Security led on wild chase

Theft suspect is captured after long run

By Richard Gordstein
Staff Writer

SIU Security was led on a chase on foot and by auto from Evergreen Terrace Apartments to the mobile home parks on Warren Road Thursday in pursuit of a man charged with theft of a motor vehicle.

At about 10 a.m. an officer reported a man on a Kawasaki Ninja without licence plates and reportedly stolen from the Chicago area speeding on Reservoir Road.

"He's in the trailer park," one out-of-breath police officer said, apparently pursuing the suspect on foot.

Steven A. Matthews, a University student, attempted to elude the officer, police said, by driving into Evergreen Terrace apartments parking lot then fleeing east on Pleasant Hill Road.

Matthews, 20, turned south on Warren Road where police lost his trail.

Police stationed themselves at either end of Warren Road to prevent Matthews' escape, but he didn't appear.

Ten minutes later they discovered the motorcycle—but no man.

The Kawasaki was ditched behind a storage shed on the property of Chuck's Rentals and Sales, which is between Pleasant Valley Mobile Homes and University Heights Mobile Homes on Warren Road.

Police began searching the various trailer parks in the area.

"He's in the trailer park" one out of breath police officer said, apparently pursuing the suspect on foot.

Police cornered Matthews in Meadowbrook Estates Mobile Home Park until he bolted from behind a mobile home, up a hill and into a field east of the park where he was apprehended.

University halts mail to Britain

Campus Mail Service no longer will accept mail headed for Britain - at least for a while.

A mail embargo in Britain has caused a back-up of mail going into the country. To alleviate the problem, the U.S. Postal Service has stopped sending correspondence to Britain.

"Great Britain has asked that we hold the mail until they get caught up. Word is out that it has been lifted, but not officially."

—Marnie Powers

"Great Britain has asked that we hold the mail until they get caught up," Marnie Powers, manager for Campus Mail Service, said. "Word is out that it has been lifted, but not officially."

The embargo, which began Sept. 12, is a result of a general strike in Britain.

Jim Stewart, a window clerk at the finance station at the post office on Carbondale's west side, said mail to Britain will not be accepted until official notice is received from Washington, D.C.

"If there's been anything mailed within a day or two we'll probably send it back return mail," Stewart said. "After that, it's probably already over there, and they'll probably just hold it until the embargo is over."

Return mail will be marked "Postal Service Temporarily Suspended." Postage will be refunded on mail returned.

LiteracyFest aims to help illiterate people cope

By Phyllis Coon
Staff Writer

LiteracyFest Saturday at the University Mall will help the Literacy Council of Southern Illinois reach many illiterate people, a literacy project director said.

The purpose of the festival is to highlight the importance of literacy and reading services that are available throughout the 23 Southern Illinois counties. Betty Neely, literacy project director, said. "The 1980 census reported that there are more than two million illiterate people in Illinois," Neely said. "It's scary. It really is when you think about the number of people who can't cope in society. People that can't read medicine labels. They don't know what hazardous, external and all the emergency words mean."

This is the second year of the LiteracyFest, Neely said. Last year LCSl was able to contact more than 4,000 people at the festival, she said. "We came up with the idea of the festival after listening to a telecast from WSIU," Neely said. "We wanted to do a major publicity blitz."

The festival, staffed by 250 volunteers, will have 24 booths and 40 tables, she said. There also is going to be a stage show including impersonators and reading magicians.

A mayoral proclamation will be presented by Mayor protemp John Yow. The proclamation names September "Literacy month in Southern Illinois", Neely said.

"More than 60,000 people in Southern Illinois did not finish eighth grade," Neely said.

"There is a high illiteracy rate in that group of people. Granted there are many people from that group who can read at or above a sixth grade level. But one out of five people are having problems coping in society."

Gus says that if you can read this than you don't need to go.

Prosecution rests its case against Nitz

By Scott Perry and Kimberly Clarke
Staff Writers

The prosecution rested its case against Richard Nitz Thursday, stating that there was overwhelming evidence against the defendant.

Nitz is accused of the April 6 murder of Michael Miley, whose decapitated body was found in the trunk of his car near Rocky Comfort Road in Union County.

Williamson County States Attorney Charles Garnati attempted to present Nitz as a "homosexual hater" while also presenting evidence to link him to the murder.

Among the evidence presented was a gold-colored Timex watch with traces of blood, matching Miley's blood type, found in a car belonging to Nitz.

Andrew A. Wist, an expert in forensic sciences, testified Miley had type O blood, while Nitz and his wife Rita, who is also being held in connection with the case, have type A blood.

Cassette tapes and a car stereo, believed to have belonged to Miley, were also found during a search of the Nitz property.

Nitz was identified by workers at the Kentucky Oaks Mall in Paducah, as the man using credit cards belonging to Miley.

Betty Boyer, a babysitter of the Nitzes, testified that she witnessed Nitz beating a young man over the head with a baseball bat, and putting the body of the victim in the trunk of his own car.

There was also testimony by two witnesses claiming Nitz had bragged that he had killed a homosexual.

Public Defender Larry Broeking will begin Nitz's defense at 9:30 a.m. today at the Williamson County Courthouse in Marion.

Opposition and authorities talk of interim government

RANGOON, Burma (UPI)— More than 100,000 protesters marched in the streets Thursday as opposition leaders and government representatives discussed how to end 26 years of authoritarian rule and form an interim government, diplomats and political sources said. Official Rangoon radio said navy troops and police Wednesday night fired on more than 150 people trying to loot a government warehouse and school offices.

S. Korea militant students protest Olympics

SEOUL, South Korea (UPI)— Militant students seeking to capitalize on international attention focused on the Seoul Olympics burned an effigy of Uncle Sam and threw rocks and firebombs at police Thursday, but the protests ended without major incident. Campuses across the nation were generally calm, with student protests tempered by public scorn as the Olympic flame neared the capital for Saturday's opening ceremonies.

Chinese leaders work on economic reforms

BEIJING (UPI)— Government leaders and senior economists began a crucial working conference Thursday on China's market-oriented economic reforms, which are floundering on the rocks of high inflation, black marketeering and corruption, a Chinese source and Western diplomats said. The meeting follows an annual strategy summit that broke up in July amid sharp differences between Chinese leaders over how to proceed with the ambitious reforms launched nine years ago by senior leader Deng Xiaoping.

Walesa meets with Poland's Interior minister

WARSAW, Poland (UPI)— Solidarity leader Lech Walesa and Interior Minister Czeslaw Kiszczak agreed Thursday to call for talks between the government and opposition figures "as soon as possible." In a related development, the official press published an interview with Walesa for the first time since December 1981 and outlined the Solidarity founder's vision of a resurrected union that does not have to "be the same as it was in 1981."

Aide claimed Reagan should have left office

WASHINGTON (UPI)— A White House aide, astounded by tales of a depressed and lazy Ronald Reagan, suggested in a 1987 memo that the president might have to be removed from office, but chief of staff Howard Baker determined Reagan was handling his duties, the aide said Thursday. Revelation of the memo—written by James Cannon, who came to the White House staff with Baker in late February 1987—and the events surrounding it came in a just-published book, "Landslide: The Unmaking of the President, 1984-88.

