Bracy OK if unable to build, USO says

By William Jason Yong
Staff Writer

Support of the purchase of the Bracy Building as a second alternative was expressed Wednesday by the Undergraduate Student Organization.

The USO voted 16-5 with seven abstentions to support the purchase if construction of a library storage facility is not feasible in light of Gov. James Thompson's statewide construction freeze.

USO President Jerry Cook denounced the procedures used by the Graduate Student Council to make a decision to oppose the purchase.

The GSC distributed fact sheets about the proposed purchase of the Bracy Building during the gubernatorial debate between Gov. Thompson and Adlai Stevenson at McLeod Theater on Oct. 3.

"First, the GSC did not have all the information about the Bracy Building," Cook said. "Yet, it chose to distribute the fact sheets to students with absolutely incomplete information."

"Second, the GSC never spoke with anyone in the administration about the Bracy issue. I attended a meeting Tuesday of the GSC's Committee to Oppose the Purchase of the Bracy Building, which President Somit also attended, and that was the first time that the GSC ever contacted the administration."

GSC President Paul Matalonis said Thursday that he did not put together the information contained in the fact sheets.

"Carl Kosierowski, chairman of the Committee to Oppose the Purchase of the Bracy Building, put the information together with the help of six members of the committee," Matalonis said.

Matalonis said he was confident that the fact sheet information was accurate even though he did not see it before the committee distributed it at the gubernatorial debate.

"Nothing is truly a fact," Matalonis said. "Everything is open to different interpretations."

"It's easy to criticize details. I don't understand why Jerry objects to the procedure. The GSC has authorized the committee to look for solutions in any way it can to oppose the

Senator says U.S. faces major education crisis

By Andrew Herrmann
Staff Writer

The United States is "about one Sputnik away from an education crisis," according to U.S. Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo.

Hart, who was in Carbondale Thursday to stump for U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-Southern District, called the Reagan administration's education policies "arrogant," "frightening" and "lagging behind the rest of the world's industrial nations."

Hart's Sputnik remark referred to the first Soviet spacecraft, launched in 1957, which prompted American educators to emphasize science and mathematics in the nation's schools.

Speaking at a pro-education rally in the Free Forum Area, Hart called for a "180-degree turn" in the nation's educational policies, saying he didn't "think we should have to wait for some vast Soviet breakthrough to stimulate us into doing this."

"If this administration thinks education is too expensive," Hart said, "wait until they find out how much ignorance costs. We cannot afford as a nation to continue to rubber-stamp the increasingly rigid and doctrinaire programs of this administration and hope to survive."

Hart, a leading advocate for increased funding for education, said the cutbacks in student aid were the result of a "Congress without a lot of political courage and independence." As a result of those cuts, 700,000 to one million college students are threatened with a loss of assistance to further their education, he said.

"Education is absolutely crucial to our economy," Hart said. He said that "one of the major failures of the United States on the Reagan administration's policies is 'disastrous education policies.'"

"Today, this country under this administration is decreasing in training its scientists and engineers and foreign language specialists, while every industrial nation in the world is going up. If we are ever going to compete with them again (in the marketplace), our number one priority is going to have to be the building of the best educational system in the world."

"The statistics are frightening and the American people ought to know them. There are more people studying English in China than there are in America. The rate of Soviet young people, French young people and German young people studying math and science and learning technical skills is drastically higher than in this country. A number of us are saying we are eating our own seed corn."

Hart has proposed an "American Defense Education Act" which he says will provide an incentive to local school districts to increase the study of mathematics, sciences, foreign

Simon grant hike gets Reagan nod

By Bob Delaney
Staff Writer

A bill sponsored by U.S. Rep. Paul Simon, D-24th District, and signed Wednesday by President Reagan will increase Pell Grant benefits for eligible students, and offer grants to most of several hundred veterans at SIU-C who did not receive them this fall.

Simon aide David Carle said 50,000 veterans across the country were not given Pell Grant awards this fall because the government had decided to include social security and veterans benefits — both non-taxable incomes — when deciding who would receive awards this year. The signing of Simon's bill means these sources of income will not be included in determining awards.

Carle also said benefits for about 700,000 students across the nation would have been delayed next year because a family schedule was delivered four months late by Reagan. However, students should receive Pell Grants on time after passage of the bill, he said.

The number of veterans at SIU-C whose benefits were cut off this fall has not been determined, but Pery Murry, coordinator of veterans affairs at SIU-C, and Financial Aid Director Joe Camille estimated that about 200 had been affected.

Camille said all eligible students would receive increased benefits under the bill signed by Reagan. Camille said he had been told the maximum benefits would be increased from $1,673 to $1,800.

Though the bill is retroactive to the start of the year, Camille said there would be a delay of up to four weeks until the Department of Education sent new Pell Grant payment schedules.

A very high percentage of veterans denied grants this fall will become eligible once the schedules come in, Camille said.

Murry said veterans did not respond last year when told they would be cut off from Pell Grants. Despite warnings from Simon, most veterans did not think they would be affected, he said.

Simon said the restoration of Pell Grant funds would substantially help veterans on campus.

purchase of the building." In response to Cook's statement that the GSC had not met with the administration before making a decision, Matalonis said the GSC had met last year with Clarence Dougherty, vice president for campus services, to discuss this issue.

"If there is convincing information to change the GSC position, the council is ready to evaluate its decision," he said. "But I don't expect this to happen."

In reference to recent inquiries posed by the Daily Egyptian concerning the USO's position on the Bracy purchase, Cook said the reason for the delay in making a decision is that the USO wants to gather and evaluate all the information about the building before making a decision.

"We cannot and must not duplicate the mistake committed by GSC," Cook said.

The library purchases 40,000 documents a year and by 1986 will reach its capacity, he said.

On several occasions since 1971, the administration has formally requested on-campus storage alternatives, he said.

"These alternatives originated from a 10-year plan developed under Delyte Morris administration," he said. "Each alternative was denied."

The University continued to pursue a permanent on-campus facility until 1980, when the library staff requested that the University administration secure a storage facility for surplus documents.

"A temporary facility has not always been the objective of the administration," Cook said.

"If the Governor intended to authorize the funds for construction, why didn't he just say so? One week has passed and much effort has been made by the University to pursue the Governor's remarks, yet no clarification was extended."

The Governor hinted at the possibility of authorizing the funds for construction during the gubernatorial debate. "Those comments were made in a highly politically charged context," Cook said.

Part of the USO resolution urged the Governor to authorize the $1.6 million for use in constructing an on-campus facility.

"If the Governor does not authorize the funds before the election, at a time when he can reap all the benefits thereof, what impetus does he have to authorize the funds after the election?" Cook said. "Could he not be trying to play the 'middle-of-the-road' strategy?

