Commissioner offers to resign

By Chad Anderson
Staff Reporter

During his formal apology to the city of Carbondale and SIUC at an Undergraduate Student Government meeting Wednesday, Housing Commissioner Andrew Ensor said he had no complaints if a vote of no confidence was pursued against him.

Ed Sawyer, USG president said Ensor had felt that if the senate did not trust him, he would simply walk away.

"He just felt it was something he had to say, because some of the senators were a little overwhelmed by the resolution," Sawyer said.

No vote has yet taken place, but the concern about the extreme actions Ensor was pursuing in his resolution angered some USG senators.

"People (senators) were upset with his actions, but impeachment may be a little extreme," Jenny Rubin, USG senator, said.

The senate moved to strike the last paragraph from Ensor's resolution at the meeting, which took place in the Student Center. That paragraph contained the invitation to universities in the surrounding five states and to MTV.

In its place, USG inserted a closing sentence asking University Housing to review their visitation policy.

Dave Erickson, USG Thompson Point representative, said he was opposed to the original resolution, but since the part he was opposed to was struck from it, he was for the resolution now.

"I was opposed to it. Not the idea, but the extremes it went to," Erickson said. "Now, I just really want to fight so SIU students can go from dorm to dorm."

Erickson also said USG is a little more careful about their resolutions.

"We're all worried about taking to extremes. We'll be more

Students contest proposed law school tuition hike

By Marc Chase
Senior Reporter

The President of the SIUC Student Bar Association says he is opposed to a proposed 14.9-percent tuition increase for the SIU School of Law because the University has not shown how past increases have benefited the school.

According to the Notice of Tuition Rate Increases For Fiscal Year 1996, which SIU Chancellor James Brown presented to the Board of Trustees at their last meeting, the proposed law school increase is necessary to expand its facilities and make it more competitive with similar programs in the state.

Stephen Friedel, bar association president and a law student at SIU, spoke in protest of the tuition increase before the board.

Friedel said considering SIU law students already paid a 15-percent increase for fiscal year 1995, and the administration has not shown how the new money is being spent, a new increase for fiscal year 1996 is unjustified.

"Because the administration has not been forthcoming to either the faculty or the students on how they spend money, I have had to fight for bits of information that I should have access to, so that I can be an advisor on issues which have already been decided," Friedel said. "In my heart of hearts I don't believe for a second that anything that I say here, no matter how rational or valid it may be, will cause any of you (board members) to so much as blink before you vote in favor of raising our tuition another 14.9 percent."

William Norwood, board member, said he disputed Friedel's comment because most law school students do not ask the University how their tuition money will be spent before they pay it.

Friedel said law school students would not be opposed to a 3.5-percent increase, such as the one proposed for main campus students, since it keeps pace with rising inflation in the state.

He also said the increase, justified by the SIUC administration as helping the school keep pace with other

Hispanic heritage celebrated

Mayor announces month-long festivities

University and city officials recognized the Hispanic student population on campus while kicking off Hispanic Heritage Month with a proclamation ceremony Thursday.

Mortisha Rogers, president of the Hispanic Student Council, said she believes the ceremony at the Student Center was successful and inspiring.

"This month is not just for Hispanic students," Rogers said. "It gives the whole University the opportunity to enrich themselves with different cultures."

Mayor Neil Dillard presented the city proclamation to Rogers, acknowledging the University's participation in the event and this year's theme of, "Hispanic Vision — Future Challenges and Opportunities."

Dillard's proclamation stated: "Our knowledge and understanding of Hispanic history provides for personal and intellectual development, advances communication and understanding between individuals and families, school, community, state, nation and the world; and . . . the Hispanic presence and contributions to our community and the region become greater each day."

Dillard encouraged all community members to participate in at least some of the events, to learn about another culture and discuss issues of mutual interest.

"We see not only at SIU and Carbondale, but in the entire country, the Hispanic influence taking place, assimilating their culture to ours, which is basically a melting pot," Dillard said.

"As a University, part of our task is to help improve the educational level, so many can return to their native countries and improve the economic and standard of

Clinton seeks support for invasion of Haiti

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON—In laying out his argument for a U.S. invasion of Haiti, President Clinton Thursday offered the nation four reasons for action: to protect Haitians' human rights, to restore their democracy, to prevent a flood of refugees — and to preserve the United States' credibility.

Three of those four arguments add up to a distinctly untraditional, post-Cold War rationale for U.S. military action. Never before has the United States gone to war to stop refugees from coming to its shores. Rarely have human rights and democracy been the central aims of a military expedition.

Perhaps because he is taking the nation to battle on such unfamiliar ground, Clinton has had little success so far in winning public support. Polls show huge majorities of the public oppose invading Haiti and Democratic leaders in Congress admit that there is little support for the action on Capitol Hill.

HAPPY MEAL? MCDONALD'S SERVES ALCOHOL — RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil — The McDonald's corporation gave its Rio restaurants permission to serve alcohol after Brazilian franchisees and managers of company-owned restaurants insisted. The first McDonald's to embark on the transformation was in a poor community called Casbia in the northeast part of the city. Since the Happy Hours started earlier this year, about 200 people have crowded into the restaurant every Friday and Saturday from 7 p.m. to midnight to listen to music, have a beer with friends and eat Brazilian delicacies not found on U.S. menus. A company official said serving alcohol with meals is just part of Brazilian culture, so the corporation allowed it.

REBELLION BEGINS IN MEXICAN COMMUNITY — SAN JUAN CHAMULA, Mexico — For two decades, powerful pro-government Chamula Indian leaders in this fertile, isolated swath of southern Mexico's Chiapas state have violently expelled members of their pious, conservative community who dared to differ. Those who converted to Protestantism or, worse, to opposition politics — those who challenged the established order in any way — were cast out. At least 25,000 people, more than a third of the community's population of 70,000, have been expelled, according to human rights activists. And all seemed to accept their fate, until now. Inspired by a Mayan rebellion earlier this year that shook Mexico to the core, hundreds of Chamula exiles have taken matters into their own hands and for the first time are returning home.

FTC SUSPECTS ONLINE ADVERTISING FRAUD — WASHINGTON — After advertising a $99 booklet on how to repair a bad credit history on a computer bulletin board, Brian Corzine got a call from the Federal Trade Commission. When an FTC employee saw Corzine's message about the booklets on America Online, the agency charged Corzine in a civil suit with making deceptive advertising claims. He is the first person to be targeted for false advertising on an on-line computer service. Corzine agreed to stop the practice and to repay consumers for any of the booklets he sold. He said he did not realize his claims were inaccurate or illegal.

STUDY SHOWS RACIAL INCOME GAP WIDENING — WASHINGTON — The income gap between black and white families in America has grown over the past two decades, the Census Bureau reports. In a statistical report prepared for Congress, the agency said this week that median income among black families was 54 percent of the median income for white families in 1992, compared with 61 percent in 1969. The widening of the gap was due largely to the increase in black female-headed families, where poverty rates are high. However, black married couples earned 80 percent as much as white married couples in 1992, up from 72 percent in 1969.

