SIUC plans hate crime vigil

MONDAY: Death of Wyoming student brings groups together.

SARA BEAN
POLITICS EDITOR

Matthew Shepard was beaten so badly last week that two passers-by initially mistook him for a scarecrow hanging on a split-rail fence.

Shepard, 21, died Monday after lying in a coma in the hospital. His skull was so badly crushed from the butt of a gun that doctors could not operate.

Because of this hate crime, several SIUC student organizations and University departments plan to honor Shepard's memory and address a more serious underlying issue of similar violence in the U.S.

The vigil will take place at 7 p.m. Monday on the steps of Shryock Auditorium.

Gays, Lesbians, Bisexuals and Friends member Tim Rice, one of the vigil organizers, said Shepard's death is more than just a gay and lesbian issue. He said it is an issue of hatred against people with different beliefs.

"This is about hate crimes in general," Rice said. "We have to look at what is going on in this country."

Rice said the Shepard murder is just an indicator of a much larger problem within America.

"What does this say about us?" Rice said. "We have to look at where we are in respect and tolerance."

Several people have been asked to speak at the vigil, and three already have been confirmed. Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs Harvey Welch, the Reverend Kim McGuire of the Church of the Good Shepherd and University Housing Program Coordinator Paulette Curkin are scheduled to speak at the vigil.

The vigil is sponsored by the Diversity Week Planning Commission, Undergraduate Student Government, Student Development, the Black Together Organization, Women's Services, GLBF, WIDB Radio, Chartwells, University Christian Ministries, and the Interfaith Center. Other groups are yet to be confirmed, Rice said.

Rice hopes the vigil will foster a greater awareness about the problem of hate crimes.

"This vigil is to remember anyone who is a minority and the crimes against them," Rice said.

AFSCME strike foiled by technicality

SARA BEAN
POLITICS EDITOR

The University announced Wednesday that SIUC food service and travel service workers withdrew their intent to strike following an unfair labor practice charge filed by the University with the Illinois Educational Labor Relations Board.

But the announcement contradicts the position held by the workers union, according to the group's head negotiator.

Jack Dyer, executive assistant for Media Services, said the intent to strike by the food service employees represented by the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees was in violation of the Illinois Labor Relations Act.

AFSCME members gathered in front of Anthony Hall Monday to announce their intentions for a temporary strike that was scheduled to begin Saturday. The strike was in response to alleged illegal actions the University engaged in during contract negotiations.

The Labor Relations Act requires that educational employees file a notice of intent to strike at least 10 days in advance.

"The reason is that they could just go on strike overnight without the 10-day notice," Dyer said.

Head negotiator Steve Joiner said the intent to strike was not withdrawn because of a unfair labor practice charge but because of a recommendation by the federal mediator.

Joiner said that following a discussion with federal mediator Richard Kirkpatrick Tuesday, he received a letter requesting that the strike be postponed indefinitely.

Kirkpatrick said in the letter that he requested "that any strike activity involving your negotiations with SIUC-Carbondale be postponed until the mediation process has had an opportunity to take place and has been completely exhausted."

Joiner said the University is incorrectly stating the reasons for the withdrawal of the intent to strike.

"That is their position," Joiner said. "We are in a collective bargaining situation, and everyone is trying to get the upper hand."

GPSC proposes faculty parking for TAs

PARKING DIVISION: Proposal suggests blue stickers for University graduate assistants.

JACOB LIVENGOOD
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Graduate and teaching assistants could receive blue parking tags, but those with red stickers might see a reduction in parking spaces following a Graduate and Professional Council resolution.

GPSC voted to present the resolution to the Parking and Traffic Board at Tuesday night's meeting.

The proposal was not passed by GPSC, but the council gave Parking and Traffic Committee Chairwoman Amy Sileven the authority to speak at an Oct. 23 meeting with the board to discuss the parking tag issue.

GPSC President Michael Speck said the proposition is an effort to give teaching and graduate assistants the credit they deserve.