Judicial Conference wants 73 more judges

WASHINGTON (UPI)— The Judicial Conference of the United States asked Congress Thursday to create 73 new judgeships to cope with the still growing caseload in the federal courts. The action came at the biannual meeting of the conference, the policy-making body of the federal judiciary. Fifty-one percent of the 73 judgeships would be permanent under the conference proposal.

Gilbert's 120 mph winds head toward Texas

CORPUS CHRISTI (UPI)— Hurricane Gilbert, which killed at least 30 people in the Caribbean, thrashed slowly Thursday toward the southern Texas coast where people boarded their houses and fled inland in fear of the giant storm's 120 mph winds, high tides and torrential rains. Hurricane warnings were posted from Port O'Connor on the middle Texas coast south to Brownsville at the Rio Grande and further south to the Mexican port of Tampico.

Officials: AIDS will kill 263,000 by 1992

ATLANTA (UPI)— The number of AIDS cases in the United States will soar more than five-fold in the next four years and 263,000 Americans will have died from the fatal disease by 1992, federal health officials predicted Thursday. The Centers for Disease Control estimated that up to 1.5 million people may be infected with HIV, the human immunodeficiency virus that causes AIDS.

Nature paintings exhibited

By Theresa Livingston
Staff Writer

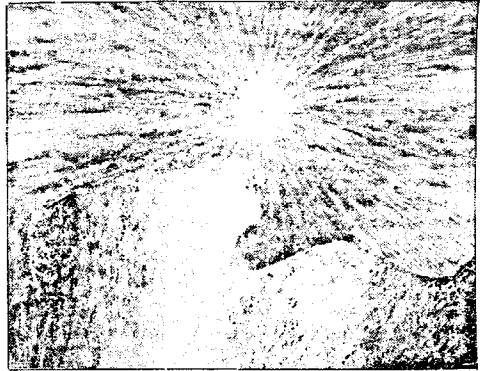

"The Garden of Earthly Light," an exhibit displaying the paintings of two SIU-C graduates, is on display through September 30 at The Hickory Lodge.

The artists, Karen Schmitt and Cynthia Clabough, are employed by the University as scientific illustrators. The show marks the first public showing of their personal art.

The artwork reflects the artist's concerns with nature and how people relate to it. Each artist painted individual works from her own perspective which were then combined into the final show.

The artists approach their artwork from different points of view. Schmitt, who holds a bachelor's degree in fine arts, works in watercolors with plants using a still life format.

Mainly realistic in style, her paintings are done in natural settings to show the interdependence of nature.

Although ecological concerns are the main sources of Schmitt's inspiration, her paintings are not political or reproachful.

"I'm just trying to make people aware of the beauty of nature," she said.

Clabough, who holds a master's degree in fine arts, develops her art more along spiritual lines. Employing a more abstract style, she explores the earth in context with her own spirituality.

By studying Paganism (which she defined as "of the land") and utilizing techniques such as outlining her own body to form parts of her paintings, Clabough said she feels that she is more attuned to natural concerns.

"When a comfortable relationship is reached with nature, the beauty comes through on it's own," she said.

Ozarks craft exhibition at museum

The annual Illinois Ozarks Craft Exhibition is on display at University Museum until Oct. 16.

The exhibit brings together a wide variety of crafts including quilting, fabrics, carving, sculpture, ceramics, glass objects, hand forged iron, fine jewelry, furniture and cabinets, musical instruments, decorative objects, and much more.

The public is invited to a reception on Sept. 18 from 2 to 4 p.m. A total of $1,125 in prizes and awards will be presented. Entries are from within a 150 mile radius of Carbondale, including parts of Illinois, Missouri, Kentucky and Indiana.

The display is sponsored by the Illinois Ozarks Craft Guild and the Illinois Arts Council, as well as area private and business sponsors.

Stage Company will perform

The Stage Company, 101 N. Washington St., will open its seventh season with a production of S.N. Behrman's "Biography," a witty social comedy which takes place during an election year in the 1930's.

The comedy will appear on three consecutive weekends, Sept. 30, Oct. 1-2; Oct. 7-9; and Oct. 14-16. The Friday and Saturday performances will be at 8 p.m., with a 2 p.m. matinee on Sunday.

Most viable solution to drugs is education

AMID THE hype and hoopla of America's war on drugs, the issue of drug legalization has resurfaced.

Those who saw Nightline's national town meeting on drug legalization Tuesday watched as expert panelists engaged in heated debates about the government's policy toward drug dealers and drug users.

SOME OF the panelists floundered in their arguments, foaming with ignorance at the mouth, while others delivered passionate speeches, only to be undermined by equally passionate, but opposing rhetoric.

Politicians were present, some of whom seemed to seize upon the nationally televised media event as a means of benefiting their political careers. Unfortunately, for some, such as Jesse Jackson and New York Mayor Ed Koch, it made them look at times like blubbering idiots.

WHAT AMERICA witnessed that night was a glimpse into the tangled, confusing predicament the Reagan administration has placed itself in. Despite all the barrage of anti-drug commercials designed to scare the dickens out of children, and the unleashing of drug enforcement officials to do battle against drug pushers, America's drug problem has not been alleviated.

By placing a bright spotlight on their anti-drug campaign, the Reagan administration naturally was expected to accomplish great things. But they didn't and feebly attempted to produce evidence of success, but solid facts obstructed those efforts.

DRUG USE and drug-related deaths have risen during the Reagan administration, but this is no fault of the administration. They tried, but their policy of aggressive crackdowns and terrifying the youth of America with nightmare-like ads has not been effective.

Telling a child not to take drugs is like telling a kid not to open a box without telling the child what is inside. Curiosity will get the best of the child.

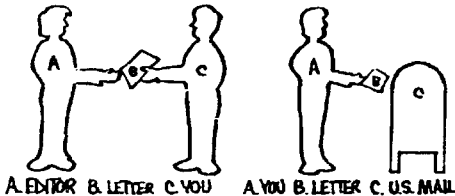

LEGALIZATION IS an iffy solution. The logic of the policy is that if drugs are legalized, drug dealers will be out of jobs and teenagers will find no romance in using drugs as a form of rebellion.

But legalization would be like setting a plateful of cookies in front of a child, expecting the child to use his better judgment and not eat any. This is trouble waiting to happen.

Right now, the most effective policy toward the nation's drug problem is education. We should be educating children with facts, not horror stories. Sex education has become a common course in the school curriculum. Courses in drug education seem logical.

Viewpoint

Political courage disappears; flag-waving exhibitionism thrives

Just when you think that our political leaders have gotten so small they could walk under an alligator without bending over, they shrink. Congress was at it last week, leaving contemptible for loathsome.

We are a nation beset with vexing problems—the federal debt, the trade deficit, the drought, the greenhouse effect, Hurricane Gilbert, Yellowstone's fires, the whereabouts of Elvis Presley—and what does the House of Representatives spend its time arguing about? The Pledge of Allegiance.