WORKER-PROTECTION BILL REACHES SENATE — WASHINGTON — A bipartisan group of lawmakers is cranking up pressure on Senate leaders to schedule a vote on House-passed legislation that would force Congress to live under the worker-protection laws it imposes on other employers. The legislation, approved overwhelmingly by the House last month, would put the nearly 40,000 employees of Congress and its support agencies under 10 federal labor and civil-rights laws.

JURY INDICTS FORMER UNITED WAY OFFICIAL — On Tuesday, a federal grand jury in Alexandria, Va., charged former United Way of America President William Aramony and two top aides with taking hundreds of thousands of dollars from the charity he founded and using the money on gambling trips, European vacations, condominiums and payments to a former girlfriend. The indictment also charges Aramony with lying to United Way of America board members and destroying documents to cover up his deeds. As local organizations prepare to launch their annual fundraising drive, officials have expressed fears that the indictment could affect donors' willingness to give.

History to come alive in debate reenactment

By Dean Weaver
Senior Reporter

Southern Illinoisians will have a chance to hear the issue of institutional slavery debated this weekend at Lincoln Park in Jonesboro, and C-SPAN will be there to document the event.

Jonesboro is the site of the third in a series of seven reenacted debates between Abraham Lincoln and Stephen A. Douglas that originally took place 136 years ago.

David Greenspan, press specialist for the Cable-Satellite Public Affairs Network, said C-SPAN decided to recreate the debates to celebrate the network's 15th anniversary.

"The education theme lies under all of these debates, because when they are over, C-SPAN will have the only video records of the event," he said.

Greenspan said C-SPAN, a non-for-profit nationwide cable broadcaster of public affairs, is intensely interested in educating students and wants teachers to use the network's programming in their classrooms.

John Y. Simon, an SIUC history professor and academic advisor to C-SPAN for the debates, said the debates will show people the differences in the politics of today versus politics in 1858.

"The debate in Jonesboro lasted three hours in 1858 and focused solely on the issue of slavery and whether it should be allowed to extend into the free territories of Kansas and Nebraska," Simon said. "Watching this will make people wonder if the debates held today are the best way to let the voters know about the candidates and the issues."

Greenspan said Lincoln challenged Douglas to 100 debates throughout the state of Illinois in his bid for U.S. Senator, and Douglas responded to his challenge by agreeing to debate him once in each of the seven districts in which they had not yet appeared.

Lincoln and Douglas already had debated in two of the state's nine districts, once in Chicago and once in Springfield, he said.

Simon said the Jonesboro debate was the only one where Lincoln had little if any support from the Democratic crowd.

He said there were only 1,500 spectators in the crowd, which made the debate the most sparsely attended of the Illinois debates.

Simon said Douglas, who was the incumbent and had held the Senate seat since 1846, was in favor of popular sovereignty, which would allow the people of the territories to decide if they wanted to allow slavery.

Lincoln said the territories should remain slave-free, because the U.S. Constitution made no provisions for slavery, he said.

Simon said the voters of Illinois did not vote directly for Lincoln or Douglas, but during the November election of 1858, voted for state legislators, who voted for the senator in January.

Pakistani university will lose SIUC agricultural technology

By Diane Dove
Staff Reporter

An agricultural university in Pakistan now has updated facilities, thanks to help from SIUC professors and other faculty members.

Due to recent legislation, however, the program that made it possible for the University to help the Islamic nation ended last month, just before its final phase was to begin.

In a project that began in 1984, faculty from SIUC, along with individuals from the University of Illinois in Urbana-Champaign, assisted the Northwest Frontier Province Agriculture University in Peshawar in becoming self sufficient.

Oval Myers, Jr., an SIUC plant and soil sciences professor, returned to the University in July after spending 33 months in Pakistan as an institution development specialist.

Myers said the program ended after its second phase because of the Pressler Amendment.

"The Pressler Amendment says the United States will not provide assistance to countries that have a nuclear capability," he said. "It singled out Pakistan."

Myers said the project, called the TIPAN Initiative (Transformation and Integration for the Provincial Agricultural Network), was an institution building project involving the help of 12 SIUC faculty and administrators during the past decade.

"Our role (in this project) was to help this young university collaborate with a research system (the Provincial Extension System) in that province so that it could better serve the needs of the agricultural community," he said. "We helped them approach international standards and strengthen their capability so they could do things on their own."

Although he was disappointed with the Cultural understanding, international relations result from assistance

By Diane Dove

Working in Pakistan to assist an agricultural university in upgrading was beneficial for faculty and staff at SIUC, University professors say.

Professor Oval Myers, Jr., of the plant and soil science department, said the instructors gained from their work with the Pakistani university by learning how to relate with international students at SIUC more effectively.

"This kind of project allows faculty to develop an international expertise that they can bring with them into the classroom," he said. "It will help us to serve the international community and put international problems into perspective."

Myers was one of several SIUC professors assisting Northwest Frontier Province Agriculture University in Peshawar under the cancellation of the final phase of the project. Myers said the project's successes help soften the blow.

"Before the project, there was an absence of higher education in agriculture in the province and in the country," he said. "This

Netsch criticizes opponent, defends programs

By Aaron Butler
Staff Reporter

Dawn Clark Netsch defended her view of higher education at a press conference in Herrin Thursday, where she was addressing the economic problems of Southern Illinois.

Jim Edgar has accused Netsch, the Democrat contender for governor, of ignoring higher education in favor of elementary and high school programs. Netsch pointed out that until this year, higher education funding had been on a three year decline.

"Suddenly, election year comes along, and Edgar introduces a bill raising higher education funding," said Netsch. "The increase was passed, thanks to Democrat support, but it is ironic that Edgar claims to be the watchdog of education—considering his previous record."

"I believe that higher education is important, and my background shows that," she said. "But if we don't take care of elementary and high schools, we will have no foundation to build from, and we will never get Illinois back on track."

Netsch said she was concerned with the lack of attention Edgar has given Southern Illinois. She referred specifically to the loss of 200 potential jobs in January, involving a new line of Maytag washing machines that the area tried to attract. "Governor Edgar forgot about Southern Illinois until election time," she said.

"(He) has shown a pattern of negligence and indifference to the economic and working conditions of working people in Southern Illinois."

Becky Enrietta, campaign

spokesperson for Governor Edgar, said the governor's record speaks for itself.

"Questions should be asked about Netsch's record," said Enrietta.

"The Governor believes in funding tied to increased performance, while Netsch wants to just throw money into the system."

Netsch criticized Edgar for his handling of an effort to draw a Hudson Foods chicken processing plant to Harrisburg.