"How can we realistically believe that the legislators will respond to the request after they have been led to believe it was already an urgent need? Already, legislators have been embarrassed—at election time—by the coverage this issue has received.

"We must support the purchase of the Bracy Building as the second alternative. I know I will be staged as being coopted by the administration. I am not ashamed.

"We must be proud. We stand out above the rest."

The senate also passed a resolution to establish a holiday on the Friday prior to final examination week. Cook said John Guyon, vice president for academic affairs and research, expressed positive response about the idea. He said he does not anticipate any problems from the faculty regarding support of this resolution.

The senate erupted into a heated argument and debate on legislation to provide a grant-in-aid for the USO public relations commissioner.

The bill, which would have provided $300 for the commissioner per semester, was rejected by the senate.

One man dies in Solidarity riots

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Worker anger about the ban on Solidarity was reported spreading to Poland's coal and steel heartland Thursday and the riots claimed their first victim, a 20-year-old man shot by police.

The official PAP news agency said Bodgan Wlonek died Thursday in a hospital after being shot Wednesday during fierce street fighting in the Krakow steel-making suburb of Nowa Huta.

It was the first officially acknowledged death in the riots spawned by the outlawing of Solidarity last week.

Reagan launches anti-drug program

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan vowed Thursday to "end the drug menace and cripple organized crime" with a $200 million program that will blanket the nation with federal narcotics task forces.

Reagan, criticized in Congress last year for scaling back the fight against drug traffickers, said the government will hire up to 1,200 more agents and investigators for a dozen task forces. The illicit drug business in the United States is worth an estimated $90 billion.

"The time has come to cripple the power of the mob in America," Reagan told more than 300 people at the Justice Department.

Many jobless still filing for benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — Despite President Reagan's claim that the nation is "respite-bound," another 695,000 Americans filed first-time claims for unemployment benefits in the week ending Oct. 2, the Labor Department reported Thursday.

It was the second highest filing since the current recession set in during the late summer of 1981, falling only 8,000 claims short of the record 703,000 initial pleas for government relief that were filed in the week ending Sept. 18.

Anderson stumping for Stevenson

Former presidential candidate John Anderson, crossing the nation in support of selected Republicans and Democrats, has decided to help out Adlai Stevenson's gubernatorial campaign.

Anderson appeared on the campuses of DePaul University in Chicago and the University of Illinois Thursday plugging Stevenson's economic recovery program. He will speak at Northwestern University Monday before flying off to a Colorado campaign.

Anderson said Thursday that he decided to help Stevenson's campaign after reading the Democrat's nine-point economic recovery program. He said much of Stevenson's proposals were in line with his own ideas about the recovery of the American economy.

"Water and energy — this is what we're blessed with," said Anderson, a one-time Republican from Rockford. "We should be able to do what states like California and North Carolina have done with their resources."

Guyon says Bracy may house more than just library surplus

By Ginny Lee
Staff Writer

The Bracy Building in Marion, if purchased by the University, may be used to store material from various departments on campus and house SIU-C program activities, as well as to store library materials, according to John Guyon, vice president for academic affairs and research.

At this point, the University administration has identified at least two departments that would "very likely" make use of the building, including archaeological artifacts from the Center for Archaeological Investigations and "residual" material from the Center for Vietnamese Studies, Guyon said.

In addition, he said, some Law Library materials, which are now stored in the Good Luck Glove Factory building on Washington Street in Carbondale, may also be stored in Bracy.

"We're ready to go, but we haven't moved anything," Guyon said. "We figured it was presumptuous to move anything yet."

The University is waiting for the state Capital Development Board to approve the purchase of and release $1.6 million for the purchase of the Bracy Building, formerly a grocery warehouse, as a library storage facility.

CDB Chairman Samuel Skinner said Monday that he had decided to delay consideration of SIU-C's request to purchase the building because of concern expressed to him by students about the purchase of the Bracy Building.

Skinner said he visited the campus to talk with administrators and students about the matter.

Other areas being looked into as possibly making use of the Bracy Building are the Fisheries Laboratory, the Career Development Center at Ordell and "some component of the Coal Research Program," Guyon said.

"This is not meant to be an exclusive list," he said, "but just areas we've looked into."

Brian Butler, associate director of the archaeological center, said that collections that are not currently being worked on would be stored at Bracy.

"If the Bracy Building was purchased," Butler said, "it would be our inactive archaeological collections" that would be stored there.

languages and communication skills. The program, he said "permits local school districts to apply directly for federal government assistance" and could cost as much as $4 billion. "Hopefully," he said, "Democrats and thoughtful Republicans will get behind that bill in the next session of Congress and we can restore funds and reverse the force of this country in education across the board."

Hart, often mentioned as a possible presidential candidate, brushed off inquiries of his immediate political future by saying that his interests in 1984 were "secondary" to getting other Democrats elected to Congress.

Calling Simon a "superb candidate," Hart said it was his own duty "to get good people elected in '82.

"Frankly, I don't think it will matter much who the (presidential) nominee of our party is if we fail to elect qualified people this year. Therefore, I have not tried to compete with the (local) candidates for money or attention. I think those who may have an interest in '84 should put that off for another few weeks."

Worthwhile program may be eliminated

The dominoes are falling, or at least teetering on edge. With student aid being cut, social service programs slashed, funds for science and mathematics education whittled down from $70 million in 1981 to a mere $15 million in 1983, reports of cutbacks are beginning to sound like a stereophonic record caught in a rut.

One of the latest programs threatened by the economic fallout of "New Federalism" and "Reaganomics" is the Southern Illinois Talent Search Center in Carbondale. Serving 54 counties and 283 high schools, this program that has helped thousands of poor but bright high school students get through school and build careers may be marked for elimination.

In these difficult times, we all have to take our lumps but reasonable criteria must be followed on deciding who takes how much of what. The criteria should be utility of the program and its success measured against its cost.

The words of Bill Pyle, director of Talent Search, speak eloquently to all three criteria. He said, "For every student we help it only costs government $35. We've helped put thousands in school and watched them become doctors and lawyers and tax payers. These people could have been welfare recipients. Of all the students we've helped, 79 percent graduate — a figure higher than the national average."

The program apparently works. Given the high unemployment rate of recent years it is needed. And it does not cost the government too much. One nuclear missile could probably pay for the whole program for a few years.

Yes, we all need to take our lumps, but this should not mean outright closure of the program. Let Talent Search take some cuts perhaps but closing it will be, as Pyle says, "cutting off the dog to save the tail."