"It is a question of equity," Speck said. "Teaching and graduate assistants are important and should be treated that way. They have to be able to go to classes and be students."

Speck said it is difficult for teaching assistants (TAs) and graduate assistants to hike across campus with their teaching and class material.

"You have got your books, demonstrations and turned-in papers to carry," he said. "It's been my experience at every other institution that TAs can park in the same places as faculty."

During Sileven's report to GPSC, she said 10 percent of the red spaces should be converted to blue spots. But after discussion, she said the proposed number of red spots to be changed is up to the Parking and Traffic Board.

Opposition to the proposition was voiced from law school representatives who said competition for spaces in their building's parking lots already is an issue.

SPACEMAKING: Part of Rinella Field to be converted to parking spots for freshman, sophomores.

JAMES FULLER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Expansion of Lot 45, located next to Sam Rinella Field, is expected to begin Monday. The green storage lot will provide an additional 460 parking spaces for freshmen and sophomores living on-campus.

About one-third of the field will be converted at an estimated cost of $750,000. Intramural Recreational Sports Director William McMinn estimated the project to take two months to complete.

Lot 45 is closed as of today for the construction. Sam Rinella Field often is used by students for events such as concerts, the annual Sportsfest and last year's Spring Thing. Sports clubs also use the field for soccer, lacrosse, rugby and throwing Frisbees.

McMinn said the parking lot expansion has caused some of the sports clubs to relocate to other fields and play areas.

"It's not ideal, but what's nice is that the end result is that they're going to have two really nice playing fields out there," McMinn said.

Professor emeritus 90 years young

TIME HONORED:
Lewis Hahn continues to serve SIUC with insight, enthusiasm.

KATIE KLEMAIER
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Lewis E. Hahn's life in academia had grand beginnings. His ambition was to write the great American novel.

At 90 years old, the professor emeritus now serves as the director of the Library of Living Philosophers, a task his vast university experience has well prepared him for.

Hahn first arrived at SIUC in 1963 after serving as chairman of the Philosophy Department and dean of Arts and Sciences at Washington University in St. Louis.

He wrote his thesis on Emerson as a lecturer and went on to study Ralph Waldo Emerson and Walt Whitman in-depth.

His interest in philosophy began when a teacher told him he should do more work in the subject.

Hahn said his understanding of philosophy has given him a different perspective on the world.

Two philosophers Hahn is particularly interested in are John Dewey and Plato. He said Plato's dialogues are of high standard.

"My own view wouldn't be as good if I didn't have [philosophers' views] lurking in the wings," Hahn said.

Hahn received his bachelor's

Senseless acts should not be tolerated

The brutal death of a gay University of Wyoming student should not be needed to bring the topic of hate crimes to the nation's attention, but unfortunately, it was this week.

Matthew Shepard, a 21-year-old gay student at the University of Wyoming, was found beaten nearly to death last week after he was reportedly lured from a bar by two men who told him they were gay.

After allegedly robbing him, pistol-whipping him and tying him to a fence post, the two suspects left him for dead in near-freezing temperatures. He remained in a coma for five days. Doctors said his skull was beaten so badly that they could not perform surgery, and Shepard died on Monday.

This case has sparked outbursts of anti-gay hatred and calls for tougher hate crime legislation throughout the nation.

Matthew Shepard was not a threatening person, and he did not flaunt his sexual orientation on the Wyoming campus. Friends described him as a highly intelligent, friendly person who was reluctant to discuss his sexuality with people he did not trust or feel safe with.

One friend nicknamed him "Flash" because he was "classy, stylish and cultured." He spent time studying in Switzerland, on the East Coast and in Denver. He also traveled the world with his parents and spoke English, German, Italian and was well-versed in Arabic.

In many ways, Matthew Shepard was a superior person — an open-minded, well-educated individual who dreamed of one day working in an U.S. embassy.

