benyas said. "[The works] lay the art paths for music today, and the students learn to play together, in tune, musically and expressively."

The concert will open with Mozart's "Symphony No. 35," a piece from the 18th century classical period. Although the en. also produced hundreds of other gifted musicians, Mozart — along with Bach and Beethoven — was one of its most famous composers.

"Mozart was a genius," Michael Barta, SIUC School of Music professor and SIUC Symphony concertmaster, said. "[His work] has more wit and more contrast, which raises him above others from his time period."

The second piece will be George Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue." Inara Zandman, a graduate student in music, will be the featured pianist. Zandman has been extremely busy with the popular demand for her skills in solos, accompaniment with other students and working with faculty.

Many people will recognize Gershwin's rhapsody from United Airlines' commercials.

"Gershwin has jazz elements that people will recognize," Benyas said. "They'll leave humming it because they're familiar with it."

The final piece of the evening will be Johannes Brahms' "Symphony No. 1," with Barta as the featured violin soloist. The piece was written during the 19th century Romantic era, but follows forms and structures of the classical era.

Brahms' symphony contains four movements. After a slow introduction, the first movement is fast paced. The second movement returns to a slower pace and includes a violin solo which is characteristic of a Romantic piece. The final movement has a slow introduction followed by a fast finish. It deviates from the first movement by switching into a more upbeat musical key. "Brahms' music is often melancholy, or melodic," Barta said. "I guess you could liken it to the fall season."

Besides providing entertainment, the concert is helping raise funds for an endowment for the School of Music. The endowment will help bring more talented musicians to SIUC because of the greater number of scholarships available for incoming students.

Benyas showed concern about low student turnout at the last concert.

"At the last concert 800 people came. We had to open the balcony," Benyas said. "We had a big community crowd but a low student turnout."

"This music provokes intellectual thought, heartfelt emotions, and gets your sensuality stirring," Benyas said. "You can find more substance in one page of Brahms than in any pop song."

Pop music aside, Benyas is worried about the future of the music he loves.

"Art music is endangered," he said. "It's going to die out if students don't come and see them."

SIUC offers travel to Austria

PLACES TO GO... Study abroad program allows students a first-hand look into European culture.

PAUL TECHO
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Thom Thiebault, director of SIUC's Language Media Center, spent three years in Salzburg, Austria, while directing a foreign study program for the University of Maine and working on his doctorate.

He said studying abroad can be an enriching experience and an opportunity to appreciate different perspectives.

"For me, personally, studying abroad was a wonderful and enriching experience," he said, "and Salzburg is one of the most beautiful places where you can do that. It gave me an opportunity to see and appreciate different perspectives in the world."

SIUC recently announced it will sponsor a new study abroad program in Austria in cooperation with Salzburg College. The program offers a variety of subjects and is designed to be accessible to most students, both financially and academically. Students will live with an Austrian family as an adopted family member.

Applications for the Spring 1999 semester must be picked up by Nov. 16. SIUC students will receive a $1,000 scholarship for the semester that will automatically be applied toward the program fee. A minimum 2.70 cumulative grade point average is required to participate. Students must be of sophomore standing by the time they participate in the program.

Thiebault said living with an Austrian family will expose students to the native culture and language.

There is no German language requirement but participants must study one language course while in Salzburg. The other courses — in European stud-learning of Austrian civilization.

Salzburg College is a 27-year-old institution located in the historical, Meierhof district, which forms part of the 18th-century Leopoldskron Palace estate. The estate is best known as the setting for the film "The Sound of Music."

Salzburg is also Mozart's birthplace and filled with baroque architecture and culture. Thiebault said Salzburg also is a tourist town that is always filled with activities and festivals throughout the year.

The University had a study abroad program in Bregenz, Austria, until two years ago when the city of Bregenz took over the building in which classes were conducted. The University then founded a task force which looked at programs in Germany, Switzerland and Austria.

Anne Winston-Allen, associate professor in foreign languages, said the reason the school chose Salzburg was because the University wanted a program with courses in English and a program that offers courses that fulfill degree requirements for non-language majors.

She said studying abroad can completely change a student's outlook.