"Edgar simply did not do enough," said Netsch. "We had water, people, and resources, but somehow the plant ended up less than sixty miles away in Kentucky."

Donna Norton, Executive Director of Carbondale Business Development Corporation, said Edgar was not directly at fault in the loss of the Hudson foods plant.

"The Harrisburg location did not have adequate water, nor did it have access to a railway," said Norton.

Norton also said Edgar has helped Carbondale retain local industry.

"When Tesa Tape began looking for a new location, Edgar offered them money to train new employees, and low interest loans," she said.

New EPA study burns proposed incinerator

THE PROPOSED INCINERATOR AT THE CRAB Orchard National Wildlife Refuge, like toxic incinerators, poses a health hazard for the surrounding communities in Southern Illinois. Unlike those incinerators, this one is just proposed, meaning it has not been built nor should it.

The proposed incinerator, which is a U.S. Environmental Protection Superfund project, would be built between Carbondale and Marion inside the refuge. This incinerator would burn PCB-contaminated soil that lies imbedded in a few places inside the refuge and is off-limits to roaming humans.

However, the Crab Orchard Refuge incinerator debate is not so much about the soil but is instead about the harmful side effects and emissions of burning the contaminated soil. According to the EPA, when contaminated soil is burned or incinerated, dioxin and other compounds are emitted into the air through smoke. These dioxins become lodged in animal fat tissues and tiny amounts are found in meat like beef and fish as well as milk and cheese, among others.

EARLIER THIS WEEK, THE EPA RELEASED A study, or reassessment, of dioxin — a class of chlorinated hydrocarbons produced largely as a byproduct of combustion of waste and some industrial processes — and declared that dioxin is linked to cancer and a number of other health problems. These other health problems include hormone disorders and suppression of immune-system functions.

As scientists, environmentalists, industry members and government representatives begin to debate the new data and figures on the health hazards of dioxin, something is clear: Overwhelming data support that dioxin is a potential health hazard, and therefore, the Crab Orchard incinerator should not be built and other alternative methods should be seriously considered.

ACCORDING TO THE EPA, CITIZENS ARE exposed to dioxin in small quantities—only 30 pounds of dioxins and related compounds are emitted annually from burning municipal and industrial waste in the U.S. But as ordinary citizens and representatives from several local environmental groups are becoming increasingly concerned over this incinerator proposal, the EPA and government officials are still in favor of this burning method.

If all the data and facts are correct about dioxin getting into the food supply through the air, land and water, Southern Illinoisans should be concerned about the possible contamination of agriculture and livestock that maintains the economy in this area if such an incinerator is built.

Letters to the Editor

Dorm restrictions are beneficial

As a graduate and current student of SIUC, I am deeply disturbed and embarrassed by the remarks made by Andrew Ensor in the Sept. 13 issue of the DE. As hard as SIU has worked over the years to purge the party reputation away from the university, I find it difficult to understand why a member of USG would want to turn back the clock and attempt to restore such an ugly tradition.

Mr. Ensor, I am sure that the schools in your resolution are already aware of SIU's Halloween tradition, and I would hope MTV would have better things to do besides showing a bunch of reckless, underage drunkards wobble down the strip and babble incoherently (although that would be a pretty big hope concerning MTV). Besides, a resolution is supposed to resolve something, not add to the problems, and this so called resolution would not solve anything. Instead it is like a child, screaming and kicking until it gets what it wants. If you really want to propose a resolution Mr. Ensor, propose something with answers or suggestions, not angry threats. If this is truly USG's idea of a student commissioner or representative, then I do not think I would want to be a part of what he represents.

Ensor also says "there is no security risk (with visitors in the dorms)" and that "University Housing is one of the quietest places in town on Halloween." First of all, there is a security risk anytime a stranger walks into a residence hall, Halloween or not. Second, try sitting down in one of the tower lobbies between 9 p.m. and 3 a.m. and quiet will be the last thing you get.

And as far as "damn well consulting us before stepping on our heads," maybe if Mr. Ensor starts showing some respect, logical thought, and comes up with some decent suggestions instead of ranting and raving, he may be consulted in the future with concerns over university housing matters.

—Steve Lange, graduate student, Curriculum & Instruction

Halloweenfest needs to be dumped

I have a few comments in regard to the article titled "USG against restricting Halloween Visitors." Mr. Ensor, do you honestly believe the University's only goal in restricting visitors Halloween weekend is to please the city of Carbondale?

You speak as though you have never tried to get a job outside of the non-paid student government organization you belong. Most employers outside of Southern Illinois have heard of SIU, and they conjure up images of drunken students at Springfest and Halloween rolling cars over, starting fires, and ruining the town in which they attend college. You, and your associates, wish to invite students from all over the midwest and even call attention to MTV in hopes that these images of SIU will worsen.

Why? Because you think the student body want one big weekend to show the country what SIU is all about, to have a big Halloween party, and you wish to represent them.

Mr. Jones of University Housing stated that our student body is not responsible for much of the mayhem that occurs on these weekends. I have heard this before, and I hope for our sake it is true. Why, then, should we invite others from distant campuses to come and destroy the town in which we reside?

Mr. Ensor's only sound point in the matter is his defending the housing contracts of students.

Clearly though, this is not his, nor his associates', real purpose in creating the bill. Rather, they wish to make a media frenzy out of one weekend that is better left dead.

I would like to make an appeal to all those in the university who are considering sponsoring the USG originated bill: the legitimate (scholastic centered) student body of SIU—hopes to someday have employers recognize SIU for the excellent academic programs it offers, not Halloweenfest or the trouble making visitors it attracts. Please keep the restriction on Halloween visitors by ruling against the USG bill.

—Mike Osborne, senior, management.

Bike racks provide good parking solution

Thanks for your editorial on bicycles—an obvious and easy part of the solution to the parking solution. Maybe if the university makes enough money from fines for mis-parked bikes, they'll spring for some new bike racks. I would like to put in a request for the deluxe model: that it would be easier to ride bikes in the rain, and so that students in the dorms wouldn't have to see their bikes rust. They have such bike ports all over China. They can't be that expensive. Meanwhile, bicyclists may have to come early or settle for parking at a rack some distance from their destination, giving them a conversation topic in common with motorists.

competitive programs, is not justified since the national ranking of the school has declined since 1992.

"In 1992, U.S. News and World Report ranked us as a second tier school," he said.

"In 1993, they ranked us as a third tier school. In 1994, they ranked us as a fourth tier school."

Friedel said U.S. News and World Report ranks law schools on a tier system.

First tier schools are the best, and successive tiers are considered lower quality institutions.

If the proposed tuition increase passes the board in October, tuition will have increased 42 percent between fiscal year 1994 and 1996.

The SIUC Graduate and Professional Student Council representatives voted unanimously at their meeting Wednesday to oppose the tuition increase for the SIUC School of Law.