But he was robbed of the central American belief that all people are entitled to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. Now, we can only hope that his death will serve as a wake-up call and lead to stronger hate crime laws.

It might be an untimely coincidence, but this heinous act of discriminatory violence occurred during Gay and Lesbian History Month. This is a time that is supposed to be dedicated to evolving as a society and understanding people for who they are and what they believe in.

On Saturday, Vivien Spitz, a court reporter for the Nuremberg war crime trials, spoke at SIUC about learning from the Holocaust and progressing as a society. But the world has not evolved, and even the United States — which portrays itself as a human land of opportunity for all — has failed.

Have we really succeeded in ending discrimination? Even after the Emancipation Proclamation, the Civil Rights movement and the Summer of Love, discrimination and hate of race, gender and sexual orientation still exist.

The evil spirit remains the same but its targets change. Jews and African-Americans have been long-standing targets, and Serbs, Croats and Muslims continue to slaughter each other in the Balkans.

Who will be tomorrow's victims? A quick review of recent headlines reveals a growing trend of attacks against homosexuals.

Spitz's comments are worth listening to.

"In a crime there's always a perpetrator and a victim," she said. "Look the other way, don't get involved, stay neutral, remain silent, and you will always help the perpetrator and never the victim."

"We must learn from the lessons of the past to help us overcome our hatred and prejudices of today to structure our future with faith, hope and dedication to humanity with international understanding, peace and justice."

That goal starts with every one of us.

Following Shepard's death, President Clinton pressed Congress to expand the federal hate-crime law to cover offenses based on disability or sexual orientation.

The Egyptian believes this is a strong and necessary first step. There needs to be a clear definition of what a hate crime is — something that the investigator for the Shepard case said he wishes there was.

But there is more we, as a society, can do on a grassroots level. We can learn to understand each other, educate each other and tolerate our differences. The world will never be free of conflict, hate or evil, but we should not tolerate senseless violence aimed at people of a different race, gender or sexual orientation.

Hatred is at the core of society

If you haven't been hiding in a hole, you know what happened in Wyoming. Just in case, though, a gay University of Wyoming student was found pistol-whipped, tied to a fence and left for dead in near-freezing temperatures last week. He died on Monday.

Matthew Shepard was targeted because he was gay, and the suspects wanted to rob him because he had embarrassed one of them, according to a girlfriend of one of the suspects.

Parallels from the '50s, '80s and '90s come to mind. Do the names Emmett Till, Vincent Chin and James Byrd Jr. sound familiar?

All were victims of race-motivated murders occurring in Money, Miss., Detroit and Jasper, Texas. I'll save you the history lesson on each murder because you should research them on your own.

And before you bring up religion or the Bible and homosexuality, I will attempt to make you think.

What brought this hatred? What exactly did this person do to anybody else to deserve this?

Did he really cause anyone harm? Or does the fact that he was homosexual really destroy one's ideology, image or frame of mind? Were the suspects so insecure about themselves that they had to take it out on the victim?

While you ponder that, let's get to the core. Forget attempts of being real, and let's be true this time.

Hatred is all around us, and this shows up in everything.

For every cynical and sarcastic comment we make, much of it masks our hatred — even if it is just a tinge of hate.

Take racial, ethnic and minority group slurs and jokes, for example. I'm sure you all remember those Blanche Knott's "Truly Tasteless Jokes" books No. 1 through 57 that we used to read when we were about 11 years old.

Are the jokes funny? Yeah, of course. But there's something underneath that, isn't it? Have you ever read a joke about your own ethnic group? Yeah, its funny, but deep down it stung a bit, didn't it? Or at least it made you think, even if it was only for a second.

To paraphrase Vernon Reid, a guitarist formerly of the rock group Living Colour, racial and minority group jokes are funny and they do relieve stress and tension. But at the core, there are some serious problems going on.

And what about how we use our language — how we say things are "gay," "queer," or "faggish" casually as a put down? Or what about "Afro-engineered," "fresh-off-the-boat," or those "Wang Chung" comments that I often heard when I was a kid?