Lack of cool stores, man

Omigod! There is a definite lack of like totally tubular clothing stores in this town. I mean, like I'm supposed to care like that another Wal-Mart is being built near the mall? It like bars me out! Two Wal-Marts and a K-Mart within three miles and no decent department stores—like what a total bumme! Like saving a few cents on shampoo and nail polish at these discount joints is tolerable, but fashion? I am sure! Blue-light specials

Viewpoint

Unemployment may not drop

By Chet W. Sisk
Senior, Radio and Television

Everyone in the Reagan administration is talking about the long-awaited recovery that will snatch the country from the jaws of recession and onto the road to prosperity.

Other economists, though, give a less rose-colored outlook and call for a slow, rough recovery. In order for most Americans to feel a tangible recovery, and for a drastic reduction in the number of unemployed, large manufacturing firms will have to get back into the black. According to the experts, when a recovery does come, the problems of slow business, tight money and unemployment will work themselves out.

What these experts may discover is that there are some problems with that foregone conclusion. The current rate of unemployment may never return to the comfortable rate government once said the country could live with. The system of manufacturing and employment is changing rapidly enough that old rules may be obsolete.

As witnessed in the automobile industry, the old American ethic of "bigger means better" is losing ground. Industrial giants like John Deere have had Japanese manufacturing representatives visit their plants. The Japanese advice was to build smaller, more efficient plants. Most manufacturers like John Deere may well adopt the Japanese plan; it works for the Japanese, it will save money and be more efficient.

But, smaller plants mean fewer jobs. Following the advice of the Japanese, however, will not be the cause of possible high unemployment in the future. Rather, American society is changing; the hey-day of industrialization has bitten the dust. America is becoming an information-oriented society. Specialization is becoming the key. The common laborer will be losing more and more ground — not just because of fewer jobs, but also because of the added competition from machines.

So, what will happen to this surplus of unemployed people? The government wouldn't dare enact an employment measure similar to Roosevelt's New Deal. If the early 1930s — not with a projected budget deficit for next year of $150 billion staring them in the face. An employment plan for the 1980s will have to be a cooperative effort between the government and private sector.

Others may try to ignore this problem and even say that the United States can live with an annual unemployment rate of ten percent. This assumption can lead to grave consequences. It is known that high unemployment has a direct correlation to high crime. Cities would deteriorate and crime would run rampant. Not only that, but poverty would increase dramatically until the current schism between rich and poor would be so wide that social unrest may be its only bridge.

The current administration may be neglecting the current trends in the country's unemployment scene. This type of neglect can be likened to the mad scientist who throws out the dangerous bacteria and says that it will die "by itself." The scientist only later finds out that an epidemic for which there is no cure ravages the city.

When we talk about recovery, each of the problems that are hampering the nation should be talked about and dealt with separately — not by concentration on one issue and hoping the others will work themselves out.

That may not be the case in the near future for unemployment. Until legislators stop playing partisan politics with the welfare of millions of people, unemployment will never substantially go down — no matter what kind of "recovery" takes place.

Cardinal fever is alive in Carbondale

While reading Jackie Rodgers' article on the lack of World Series fever in Carbondale (DE, Oct. 13), I almost choked on my morning danish.

The St. Louis Cardinals were the best team in the National League this year and led their division all year.

Besides the fact that they are only 100 miles from Carbondale, they didn't receive as much coverage in the DE as the Cubs, who were always losing. I was glad to hear, though, that there was only one die-hard Cardinal fan left in Carbondale — because the rest of the die-hards were probably in St. Louis gearing up for the games.

Jackie, I don't know if your major is journalism, but, if it doesn't work out, you could always get a job doing polls for shady politicians. — Sammy Brown, Junior, Chemistry.

Band shines at World Series

By Thomas Sparks

"Beautiful, just beautiful," said Mike Hanes, director of the Marching Salukis, as the band was leaving the field at Busch Memorial Stadium.

They had just performed their version of the National Anthem at the second game of the World Series before a crowd of 53,723.

The Salukis left tears in the eyes of fans when they brought a new dimension to the World Series. For the first time in the Series' 80-year history, the National Anthem was played as an instrumental, instead of being sung by a celebrity.

It was also a new experience for the fans. The Saluki version, officially known as "A Salute to America," opens with strains of "America the Beautiful," which often throw people off.

When the solo trumpets of Tony Baca and Jon Patton began the National Anthem following a timpani roll, the crowd began to catch on. As the full band began to play, the crowd was at full attentiveness.

Baca, the first soloist, was quite matter-of-fact following his performance before an estimated television crowd of 10 million.

"I've played it better," said Baca, "but I was not conscious of the television cameras. I just concentrated on Mr. Hanes directing and the sound coming out of my horn."

But Patton was not so matter-of-fact. "I was so nervous I couldn't go to sleep until 4:30 in the morning. But once we got on the field, I just blocked everything out."

Although many members of the band regretted not being able to stay for the game, most were ecstatic at just being able to perform at the World Series.

First year for dance fundraiser

Event to build healthy hearts

By Linda Stockman
Staff Writer

Students can "Dance for Heart" starting Saturday at the Student Recreation Center.

"This is the first year for the event," said Jackie Sanders, Illinois Heart Association field director in Carbondale. "We gear our fund-raising events into prevention programs that promote good cardiovascular health," she said, "like aerobic dancing, swimming and jump roping."

Sanders also said one of the goals was to get persons involved in an exercise program that could be ongoing. "It's never too late to start," she said.

Aerobic dancing conditions muscles by trimming, firming and shaping. It conditions heart, lungs and blood vessels. Aerobic exercises include brisk walking, jogging, running, swimming, cycling and rope skipping.

Participants can pick up pledge sheets at the Recreation Center or the Heart Association, 1007 W. Mill, and must have pledge sheets signed by one of the instructors at the following six aerobic class times:

- From 11 a.m. to noon Saturday in the gym.
- From 5 to 6 p.m. Monday in the gym.
- From 7:45 to 8 a.m. Wednesday in the golf room or 6 to 7 p.m. in the gym.
- From 7:45 to 8 a.m. Thursday golf room.
- From 11 a.m. to noon Oct. 23 in the gym.

Students may dance without having pledges, have the pledge sheet signed and then get pledges and turn the sheet in according to Kathy Rankin, recreational sports coordinator.

Dancers have two weeks from Oct. 23 to turn in sheets. Rankin also said dance exercise classes beginning on Oct. 25 and the 11 a.m. to noon Saturday classes, which continue until Dec. 4, are other opportunities for students to complete an hour.

Students may complete all six of the scheduled classes, but they should tell those who pledge of their intentions. Rankin said.

"We have specific times so no one gets caught off guard."

Sanders said. She said donors will be pledging per minute in "Dance for Heart."