The council also voted to oppose a 16.9-percent increase for the SIUC School of Medicine in Springfield, because of the excessive cost it would impose on students in the program.

Harry Hayesworth, dean of the SIUC School of Law, was unavailable for comment.

support of a grant from the United States Agency for International Development.

The project was designed to help the Pakistani university expand and modernize so it could serve the needs of the agricultural community within the province, Myers said.

The program's outreach component helped the Pakistani university share its agricultural knowledge and resources with the community, Myers said.

Training, however, probably will be the most significant component in the long run, he said.

Myers said the men and women at the Pakistani university had more interaction in the academic setting than they had in the community.

"From a cultural standpoint, the people were very friendly, but they tended to keep males and females more separated in a social sense," he said.

One feature of the Pakistani culture University professors enjoyed was the consumption of tea, Myers said.

"Pakistan is probably the world's largest consumer of tea per person," he said.

"One of the social customs when you would go to an office was to have a cup of tea, and we would have drunk half of it before we entered into a formal type discussion."

Myers said Pakistanis had a tea for all occasions.

"Tea is a sort of an opener of the discussion when people get together, and there is the social and the business type tea," he said.

Ferrel Olsen, Jr. of the plant and soil science department, said Pakistanis still cling to some old ways of life.

Having returned to SIUC last May after spending 21 months in Pakistan, Olsen said an unusual feature of the Pakistani culture was a blending of old and new technology.

"You'll see TVs, satellite dish antennas, cellular phones, and yet you'll see them adhering to some of the old traditional things like horse carts and people with their donkeys and camels transporting their goods," he said.

"They never completely got rid of the old."

Olsen, who worked as a crop science specialist with the project, said the one of the culture's most positive features was the concept of closeness among the extended family.

"They're very family-oriented," he said. "Here (in the United States) the kids get scattered."

conservative at the next meeting," Erickson said.

The restrictions on Halloween are going to be the same as last year, and the University is not expected to back down on them, according to Erickson.

The policy of visitors not being allowed in the residence halls and students not being able to visit other residence halls is expected to stand.

The resolution was tabled to the next meeting so a lawyer would be able to review the housing contract and determine if a breach of contract had occurred.

"A lot will be based on when the lawyer determines if it's a breach of contract," Erickson said.

The next meeting of the USG is Oct. 21, in Ballroom B at the Student Center.

living for the people of their country, in government, education and business sectors."

Jose Orriola, vice president of the Hispanic Student Council, said it was interesting to listen to the way the speakers expressed the importance of different cultures to our society.

"We all learn from each other," Orriola said.

"Not just from this month, but throughout life. We need to put away the color, races and languages (to do this)," he said.

Seymour Bryson, executive assistant professor of the affirmative action office, spoke on behalf of the University administration.

Bryson said the University has opened its doors to Hispanic students and can learn from their presence.

Events continue Sept. 17 with the Cobden Multicultural Festival in the Cobden Town Square.

Activities are scheduled through Oct. 15.

But one part of Clinton's argument, at least, appears unassailable: his fear that the credibility of the United States would be hurt if he turned away from Haiti now.

Even some of the president's critics acknowledged that Clinton is so heavily committed to ousting Haiti's military regime that hesitation now would make him what one Republican in Congress called "a laughing stock" both at home and abroad.

"Anthony Lake, Clinton's national security adviser, put the credibility argument at the head of his list of reasons for an invasion in a speech earlier this week.

"First is the essential reliability of the United States and the international community," he told the Council on Foreign Relations. "Having exhausted all other remedies, we must make it clear that we mean what we say. Our actions in Haiti will send a message far beyond our region to all who seriously threaten our interests."

Even some foreign officials have echoed that argument. French Foreign Minister Alain Juppe recently told reporters, with a hint of exasperation, that he could not quite understand why the United States has waited so long.

"The signals from the administration have been a little bit contradictory," he said.

To some historians, it seems ironic that Clinton is using the same argument that Lyndon B. Johnson and Richard M. Nixon once employed to keep American troops in Vietnam: a war that Clinton opposed as a young man.

"Nixon used to talk the way Clinton's talking now," said Stephen Ambrose, a historian at the University of New Orleans and author of a recent book on D-Day.

"He said the United States would be a pitiful, helpless giant if we didn't stay in Vietnam."

And it is equally ironic that Clinton's Republican opponents sometimes sound like the peaceniks of old: "Credibility lost by political bungling should not be redeemed by American blood," Sen. Dan Coats, R-Ind., said this week.

particular university is now one of three in (Pakistan) that can give advanced degrees and is supposed to be a major training area for people who go into the various disciplines in agriculture."

The facilities at the Pakistani university, which now handle 1,000 students, were supposed to expand to serve double that amount by the year 2000, Myers said.

"Having just left there, it could, in fact, handle that number," he said.

The project involved working with the NWFP faculty "to help them develop their agricultural, teaching and research skills," Myers said.

Myers said SIUC and the U of I were supported in the project by the United States Agency for International Development, which gave the Pakistani government $55 million for the initiative.

"This is the second major project we've collaborated on with U of I," he said.

"We won the bid to design and implement the project from USAID based on our ideas and a written presentation."

Goals achieved by the project include:

- a linkup between the agricultural university and Pakistani farmers for sharing information and technological resources;

- training of NWFP faculty to the master's and doctorate levels;
- construction of new buildings for teaching, research and outreach; and
- providing of technical assistance and equipment for the university, Myers said.

Professor Farrel Olsen, Jr., of the plant and soil sciences department, said the agricultural university's improvements were apparent during his stay in Pakistan.

"When the project started there were only three women attending the university," he said. "There were 95 when it ended."

Olsen said the increase in Pakistani women in higher education reflects "a recognition on the part of the educated elite that women need to play more of a role in building the society."

Starlight express: Roller dancers skate into Carbondale to perform

By Kellie Huttes
Senior Reporter

The New York Express dance troupe will be rolling their act into the SIUC Student Center tonight.

The troupe, a one-of-a-kind roller dance company, combines ballet, hip-hop, jazz music and dance moves all on in-line and traditional roller skates.

Joanne Yantis, SIUC University programming coordinator, said the show comes highly recommended from other campuses across the nation.

"I talked to my colleagues at campuses all over, and I heard the show is hot," she said.

"They raved about the show and said students give it a standing ovation."

Yantis said the show should appeal to students, because in-line skates and roller blades are a popular form of transportation and physical activity.

"This is a new dimension for roller blades," she said.

"The show will interest college students as well as families."

Steve Love, founder and choreographer of the show, said he enjoyed roller skating as a child and later became heavily involved with dance.

Love, a former street performer, who formed the troupe in 1985, appears with gymnasts, former Broadway artists and musical performers.

"We perform with absolute comfort and freedom on wheels," he said. "We'll be doing a lot of jazz (dances) and jamming with the people — we'll even give a little demonstration on how we do some of our moves."