The Republicans, ever quick to seize a phony issue when the opportunity presents itself, moved last week to require the House of Representatives to beg each day's session with the recitation of the Pledge of Allegiance. It was a badly political gesture designed to resonate the issue that George Bush keeps hitting Mike Dukakis over the head with. The democrats first voted the proposal down but then Speaker Jim Wright, fearful of how that looked, agreed to allow the pledge to be recited and to consider making it permanent.

So now we have a House member begin each day's deliberations by placing his hand over his heart and leading his colleagues in reciting the pledge. Doesn't that make you sleep more soundly in your beds each night?

There are few things more squalid than a politician committing patriotism; at least the kind of patriotism that politicians favor, the breast-beating, flag-waving sort that does not extend beyond sound and fury. It has the same relationship to sincere love of country as pornography does to sex. It is exploitive, exhibitionistic and base.

Donald Kaul

Tribune Media Services

It seems to me that, having elected these yahoos to represent us in Washington, we have the right to assume that their allegiance is to the flag and to the republic for which it stands. They swear their fealty to the Constitution when they're sworn into office and that should be enough.

The Pledge of Allegiance is, in any case, not much more than a loyalty oath for people who can't write, better suited to countries like Nazi Germany, the Soviet Union and the Ayatollah's Iran, countries which seek to channel the thoughts of their subjects into correct paths and no others. We'd be better off without it.

If our political leaders actually wanted to do something patriotic, heroic even, they would start talking about taxes...yes, the dreaded "T" word. Vice President Bush has said he won't raise taxes, not even if you tortured him with Jane Fonda workout tapes. Mike Dukakis says he will tax only as a "last resort," whatever that means. And Congress, whenever the subject comes up, hides behind the nearest flag.

I hate to be the one to break the news to you folks, but taxes are a necessary part of self-government. They're the way we pay our bills and fund services that we want. It is pointless for politicians to talk about what they're going to do for us, without talking about how they're going to pay for it.

We're making a great deal of the presidential election these days but I can't see that the outcome will make much difference.

What we need is a Stop Congress movement. We should start voting against incumbents, regardless of party or record. If that seems perverse, remember this: it is merely the reverse of what we now do. We return roughly 98 percent of Congress to office each election, without regard to party or record. Ninety-eight percent! The Society Politburo isn't that predictable. How much better if it were the other way around, if we retired 98 percent of Congress each time out.

For one thing, we'd be rid of them before they got good at stealing. For another, freed of the expectation of being returned to office, a few of them might do the brave thing once in a while. They might even talk about taxes.

Windshield ads pollute Carbondale

Recently I've been outraged by the quantity of advertisements placed under the windshield wiper of my automobile while parked on SIU-C campus.

Generally I dislike unsolicited advertisements, but I especially hate fliers under my wiper. Others feel this way too; seven of 10 colleagues also disliked them (two were neutral and one liked them).

These advertisements contribute to SIU's and Carbondale's litter. Examine the parking lot the next time fliers have been put out, chances are good you'll see many fliers on the ground.

I simply don't like people messing with my vehicle. I suspect wipers are occasionally damaged by lifting and dropping when securing a flier.

Since the start of fall semester I've received fliers from Alpha Epsilon Rho fraternity, American Educational Services, CIL-FM Radio, Guzall's Apparel, Pepsi and the Chase Manhattan Bank.

Personally I will boycott these businesses. I ask others, who also are outraged, to do the same. I also ask SIU and the city of Carbondale to outlaw this form of advertisement in an effort to control the quantity of litter and protect personal property.

Finally, I think these businesses owe SIU and Carbondale an apology in the form of "litter-patrol."

Come on businesses, wake-up! There are plenty of alternative advertisement strategies.—David F. Calthamer, graduate student in zoology.

Club takes student to new heights

SPARTA—The Cessna 182 rushed down the runway as three inexperienced students went over the jump safety procedures in their heads. A day of training was about to be put to the test.

As the plane reached 3,000 feet, the jumpmaster opened the door. A loud roar followed by strong winds overcame the inside of the aircraft. It was time to make the much-anticipated jump.

"Get out and stop," the jumpmaster shouted.

It was time to exit. "Get all the way out," meant it was time to hang off the strut of the aircraft's wing 3,000 feet above the airport below. "Look up," meant let go. The natural reaction was to hang on for dear life, but desire for excitement overcame the fear.

With heads back and limbs spread, bodies raced away from the plane at an incredible velocity.

After six seconds, the chute was checked for proper deployment. A fully inflated chute was observed over the right shoulder. Now it was time to relax and enjoy the slow descent.

Small radios strapped to the students' chests provided instructions on simple steering procedures, bringing class members to a safe and comfortable landing.

FDA considers ban on chemical ingredient contained in hairspray

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Food and Drug Administration is considering a ban of a carcinogenic chemical found in hairspray, FDA commissioner Frank Young told a House subcommittee Thursday.

The agency is still sifting through comments on the proposed regulation that would ban methylene chloride as a hairspray ingredient but expects to complete its work by the end of the year, Young said.

"All the evidence indicates that this is a hazardous substance. When used for a few minutes every morning, it produces some risk," he told the House Small Business Subcommittee on Regulation and Business Opportunities.

Most companies that used the cancer-causing chemical have voluntarily stopped using it, but the proposed rule would ensure that it was no longer used, Emil Corwin, an FDA spokesman, said.

Noriega lawyers file suit

MIAMI (UPI)—Lawyers for Gen. Manuel Antonio Noriega filed a sealed motion Thursday to dismiss drug charges against the Panamanian strongman, but denied prosecutor's suggestions that Noriega was seeking to "cut himself a deal" in a U.S. presidential election year.

"I am not engaging in any kind of political chicanery," said Noriega lawyer Neal Sonnett of Miami. "We have important legal issues. Those are the only things we're arguing. There is no political purpose to this motion at all."

Noriega, the chief of Panama's armed forces and the de facto ruler of the Central American country, was indicted by two federal grand juries in Florida Feb. 4 on drug trafficking charges.

He originally had until May to file a motion to dismiss the charges, but U.S. District Judge William Hoessler twice agreed to extend the deadline, most recently in July.

Prosecutors in July asked that Sonnett's motion to dismiss charges be filed immediately to avoid the possibility that Noriega was delaying to make "wild allegations" during the height of the U.S. presidential race, U.S. Attorney Dexter Lehtinen said.

"When you're arguing a Noriega case, when Neal Sonnett has every ability and opportunity to file his motions to dismiss in a timely fashion and does not do so, it leads to the conclusion that they're being delayed to file them closer to the election," Lehtinen said Thursday.

But Sonnett said the extensions were for legitimate reasons.

"I simply needed more time to prepare the motion," he said.

Lehtinen said he would not object to the motion being unsealed.

"We did not ask for the motion to be sealed. When he made the ruling, we did not object to it."

Prosecutor Richard Gregorie, who argued in court in July, said Wednesday. "My concern is that Noriega would see this as an opportunity to put materials in there that could have some bearing on our elections."

Senate approves bill to limit imports of textiles, clothing

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The Senate, winding up a week-long battle that pitted free-traders against protectionists, ignored the threat of a presidential veto and approved a bill that would limit imports of textiles, clothing and shoes.

The Senate, which approved its version of the bill last week, passed by a 59-36 margin the House bill, which it amended to conform to the Senate version.

