Proposed aid cuts could make for many dropouts, Shaw says

WASHINGTON—A proposed new round of cuts in federal student aid would cost SIU students at Carbondale and Edwardsville as much as $1.5 million and could force many to drop out of school, Chancellor Kenneth Shaw said Thursday. Shaw testified at a hearing of the House Education and Labor subcommittee on post-secondary education, chaired by U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-24th District.

The SIU chancellor was among college leaders attending an American Council of Education convention who went to Capitol Hill to oppose new cuts that Education Secretary T.H. Bell said Wednesday the Reagan administration is considering. SIU-C President Albert Somit was attending the convention.

Bell had told the ACE convention, attended by more than 500 college administrators, that his department is seeking ways to carry out Reagan's order to cut domestic programs 12 percent. He said specific proposals will be unveiled in two weeks.

Shaw said the proposed cuts could eliminate about 2,500 federally-funded grants, loans and other aid to the 34,000 SIU students at Carbondale and Edwardsville.

He said the high cost of borrowing money will make it difficult for students and their parents to make up the difference if federal programs are cut. Shaw noted a recent survey of Illinois college students in which more than 61 percent of those asked said they would be unable to continue their educations without some kind of financial aid.

Shaw told the committee he isn't suggesting that higher education "should somehow be omitted from those groups in society who will be asked to make sacrifices during a period of federal retrenchment."

Bell said the administration is looking for new ways to restrict the Guaranteed Student Loan

Undergrads OK $30 fee more than 2-1

By Mike Anthony
Staff Writer

Freshmen and sophomores voted to retain the current $30 athletics fee by an almost 4-to-1 margin in Wednesday's advisory referendum.

Junior and senior turnout accounted for nearly 50 percent of the ballots cast, according to a computer breakdown of the results, released Thursday by the Graduate Student Council and the Undergraduate Student Organization.

More than 60 percent of the juniors and seniors who voted endorsed the $30 fee, while 60 percent of the graduate and professional students who voted opposed the increase.

Altogether, students voted by an almost 2-to-1 margin of 4,801 to 2,538 to retain the current $30 athletics fee and not reduce it to its former level of $20. A record number of 7,392 students voted in the referendum, but 53 votes were not counted because of a mechanical error in the computer.

About 500 ballots were counted by hand because they were "improperly marked," and were not included in the computer breakdown of results, according to Todd Rogers, USO president.

"I've been sitting on cloud nine all day," Lew Hartzog, acting men's athletics director, said about the overwhelming support for the $30 fee.

"The thing that really pleases me is that when our student body is threatened by the possibility of having our athletics program reduced, they reacted positively."

He said students have reaffirmed a belief I have always had that the majority of students want a proud major University athletics program. He added that he would like to see students overflow the stands at McAndrew Stadium

Option to buy site for county jail OK'd

By Liz Griffin
Staff Writer

The Jackson County Board has approved the option to buy a City of Murphysboro parking lot for a jail site about 1 1/2 blocks north of the county jailhouse.

After meeting in executive session Wednesday, the board voted 10 to 3 to pay $25 for an option on the 19,600 square-foot site, next to the Post Office at 203 N. 11th.

Larry Lipe, ad hoc jail committee chairman, said cost of the land will be based on how much Murphysboro spent for it. City officials have said it will be less than $100,000.

The board was told by the Illinois Department of Corrections to correct jail deficiencies and space shortages in November of 1980.

A referendum on whether the board should finance a new jail by increasing taxes is to come before the voters in March.

After the board's vote, former Murphysboro City Councilman Harry Browdy told the board he would drop his lawsuit that seeks to block the construction of the jail at a previously selected jail site.

The suit—which was being held in abeyance until the county acted—charged that the site previously considered by the board near the offices of School District 186 would violate an Illinois jail statute which prohibits the construction of jails within 200 feet of buildings used for school purposes.

The board's architectural firm was to meet with board members Thursday to further refine jail plans.

U of I may raise tuition up to 41 percent

CHICAGO (AP)—The University of Illinois is considering tuition increases of 10 to 41 percent for next year, according to Ronald Brady, executive vice president of the school.

Brady outlined tuition options to the board of trustees, which met here Wednesday and Thursday.

The tuition increases could produce from $7.9 million to $10.35 million in revenue for the university.

UI President Stanley Ikenberry will recommend tuition increases to the board next month. They are likely to include a second year of tuition differentials in addition to a basic increase of 10 to 12 percent and would take effect next fall.

"We are looking at a tough year," said Ikenberry. "We do believe the differential tuition policy or program or approach worked in the way this board intended."

This was the first year for differential increases—an extra $50 for juniors and seniors, more for graduate students, and even more for students in law, medicine, dentistry and veterinary medicine.

The differentials generated nearly $2 million for the university.

Ikenberry said if the board continues the differential charges, the administration will use the added income "for qualitative program improvements and not allow it to be consumed in the bread and butter operations."

Differentials reflect the higher cost of educating certain groups of students.

Democrats push for oil taxes to restore Social Security

WASHINGTON (AP)—Democrats pressed for a multibillion-dollar tax increase upon the oil industry as the Senate debated on Thursday legislation to restore the $122 minimum Social Security benefit for more than 2.5 million recipients.

Republican aides expressed confidence that a combination of GOP senators and several Democrats would defeat the move by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, D-Mo., to repeal a portion of the "windfall profits" tax reduction Congress gave the oil industry earlier this year. The reduction of the tax on "newly discovered" oil was part of a bill to cut personal income taxes over three years.

Eagleton said his proposal would raise about $14.2 billion through 1990. The money would be earmarked for a new Social Security Reserve Trust Fund to provide a cushion for the financially troubled program.

Republicans said the tax break granted earlier this year is an incentive to explore for more domestic oil and help the country lessen its dependence on imports.

Sources said that Sen. Bob

Dole, R-Kan., and the committee's ranking Democrat, Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La., would attempt to pull the bill off the floor and prevent final passage if Eagleton's amendment succeeded.

But with the defeat of the amendment, the Senate was expected to vote final approval for restoration of the Social Security minimum benefit either late Thursday or Friday. President Reagan, who at first won abolition of the benefit—effective next March—and then called for its restoration, is expected to sign the bill.

Veto of AWACS sale recommended

WASHINGTON (AP)—A Senate committee recommended Thursday that the proposed sale of AWACS radar planes to Saudi Arabia be vetoed, but Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker said he is more confident than ever the sale will go through.

"We have a certain momentum," Baker told reporters. "It's now winnable. Several weeks ago it wasn't."

Baker offered his assessment prior to the Foreign Relations Committee's 9-8 vote against the sale, a lineup that the GOP leader had anticipated.

The committee vote came despite Baker's plea that "not a single issue has more far-reaching consequences for the ultimate security of this country."

And Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., had told his colleagues: "If the Senate rejects this sale, I predict that every senator who votes against it will regret it."

The president said that with the committee vote that close, he's still confident the sale will be approved on the Senate floor.

AWACS surveying Egyptian border

CAIRO, Egypt (AP)—Two AWACS spy planes from Oklahoma began surveillance on Egypt's borders Thursday. President Hosni Mubarak swore in his holdover Cabinet, and Parliament enacted a new law to control internal dissent by prescribing the death penalty for unauthorized use of weapons.

The two airborne warning and control systems planes flew here nonstop from the United States and immediately began patrolling Egypt's northern, southern and western borders, said Gen. Ahmed Nasr, commander of Cairo West military airport.

Stevenson picks up endorsements

SPRINGFIELD (AP)—Former U.S. Sen. Adlai Stevenson III got a boost today in his bid for the Democratic nod for Illinois governor when 41 state lawmakers endorsed his candidacy over that of former Gov. Daniel Walker.

"We believe that he (Stevenson) would be our party's strongest, most effective candidate," said Rep. Aaron Jaffe of Skokie, reading from a statement by the group. "He will unify our party."

Nobel Prize in literature awarded

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP)—Elias Canetti, a shy and reclusive Bulgarian-born writer whose works reflect themes of death and the Nazi regime he fled, won the 1981 Nobel Prize in literature Wednesday.

The 76-year-old author of plays, novels and memoirs written in German was cited by the Swedish Academy "for writings marked by a broad outlook, a wealth of ideas and artistic power."

Canetti has been widely known for five decades in European literary circles but his translated works have sold only about 100,000 copies in the United States since the 1940s, according to his New York publisher, The Crossroad Publishing Co.

GSC passes fee resolutions altering allocation percentages

By Alan Sculley
Staff Writer

The Graduate Student Council has approved resolutions modifying its procedures for allocating activity fee funds to student groups.

The resolutions set general limits for percentages of funds that may be allocated for activities in the GSC's three funding categories.

The limits earmark 60 percent for professional development activities such as attending conferences, 10 percent for University-wide events such as public lectures, and 30 percent for special support for activities that don't fall under the other two categories, such as activities for law or medical students.

The GSC was allocated $19,409 in fiscal year 1981 but actually dispersed only $12,620.

The original resolution, first introduced at a Sept. 2 meeting, would have split the money at 60 percent for professional development, 20 percent for University-wide events and 20 percent for special support. The motion approved Wednesday changed the University-wide and special support percentages.

No percentage guidelines had previously been set for allocating GSC fee money.

The resolution also limits to $200 or 25 percent—whichever is lower—the amount the GSC can provide for a single University-wide or special support event.

The resolution also stipulates that a University-wide or special support event must appeal to a "reasonable number" of graduate students, that it be conducted or co-sponsored by a graduate student organization and that funding requests be made by graduate students.

Other portions of the fee allocation resolution were approved at a Sept. 30 meeting. These provisions included not funding personal research and not funding professional development activities until after the event has been held.

A second resolution approved at Wednesday's meeting urges the administration to split athletics fee money equally between the men's and women's programs.