Charlotte Britton, the troupe's agent, said the group has entertained celebrities such as Hillary Clinton and Elizabeth Taylor at New York City's Guggenheim Museum, performed for the Macy's parades and traveled around the world.

The group will be going to Taiwan in October and currently is negotiating an entertainment agreement with Switzerland.

Yantis said the show, which begins at 7 p.m., will last about 90 minutes and will be in Student Center Ballrooms C and D.

Tickets for SIUC students and children are $4 and $6 for the general public.

University Programming works with the Student Programming Committee (SPC) and brings in performing arts and programs offered to students and the public at affordable prices, Yantis said.

Other events scheduled this month are the Taste of Latin America and the Los Lobos concert.

Police use safety checks to remind drivers of laws

By Connie Fritsche
Staff Reporter

As the fall and winter seasons approach, drivers should be aware of increased attempts by state police to enforce vehicle safety through the use of roadside safety checks.

Trooper Roger Webb, safety education officer with the Illinois State Police, said the checks are not necessarily designed to serve as a deterrent of illegal action, but more as a reminder to obey the law.

"They (roadside safety checks) serve as a reminder that we're out there and that (at) any time and in any place, you could come across one," he said.

He said law enforcement steps up safety checks to one or two a month during the fall and winter because of the amount of holiday traffic.

During a safety check, officers look for valid driver's licenses, seat belt use, valid insurance cards, possible alcohol use, and good equipment, such as headlights, tail lights, and blinkers.

"People need to make sure their equipment is in good working order, that they are wearing seat belts, and not drinking because they could come to a safety check at any time and it (the consequence) is just not worth it," he said.

Webb said the most frequent offenses are equipment violations and passengers not using their seat belts. He said there also are some alcohol violations.

"We get a little bit of everything," he said.

Although officers have final discretion in issuing a warning versus a ticket, Webb said there is a high probability that an officer will give a ticket for a violation found during a safety check.

He said that quite a few warnings and tickets are issued during a check, but there are not many custodial arrests because people who know they are wanted don't usually go through the checks. The number of arrests also varies with time and location. He said if a person is arrested, the car is taken and the contents are inventoried.

"They (roadside safety checks) serve as a reminder that we're out there."

— Roger Webb

Webb said that an actual search of a car is not likely unless there is probable cause to suspect a violation.

"If we smell alcohol on someone's breath, we may look for open containers," he said.

Webb said the laws on searching a vehicle are similar to the laws on searching a residence, but more is in clear view since a car is so open.

Patrolman Don Priddy, community resource officer with the Carbondale Police Department, said they do safety checks on an average of four times a year. He said they look for the same kinds of offenses the state police do.

Priddy said the department makes a few Driving Under the Influence arrests during the checks.

The department usually issues notices for lack of seat belt use and warnings for faulty equipment, he said.

Weekend Spotlight

Cajun sound to hit Hanger

By Paul Eisenberg
Entertainment Editor

The setup sounds familiar — two guitars, two drummers, a bass player and a keyboard player. Having two guitarists in one band is common. Having two drummers is not.

The most notable band with this setup is the Grateful Dead. Burdened in the wake that band's popularity is Blue Dixie, who will be playing at Hangar 9 Saturday night.

The band hails from St. Louis, but had its origins in Columbia Mo. as a Grateful Dead cover band.

Lead guitar player Brad Sarno said while the band still enjoys going to Dead concerts, they no longer cover any of Garcia and company's songs.

"Our shows are 90 percent original," Sarno said. "We may do a David Byrne song or something from the Rolling Stones, but almost all the stuff we do is original."

Sarno said although the band started out as a Dead cover band, members have since felt the need to move on to other things.

"There's lots of Dead cover bands out there," he said. "We felt we needed to explore different areas."

He said the band's two new singles are opening up a new vein for the band.

"They're more whole, more evolved," he said. "They're more ourselves."

Despite being likened to Jerry Garcia for much of his early career, Sarno said his biggest guitar influence is Albert King.

Blue Dixie lead singer Chopper said an important part of the show is the improvisation works into many of the songs.

Because the band improvises during its live performances, he said, members are continually improving.

"What it does is it helps you listen," he said. "You can't go in with preset ideas. You have to really listen to everyone else and let the ideas come."

He said the improvised sections are enhanced by the two drummer setup.

"The possibilities are endless," he said. "It's the same setup as the Grateful Dead, but we do a lot of stuff they would not do, we use different kinds of rhythms they would not do. Where they do a lot of Cajun stuff, like 'Aiko Aiko' and 'The Women are Smarter,' we are expanding more on the ethnic rhythms."

Chopper said his main vocal influence is Stevie Wonder.

"I'm not Bob Weir," he said. "I don't try to be."

DJ realizes dreams

Local personality uses personal style

By Aleksandra Macys
Senior Reporter

DJ Harry Klein, better known as Professor 50s, acquires his stage name seven years ago after he performed for the first time as a DJ during a benefit at PK's, 308 S. Illinois Ave., for a girl who lost her leg in a hit and run accident.

"I had to borrow and rent equipment (for the benefit,) but I had a reputation as the knowledgeable guy about oldies," Klein said.

After the benefit, Klein said he "got bit by the bug" because becoming a DJ was his lifelong dream.

Klein also fulfilled another lifelong dream when he bought 2nd Chance Record Store, 214 W. Freeman.

He was hired as the manager there eight years ago when he moved to Carbondale from Kenosha, Wis., and part of the hiring policy was that he would be able to eventually purchase the store.

"I'm proud of 2nd Chance as it's growing and developing into my vision of an excellent used (music) store with quantity and quality," he said.

Klein said he wanted to call the store Euphorious Emporium, but people did not like the name or know what it meant.

Because Klein is so busy with the store, he said he may cut back on DJ work in about one year. He said he may like to open another store.

"I have enough records to open another store," Klein said.

Klein said although his specialty is '50s and '60s music, he has respect for other types of music as well.

Klein said that it took him awhile to realize that he is hired as an entertainer and he has to appeal to the audience by playing all types of music.

Klein said his favorite music and the turning point towards music being central in his life was Elvis Presley's 1956 release of Heartbreak Hotel.

"Rock and roll became a much more important part of my life," Klein said. "I started buying and collecting records and I wanted to be the guy who brought the coolest records to a party."

His collection has grown over the years and he said he has more than 400 CDs and 1,000 records.

Klein said he tries to keep up with new music, but much of it is not the type of music he enjoys.

Entertainment Briefs

● The early bird: The Reba McIntire, John Michael Montgomery, John Berry concert is now sold-out. More tickets may be released. For more info call the Arena Hotline at 453-5341.

● Calling all tubas: 100 tuba and euphonium players are needed for an Oct. 10 concert celebrating International Tuba Day. Those who participate will earn a free ticket to the Sam Pillian Travelin' Light concert that night. For more information, contact Robert Weiss at 536-8742.