The amended House bill must go back to the House where discussions are under way whether to accept it or work out differences between the two versions in a conference committee.

"The most productive industry in the country is still losing 31,000 jobs a year," Sen. Ernest Hollings, D-S.C., one of the bill's major sponsors, said shortly before the final vote. "If we don't do this, we could go the way of a long list of other industries."

Speaking with reporters after the vote, Hollings said he had talked with House Ways and Means Committee Chairman Dan Rostenkowski about bypassing a conference committee to save time as Congress rushes toward a mid-October adjournment.

The experience left some heads in the clouds. "It was great, it was great, it was great," said John Murphy of Kansas City, Mo.

Some were more down to earth. "It was almost as exciting as losing my virginity," said Tom Stastny a freshman from Wood Dale majoring in aviation flight.

The SIU Skydiving Club sponsors jumps for beginners or experienced skydivers every weekend at the Archway Para Center in Sparta Illinois. The club has been in existence since 1962. It competes yearly in competitions in which it has won the national champion title five times. For details, call R.D. Aut, president of the SIU Skydiving Club, at 549-2137.

Drug charges filed against grandmother to go to jury

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI)—A Columbian-born grandmother believed to be the first woman charged under a federal drug kingpin law is really nothing more sinister than the "little old lady" she appears to be, her lawyer says.

Eucaris Ceballos, 54, of Hollywood, Fla., may not be "free of wrongdoing," but she is not the mastermind of a multimillion dollar cocaine conspiracy portrayed by prosecutors, attorney John Furlong said Wednesday in closing arguments of his client's three-month federal court trial.

"She's a little old lady," Furlong said as he glanced at his client, a stocky woman wearing a frumpy housedress with slipper-like sandals. "She's 4-foot-10 tall. She's a grandmom. She is what she appears to be." Ceballos and three other defendants are on trial in U.S. District Court on multiple counts of violating drug laws.

She is believed to be the first woman in the nation ever to be charged under the federal drug kingpin statute, which carries a mandatory life sentence without parole upon conviction.

Priest pressured in lawsuit

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (UPI)—A Rhode Island priest says he will go to jail rather than divulge the names of anyone he spoke with regarding a fellow priest who was later convicted of molesting teenage boys.

The Rev. Richard Buccci said he received a letter from the Vatican last week reminding him of his "absolute" obligation to protect the identities of those who come to him for spiritual counsel.

Buccci is under court order to answer questions regarding the alleged molestations. The letter ordered him to "regardless of penalty or cost" resist all efforts to breach the confidentiality between himself and those he has counseled, Buccci said Thursday in the Providence Journal Bulletin.

Buccci interpreted the letter to say that, even if it means going to prison, he should not comply with a court order or demands from the Roman Catholic Diocese of Providence to force him to name persons he spoke with regarding the Rev. William O'Connell. O'Connell pleaded no contest in 1986 to charges he sexually assaulted three teenagers and was sentenced to one year in a state prison.

Buccci could be a key witness in a $10 million suit against the Bishop Louis E. Gelineau and Auxiliary Bishop Kenneth A. Angell. The suit, filed by one of the victim's parents, charges the diocesan leaders failed to remove O'Connell from service despite reports he had molested boys.

Kentucky begins tax amnesty

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI)—Kentucky began a tough tax-amnesty program Thursday allowing a delinquent taxpayer to pay up before Dec. 16 with only half the normal interest rate charged and no penalties. After that date, tax deadbeats should watch out.

"Make no mistake, this administration will take all steps possible to collect all of the taxes it is due," said Gov. Wallace Wilkinson, adding the state has new computer capability to identify delinquent taxpayers.

NASA: Space shuttle leak fixed, launch date to be set

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — A leak aboard the shuttle Discovery appeared to be resolved Thursday, leaving Hurricane Gilbert as the only threat to picking a date for the first post-Challenger launch later this month.

NASA hopes to launch Discovery on the 26th shuttle mission between Sept. 26 and 29. If Gilbert does not disrupt operations at the Johnson Space Center near Houston, where the shuttle control center is located, a formal launch date could be announced by the end of the day Friday.

Agency managers, meanwhile, decided to close the Johnson Space Center at noon Thursday, sending all but essential personnel home to make storm preparations as warranted.

Rear Adm. Richard Truly, chief of the shuttle program, had been expected to announce a firm launch date Wednesday after an exhaustive two-day flight readiness review. But he decided not to select a date, pending resolution of the hydrogen leak and the potential impact of Gilbert.

The hydrogen leak was discovered during a recent test in which the fuel line system in Discovery's engine compartment was pressurized with an inert gas. By monitoring how fast the pressure dropped off, or decayed, engineers could determine if any leaks were present.

During two test runs, pressure dropped off faster than allowed and engineers worked through the week to pin down the source of the presumed leak.

A NASA spokeswoman said

Thursday it was believed the pressure drop was caused by fuel line valves that did not close tightly when they were not under the influence of hydraulic pressure.

After hydraulic pressure was applied, as it will be on launch day, and the valves were opened and closed a few times, the fuel line system held pressure. The engineers believe the problem has been resolved.

The picture was less clear regarding hurricane Gilbert and the potential threat to the Johnson Space Center, located near Galveston Bay south of Houston.

Kyle Herring, a spokesman for the Johnson Space Center, said managers decided to close the facility Thursday to give employees a chance to make arrangements to protect their homes and families.

20 heroes recognized for actions

By United Press International

The Carnegie Medal for heroism was awarded Thursday to 20 people, including a Canadian trainman who snatched a child from the path of a freight train.

A citation with the medal for Larry B. Pulai, 26, of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, says he jumped from the train as it approached a 20-month-old girl standing on a railroad track in May 1987.

Pulai "ran alongside the train, veered in front of it, and without stopping, grabbed the girl and ran off the track, clutching her," the citation says.

Seventy-year-old Hsien-li Chang of San Francisco also won an award from the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission for battling flames and thick smoke to help rescue a man.

The Secret of Why You Like Country Music
(Even if you don't realize it!)

The secret is simple - Country music is simple. The bass beat is not subtle, not intimidating. Country music about forces your feet to dance. And the lyrics are straight forward, too, unlike the rock song I just heard that referred either to the existential meaning of life or beastiality with a chicken. The country song writer is upfront. He likes Montana. He doesn't like Hippies. His wife is sleeping around and he's bummed.

Country music puts you at ease. Thus it's easier to socialize. Rock music may give you the ability for free individual rhythmic expression, but country music allows you to press the flesh - especially with the slow "Mother Hugging" ballads.

Officials close Chippendale's, but show goes on

LOS ANGELES (SHNS)—Bluenoses and fire marshals have won a battle in their nine-year campaign to close a pioneering male striptease emporium here, but the show goes on.

Forced to vacate the 290-person showroom where youthful men with prominent pectorals have bumped and ground to female cheers and leers since 1979, Chippendale's has temporarily moved to another nightclub seven miles away.

But women out for bachelorette parties or just a night of ogling are still greeted by young men with white collars, black bow ties, white cuffs, skin-tight leather pants and exposed chests.

"It's not quite the same because in our old showroom everything was set up just the way we wanted it," says Steve Banerjee, who started Chippendale's so that "for once women could be the boss."