I'm not advocating that everybody become "PC" here. I'm not perfect — far from it, actually. I have heard all kinds of racial epithets about all races in about five languages. And I have heard or came up with more racial comments and remarks than you can believe. You wouldn't want to battle me in a game of racial comments and similes.

And some of the music that I listen to — hip-hop — still refers to certain group of people — homosexuals — negatively.

So, where do we draw the line? If everybody knows that we are not serious by what we say, then its okay, right? Or is it?

Maybe what we say actually is putting more ignorant ideas into ignorant peoples' heads. To say it more directly, are we subconsciously teaching people to be racist or homophobic?

I still do not have the answers, but maybe this column will produce some discussion on racial, ethnic and lifestyle differences.

These are issues that people often take lightly, such as when we found out through history — and very recently — they shouldn't be taken lightly at all.

Author clarifies Sanders' raise

Dear Editor,
As one of the less generously remunerated members of the SIUC faculty, I have been following your coverage of the administrative pay raise debate with a certain interest. While my sympathies naturally enough lie with my faculty colleagues, your coverage has had what I assume is the unintended effect of leading me to sympathize with poor Mr. Sanders, whose salary increase you have six or eight times now spelled out in print, verbatim and numeration, no doubt as a result of the delightful ease of word-processor cut and paste.

To restore my prole sympathies, I attempted today to figure how many times more dough the good Mr. Sanders earns than I, only to discover that your repeated reports of his increase, for all their detail, do not make this clear. You first cite "a total of" X for 1999, then add that Sanders "also will receive" Y as a cost of living increase, and an "equity adjustment" Z (equity — I rather like that); you then note that he will receive the healthy sum of P (more than half my salary, no matter), lest he have to contribute to his retirement himself, D for housing (about six times my annual rent, but no matter still), and the use of a University vehicle of uncertain value

Q. Taking Ben and Jerry's gospel that the CEO should make no more than seven times the salary of the lowest peon, I find, should I stick simply to your total X, that Mr. Sanders gets in just under the bar at 6.7 times my salary; adding all the figures together, he qualifies as a genuine fat cat at 8.7 times my pay — not to mention the lower salaries paid to most of our support staff. The truth is somewhere in between, as a bit of mathematical deduction would show, but I spare you that as you could have spared your readers. If you are going to print the figure so repeatedly, why not do so clearly, or — better still — skip them and let Mr. Sanders enjoy his lucre in private, even should this mean the reporter will have to come up with a couple of new sentences with which to end next week's salary story. and master's in English and literature from the University of Texas Austin in 1929. In 1939, he received a doctoral degree in philosophy from the University of California at Berkeley.

Hahn taught at SIUC during the Deiye Morris tenure from 1948 to 1970. Morris was the school's eighth president, and Hahn recalls the legendary leader's determination in making SIUC a thriving campus.

"Morris said, 'There is nothing too good for Southern Illinois youngsters. We want the best schools for them,'" Hahn said.

At SIUC, Hahn concentrated heavily on researching Dewey, serving as chairman of the Editorial Advisory Board for the Dewey Publication Project. The project has succeeded in completing the huge task of publishing Dewey's collected works in 38 volumes.

In the forward of Hahn's book, "Enhancing Cultural Interflow Between East and West," Hahn is described as still going strong and ready to march into the 21st century.

workers at the University.

Joiner said... University attempted to persuade AFSCME to waive its rights to bargain issues that are not covered by the contract but come up before the contract expires.

Both sides are scheduled to sit down with a federal mediator at the bargaining table Friday morning.

Joiner said the mediator has met with both sides already.

"There are efforts to try and resolve this situation," Joiner said. "We are going to the table on Friday, and the University has said it is prepared to negotiate.

"We are taking them at their word."

AFSCME filed an unfair labor practice charge against the University September 28 based on the allegations, which are a violation of the Illinois Education Labor Relations Act.