The resolution also asks the administration to comply with "the spirit and the letter" of Title IX, a federal act prohibiting sex discrimination in sports programs receiving federal funding.

Another resolution, opposing the purchase of the Bracy building in Marion for storage of Morris library's rarely-borrowed materials, was not voted or because the administration had already leased the building.

The storage facility resolution had been introduced at the Sept. 16 meeting, but was tabled at the time because the council had insufficient information about the building. The resolution was not reintroduced at the Sept. 30 meeting.

Board approves plans for new library building

By Bob Bondurant
Staff Writer

Preliminary plans for the proposed new Carbondale Public Library building have been approved by the library board.

The board reviewed the new drawings of the building and an airbrushed rendering of the front Main Street entrance on Wednesday.

The drawings, presented by architect Bill Munson of Carl Walker and Associates of Chicago, included adjustments suggested by the board last month—primarily moving the building back from Main Street.

Plans for the new building show a three-story, split-level structure with room for 75,000 volumes—25,000 more than the current library building holds. It will be located at the former Brush School site on Main Street between University Avenue and Poplar Street.

Munson will spend the next month and a half preparing construction documents to be presented for board approval sometime in November. Bid-letting on construction is expected in January. Work on the library is scheduled to begin in February.

The upper floor of the building will house most of the adult book collection and the lower floor will contain the reference collection along with adult's, young adult's and children's books.

The circulation desk, other service facilities and a meeting room will be on the entrance level.

An inverted skylight is planned for the center of the roof, a feature that Board Vice President Betty Mitchell said she was concerned about. She said she was afraid the skylight would leak, especially if snow accumulates on it, melts in the sunlight and refreezes at night.

Munson told Mitchell that drainage would be adequate to keep the skylight from leaking.

A 56-space parking lot will be constructed to the south of the building with access from Monroe Street. Ramps will also be built to provide access for the handicapped.

White awarded title, but no pay hike

By Liz Griffin
Staff Writer

Jackson County Sheriff Don White was unanimously awarded the title of "supervisor of safety," but was denied in a narrow vote a $3,000 per year pay raise for performing that function.

The request came at Wednesday's Jackson County Board meeting at a time when the board was ironing out its 1982 budget. Pay increases for courthouse employees were in question.

The 7-6 vote included a "no" vote from William Shufleberger, board member and sheriff candidate.

Board member Robert Crim said White had been performing the duties, absent the title and the pay, since 1973.

The supervisor of safety advises the county board about contracts with companies to regulate traffic in parking areas of schools, hospitals, shopping centers and apartment complexes, according to Paul Baertschi, assistant states' attorney.

Baertschi said the Illinois statute provides that the county may or may not pay the sheriff for those responsibilities.

Charlotte West, women's athletics director, said, "I'm very happy and appreciative of the turnout. Certainly no one wants to pay an increase in anything...and when they vote to do it, it's really encouraging."

Rogers said he attributes the record turnout to "an increasing amount of awareness on the part of students about campus issues, and it also reflects a more general interest in the decisions that affect them."

"The referendum showed that 'students feel that the USO and the GSC can work for them in gaining the opportunity for all students to have valuable input into the SIU decision-making process,'" Rogers said.

Fee vote places trust in administrators

The athletics fee referendum, which received a great deal of buildup for several months, is now history.

The turnout— more than 7,300 votes cast— was a surprise. In comparison, the Undergraduate Student Organization elections last spring drew only 4,200 voters. So let us dispel the notion that students are apathetic. The conclusion to this referendum is twofold: Students will vote if they feel that an important issue is at stake; and they will vote if they feel that their decisions will be taken seriously.

The referendum was neither "silly," as one local sportswriter termed it, nor was it a waste of time. It was a welcome opportunity for students to vote on the disposition of their own money.

Not that the referendum was a flawless exercise of its kind. The wording of the referendum was slanted in favor of the $30 fee. It is not likely that that was unintentional, and it hurt the credibility of the entire exercise when the wording is anything short of unbiased. It was a mistake, and it did not escape anyone's attention.

In addition, the referendum was outrageously open to the old practice of ballot-stuffing. Identification was requested and hands were stamped, but there was absolutely no way of preventing a person from washing his hand and proceeding to another polling location. Once again, an example of shoddy preparation and damage to credibility.

The argument has also been made that those who were inclined to vote against the $30 fee did not because they felt the outcome administration would override the outcome had it gone the other way. If skepticism kept a large proportion of the students away from the polls, it is unfortunate. The only way to have found out whether SIU-C President Albert Somit was sincere when he said that the outcome would carry significant weight would have been to call his hand. As it was, his hand was not called, so we will never know.

So much for the flaws. Let us hope they will not be repeated in the future.

The decision has been made. By a 2-1 margin, the students have decided that they want a quality sports program and they are willing to pay $30 to ensure that it will continue to be so.

But hand in hand with that show of support is the assumption that the administration will act responsibly in the allocation of those fees. We live in austere times and that austerity must be imposed on the athletics program, as it is everywhere else at this University.

It is time to scale down our ambitions. It is time for athletics to start cutting things like water polo, golf and soap-bubble blowing from the sports program. Sports such as those are better suited for club status. They are not widely popular sports, they are not spectator sports.

It is time to make Title IX a reality. Women's sports deserve more attention and more funding than they have received in the past. Rhetoric just won't do any more. We are entitled to see some concrete action on this score.

It is also time to restructure the football program. We are not USC and we should not be sending our football team to Fresno State to play. It is time to set our priorities straight. Number one, the University is an educational institution. Football generates an esprit de corps that is a positive contribution to our surroundings. But University life does not begin and end with football. The best method of promoting prestige at this or any other university is by a responsible balancing of priorities and a responsible handling of student monies.

Yes, the students have decided that they will pay for a good sports program. They have given athletics what it wanted, what it said it needed. They have placed their trust in those who will allocate the fee and make the decisions about sports at SIU-C. Now it is a matter of seeing that gesture of trust vindicated.

"Now it is a matter of seeing that trust vindicated".

Sadat was one of history's diamond cutters

IT HAS BEEN SAID that Britain is an island, France is a nation, Germany is a language and Egypt is a river. Recently, Egypt has been a man whose most crucial characteristic was his contrast with his predecessor. Anwar Sadat was not Nasser.

George F. Will

of personal bravery and political brutality. Bravery took him to Camp David, via Jerusalem. But he thought war, too, was necessary for the achievement of his purposes and he launched war.

Nasser was the embodiment of "pan-Arabism," and like the Cairo mobs at the time of his death, he was drunk on the delusion. Sadat, one of the great facts of our time, may have been killed by one of the great frauds, the myth of a "natural" Arab unity. The myth is professed everywhere in the sovereign and fractious states that are the reality behind that destructive fiction, "the Arab world." But it is a myth everywhere belied by behavior.

Sadatism was anti-Nasserism, it was the politics of the concrete interests of an actual nation as opposed to the politics of airy cultural affirmations. Sadat became a great man because he decided to be a great Egyptian, not a great "Arab."

EGYPT'S GEOGRAPHY— so much land with so little use— is like its social condition: a disproportion between a grand history and a confining present. But Sadat gave his country the finest gift a leader can confer, a more open future, and he did so by understanding the uses and the coerced cooperation of Israel, prevented that war from being an Israeli victory so decisive that it would have meant Sadat's downfall.

History is not an arena of justice, it is a test of the capacity to act. Sadat was one of history's diamond cutters. He had a jeweler's eye for moments that are rough diamonds which, if struck precisely right, become extraordinarily valuable but which, if struck in any of a number of wrong ways, shatter to dust.

Today the United States is being blamed for Sadat's death by people who believe the United States is not skillful enough to do anything right, but who also believe that nothing can go wrong anywhere without the help of the United States. The charge is that Sadat died because the peace process is too slow, and that the United States and Israel are to blame. But Sadat probably died because the peace process exists. Certainly in a region where the word "assassin" was coined, it was beyond the capacity of the United States (or Israel) to make safe the paths Sadat embarked upon, the paths of domestic modernization and international moderation.

MENACHEM BEGIN, Sadat's partner in peace, is notably unlike Sadat in that his personality caused him to receive less credit than he deserved for Sadat's trip to Jerusalem and for what that trip led to, the Camp David agreements. In the end, Egypt gave up only unattainable demands and unjustifiable threats; Israel gave up land it occupied when defending itself against threats translated into aggression.

But it was, for Sadat, serendipitous that Begin is as deficient as a projector of charm as Sadat was accomplished. As a result, many Americans, with their proclivity for personalizing political judgments, began to think too well of Egypt and too ill of Israel.

The odds are against Egypt's political system generating two in a row: two men with the skill to sustain any inclination they may have to resist the gravitational pull toward "pan-Arabism," and other extremist dead ends. Sadat's greatness was in acknowledging that Egypt's interests are more congruent with Israel's than with any Arab nation's. If Sadat's successors are willing and able to continue Sadatism, then Egypt is more like Israel (and the United States) than less fortunate nations are, in this regard: Its continuity cannot be destroyed by a bullet because you do not kill its government by killing its governor. —(c) 1981, The Washington Post Company.

Letters— Sadat reaction was appalling

The recent assassination of Anwar Sadat was a tragic event: although his efforts to promote peace in the Mideast did not include some of the Arab groups such as the Palestinians, we must recognize that his labors were based upon an honest desire for peace. Both Sadat's murder and the reactions of some of the Arab students of SIU-C were appalling.

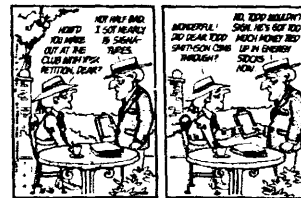

These students who express a joyous reaction to the assassination show a true lack of respect for human life. Anyone who condones the murder of a fellow man or even rejoices over it may as well have pulled the trigger himself.