Other groups with aerobic classes, like Continuing Education and Eve's Fitness, are also participating Sanders said.

All participants receive terry cloth sweatbands and wristband sets and a pin. Other prizes will be awarded for dancers bringing in the greatest amount of pledges.

Mozart comedy has potential

Opera cast has spirit, talent

A Review

By Jeanna Hunter
Staff Writer

Cosi Fan Tutte, Mozart's comic opera was a diamond in the rough at its first dress rehearsal Wednesday night, but it has the potential, once polished, to really shine.

If the set changes go smoothly and if the tape machine doesn't munch on the pre-recorded music, then the opera, directed by Michael Blum, will be a success when it goes on at 8 p.m. Saturday and 3 p.m. Sunday in Shryock Auditorium.

If all does not go well, then it is no fault of the cast because they are excellent. They will, in the final product, give the show the continuity it needs to become a good opera production.

The opera centers on the efforts of Ferrando, played by Gary VanDeventer, and Guglielmo, played by Greg A. Coutts, to win the love of a lady who has sworn her love to someone else.

The best characters in the opera were the conspiring old man, Don Alphonso, played by Eric McCluskey, and his co-conspirator, Despina the maid, who will be played by Carla Coppi on Saturday and by Diane Kopach on Sunday. Both actresses were fit for their part, but, while Kopach's performance is nice, Coppi's performance has that extra spark that separates the excellent from the average.

Alphonso sets up the original deceptive scheme, based on a bet, that Guglielmo and Ferrando form all their actions around. He is the culprit who Despina, who is not privy to the original deception, uses her influence on the ladies, Fiordiligi, played by Lindsey van de Kirk, and Dorabella, played by Mary Jane Robbins, to prod them into a casual affaire du coeur with their "new" suitors. She is the funniest of the six characters in the opera.

All the actors and actresses have very good voices and understanding them was only difficult when two or more sing two or more different parts at the same time.

The set for Cosi Fan Tutte, designed by Blum, is simple but sufficient and the costumes designed by Brenda Schnick are

Health Service to offer flu shots

Flu shots will be available at the SIU-C Health Service beginning Friday.

Students, faculty and staff will be served on a walk-in basis from 8 to 11:30 a.m. and 1 to 4 p.m. Monday through Friday. No appointment is necessary. Students covered by the SIU-C Health Program can receive a flu shot free. Those who have received an insurance refund, and faculty and staff will be charged $3.50.

The flu season is quickly approaching with the coming of fall and winter. It is virtually impossible to avoid the flu viruses. More time spent indoors with people increases exposure to viruses.

Along with the flu shot, self-care is the preventative measure available are self-care and the flu shot. Each prepares the body's defenses to fight against viral attack by influenza viruses.

Most healthy people do not need flu shots. Many students' lifestyles, however, make them more susceptible to infections because their weakened defenses fail when viruses strike.

Students can prepare for the flu season by keeping their bodies healthy. Eating nourishing food, exercising regularly, getting plenty of rest and dealing with stress through relaxing leisure can fortify the body. Self-care is the most sensible care for most people.

Some people are considered at "high risk" for complications from influenza because their bodies are less able to cope with infections. Flu shots are recommended on a yearly basis for these individuals by the U.S. Public Health Service.

Groups considered at risk are urged to receive the influenza vaccine are:

- Persons with chronic

Soviet emigre can be free here

By Sherry Chisenhall
Student Writer

Privacy is a basic American privilege which is taken for granted by most U.S. citizens.

To a man born in Leningrad though, the right to be left alone can be a very treasured value.

Dmitri Shalin, an assistant professor of sociology, said the freedom of thought and the right to follow one's conviction, are what he values most about living in the United States.

Shalin legally emigrated from the Soviet Union in 1975 and became a U.S. citizen in 1981. He said he was given an exit visa, for permanent emigration, and is not allowed to go back into that country.

"There is more than one reason that forced me to leave my native country," he said. "In retrospect, it is not so easy to say which was the most important one.

"For one thing," Shalin said, "I realized that a certain historic epoch of liberalization was coming to a close. A new era was coming. I could not be assured of my freedom and safety any longer. I realized I could not stay.

"I also felt that I wanted to pursue a line of research that would not be permitted in the Soviet Union."

Shalin's primary interest is in sociological theory. "In Russia, the only officially recognized theory is Marxism. All other theoretical orientations are suspect, to say the least.

"I'm interested in interpretive sociology, which has historically been at odds with Marxism. I think the social world cannot be understood in terms of one particular theory, but must be seen in diverse theoretical perspectives."

Shalin said he went through a usual amount of bureaucratic red tape and humiliation to get his exit visa.

"I had to be present at departmental meetings where I was denounced, abused and labeled as a traitor," he said. "After months of waiting, I was given permission to leave the country.

"To get an exit visa I had to sign a statement renouncing my Soviet citizenship, then I had 20 days to collect my things and leave the country. The procedure was a standard one." The usual red tape requires that numerous applications be filed and that money be paid for each step in the process of obtaining the visa.

"The trouble and the humiliation were worth it," he said, "because I was being allowed to leave. Getting out is the name of the game."

"The real problem with applying for an exit visa is that people might not be allowed to leave but are given no reason," Shalin said.

"In Russia, it is the law that males have to work. If you are fired and can't work, you can be legally prosecuted."

Shalin said the prospect of having no job and not being allowed to leave is a big deterrent in applying for an exit visa.

"Hundreds of thousands of people are stranded in Russia either because they have been refused exit visas or because they are scared to apply," Shalin said.

Shalin said a tragic aspect of emigrating is that the Soviet Union prohibits visits with relatives remaining in the country. His mother is the only relative he has in the Soviet Union.

"This is a penal policy. It's vindictiveness on the part of Russian authorities, a way to make people pay for their decisions," Shalin said.

"After six years in this country I am fully adjusted to life in the United States," Shalin said. "I have my privacy, both physical and intellectual. I pursue my research and exercise my freedom. The great thing about this country is that people agree to disagree. And to be a dissident is very much a way of life."

The question of whether people in the United States are happier than people in the Soviet Union is a complex one, Shalin said.

"Happy is a hard word to define. Here, people are free to develop ideas, pursue a career, or try to change the course of events. This is a source of personal satisfaction."

"In Russia, the odds are against you. You are forced to operate within a rigid framework and profess allegiance to the state. Yet, I would hesitate to say that Americans, on the whole, are happier than the Russians."

There's no question that Americans have more external freedom than Russians, Shalin said. "But it seems to me, paradoxically enough, that external restraint is compatible with, and even conducive to freedom of spirit or internal freedom."

In the Soviet Union, Shalin said, "People have little control over their bodies. But, that is exactly why they stick to their spiritual values, and that is what makes them happy."