Banerjee had fought off lewd-conduct citations and overcrowding accusations since 1979, but gave in and moved from his original quarters in the Palms District of Los Angeles last week. He promptly found a temporary home at the Wall Street night club a block east of the La Brea Tar Pits, and the show didn't miss a beat.

Women arriving at the new location don't seem to care where the show is staged.

"I don't think there's anything vulgar about this in any way," said Sharon Nicholson, a 33-year-old housewife out for an evening of "kicks" with a friend.

Nicholson said she especially liked "audience participation time," when young men in skimpy G-strings make their way through the crowd while women wave tips they hope to trade for kisses, pinches and hugs.

"This is just a fantasy for most women," gushed Lesley Cayetano, a banking executive visiting from Michigan. "You sometimes dream about making love to men who look like this, but they're impossible to find."

The Chippendale's show features men seemingly without an ounce of flab. Some sport tearaway T-shirts, while others encourage women to slip tips into their G-strings. Dancers can average $100 per night in tips.

From the beginning, the show struck police as lewd they raided Chippendale's in only its second week.

"It's a form of censorship," says Banerjee, who fought off the obscenity charges only to encounter ongoing problems with fire marshals.

"But it makes me more successful, because I have to fight back in the media. They have a real problem with us because thousands of women are ready to testify we have a class show. It's like an off-Broadway show. So they haven't been able to bust us like they would some made dancing joint."

Banerjee has also opened branch club in New York, sells dozen of souvenir items and maintains two touring troupes that state about 400 shows yearly in all parts of the United States and Canada.

Goldwater believes Reagan knew of Iran-Contra fiasco

WASHINGTON (UPI)—Barry Goldwater believes President Reagan must have known funds from the sale of weapons to Iran were used to arm the Nicaraguan Contras and says the fiasco cost Reagan a place among the greatest presidents of the century.

Goldwater, the retired Arizona senator and 1964 Republican presidential candidate, says, "I believe the president did know of the diversion of Iranian funds to the Contras."

"If he knew about the sale of weapons to a foreign country and various ways in which Americans were aiding the Contras, Reagan knew about the transfer of funds," Goldwater says in his new book, "Goldwater," written with Jack Casserly.

"He had to know," Goldwater says. "The White House explanation makes him out to be either a liar or an incompetent."

"Unfortunately, I believe that the Iran-Contra crisis cost Ronald Reagan the chance to be among the greatest presidents of this century," Goldwater says. "History will charge him more harshly because of that unfortunate episode."

"The selling of arms to terrorist Iran unquestionably did the president irreparable harm," Goldwater says. "He will never regain his former stature."

Goldwater rated Reagan the most inspirational president of the eight during this time in politics, just edging John F. Kennedy, and said he is not certain Republican unity will prevail after Reagan leaves office in 1989.

The book, which traces Goldwater's private and political life, is filled with unvarnished opinions of the nation's leaders, critical in the case of many and highly disdainful of former presidents Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon.

Parental leave bill a priority

Women's groups want unpaid leave to care for children

WASHINGTON (SHNS)—A bill requiring businesses to give employees unpaid leave to care for a newborn, sick child or elderly parents is the focus of an intensive lobbying effort pitting women's rights activists against business groups.

Women's groups have made the parental leave bill their top legislative priority and are pressuring the Democratic leadership in both houses of Congress to bring the bill up for a vote.

Members of both parties, keenly aware that an estimated 10 million more women than men will vote in this election, are reluctant to go on record against a bill that requires no government funding and addresses an increasingly serious problem for many American women how to care for a newborn child or seriously ill elderly parent or child without losing their job.

"Women are tired of talk. We want action," Judith Lichtman, president of the Women's Legal Defense Fund, said. "If politicians truly want to capture women's votes, they must go beyond pro-family rhetoric and photo opportunities with children."

The Democratic leadership in both the Senate and House has promised to bring the measure up for vote in the next few weeks, although supporters acknowledge they still do not have enough votes for passage.

Discussions are under way with some of the bill's opponents to find language that may make the measure acceptable to a majority in Congress, said a spokeswoman for Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., the bill's House author.

Strongly opposing the bill are the Reagan administration, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce, the National Association of Manufacturers and other powerful business lobbies.

Illegal odors get sniffed out

Denver uses common sense of smell to protect air quality

Scripps Howard News Service

Like a sommelier savoring the bouquet of a vintage cabernet, Louis McBride gingerly sticks the plastic scentometer up his nostrils and takes a rib-rattling deep breath.

Ahhhhh, Denver. For the past two years, McBride has persevered in perhaps the state's most challenging inspection job—enforcing odor and other air-pollution regulations in industrialized northeast Denver and Commerce City.

There, the smells rarely creep on little cat's feet. They punch you in the nose like a Marvin Hagler right.

Most people try to hold their breaths as they weave through the tangle of waste-treatment ponds, meat-packing plants, refineries, power stations and factories.

Not McBride. Armed with citizens' complaints, he and other human bloodhounds huff and puff their ways through the tanks, pits and warehouses trying to track a stench's origins.

"It's hard to differentiate where the stench is coming from," said McBride. "It gets all mixed up."

McBride is proud of the way he protects the public health—not to mention the property values of the Front Range. But when he stumbles onto a chuck hole in back of a pet food plant, driving his scentometer painfully into his sinuses, even he succumbs to private doubts.

"We're just out there trying to get people to comply with the law and stop stinking up the place," McBride said. "But sometimes I'm out there and I think: 'There has got to be a better way.'"

McBride is one of 30 people in Colorado who have been certified by the Colorado Department of Health this year to be organoleptic specialists, or odor detectors.

Fourteen work for state and local public health offices. The rest work for industries seeking to control their aromatic effluents before the neighbors rally outside their gates holding cans of room freshener.

All detectors are graduates of the state's smell-identification school, a daylong seminar jokingly known as the "Nasal Academy."

Richard Fox is headmaster of Nasal Academy and McBride's boss in the state's air pollution control division. He said the school certifies only those few students like McBride who demonstrate an average sense of smell.

"If you have a very good sense of smell, that's as bad as having no sense of smell for our purposes," Fox said. "Those with the very good sense would detect things that don't bother most people."

Fox's course is split into two sessions. In the morning, he tests students on state odor regulations, proper inspection techniques and how to use the scentometer, or odor detector.

After lunch (stay away from garlic and picante sauce!), students smell unmarked bottles or odors in various dilutions. The results are graded on a curve, and the ones whose smelling ability falls in the middle—usually about 75 percent—are chosen.

The inspectors are certified for one year, after which they must pass the course again.

McBride and other odor cops do not routinely test the air throughout the state. Rather, they take regular smell readings only in industrialized areas. They also investigate citizen's complaints about sudden and specific stinks.

Fox said the most common culprits are waste treatment facilities, chemical plants, refineries, meatpacking and rendering plants, as well as sugar beet processors and other agricultural operations.

Besides the nose, the odor inspector's trustiest tool is a scentometer.

Survey: 'odor blindness' is a problem

Scripps Howard News Service

As many as 3 million Americans cannot tell the difference between common scents, making "odor-blindness" more common than colorblindness, according to National Geographic.