When Channel 12 News asked some Arab students to comment on President Sadat's death, they were provided with the opportunity to promote the Palestinian cause and to prove themselves to be ethical people. Instead they chose to verify their reputation as terrorists by making the following comments: "The Shah was a traitor, he's dead. Sadat was a traitor, he's dead. Sadat was a traitor, he's dead." and "All traitors to the Palestinian cause will be killed." Apparently, terrorism will continue to play a major role in the Palestinian fight for freedom, no matter what the consequences may be. —Vicky Lockhart, Sophomore. # Barry's syrup coats crowd

By Bill Crowe
News Editor

Barry Manilow works diligently to be a consummate entertainer—singer, songwriter and musician. But, beneath all the lights, props and pop music pomposity lies a superior audience manipulator.

Wednesday night's Manilow concert at the Arena was a Top-46 excursion relying heavily on Las Vegas flash. And all this is fine and good, but Manilow's repertoire, and his stage presence, reeked of sappy sentimentality, lyrical banality and endless tugs at the heart strings.

A near-sellout crowd of Manilow backers tossed roses at the stage and loved the show, singing along and responding wildly to every stage gesture. However, that's exactly what Manilow was giving them—a series of gestures wrapped around a workmanlike rendering of his song catalog.

Manilow's basset hound good looks and affable audience rapport were greeted with floods of applause, but in return he gave a perfect example of the millstone which has always hung around his neck. His songs carry a catchy, infectious hook but are also laden with a soft marshmallow at the lyrical center.

Concentrating mostly on his slower, romantic ballads, Manilow played two one-hour sets and over 20 tunes in all, but allowed precious little time for many of the show stoppers the crowd paid $12.50 to hear. "Copacabana" was done up in fine style, with palm trees popping up on stage, and "I Write the Songs" was rendered nicely. Surprisingly, he pulled off a punchy version of Frankie Valli's "Hang On." His closing number, "One

Review

Voice," performed with 33 members of SIU-C choral groups, was another "neat" gesture which came off nicely.

However, in a "let's get it over with" manner, he gave the audience a Reader's Digest condensed medley version of several of his fine earlier numbers, including "Mandy," "It's A Miracle," "This One's for You" and "Daybreak," toward the end of the show. That may be a staple element of his live shows, but a loyal audience deserves much more.

Before completely hanging Manilow out to dry, it must be said that his lively personality is quite likeable and some of his tunes are great fun. A story he told about trying to play the clarinet and accordion before discovering the piano was entertaining. He seemed to draw the audience in with every piano solo and stage gesture.

But it all seemed directed at yanking a response from the audience at any cost. Every sly grin; every comment about the crazy audience; every sexual innuendo, and every entrance of the taped orchestral backgrounds appeared precisely well-rehearsed. Sickness and glitter were the keynote of the evening, but any sense of intensity behind the music was kept to a minimum.

Women gaining ground as sports grow

By Karen Gullo
Staff Writer

"Fiercely competitive athletics have their dangers for men, but they develop manly strength. For women the dangers are greater, and the qualities they tend to develop are not womanly."

So said a university administrator at the turn of the century, reflecting an attitude towards women in athletics that's as out-dated as leather football helmets. It's a cliché but "you've come a long way, baby" certainly applies to women's intercollegiate athletics.

The growth and popularity of women's athletics in the last 10 years has been startling. Although there's a long way to go before scholarships and budgets for women equal those of men's athletic programs, the women are gaining ground.

A look through the first scrapbook of SIU-C's women's athletics, an old tattered and yellowed collection of newspaper clippings and "sports day" programs from the 1940s, shows the determination of a group of women athletes to create a successful program during an age when competitive sports for women were thought to be rather "unwomanly."

During the '20s and the '30s, women physical educators were opposed to athletics for women.

It was thought that women would do harm to themselves or nurture unwomanly characteristics if they indulged in competitive sports. The old saying "A game for every girl and every girl in a game," adequately represented the position of most physical education programs for women. Up until the early 1960s, events known as play days or sports days characterized intercollegiate athletics at most colleges and universities.

During the 1960s, attitudes towards women's athletics—like attitudes towards women in general, minorities and the United States government—were beginning to change. More colleges began to offer varsity sports for women and in 1967 the National Association for Girls and Women's Sports, forerunner of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, started national competitions for women in swimming, track and field and gymnastics.

Having varsity sports in college was an important step in building support for women's athletics, says Charlotte West, director of SIU-C's women's athletics. West, past president of the AIAW, the leading organization for women's athletic programs, came to SIU-C in 1967 as an assistant basketball coach and has been involved in coaching and women's athletics most of her life. "Many women played varsity sports in junior high and high school, but when they got to college, there wasn't a thing for them," she said.

West pointed out several factors that have contributed to the growth of women's athletics in the United States.

First, the American public became extremely interested in Olympic sports during the 1972 Olympic games. At the time, some of the American women's teams performed poorly and it was obvious that the women's teams lacked sufficient training and attention. It was an embarrassment to the U.S. Olympic teams, West said, so they began to promote the women's teams in the following years.

Second, there have been tremendous advancements in television coverage of sports in general. Watching baseball and football on TV has been an American pastime for years, more and different sports have been televised, from soccer, golf and bowling to track and weight lifting—making the American public very sports-conscious.

The women's movement of the '60s also helped women's athletics gain popularity and support. But as West pointed out, equity for women in the job market may be easier to come by than gaining equity in athletic programs.

"Sports has always been the great male bastion, their last supreme domain," she said.

One of the most important catalysts was the enactment of Title IX section of the Education Act, passed by Congress in 1972. The measure prohibits discrimination on the basis of sex in federally assisted intercollegiate and scholastic sports. Title XI has been implemented since 1975, and is considered by most women's sports enthusiasts to have "revolutionized" the scope of women's athletic programs.

The legislation has its opposition, too, namely the National Collegiate Athletics Association, the 75-year-old men's athletics organization which six years ago decided not to establish championships for women, but changed its position last year and now has women's championships. The NCAA has a suit pending which basically argues that Title IX should not be applied to intercollegiate athletics.

Despite opposition, Title XI, coupled with a change in attitudes, has played a critical role in the growth of women's sports. The 1970s saw women being encouraged to pursue athletics.

Judy Auld, a 1972 graduate of SIU-C and women's tennis coach, said her parents encouraged her to pursue athletics in high school, but playing a sport often earned a girl the "tomboy" tag.

"Normally, if you were exceptional in your sport, you were not encouraged by your P.E. teacher to go into the sport," said Auld, a native of Decatur. "They were more concerned with the cheerleaders and the gymnasts, the more traditional female sports."

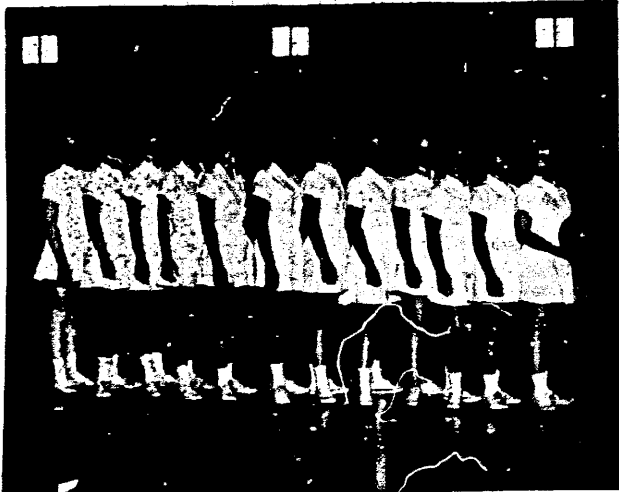

Cindy Scott, women's basketball coach, said that when she graduated from high school in 1971, the popularity and trend towards women's athletics were just getting into gear.

"I had a lot of offers to play sports from different schools," Scott, 27, said. "There was just a gradual acceptance in society of the women athlete."

Today, women's athletics means big money. To begin with, scouting and recruiting in all female varsity sports are increasing. To meet the new demands of female athletes and recruiters, scouting services have sprung up all over the country.

Universities from UCLA on the West Coast to Rutgers in the East now have women's teams and the scholarship money to field them properly in a vast array of sports, including sailing, badminton, tennis, gymnastics, lacrosse, bowling, archery, track and field, fencing, golf, riflery, synchronized

'Glory days' may be over for WIA

By Michelle Schwent
Sports Editor

SIU-C has enjoyed a successful heritage as a leader in women's athletics. Several of the 10 varsity teams have gained national and state recognition.

The days of glory may be over for the women athletes who wear the maroon and white because of inflation-induced money woes, a possible weakening of Title IX regulations, and the overall growth of women's athletics.

SIU-C, Arizona State and Illinois State were three of the pioneers in women's sports, according to Charlotte West, SIU-C Women's Athletics director.

"I came here in 1957 and one reason I came here is that there were varsity sports for women," West said. "That was unusual at the time."

The sport teams were classified under the title of "extramurals" and at one time included, archery, fencing and badminton. Archery and fencing were axed about 10 years ago. Badminton was dropped following the 1980-81 season because of budget problems and Coach Paul Blair resigned.

The Salukis had a different look in "the old days." The teams wore long white tunics because of the athletic director Dorothy Davies thought that's what they should wear. West said. The Salukis were dubbed "the nurses" or the "chariot ladies" by the opposition.

SIU-C attracted attention for another reason also—winning. The Saluki women excelled in state, regional and national competition:

—The gymnastics team won three national titles in 1970, 1974 and 1975 and have finished in the top four on other occasions since 1969. SIU-C has won all but one state title and two Midwest Regional titles since 1969. In addition, 27 women have represented SIU-C in the Pan American Games, the World Games or the Olympic Games.

The golf team went undefeated and won the national championship in 1968 when West was the coach. A Saluki has been the individual state champion three of the past four years.