The Illinois Labor Relations Act states it is illegal for an employer to coerce a union to waive guaranteed rights by statute in reaching a negotiation agreement.

The University denies the charges, saying that University officials only had asked the members to waive rights over issues that had already been bargained.

The Illinois Labor Relations Board has assigned the case to an investigator.

Ben Syfert, a senior in agriculture business economics from Sigel, herds the dairy cows into the milking room at the SIUC Dairy Farms Tuesday afternoon.

Ben Syfert is out of bed before the sun rises at 5 a.m. He gets dressed and walks down the hall from his room to be greeted by 49 dairy cows.

The black-and-white spotted cows are waiting for the milk they have accumulated over the night to be emptied by Syfert or another student worker at the SIUC Dairy Farms.

Six students work at milking the cows, but Syfert is the only one who lives on the farm to watch over the cows 24 hours a day. Syfert, a senior in agriculture business economics from Sigel, has been working on dairy farms all his life and said he could not help but live and work on the SIUC Dairy Farm.

"I'm used to being around cows," he said. "If you are a real dairy farmer, you can't help but want to be close to cows."

Syfert's duties include making sure the cows always have enough water throughout the day and that the cows are kept in

Confidential award becomes public

CHALLENGED:

Southern Illinoisan publishes amount of discriminatory lawsuit.

DAVID FERRARA
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

A Carbondale police officer's monetary award from a discrimination lawsuit has been made public after a successful suit by a local newspaper to disclose the information.

Carbondale Police Sgt. Gerald Edwards will receive $150,000 in a discrimination lawsuit made Sept. 10; but the amount of the settlement was supposed to be confidential. The Southern Illinoisan filed a suit and published the amount in Saturday's edition.

Edwards' attorney, Courtney Cox, and city officials initially concluded that the information should be private.

The Southern Illinoisan challenged city officials by filing suit under the Freedom of Information Act. The paper believed the monetary information should be public.

record because the city should not be involved in confidential agreements.

The suit changed city officials' original decision.

Edwards first claimed in 1993 that the Carbondale Police Department had promoted non-minority officers faster than minority officers.

After five years, his suit was settled within a day and a half after the trial began Sept. 9.

Edwards received an immediate promotion and a monetary award including back pay, attorney fees and other compensatory damages.

Cox said the release of the information to the public was irrelevant to Edwards.

In many employment lawsuits, the defendant prefers that financial information be confidential.

But in a case such as this involving public funds, Cox said the people have more of a right to know total dollar amounts.

Tom Woolf, metro editor of the Southern Illinoisan, said the paper firmly believes the information in this case is relevant to citizens.

He believes the city should not enter into private contracts.

"The local government can't do business behind closed doors," Woolf said.

a pasture and not out running lose.

Because the cows demand attention early in the morning, working early morning hours puts a strain on the students' day.

Heather Smogorzewski, a sophomore in pre-veterinary medicine from Peoria, started working on the Dairy Farm at the beginning of the semester. At first, the early mornings took her by surprise. But now Smogorzewski has adopted a little.

"I usually don't go to sleep," she said. "Milking took me awhile to get used to, so at first I was late to class sometimes."

The Dairy Farm provides a unique learning environment for students who are interested in the dairy business.

Four years ago, Chet Stuenkel, a senior in animal science from Altamont, started working on the farms.

"Like Syfert, Stuenkel grew up in the dairy industry. He said that in all the time he has worked on farms, the cows at the Dairy Farm are treated the best.

"The cows are treated better than most humans," he said. "Everything is clean — they are fed the best feed we have, and they are never hurt. The cows have a cherry life."

There are more than 100 head of cattle at the Dairy Farms including calves and dry cows, which are those that no longer produce milk.

Cows are milked by SIUC students once in the morning and then again in the evening. Each cow produces about 20,000 pounds of milk a year.

Not only are the farms used to educate the students that work there, but some animal science classes and local children tour the farms.