"Studying abroad can change how one sees the world and oneself — it is one of the most defining experience that an undergraduate can have," she said. "They will see themselves as a citizen of the world and not just a citizen of the United States."

ies, photography, communications studies, art and music — are offered in English. Students with advanced German skills may also take courses at the University of Salzburg or with one of SIUC's exchanges with German and Austrian universities

The program begins with a one-week study tour through Germany that will introduce students to European culture.

There will also be a five-day field trip to Vienna that will allow students to integrate much of what they have been

SIUC coach Bruce Weber said his team lacked "poise" down the stretch.

"The big change in the game was when the kid got hurt," Weber said. "That allowed them to rest and let the crowd get back into. They got juiced up a little bit, they made some plays, and we didn't take care of the ball."

SIUC, which had 30 turnovers for the game, came close to ending the Racers' 31-game home win streak. The mark is the second only to the University of Kansas in Division I.

"We held them to 22 points in the second half," Weber said. "If you think about it, they score (nine) down the last stretch, otherwise they score (fourteen) points in the second half. So, we did a nice job defensively."

Monte Jenkins led all scorers with 18 points. Forward Chris Thunell scored eight points (3-of-11 from the field) after missing both exhibition games due to an appendectomy Oct. 21. Forward Derrick Tilmon pulled down a team-high at eight rebounds.

Forwards Isaac Spencer and Duane Virgil paced Racers, with 16 and 15 points, respectively. Spencer also added 11 rebounds.

The loss ruined Weber's coaching debut and an otherwise solid performance from the Salukis. After MSU's full-court pressure forced 14 first-half turnovers and limited the Salukis to 34 percent shooting, the Salukis quickly overcame a 43-29 halftime disadvantage.

"A lot of it, was we just weren't ready to play," Collum said of the slow start. "I think a lot of it was we came out nervous, it was the first game in a new stadium. . . it was a bunch fans and it was loud and crazy."

The Salukis silenced the fans when they gained their first lead, 54-53, on a James Jackson put back with 7:02 remaining. Both teams then remained relatively close before the Salukis opened their biggest margin of six.

Jenkins fueled that run by nailing a three-pointer, performing a spectacular baseline jam and then finding the open Collum for the three in the corner for what would be the Salukis' last basket.

"We choked down the stretch," said Jenkins, who committed 11 turnovers. "We were playing lackadaisical. We were throwing stupid passes, we weren't coming to the ball. We just got a little tentative at the end. When we got the six-point lead, we started to hold the ball."

The Salukis had two chances to tie the game late, but Collum was unsuccessful on both three-point attempts.

"We got to learn from it and take advantage of it," Weber said. "But, they were 29-3. They returned six of their top eight (players). We were going into their place, we were hoping to make history, but you got to be pleased."

record (Reggie Fowler, 125) with his second reception in the first quarter.

Junior running back Karlton Carpenter also finished his record-breaking season on a solid note, carrying the ball 25 times for 206 yards and three touchdowns.

Carpenter finished the season with a Gateway Conference-best 1,892 yards. His play this season has amazed his teammates, especially his quarterback.

"He's one of the greatest backs that I've ever seen," Skornia said. "He's one of the toughest guys, too. A lot of backs you see that gain that many yards are not going for the extra yards. They're not lowering their head, they're ducking out of bounds. Every chance he got he took a shot, and he's just the toughest guy I've ever seen."

Even head coach Jan Quarless, who is not a big fan of statistics, had to marvel at the numbers that his powerful running back put up this season.

"It was a great year for Carp and he'll be a little bit of a marked man next year, but he had a tremendous year," Quarless said. "I'm just really proud of the fact that he responded to some of our challenges.

"I think he just spoke volumes about the way he plays and particularly about the way he practices."

But in the midst of the junior duos' record-breaking season, Quarless wanted a final win for his seniors.

"I think they've been marvelous," Quarless said. "I think they deserve so much credit because they kept this football team together.

"They very much wanted to win and they worked hard this past summer and unfortunately came up short."

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Women fall in season opener

The SIUC women's basketball team was still in preseason form in its 68-55 defeat against Tennessee Tech University Sunday at the SIU Arena.

The Salukis shot just under 36 percent from the field in the first half, falling behind 37-26 at the break.

Throughout the second half they continued to struggle, recording only one field goal in the first 10 minutes. In the process, Tennessee Tech increased its lead to 57-31.