—The field hockey team has won three Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women state titles, beginning in 1976. The stickhandlers have played in the AIAW national tournament four times and placed sixth nationally in 1978.

—The 1978 softball team won the state title, won the Midwest Regional tournament and placed seventh in the nationals or College World Series. SIU-C has played in the College World Series four times since 1970.

SIU-C women athletes stars discuss their sports, roots

By Daily Egyptian Sports Writers

Here are brief profiles of some of SIU-C's top women athletes. The list was compiled by Daily Egyptian sports editors and writers.

D.D. Plab—Basketball

When D.D. Plab was growing up, there weren't many female sports stars to emulate. So like her sport-minded male counterparts, her heroes were men athletes.

"There weren't any women athletes that I really liked that much, especially in basketball," Plab said. "I was always a big fan of Isiah Thomas."

Thomas, a 6-0 point guard, a little man in a big man's sport, excelled for Indiana University in the collegiate ranks before turning pro. At 5-7, Plab can easily identify with him.

Plab, a sophomore, also plays point guard. Like Thomas, she is a mere shrub among the giant redwoods of the court. But Plab has a weapon that can cut those trees down to size—her jumping ability.

A three-time basketball all-stater at Mascoutah High School, Plab received a softball scholarship to SIU-C, but decided to play basketball instead and now is on a basketball scholarship.

Sonya Locke—Volleyball

During her four years at LaSalle High School in South Bend, Ind., SIU-C junior Sonya Locke played on the volleyball, basketball and tennis teams.

In her senior year, Locke received offers from several colleges to play volleyball. The offers and the fact that she was "better in volleyball than the other sports," convinced Locke to hang up basketball and tennis and stick with volleyball.

Locke is rated by Coach Debbie Hunter as one of the top five players in the Midwest.

A middle hitter-blocker, Locke said that she sees the competition in women's volleyball getting stronger each year.

"Stronger competition is good since schools' programs will continue to grow," she said. "The tougher the competition is, the better your team has to be."

Patty Plymire-Houseworth—Track

Women's cross country and track standout Patty Plymire-Houseworth said she has been interested in athletics since she was "knee high." Her father, a high school physical education teacher and coach, was a big influence when she was a child.

In high school, Plymire-Houseworth was a woman of many sports, playing on the softball, basketball, volleyball and track teams.

"I decided to stick with track because some coaches told me I had the potential to run for a college team," she said.

A senior, Plymire-Houseworth said the competition she faces gets stiffer each year.

"Even though it's a new field, women's running is booming," she said. "Two or three years ago, no woman could break the 2:50 marathon. Now there are 50 to 100 women who can run it in 2:30. People have more and better training and are becoming more aware of what's going on in the running world."

Tracey Terrell—Diving
Being an acrobatic circus clown gave Tracey Terrell a start in becoming a two-time All-American diver.

Terrell's family had a circus act in which gymnastics was a major part. The act gave Terrell a basic background for what would turn into a career in diving. She started diving at 14 and joined the University of Miami's Amateur Athletic Union swim team. While diving for the AAU team, Terrell was coached by Tom Gompf, the coach of the 1976 Olympic women's swim team. As a freshman at SIU-C, Terrell placed 12th in the three-meter diving event at the Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women national championship, scored SIU-C's only team points and was named All-American. She also won the Illinois AIAW state title in the one-meter event.

Her sophomore year, Terrell followed Saluki diving coach Julian Krag to the University of Pittsburg, but returned to SIU-C for her junior year and became a two-time All-American by placing 12th in the one-meter and ninth in the three-meter diving events at the AIAW national meet. Her combined score was the highest ever achieved by a woman Saluki diver.

She placed sixth in both one- and three-meter diving events at the IAAW 1981 Zone A qualifying trials at Penn State, an event which featured the top 60 competitors from the Midwest.

Terrell set new state records and won the IAAW state titles in both the one and three-meter events.

Barb Larsen—Swimming

When Barb Larsen was only four years old, her mother signed her up at the local YMCA for her first swimming lessons. Ever since that first plunge into a pool, Larsen has taken to the water as naturally as a duck takes to a pond.

"My mother had a dream that I would become a great swimmer some day," Larson, a native of Mount Prospect, said. Her mother's foresight paid off. Last year in the AIAW national championship in South Carolina, Larsen took two 10th place finishes in the 50- and 100-yard butterfly. Larsen attributes her skills to the training she received at the YMCA to her present coach, SIU-C's Tim Hill. And she sticks with the rigors of swim training because, well, she likes it. "My goal for this year is to place in the top six at nationals," Larsen said.

Inequities still exist at SIU-C in Title IX areas, report says

By Michelle Schwest
Sports Editor

"A general institutional pattern and practice of discrimination persists in intercollegiate athletics at Southern Illinois University at Carbondale."

That statement appeared in the December 1979 report by the SIU-C Title IX Intercollegiate Athletics Evaluation Committee, and although conditions and opportunities have improved, there are still inequities between the men's and women's athletics programs.

The committee was comprised of faculty, staff and students and chaired by Joann Paine, of the political science department. The committee's task was to evaluate the equality of opportunities for male and female athletes at SIU-C.

Title IX, incorporated into legislation approved by Congress in 1972, prohibits sex discrimination in federally assisted athletics programs. SIU-C was supposed to have a plan for compliance in 1975, according to Charlotte West, Women's Intercollegiate Athletics director. To date, SIU-C has no plan for compliance.

While the evaluation committee conducted its investigation, a group of 14 women athletes conducted their own investigation from January to May 1979, and filed a complaint at the Office for Civil Rights of the Department of Education. That complaint has not been investigated, West said.

Robin Deterding, assistant volleyball coach, was an undergraduate student in 1979 and competed for the volleyball and softball teams. She was a member of both groups looking into Title IX and how it applied at SIU-C. She helped form the student athlete group because the University group seemed to be moving slowly. She insists that it was merely an effort to aid women athletes and not an attempt to degrade the University.

"It wasn't a slam at the University and it wasn't a slam against men's athletics," Deterding said. "A lot of people think that it was, but it wasn't. We wanted to speak out and show through research how things were and how things compared with the law."

"You come from high school into college and everything seems better—until you really get into it," Deterding said. "The number of scholarships irked a lot of people. Especially when we saw the men's basketball staff walking around with new sweats on and we had to share ours with the other teams. The glaring inconsistencies just added up."

Deterding agreed with West that SIU-C is not in compliance with Title IX. Bruce Swinburne, vice president of student affairs, said in an interview two weeks ago that he thought SIU-C was near compliance.

"I believe our University is probably as close to—I might be overstating this—but is probably as close to total compliance with Title IX as virtually any other major university in this country," Swinburne said.

Both West and Deterding said they would like to see the sources and facts Swinburne used to support his statement. Swinburne was unavailable for comment Thursday.

West and Deterding did agree that there has been substantial improvement in conditions since the complaint was filed.

The biggest improvement has been the bill signed by Gov.

James R. Thompson last year to renovate 64-year-old Davies Gym. The $3.4 million project will make Davies an adequate facility for the women to use. Before the project, Davies was plagued by plumbing, electrical and heating problems, cockroaches and even an occasional bat in the locker and training rooms. The project is expected to be completed by summer 1982.

Of the $3.4 million, $200,000 will be used to buy much-needed equipment for Davies and WIA, West said.

West said another change has been a large increase in funding from the University—basically via the student athletics fee. WIA was awarded $520,339 in fiscal year 1980 and will receive approximately $896,000 in 1982, West said. Some of that money has been used to refurbish the softball field across from the Recreation Building and to reseed and fertilize the grass at Wham Field, home of the Saluki field hockey team.

Another portion of the money has been used to hire assistant coaches for the various sport teams. The basketball team now has a full-time assistant coach while the volleyball and field hockey squads now have one-third-time assistants.

Deterding said the scholarship situation has improved since it is at the maximum allowed by the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, but "it is not at the level it needs to be at."

The other sub-par areas cited by both groups are scheduling and recruitment dollars. Deterding said women's scheduling has been upgraded. She said the softball team now takes a spring trip but "there is no way it can be compared to the baseball team's schedule."

Recruitment money is still lacking, she said.

"Recruitment dollars have increased a step where it should be increased a mile," Deterding said. "If programs decide to go with the NCAA, there will be more recruitment dollars. Even the AIAW is getting more liberal about that."

West attributes most of the changes to Hiram Lesar, a former acting University president, and George Mace, former vice president for student affairs.

"Under Vice President Mace we had tremendous improvement last year," West said. "He agreed to give us a 50-50 split of the athletics fee."

"Hiram Lesar did an awful lot for us," West said. "If there was a politician on campus, Hiram would take him over to Davies to show him what things were really like. I'd like to publicly commend Lesar. He placed our coaches under 12-month appointments which cost a little over $30,000. It was a moral uplift. At least we knew somebody cared."

There is speculation that the Title IX regulations may be weakened and the complaints shelved due to the Reagan administration's plan to study and restructure certain cabinet offices.

success of the pioneering programs. That, coupled with the women's rights movements and the 1972 passage of Title IX, sparked a boom in women's athletics. SIU-C got out of the starting blocks quickly, but has lagged behind the pack in recent years.

West says SIU-C women in sports will have a tough time keeping up with their counterparts across the country for several reasons. One reason is that SIU-C was in the game before most colleges and the success it enjoyed was relative.

The Salukis won national acclaim while most universities were just starting programs.

"When the gymnastics team was prominent, there were only three or four good programs and now there are over 200 Division I programs," West said. "There are over 900 women's basketball programs. You could say it was three times easier then or three times harder now."

Another big problem is a lack of adequate funding while other programs have a seemingly endless supply of money.

Schools with outstanding programs share in a portion of the money gained from post-season competition and television revenues.

"Schools like Northwestern and the University of Minnesota operate with $6 or $7 million programs," West said. "It's getting to where we can't compete on the same level as those schools."