In the September 1986 issue, the magazine took the unusual step of including a scratch-and-sniff survey that its 11 million subscribers could take and mail back to researchers as part of a feature article on the sense of smell. (Most smell tests at the universities involve 50 to 100 subjects).

The survey tested people's ability to identify sex odors—sweat, banana, musk, cloves, natural gas and rose.

More than 1.5 million subscribers responded, and their answers are still being analyzed. A preliminary analysis of 26,200 responses shows that 35 percent could not smell sweat and 29 percent could not smell musk.

Of those who detected some odor on the test samples, 80 percent correctly identified cloves and rose. Half smelled banana, while only 29 percent identified musk and 25 percent identified sweat.

The survey also confirmed that women have a keener sense of smell than men.

Sludge dumping protested

NEW YORK (UPI)—Daring Greenpeace activists dangled from the Triborough Bridge in an attempt to keep a sludge barge from dumping garbage in the ocean but they were arrested Thursday hours after the craft sneaked out of its berth.

The protestors claimed victory even though the ship quietly slipped out of the city's waters.

"We thought they might do that but it's three times as long to go by way of the (Long Island Sound)," Steve Young, a spokesman for the protestors, said. "We lacked the oath normally iakes."

Coast Guard spokesman Wayne Wertz said the barge Lemon Creek left its berth on Ward's Island Wednesday before midnight. For security reasons he said, "We're not going to publicize the route it took."

A group of 13 protestors lowered themselves within 40 feet of the river late Wednesday night to prevent the movement of the barge, which was carrying sludge from a transfer station.

The barge was to leave at 1 a.m. and the protestors said they were prepared to lower themselves onto the river to prevent its movement. But in a last-minute deal with the city, the demonstrators ended their protest.

Bakker suffers memory loss during PTL bankruptcy trial

COLUMBIA, S.C. (UPI) — Jim Bakker suffered an attack of memory loss today over extravagant expenditures during his tenure at PTL and claimed complete ignorance of an $1,800 glass box purchased to house a pair of his shoes.

Bakker testified in the U.S. Bankruptcy Court trial of a $52 million lawsuit PTL has filed against him, his wife, Tammy Faye and his former aide David Taggart.

Bakker failed to remember critical details about PTL financing. "I don't know. I don't remember. I can't recall," Bakker answered repeatedly under questioning from PTL attorney Bradford Leggett.

The attorneys showed him charts detailing millions of dollars in checks drawn on ministry coffers during his tenure, and he denied knowing about $1,800 spent on a glass shoebox.

"The first time I saw it was today as I was coming up in the elevator," Bakker said. "I presume those are my shoes."

The glass enclosure, PTL attorneys said, was to be a showcase for the shoes Bakker wore the day he broke ground for the Crystal Palace, a proposed cathedral that was never built.

Thursday's hearing adjourned after only an hour of additional testimony from Bakker. His lawyers will begin presenting their side of the case Oct. 17.

On Wednesday, the PTL founder refused to confirm figures showing he received more than $4.3 million in salary, bonuses and other benefits between 1983 and March 1987, when he left the ministry over a sex scandal.

Bakker claimed the PTL board would have approved any salary and benefits he received, but he failed to find anything in the minutes of PTL board meetings to support the contention.

Black presidential candidate out to punish Duke

CINCINNATI (SHNS) Lenora Fulani is out to punish Michael Dukakis and establishment Democrats.

The 38-year-old psychologist and independent presidential candidate hopes she can siphon up to 1 million votes from Dukakis' presidential bid and help put Republican George Bush in the White House.

The "white supremacist" Democratic Party and Dukakis have a political price to pay for "stepping on and over" Jesse Jackson and failing to embrace an agenda that addresses black concerns, Fulani says.

Denied the White House, the Democrats will have to be more responsive to blacks over the next four years and it will clear the stage for Jackson to secure the party's nomination in 1992, Fulani reasons.

"Dumping the Duke is what we must do to advance the black agenda and empower the African American community," Fulani said Wednesday in an interview.

Fulani, who is on the Nov. 8 ballot in all 50 states, previously ran unsuccessfully for mayor of New York City and governor of New York and now is campaigning as the candidate of the New York-based New Alliance Party.

She announced her candidacy last year, but deferred to Jackson until he emerged from the Democratic National Convention without the vice presidential nomination.

Bush dubs Dukakis' miracle the 'Massachusetts Mirage'

By United Press International

Vice President George Bush scored Michael Dukakis' state record Thursday, dubbing it "the Massachusetts Mirage" that hides tax increases, fewer jobs and burgeoning debt.

"My opponent still says he wants to 'do for the nation what he has done for Massachusetts.' That slogan is beginning to sound more and more like a threat," Bush told a breakfast meeting of the prestigious Commonwealth Club.

In a hard-hitting attack on his Democratic opponent for president, Gov. Michael Dukakis, Bush turned a critical eye on his three-term record.

No question, Massachusetts did benefit dramatically from the national recovery — but there is no 'Massachusetts Miracle.' If there's any miracle, it's that Massachusetts did so poorly in an era of unprecedented nationwide growth, while huge defense dollars were being pumped into that state," Bush said.

"I am not satisfied with the last eight years in Washington in terms of the deficit," he said. "Deficits do matter. We must do better. And I want to see that Democratic-controlled Congress ... brought under control."

Specifically, the vice president told the collected business, legal and political leaders that Dukakis this summer "pushed through a $180 million tax hike to cover the growing deficit caused by his administration's spending spree."

"Under his (Dukakis') administration, Massachusetts had the second fastest increase in state taxes per capita of all 50 states," he said. "He says he wants to do for America what he did for Massachusetts. Well if the federal government had increased taxes at the same rate, the average American family would be paying $2,300 more this year in personal income taxes alone."

"The figures show that when it comes to increasing state spending per capita—my opponent is at the top of the list, leading all the other 50 states."

"During his administration, Massachusetts ranked 40th out of 50 states in job growth, 45th in manufacturing growth."

Olympiad participants living well during stay in Seoul, South Korea

Scripts Howard News Service

SEOUL — Guards. Check-points: A, B and C. Fences more than 10 feet high.

The housing complex of towering gray apartments, all sold as private housing after the Olympic Games, appears to be a formidable home away from home for the 9,594 athletes at the Summer Olympic Games. The residents of Global Town can satisfy nearly every whim.

"I could live here forever," said U.S. gymnast Scott Johnson. "The rooms are like little apartments. The food is fantastic, the people are very friendly."

Amenities are a stone's throw away: beauty and barber shop, tea room, duty free shop, video arcade, a discotheque. The glass-enclosed Athlete's Hall makes a science-fiction version of housing of the future a reality.

"The facilities at the Olympic Village are first class, and almost everything is available," said Kim Young-shik, a former foreign minister and ambassador to the United States who is the mayor of Global Town.

It is entirely unlike the housing villages at the 1984 Games in Los Angeles where athletes were split into different housing areas either at UCLA or Southern Cal.

"I really have a warped perspective of it because the only thing I can compare it to is 1984," said Michelle Mitchell, one of the U.S. platform divers. "This is so much bigger than the village in LA, about 15 times the size of the USC village where we stayed."