Since Syfert has been working with dairy cows most of his life, there were few skills he was unfamiliar with. But he has been able to learn more about the dairy business overall.

"You pick up so much information on the dairy business here," he said. "I've learned more personal skills and how to work on a tight schedule."

support for the lot expansion despite initial concerns over the amount of space the parking lot would encompass.

USG support came after University officials guaranteed that no more than one-third of the field would be converted.

Last summer, USG President Kristie Ayres said "SIUC is the only four-year public institution in Illinois that doesn't allow freshmen and sophomores to park on campus."

Current University policy does not allow freshmen and sophomores to park on campus overnight without a medical or work-related excuse.

In the past, shortages of green-sticker parking spaces, have forced some students with jobs to go without a sticker and park off-campus.

The lot expansion will more than double the current number of green sticker parking spaces to approximately 790 spaces from the current 330.

Association, said the proposal is a horrible idea.

"We have a strict attendance policy in the law school," Nuckols said. "If you're 30 seconds late, you're counted absent. The proposal offers no explanation as for which parking lots will be changed. Parking services could decide. It could just be one lot. We already have a serious parking problem here."

Nuckols said the proposition would not comply with the University's goal of student retention.

He said undergraduates, as well as law school students, would be greatly affected if red spaces were taken away. This, he said, also could affect University retention.

"If they (undergraduates) can't even find a parking space, they aren't going to want to stay here," Nuckols said.

Sileven encouraged GPSC members to attend the Oct 23 meeting and said their presence will be the only way to communicate their views on the issue.

In other business, Law School Representative Terry Dodds said that the landlord/tenant survey was complete. The goal of the survey is to provide information to the Carbondale City Council concerning issues that affect landlord/tenant relations in order to assist student renters.

Dodds hopes GPSC Representatives pass out a minimum of 200 surveys to on- and off-campus citizens of Carbondale.

"I want as many as possible completed," Dodds said. "We might be able to distribute them next weekend."

The survey is pending approval from Human Subjects, and Sileven said that process usually takes a couple of weeks.

Dodds, who works in Student Legal Assistance, said he encourages any student to get involved. But he will be disappointed if support is not given to the project.

"I will be angry if someone comes into Student Legal Assistance next year complaining when they have an opportunity now to get involved," Dodds said. "I challenge the students to get involved."

GPSC also voted interim Vice President for Administrative Affairs Jane Scott to take the position permanently.

In Reed's first season at the helm, Leahy has been a huge part of the success.

The Salukis have a streak of four-straight finishes in the top three.

Leahy is definitely a testament to the rejuvenation the team has experienced under Reed, as well as the return of senior captain French.

"(French) is such a motivator," Leahy said. "She's just a great person to have on your team. And I wish everyone could have a coach like Coach Reed."

Despite this year's high moments, Leahy has experienced a down moment or two — particularly her most recent race last Saturday in St. Louis.

Leahy suffered an asthma attack during the last leg as I did not score for her team. Still, she knew not to let the setback keep her down, and her coach made sure of that.

"The next day I told her that nothing can take away from what

"In the past, I had problems getting out the door and doing what I had to do."

she's accomplished this year," Reed said.

"For athletes, there is always going to be a day when something doesn't happen. She knows to let it go.

"Erin is looking stronger and fitter than ever now. I'm looking for her to be one of our top runners at conference."

For Leahy, the encouraging words couldn't have come at a better time.

"(Coach Reed) knows how to pick the right times to talk to you individually," she said. "She's really encouraged me, even after a bad race."

Now Leahy wants to focus on the final portion of her tremendous season.

"We're getting ourselves ready for conference and districts," Leahy said.

"I think we could definitely finish in the top two in conference."

To do that, Leahy knows her team needs a quality performance from its most improved runner.

"I'd have to finish in the top 10 or at least the top 15," she said. "I just want to do my part to get our team to the top of the conference."