Women's Intercollegiate Athletics has received a boost in funding from the University the past three years. But in the previous years, WIA was in funding limbo because then SIU-C President Warren Brandt was indifferent to the program's problems, West said. "Progress was retarded," West said. "Things didn't really start progressing significantly until Lesar was acting president."

Interim President Hiram Lesar changed all of that but the damage had already been done. WIA is still recovering from those funding problems but still seems to be grinding its gears.

Women's sports programs received some help from Congress in 1972 when Title IX regulations were passed. Title IX prohibits sex discrimination in federally assisted programs. The law has been the major driving force in uplifting women's athletics, West said.

Although the legislation has forced most programs to comply to proportionately equal athletic programs for men and women, there are still violations which have gone unscathed. Grievances at several universities, including SIU-C, are pending, but there are inadequate personnel and time to investigate all the claims in a reasonable time, West said.

West said she hoped she would no longer be at SIU-C when and if men's or women's sports are cut.

"Some of the universities that were so far behind us but are now so far ahead of us will never be able to look back to that proud history that we have," West said.

The interest is reflected increasingly off campus as well. Cable and commercial local television stations from Connecticut to Tennessee already televise women's basketball games, mainly collegiate, on a fairly regular basis. Last year the NBC network televised major women's basketball and volleyball games and national women's championships in other sports. Big corporations have also begun to show interest. A large New York bank, Manufacturers Hanover Trust, sponsored the 1980 Women's Christmas Classic at Madison Square Garden, featuring four of the best national collegiate basketball teams.

But success and controversy have come hand-in-hand for women's athletics. Some women's sports enthusiasts worry that female varsity sports are on the brink of falling into the same traps that ensnare men's sports. Several colleges—including Old Dominion College in Virginia, a leader in women's basketball—have been placed on probation by the AIAW for recruiting violations. Colleges all over the country have been taking advantage of bendable recruiting rules to provide top female athletes with benefits such as free use of cars and apartments—just like the men have been doing for years.

The most heated controversy over women's athletics exists between the AIAW and the NCAA. The NCAA has changed its tune about women's athletics in recent years. Now that women's intercollegiate sports, namely basketball and volleyball, have become popular and lucrative events, the NCAA wants a slice of the pie. Last year the organization decided to include representatives from women's programs in its organizational structure and initiated Division I championships.

The AIAW wants to remain the leading organization and governing body of women's intercollegiate athletics, but it doesn't have the money and prestige that the NCAA has. Supporters of the AIAW say that women should have their own organization for athletics and supporters of the NCAA say that the NCAA has the funds to build women's intercollegiate athletics into a strong, successful force.

"The NCAA wants to get involved with women's sports mainly for money and power," says Charlotte West. "It wants to keep control of all the sports and it wants the revenue. When we were starting out small, the NCAA didn't want to have anything to do with women's sports. As soon as women started getting more pay and the sports gained popularity, they want to get in on it."

All SIU-C women's teams this year are in AIAW competitions except basketball, which is in the NCAA. Each team decided which competition to enter. West said she has weighed the possibilities of both organizations.

"The AIAW gives women exceptional possibilities to develop leadership positions that wouldn't be possible in the NCAA," she said.

The main problem of women's athletic programs is money, West said. Many universities—almost 70 percent in the last three years—have merged their men's and women's athletic programs to consolidate the available funds. But West has strong reservations about mergers.

"Merging is a trend that started when women's athletics was very poor," West said. "With mergers there is much more potential for discriminatory practices against women. The men will take more of the money and probably all the administrative positions. You can't find a school in the nation where there has been a merger and there is a woman at the top of the athletics administration. When there's a merger and there is one position for both the men and women's programs where there used to be two, the men get it. It's a fact of life."

While women's athletics will continue to grow, so will its demands for more money. Big universities like UCLA and Rutgers may be able to provide their women's programs with adequate funding, but for a university like SIU-C, obtaining funds will be the challenge of the 1980s.

You've come a long way, baby. But you have a long and expensive way to go.

ATHLETES from Page 8

Ratcliffe likes a good challenge when it comes to racing in the water. And like her teammate and friend, Barb Larsen, Ratcliffe began developing her love for athletic competition at an early age—with a little encouragement from mom and dad. Ratcliffe's father enrolled her in swimming classes at the local park district when she was eight.

"I remember my dad signing me up for swimming lessons and ever since it's just about all I've done in sports," she said.

Val Painton—Gymnastics

Three-time All-American gymnast Val Painton has been swinging off the parallel bars, bounding over the vaulting horse and all tip-toeing across the balance beam since her grammar school days in Webster, N.Y.

An all-round gymnast, Painton has made to national competition each of her three years at SIU-C. But success has its price.

"I was in the gym all the time," said Painton, a senior. "I would get out of school at 11 a.m. and not get home from practice until 10:30 that night."

Ellen Massey—Field Hockey "I like field hockey because it isn't as well known as other sports," says Saluki record-setter Ellen Massey. "Anyone can play basketball or volleyball. It's not as easy to play field hockey."

Massey joined the SIU-C team as a walk-on her freshman year. She has scored 51 goals while wearing a Saluki uniform and her six goals against Principia in September is an SIU-C record.

New kings of Southern rock arise

By Alan Sculley
Staff Writer

The only good thing to come out of the plane crash that struck down the premiere Southern-rock band, Lynyrd Skynyrd, was the emergence of the Rossington Collins Band. Made up mostly of the survivors of that crash, Rossington Collins rose from the ashes like a phoenix — and its first two albums have established the band as the new kings of southern rock.

The stigma of being the "Son of Skynyrd" will always haunt the Rossington Collins Band. In one way it was a blessing; the band had instant recognition in the music world. But it was also a curse, because many people expected the band to live up to the legacy Skynyrd left.

Fortunately, the Rossington Collins Band has not tried to imitate Skynyrd. Unlike Skynyrd's perfect hybrid of country and rock, Rossington Collins has a style that leans much more heavily on the rock than on the country influence. If anything, this straight-ahead rock influence is greater on Rossington Collins' new release, "This Is the Way," than it was on the band's debut album. Two of the new album's best songs, "Fancy Ideas" and "Next Phone Call" are basic rock numbers.

"Fancy Ideas" employs a guitar chord pattern that is more powerful than any Rossington Collins has played before.

Review

This Is the Way, Rossington Collins Band, MCA Records. Reviewer's Rating: 3 1/2 stars (4 stars tops).

And on "This Is the Way" the band ventures further from the Skynyrd sound by including a song done a cappella, "Pine Box," and an acoustic ballad, "I'm Free Today."

But there are still plenty of similarities between the two Rossington Collins Band albums. "Tashauna," containing lyrical references to Skynyrd's late lead singer, Ronnie Van Zandt, and John Lennon, is a countryish ballad even more moving than the first album's "Three Times as Bad."

And the country-rock sound found on some of the songs on Rossington Collins' first album is also represented on three of the songs on the new album.

Songs from the first album like "Prime Time" gave ammunition to those who wanted to claim that Rossington Collins was only a continuation of Lynyrd Skynyrd.

Certainly songs like "Prime Time" and the new album's "Don't Stop Me Now" are the closest things we have to Skynyrd's music; these songs won't let Southern-rock fans forget Skynyrd.

But Rossington Collins is busy carving out a sound all its own. And although "This Is the Way" won't erase the Son of Skynyrd stigma, maybe it will help the Rossington Collins Band become recognized for what it is: the best of today's harder-rocking, Southern bands.

Student directories to be given out Nov. 9

By Andrew Strang
Staff Writer

This year's student phone directories, more accurate and more profitable than last year's, will definitely be distributed by Nov. 9, according to Bill Atwood, coordinator of the Student Telephone Directory Bureau.

The directory will follow the same format as last year's directory, Atwood said. Listings will give names, local phone numbers, and local and home addresses of all SIU-C students except those who requested to be omitted, he said.

He said the directory should be more accurate than last year's directory primarily because addresses and phone numbers of students living in University housing have been automatically recorded in the Office of Admissions and Records, which supplied the directory information. Last year, all students were responsible for informing the University about address changes.

However, accuracy of the listings for students residing off-campus depends on the accuracy of the listings provided by the University, according to Atwood. Students who changed addresses but did not inform the University by Oct. 16 will be listed under their old addresses, Atwood said.

The directories will be distributed late in the semester because the number of pages in the book had to be determined before bids from printers could be accepted, Atwood said. A delay in determining the number of pages pushed distribution back from the originally-announced date of Nov. 1, Atwood said.

It cost about $2,000 to print 10,000 directories, Atwood said.

Revenue from advertising, which was prepared and sold by the Student Advertising Association, will be about $11,000, he said. The SAA will receive 20 percent of the net profit, and the USO will keep 80 percent, according to Atwood. Last year's directory did not make money, he said.

Career centers offer job search help

The Career Counseling and Placement Centers will sponsor a workshop on job search skills from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Saturday in the Quigley Lounge.

Topics to be covered include goal identification, transferable skills, job leads, resource utilization, resume writing and interview skills. Interested persons can advance register by contacting Career Counseling, Woody Hall B-204, 536-2096.

Cancer Society, students to sponsor bike-a-thon

The Jackson County Unit of the American Cancer Society will sponsor the 10th annual two-day bike-a-thon around Campus Lake Saturday and Sunday.

The SIU-C Cycling Club is cooperating in sponsoring the event.

The bike-a-thon is open to anyone aged 5 to 95, Tony Intravala, chairman, said. Activities will get under way at 7:30 a.m. and last until 6 p.m. both days, rain or shine. Participants may circle the 2.4-mile course around the lake as many times as they desire to benefit the Cancer Society.

Registration forms for the event are available in the school and public libraries of Carbondale and Murphysboro, from SIU-C Cycling Club members and Carbondale bicycle shops, and at the K-Mart store in Carbondale, the Western Auto Store in Murphysboro and local Dairy Queens.