● Off Broadway: Tickets are on sale for the first stage plays of the season. The Stage Co. presents Henrik Isben's "Hedda Gabler" beginning on Sept. 30. Call 549-5466 for tickets or information. The SIUC Theater Department is presenting Chekov's "The Seagull," which opens Sept. 22. Call 453-3001 for tickets and info.

● They're back: "The Binds II," a sequel to the 1963 Hitchcock horror classic, is planned for a straight to video release, and is expected in stores Nov. 23. Tippi Hedron, heroine of the original production, will return to a cast featuring Brad Johnson, Chelsea Field, and James Naughton.

● Ye Olde Pluck and Draw: The Old Time Fiddle and Banjo Contest is occurring Saturday at 6 p.m. at the Murphysboro Apple Fest "Appletime Stage." For more info call 684-6421.

● More Draw: Pinch Penny Pub is hosting the Half Way to Saint Patty's Day Party Saturday night with musical guests The Dorians. Irish stew and corn beef and cabbage are on the menu, along with Irish coffee and Killians Irish Red.

● New Releases: Due on Tuesday, new releases from Slayer, Danzig, Liz Phair, DaDa, Dillon Fence, Brian Ferry, Thug Lice, Pop Will Eat Itself, and a Smashing Pumpkins video.

The List

Senior entertainment reporter Aleksandra Macys' top five lesser-known blues artists who should be heard:

1. Louline Dupree — check her out at Kingston Mines in Chicago if you ever get a chance. Has released two tapes.

2. Jimmy "Fastfingers" Dawkins — has released a couple of albums that everybody who enjoys the blues should have.

3. Jimmy Vaughn — yes, he's Stevie's brother and just as good.

4. John Campbell — recently died at an early age, but the two albums he released are worth hearing.

5. Johnny "Guitar" Watson — one of the trend-setters of rockin' blues.

PROFESSOR, from page 8

"There's always something I like coming along, but the generation gap doesn't allow me to know why a certain group is popular," he said. Klein said even though he may not understand why a group is popular, he is expected to be knowledgeable about all kinds of music. "I feel like it's my responsibility to know about different types of music or at least look up an answer to a question someone may have," he said. Professor 50s can be seen at PK's on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings and can also be found at 2nd Chance. Store hours are 10 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. Saturdays and 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sundays.

SIUC students and another former student to comment on the debates after their conclusion on C-SPAN. Greenspan said C-SPAN will begin broadcasting a preview to the debates at noon on Saturday with the debate beginning at 2 p.m. He predicted the debate would last three hours like the original. Simon said people attending the debate can dress in 1858 period clothing and be included on C-SPAN's broadcast, but they still will be able to watch the debate in regular clothing. The event has free shuttle buses, free parking, food vendors and music on the square in Jonesboro. For more information, call 1-800-248-4373 or 1-618-833-2712.

Benefit to pay day care debt, save center

By Paul Eisenberg
Entertainment Editor

Concerned parents and community members will gather Saturday at Boobys Sandwich Shop for a benefit supporting a financially troubled day care center.

Carolyn Goering, owner of Boobys, 406 S. Illinois, said she put the event together because the Gilbert Bradley Day Care Center is in jeopardy of being closed down.

"I took an active interest because my daughter attends," Goering said. "If the problems were financial, I thought this was the logical thing to do."

Operators of the center owe more than $1,400 in back rent to the First Baptist Church in Carbondale, and the church is calling for payment by Oct. 1.

Center Director Denise Mezo said the facility was behind on rent payment because of low enrollment caused by a lack of qualified teachers.

"Right now we're trying to work on coming out in the black," she said.

Laurie Mertz, assistant director, said they now employ five full-time teachers and two part-time assistants.

Tom Connelley, of Carter and Connelley who will be performing at the event, said this shows that the community is interested in supporting the center.

"The families are really interested in keeping this thing going," he said. "It seems like the church is not willing to help. It just shows that there's community support for this type of day care center."

"It seems like the church is not willing to help."

—Tom Connelley

Along with Carter and Connelley, the Dorians and the Gravediggers will provide musical entertainment.

Raffle tickets will be sold at three for a dollar. Prizes donated by area businesses include a microwave oven, a Diamond Back 18-speed mountain bike and gift certificates from Plaza Records, Harbrens, Fishnet and On A Roll.

"It's looking real good," Goering said. "It's conceivable we could raise $1,500," she said. "People were really generous. I'm glad about the support of locally owned businesses. That's important."

Goering will provide free hot dogs and bratwurst at the event.

"We just hope the community will come out and help us," Mezo said. "We hope people will back us up on this."

The event will be held from 3 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Greek system not just a party

By Stephanie Moletti
Senior Reporter

Finding friendship and a place to belong can be hard at a university the size of SIUC, but joining the Greek system has provided these benefits for some students and continues to draw students each semester.

John Hetherington, an SIUC assistant professor of psychology, said from a social psychology point of view, there are three reasons for group affiliation.

"The first is fulfilling social needs, a need for affiliation, belonging, affection and security.

"People have a need to belong," Hetherington said. "Research has shown that the close knit nature (of the Greek system) provides some type of surrogate family — it's like what you'd get from your own family."

Hetherington said examples of the family nature include a schedule or routine, indicating that need.

"Some people don't need that structure," he said.

The second reason is the resource theory.

"Joining groups provides the opportunity to capitalizing on resources, socialize, access to information and resources through competitive reasons," he said.

The third is the formation and maintenance of a positive social identity.

"There's a certain prestige (from joining a group) and social recognition," Hetherington said. "The more difficult it is to become a member, like the Greek system with the selection and lengthy pledge process, the higher the social identity."

Hetherington said within the Greek system there are different social identities, such as academic, athletic and religious. These differences enable students to choose which group or race affiliation they feel comfortable with.

"It's selecting the identity you like or want to improve on," he said.

Hetherington said for some people the issues of privacy, territory and self identity apart from the social identity influence could influence their decision in joining a fraternity or sorority.

Marla Hudson, a junior in electrical engineering from Chicago and a member of the Delta Sigma Theta sorority, said she liked the brotherhood and sisterhood aspect of the Greek system.

"What appealed to me most was the way they did everything as a unit, as one," Hudson said. "I like what they stand for, for community involvement and public service."

Milan Parekh, a junior in mechanical engineering technology from Buffalo Grove, one of the founding fathers of the Sigma Nu fraternity, said he joined a fraternity because he wanted to try something different.

"I was getting tired of the regular stuff, all people do (at SIUC) is go to the bars and get hammered," Parekh said. "The Greek system has a lot more to offer than the school. We do a lot of community work and you meet friends for life, people you can trust — brothers."

Parekh said the system provides students with the opportunity to do more for their community and the University.