Weiberg prepares to start Big 12 position

JAY SAUNDERS
DAILY NEBRASKAN

LINCOLN, Neb. (U-WIRE)

— There is a new boss in town for the Big 12 Conference. Kevin L. Weiberg, 42, was named the new commissioner of the Big 12 last week. Weiberg comes to the conference after serving nine years with the Big 10 conference.

"It is good to be here," Weiberg said. "My thoughts are focused on the tasks ahead."

The new commissioner officially begins his job on Jan. 1, 1999.

Until then, Weiberg will be working with interim commissioner Dave Martin. Martin took the job as interim commissioner in April 1998 after Steve Hatchell left the post because of staff problems.

Martin took the job in addition to his tasks as the Associate Director of Athletics at Oklahoma State University, where he is anxious to get back to, Weiberg said.

"This conference has great universities and athletic programs," Weiberg said.

Weiberg served as Associate Commissioner of the Big 10 in August of 1985.

Nevada football team suspends three players

University of Nevada freshman quarterback David Neil has been suspended following his arrest on felony charges of fraudulent use of a telephone credit card.

Neil recently set a freshman passing record, throwing for 611 yards against New Mexico State University on Saturday. Wide receivers Mark Marcos and Chris Haegenson also were arrested and will remain suspended until the case is resolved.

Marcos is charged with grand larceny, sale or purchase of someone else's credit card and possession of stolen property. Haegenson was charged with grand larceny and fraudulent use of a credit card.

Neil is charged with obtaining telephone service without payment and fraudulent use of a credit card.

NFL

Chandler, Pickens among Players of the Week

Atlanta quarterback Chris Chandler and placekicker Morten Andersen and Arizona linebacker Ronald McKinnon are the NFC Players of the Week. Cincinnati wide receiver Carl Pickens, Tennessee safety Blaine Bishop and Oakland punter Leo Arguz were honored in the AFC.

Chandler had a tremendous week in leading the Falcons to victory against the Giants. Chandler was 14-of-27 passing for 266 yards with two TD passes and one rushing touchdown in the 34-20 victory. Andersen accounted for 10 points, including two field goals, in the Atlanta victory.

McKinnon had three interceptions, five tackles and forced a fumble in the Cardinals' 20-7 win over the Bears last week. The interceptions are the most ever by a Cardinals' linebacker, and the most in the NFL since Jack Del Rio of the Minnesota Vikings turned the trick Dec. 5, 1993.

Pickens caught a team-record 13 passes for 204 yards and a touchdown in the Bengals' 25-20 victory over Pittsburgh. He caught the game-winning touchdown with 20 seconds left in the game.

Bishop had 10 tackles, one sack and an interception in Tennessee's 12-8 win against Baltimore.

His interception came with the Ravens on the Oilers' two-yard line with three seconds remaining.

Arguz recorded an NFL-record 16 punts for 709 yards for a 44.3-yard average in the Raiders' 7-6 win over San Diego.

Bettis questionable for game against Baltimore

Pittsburgh Steelers running back Jerome Bettis has swelling and a slight tear in his left knee ligament and is listed as questionable for this Sunday's game against the Baltimore Ravens.

"The Bus" was injured late in the second half of a 25-20 loss to Cincinnati Bengals Sunday. An MRI test Monday revealed the slight tear in Bettis' left medial collateral ligament, an injury that could be construed as a sprain.

The former University of Notre Dame star had the same injury last year, forcing him to sit out one game. However, he returned to rush for 172 yards in two playoff games.

Bettis ran for 55 yards on 11 carries, including a 13-yard touchdown, in Sunday's loss. He has rushed for 413 yards on 96 carries this season, helping Pittsburgh to a 3-2 record.

Salukis ace Purple Aces

HOME WIN: Volleyball team victorious over tough Evansville team in four games.

MIKE BJORKLUND
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

SIUC volleyball head coach Sonya Locke had four simple words to say at the end of Tuesday night's game against the University of Evansville.