Riders must report to the bike-a-thon checkpoint on Campus Drive opposite the Arena with completed registration form, route map and a ride card. The card must be stamped upon completion of each lap and at the end of the contest. Persons under 18 years of age must have a parent countersign the registration form. Representatives of the Carbondale National Guard will patrol the bike-a-thon route to assure safety.

A 10-speed bicycle, donated by K-Mart, will go to the contestant collecting the most money for the Cancer Society. Several other awards will be available.

WSIU Music Director Patrick Drazen is the title character in Friday's play, "Heracles"

No rehearsal makes play natural

By Pam Petrow
Staff Writer

Most cast members in theatrical plays practice for weeks before opening night.

But when the Greek Tragedy "Heracles" plays at 7:30 p.m. Friday in the Quigley Lounge, the actors will never have seen each other.

Frederick Williams, director of the play, prefers it that way. "I want to avoid the expectation among the cast members that actor 'A' thinks actor 'B' is going to do something," he said. "The actors are forced to watch each other during the performance like they would if they were in the real situation. It looks natural."

Williams, professor in foreign languages, is one of the directors of "Classics at SIU," a group which has been performing this type of un-blocked, un-rehearsed play since 1977.

"Our plays are different from other productions," Williams said. "The actors hold and read from scripts. And we only use a few props and some costumes. It's more of a relaxed atmosphere."

Williams doesn't think using scripts offends the audience. Audience members viewing photographs of the play after the performance are often surprised to see the books, he said.

"The audience forgets about the actors carrying scripts. It really doesn't interrupt the play," he said.

Persons desiring to perform with the group simply contact Williams, who casts them in one of four productions sometime during the year. Cast members practice individually with Williams but don't meet with fellow performers until about a half-hour before the play, Williams said.

"Heracles" one of the most powerful dramatizations in Greek tragedy, portrays one of humanity's heroes being driven insane by petulant Greek gods.

Cast members include John Gillespie as Amphitryon; Joan

O'Brien as Megara, Patrick Drazen as Heracles; Williams, Charles Speck and Michael Myers as the chorus of old men of Thebes; Sun Jianqui as Iris; Saleem Handal as Raging Madness; Warren Meinhardt as Lycus; Robert Jenkins as the messenger; and Jeff Rensch as Theseus.

Beg your pardon

It was incorrectly stated in a Page 10 article in Thursday's Daily Egyptian that the Rev. Charles Watkins was chairman of the Goals for Carbondale Steering Committee in 1971. Watkins was a member of the committee, but Basil Hendrick, then director of the University Museum, was the committee's chairman.

Also, it was incorrectly reported in a headline on Page 16 of Tuesday's Daily Egyptian that Kay Blackwell, former county board member, resigned for "political reasons."

Blackwell left the board to accept a nursing home director position.

Election for royalty to be redone

The Higher Education Graduate Student Organization will meet at 11:45 a.m. Friday for a tray luncheon in the Corinth Room. Election results will be announced.

Preliminary elections for off-campus Homecoming king and queen candidates will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday on the first floor of the Student Center near the south escalator.

The Gumball Rally, sponsored by Recreation for Special Populations, will start at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Student Recreation Center. Students can register by calling 536-5531, Ext. 37.

The Orienteering Club will have beginning and advanced courses at 1 p.m. Sunday at Camp 2 at Touch of Nature. Rides will leave from in front of the Student Center at noon.

Tom Inglis, graduate student in sociology, will present a sack lunch discussion on drugs at noon Friday in Faner Room 3410.

The SU Cycling Club will sponsor the seventh annual fall tour of Cave-In-Rock Saturday and Sunday. Cyclists will cover 200 miles in two days. Information sheets are available at Phoenix Cycles and at the Intramural Office in the Recreation Center.

A country western hoedown dance will be held from 8 p.m. to 1 a.m. in the Roman Room. Prizes will go to the best western-dressed male, female and couple. WIDB will provide a combination of country western and rock music.

The Jackson County Stamp Society will sponsor a stamp auction Sunday in Ballroom A. Previewing of the 200 lots will be from 11:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m., and bidding will begin at 1 p.m.

The Little Egypt Bass Club will clean up debris on the open portion of Crab Orchard Lake Saturday. Any trot lines or jugs not tagged with a fisherman's name will be removed from the lake.

Alcoholics Anonymous and Al-Anon will meet at 8 p.m. Friday in the basement of the First Baptist Church on the corner of University and Main. Two A.A. members will comment on their continuing recovery and an Al-Anon member will discuss her experiences with alcoholism. The meeting is open to the public.

Walter Wills, agricultural economist, will give the opening remarks for World Food Day activities at 10 a.m. Friday in the School of Agriculture Seminar Room. A panel will discuss food problems in Third World countries from 10:30 to noon. Another panel will discuss the role of women in food production at 1:30 p.m. Arthur Simon will speak on the politics of world hunger at 3 p.m. in Agriculture Building Room 209 and will discuss Bread for the World at 8 p.m. at the Newman Center.

The Mobilization of Volunteer Effort and Sigma Phi Epsilon will co-sponsor a happy hour from 4 to 7 p.m. Saturday at Hangar Nine. The cover charge will be 50 cents, and everyone will get one free beer at the door. Proceeds will go to the United Way Fund Drive.

Election of Homecoming king and queen candidates representing off-campus students will be held again Friday because of balloting errors in the original election Wednesday according to University Programming Coordinator Bruce Zimmerman.

The new election will be at the Student Center south solicitation area from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Students are voting for five candidate pairs this week in preparation for the final campus-wide election next Tuesday and Wednesday.

Nominations were accepted by the Student Programming Council from Thompson Point, Brush Towers, University Park, off-campus housing and the Greeks.

The off-campus election, conducted by SPC, "wasn't fair to a whole bunch of folks," Zimmerman said. The person manning the polling station became inundated with voters and the trouble comparing ID's with the student directory, he said. Also, he said, some candidates caused a problem by being too close to the polling station.

Queen candidates selected so far are Fam Petrow, a journalism major from Pekin; Donna Schulte, a radio and television major from Atlanta, Ga.; and Diane Terrafino, a public relations major from Elmhurst.

King candidates selected are Lyle Patterson, a business economics major from LaGrange; Janfrey Scott, an architecture major from East St. Louis; and Michael Van Wallis, an administrative science major from Abingdon. The final campus-wide election will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday and Wednesday at the Student Center south solicitation area.

Kate Bentley and Jackie Wildau met while performing with the Pocket Mime Theatre of Boston in 1972. Jackie is a graduate of Ecole Jacques Lecoq-School of Mime, Movement and Theatre, Paris. She has toured both Europe and America and has spent the past few years in New York City as a freelance mime and clown. Kate performed, taught, and toured for seven years as the lead female of the Pocket Mime Theatre. In 1978 Kate and Jackie joined forces to produce in New York the "Mainly Mime Series." As Mainly Mime, one of the country's few female mimes duets, they are now touring with a variety show. Their mime, music, masks and dialogue is guaranteed to entertain. From dowager dump turned disco-queen to class struggle at a dinner party for six, Bentley and Wildau capture the themes of today.

Allied Health unit to scan priorities

The Illinois Association of Allied Health Professions will have its first conference Friday and Saturday to set an agenda for the recently-formed association.

John Huther, deputy director of policy studies for the Illinois Board of Higher Education, will speak at 9:30 a.m. Friday in the Ohio Room on the IBHE's master plan for allied health and nursing education. Larry D. Etzkorn, from the division of government affairs of the Illinois Department of Public Aid, will discuss priorities for public health at 10:45 a.m. Duane Adleman, president of the American Society of Allied Health Professions, will discuss the state association's role in allied health activities at 1:30 p.m. Friday in the Ohio Room.

Rep. Paul Simon, to speak at 7:15 p.m. Friday in the Illinois Room, will discuss federal funding in the health fields. A business meeting from 9 to 11:30 a.m. Saturday in the Mississippi Room will be conducted by Jay Ward, president of the Illinois association and dean of the College of Allied Health at Chicago State University.

Murphysboro

man sentenced

11 years for thefts

A 19-year-old Murphysboro man was sentenced in Jackson County Circuit Court to 11 years imprisonment Wednesday for felonies committed in 1980 and 1981.

Roger Solomon, of 603 N. 22nd St., was sentenced by Judge Richard Richman. He had pleaded guilty in August to charges of burglary, theft, and criminal damage to property stemming from crimes committed at a Murphysboro bar where six cases of beer and two cases of whiskey were stolen.

Solomon also was sentenced for burglary and theft of a fire arm from a Murphysboro home, for burglary and theft of food and money from Carbondale's Winkler School, and for a bail bond violation.

State probes cop 'brawl' at VFW post

ANNA (AP) — The Illinois Division of Criminal Investigation is investigating a fight between members of the Union County sheriff's department and the Anna Police department outside the VFW post near this Southern Illinois community Sept. 22.

The fight occurred following an Illinois Police Association meeting at the post.

Although rumors of the incident have circulated freely in Union County, those directly involved have refused to discuss it until now. Sheriff Larry Tripp confirmed Wednesday that a confrontation occurred between sheriff's deputies and Anna police.

Anna officials and the officers involved either declined comment or were unavailable for comment.

Tripp said his complaint to the DCI started the investigation. He said two deputies and himself and four Anna policemen were involved in the brief altercation, but that none of his men struck any Anna officers.

Police Commissioner Willis Belcher said he has asked another Anna officer to investigate the incident. State's Attorney Rodney Clutts, who said he was present during part of the confrontation, refused to discuss it. He said DCI agents have spoken with him about the matter.

"I think we have a situation that, for the betterment of the community, needs to be calmed down," Clutts said, adding he expects the matter to "come to a head" following the DCI probe.