"A lot of incoming freshman join because they can't get into the bars (with the recent hike in entry age), but once they get in, they realize there is a lot more to the Greek system than partying," he said. "It teaches discipline, leadership, respect and brotherhood."

Hetherington said the amount of effort which is put forth to become a member affects the cohesiveness of a group or how well they stick together.

"The method of jumping through the hoops, so to speak, enhances self concept and commitment and cohesion from its members," he said.

Karin Zaborowski, a freshman in psychology from Addison and a Delta Zeta pledge, said she joined the system to get involved and meet people.

"It's not just dances and parties, it's doing things for the community and meeting people, being part of a group," Zaborowski said. "I hope to be a good influence on people and become a leader."

Scott Ross, a senior in marketing from Roseville and president of the Sigma Pi fraternity said the system gives students the opportunity to make connections they can use throughout life.

"When freshmen come down here, they are in a different place away from home," Ross said. "It (the Greek system) gives them a chance to interact and meet a lot of people just by going through rush. It helps to make students feel a little more at home on campus."

Ross said he made the decision to rush while he was still in high school. He visited a friend in a fraternity at the University of Illinois. Ross said the fraternity took him and about 14 of his friends for the weekend.

"They were cool guys and we had a lot of fun," Ross said. "So I had already decided to rush before I got here and just going through rush I met about 2,000 people in a week."

Ryan Mecum, a junior in pre-med from Bloomington, just went through fall rush for the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity.

"I was looking for something worthwhile and wanted to meet new people," Mecum said. "I wanted to build a name by getting involved. This isn't like high school, you don't see the same people every day."

Mecum said he believes the Greek system is "on the rise."

"I think there's a big conspiracy within the University toward the Greek system, they (University officials) want to bring the system down because of the community image," Mecum said. "The Greeks have a bad image among people."

Michelle Fiduccia, a junior in social work from Addison and a Sigma Kappa pledge, said she has a close friend from kindergarten days in the Greek system and decided to try it out for herself.

"I liked the feeling of being involved," Fiduccia said. "I don't have a job right now and I wanted something to keep me busy. I think a made a lot of friends along the way."

Craft Shop offers art lessons

By Charlotte Rivers
Campus Life Editor

Jeff Evertz, a senior in art from Hinsdale and also an employee of the Craft Shop in the Student Center, instructs Kent Arnold, a junior in physiology from Murphysboro, on how to make a pot Wednesday evening.

"It's a one day schedule," he said. "Everything's set up and ready to go when the students come in."

Morrissey, who usually teaches two classes a semester, said students take classes for enjoyment.

"Must have no previous experience," he said. "But there's no chance you're going to walk in and not learn anything. But it's fun; people take the class because they aren't getting a grade."

Students in the class, which is limited to eight, design and construct their own beads, working with torches, canes and glass.

"The glass is wrapped around the cane and heated," he said. "All of a sudden it starts to move. Some of the students get really good at making beads. They get really elaborate."

Laura Riesel, a senior in fine arts from Springfield, said SIUC students are not the only ones who take the classes.

"There's a wide variety," Riesel, who teaches drawing and painting, said.

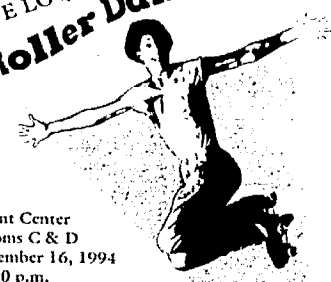

"Last week, which was the first class, we had senior citizens and high school students, too."

Riesel said she is excited about teaching a children's drawing and painting class.

"It's for ages 7 to 12," she said. "I plan to do some different things. Besides simple techniques, like the color wheel and tinting and shading, we'll do mask-making and rock-painting."

The Craft Shop offers one-day and multi-week sessions for children and adults. For more information, call 453-3636.

Local golfers get swinging chance at intramural sports golf tournament

By Chris Clark
Staff Reporter

Members of the SIUC community that would like to try their luck on the links can do so at the intramural sports golf tournament, being held today at Hickory Ridge Golf Course from 7 a.m.-5 p.m.

In the past, the tournament has always been held at Midland Hills Golf Course, but organizers decided to make a change this fall.

Matt Blakey, intramural sports graduate assistant, said the change from Midland Hills to Hickory Ridge was made because it is a new course.

"It's a change of pace, and because it's a new course, it gives everyone a chance to get out and see it," he said.

Although Hickory Ridge is very popular, it is maintained well and will be ready for the tournament.

"The greens are a little rough, but otherwise the course is in really good shape," Jim Chapman, assistant professional at the course said.

Blakey also said that although the tournament will be competitive, the event should not be taken too seriously.

"It gets the faculty, staff and students together on the golf course to have some fun," he said.

Unlike some tournaments, the golfers play the course individually, rather than in a foursome. "The winners will receive an intramural t-shirt.

"The players sign up, play the course and turn their scorecards into me next week. If there is a tie for the winner, they'll each receive a t-shirt," Blakey said.

Every member of the faculty and staff and any SIUC student or grad is eligible for the tournament. Those who wish to play can choose from a nine or 18-hole package, with sign-up available at Hickory Ridge. There is an extra charge for pull and ride carts.

For more information about the tournament, contact intramural sports at 453-1273.

really is," Cornell said.

He said Marneros has a chance to be the best runner on the team and the rest of the squad looks up to him because of his work ethic.

"The team does everything off of Stelios (Marneros), because he works so hard and never complains," Cornell said.

Marneros, who also runs the 5k and 10k during track season, said his only goals in cross country are team oriented.

"The only important goal for this season is that the team makes it to nationals," he said.

Marneros said the main difference between running in Cyprus and the United States is the level of competition.

"The meets are a lot tougher here," he said. "I like running against the best athletes and competition."

Marneros, who is majoring in hotel and restaurant management, said he would eventually like to open up his own restaurant.

"The meets are a lot tougher here. I like running against the best competition."

—Stelios Marneros

"I plan to get my degree and maybe working on my master's before working in a hotel and then hopefully returning to Cyprus to open up my own restaurant," he said.

Marneros and the rest of the squad have their first home meet this Saturday as the University of Illinois, who holds a 16-7 series edge against the Salukis, comes to SIUC for a dual meet.

Cornell said this is always a rivalry and last year SIUC won easily.

"We kind of surprised them last year and won pretty handily, so I think they will be coming for us hard this year," he said.

The Salukis will be returning Neil Emberton, who was out with a leg injury and Dan Mallon, who has not been in running shape.

However, Cornell said Emberton and Mallon can not be expected to be at top form right away.

"They will both be running against Illinois, but they are not in the shape they need to be in," he said.

Martin Fysh, who is still hurting, is questionable for the meet against the Fighting Illini.

The dual meet starts at 10 a.m. Saturday at the campus course located west of Abe Martin Field.

are not on the same level.