"I'm glad it's over," Locke said. Locke's sigh of relief came after a tough win over the Purple Aces at Davies Gymnasium. The Salukis (9-8, 6-4) started the second half of their 1998 campaign with a 15-5, 11-15, 15-7, 15-11 victory over the Purple Aces (14-6, 6-4). Both teams are now tied for fourth place in the Missouri Valley Conference.

"We had to [win tonight]," Locke said. "We didn't have a choice. After losing to Northern Iowa (Oct. 3) at home, we were down one (win) at home. So we had to pick that game up."

The win evens the season series with the Aces, who beat the Salukis Sept. 15. But Evansville entered Davies Gym Tuesday night as losers of two of their last three games.

"We caught them on a bad night tonight," Locke said. "We were just a little fresher than they were tonight. This league is so crazy this year. I am so blessed to be where we are right now."

Pacing the Salukis were senior outside hitter Marlo Moreland, who led the attack with a match-high 18 kills and 12 digs. Senior outside hitter Lindsay Resmer registered 16 kills and 11 digs also.

The Salukis stormed out to an impressive victory in the first game, but Evansville got all the breaks in game two.

"They were swinging and missing in the first game, and they lost," Locke said. "In the second game, they junked us to death and won."

The Salukis recovered to capture game three. The game was tied at four before SIUC rattled off nine straight points.

After allowing the Aces to score seven straight points in game four, the Salukis went on a rampage to seal the victory. At one point, they were down 9-2. But Locke believed the Salukis should have never been put in that situation.

To SORRETT/Daily Egyptian

Lindsay Resmer (13) eyes the ball after digging a spike against the Purple Aces as Marissa Kimbrough (4) watches Tuesday evening. The Salukis beat the Purple Aces in four games 15-5, 11-15, 15-7 and 15-11.

"I have very, very, very high expectations for this team," Locke said. "All I'm saying is that we should have never been in that spot to have to come back from 9-2."

"We should have never been there in the first place."

Next up for the Salukis is the Southern Invitational this weekend at Davies Gymnasium. The Salukis will be up against the likes of University of West Virginia, Southeast Missouri State University and Syracuse University.

"I told my team that this was a good time for us to play these matches," Locke said. "These teams are very good, and its going to force us to play at a consistent level. That's

Women's cross country runner proves hard work does produce results

ROB ALLIN
DAILY EGYPTIAN REPORTER

Hard work brings results, and nobody on the SIUC women's cross country team is a better example of that than Erin Leahy.

Leahy, a junior from Michigan City, Ind., has gone from being the No. 5 runner on an average team to the No. 3 runner on a squad with a legitimate shot at this year's Missouri Valley Conference Championship. More impressively, she has trimmed a gaudy minute and a half off her best time last year.

In the Oct. 3 Saluki Invitational, Leahy posted a career-best time of 18 minutes and 10 seconds, which was good for eighth on this season's MVC leaderboard. The effort also let the conference know that Leahy will be a force to be reckoned with come time for the MVC Championships Oct. 31 in Peoria.

Her recipe for success? Hard work and a supportive coach.

"I just did a 360 on my training this summer," Leahy said. "It took me a year and a half to get adjusted (to a college cross country program.)"

"In the past, I had problems getting out the door and doing what I had to do. This year, I had a better attitude about putting in more miles. Coach (Leann) Reed helped me a lot.

While her coach did keep tabs on her, Leahy didn't have much choice but to motivate herself. She spent the summer in Seattle, quite a ways from the rest of her teammates.

Leahy, an advertising major, was serving an internship for the Fox Sports Northwest cable network.

"I talked to (teammate) Kelly French a couple times, but that's about it," she said. "I was really on my own."

Apparently, Leahy didn't need much help from her friends. She came back in the fall and quickly established herself as one of the team's top runners.

Last season, she was content with being one of the team's top seven runners. Now she's eager to prove herself to the rest of the conference.

"Erin made a major break-through this year," Reed said. "I think she's a lot more aggressive and confident in her running