Anna City Attorney John Womick, who termed the clash "The First Annual Policeman's Brawl," said he conducted a "cursory investigation" at the request of the city council, but found the incident occurred while the officers were off-duty and outside the city limits. Therefore, he said, there was no violation of city ordinances.

Tripp said his officers have given written statements to the DCI, but "the City of Anna personnel chose to remain silent."

Man pleads guilty to fraud charges in check scheme

BENTON (AP) — A businessman has pleaded guilty to four counts of mail fraud in connection with operation of a grain elevator that led to losses by two banks and more than 250 Southern Illinois farmers of at least $5 million, Postal Service officials say.

Postal investigators said Bobby Gene Williams of Equality pleaded guilty to the charges last week before U.S. District Court Judge James Foreman in Benton. The charges stem from a lengthy investigation involving the elevator, which was declared bankrupt in 1978, investigators said.

Williams admitted ordering blank checks through the mail in 1977 and 1978 and using them in a "check kiting scheme," the Postal Service said. They said he also admitted filing an Illinois grain dealers license with false information.

"No sentencing date has been set."

Nuclear waste meeting was emotional

By Julie Guadagnoli
Staff Writer

A panel discussion on proposals to store low-level nuclear waste in Southern Illinois turned into an emotional public meeting as residents voiced disapproval of possible plans.

People of all ages crowded into the Unitarian Church in Carbondale Wednesday to hear a panel discussion, followed by a question and answer period.

Speakers were Milton Zukor, a nuclear power analyst with the Department of Nuclear Safety; Tom Marcinkowski, an environmental education research assistant and doctoral student at SIU-C; Gerhard Jaspers, director of SIU-C's Office of Radiological Control; Bob Pauls, Carbondale's energy coordinator, and Jennifer Fauntleroy, a Carbondale doctor.

Last December, Congress passed a law requiring individual states—but no federal government—to provide disposal sites for low-level waste produced after Jan. 1, 1986.

The Illinois Department of Nuclear Safety, responsible for forming a comprehensive disposal plan for this state, has no chosen a location for the site. But an Illinois Geological Survey report released in February showed large areas of Southern Illinois to be geologically suitable locations.

"No matter what the geological or environmental reasons are," a member of the audience said, "it seems obvious to me that one of the major reasons is because Southern Illinois is less educated, has less money, less community organization and less people who are going to make a big fight."

Zukor stressed that no decision has been made, and that there is "a general misunderstanding" that a site definitely would be located in Southern Illinois. He said the decision is up to Gov. James R. Thompson, adding that he didn't expect a decision for another year or two.

When a location is chosen, he said, it will not be near populated areas, farms or other "economic resources."

The session continued in an emotional vein when another woman expressed doubt that private companies would be very "moralistic" and "do a good job" of operating the dump sites.

"I work for a private company," she said, "and we build it to sell, not to use. People are people, and they're not going to do any better job than they have to."

Zukor said Illinois has three options for low-level waste disposal: do nothing and leave the decision up to the federal government; share a dump site with other midwestern states, or have its own dump site.

Marcinkowski said he is "a skeptical questioner" of nuclear power. He said a possibility of leakage of low-level waste into water supplies is "a major difficulty which we refuse to look at as a problem."

amount of radioactive waste leaking into streams, he said, but they are exposed to much more in their cigarettes. Pauls said he was "scared" by the possibility of wastes being disposed of in Southern Illinois.

Nichopoulos trial continues

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP)—A handwriting expert testified Thursday he couldn't tell who altered more than 20 drug prescriptions issued in the name of Dr. George Nichopoulos for entertainer Jerry Lee Lewis.

Nichopoulos, an internist, is accused of prescribing excessive amounts of addictive drugs for himself, Lewis, the late Elvis Presley and nine others.

Robert J. Muehlberger, a U.S. Postal Service documents analyst, took the witness stand for the second day Thursday. Called by the prosecution, he earlier testified about handwriting on hundreds of prescription forms collected by investigators in the case.

Finally, ski wear built for more than just good looks. NORTH FACE ski wear is built for skiing. Because at THE NORTH FACE, we're concerned with warmth, durability, versatility and function.

In fact, our entire ski line was created with the help of professional skiers, who tested our clothing on the slopes and suggested important design features. But we also know that style is important on the slopes. So we didn't cut corners there either.

Flash. And functional. That's THE NORTH FACE ski wear.

The idea of the Great Pumpkin is based on the Peanuts comic strip and was started by Illner as a gimmick when she coached high school hockey. She employed the same tactic when she came to SIU-C in 1969. Illner would leave treats and notes for the team under the guise of the Great Pumpkin.

But a mysterious thing happened in 1976—the Great Pumpkin appeared in person, much to Illner's surprise. The next year, the mysterious mascot showed up on the sidelines when the Salukis played in the national tournament held in Denver, Colo. "A lot of people think I'm behind the Great Pumpkin thing, but I really have nothing to do with it," Illner said. "I don't even know who the Great Pumpkin is. A lot of the new kids don't believe me."

IM floor hockey champs crowned

The Baglords and the Accountants found out that being undefeated at playoff time can be more of a hindrance than a help.

Both teams went into the finals of the intramural floor hockey playoffs with 9-0 records and came out No. 2 in its division.

In the Men's A league final, the Hotshots shutout the Accountants 7-0. Tom Gianas scored four goals and teammate Gary Little added a pair. Both teams finished with 9-1 records.

The Midnight Flyers defeated the Baglords 3-1 for the Men's B division title. Michael Sullivan, Mark Tarazi and Brian McKeone scored one goal apiece. Mike Filippone scored the lone Baglord goal. Both teams finished with 9-1 records.

Saluki benefit golf outing planned

A one-day golf tournament for the benefit of the Saluki athletic fund will begin at 10 a.m. Oct. 26 at Rend Lake golf course, between Mount Vernon and Benton.

Teams will consist of four persons, and fees are $40 per person. Professional golfers will captain the teams, and trophies will be awarded to the players of the top three teams. Prizes will be given for the longest drive on the seventh hole and the drive closest to the pin on the 13th hole.

A free lunch will be served from 11:30 to 2:30. Contact Carlo Simoni at 453-3311.

said. "There's always somebody there waiting for your running back."

Still, Dempsey hasn't said the Salukis will pass more than usual. The Salukis are averaging 19 pass plays a game.

"We'll throw about as much as we usually do," he said. "Their tight man-to-man's tough to break, but you can break some big plays on it."

San Jose State broke it for six touchdown bombs and clamped a 63-33 leash on the Bulldogs two weeks ago.

"The film showed us what a good team San Jose State has," Dempsey said. "Their receivers were leaping up, making some fantastic catches. Fresno State's played some tough teams, and they beat a real tough team, Oregon, in their opener."

After the Bulldogs' 23-16 win over Oregon, injuries began accumulating. Fresno State dropped four games in a row.

The Bulldog fate isn't unfamiliar to SIU-C. Injuries have followed the Salukis all season, and the Salukis had their own losing streak, a three-game string, at the start of the season.

The Salukis showed they can overcome injuries and a losing streak. The Bulldogs will try to prove they can overcome them Saturday.

Spikers to face 'battle' at tourney

By Michelle Schwent
Sports Editor

The volleyball team will have to play every match at the Fighting Illini Invitational like it was a championship match. The 17-6-1 Salukis will play Friday and Saturday in Champaign against some of the toughest competition they have faced since the Brigham Young Invitational held in late September.

SIU-C was put into a pool with Louisiana State, Illinois State, Lewis University and Pittsburgh. The other pool is comprised of DePaul, Iowa State, Missouri, Texas A & M and Illinois. Texas A & M, Pittsburgh, and ISU have all received votes for the nationwide Tachikara Poll.

Coach Debbie Hunter thinks the Salukis' pool will be the more competitive of the two. "Pittsburgh is one of the top three teams on the East Coast," Hunter said. "LSU is ranked in one of the polls, Illinois State has been playing very strongly as of late and we lost to Lewis University at the Iowa tournament. Every time we're on the court, it will be a real battle."

Hunter said DePaul, Iowa and Missouri have not been playing up to par while the Aggies are one of the top three teams in Texas.

The Salukis will play ISU in their first game. SIU-C has beaten the Redbirds twice this season but ISU has turned its season around. ISU has an 18-15 record, but has beaten Penn State and Nebraska which are both ranked in the top 20 of the NCAA poll. The Redbirds are No. 12 in the NCAA poll.

Hunter said there are a couple of reasons for the recent Redbird winning streak.

"Setting is the strongest area of their game—it always has been," Hunter said. "Their No.

1 setter hadn't been playing well but she has regained her game. They have some big, strong hitters. That was evident all along but they all lacked some experience. They have 20-plus games under their belts now—really quality, quality competition also."

The ISU vs. SIU-C match may be the key to the tournament for the Salukis.

"We have to be expecting to play all out," Hunter said. "Like the first match was the championship match."

Hunter thinks the tournament is an important one for the team but thinks SIU-C will have to maximize its effort in every aspect of the game.

"It's within this team's capability to win a major tournament like this," Hunter said. "The only way to do it is to use a stepping stone process and take each match at a time."

"It would be a mistake not to challenge this team," Hunter said.

Junior setter Barb Clark sprained an ankle in practice earlier this week but Hunter said it is not serious. Freshman setter Jill Broker of Carbondale may see more playing time this weekend because of Clark's injury, Hunter said.

best races he's even run. He's always been highly competitive, but he controlled himself against Illinois State. He was content to stay with the others through the first two-and-a-half miles and then he took over. Karsten is a smart runner."

Hartzog has also been impressed with the improvement of Mike Choffin and Tom Breen, who have both come to be the Salukis' third and fourth runners. Choffin, however, provoked a bad case of shin splints in last week's race on the hard, dry course at Midland Hills.