"This situation results in a gap between what people believe and what they are actually doing. Man, caught in this situation, is inevitably alienated."

GSC urges Peltier hearing

By Robert Green
Staff Writer

A resolution urging that Leonard Peltier be granted an evidentiary hearing to determine whether he should be given a new trial was passed Thursday by the Graduate Student Council after heated discussion.

Peltier, a native American inmate at Marion Federal Penitentiary, was convicted of aiding and abetting the deaths of two FBI agents during a shootout at the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota in 1975.

Guest speaker Dave Baker, coordinator of the local Leonard Peltier Support Group, told the council that evidence obtained from FBI files through the Freedom of Information Act shows that the FBI fabricated and withheld evidence, coerced testimony, committed perjury and obstructed justice.

"Basically he did not get a fair trial," Baker said. "Leonard was left to answer for the deaths of the FBI agents because of his involvement as a leader of the American Indian Movement."

Peltier's supporters, Baker said, have filed a writ of habeas corpus, a petition seeking the release of someone in custody, and are awaiting a judge's decision on their request for an evidentiary hearing.

Baker was asked why the Peltier matter was being brought before the council.

"We feel that this infringement of constitutional rights should be brought to the public's attention," Baker said.

"If they can do it with Leonard Peltier, they can do it with anyone. We hope that you can help exert some public pressure and outcry."

Baker said Peltier's supporters are also concerned about his safety at the Marion prison. "There is nothing keeping him alive. There have been many killings there, and we are concerned that the FBI may try to have him killed," he said.

After Baker spoke, the council discussed the Peltier resolution which was presented by the council's Executive Board.

Council member Frank Lynch disapproved of the resolution, specifically a clause stating that "the GSC supports the circulation of petitions to show support for Peltier." The petitions would be sent to U.S. District Court Judge Paul Benson, who will decide on the request for an evidentiary hearing.

"We shouldn't have anything to do with this," Lynch said. "We've only heard one side of the story, and given that, do you feel comfortable about issuing any kind of statement about anything?"

"As for the petitions, the judge is not going to consider them. By law he can only consider what the defendant says and what the government says and that's all. Why should we burden him by sending letters that he legally can't consider. We make ourselves look kind of silly," said Lynch, a law student.

But council member Sarah Hever, disagreed, saying the council should make a stand as a matter of principle.

"I don't think we should get caught up in all the legal technicalities," she said. "We just want to take a stand because we feel this man's rights have been violated. We want the judge to know how we feel, and the petitions can have an effect on the judge's ruling."

Council member Fred Marx agreed saying, "In case after case I've seen how public pressure, through city councils, our student councils, have made a difference, whether allowed by law or not."

After more discussion, the council passed the resolution by a vote of 28-7-5, and Hever distributed petitions to council members.

In other business, a resolution clarifying the council's position opposing the University's proposed purchase of the Bracy Building in Marion was not considered, for lack of a quorum.

Paul Matalonis, GSC president, said the council will hold a special meeting to consider the resolution at 7:00 p.m. Wednesday in the Renaissance Room of the Student Center.

Take Charge At 22.

In most jobs, at 22 you're near the bottom of the ladder.

In the Navy, at 22 you can be a leader. After just 16 weeks of leadership training, you're an officer. You'll have the kind of job your education and training prepared you for, and the decision-making authority you need to make the most of it.

As a college graduate and officer candidate, your Navy training is geared to making you a leader. There is no boot camp. Instead, you receive professional training to help you build the technical and management skills you'll need as a Navy officer.

This training is designed to instill confidence by first-hand experience. You learn by doing. On your first sea tour, you're responsible for managing the work of up to 30 men and the care of sophisticated equipment worth millions of dollars.

It's a bigger challenge and a lot more responsibility than most corporations give you at 22. The rewards are bigger, too. There's a comprehensive package of benefits, including special duty pay. The starting salary is $16,400—more than most companies would pay you right out of college. After four years, with regular promotions and pay increases, your salary will have increased to as much as $29,800.

As a Navy officer, you grow, through new challenges, new tests of your skills, and new opportunities to advance your education, including the possibility of attending graduate school while you're in the Navy.

Don't just take a job. Become a Navy officer, and take charge. Even at 22.

'Lifeboat' theory won't help poor or earth, priest says

By Juliana Anastasoff
Staff Writer

A lifeboat is filled to capacity. A person struggling in the water desperately reaches out to grab the side of the boat. The occupants beat the person off.

This scenario is the metaphor used to describe a theory developed and believed by many scientists in response to the problem of world population and is "the most fascist, racist, elitist approach" to sharing the earth, according to Theo Matthis.

Matthis, a Jesuit priest from India, spoke on "World Population and Lifeboat Ethics" at a breakfast Tuesday at the Interfaith Center, part of the World Food Day activities at SIU-C. He is in the United States as a visiting Third World scholar at Christian Theological Seminary in Indianapolis, Ind., having taken a sabbatical from directing the Institute of Industrial Society in India.

Matthis said in this theory, the privileged survivors would be Western nations while those beaten off would be poorer nations of Africa, Asia and Latin America.

"The poor of the earth are seen as a threat to the future of humanity, polluting and eating the planet dry. But human beings don't pollute the earth, technology does," said Matthis.

Matthis said it is ironic that these Western scientists, whose wealthy countries use 60 percent of the grain produced in the world, complain about the 75 percent consuming the remaining 25 percent.

He said a sizable portion of the grain in the West is consumed by livestock rather than people. Another ironic point, Matthis said, is that the United States, with a population of about 230 million, consumed about 200 million tons of grain last year, while India, with a population exceeding 700 million, consumed 135 million.

Along with the "lifeboat" approach to population control, there are two others, legislative and "crackpot," both degrading and threatening to human freedom, Matthis said.

An example of legislative control is the system in China where families are penalized for having more than two children, he said. "Crackpot" controls include such strategies as mixing contraceptive chemicals in a nation's water supply and withdrawing it during controlled time periods.

The crux of the problem is that population growth cannot slow down until people's standards of living are raised, Matthis said. And in that crux that the solution is found.

In the United States, children are viewed as an economic liability and burden, a constant expense until they are educated and on their own. "But children can't affect the standard of living to those who have no standard," said Matthis. In fact, they are crucial to the survival of Third World families, as laborers and as sources of social security for their parents.

Matthis said the responsibility of care for elders in traditional societies usually falls upon male children. So in order to ensure survival after one is too old to work, it's necessary to have many children, especially when a majority of them will die before they are adults.

The solution to population increase is not dehumanization and violation of rights through punishment, or the application of "lifeboat" ethics, Matthis said, but rather of cooperation throughout the world community.