"From the get-go," SIUC coach Julie Beck said, "Our players were probably not in game mode and were not ready to play."

The Salukis only threat came when they switched to full-court pressure, enabling them to get within 12 with three minutes and 20 second remaining.

Senior guard O'Desha Proctor led all scorers with 18, while sophomore forward Terica Hathaway added 14. Center Janet Holt scored 13 points and guard Rachel Gobbel chipped in with 11 points to pace Tennessee Tech.

SWIMMING AND DIVING

Salukis teams wash-out Evansville at home

Both Saluki swimming and diving teams won at their first home meet of the season this weekend against the University of Evansville at the Recreation Center.

The Saluki men (1-6) won for the first time this season 134-90, taking 10 out of 15 events. Winners include sophomore Gavin Anderson (100-yard freestyle and 200-freestyle), junior Luke Wotruba (200-yard butterfly) and junior Gustavo Leal (200-yard individual medley).

The women (3-4), posted a 140-74 victory, guided by double victories by freshman Kristin Kaylor (1-meter and 3-meter dive) and senior Kirsty Albertyn (100 and 200 freestyle).

Both teams will be in action next weekend at the UIC Invitational in Chicago.

VOLLEYBALL

Spikers sweep weekend

The Saluki volleyball team earned the third seed in next weekend's Missouri Valley Conference Tournament with a two-game road sweep this weekend.

On Friday, the Salukis defeated the University of Creighton Blue Jays in three sets, 15-10, 15-5, 15-13. SIUC was led by senior outside hitters Laura Pier (16 kills, 14 digs) and Lindsay Resmer (16 kills, 14 digs).

Saturday the Salukis swept Drake University in three sets 16-14, 15-13; 15-5. Senior outside hitter Marlo Moreland and Pier paced the Salukis with 14 kills each. Pier added a team-best 11 digs. Moreland also had 10 digs and five blocks.

Happy ending

COREY CUSICK
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC senior fullback Bryan Noltbertowicz definitely knows how to go out in style.

Midway through the fourth quarter in his final collegiate game, Noltbertowicz rumbled for a 20-yard touchdown, highlighted by stiff arming a Southeast Missouri State University defender to the ground and taking a head-first dive into the end zone.

"I added a little touch to it," Noltbertowicz said of his touchdown run. "I had to make it look a little spicy."

The 20-yard touchdown scamper was a fitting end for Noltbertowicz, who ran for 67 yards on the day in the Salukis (3-8, 1-5) 34-7 victory over SEMO (3-8, 2-5) Saturday in front of 2,500 at McAndrew Stadium.

"This game will go down with me for the rest of my life," Noltbertowicz said. "This is my last collegiate game, and it's something that I'm going to cherish and take with me for a long time."

After enduring a disappointing seven-game losing streak, the Saluki seniors were determined to win their collegiate finale.

"It was real important," senior quarterback Kent Skornia said. "You know, 3-8 sounds a lot better than 2-9. It's your last game ever and you're going to remember it for the rest of your life."

"I'll remember the last SEMO game as my last game of my senior year. I know we won, so that helps."

Skornia was 15-for-24 for 158 yards in the game, including six completions to junior wide receiver Cornell Craig (74 yards). Craig broke SIUC's career receptions

Weber comes up short in debut, team losses to Racers

SHANDEL RICHARDSON

MURRAY, Ky. — Once Mark McGwire reached 62, he kept going.

Once the Saluki men's basketball team reached 62 on Saturday night against Murray State University, they didn't.

They were stuck on the historic number for the final four minutes and 56 seconds and watched the Racers score the last nine points in a 65-62 season-opening win in front of 7, 633 at the Regional Special Events Center.

SIUC's final basket — a Ricky Collum three-pointer — made the score 62-56, but a brief stoppage in play changed the game completely.

After battling back from a 17-point deficit, the Salukis fell victim to a 10-minute break in the action caused by an injury to Racer forward Marlon Towns immediately after Collum's score. Towns, who apparently ran into an elbow from forward James Watts, suffered a concussion and laid unconscious on the court for nearly 10 minutes before he was taken off on a stretcher.

Once play resumed, the Salukis lost some of the fire that propelled them into lead. The Racers, on the other hand, were a rejuvenated bunch, forcing the Salukis into five turnovers in as many possessions.