"Choffin will not run in the state meet if his shins are still bothering him," said Hartzog. "He is very important to us now. The state meet is not as important to us as the conference meet in two weeks."

Two Salukis off injury list; defense to key on passing game

By Rod Furlow
Staff Writer

The Saluki football team and Fresno State are both injury-plagued, but SIU-C will regain the services of two players from for Saturday's game in Fresno.

Offensive guard Chester Cropp and running back Derrick Taylor are off the injured list and will be available for the game which starts at 3:30 p.m. Carbondale time.

Cropp has missed four games with a knee injury. Taylor has missed two with a separated shoulder.

"They'll play some. It really makes you feel good to know those guys are back," Dempsey said. "Cropp's return really brightens things up for Chris Lockwood and Darren Davis."

Lockwood and Davis were the only two original starting offensive linemen the Salukis had for awhile. Frank Walsh, who filled in for Cropp and got hurt, will be available Saturday also.

"He was cleared from the injury list last week, but we didn't use him," Dempsey said. "He really isn't healthy enough to pull real well yet."

One Saluki went onto the injured list last week. Safety Bill Thomas hurt his leg and will stay home Saturday.

Dempsey plans to move cornerback Eugene Walker to Thomas' spot and to put 5-8 180-pound sophomore Tony Haywood in Walker's usual spot.

"We're confident in Haywood as a starter," Dempsey said. "He made some great plays playing man-to-man in the West Texas State game."

Dempsey thinks the 1-4 Bulldogs will keep the secondary of the 3-3 Salukis busy.

"The main thing we have to worry about is that they've scored a lot of points," Dempsey said. "Their passing game is more extensive than any we've seen. They're not afraid to put it up."

Until last week's 13-10 loss to California State-Fullerton, Fresno State had scored at least 16 points in each game. Bulldog quarterbacks Jeff Tedford and Sergio Toscano had combined to complete 63 of 137 pass attempts for eight touchdowns. Both quarterbacks figure to play on Saturday.

Dempsey was interested in the FSU defense, too. He thinks the Bulldog defensive style will change the Saluki offensive style.

"They play tight man-to-man on receivers and don't give them much room," he said. "Against a zone defense, a quarterback can look around, find voids. Against a man-to-man, receivers have to make sharp cuts if you're going to complete anything."

Dempsey said his receiving corps has worked on cutting sharp against man-to-man coverage in practice.

"We can't flounder around out there and throw the ball away," Dempsey said. "We have to select plays that'll allow us to complete a high percentage of passes."

Another aspect of the Saluki offense that might be changed by the Bulldog defensive setup is the running game of tailback Walter Poole. Many of Poole's 146 yards against West Texas State came on delays—plays where Johnson dropped back as if to pass and handed to Poole, who ran through the line.

"The way they set up, you can't run a delay," Dempsey

Cage outlook to feature new coaches, players

By Jim Cagle
Staff Writer

Three new coaches, three new players, and a rebirth of basketball enthusiasm was unveiled at Saluki basketball Media Day Thursday at the Arena.

The Salukis, who officially begin practice Friday under new Head Coach Allen Van Winkle, are looking to climb from the bottom of the Missouri Valley Conference standings. They finished with a dismal 0-16 conference and 7-20 overall record under former Coach Joe Gottfried, who resigned after the final regular season game.

Van Winkle carries with him a winning tradition—an 88-14 record over a three-year period at Jackson Community College in Michigan.

Joining Van Winkle on the coaching staff are Stafford Stephenson, a former assistant coach at Evansville, and Herman Williams, who is entering his second tour of duty with the Salukis.

Williams was an assistant for the late Paul Lambert from 1974-78, and has been an assistant at Auburn for the past two years. Van Winkle's staff recruited only five transfer students in a brief off-season drive for players. Of the five, only three are presently on the roster.

David Tucker, a 6-9 forward from Lincoln Trail College, decided not to enroll and get married. Pie Walker, a 6-6 forward, who Van Winkle red-shirted at Jackson last season, will not be eligible until he finishes a two-year junior college residency requirement and registers at SIU-C on Dec. 23, eight games into the season.

The three new faces for the Salukis are junior guards Ken Byrd, 6-3, and James Copeland, 6-0, both of whom played for Van Winkle at Jackson; and Dennis Goins, a 6-0 guard from Vincennes in Indiana.

The Salukis return four starters from last season: Rod Camp, 6-10 senior center and leading scorer with 15.2 points per game; Carbondale's Johnny Fayne, 6-4 junior guard; Darnall Jones, 6-5 junior swingman; and Charles Nance, 6-6 junior forward and leading rebounder with 7.3 per game.

Also returning to the 11-man squad are lette-men Jac Chiatt, a 6-5 senior forward; Edward Thomas, a 6-9 senior center-forward; Scott Russ, a 6-5 senior swingman; and Karl Morris, a 6-7 junior center-forward.

Golfers play first round

The women's golf team is in 14th place after the first round of the Lady Kat Invitational in Lexington, Ky.

SIU-C had a team total of 332 on the 54-hole, par 72 course Thursday morning. The Salukis are only four strokes out of 10th place.

North Carolina leads the tournament with a 297 and is followed by Kentucky, South Carolina, Michigan State, Ohio State, Marshall University, Indiana and Memphis State are tied for sixth place.

Tracy Keller leads the Salukis as she shot a 9-over-par 81. Dania Meador, who finished fifth at the Midwest regional tournament last weekend, is next with an 82. Meador is followed by Lisa Rottman-Bremer with 84, Sue Arbogast with 85 and Barb Anderson with an 86. Bremer bogeyed the last seven holes while Anderson had a quadruple bogey on No. 17, hitting two shots in the water.

The individual leader is North Carolina freshman Page Marsh. Marsh shot a 72 in the first round.

Saluki harriers to face Illini, Redbirds at state tournament

By Doug Applebaugh
Staff Writer

Last week's impressive 23-33 triumph over Kansas at Midland Hills may have been the turning point of the season for Lew Hartzog's men's cross country team.

The victory was valuable not only because it was the team's first of the season after three frustrating losses, but because it was a confidence builder.

"I was extremely pleased with the way the kids ran," said Coach Hartzog. "And I think we've finally put things together. We're going just about as prepared as we can into the Illinois Intercollegiate."

The defending state champion Salukis will compete Saturday in the 14th running of the Illinois Intercollegiate championships at Normal. And, like last year, Hartzog's crew will have to contend with Illinois and Illinois State if they are to preserve their state crown.

Last year, the Salukis outran favored Illinois, winning the meet with 46. Illinois had 48 and Illinois State, the defending champ in last year's meet, placed third with 90.

As Hartzog sees it, this year's state meet will be a match between the same three teams. The Salukis have competed against both Illinois and Illinois State already this season. And, although the Salukis did not run well against either of the two teams, Hartzog thinks his team has shown vast improvement.

"Illinois went into that first meet of the season with some super athletes, and they were just a little better at that point in the season," said Hartzog. "Against Illinois State, we just were not physically prepared to run."

"But the kids know they're as good as the other two teams and now they've finally put something together that's going to help them go out and really run a race."

The Salukis were beaten 21-40 by Illinois in the season opener. Although Junior Mike Keane was the individual winner, the Salukis were victim of Illinois' pack style of running. Illini runners took seven of the top 10 spots in the race, including four in the top five.

Illinois, which is again favored to win the state meet, has been beaten only once this season. The Illini finished second to the host team at the prestigious Indiana Invitational. In addition the Illini won the Illinois State Invitational at Normal on Sept. 26.

Illinois' top runners are Pete Ffitch, Wally Duffy and Jon Schmidt, who placed first, third and fourth respectively at the ISU tourney.

Illinois State, which also scored a 21-40 win over the Salukis at Midland Hills on Sept. 18, was had its share of fortune. The Redbirds are 2-0 in dual meets and won the Notre Dame Invitational on Oct. 2.

The Redbirds are led by Jeff Hill, who covered the rough terrain at Midland Hills in 25:39 on a windy day in placing first against the Salukis. Mike Baker, Brad Little and Mike Bailey.

Saluki Captain Karsten Schulz won last week's race against the Redbirds. In doing so, he came within eight seconds of beating the course record at Midland Hills.

"Karsten ran awfully well," said Hartzog. "He ran one of the

Tradition to highlight hockey games

By Michelle Schwent
Sports Editor

A traditional powerhouse team and a traditional friend of SIU-C field hockey will highlight the team's weekend.

The Salukis will play Southwest Missouri at 4:30 p.m. Friday and again at 1 p.m. Saturday, the SIU-C alumni game. Both games will be held at Wham Field. Meanwhile, the long-awaited appearance of the Great Pumpkin is expected to occur at Saturday's match, according to Coach Julee Ilner.

"The word I have is the Great Pumpkin will be at the alumni game on Saturday," Ilner said. "The Great Pumpkin is the very special mascot of the SIU-C field hockey team."

Pumpkins aside, the 3-6-1 Salukis will have to battle SMSU in two tough matches. The Salukis have won seven of their last nine matches and have compiled a 4-1-1 record against the Bears.

The Bears won the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Division II nationals two year's ago and finished second nationally last season at Edwardsville.

Ilner said SIU-C will have to play good defensive hockey and avoid mistakes.

"We can't make any mistakes in the backfield," Ilner said. "I think we'll score well but we'll have to hold them to one goal or less. If we let them get more than one goal I don't think we can offset that. We need to score at least three goals."

The combination of good competition and the appearance of the Great Pumpkin will provide SIU-C with spark as they near post-season play, Ilner said.

"The Great Pumpkin always serves to get us up," Ilner said. "If we come up with two good games, that will give us momentum going into the state tournament."

The Great Pumpkin has made its presence known at practice this week. On Monday the Great Pumpkin left a bag of goodies at Wham Field for the team and Tuesday orange balloons with messages attached were taped to the trailer at the field.