He feels it is the responsibility of the various countries to propagate responsible parenthood and to provide the necessary care for their people. But that can not be realized until the richer countries of the world accept their role in the process, he said.

"It is time for the wealthy countries to realize that it is in their best interest to help the poor. When a poor country's standard of living rises, the prosperity rises on both sides because there is that much more purchasing power the people have and the less aid they need."

Matthis said another essential is the restructuring of the world economy, a new international economic order. "If the wealthy countries would just pay a fair price for the vast amount of resources and goods they receive from developing countries, then no aid would be necessary."

All these strategies, with everyone's best effort, can solve the problem of feeding the world, Matthis said. But deciding or forcing people to not have children isn't.

"Children are a gift of God, and they are our future," he said. "I hear people say they don't want to have children, that we shouldn't bring children into a wicked world. But how do you change a wicked world without good people?"

Pet motel thrives in hard times

Charles Chamberlain
Associated Press Writer

RAIRIE VIEW (AP) — The life prevails at the American Pet Motel as though there were no hard times.

The lagging economy hasn't affected us too much," says hotel vice president Marc Leeds, who really is putting on dog in his Regency and serial suites, which cost as much as $11 a day and are booked months in advance. About the only thing we've noticed," he said recently, "is that folks are taking vacations three or four days instead of a week or two, so their pets aren't crowded with us as long."

Saint Bernard still is sought in by limousine for a week stay, running up a tab more than $400.

He has scrambled eggs and onion for breakfast, four hamburger patties for lunch, prime rib, chicken, liver or steak for dinner," said Leeds. And then there is Betsy, a dog.

She has been with us five years, and being over eight years old, she rates senior citizen treatment — a red tag, special attention and extra snacks," said Leeds. "A check comes from a bank every month, and once we got a letter from a woman asking how Betsy was doing."

Among boarders are a cat who drinks chocolate milk, a chihuahua who has a bowl of Pepsi with four ice cubes for lunch and ice cream for dinner, a beer-guzzling dog, and a dog who chews Juicy Fruit gum, spitting it out when it loses its flavor just like anyone else.

The motel can accommodate 240 dogs and 88 cats, but also hosts all kinds of other animals.

"One woman boards seven rats — typical alley rats. I don't ask questions, but they are very friendly," said Leeds. "One of our current star boarders is a Greek land turtle named 'Fried Egg.' He's been handed down through generations of the same family for 70 years."

The five-pound turtle is in a glass-enclosed cage with greenery and sand.

He eats ground-up vitamin pills. The owners, who travel a lot, are getting a bargain rate — $1.50 a day.

Leeds boards 10,000 dogs and 3,000 cats a year. He has 16,000 names on a mailing list and 12,000 repeat customers.

In the Imperial suite, dogs sleep in brass beds on Sesame Street sheets and special mattresses. Every day they are brushed and played with, get two cookie breaks, drink from a fountain that refills automatically, get in-room telephone calls from their owners, whose postcards are read to them.

"We get four or five cards a week from all over the world," said Leeds, who has the air of his motel negatively charged with ions to keep down loose hair and dust. There also is stereo music around the clock.

"A lot of people look at the things we do — like having a fire hydrant at the end of a dog's indoor-outdoor run area — and say they are silly. But the little things we do help reduce stress," he said.

In days of budget squeezing, there is always room for pet care — "and I haven't heard a dog complain yet," said Leeds.

Rooming house keeps woman going

By Julie Fredrickson
Student Writer

Happy years. That is how Mary Margaret Johnson describes her years spent in the big, white house at 712 S. University Ave., Carbondale.

The building is a girls' rooming house, operated by Johnson, who will be 85 Tuesday, since she moved there with her husband and six sons 46 years ago.

She said she has no intention to leave the rooming house. "My sons think I'm crazy to stay and keep things running here," she said, smiling, "but I love it here. I love the people and I like to do things for them."

She said, "I plan to stay here until my health runs out." And when that time comes, she has a plan of her own, which does not include moving in with her children. "I don't want to be a burden," she said.

However, she said her children have been asking her to move in with them. "I do hope the boys will donate the house to some organization. I don't want to see it torn down."

Johnson, a stout woman of average height, has lived in Carbondale since 1918, but is "a Kentucky lady from Barlow County." She moved with her family in 1936, to what she calls "the showplace of Carbondale," built in 1900 by a man named professor Davis, she said. "It was the biggest place around."

Johnson said she heard about the house being up for sale. Her husband was in the railroad business, which was in a slump at the time. The couple decided to buy the house and rent it out to students. She said the woman who sold them the house was renting out three rooms to female students.

Remodeling began as soon as the Johnsons moved in. Four rooms were added, the attic was converted into a double bedroom, a basement kitchen was built and the upstairs bathroom was redecorated.

Johnson said the house opened for business a year later, with enough room for 10 girls. She said the house was expanded over the next few years, and three sons were added, including twins.

Even with nine sons in the Johnson household, the building wasn't opened up for men. "I don't want this place torn up," she said, "I know how boys can be."

In 1961, after her husband died, Johnson had a 16-room dormitory constructed in back of her house. "I've always wanted a brick house and an oak tree. Now I have both in the back.

"That oak tree is over 200 years old," she said, "It's my pride and joy."

Johnson said she tries to make the rooming house a home away from home for her boarders. "We have our problems," she said, "but when something comes up, we talk them out."

Johnson said she will continue to operate the rooming house, despite her age. "I do it for the company and also because I love the girls."

"When you're older, you don't just pick up and move. This is my home, I like it here."

...the saying, "put your money where your mouth is," has special meaning for persons taking part in a new weight reduction program at the School of Medicine.

SYMWHMI is the abbreviated name of the above saying, which is the name of the new program. The program was created by Hubley Myers, a faculty member in the Physiology Department and Bob Colvin, a faculty member in the Behavioral Science Department.

Participants enter the 12 to 24-week program on a voluntary basis, for four weeks at a time. The basic idea of the program is that subjects will either lose weight or lose money.

As an incentive to diet, persons participating in the program are required to write checks to charities of their choice. The first check they write is for $2, and each successive check written increases in amount by $2. For every week the participant doesn't lose the required weight, one check is sent to that person's charity.

Participants are not required to lose more than two pounds per week, but during the first few weeks, they will often lose more than what is required, said Colvin.

According to Colvin, the program's basic diet consists of a substance called "protite," which was invented by Colvin. The main ingredients of protite are yogurt, cottage cheese, powdered milk, water and a variety of flavoring, ranging from strawberry to chocolate.

Participants are required to consume three glasses of protite and one large vegetable salad per day for the first two weeks of the program. According to the plan, each participant must also consume a daily portion of food from the meat and vegetable group.