The apartments at the Olympic village are three-, four- or five-bedroom units, two athletes per bedroom. Depending on the apartment, they have either one or two baths and a living room. Cleaning and laundry services are provided.

"They're great," said Deena Wigger, a U.S. air rifle shooter. "Except that we have only two bathrooms for eight girls, and that makes it a little tough. But you don't have to do all your makeup to go to the range early in the morning.

"Right now there is a lot of activity in the village." For U.S. diver Wendy Williams, that means sitting in front of the computer terminal. A "WINS" message center allows virtually everyone associated with the Olympics to leave messages in electronic mailboxes.

"I'm a gadget freak," said Williams. "I've been playing with the computer trying to learn as much as I can about it. You can send messages to everybody."

The apartments are not furnished with televisions or stereos, and during the first week those have been hot items at the duty-free department store. Portable TV sets have been a particularly attractive item. But the electrical voltage system is not compatible with most countries outside Korea.

Lights out

In Troy State's home opener against Southeast Missouri on Sept. 3, a light transformer blew in the middle of the game. With the playing field bathed in darkness, play resumed at Troy State's 80-yard practice field.

After five hours of play, Troy State prevailed 26-23. Said first-year Troy State coach Robert Maddox to The NCAA News: "Somebody trying to beat you on your own practice field is like a burglar coming into your house."

Saluki coach Rick Rhoades, who led Troy State to the Division II national championship last season, said that, "I had the whole thing staged."

Movement on the line

On defense, inside linebacker Brian Miller moves up to a starting position, replacing Tyrunne Johnson.

Playing for keeps

Murray State has a long history of grabbing a lead, and then holding onto it. Case in point, on Dec. 1, 1928, Murray State beat Will-Mayfield 119-6. If that's not convincing enough, the Racers took Louisville to the cleaners 105-0 on Oct. 8, 1932.

"We'll be concerned about Proctor any time he has the ball in his hands," SIU-C head coach Rick Rhoades said.

Defensive coordinator Jim Tompkins said the Salukis have to keep the pressure on Proctor.

"Proctor scrambles well," Tompkins said. "He is very elusive. We have to be able to contain him."

Because Murray State is 0-2, Mahoney said his team is eager to claim a win.

"We are very hungry," he said. "We came back very hard in practice this week and nobody is panicking yet."

Murray State's two losses have been to the University of Tennessee-Martin, 32-24, and Southeast Missouri State, 16-13.

"(Against Southeast) we played 45 kids and 26 were freshmen or sophomores, so I think that speaks a lot for it. We were a little overconfident with Tennessee-Martin and played a horrible first half."

Mahoney said his offense has to convert close to the goal line, something they haven't been doing.

"The thing that hurt us at Southeast was we were down inside the 20-yard line several times and didn't score. We have to be able to run against a pretty good defensive line," Mahoney said.

The Salukis could be playing without 6-7, 300-pound right tackle Pete Jansons, who is suffering from back problems.

"He has been bothered by them for about three weeks and finally we just told him to take a few days off," Rhoades said.

"I don't think he really has a weight problem," Rhoades added. "He's just a big guy. He probably won't start, but he may play."

On the run

Saluki quarterback Fred Gibson is 11th in rushing in Division I-AA after getting 114 yards in the opening season loss to Western Illinois.

Float like a butterfly

Rhoades sounded like a freshman quarterback at the Saluki Booster Club meeting Thursday.

"I don't ever remember having butterflies as early as this in a season. I feel like I'm raising another child with this football team. We're just learning to walk," he said.

Gateway slate

Other contests involving Gateway teams on Saturday include: Western Illinois at Southwest Missouri State, Illinois State at Western Michigan, Eastern Illinois at Liberty University, Indiana State at Florida, Northern Illinois at Wisconsin and Northern Iowa at Morgan State.

NBC will face comparisons early as ABC's broadcast set precedent

Scripps Howard News Service

SEOUL — Comparisons—those dreaded comparisons—will start early. Saturday night, 7 p.m., CST opening ceremonies, 1988 Summer Olympics. Hey, remember how great those opening ceremonies were in 1984?

Oops, ABC covered the Olympics in 1984. ABC had its cameras covering all that lovely pomp and circumstance. But 1984 is history. It's NBC's turn.

Will it matter? Well, sure, to the accountants and advertisers and, obviously to the Nielsen and Arbitrons of the world. And it will matter to anybody who feels uncomfortable watching an international sporting event without Jim McKay.

After that, who knows? For its part, NBC has been actively trying to downplay any and all comparisons with the so-called "network of the Olympics."

It's not that NBC believes it could not match up with ABC. It does. But NBC knows it will also mess up and when it does, it does not want 100 million viewers screaming, "I want my ABC!"

Clemson's top player is also hitter Amy Vaughn.

After a scoreless first half, SIU-C's Julie Mayor scored at 10:45 of the second period on a corner penalty. Northern tied on a penalty stroke at 20:56.

p.m. Saturday. Virginia's strong players include: freshmen, 5-10 Jennifer Taylor and 5-9 Joy Gmeiner and juniors, 5-9 Margaret Coughlin, 5-7 Donna Milano, 5-9 Heidi Kautz and 5-7 Angela Hall.

The Salukis meet Clemson at 1 p.m. Sunday.

Clemson's leading player is Wendy Anderson, who was all-Atlantic Coast last year. She injured her knee this summer and is recovering from knee surgery.

"The season's early and we are going without our top player," Clemson coach Linda White said. "I think we're during well considering the circumstances."

Clemson's top player is also hitter Amy Vaughn.

"Amy is starting to assert herself in play," White added.

Jenny Yurkanin, Karen Camaratus, Tammy Quaresimis, Amy Castro and Jen Ferley are probable starters for Clemson.

Herrera, a member of the U.S. Lifesaving Association, will submit plans to start a chapter of the association at SIU-C in November. If accepted, SIU-C will be the only university-affiliated chapter.

Greg Burdette, aquatics administrative crew chief who took part in the training session, said being a lifeguard is not based on what is done, but rather, on what might have to be done.

"We stress a preventive type of lifesaving here," he said. "We have to foresee what could happen and stop it from happening."

A lifeguard since he was 16 years old, the first year of lifeguard eligibility, Burdette said he enjoys his work because "being in a position to help other people makes me feel good.

"When you're up in the chair you're responsible for other people's lives." Anyone can sit in a chair and tell people to stop running or not to dive from the side of the pool. It takes a lot of training to be confident enough to sit up there and know you can save someone."

Drunk Driver Set Free? (a parable)

The other day Matt, a friend of mine, told me about a rather strange experience he had recently. He said he was driving home from campus when he came upon an auto accident. That in itself, isn't so strange. Matt said he sees accidents all the time. In fact, in the three years commencing to Carbondale, he has seen so many had wrecks that he is beginning to reach the point where they aren't so upsetting anymore. Anyway, two cars were involved. He said it was immediately obvious that the victims in one car were not severely injured. They were a little shook-up but out walking around. It was also immediately obvious that the driver of the second car, injured much more severely, was very drunk.