Arkansas State has only been a Division I-A team for two years, and the Indians were 2-8-1 last season.

Against SIUC in '93, ASU sloshed its way around a muddy field to a 27-6 victory in the fourth game of the year.

The Indians were unable to win another game until its final contest of the year when ASU edged Nevada, 23-21.

SIUC and Arkansas State both post 0-2 marks heading into Saturday's showdown in Jonesboro and Watson said his team feels like it belongs on the same field with the Indians.

"We're back in our element a little bit this week," he said.

The ASU offense is led by quarterback John Covington, who has completed just 19-48 passes in two games for 137 yards.

However, Watson said Covington can be dangerous when he leaves the pocket and the Saluki defense will have to keep him contained.

"Offensively they (ASU) have a nice quarterback. He's somebody who can make plays by throwing or running the football," he said. "They have a quick, fast tailback also, who we'll have to reckon with."

On defense, the Indians gave up more than 40 points on three separate occasions last year. In its first two games this fall, the ASU unit allowed 34 points to Virginia Tech and 18 to Nevada.

Watson said the Indians do have talent on the defensive side of the ball, though, and it has improved since last year.

"Their (ASU) defensive line seems to be bigger, faster, and stronger than last year and they have a good active group of linebackers," he said.

"Their concern is their secondary, but they have been playing solid for them."

An area away from the field SIUC is looking to improve on while at ASU is the team attitude when it's on the road.

Watson expressed disappointment in the mood of some of his players on the Ole Miss trip, which he said must change in order for the team to be successful.

"It's (road trip) not a day off from school and it's not a vacation. It's a business trip," he said.

"That was an area we harped on a whole lot going into it (Ole Miss) and didn't get the results we wanted.

We'll be better traveling this time because the kids know the personality of this staff. We're going on a business trip."

Kickoff in Jonesboro, Ark. is slated for 6 p.m.

"It is nice to come home and play," she said. "When we go on the road, we have to deal with the crowds, class rescheduling and a number of other distractions.

"When we come home, the burden is eased and the players are a lot more comfortable."

Marketing and Promotions Coordinator Mike Trude said Saluki volleyball is sponsoring a giveaway at the first home game to boost attendance.

"The first 250 people with a paid admission to the game tonight will receive a Saluki volleyball surprise package," he said. "This should bring more students in to the gym to root on the Salukis."

Trude also added that Saturday night is billed as the "Jam the Gym" night at Davis.

"Jam the Gym brought in over 500 people last year, and the noise they created for the team was deafening," he said. "This year, the players have been handing out free passes for the game, and there is a coupon in today's Daily Egyptian that students can use to get into the game for free.

We are looking to fill the gym to capacity, which is 800, for the big match against Southwest Missouri."

Locke said the Salukis need the wins, but more important, she wants to see more consistent play out of the team.

"We are not taking these two games lightly," she said. "We have been inconsistent in every area of our game lately, and I want to see things get better at these matches. I want to see progress."

Senior setter Kim Cassidy and outside hitter Beth Diehl, who were both injured in the Florida State Invitational Sept. 2 and 3, are still questionable for the matches, Locke said.

Scottie Pippen unsure of future as Chicago Bull

The Washington Post

CHICAGO—It's never been easy to categorize Scottie Pippen.

Is he a Chicago Bull? These days, that might be tough to tell. Right now, by contract, he is. But after Bulls General Manager Jerry Krause spent most of the offseason trying to trade Pippen, he feels alienated and bitter toward the only team he has played for during his seven-year career.

He has spent those seven seasons in constant pursuit of respect, emerging from the shadow of Michael Jordan and the pile of criticism that he was too soft to take his place among the game's best players. Now he feels he is receiving treatment that wouldn't be appropriate for a struggling rookie.

"I've got a lot of pride in myself," said Pippen, the youngest of 12 children from obscure Hamburg, Ark. "There's something as a person and a competitor, I've got a lot of pride. To be put in the position that I've been put in all summer, it's kind of been a slap in the face."

Most insulting to him is the lack of communication from Krause and the Bulls' front office.

"Jerry hasn't said a word to me," Pippen said. "He's probably afraid to face me. I know nothing (about the trade situation). Everything that I hear is pretty much rumor. It may be a time for a change of scenery."

The deal that came closest to going down, the one that would have made the most sense for both sides, had Pippen going to Seattle for forward Shawn Kemp and reserve guard Ray Pierce.

New runner honored

Mamerros earns MVC recognition after first meet

Doug Durso
Senior Reporter

Few athletes ever get an award in their four years of competition at the collegiate level, but an SIUC cross country runner received recognition after his first meet.

Stellos Mamerros, a sophomore from Cyprus, was named Missouri Valley Conference Cross Country Athlete of the Week for his effort in his first collegiate race at the Kansas Invitational.

He finished fifth overall with a time of 24:55.9, which is the fastest time recorded by a conference runner this year.

Mamerros said he was happy with his first time of his college career, especially because of the course.

"I thought my time was all right, because the course was very hilly and difficult," he said.

Born in Lmassel, Cyprus, Mamerros came to SIUC because he wanted to earn his degree and run cross country.

"I don't run for any other reason except that I love to run," he said.

Saluki men's cross country coach Bill Cornell said he first heard of Mamerros from an SIUC women's track athlete from Cyprus and recruited him.

Cornell said nobody knows how good Mamerros can really be.

"He is a really good talent and is one of our best runners, but he has not run enough meets for us to see how good he

Saluki football ready to face Arkansas State tomorrow

By Grant Deady
Sports Editor

It is hard to believe things could become any more challenging for the Saluki football team at this point in its schedule.

SIUC lost its opener to Tennessee-Martin 35-26 and rebounded with a trip to Ole Miss, where the Dawgs got pounded 59-3.

And as if heading to Division I-A Arkansas State Saturday was not challenging enough, Saluki head coach Shawn Watson has offered a challenge of his own to the team.

"They (team) had a challenge issued by me and I'm looking forward to seeing how they respond," Watson said.

But when asked exactly what the challenge was, the coach simply smiled and said, "to produce."

The Dawgs were flat-out overwhelmed against Ole Miss, but despite ASU being another Division I-A opponent, the Indians

Netters home opener at Davies Gym

By Sean Walker
Staff Reporter

The Saluki volleyball program comes home to Carbondale this weekend after five straight road games.

The Salukis, who have a 1-4 overall record and are 1-1 in Missouri Valley Conference play, return to Davies Gymnasium tonight to take on the Tulsa Hurricane at 7 p.m.

Tulsa, currently 0-1 in the MVC, trails in the overall series, which dates back to 1975. 17-4.

The weekend action doesn't stop tonight, as SIUC will face Southwest Missouri State University Saturday night at 7 p.m. in another important MVC match.

Saluki head coach Sonya Locke said the past road trip was tiring and the home stand will help ease the players.