Along with the diet portion of the program, Colvin believes that the psychological element of dieting must not be ignored. As a result, he has incorporated three "laws of behavior" into the program.

The first law is known as "me bigger." The law means that in order to control an individual's behavior, one must have control of something the individual values. Colvin says he uses money, the checks participants lose if they fail to lose weight, as a means of control.

The second law is "habitation." This means that when a person begins a diet, they are usually enthusiastic about it. Eventually this enthusiasm dies down. Colvin has proposed a solution to this problem by having program participants sign up for only four weeks at a time.

Subjects do not feel "trapped" in a long term program, as a result, and they can easily drop out if they see themselves losing a lot of money.

The third and final law is "least effort." This is best illustrated by public weight reduction programs in which the individual must make a special effort to attend the meetings. When the individual tires of this, he has the prerogative not to attend.

Boat theft baffles Ellery Queen

CHICAGO (AP) — The case of the vanishing vessel has Ellery Queen stumped, plus the police, the Coast Guard and the FBI.

The 37-foot, 13-ton fiberglass boat valued at $125,000 has been missing from Lake Michigan's Burnham Harbor since Sunday. "It's a mystery to me," said Ellery Queen, who owns the vessel, naming it "Mystery Man."

Queen, an efficiency expert and no relation to the fictional super sleuth, said Thursday that he discovered his boat missing at about 6 p.m. Sunday when he, his wife, Nona, and 13-year-old son, Steven, went to the harbor to spend a night aboard the eight-beer craft.

"We just stood there in disbelief," said Queen. "How could a 37-foot, 13-ton boat slip out of the mouth of the harbor with three police boats patrolling the area? Where could it go?"

'Tartuffe' auditions to be held

Auditions for the McLeod Theater winter production of Moliere's classic comedy, "Tartuffe," will be held at McLeod Theater from 3 to 6 p.m. Oct. 22 and from 1 to 4 p.m. Oct. 23, with callbacks at 7 p.m. Oct. 24.

Seven men and four women are needed for the cast of the play. Scripts and copies of speeches are available from Julie Williams in the graduate assistant's office of the Theater Department in the Communication Building.

Softballers close season on road

By Brian Higgins
Staff Writer

When Coach Kay Brechtelsbauer's softball team took to the diamond to begin their abbreviated fall schedule over a month ago, a few objectives were set: to establish a feel for this spring's starting lineup, to acquaint the new players with collegiate competition, and to mold the assortment of players into a team unit. But when the Salukis take to the Stone City Field on the outskirts of Joliet this weekend, Brechtelsbauer will be concentrating on a different objective — winning.

"I think it's important for us to finish strong," Brechtelsbauer said of her 5-6 club. "I very much want us to finish with a winning record. I would like to see us win four of the five (games). I'd like to win all five, but I think four is a legitimate goal."

The Salukis will undoubtedly be the favorite in the Fall Round Robin Tourney when play begins Friday morning. Besides host College of St. Francis, Saginaw Valley and St. Xavier (Chicago) will also be competing.

This weekend's lineup will probably be indicative of the players' who may be seeing a lot of action when SIU-C begins its first NCAA-governed season in March.

Vicki Stafko, who is rebounding from a basketball injury that has kept her sidelined for two years, will start off at first base this weekend. Sue Wagoner will be starting at second, with Tonya Lindsey slated to cover the gap at shortstop, while All-State sophomore Diane Broe will be at third. Ginger Henley and Val

Upchurch will share the chores behind the plate.

Brechtelsbauer's outfield has been weeded down to several key players. Kelly Nelis, seems to have knotted a position in left. Susan Jones, the only freshman starter, will continue in center field. Right field appears to be the only unclaimed position.

"Believe it or not, I'm not as settled on a lineup as I was before our last game," said Brechtelsbauer. "I want to get people I haven't used much yet into the games."

The Salukis begin play at 11 a.m. on Saturday against Saginaw Valley. At 1 p.m. they will face St. Francis, and will wind up the action Saturday against St. Xavier. The Sunday schedule pits the Salukis against Saginaw Valley and St. Francis.

Men golfers travel to 2 x 4

By Dean Kirk
Staff Writer

The Illinois Central 2 x 4 tournament may sound more like an event for lumber salesmen than a golf tournament, but the SIU-C men's golf team packed up its woods and irons nonetheless, and headed to Pekin for the two-round tournament at the Lick Creek Golf Course.

The name is indicative of the type of field the Salukis will face — two-year and four-year colleges — said Larry Moreland, assistant to Illinois Central Coach Jim Finch.

Besides Illinois Central, College of DuPage, John A. Logan, Spoon River and Danville make up the two-year college participants, while the four-year institutions will be Bradley, Western Illinois, Illinois State and SIU-C.

The entire SIU-C squad has gone to Pekin, but Jan Jansco, Rob Hammond, Scott Briggs, Mike Steh and Tom Jones figure to be the competing five on the 6,510 yard, par 72 course. Moreland said Lick Creek has a few hills, is tree-lined and has quite a few water hazards and sand traps.

Moreland said that there could be a four-way fight for first between Illinois Central, Danville, Illinois State and Bradley. Illinois Central finished second last year behind Lake County, which is not competing this year because it lost its entire squad to graduation. The Salukis did not play at last year's tournament.

Illinois State's Scott Stillwell, Illinois Central's Greg Staller and Tom Kearfoot are the favorites to capture individual honors.

Despite the different colleges, scoring will be done by taking the top four individual scores of each team. Moreland said the tournament gives the coaches at the four-year schools a chance to look at prospective players from the junior colleges.

Tee off is at 9 a.m. on Friday and Saturday.

Soccer teams reach finals

International Soccer Tournament Finals will be Sunday afternoon at McAndrew Stadium. The battle for third, between the African team and Malaysian B team, will be at 2 p.m. and the battle for first, between the Hellenic A and Malaysian B teams, will be at 3 p.m.

The tournament began three weeks ago with eight teams composed of international students at SIU-C. It is sponsored by the International Student Council and Student Health Program, who are seeking to improve relations between the University and international students, according to Council member Aris Kotsioris.

Harriers to face tough state foes

By Dean Kirk
Staff Writer

When the SIU-C men's cross country team travels to Eastern Illinois this weekend to compete in the Illinois Intercollegiate Championships, it will have a lot more on the line besides its runners.

For one thing, the Salukis will try to capture their third consecutive win. For another, Saluki Mike Keane will try to repeat his win of last year.

Last year, Keane's winning time was 23:44.8 while the Salukis' score of 38 was enough to edge out second place Illinois by two points. Illinois State finished third.