Matt told me that, as usual, several cars passed by without stopping to help. But, gradually a crowd started to gather. The people, standing back, appeared as if they were watching the evening news, remaining uninvolved. He said that crowd looked like the crowd always looks.

Maybe, at this point, I was getting a little impatient. I asked Matt to go on with his story.

He said that suddenly a car stopped; and, a guy jumped out. The guy hurried to the scene, quickly surveying all of the victims, he walked over to the drunk and began administering first aid, making him as comfortable as possible. He wiped away the blood from his eyes and stretched him out on the car seat. He talked slowly and softly, encouraging him.

My buddy said that while this guy was helping the injured man, the crowd made some pretty unkind remarks—remarks about the drunk and even about the guy that was helping him.

I thought to myself, that isn't so unusual these days with all the publicity about drunk drivers. I offered my thought as explanation and suggested to Matt that this guy was probably a trained emergency medical technician and especially big hearted.

Then he told me that, at first, he had the same impression. But something happened that changed his first impression of the guy and gave the whole experience its strangeness. Matt said that as he was walking back to his car, he overheard the guy talking to the policeman that had arrived at the scene. He was making a deal. He told the officer to let the drunk go to the hospital for treatment and to take him to jail, in the drunk's place. Now, that is strange. The story left me wondering about this guy.

While you're wondering about the story and why I bothered to repeat it, read the Bible. Jesus Christ did some pretty strange things, too.

Murray State boasts wishbone too

By David Gallianetti
Staff Writer

The football team's home opener at McAndrew Stadium is going to look more like Thanksgiving dinner. Offensively speaking, there will be wishbones everywhere.

"I'd say we used the wishbone more than half the time at Southeast Missouri State on Saturday," Murray State coach Mike Mahoney said. "Because we run it, it helps the defense (recognize it) a bit.

"In the past we only had a few practices to prepare for it. Most of these guys saw quite a lot of it all spring.

"The key for us is to make sure we take all our option responsibilities on defense," he said. "It will be interesting for us to see what they do."

Mahoney said his Racers were having a tough time adapting to the concept of the Salukis' no-huddle, wishbone offense.

"That is tough to re-create in practice," Mahoney said. "On defense we just can't call something. We alerted the kids and simulated it as best we could.

"I am under the impression that they take some time to call their play at the line of scrimmage, though," he said. "We don't substitute defensive people like some teams do, so once (our players) get used to it we'll be all right."

The Racers will be led by junior quarterback Michael Proctor, who broke the Ohio Valley Conference single season passing record last season with 2,375 yards. He is expected to break the league's career passing mark before graduating.

Coming into this season, Proctor's career 3,883-yard mark is good for third on the Murray State all-time list. He is 1,154 yards away from the all-time mark of 5,037.

Hall of Fame adds 3 to ranks

Three former standout athletes will be inducted into the 10-year-old SIU-C Sports Hall of Fame on Saturday during festivities surrounding the football game against Murray State.

Jim Dwyer, Sue Faber and Sonya Locke are to be honored at an induction brunch at 10:30 a.m. at the Student Center Ballroom D and then at halftime of the game.

Dwyer was the baseball team's most valuable player in 1971, batting .413 that season before being drafted into the major leagues.

Faber was a forward on the women's basketball team from 1977-79 and 1981-83. She was SIU-C's first women's basketball player to have her uniform retired.

Locke, an assistant coach for the women's volleyball team, was the school's first All-American in that sport. She was the SIU-C Female Athlete of the Year in 1982.

Murray State coach Mike Mahoney has learned that in his profession, it's important to have bus fare ready and the bags packed. Mahoney is the Racers' top journeyman, having coached as an assistant at Arizona (1977), Murray State (1979), William and Mary (1980), Murray State

Volleyball makes swing through Dixie

By Lisa Warns

The first road trip of the volleyball season starts tonight in Athens, Ga., as SIU-C takes on Georgia.

The team then takes on Auburn and Virginia Commonwealth in Athens. The swing through the South winds up in South Carolina against Clemson.

"The main emphasis has been (developing) better ball control on defense," Salukis' coach Debbie Hunter said. "In the attack we want to lessen our errors."

The Salukis have been doing two- and three-person drills for defensive movement, Hunter added.

"Georgia has had a decline in the (Southeastern Atlantic) conference but they have some nice-sized athletes," Hunter said. "We're anxious to be challenged again."

Georgia's top two players, juniors Sharon Waddell and Erin Hoesie, are transfer students from Penn State and Iowa State respectively.

Georgia is playing without its middle hitter Stephanie Dunkle because she broke her wrist in the preseason. Christa Faris is out for the season with an Achilles' tendon.

Georgia also intends to start Christie Lord, Jill Moore, Melanie Powelson, and 6-1 Kelli Odgen.

Auburn's record is 6-4 after going 3-3 in the Georgetown tournament and coming in second at the University of Kansas tournament, losing to Northern Iowa in the finals. The Salukis play Auburn at noon Saturday.

"I have no idea what to expect," third-year Auburn coach Pat Ghasgin said. "We're coming together as a unit and we'll see how we measure up (to SIU-C)."

Gina Thomas, a top Auburn player, is fatigued and could be unable to face the Salukis, Ghasgin said.

Campus lifeguards must work early to complete safety training session

It was early enough to make a safe bet that most students were still at home in bed while SIU-C lifeguards were completing practical and written tests at Pulliam Pool.

A required lifeguard training session, complete with simulated drownings and CPR rescues, ensured that most University-employed lifeguards know the ins and outs of lifeguarding and those who don't, soon will.

Participants had to swim 500 yards in under 10 minutes, tow a 10-pound brick 50 yards in under a 1:10, and complete a 50-yard approach stroke swim under 45 seconds. Those who failed any part of the test would have to be tested again in October. Failure in October could mean suspension from any on-campus lifeguarding responsibilities.

The session, mandatory for all lifeguards employed at the Student Recreation Center, the boat docks and Camp's Beach, also included a policies quiz.

Rudi Sommer, aquatics graduate assistant at the Rec Center, said about 32 of the 50 University-employed lifeguards attended the training session. Those who were excused from Saturday's session will complete a similar one in October.

Sommer said lifeguards who work on campus are generally in better shape, physically as well as mentally.

"You must (be certified in) advanced lifesaving and CPR in order to be considered for the job," he said. "Then you have to pass a practical and a written test to be hired."

The aquatics program administers a test to those applying for a lifeguarding job. The test entails various types of deep-water rescues and escapes which are exhibited in the water and explained in a written test.

Sommer said a lot of pools don't require on-going training. Because the aquatics program on-campus does, lifeguards at SIU-C have an edge that most other lifeguards don't.

"It makes our program a little better," he said. "It shows that we're looking for people committed to lifeguarding and not just looking like a lifeguard."

The aquatics staff at SIU-C is an inter-dependent group of people, he said. When lifeguards join the staff—as 13 recently have—veteran guards are quick to accept them.

"There's a lot of cohesiveness in the staff because the guards have to depend on each when they're working together," he said. "One person can't do everything from the chair."

Luy Herrera, an SIU-C lifeguard, said he has made numerous saves.

"I've done everything from taking care of cuts and bruises to doing CPR, diving for bodies and helping drunks," he said.