Fifteen teams will be running on the 10,000 meter, relatively flat, fast course at 10 a.m. Saturday. But the only ones

Saluki Coach Bill Cornell is worried about are Illinois and Illinois State in spite of the fact that the Salukis defeated both of them this season.

"We're not going to take them lightly," Cornell said. "They know what we're made of."

Illinois Coach Gary Wieneke said his team has improved since the double dual meet where the Fighting Illini was "humbled on the hills" at Midlands. Such improvement is normal as the season progresses, he said. The Illini's top five runners are Mike Patton, Jeff Jacobs, Tom Stevens, Greg Domanty and Scott Frazier.

Illinois State's Coach John Coughlan said that the Redbirds should compete better against SIU-C than the first time when the two teams met, when SIU-C handed the Redbirds a 20-35 defeat. When comparing his team against the Salukis and the Fighting Illini, Coughlan said the Redbirds "might have improved the most." He also said, however, that the improvement still doesn't mean Illinois State will defeat SIU-C. "Southern is definitely the pre-meet favorite," he said.

Coughlan also said the Illinois Intercollegiate Meet is not a very competitive one, noting that Illinois, ISU and SIU-C are the only teams with any depth.

The Saluki lineup will remain unchanged, Cornell said. The squad is tired after running 12 miles more than it is accustomed in a driving rainstorm no less — at last weekend's 10,000 meter dual meet with Kansas.

Saluki air attack faces Tulsa infantry

By Dan Devine
Staff Writer

If you put together the Tulsa ground game and the SIU-C passing attack, you'd have an offense that couldn't be stopped. If you assembled a team with the Tulsa passing game and the SIU-C rushing attack, you'd have a team that might not move the ball on a high school team.

SIU-C has made fitful attempts to try and run the ball, but the resulting three yard gains have convinced Coach Rey Dempsey to put his offensive hopes on the right arm of Rick Johnson.

Tulsa hasn't even bothered to give its passing game an extensive test. Skip Ast has thrown only 51 times in five games, and his season total of 229 yards would be just another afternoon for Johnson.

"We can't throw the football," said Tulsa Coach John Cooper.

The Golden Hurricane have survived without the pass, however, rolling up 280 yard per game, and a jumping out to a 4-1 record against sometimes brutal opposition. They remain the favorite in the Missouri Valley Conference race.

The Tulsa ground game is led by Michael Gunter, who has 602 yards and an 8.0 yards per carry average. Ken Laceywell has added 425 yards.

SIU-C will travel to Tulsa Saturday night in a game that could well determine the future course of the conference race. Kick-off is at 7:30 p.m.

"They're in the driver's seat if they win," said John Cooper.

The Salukis are 2-0, tied for the Valley lead with Wichita State and Indiana State, and after Tulsa's their only conference games are at home against Indiana State and West Texas State. Tulsa is 1-0 and will spend the next five weeks playing conference games.

For the Hurricane, that could be a breeze compared to the obstacles they've overcome in the first part of the year. Tulsa began the year with a 35-17 win over Air Force, and then lost to Arkansas 38-0 before starting a three-game winning streak. In the last month Tulsa beat Oklahoma State 25-15, Kansas 20-15, and New Mexico State 31-14.

SIU-C has done appreciably worse in their struggles with Division I-A opposition, and have lost three games in a row.

But Cooper doesn't think that he team can now cruise unmolested to another conference title.

"Everybody that we play from here on out will be laying for the Tulsa Golden Hurricane," he said. "We're expecting the toughest game of the year against Southern."

Saluki coach Dempsey knows that this game could make or break the Saluki season. A loss would probably end their conference title hopes, since they only play five conference games and it would definitely end the dream, still alive, of qualifying for the NCAA Division I-AA playoffs.

After a 3-0 start that raised hopes sky high, the recent skid has convinced a lot of people to jump off the Saluki bandwagon.

"The reason we're not disappointed is that with five games left, you can still turn this into a great year," said Dempsey.

A loss Saturday might turn it into a shambling retreat, but Dempsey thinks his team has regrouped from a 59-8 loss to Florida State last week.

"There's no pressure on us," he said. "We've got our kids motivated so they don't quit."

More importantly, Dempsey has a healthy Rick Johnson. Johnson suffered a bruised thigh last Saturday, but practiced at full speed Tuesday, and was walking without a limp Wednesday.

Johnson will have a new body in his offensive backfield this week. Jeff Ware has replaced the oft injured Derrick Taylor at tailback.

Dempsey isn't happy with Taylor's rate of production (208 yards in 58 carries) and he doesn't want to risk playing second string back Tony Anderson. Anderson fumbled twice last week.

"We feel that Jeff Ware has been more steady," said Dempsey. "He's more consistent than anybody else."

The Salukis need a more consistent effort from Johnson, who has slumped lately, throwing six interceptions in the past two games, and losing some key fumbles against Southwest Louisiana.

"They're (Tulsa) better against the run than the pass," said Dempsey. "You have to work for it, though. It's not open but you can get it."

"The game will boil down to two things," said Cooper. "Number one, can we run on them, and two, can we stop SIU from throwing the ball. Both teams are going to try and force the other team to do something they haven't done."

For Tulsa that means throwing the football. For SIU-C it means establishing a ground game to take the pressure off Johnson.

Lady netters to host fall season finale

By Brian Higgins
Staff Writer

Although Coach Judy Auld's tennis squad will be facing some of its stiffest competition of the season at home this weekend, the netters have a chance to emerge from the quadrangular tournament with their best-ever fall mark.

This year's 10-2 team will be shooting for last year's netters 11-3 record when the Salukis host Murray State, Western and Bradley. The going won't be easy, however, and a tough Murray State squad will be the main reason.

The Racers have been less than kind to SIU-C in recent years, claiming the last three matches against the Salukis and posting a 9-2 series advantage over the Salukis since Auld has been at the helm.

"They're definitely the stronger of the three teams," Auld said. "They're coming in with a good team. We'll have to play well to beat them."

Playing well is something the Salukis have not been doing as of late, dropping a 9-0 decision to nationally-ranked Northwestern two weeks ago and finishing in a tie for fifth in the eight-team SIU-E VITA field a week ago.

Auld will be sending her best onto the courts hoping to come up with the second home tourney title of the season.

Lisa Warrem, Alessandra Molinari and Mary Pat Kramer will be SIU-C's top guns once again. Heidi Eastman, Maureen Harney and Sacey Sherman will round out the singles roster.

The Salukis final matches of the season will begin Friday at 3 p.m. Play will resume Sunday at 9 a.m., with the final round slated for Sunday at 2 p.m.

"Everyone likes to finish up well," said Auld. "If we could finish up the season with three wins, it would feel great."

It would also go down in the record books.
